the Priests of the Temple, that Onias had built at Heliopolis, and which we have spoke of under the Name of Onion, to put into his Hands all the Ornaments and Vessels of Value which were therein, and then caused the Doors to be shut up, and forbid the Jews to perform any Act of their religious Worship therein [r].

PEACE, Pax. This Word is used in the Scripture in different Manners. Generally it is put for Peace and Tranquillity, either publick or private; but often it stands for the Prosperity and Happiness of this present Life. To go in Peace, to die in Peace. God give you Peace. Let Peace
Pf. cxxii. 6. be within this House. Pray for the Peace of Jerusalem, that is, wish it all sorts of Happiness and Prosperity. Is it Peace?
Wisd. iii. 3. That is, Is all well? The Just in the other Life are in Peace; they enjoy a perfect Tranquillity, and wait in Peace for their happy Change. St. Paul in the Titles of his Epistles generally wisheth for Grace and Peace to the Faithful, to whom he writes. Gratia vobis & pax. Jesus Christ recommends to his Disciples, to have Peace with all Men, and with each other.
Isai. lxvi. 12. Ezek. God promises his People to water them as with a River of Peace, and to make with them a Covenant of Peace. These Expressions are very intelligible.

PEACOCK, Pavo, in Hebrew, Teuchiim [s]. Interpreters are pretty well agreed about the Signification of this Word. The Septuagint have not express'd it in their Translation. Some understand by Tuchiim a sort of Ape or Monkey. The Fleet of Solomon that went to Ophir brought back to this Prince a great Number of Peacocks, whether they had them at Ophir it self, or whether they took them in from any other Place upon their return, is altogether uncertain.

The Peacock is a tame Fowl very well known. That which makes it valuable is the Beauty of its Plumage. It has a very long Tail, diversify'd with several Colours, and adorned with many Marks at equal Distances in the Form of Eyes. It has a little Tuft or Crown upon its Head, like a bushy Tree. Its Wings are mixt with Azure and Gold-colour; its Cry is very shrill and disagreeable. 'Tis said to have the Head of a Serpent, the Train of an Angel, and the Voice of a Devil. Its Feet are ugly, and not suitable to its fine Feathers. It frequently makes a Turn, especially in Spring, to admire its Tail, the Splendor of which is increased by the Light, which does not only set off its Colours, but also multiplies them.

'Tis said the Flesh of the Peacock is not apt to corrupt. St. Austin relates [t], that being at Carthage, they served up a baked Peacock at a Table where he was. The Company had a mind to make the Experiment, whether the Flesh of this Animal would corrupt or no. They took several Pieces of the Stomach or Crop, which they set by. After some Days they inspected it; and found it as entire as at first. They kept it after that above a Month, without any Appearance or Tendency towards Corruption. Finally, at a Year's End they viewed it again, and observed no other Alteration in it, but that it was grown something drier, and a little shrunk up. Scaliger testifies the same thing, and says, that he had made the same Experiment himself.

PEARL. The Arabians, Persians, and Turks make use of the Word Merovarid to signify Pearls. The Word Margarites, or Margarita, used by the Greeks and Latins, seems to be derived from thence. The finest Pearls are fish'd up in the Persian Gulph, now called the Sea of Catif, because of the City Catif that stands upon its Shore. They fish for them also in the Island of Kis, and upon the Coast of Bahrein, so called from the City of that Name, which lies upon the Borders of Arabia. Idumæa and Palestine being not far from this Sea, it is not to be wonder'd at that Pearls were so well known to Job, and the Hebrews. Since that Time they have been found in several other Places; and now many are brought from America. 'Tis said that the smaller Pearls, that is, those Shell-fish which are called Pearls, follow the great ones called Mother-of-Pearls, like Bees. They are known to be big with Pearls, when their Shells have Bunches on each Side.

The Oriental Pearls have a Water which inclines towards Carnation, those of America are green, and those of the North are gridelin. Pearls are found in Bohemia, in Rivers of fresh Water, and in Silesia, and in Lorrain. They are sometimes found also in common Oysters. Pearls, that have been long wore, turn yellow, and moulder away at the end of fourscore or an hundred Years. They are made in the Mother-of-Pearl, by Beds, after the manner of Onions. They have discovered in some Mother-of-Pearls as far as an hundred and fifty, but not all perfect. Some are compleat, and others but just beginning to be form'd. They come to Perfection in the Oyster. They are often found in the Seasand. 'Tis an ancient Error, that Pearls are formed of the Dew, and that they are soft in the Sea. We have treated of the Nature of Pearls in a Dissertation made on purpose, and inserted in the Journal of Trevoux.

As to the Passages of Scripture, wherein Pearls are spoken of, Job says [v], No mention shall be made of Coral, or of

THE HEBREW NAMES OF THE XII PRECIOUS STONES UPON THE HIGH PRIEST'S BREAST PLATE

These Names are written in Samaritan characters, & translated according to the Vulgate. They were not engraved upon these stones, but only ye names of ye 12 Tribes

The lining of the breast plate represented.

1 2 3 &c. Hebrew names of the twelve tribes of Israel
In their order as placed in the High Priests breast plate
These names are written in Samaritan characters which were in use in the time of Moses

THE BREAST PLATE OF JUDGEMENT.

Prov. xxxi. 10. the Simile of Pearls three times, to express his Esteem for Wisdom.; and says, that a good Woman comes as far off, is as hard to find, and of as great Value as Pearls. Jeremiah speaking of the Nazarites of Jerusalem, says[a], that they were more ruddy or more vermilion than Pearls[*]. 'Tis known that Pearls are not commonly ruddy; but we have observed before, that the Oriental Pearls incline towards Carnation; which is exactly what the Prophet intended, by commending the vermilion Complexion and wholsome Faces of the Nazarites.

Matth. vii. 6. Jesus Christ forbids his Apostles to cast their Pearls before Swine. Neque mittatis margaritas vestras ante porcos. That is to say, expose not the sacred Truths and Mysteries of Religion to the Raillery of prophane Libertines and hardened Atheists. The Author of Ecclesiasticus means the same Thing, when he advises us not to speak when we find the Persons we speak to not disposed to hear, Ubi auditus non est, ne effundas sermonem. (Ecclus. xxxii. 6.) The Hebrews call Pearls Peninim, the Greeks Margaritæ, the Latins Unio, Margarita, or Perula. We find Margaritum in Prov. xxv. 12. but the Hebrew has[d] a Chali of Gold. Now Chali probably signifies a Collar or Necklace. As for the Word Peninim, it is mentioned Job xxviii. 18. Prov. iii. 15. viii. 2. xx. 15. xxxi. 10. Lament. iv. 7. where the Seventy and the Vulgate translate it by precious Stones, or Things hid, or Ivory[*]. But certainly Peninim signifies Pearls; and the Word Pinna, which stands for the Shell-fish that produces them, is probably derived from Peninim. Pearls grow in the Sea, and in the Shells of Fishes; and precious Stones are found in Mines. These are Things of a very different Nature, and yet are often confounded.

PECTORAL, Rational, or Breast-plate of Judgment. They call by this Name the Piece of Embroidery of about ten Inches square[e], of very rich Work, which the High-priest of the Jews wore upon his Breast, and which was set with four Rows of precious Stones, upon every one of which was engraven the Name of one of the Tribes of Israel. The Breast-plate was double, or made of two Pieces folded one upon the other, like a kind of Purse or Bag, in which, according to the Rabbins, the Urim and Thummim was inclosed. This Piece had the Name of the Breast-plate of Judgment, probably because it discovered the Judgment and the Will of God; or because the High-priest who wore it was the Fountain of Justice, and put on this Ornament when he exercised his judicial Capacity in Matters of great Consequence.

The Hebrew has simply[f] Coshen, and sometimes Coshen Mishphat, which the Seventy have rendered by Logion, or Logion criseos, and St. Jerom by Rationale, or Rationale judicii. It is not well known what the literal Signification of Coshen is. 'Tis generally derived from the Arabic Casan, which signifies big, thick, and unequal, as indeed this Pectoral must be. The Reader may see what has been said upon the Article EPHOD, and what will be said upon the Article URIM and THUMMIM.

PEDAGOGUE. This Word in our Tongue carries with it a kind of Idea of Contempt; for when we mention a Pedagogue, without any other Word to qualifie it, it expresses a Pedant, who assumes an Air of Authority over others, which does not belong to him. But among the Antients it was otherwise. With them a Pedagogue was a Person to whom they committed the Care of their Children, to lead them, to observe them, and even to instruct them in their first Rudiments. This Office of Pedagogue nearly answered to what we call a Governor or Tutor, who is always to attend his Pupil, to teach him to live, and to form his Manners upon all Occasions.

St. Paul speaking to the Corinthians, says; For though you have ten Thousand Instructors (or Pedagogues) in Christ, yet have ye not many Fathers. (1 Cor. iv. 15.) That as to himself, he is their Father in the Faith, since he has begotten them in the Gospel. The Pedagogue indeed may have some Power over his Pupil, and may exercise some Authority over him; but he can never have the natural Inclination and Tenderness of a Father.

In his Epistle to the Galatians he says, that the Law was our Schoolmaster (or Pedagogue) to bring us unto Christ. (Galat. iii. 24, 25.) It has pointed out Christ to us in the Scriptures, in the Figures, and in the Prophecies of the Old Testament. But since we have embraced the Faith, we have no longer any Need of Schoolmasters or Pedagogues; as they are of no further Use to young People, when they have attained to Mens Estate. But after that Faith is come, we are no longer under a Schoolmaster.

PEDAHZUR, or Phadassur, Father of Gamaliel. This Gamaliel was Head of the Tribe of Manasseh, when the Hebrews came out of Egypt, Numb. i. 10, ii. 20. vii. 54, 59. x. 23. He made Presents to PEDAHEL, or Phedael, Son of Ammiud, of the Tribe of Naphtali. He was one of those appointed by Moses, to make the Distribution of the Holy Land, Numb. xxxiv. 28.

I. PEDAIAH, or Phadaia, of the City of Rumah, and Father of Zebudah, the Mother of Jehoiakim King of Judah, 2 Kings xxiii. 36.

II. PEDAIAH, Son of Jeconiah King of Judah, and Father of Zerubbabel and Shimei, 1 Chron. iii. 18, 19.

III. PEDAIAH, Son of Parosh, Nehem. iii. 25. viii. 4.

PEKAH, Son of Remaliah, General of the Army of Pekahiah King of Israel. He conspired against his Master [g], attacked him in the Tower of his Royal Palace of Samaria, being seconded by Argob and Arieh [h], and by fifty Men of Gilead; he slew him and reigned in his Place for twenty Years. He did Evil before the Lord, and followed the wicked Example of Jeroboam the Son of Nebat, who had made Israel to sin. Under the Reign of Pekah came Tiglath-pilessar King of Assyria into the Country of Israel, and took Ijon, Abel-beth-maachah, Janoah, Kedesh, Hazor, Gilead, and all the Country of Naphtali, and carried away all the Inhabitants into Assyria. At last Hoshea the Son of Elah formed a Conspiracy against Pekah [i], set upon him and slew him, and reigned in his Stead. The rest of the Actions of Pekah were registered in the Annals of the Kings of Israel.

PEKAHIAH, Son and Successor of Menahem King of Israel [k], who reigned but two Years. He did Evil before the Lord, and followed the Steps of Jeroboam the Son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin. Pekah the Son of Remaliah conspired against him, and killed him in his own Palace. See PEKAH before.

PELAIAH, or Phalaia, a Levite, Nehem. viii 7. x. 10. He was one of the principal Levites that returned from Captivity, and was one of those that signed the Covenant that Nehemiah renewed with the Lord.

PELALIAH, or Phelelia, Son of Amzi, Father of Jeroham, of the Family of Pashur Son of Malchiah, of whom Mention has been made, of the Race of the Priests. (Nehem. xi. 12.)

I. PELATIAH, Phaltias, or Phelti, Son of Hananiah, and Father of Ishi, of the Tribe of Simeon. He subdued the Amalekites upon the Mountain of Seir, 1 Chron. iv. 42. The Time of this Action is unknown.

II. PELATIAH, or Phelti, Son of Benaiah, a Prince of the People, who lived in the Time of Zedekiah King of Judah, and opposed the wholesome Advice given by Jeremiah, to submit to King Nebuchadnezzar [l]. Ezekiel being a Captive in Mesopotamia, had a Vision, in which he saw five and twenty Men at the Door of the Temple of Jerusalem, among which were Jaazaniah the Son of Azur, and Pelatiah the Son of Benaiah, who were the most remarkable. (Ezek. xi. 1, 2, 3, 4.) Then the Lord said to him, Son of Man, these are the Men that have Thoughts of Iniquity, and who are forming pernicious Designs against this City, saying: Have not the Houses been built a long Time? Jerusalem is the Pot, and we are the Flesh. Thus saith the Lord: You have made great Havock in this City, and have filled its Streets with dead Bodies. These Men are the Flesh, and the City is the Pot. But as for you, I will make you come forth from the Middle of this City, and I will make you perish by the Hand of your Enemies. As he was prophecying in this Manner, Pelatiah the Son of Benaiah died.

PELEG, or Phaleg, Son of Eber, was born in the Year of the World 1757, before Christ 2243, before the Vulgar Æra 2247. The Scripture says his Father gave him the Name of Peleg, signifying Division, because in his Time the Earth began to be divided, whether it was that Noah had begun to distribute the Earth among his Descendants, some Years before the building of Babel [m]; or that Peleg came into the World the same Year that Babel was begun, and at the Division of Languages; or that Eber by a Spirit of Prophecy gave his Son the Name of Peleg some Years before the Tower of Babel was begun. (Gen. xi. 16. x. 25.) That which here perplexes the Interpreters is, first that Peleg came into the World not above one hundred Years after the Deluge. But it should seem that the Number of Men was not then sufficient for such an Undertaking as that of Babel. Secondly, Joktan the Brother of Peleg had already thirteen Sons at the Time of the Dispersion, which happened after the Confusion of Babel. Peleg being born in the thirty-fourth Year of Eber, Gen. xi. 16. it is impossible his Brother Joktan should have such a Number of Children at the Birth of Peleg. (Gen. x 26, 27, 28, &c.) It seems therefore that he was not born at the Time of the Dispersion. To this may be answered, that Moses has there enumerated the Names of the thirteen Sons of Joktan in Gen. x. 26. by Way of Anticipation, tho' they were not born till a good while after the Confusion of Babel. But as they possessed a very large Country, it was convenient to take Notice of them, and to name them among the other Descendants of Noah, who divided the Provinces of the East among themselves. However this were, at the Age of thirty Years Peleg begat Reu [a], and died at the Age of two Hundred and thirty nine.

PELET, or Phalleth, Son of Azmaveth, one of the valiant Men of David's Army, who came to join him at Ziklag, 1 Chron xii. 3.

PELETH, or Pheleth, Son of Pallu, of the Tribe of Reuben. He was Father to On and Jebiel, Numb. xvi. 1.

PELETHITES. The Pelethites and the Cherethites are famous under the Reign of King David [a]. These were the most valiant Men of his Army, and the Guards of his Person. They were originally Philistines, of the City of Gath. What we have said on the Article Cherethites may be consulted. The Word Peletim seems to be formed from Philistim, and it may signifie Men that break, seperate, &c. in like Manner as Cherethim signifies Men that destroy or exterminate; Denominations that exactly suit with the Pelethites and Cherethites. Some think that under this Name are to be understood the Members of the great Sanhedrim. Others derive Pelethim from the Hebrew Pala, or Nipla, which signifies to do Wonders, and they think these to have been prodigious or miraculous Men.

PELICAN, Pelicanus. The Author of the Commentary upon the Psalms, which bears the Name of St. Jerome [b], says, there are two Sorts of Pelicans. One lives upon the Water, and feeds upon Fish, the other keeps in Desarts and feeds upon Serpents and other Reptiles. Eusebius says [c], that the Pelican has a peculiar Tenderness for its young. It generally places its Nest upon a craggy Rock, that the Serpents may not come at it; but the Serpent that is an Enemy to this Bird observes the Wind, and when it blows towards the Pelican's Nest, it squirts out its Venom, and kills the young ones. The Pelican to bring them to Life again mounts up above the Clouds, and striking its Sides with its Wings, makes the Blood to come forth, which falling on its Nest through the Clouds, restores the young to Life again. St. Austin [d], and Isidore of Sevil [e], take Notice of the same Thing, but with some Diversity. They say the Pelican draws Blood from it self by striking with its Bill, and so by shedding it on its Nest brings the Young to Life. But these Histories may be placed among the Errors of the old Philosophy.

The Hebrew Word Kaath [f], which the Seventy have translated by Pelicanus, Ps. cii. 6. and Levit. xi. 18. is elsewhere translated by Mergulus, a Dipper, as Deut. xiv. 17. elsewhere by Birds, as Isai. xxxiv. 11. and elsewhere by Lions, as Zeph. ii. 14. St. Jerome has translated it by Onocrotalus in Levit. xi. 18. Isai. xxxiv. 11. and Zeph. ii. 14. Others by this Word understand the Bittern, or the Hern, or the Swan, or the Lapwing, or the Cuckow. Bochart [g] thinks the Hebrew Word Kaath signifies the Pelican, a Bird of the aquatick Kind, which they say gorges its Crop with Shell-fish, and when they are opened by the Heat of its Crop, disgorges them again, that it may have the Fish to eat. Kaath comes from Kaah, which signifies to vomit.

PELLA, a City beyond Jordan. Pliny puts it in Decapolis, and commends it for its fine Waters [h]. Stephanus places it in Cœle-Syria. There is nothing inconsistent in this, no more than in what others affirm, that Pella was in Perea, in Batanea, in the Country of Basan [i]. Perhaps also that when Josephus [k] speaks of Pella in the Country of Moab, he means the City of which we are speaking, which was situate in Perea, in Batanea, in the Country of Basan, which prophane Authors sometime call Cœle-Syria, and in the Country which belonged to the Ammonites, the Brethren and Allies of the Moabites; unless he confounds Pella with Abila in the Country of Moab, called by Moses Abel-Shittim, Numb. xxxiii. 49, and by Josephus Abila, Antiq. l. iv. c. 7. l. v. c. 1. de Bello, l. v. c. 3. As to the Situation of Pella, it was between Jabesh and Gerasa, six Miles from Jabesh [l]. It was also of the Number of the Ten Cities known by Geographers, as also in the Gospel, by the Name of Decapolis.

Math. iv. 25. Mark v. 20.

Josephus relates [m], that under the Reign of Alexander Jannæus, the Jews were Masters of Pella, and that they destroyed it because the Inhabitants would not embrace their Religion and Ceremonies. The first Christians being told by our Saviour, that the City and Temple of Jerusalem should be demolished, took Refuge at Pella [n], as soon as they saw the Fire of War against the Romans began to be kindled. St. Epiphanius says [o], that the Disciples were warned by the Revelation of an Angel to withdraw thither. This City belonged to the Kingdom of Agrippa, who did not enter into this War but on the Side of the Romans, and to assist them at the Siege of Jerusalem.

I suspect that Pella takes its Name from Abila, or Abela. There were more Cities than one that were known by the Name of Abila; but that I mean is called by Geographers Abila of Batanea, and in Scripture Abel of the Vines. Polybius [q] distinguishes Abila from Pella, since he says, that Antiochus the Great took Pella, Kamos, Gephros, Abila, Gadara, &c. Stephanus the Geographer says, that the City of Pella had Alexander the Great for its Founder, probably in Memory of the City of Pella in Thessaly, where he had his Birth. Abila and Pella were afterwards Episcopal Cities of the second Palestine. Josephus says [r], that Pella was one of the seven Toparchies of Judæa; but elsewhere he calls it Betlephtepha [s], and Pliny gives it the same Name [t]. 'Tis unknown where Betlephtepha was. The Name of Pella is not in the Scripture, but it is famous enough to deserve a Place here.

PELONITE. Peloni or Pheloni was a City of Judæa. Abijah the Pelonite, was one of the Heroes of David's Army, 1 Chron. xi. 36.

PELUSIUM, a City of Egypt, situate at the Mouth of the most Eastern Arm of the Nile, and the nearest to Palestine. Pelusium, otherwise Damietta, was as it were the Key of Egypt, towards Phœnicia and Judæa. Ezekiel [u] speaks of it under the Name of Sin, and calls it the Rampart or Strength of Egypt. The Hebrew Word Sin, which signifies Mud, answers very well to the Greek Pelusium, which comes from Pelos, of the same Signification. The Septuagint have read Sais instead of Sin, in this Place of Ezekiel. The Scripture speaks of the Desart of Sin, between Elim and Sinai, Exod. xvi. 1. Numb. xxxiii. 11.

This is the Prophecy that Ezekiel pronounces against Pelusium. Thus saith the Ezek. xxx. 13, 14, 15, 18, &c. Lord God: I will also destroy their Idols, and I will cause their Images to cease out of Noph, and there shall be no more a Prince of the Land of Egypt, and I will put a Fear in the Land of Egypt. And I will make Pathros desolate, and will set Fire in Zoan, and will execute Judgments in No. And I will pour my Fury upon Sin the Strength of Egypt, and will cut off the Multitude of No. And I will set Fire in Egypt, Sin shall have great Pain, &c. 'Tis thought these Ezek. xxix. 18, 19. Threats had Regard to the Expedition of Nebuchadnezzar against this Country. For the Lord says to Ezekiel; Son of Man, Nebuchadrezzar King of Babylon caused his Army to serve a great Service against Tyrus; every Head was made bald, and every Shoulder was peeled, yet had he no Wages, nor his Army, for Tyrus, for the Service that he had served against it. Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will give the Land of Egypt unto Nebuchadrezzar King of Babylon, and he shall take her Multitude, and take her Spoil, and take her Prey, and it shall be the Wages for his Army. Afterwards the Prophet foretels the Calamities before mentioned. Pelusium by its Situation was as it were the Key, the Rampart, and the Strength of Egypt. It suffered the first Efforts of the King of Babylon, and of the Chaldean Army [x].

Before Nebuchadnezzar's Time the City of Pelusium had been already attacked by the Army of Sennecharib King of Assyria. This Prince set upon Sethon, otherwise Sevechus, King of Egypt, and lay down before Pelusium [y]. Sethon was a Prince devoid of Prudence, and but little capable of Government. He had alienated the Minds of his Soldiers, and found himself forsaken of all those that could defend him. Yet having addressed himself to Vulcan, whose Priest he was, he was bid to advance as far as Pelusium, there to meet Sennecharib, and God would send him Assistance. He therefore put himself at the Head of such People as he could get together, and God sent against Sennecharib's Army a great Multitude of Rats, which in the Night Time gnawed the Strings of the Bows, and the Thongs of the Bucklers of the Assyrians, by which their Arms became useless to them. This is what the Egyptians relate. But the sacred Books of the Hebrews inform us, that it was an Angel of the Lord, who in one Night put to Death eighty-five Thousand Men of Sennecharib's Army. 2 Kings xix. 35.

We are assured [z], that Cambyses King of Persia, being desirous to make War in Egypt, and resolving to become Master of Pelusium, which was as it were its Rampart, to take it with less Difficulty he devised this Stratagem. In an Assault which he made against the Town, he placed a great Number of Cats, Dogs, Sheep, and such other Animals as the Egyptians held for sacred, in the Front of his Troops. Thus the Soldiers that defended the City, who were altogether or mostly Egyptians, durst not throw their Lances, or shoot any Arrows on that Side, for Fear of wounding any of those Animals. By which Means Cambyses became Master of the Place without any Opposition [a].

Jabb

Jabbok. This was the Occasion of its Name. Jacob upon his Return from Mesopotamia [z], made a Stop at the Brook Jabbok; and very early the next Morning, after he had sent all the People before, he remained alone, and behold an Angel came and wrestled with him, till the Day began to appear. Then the Angel said to Jacob, Let me go, for the Morning begins to appear. Jacob answered, I shall not let you go from me, till you have given me your Blessing. The Angel blessed him then in the same Place, which Jacob thence called Peniel, saying: I have seen God Face to Face, yet continue alive.

In following Ages the Israelites built a City in this Place, which was given to the Tribe of Gad. Gideon returning from the Pursuit of the Midianites, overthrew the Tower of Peniel [a], and put all the Inhabitants of the City to Death, for having refused Sustenance to him and his People, and having answered him in a very insulting Manner. Jeroboam the Son of Nebat rebuilt the City of Peniel [b]. Josephus says [c], that this Prince there built himself a Palace.

PENINNAH, or Phenenna, the second Wife of Elkanah, the Father of Samuel. Peninnah had several Children, but Hannah, who afterwards was Mother of Samuel, was for a great while barren: Peninnah, instead of giving the Glory to God, the Author of Fruitfulness, was elevated with Pride, and insulted her Rival Hannah. But the Lord having visited Hannah, Peninnah was thereupon humbled; and some Interpreters think, that God took away her Children from her, or at least that she had no more after this Time, according to the Words of the Song of Hannah; The barren hath born seven, and she that hath many Children is waxed feeble.

PENTAPOLIS [d]. This Name is given to the five Cities, Sodom, Gomorrah, Adamah, Zeboim, and Zoar. They were all five condemned to utter Destruction, but Lot interceded for the Preservation of Zoar, otherwise call'd Bala. Sodom, Gomorrah, Adamah, and Zeboim, were all consumed by Fire from Heaven, and in the Place where they stood was made the Lake Asphaltites, or the Lake of Sodom.

PENTATEUCH. This Word is derived from the Greek [e], and signifies literally, the Collection of the five Instruments or Books of Moses, which are Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. We have spoke of each of these Books under their proper Articles. See also Moses, and the Commentators upon the Pentateuch, where they endeavour to prove at large, that Moses was the Author of those five Books, and to confute such as have advanced any thing to the contrary. These are the Arguments of some modern Criticks, who have disputed Moses's Right to the Pentateuch. We find in this Work, as they affirm, several Things that agree neither to the Age nor Character of this Legislator. The Author speaks of Moses in a manner much to his Advantage, he commends his Moderation and Meekness. Now the Man Moses was very meek, above all the Men which were upon the Face of the Earth. He speaks always in the third Person, The Lord spake unto Moses, saying, &c. Moses said unto Pharaoh, &c. Moses would never have spoke of himself in this Manner, at least sometimes he would have express'd himself in the first Person. (Numb. xii. 3.)

Besides, the Author of the Pentateuch sometimes abridges his Narration like a Writer who collected from some antient Memoirs. Sometimes he interrupts the Thread of his Discourse; for Example, he makes Lamech the bigamous to say; Hear my Voice ye Wives of Lamech, hearken unto my Speech; for I have slain a Man to my Wounding, and a young Man to my Hurt: Without informing us before-hand, to whom this related. These Observations for Example, And the Canaanite was then in the Land, cannot be reconciled to the Age of Moses, since the Canaanites continued to be the Masters of Palestine all the Time of Moses. The Passage out of the Book of the Wars of the Lord, quoted in the Book of Numbers, seems to have been clap'd in afterwards, as also the first Verses of Deuteronomy. The Account of the Death of Moses, which is at the End of the same Book, cannot certainly belong to this Legislator; and the same Judgment may be made of other Passages, wherein it is said, that the Places mention'd lay beyond Jordan; that the Bed of Og was at Ramah to this Day; that the havoth of Jair, or the Cities of Jair, were known to the Author, tho' probably they had not that Name till after Moses's Time. (Gen. iv. 23. Gen. xii. 6. Numb. xxi. 14. Numb. xxxii. 41. Deut. iii. 14.)

'Tis observed also in the Text of the Pentateuch, that there are some Places that are defective; for Example, in Exodus we see Moses speaking to Pharaoh, where the Author omits the Beginning of his Discourse. The Samaritan inserts in the same Place what is wanting in the Hebrew. In other Places the same Samaritan Copy adds what is deficient in the Hebrew Text; and what it contains more than the Hebrew seems so well connected with the rest of (Exod. xii. 8.)

the Diſcourſe, that it would be difficult to ſeparate them. Laſtly, they believe they obſerve certain Stroaks in the Pentateuch, which can hardly agree with Moſes, who was born and bred in Egypt; as what he ſays of the earthly Paradiſe, of the Rivers that water'd it, and ran through it; of the Cities of Babylon, Erech, Reſen and Calneh; of the Gold of Piſon, of the Bdellium, of the Stone of Sohem, which was to be found in that Country; theſe Particulars obſerved with ſuch Curioſity ſeem to prove, that the Author of the Pentateuch liv'd beyond the Euphrates. Add what he ſays concerning the Ark of Noah, of its Conſtruction, of the Place where it reſted, of the Wood wherewith it was built, of the Bitumen of Babylon, &c.

Theſe laſt Obſervations have made ſome ſurmiſe, that the Levite that was ſent by Eſar-haddon to the Cuſhites who were ſettled in Samaria, might poſſibly have compoſed the Pentateuch, and that the Jews might have received it with ſome little Variation from the Hands of the Samaritans. (2 Kings xvii. 24, 27.) Others have imagin'd that the Pentateuch, in the Condition wherein we have it, was but the Abridgment of a larger Work, compos'd by ſome publick Writers, who had this Truſt committed to them in the Republick of the Hebrews.

But not to undertake here to enter into an Examination of all theſe Proofs, or to refute all the Opinions upon which they are founded, on which ſo much has already been written; we ſhall content our ſelves to make theſe three Reflexions. Firſt to diveſt Moſes of a Poſſeſſion he has maintain'd for ſo many Ages, as the Author of the Pentateuch; a Poſſeſſion ſupported by the joint Teſtimony both of the Synagogue and the Church, of the ſacred Writers both of the Old and New Teſtament, of Jeſus Chriſt and his Apoſtles; this certainly requires Proofs to which there can be no Reply, evident Demonſtrations. But it is plain that the Objections brought againſt this Aſſertion are even below convincing Arguments. For ſecondly the Additions, the Diſlocations, the Confuſions, the Omiſſions, which we cannot refuſe to allow therein, will not determine that Moſes is not the Author of thoſe Books. They only prove that ſome Amendments have been made, either by adding or expunging. God has ſuffer'd that the ſacred Books ſhould not be exempted from ſuch kind of Alterations, as proceed from the Hands of Copiers, or which are a Conſequence of the Length of Time. If a ſlight Addition, or ſome Change made in the Text of an Author, ſhould be thought ſufficient to deprive him of his Labours, what Writer could remain in the quiet Poſſeſſion of his Work for even one Century? Thirdly, the Conjectures of M. le Clerc and of F. Simon, about the Author of the Pentateuch, have been ſo often confuted, that it would be quite needleſs to touch upon that Matter here. The publick Writers of F. Simon are purely chimerical. The Prieſt or Levite ſent by Eſar-haddon to the Cuſhites, could not have compoſed the Pentateuch. This Book was wrote long before his Time. It is quoted in Works that were extant before the Time of this Levite. The Law was in conſtant Practice from Moſes down to the Captivity, and was therefore written. A Copy of it was lodg'd in the Ark, and was found in the Days of King Joſiah. The Jews and Samaritans had too much Averſion for each other, to communicate their ſacred Writings to one another. By comparing the Samaritan Pentateuch with that of the Jews, it may be eaſily perceived that they are both derived from the ſame Original; but one may alſo eaſily perceive, that one of them is not copy'd from the other, and that the Samaritans have touch'd up their Copy, to ſupport certain Pretenſions that they had againſt the Jews, in the Buſineſs of Mount Gerizim, upon which their Temple was built. The Samaritans have preſerved the Hebrew Pentateuch written in the antient Phenician Characters, which are the Hebrew Characters uſed before the Captivity of Babylon. See under the Title SAMARITAN.

PENTECOST. This Word is derived from the Greek Word Pentecoſte, which ſignifies the fiftieth, becauſe the Feaſt of Pentecoſt was celebrated the fiftieth Day after the ſixteenth of Niſan, which was the ſecond Day of the Feaſt of the Paſſover. (Levit. xxiii. 15, 16.) The Hebrews call it [f] the Feaſt of Weeks, becauſe it was kept ſeven Weeks after the Paſſover. They then offer'd the firſt Fruits of this Wheat-harveſt, which at that Time was compleated. (Deut. xvi. 9, 10.) Theſe firſt Fruits conſiſted in two Loaves of leaven'd Bread, of two Aſſarons of Meal, or of three Pints of Meal each [g]. (Levit. xxiii. 15, 16.) Beſides which they preſented at the Temple ſeven Lambs of that Year, one Calf, and two Rams, to be offer'd for a Burnt-offering, two Lambs for a Peace-offering, and a Goat for a Sin-offering. We do not find in the Text of Scripture, or in Joſephus, that the Pentecoſt had an Octave, tho' it was one of the three great Solemnities, in which all the Males were to appear before the Lord. Beſides the Victims appointed in Leviticus, Chap. xxiii. 18, 19. to be offer'd on the Day of Pentecoſt, they offer'd alſo two Calves and a Ram for a Burnt-offering, ſeven Lambs for a Peace-offering, and a Goat for a Sin-offering. See Numb. xxviii. 27. Josephus puts all these Sacrifices together. Antiq. l. 3. c. 10.

[f] Exod. xxxiv. 22. חג שבעות

[g] Some Interpreters think, that each Family was obliged to give two Loaves for Firſt-Fruits, but others maintain, and I think with more Reaſon, that they offered but two Loaves in the Name of the whole Nation; this is ſufficiently hinted by Joſephus, who puts but one Loaf of two Aſſarons. Antiq. l. iii. c. 10.

The Feast of Pentecost was instituted among the Jews, first to oblige the Israelites to repair to the Temple of the Lord, there to acknowledge his absolute Dominion over the whole Country, and on their Labours, by offering to him the First Fruits of all their Harvests. Secondly to call to their Memory, and to render Thanks to God for the Law which he had given them from Mount Sinai on the like Day, which was the fiftieth Day after their coming out of Egypt[h].

The modern Jews[i] celebrate the Pentecost for two Days, and these two Days are kept by them as Festivals of the Passover, that is to say, they abstain from all Labour, and meddle with no Business, no more than on the Sabbath-day, excepting that they may make Fires, dress Victuals, and carry what they want from one Place to another. They hold by Tradition, that this Day the Law was deliver'd from Mount Sinai; for which Reason they are used to dress the Synagogue and the Places appointed for the Reading of the Law, and even their Houses, with Roses and Flowers knit together in Crowns and Garlands, and that in great Quantities.

The Prayers are accommodated to the Festival, and they read from the Pentateuch the Sacrifice that was offer'd on that Day, with a Lesson out of the Prophets, which has some Relation to the Feast of Pentecost. Afterwards they pronounce a Blessing for the Sovereign, and make a Sermon in Commendation of the Law.

When the second Day of the Festival is over, in the Evening they perform the Ceremony of the Abdala, that is, Distinction, to distinguish the Day of the Feast from a working Day, and to shew that they pass from the Feast to a Day in which it is allowed to work. This Ceremony consists in repeating certain Prayers, and certain Blessings, and in wishing one another good Health, and all kind of Prosperity. After which every one employs himself as he sees proper, the Feast being at an End.

This Abdala, or Distinction, is also performed at the Passover and the Sabbath; but on the Day of the Sabbath there is more Ceremony. When every one is come home to his House, they light a Torch, or a Lamp with two Cottons, the Master of the House takes Wine in a Cup, and sweet-scented Spices: And when he has said some Passages out of the Psalms, and what is read at the End of the eighth Chapter of the Book of Esther; The Jews had Light, and Gladness, and Joy, and Honour, &c. Then he blesses the Wine and the Spices, and enjoys the Flavour of them as it were to begin the Week with Pleasure; he blesses the Brightness of the Fire, of which no Use has yet been made, looks upon his Hands and Nails, because he is then beginning to work, and throws the Wine upon the Ground, as a Token of Joy and Gladness. Then wishing each other a happy Week, they begin to go about their Business. But at the End of the Feast of the Passover, and of the Pentecost, they make the Abdala with Words only.

To these Practices Buxtorf[k] adds some other Ceremonies, peculiar perhaps to the Jews of Germany. To call to Mind in a more sensible Manner the Mount of Sinai, upon which the Law was given, they make a very thick Cake, made of seven Layers of Past; they call it Sinai, and inculcate, that these seven Thicknesses of Past represent the seven Heavens, which God was obliged to re-ascend, from the Top of this Mountain to the Heaven of Heavens, where he makes his Abode. They reckon up exactly all the Days that pass after the Passover, that they may not be mistaken in the Moment upon which the Pentecost is to begin. The King, they say, has promised Liberty to a Prisoner, and his Daughter in Marriage, at the End of seven Weeks. Is it not fit that this Prisoner should count the Days, the Hours, the Moments, at the End of which his Happiness is to begin? This King is God, who has promised Liberty to the Jewish Nation, and also his Law.

And that they may not be mistaken in their Calculation, they celebrate two Festival Days for the greater Security. They did the same Thing formerly at other Festivals, as may be seen from Judith[l]. And Buxtorf affirms they did the same Thing at the Passover; and it is from hence that he removes the Difficulty arising from our Saviour's eating the Paschal Lamb a Day before the Jews.

To return to the Pentecost. Twice they bring the Book of the Law, five Persons read it one after another. The Synagogue and the Windows of the Houses are adorned with Flowers, to insinuate, that every Thing was dressed in Verdure about Mount Sinai, when the Israelites received the Law.

The Christian Church also celebrates the Feast of Pentecost fifty Days, or seven Weeks after the Passover, or the Resurrection of our Saviour. We are convinced that the true Day of the Passover, in the Year that our Saviour died, fell upon the Saturday, and that the Pentecost fell on Sunday the 24th of May, fifty Days after our Saviour's Resurrection. The Church has always kept the Pentecost on the Sunday, at least it is a Tradition very express [h] They arrived at Sinai the third Day of the third Month after their coming out of Egypt, Exod. xix. 1. Two Days after which Moses received the Law. [i] Leo of Modena, p. 3. c. 4. [k] Buxtorf. Synagog. Jud. [l] Judith, viii. 6. in græco.

among the Fathers[a], and the Ecclesiastical Writers[b]. After the Ascension of Christ, the Apostles having withdrawn together into a House at Jerusalem, which 'tis said was that of Mary the Mother of John[c], which was upon the Mount of Sion[d], they there waited for the Holy Ghost, which our Saviour had promised to send them. And on the Day of Pentecost, about the third Hour of the Day, that is, about Nine a-Clock in the Morning, on a sudden they heard a great Noise, as it were the rushing of a mighty Wind, Acts ii. 1, 2, 3. which came from Heaven, and which filled the whole House where the Apostles were assembled together. At the same Time they saw appear among them as it were Tongues of Fire, which were parted or cloven, and rested upon each of them, who were then immediately filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak different Tongues or Languages, according as the Spirit gave them Utterance.

There were then at Jerusalem Jews of all Nations, pious Men and fearing God; and at the Noise that was made in the House where the Apostles were assembled, a great Number of Persons came together, who were very much surprized to hear all those in the House, to speak such a Variety of Languages. Some of 'em were very much astonished at the Event, while others made a Mock of them saying, that these People were full of new Wine. Then St. Peter took up their Defence, and said, The People that you see here are by no Means drunk, for it is yet but the third Hour of the Day. On Festival Days they did not eat before Noon[e], especially they tasted nothing before Nine in the Morning, which was an Hour of Prayer. Acts iii. 1. But added he, you see here the Accomplishment of what was spoke by the Prophet Joel ii. 28. Joel. I will pour out my Spirit upon all Flesh; your Sons and your Daughters shall prophesie, your young Men shall have Visions, and your old Men shall dream Dreams. I will cause Prodigies to appear in the Heavens above, and extraordinary Wonders on the Earth below. And then, whoever shall call upon the Name of the Lord shall be saved. After this he spake to 'em of Jesus Christ, of his Death and Resurrection, and of the Descent of the Holy Ghost, the Effects of which were so evident to them.

At these Words, those that heard St. Peter were moved with Compunction, and said to him, and the rest of the Apostles, Brethren, what must we therefore do? St. Peter answered them, Repent, and let every one of you be baptized in the Name of Jesus Christ, to obtain the Remission of his Sins, and you also shall receive the Holy Ghost. He continued to instruct them by several other Discourses, and that Day were baptized about three Thousand Men. This is what passed on the Day of Pentecost, in the 33[d] Year of the Vulgar Æra

I. PENUEL, or Phanuel, Son of Hur, of the Tribe of Judah, 1 Chron. iv. 4.

II. PENUEL, Son of Shashak, 1 Chron. viii. 25.

PENULA. St. Paul in his second Epistle to Timothy says, Penulam quam reliqui Troade apud Carpum veniens affer tecum. 2 Tim. iv. 13. When thou comest bring with thee the Cloak which I left with Carpus at Troas. Penula is here rendered by a Cloak, because this is the proper Signification of that Latin Word, which stands for a Riding-coat, or upper Garment, to defend us from the Rain or the Cold[f]. Tertullian says[g], it was invented by the Lacedemonians, that they might be present at the publick Games without Injury from the Cold. At first among the Romans it was only used by Slaves, or Men of mean Condition, who wore them in the City. They were more generally worn upon a Journey, to defend them against bad Weather. They were used even by the Women in the Country[h]. Aftewards they came to be more generally worn, even in the City, and by People of Fashion. The Tribunes of the People commonly made Use of this Habit. Dio observes[i], that the Emperor Tiberius put on a Cloak, Penulam, that he might be present at an Assembly when it rained. Alexander Severus[k] allow'd old Men (or Senators) to make Use of the Penula in the City; but he forbid the Use of it to Women, in the City, and allowed them only to wear it in the Country. Yet Spartian[l] says, that the Emperors never made Use of it.

Ambrosiaster, Haimo, and the Commentary upon St. Paul ascribed to St. Anselm, 2 Tim. iv. 13. think the Penula was a long Robe, or Senators Gown; that St. Paul's Father had received one as a Present, which he used as being a Roman Citizen and a Senator. They think that he had given it to St. Paul, who having left it at Troas, desired St. Timothy to bring it with him to Rome. But these are Fictions, which do not deserve a serious Confutation. In St. Paul's Time the Penula was not yet become the Habit of a Senator; and what Proof is there, that the Father of St. Paul was ever a Senator?

By the Word Phenole or Phelone, the Greek Fathers[m] understand either a Bookcase, or a Garment. But they generally contend for the Interpretation of a Book-case, wherein St. Paul used to keep his Books, which he mentions in the same Place. Penulam affer tecum, & libros, maxime autem membranas. St. Jerome also takes Notice of this Opinion, when he says [n], Volumen Hebræum replico, quod Paulus phelonen juxta quosdam vocat. M. Brucmas has supported this Acceptation of Phenole, in a Dissertation made on Purpose, and printed by Masius at the End of his Book, concerning the Authority of Princes in Matters of Religion. M. Boileau, Dean of the Holy Chapel at Paris, has also maintained the same Opinion in his Book de re vestiaria hominis sacri. See also Hammond and Estius upon St. Paul. I should rather take it for a Garment. Penula in Latin had never any other Signification, and it is plain this Word comes from the Greek Phainole. The Form of the Penula was pretty much like that of the antient Chasuble or Cope, which covered the whole Body, was without Sleeves, and had no other Opening but at Top, to admit the Head through.

PEOR, or Phogor, a famous Mountain beyond Jordan, which Eusebius places between Heshbon and Livias [o]. The Mountains Nebo, Pisgah, and Peor were near one another, and probably made but the same Chain of Mountains. It is very likely that Peor took its Name from some Deity of the same Name, which was worshipped there; for Peor, or Phegor, or Baal-peor was known in this Country. See Numb. xxv. 3. Deut. iv. 3. Psalm cv. 28.

Peor was a City of the Tribe of Judah, which is not read in the Hebrew, nor in the Vulgate, but only in the Greek of Josh. xv. 60. Eusebius says it was near Bethlehem, and Jerome adds, that in his Time it was called Paora.

PEREA. This Word comes from the Greek, Peran, beyond, and signifies the Country beyond Jordan, or on the East Side of this River. Josephus says [p], that Perea had its Limits westwardly at Philadelphia, Jordan to the East, Macheron to the South, and Pella to the North. Sometimes the Word Perea is taken in a more extensive Signification, for the whole Country beyond Jordan. This Country to the East was also enclosed by Mountains, which divided it from Arabia deserta.

PERECCO, a City of Galilee. Joseph. de Bello, l. ii. c. 25. Mr. Reland thinks [q], that it ought to be read Caphar-ecco, the Country of Ecco or Acco. The City of Ptolemais was called Acco, so that Caphar-ecco could not be far from thence.

PERFECTION. The Son of God commands us, saying; Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect. (Matth. v. 48.) Not that we can ever attain his Perfection, but yet we ought always to be making Advances towards it. We ought always to propose it to our selves as our Pattern, in the Exercise of all Sorts of Virtue, and chiefly his Mercy and Charity. Whence St. Luke says in the Passage parallel to this; Be ye therefore merciful as your Father also is merciful. (Luke vi. 36.) In another Place our Saviour says, that he that would be perfect, must forsake all and follow him. (Matth. xix. 21.) And again, that the Disciple that would arrive at Perfection must become like his Master. (Luke vi. 40.) St. Paul often exhorts his Disciples to be perfect, that is to say, to acquire the Perfection of Christianity, to be convinced of the Excellence of it, and to practice its Truths. (1 Cor. i. 10. xiv. 20, &c.)

In the Books of the Old Testament, the Words perfect and Perfection answer to the Hebrew Words Tham and Thummim, which properly signifie intire and compleat, without Blemish or Defect, irreprehensible, perfect. Thus it is said, Noah was a just Man, and perfect in his Generations. (Gen. vi. 9.) And God says to Abraham, I am the Almighty God; walk before me, and be thou perfect. (Gen. xvii. 1.) And speaking to his People, Thou shalt be perfect with the Lord thy God. (Deut. xviii. 13.) In all these Places perfect is put for without Reproach, unreprovable, sincere. And in like Manner, to serve God with a perfect Heart, (Josh. xxiv. 14. 2 Kings xx. 3.) is to serve him faithfully, purely, without admitting a Rival. Perfect Knowledge, a perfect Law, perfect Charity, a perfect Work; in all which Expressions the Word Perfect is used to signify, whatever may make those Things compleat, finished, intire, and where nothing is wanting. St. Paul says, The Law made nothing perfect; (Heb. vii. 19.) it may be said to give only Sketches of Things, and to enjoin Things that have less Perfection than what the Gospel requires.

A perfect Captivity is when a whole People are transported into a strange Country, without leaving any to cultivate the Land. (Jer. xiii. 18. Amos i. 6, 9.) And in Deuteronomy, Perfectio tua & doctrina tua stand for the Urim and Thummim, that the High-priest carried about him. (Deut. xxxiii. 8. Vulg.) See those two Words.

PERFUMES; the Use of Perfumes was frequent among the Hebrews, and among the Orientals in General, before it was known to the Greeks and Romans. Pliny says [r], that they knew not who was the first Inventor of Perfumes, and that they were unknown even at the Siege of Troy. Ovid [s] imputes the Honour of this Discovery to Bacchus. Arnobius maintains [t], that they were unknown in the Heroic Times. But in the Time of Moses they must be known in Egypt, since he speaks of the Art of the Perfumer, and gives the Composition of two Kinds of Perfumes, of which one was to be offered to the Lord, upon the Golden Altar which was in the holy Place; (Exod. xxx. 25.) and the other was appointed for the anointing of (Exod. xxx. 34, 35, &c.)

the High-prieſt and his Sons, as alſo of the Tabernacle, and all the Veſſels that Exod. xxx. 23. were uſed in divine Service.

The firſt of theſe Perfumes was compoſed of Stacte, the Onyx or odoriferous Shell-fiſh, of Galbanum, and Incenſe, all of equal Weight. This Perfume was a ſacred and inviolable Thing, and it was forbid on Pain of Death, for any Man whatever to make Uſe of it. It was ſet every Morning and Evening upon the Golden Altar which was in the Sanctum. This was the Office of one of the Prieſts of the Week. 'Twas this Perfume that Zacharias the Father of John the Baptiſt went to offer, when the Angel appeared to him, and foretold to him the Birth of the Prodromus of the Meſſiah. The other kind of Perfume, which was rather an Ointment, to anoint the Prieſts and the ſacred Veſſels of the Tabernacle, was compoſed of the beſt Myrrhe, of the Weight of five hundred Shekels, of Cinnamon the Weight of two Hundred and fifty Shekels, of Canna Aromatica a like Quantity, of Caſia Aromatica the Weight of five hundred Shekels; and one hin of Oil Olive. The whole being well mingled ſerved to make a pretious Ointment, with which Aaron and his Sons were anointed, and every Thing that appertained to the Tabernacle. But 'tis thought they did not afterwards anoint the Succeſſors of Aaron, becauſe their Dignity being ſucceſſive in his Family, this Unction did not ſeem neceſſary. God reſerved this Ointment, or this Perfume, to his own Service; and whoever ſhould make of it, either for himſelf or another, was to be cut off from his People. I have ſpoke of the Altar of Perfume under the Title ALTAR.

The Hebrews had alſo Perfumes which they made Uſe of for the embalming of their Dead. The Compoſition is not exactly known, but 'tis known they generally
John xix. 49. made Uſe of Myrrhe, Aloes, and other ſtrong and aſtringent Drugs, proper to prevent Putrifaction, Infection, and Corruption; and conſequently they were of a ſaline, ſharp, and aſtringent Nature. The Reader may ſee what Herodotus[w] ſays of the Manner in which the Egyptians embalmed their Dead; for it ſeems to be from the Egyptians that the Hebrews borrowed this Cuſtom.

Beſides the Perfumes we have mentioned above, there are ſtill others which are known to us from Scripture. Thoſe for Example which King Hezekiah preſerved in his Repoſitories. The Spices and precious

All theſe Examples ſhew us in general, what was the Taſte of the ancient Hebrews, what was and ſtill is the Taſte of the Orientals, who made much Uſe of Scents and Perfumes. They prove alſo that Men and Women uſed them indifferently, and that wiſe and ſerious Men condemned the two frequent and affected Uſe of them. The Hebrew ſays literally, one dead Fly will make the moſt excellent Perfume to ſtink.

PERGAMUS. Jesus Christ in the Re-
Rev. ii. 13. velations, speaks thus to the Angel, or to the Bishop of Pergamus; I know thy Works, and where thou dwellest, even where Satan's Seat is: And thou holdest fast my Name, and hast not denied my Faith, even in those Days wherein Antipas was my faithful Martyr, who was slain among you where Satan dwelleth. But I have a few Things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the Doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balac to cast a Stumbling-block before the Children of Israel, to eat Things sacrificed to Idols, and to commit Fornication. So hast thou also them that hold the Doctrine of the Nicolaitans, which thing I hate. Repent, or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will fight against them with the Sword of my Mouth. Some have Lyran Aureol. thought, that the Angel of Pergamus, mentioned here, was St. Carpus, who suffered Martyrdom at Pergamus, as we learn from Euseb. Hist. Eccl. lib. 4. c. 15. Eusebius. But he does not acquaint us that he was then Bishop of this Church. The Roman Martyrology makes him Bishop of Thyatira; but besides, St. Carpus died under the Empire of Decius. Therefore it is not at all credible, that he could be Bishop of Pergamus under Dioclesian.[a] Now Pergamus was a City of Troas, very considerable in the Time of St. John the Evangelist. 'Twas at Pergamus, as they say, that Parchment was invented, called thence Pergamena.

Ezek. xlii. 7, 10. Vulgat. גדר אשר לחוץ PERIBOLUS. Ezekiel makes use of this Term, to signify a Wall of the Court of the Priests, which was Fifty Cubits long, and was the whole Length of the Apartments that surrounded this Court. Peribolus properly signifies an Enclosure, and comes from the Greek, Periballo, to surround. The Hebrew calls it Geder, which signifies a Partition-Wall.

1 Cor. iv. 13. Περίψημα. PERIPSEMA. This is a meer Greek Word. St. Paul makes use of it to shew, that himself and all Christians of that Time were considered by the Heathen, as the Off-cast and Filth of the Earth. Tanquam purgamentum hujus mundi facti sumus, omnium peripsema usque adhuc. The most learned Interpreters think, [b] that in this Place St. Paul alludes to a Custom then in Use among the Heathen, where they sometimes took Men, to make them serve as an Expiation for a City, or for a whole People, at the Time of a Pestilence, or other publick Calamity. This Custom is observed to have obtained among the Gauls, the Romans, and the Athenians. After having fed these unfortunate Victims for some Time at the publick Charge, they were brought forth upon the Day of their Death, with Garlands of Flowers or Leaves, to the Places they intended to expiate. The People there loaded them with Curses, and prayed the Gods to pour out all their Indignation upon them. Afterwards they threw them into the Sea, or whipped them to death, or burned them alive, and scattered their Ashes into the Sea, saying, Be thou our Victim or Expiation, to turn Suidas.
away the Anger of the Gods from us. So Περίψημα ἡμῶν γένου.
that one might thus translate the Text of St. Paul; They use us like human Victims, that are sacrificed for publick Crimes; as those miserable Wretches that are put to death, to atone for the Offences of others.

PERISCELIDES. This is a Greek Word, and signifies an Ornament which Women used to put about their Legs. It is mentioned in Isaiah iii. 20. and in Numbers xxxi. 50. Moses says, That the Israelites, when they had defeated the Midianites, offered to the Lord the Garters, (Periscelides) the Rings, Bracelets, and Collars that they had taken from the Enemy. This shews the Custom of those People, and the Ornaments which even Men brought with them to the War. We see the same thing in the Victory which many Years after, Gideon obtained over the same People. The Hebrew Word, Judg. viii. 25, 26, 27.
which here is translated by Periscelides, אצערה comes from a Root, which signifies to walk; Azada 70.

that understand it of costly Garters, or Ornaments which the Midianites wore about their Legs. The Septuagint translate it by a Bracelet; it is certain it has this Significa- 2 Sam. i. 10.
tion in the Second Book of Samuel, where the Amalekite that had slain Saul, says, That he took off the Bracelet (Azadah) from the Arm of that Prince.

Isaiah makes use of the same Term in the Enumeration that he makes of the Ornaments of Women. The Chaldee translates it by the Chains of the Foot. Clemens Alexandrinus [c] calls those silver or golden Circlets that Women put about their Legs, Fetters or Bonds. Profane Authors call them in the same manner, shining Fetters, golden Shackles.

Martial,

A pedibus niveis fulserunt aurea vincta.

And Seneca,

Crura distincta religavit auro.

The Women of Syria and Arabia at this Day wear great Rings at their Legs, at which are fastned a great Number of other lesser Rings, which make a Noise like little Bells, whenever they walk or [d] stir. These

These Rings are fixed above the Ancle, and are made either of Gold, Silver, Copper, Glass, or even of varnish'd Earth, according to the Substance and Condition of the Person that wears them.

The Princesses of Arabia wear large hollow Rings of Gold, within which are inclosed little Pebbles, that sound like Bells. Others have lesser Rings called Kelkal, hung all round them, which have the same Effect when they walk. These great Circles or Rings are open in one Place, in form of a Crescent, by which they pass over the Small of the Leg. The Egyptian Ladies wore also very valuable ones; for we read in an Inscription found in Spain, that the Statue of Isis had Ornaments of Gold upon its Legs, set with two Emeralds, and with eleven other precious Stones. The Roman and Grecian Women also made use of them, as we have seen before. Trimalchio in Petronius, speaking of his Spouse, said, See what she wears upon her Legs. Videtis mulieris compedes. As it were by way of Complaint at her Expensiveness.

PERJURY. The Law of God severely condemn'd Perjury, all false Oaths and Vows, and Promises made without an Intention to perform them; as also all Oaths made in the name of false Gods. Perjury offends against the Veracity and Justice of God himself, and is a great Insult upon his Power and Majesty, by appealing to him as a Witness to a Lye, and making use of his tremendous Name to commit Evil. See Philo, de decem præceptis & de specialibus legibus. Moses in Leviticus, seems to assign Sacrifices to atone for Perjury; which is contrary to St. Paul, who assures us, that the Sacrifices and Ceremonies of the Law did not remit internal Sins, but only external and legal Faults. It must therefore be affirmed, that these Sacrifices ordained by Moses, had only respect to the Ignorance or Temerity of him, who had made a rash Promise, or only to him that had made a secret Oath or Promise. Or else he supposes, that he to whom it was appointed to offer this Sacrifice, had already expiated his internal Fault, by a perfect Repentance and Contrition; and that the external Sacrifice prescribed, is only, as we may say, to satisfy for the Faults he might have committed, by approaching holy Things in a State of Defilement. 'Tis otherwise known, that wilful Perjury, pronounced in publick, and before the Judge, was not to be remitted by Sacrifices, even according to Moses's Law. He was punished by the Sentence of the Judges, when he was found guilty. Portabit iniquitatem suam; which is usually understood of capital Punishment. See Levit. v. 1. xix. 8. xx. 17, 19, 20. xxiv. 15. Numb. ix. 13. xv. 13.

[Margin: Levit. xix 12. Ex. xxiii. 13. — Levit. v. 4, 5, 6. vi. 2, 3. Heb. vii. 18. Gal. ii. 16. Rom. viii. 3. Heb. ix. 9, 13.]

PERIZOMA. This word is wholly Greek. It signifies a kind of Breeches, or a very broad Girt, which covered the Reins, and what Modesty requires to be concealed. The Latins call it Subligaculum. Moses says, that our first Parents, after their Sin, sewed together the broad Leaves of the Fig-tree, to make themselves Aprons, Perizomata, to cover their Nakedness.

[Margin: Gen. iii. 7. Vulgat.]

PERIZZITES, or Pheresæi, the antient Inhabitants of Palestine, mingled with the Canaanites. There is also great Probability, that they themselves were Canaanites, but having no fix'd Habitations, and living after the Manner of the Scythians and the Nomades, sometimes dispersed in one Country, and sometimes in another, they were for that Reason called Perizzites, which signifies scattered or dispersed. Pherazoth stands for Hamlets or Villages. The Perizzites did not inhabit any certain Portion of the Land of Canaan; there were some of them on both Sides of the River Jordan, in the Mountains, and in the Plains. In several Places of Scripture the Canaanites and Perizzites are mentioned as the two chief People of the Country. It is said, for Example, that in the Time of Abraham and Lot, the Canaanite and Perizzite were in the Land. The Israelites of the Tribe of Ephraim complained to Joshua, that they were too much pent up in their Possession: he bid them go, if they pleased, into the Mountains of the Perizzites and Rephaims, or Giants, and there clearing the Land, to cultivate and inhabit it. Soloman subdued the Remains of the Canaanites and Perizzites, which the Children of Israel had not rooted out, and made them Tributary to him. There is still mention made of the Perizzites in the Time of Ezra, after the Return from the Captivity of Babylon; and several Israelites had married Wives from that Nation.

[Margin: Gen. xiii. 7. — Josh. xvii. 15. — 1 Kings ix. 20, 21. 2 Chr. viii. 7. Ezra ix. 1.]

PERPERAM. St. Paul makes use of this Term in his first Epistle to the Corinthians. Much Dispute has been about the Signification of this Word. St. Chrysostom, Theophylact, and the greatest part of Interpreters, explain it by Rashness, Lightness, Precipitation. Charity is wise, steady, constant, serious, aud grave in its Behaviour. It never acts lightly or with Precipitation. Theodoret; Charity does not mingle itself in other People's Business: It does not meddle with what it has nothing to do. Others maintain [a] that the Greek Word in this Text properly signifies, to be puff'd up with Pride, to boast, to

to make a vain Shew of one's Underſtanding or Capacity.

The Word Perperam is very common among Latin Authors. Agere perperam in this Language ſignifies to act incongruouſly or unadviſedly. But the Greek Word περπερεύομαι is not found in antient Greek Writers, which makes it probable, that it is taken from the Latin Word perperam, and that it has in Greek a more extenſive Signification than in Latin. It ſignifies properly, to boaſt or brag, to ſet a Value on one's ſelf, to diſplay one's own good Qualities.

PERSECUTION, to perſecute. Perſecution in all Ages has been the Portion of the Elect, and of good Men. Cain perſecuted Abel. Joſeph was perſecuted by his Brethren. The Iſraelites in Egypt were perſecuted by Pharaoh, David by Saul, Elijah and Eliſha by Ahab, the Prophets by the Kings and People of their Time, Jeſus Chriſt by Herod and the chief of the Jews, John the Baptiſt and the Apoſtles by all wicked Enemies of Piety, Truth, and Juſtice. Laſtly, 'tis a Maxim laid down by our Saviour, that all thoſe that would lead a godly Life ſhall ſuffer Perſecution. Omnes qui pie volunt vivere in Chriſto Jeſu perſecutionem patientur. But happy are thoſe that ſhall ſuffer Perſecution for Righteouſneſs Sake. Beati qui perſecutionem patientur propter juſtitiam.

2 Tim. iii. 12.

Matt. viii. 10.

But the Verb to perſecute, perſequi, is not always to be taken in this odious Senſe; it is often put purely for following an Enemy in their Flight or Retreat, or for applying one's ſelf vigorouſly to any thing. For Example, Juſte quod juſtum eſt perſequeris; You may apply yourſelf diligently to the Practice of Juſtice. And elſewhere, Inquire pacem, & perſequere eam. And in the Proverbs, Peccatores perſequitur malum; Puniſhment purſues Sinners. And in Eccleſiaſticus; He that depends upon deceitful Viſions is compared to one that catches at a Shadow, or graſps at the Wind. Quaſi qui apprehendit umbram, & ſequitur ventum.

PERSEPOLIS, the capital City of Perſia. The Perſians call it Eſthekar. It lies in 88° 30′ of Longitude, and 30 Degrees of Latitude, according to the Arabick Tables. The Author of Lebtariskh writes, that Kiſchtasb Son of Loharab, the fifth King of Perſia, of the Race of the Caianides, there fix'd his Reſidence, and there cauſed ſeveral of thoſe Temples to be built, dedicated to Fire, which the Greeks call Pyrea, or Pyrateria, and the Perſians, Atheſch Khane, and Atheſch Gheda. And that very near to this City, in a Mountain adjoining to it, he order'd Sepulchres to be dug into the Rock for himſelf and his Succeſſors. The Ruins of 'em are ſtill to be ſeen at this Day, with ſome Remains of Figures and Columns; which though much defaced by Length of Time, yet ſtill ſufficiently ſhew, that the antient Kings of Perſia had choſe this Place for their uſual Reſidence. We may ſee Deſcriptions of theſe in Chardin's Travels, and 'tis ſaid that M. le Bruin, a famous Traveller, will ſoon publiſh them in a more exact Manner than has been yet done.

D'Herbelot. Biblioth. Orient. p. 327.

Theſe Monuments are to be diſtinguiſh'd from a magnificent Palace, which Queen Homai, Daughter of Bahuman, built in the Midſt of the City of Eſthekar. 'Tis now call'd in the Perſian Tongue, Gihil, or Tchilminar, the forty Pharos's or Columns. The Muſſulmen formerly made a Moſque of it. But the City being entirely ruin'd, they made uſe of the Materials for building that of Schiraz, which is not above the Diſtance of twelve Paraſangs from it, and which is become the Capital of the Province of Perſia, properly ſo call'd.

The ſame Author, ſpeaking of antient Perſepolis, or Eſthekar, makes it twelve Paraſangs long, and ten broad, which without doubt is extravagant. But certain it is, that all the Perſian Hiſtorians ſpeak of it as the moſt antient and the moſt magnificent City of all Aſia.

They believe Giamſchid to have been the firſt Founder of it; and ſome advance its Antiquity as high as Houſchenk, and even to Caiumarask, the firſt Founder of the Perſian Monarchy. This however is certain, that it derived its chief Splendor from the ſecond Dynaſty of Kings, who forſook their Reſidence at Balkhe in Coraſſan, to dwell at Eſthekar.

The fabulous Tradition of the Perſians is, that this City was built by the Peri, that is to ſay, by the Fairies, at the Time that Gian-ben-gian govern'd the World, a long Time before Adam; which is not ſaid of any other City of Aſia, but of Eſthekar and Baalbek. They ſay alſo, Idem p. 395.
that when the Foundations of Eſthekar were laying, they found a Veſſel of Turquois Stone, which held four Pints, or two Pounds of Liquor. This valuable Vaſe was for its Excellence call'd Giamſchid, which in Perſian ſignifies, the Vaſe of the Sun. And the Perſian Poets allegorize a thouſand Ways upon this famous Veſſel, and transform it into an hundred different Figures to embelliſh their Poetry.

It is ſaid in the ſecond Book of the Maccabees, that Antiochus Epiphanes being gone to Perſepolis, with an Intent to pillage a rich Temple that was there, all the People run to their Arms, and drove him away with his Followers. In the firſt Book of the Maccabees, where the ſame Hiſtory is related, 'tis ſaid that it was at Elymais, where Antiochus Epiphanes met with with this Opposition, intending to plunder the Temple of Nanea. See the Article of NANEA before. As to the Cities of Elymais and Persepolis, 'tis certain they were very different and distant from each other. Elymais was upon the Euleus, and Persepolis upon the Aranei. Besides, Persepolis was in Ruins in the Time of Antiochus Epiphanes, Alexander the Great having set it on Fire and entirely destroy'd it [a]. We must then admit, that there is a Mistake in the Text of the second Book of the Maccabees, or that the Author has put Persepolis to stand for the capital City of Persia, though its true Name were Elymais.

1 Maccab. vi. 1, 2, &c.

2 Maccab. i. 13, 15.

PERSIA, a Kingdom of Asia. The Persians became very famous from the Time of Cyrus, the Founder of the Persian Monarchy. Their antient Name was Elamites; and in the Time of the Roman Emperours they went by the Name of Parthians. At present they are now generally call'd Persians. See what has been already said under the Article PARTHIANS.

D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 340.

Persia is bounded to the East by the Province of Kerman; to the West by Chusistan; to the South by the Gulf of Persia; and to the North by a great Desart that separates it from Chorassan. It is about three hundred French Leagues in Extent, along the Ocean. Jazd is the most eastern City of this Province, Hamadan the most western, Gireft or Sireft the most southern, and Rei the most northern.

The Arabians say, that Fars, Father of the Persians, was Son of Azaz, or Arphaxad Son of Shem. Others derive him from Japheth; but the Persians maintain, they derive their Original from Kaiumarath, who is among them what Adam is with us. They assure us that they have always had Kings of their own Nation, whose Succession has not been interrupted but for a Space of Time altogether inconsiderable.

The Dilemites, the Curdes, and even the Oriental Turks, according to some Authors, are descended from the Persians. The Dilemites inhabit along the Shores of the Caspian Sea, call'd also the Sea of Dilem, because of its Neighbourhood to that Nation. The Curdes are scatter'd in Assyria, to which they have given the Name of Kurdistan. The Turks are withdrawn beyond the River Oxus, into a Country which from them is call'd Turkestan.

Herodot. Clio, seu l. 1. c. 31.

Authors speak differently of the Religion of the antient Persians. Herodotus is the first who has given any Account of it. He tells us, "That they had neither "Temples, nor Statues, nor Altars. They "look upon it as a Piece of Folly to "make any, or to suffer any, because "they did not believe as the Greeks, that "the Gods were of human Original. They "sacrificed to Jupiter on the highest "Mountains. They gave the Name of "God to the whole Circuit of the Heavens. They sacrificed also to the Sun, "and the Moon, and the Earth; to the "Fire, and the Water, and the Winds. "They knew no other Gods antiently but "these. Since that Time they learn'd "from the Assyrians and the Arabians, to "sacrifice to Urania, or heavenly Venus, "whom the Assyrians call Militta, the "Arabians, Alitta, and the Persians, "Mithra.

Strabo copies from Herodotus almost Word for Word, but they do not agree that the Persians gave the Name of Mithra to Venus; he says it is the Sun they call so, and all Authors in this agree with Strabo. "They sacrifice, says he, in a "pure Place, where they offer up their "Prayers, and bring thither their Victim "crown'd. After the Magus has divided "the Flesh, each takes his Part; they "leave nothing for the Gods, saying, that "God is contented with the Soul of the "Sacrifice. Some throw into the Fire a "small part of the double Fat that is "wrapt about the Intestines. They chiefly "sacrifice to the Fire and the Water. "They put upon the Fire dry Wood, "without Bark, upon which they throw "Fat, and then Oil also. They light "the Fire without any Bellows, only "making a Wind with a kind of Fan. If "any one blows the Fire, or throws any "Carkass or Dirt into it, he is punish'd "with Death.

"The Sacrifice to the Water is perform'd in this Manner. They come "together near a Lake, a River, or a "Fountain, and make a Ditch, where "they kill the Sacrifice, taking Care that "the neighbouring Water is not defiled "with the Blood, which would make it "unclean. After which they put the "Flesh upon Myrtle, or upon Lawrel. "The Magi put Fire to it with little "Sticks, and sprinkle their Libations of "Oil mix'd with Milk and Honey, not "upon the Fire, or upon the Water, but "upon the Ground. Then for a long "Time they make their Enchantments, "holding a little Bundle of Heath. The "Cappadocians have a great Number of "Magi, whom they call Pyrethes, and "several Temples of the Gods of the "Persians. They kill their Victims without making use of Knives, but of a "Lever, with which they strike as with "an Axe. They have great Enclosures "which they call Pyrethees, in the Midst "of which is an Altar, on which the "Magi

[a] See Diodor. Arrian. Q. Curtius, and others in the Life of Alexander.

"Magi preserve Ashes and a perpetual "Fire. They enter therein every Day, "and there make their Enchantments for "the Space of an Hour, holding Whisps "of Rods, and wearing Mitres that come "down so low, as to cover their Lips and "Cheeks.

Herodot. loco citato. "The Sacrifices of the Persians, says "Herodotus, are perform'd after this Man- "ner. They erect no Altars, nor use any "Fire. They have no Libations, nor any "Players upon Musick, nor Garlands, nor "Meal. But he that offers the Sacrifice "brings the Victim into a pure and clean "Place, and invokes the God to whom "he would sacrifice, having his Mitre "crown'd with Myrtle. It is not allow'd "the Priest to pray for himself in parti- "cular, but he must pray for the King, "and the whole Nation. After he has "roasted the Flesh of the Victim, being "cut into several Pieces, he spreads young "Grass, or especially Clover, and lays "them thereon. Afterwards a Magus comes "to sing the Theogony, a kind of Song "in use among them; and they are not "allow'd to sacrifice without a Magus. "A little while afterwards the Priest takes "away these Pieces of Flesh, and does "with 'em what he pleases.

Plutarch. de Iside & Isiride. Plutarch informs us of some Articles of their Creed. "Among those that ad- "mitted of two Principles, the one good "and the other bad, was, as he says, the "famous Zoroaster, who lived, according "to some, five thousand Years before the "Trojan War. One of these Gods he "named Oromazes, and the other Arima- "nius; and said, that one had a Relation "to sensible Light, and the other to Dark- "ness and Ignorance. That there was "still another between these two, who "was of a middle Nature, and whom he "call'd Mithras; and that it is for that "Reason that the Persians call'd him Mi- "thras, who has the middle Place. He "taught, that the first was to be sa- "crificed to, to obtain Favours, and the "other, to be defended from Evils. This "is the Manner in which they invoked "Pluto and Darkness. They bruised in "a Mortar an Herb call'd Omomi, which "afterwards they mingled with the Blood "of a sacrificed Wolf, and taking it all "away, they threw it into a dark Place, "where the Sun never shines. They be- "lieved that some Plants and Trees be- "longed to the good God, and others to "the evil one; and that among Animals, "Dogs, Birds, and Urchins belong to the "good God, and all those of the Wa- "ters, to the evil one. Oromazes, ac- "cording to them, was born of the purest "Light, and Arimanius of the Darkness. "They are always at variance. Oroma- "zes has produced six Gods, of which "the first is the Author of Benevolence, "the second of Valour, the third of "Equity, the fourth of Wisdom, the "fifth of Riches, the sixth of such Plea- "sures as attend good Actions. Arima- "nius also, by way of Emulation, has "produced a like Number of Gods.

"Oromazes having made himself three "Times greater than he was at first, "withdrew as far from the Sun, as the "Sun is from the Earth. He adorn'd the "Heaven, placing the Stars there. He "made a Star which is more excellent "than the rest, and, as it were, their "Guardian. This is Sirius, or the great "Dog. He made besides four and twenty "Gods, and put them all into an Egg. "Arimanius made the same Number, who "broke the Egg in which the good ones "were inclos'd, and then the good and "evil were mingled together. They say "there is a Time fix'd, in which Arima- "nius must die, and then the Earth being "united, all happy Men shall live in a "perfect Union, being assembled into the "same City, and speaking the same Lan- "guage. Theopompus adds, that accord- "ing to the Opinion of the Magi, for "Three thousand Years one of the "Gods shall be too powerful for the "other; for three thousand Years more "they shall make War, and shall endea- "vour to destroy each other. At last "Pluto shall be overcome, and then Men "shall be happy, and shall no longer "have any need of Eating."

Tho' the Persians at first would make use of no Images, yet they had them afterwards, as Berosus says in the third Book of his Chaldean History, as he is quoted by Clemens Alexandrinus. 'Twas Artaxerxes Son of Darius, and Father of Ochus, who introduced this Custom, and was the first that erected the Statue of Venus Tanaides, at Babylon, at Shushan, and at Ecbatana, and taught the Persians, the Bactrians, the People of Damascus and Sardis, that it was to be worshipped as a Goddess. Such was the Religion of the antient Persians, according to those Authors that lived at a Time, when they had the best Opportunity of being inform'd of it. Clem. Alex. l. protrept.

A modern Author, very skilful in the Eastern Languages, and who has purposely studied the Religion of the Persians, pretends that these People had just Notions concerning the Deity, and believ'd but one only God. That indeed they admitted of two Principles; but one of 'em was uncreated, and the other created. The * created Principle was the World. He maintains, that the Worship they paid the Sun and Fire was merely civil and relative. The modern Persians refer their Religion to Abraham, whom some confound with Zoroaster, and others will have him to have been the Master of Zoroaster. They think the World was created in six Days; that at the Beginning God created a Man and a Woman, from whom Mankind are derived. That there are several Terrestrial Paradises, one universal Deluge, one Moses, one Solomon. All this, without doubt, is taken from the History of the Jews, and from the Traditions of the Mahometans.

D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 340. They hold one eternal God, call'd in their Tongue Jesdan, or Oromazdes, who is the true God, call'd by the Arabians, Allah, the Author of all Good. And also another God produced by Darkness, to whom they give the Name of Ahermen, who is properly the Eblis of the Arabians, or the Devil and the Author of all Evil. They have a very great Veneration for Light, and a very great Aversion to Darkness. God the Creator of all Things has produced Light and Darkness, and from a Mixture of these two Things, of Good and Evil, Generation and Corruption, and the Composition of all the Parts of the World is effected, and will always subsist, 'till the Light withdrawing itself on one Side, and the Darkness on the other, shall cause a Destruction and Dissolution. This is an Abridgment of the Doctrine of Zoroaster, which is still espoused by the Magians and Guebres, who are Worshippers of Fire, and who always when they pray turn themselves to the Rising Sun.

Here is a List of the Kings of Persia, who had any Relation to the sacred History of Scripture.

Cyrus the Founder of the Persian Monarchy, reign'd nine Years after the taking of Babylon; that is, from the Year of the World 3466 to 3475, before Christ 525, before the vulgar Era 529.

Cambyses, call'd Ahasuerus, Ezr. iv. 6. reign'd seven Years and five Months. He died in the Year of the World 3482, before Christ 518, before the vulgar Era 522.

Oropastes the Magian, call'd Artaxerxes, Ezr. iv. 7. pretending to be Smerdis the Brother of Cambyses, reign'd five Months. He was kill'd by seven Conspirators, one of which was Darius the Son of Hystaspes.

Darius Son of Hystaspes; he is call'd Ahasuerus in the Hebrew of the Book of Esther, and Artaxerxes in the Greek of the same Book. He reign'd thirty-six Years, from the Year of the World 3482 to the Year 3519, before Christ 481, before the vulgar Era 485.

Xerxes I. reign'd twelve Years, from the Year of the World 3519 to 3531, before Christ 469, before the vulgar Era 473.

Artaxerxes Longimanus reign'd forty-eight Years, from 3531 to 3579, before Christ 421, before the vulgar Era 425.

Xerxes II. he reign'd but one Year, died in 3580, before Christ 420, before the vulgar Era 424.

Secundianus, or Sogdianus, his Brother and Murderer, reign'd seven Months.

Ochus, or Darius Nothus, reign'd nineteen Years, from the Year of the World 3581 to 3600, before Christ 400, before the vulgar Era 404.

Artaxerxes Mnemon reign'd forty-three Years, died in 3643, before Christ 357, before the vulgar Era 361.

Artaxerxes Ochus reign'd twenty-three Years, from the Year of the World 3643 to 3666, before Christ 334, before the vulgar Era 338.

Arsen reign'd three Years, died in 3668, before Christ 332, before the vulgar Era 336.

Darius Condomannus was conquer'd by Alexander the Great in 3674, after having reign'd six Years.

The Empire of the Persians lasted in all 208 Years.

PERSIS, a Roman Lady, whom St. Paul salutes in his Epistle to the Romans, xvi. 12. and whom he calls his beloved Sister. He says she has labour'd much for the Lord, and still labours. Nothing else of her Life is come to our Knowledge, nor do we see that she is honour'd by any Church; which is something singular.

PESTILENCE, or Plague. In the Hebrew Tongue, as well as in most others, the Word Plague or Pestilence is put for all Sorts of Distempers and Calamities. It answers to the Hebrew Word Deber, which properly signifies the Plague, and which is extended to all other epidemical and pestilential Diseases. Commonly the Prophets connect together the Sword, the Pestilence, and the Famine, as three Evils, which hardly go one without the other, by taking the Word Plague in the Sense we have mentioned.

The Pestilent Man is the Scorner, the Fleerer, the pretended Free-thinker, who diverts himself with the Simplicity of good People, and with the Timorousness of pious Souls. The Hebrew Word Lez, which is translated by pestilent, signifies a Scorner. The Chair of Pestilence, [or Seat of the Scorner,] mention'd in the first Psalm, is the Seat of such pernicious People. Solomon in many Places cautions his Readers against their Discourse. Non amat pestilens (the Hebrew has derisor) eum qui se castigat. The Scorner loves not him that reproves him. And elsewhere, Pestilenti flagellato, stultus sapientior erit. The Correction of such Scoffers is a great Instruction for the Weak, the Low, the Foolish, those that want Light and Understanding, Homines pestilentes dissipant civitatem. Such kind of of Men are only fit to draw down the Anger of God upon a Community, in order to its Destruction. Tertullus, the Advocate of the Jews, says, that St. Paul was a pestilent Fellow, a common Disturber and Mover of Sedition, because he maintained that Jesus was the Christ. Jeremiah gives to Babylon the Name of the contagious Mountain. Ecce ego ad te, mons pestifer; because it spread the Infection of Idolatry and Superstition through the whole World. The Messiah says in Hosea, O Death, I will be thy Plagues; O Grave, I will be thy Destruction. St. Jerom translates it; Ero mors tua, ô mors, morsus tuus ero, inferne. And in Psalm xc. 3. instead of these Words, Ipse liberavit me de laqueo venantium, & à verbo aspero; the Hebrew has, He shall deliver me from the Snares of the Hunter, and from the dangerous Pestilence. The same Letters that signify a Word, dabar, also signify the Pestilence, deber.

PETASUS. This was a Cap usually worn by Travellers. 'Tis observed commonly upon the Head of antient Figures of Mercury. It had Brims, but not so broad as those of our Hats. It was peculiar to Travellers. Mercury wore it in the Quality of the God of Travellers and Merchants.

In the Greek of the Second Book of the Maccabees, Chap. iv. it is said that Jason, High-priest of the Jews, obliged the robust young Men, and such as approved themselves best in Horsemanship, to pass under the Petasus. Hesychius and Pollux say, that the Petasus was given to the Ephebi, to young Men that were just become Striplings; and to Mercury, to whom it is supposed that the Theatre of Jerusalem was dedicated: St. Jerom, and many other Interpreters, have understood this Passage of the Second Book of Maccabees, of Places of Prostitution, wherein these young People were obliged to enter themselves. He translates it, Optimos quosque ephebortum in lupanaribus ponere.

2 Macc. iv. 12. ὑπὸ πέτασον ἄγειν.

Junius thinks that Petasus, in the Passage that we are now inquiring into, has the same Signification as Petaurus; and, indeed, both Hesychius and Phavorinus intimate, that these two Words were sometimes confounded. But Petaurus signifies a Wheel, across which the Petaurists us'd to pass with surprizing Agility. The Author of the Maccabees would therefore affirm, that Jason caus'd such Youth as succeeded best in the first Exercises of the Gymnasium, to perform those other dangerous Exercises.

PETER. St. Peter the chief of the Apostles was born at Bethsaida, Son of John, Jona, or Joanna, and Brother of St. Andrew. His first Name was Simon or Simeon, but when our Saviour called him to the Apostleship, he changed his Name into Cephas, that is, in Syriac, a Stone or a Rock, in Latin, Petra, whence Peter. He was a marry'd Man, and had his House, his Mother-in-Law, and his Wife at Capernaum, upon the Lake of Gennesareth. St. Andrew having been first call'd by Jesus Christ, met his Brother Simon and told him, [a] we have found the Messiah, and then brought him to Jesus. Jesus beholding him, said to him, You are Simon Son of John, henceforth you shall be call'd Cephas, that is, Stone or Rock. After having pass'd one Day with our Saviour, they return'd to their ordinary Occupation, which was Fishing. Yet it is thought they were present with him at the Marriage of Cana in Galilee.

John i. 42, 43.
Mark i. 29. Matth. viii. 14. Luke iv. 38.

Towards the End of the same Year, Jesus Christ being on the Shoar of the Lake of Gennesareth, saw Peter and Andrew busy about their Fishery, and were then washing their Nets. He enter'd into their Boat, and bid Peter throw out his Nets into the Sea, in order to fish. Peter obey'd him, tho' he had already fish'd the whole Night without catching any thing. They took so many Fishes at this Draught, that their own Vessel, and that of James and John Sons of Zebedee, were fill'd with them. Then Peter threw himself at the Feet of Jesus, and said to him, Depart from me, Lord, for I am a Sinner. Then Jesus said to them, Follow me, and I will make you Fishers of Men. He said the same thing to James and John, and immediately they quitted their Boats and Nets, and follow'd our Saviour.

Luke v. 1, 2, 3.

Some time after [b] Jesus coming to Capernaum, enter'd into the House of St. Peter, where his Mother-in-Law lay sick of a Fever. He immediately heal'd her, and she began to minister to him. A little while before the Feast of the Passover of the following Year, being the 32d of the vulgar Era, after Jesus return'd into Galilee, he made Choice of Twelve Apostles, among which St. Peter has always the first Place. One Night that Jesus Christ walked upon the Waters of the Lake of Gennesareth, St. Peter asked him Leave to come and meet him. Jesus gave him Leave, but he seeing a great Wave coming, was afraid, and therefore began to sink. Then Jesus held him up, and said to him; O Man of little Faith, why was you afraid? Afterwards landing on the other Side the Lake, and the Multitude that he had fed the Day before beyond the Lake, being come to him at Capernaum, he spoke to them of his Body and of his Blood, which he was to give to his Disciples to eat and drink; this this so offended the Multitude, that several of them quitted him thereupon. He therefore asked his Apostles if they would leave him also; to which Peter reply'd, To whom shall we go, Lord? for thou John vi. 53, 54, &c. hast the Words of eternal Life.

One Day as our Saviour was near Cesarea Matth. xvi. 13, 14. Philippi, he asked his Apostles who Men took him to be. They answered him, that some said he was John the Baptist, others Elias, and others Jeremiah, or some one of the old Prophets. And you, says he, who do you say I am? Simon Peter answer'd him, You are the Christ, the Son of the Living God. Jesus then said to him, Happy are you, Simon Son of Jona, for 'tis not Flesh or Blood that has reveal'd these things to you, but my Father which is in Heaven. And I say further to you, that as your Name is Peter, so upon this Rock I will build my Church, and the Gates of Hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give you the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, and whatsoever you shall bind upon Earth shall be also bound in Heaven, and whatever you shall loose upon Earth shall be loosed in Heaven. About eight Days after, [a] our Saviour Matt. xvii. 1, 2, 3, &c. Luke ix. 28. being transfigured upon the Mountain apart from the rest, took with him Peter, James, and John, and shew'd them a Glimpse of his Glory. Then St. Peter being in an Ecstacy, and seeing Moses and Elias with Jesus, cry'd out to them, Lord, it is good for us to be here; if you please we will make three Tents, one for you, one for Moses, and one for Elias.

Jesus returning from thence to Capernaum, upon the Road the Apostles disputed among themselves, which of them should be the greatest in the Kingdom of God, which they thought to be very near. Matt. xvii. 23, 24. Luke ix. 46. Mark ix. 32. Jesus and St. Peter came first to Capernaum, a pretty while before the rest; and those that gather'd the half Shekel a-head for the Use of the Temple, came and asked Peter if his Master would pay it then. Jesus bid Peter throw his Line into the Sea, and he should find wherewith to pay the Toll for them two, in the Mouth of the first Fish he should take. Peter obey'd; and found a Shekel in the Mouth of the Fish, which he gave to the Toll-gatherers for Jesus and himself. Then the Apostles came to them, and Jesus inquir'd of them about the Conversation they had had by the Way, and gave them good Instructions of Humility and Modesty; shewing plainly, that though absent, he knew very well what Discourse had passed among them.

One Day as Jesus was speaking concerning the Forgiveness of Injuries, St. Peter Matt. xviii. 21, 22. asked him how often they must forgive, and whether it was not sufficient to pardon an Offender Seven times. Jesus told him, I say, you must pardon not only as far as Seven times, but even Seventy times Seven. Upon another Occasion, [b] as our Saviour was speaking of the Danger of Riches, Peter said to him; Lord, we have left all Things to follow thee; what Reward shall we have for it? Jesus answer'd him; I tell you in truth, that you who have left all Things to follow me, shall receive an hundred-fold, even in this World, and in the other Eternal Life; and at the last Day, when the Son of Man shall come to judge the World, you shall sit upon twelve Thrones, to judge the twelve Tribes of Israel.

On the Tuesday before our Saviour's Passion, Peter shewed him the Fig-tree he had cursed, the Evening before, which was now dry'd up and wither'd; and the Mark xi. 12---21. Day following as they sat upon the Mountain of Olives, he, with the other Apostles, asked Jesus when the Temple was to be destroy'd. On Thursday he was sent with Matt. xxiv. 1, 2, &c. Mark xiv. 1, 2. Luke xxii. St. John to prepare all Things for the Passover; and at Evening, when Jesus was come into the City with his Apostles, and being sat down at Table, began to speak of him that should betray him, Peter made Signs to John to ask him who this should be. After Supper, the Disciples John xiii. 24. enter'd into a Dispute which should be the Greatest among them; whereupon Jesus Christ laying aside his Garments, betook himself to wash their Feet, to give them an Example of Humility in his own Person. St. Peter at first made some Difficulty, and would not suffer his Master to wash his Feet; but Jesus telling him, that if he did not wash his Feet, he could have no Part in him; St. Peter reply'd, Lord, wash not only my Feet, but my Hands and Head also. John xiii. 6---10.

Some time after, Jesus said to him, Peter, Satan has desired you, and the Luke xxii. 31, 32, &c. other Apostles, to sift you as Men sift Wheat: But I have pray'd for you, that your Faith may not fail; and when you are converted, confirm your Brethren. By this he warn'd St. Peter of his Fall, that was just at hand, and of his renouncing him; from which, by the Assistance of God, he was afterwards to recover. St. Peter then asked him, where he was going, and said, he was ready to Luke xxii. 33. follow him every where, not only to Prison, but to Death itself. But Christ declared to him, that he would be so far from following him to Death, that he would abjure him three times that very Night, before the Cock should crow, or before Break of Day. When Supper was ended, he went to the Garden of Olives, where taking Peter, James and John, he went went with them apart, that they might be Witnesses of his Agony. Peter, tho' before he had shew'd so much Resolution, yet fell asleep with the rest, which occasioned Jesus to say to him; Do you sleep, Simon? Could you not watch with me one Hour? (Mark xiv. 37. Matth. xxvi. 40. &c.)

Judas being come with the Soldiers to seize Jesus, Peter drew his Sword, and cut off the right Ear of one called Malchus, who was Servant to the High Priest: But Jesus bid him put up his Sword into the Scabbard, and told him, that all those that fought with the Sword should perish by the Sword: And at the same time healed Malchus's Ear. (John xviii. 10, &c.) Peter follow'd Jesus afar off, as far as the House of Caiaphas, and was let in by means of another Disciple, who was known in the Family. The Soldiers and Servants that had brought Jesus, having lighted a Fire in the Middle of the Hall, Peter mingled amongst them to warm himself also; (John xviii. 15, 18.) when a Maid Servant having look'd earnestly upon him, said, Surely this Man was with Jesus of Nazareth. But Peter made answer, I know not what you say, for I do not so much as know the Man. Presently after he went out into the Porch, when immediately the Cock crew. A little while after another Maid said to those that were present, This Man was with Jesus of Nazareth. But Peter deny'd it with an Oath. About an Hour after, one of the Company affirm'd, that Peter was a Disciple of Jesus. Others insisted upon the same thing, and said, that surely he was one of them, for his very Speech betray'd him to be a Galilean. Lastly, one of them, being a Kinsman to Malchus, whose Ear Peter had cut off, affirmed the same thing, and asked him, Did not I see you with him in the Garden? Peter again deny'd it with an Oath, protesting that he did not know the Man. And at the same time the Cock crow'd the second Time. Then Jesus being in the same Hall, and not far from Peter, look'd upon him; and Peter then remembring that Jesus had said to him, Before the Cock should crow Twice he should deny him Thrice, he went out of Caiaphas's House, and wept bitterly. (Matt. xxvi. 73, 75. Mark xiv. 34, 72.)

Very probably he remain'd in Secret, and in Tears, all the Time of our Saviour's Passion, that is, all Friday and Saturday following; but on Sunday Morning Jesus being risen, and Mary having been at the Tomb, and not finding the Body of Jesus, she came in haste into the City, to tell Peter and John that they had taken away their Master, and that she could not find where they had put him. Peter and John made haste thither, and John coming first, did not go into the Sepulchre. Peter then coming up to him, presently stoop'd down, and saw the Linen Cloths wherein the Body had been wrapt. He went then into the Sepulchre, and John with him, after which they return'd to Jerusalem, not knowing what had come to pass. But soon after Jesus appeared to the Holy Women, who had come first to the Sepulchre, and bid them give his Apostles Notice of his Resurrection, and particularly St. Peter. (Vide Joan. xx. 1, 2, 3, &c. and Luc. xxiv. 12, &c.) And the same Day our Saviour also appeared to Peter, to comfort him, and assure him, that his Repentance had been acceptable to him. (Mark xvi. 7. Luke xxiv. 34. Chrysost. in 1 Cor. hom. 38.)

Some Days after, St. Peter being return'd into Galilee, as Jesus had commanded him, and going to fish in the Sea of Galilee, or in the Lake of Gennesareth, with some other of the Apostles; (John xxi. 1, 2, &c.) Jesus appeared to them on the Shoar, and bid them throw out their Nets on the right Side of the Vessel. They threw them out, and took such a Multitude of Fishes, that they could not draw up their Nets again. Then St. John said to Peter, 'Tis the Lord. Peter immediately girded up himself, for he was naked, and swimming to Shoar he came to Jesus; then drawing their Nets to Shoar, Jesus dined with them. After Dinner, Jesus said to Peter; Simon Son of Jona, do you love me more than these? He answered, yea, Lord, you know that I love you. Jesus says to him, Then feed my Lambs. He put the same Question to him again, and Peter making the same Answer, our Lord said to him again, Feed my Lambs. This he repeated a third Time, at which St. Peter was troubled and said, You know, Lord, that I love you. Jesus reply'd to him, "Feed my Sheep. I tell you "for a Truth, that when you were young, "you girded your self and went where you "pleas'd; but now you are old another shall "gird you, and lead you where you would "not go." This he said to let him know what Death he was to dye. At the same time Peter seeing St. John the Evangelist, said to our Saviour, Lord, what must become of him? Jesus answered, "If I will "have him continue as he is, what does that "concern you? Do you follow me." Thus he refused to declare, in what manner St. John should end his Life.

After that Jesus Christ had ascended into Heaven, and that the Apostles had been Witnesses of his Ascension, they returned to Jerusalem, to wait there for the Holy Ghost, whom our Saviour had promised to send them; and being assembled together in a House, they continued there in Prayer, and in the Union of Charity, till the Time that the Holy Ghost descended upon them, in the Form of Tongues of Fire. During this Interval, St. Peter proposed to the Apostles, and to the rest of the Assembly, to fill up the Place that the Traitor Judas had left vacant in the Apostleship. The Proposal was agreed to by all, and two Persons were presented, Joseph Barsabas and Matthias. They all betook themselves to Prayer, to desire of God that he would declare his Pleasure in the Choice of one of these two Persons. The Lot was cast, which fell upon Matthias, who from that time was admitted as one of the Apostles.

The tenth Day after the Ascension of our Saviour, the Holy Ghost having descended upon the Apostles, and upon all the Faithful that were there assembled with them, and having replenished them with supernatural Gifts, and especially with the Gift of Tongues, all those that were Witnesses of this Miracle, express'd their Admiration at it: And it being the Day of Pentecost, and there being then at Jerusalem Jews from all the Provinces of the East; they could not comprehend by what means these People, who generally were Galileans, should speak the Languages of all these Pagan Nations. Some of them said, that the Apostles were full of Wine: But St. Peter standing up in their Defence, told them, That what they heard and saw, was not the Effect of Drunkenness, but it was the Completion of the Promise that the Holy Ghost had made by the Prophet Joel, to send his Spirit upon all Flesh, and to give the Spirit of Prophecy to Young and Old, to Men and Women. He afterwards spoke to them of Jesus Christ, and told them, that he was the true Messiah, and that he was risen from the Dead, as the Scripture had foretold he should; declaring, that himself and the other Apostles were Witnesses of his Resurrection, of his Ascension into Heaven, and of the Mission of the Holy Ghost, the visible Effects of which they saw with their own Eyes, in the Gift of Languages wherewith they were replenish'd.

Acts ii. 1, 2, 3, &c.

Joel ii. 28.

Then those that heard him were touched with Compunction, and asked the Apostles saying, Brethren, what shall we do? Peter answer'd them; Repent and be baptized, and you shall receive the Holy Ghost. Then he instructed them, baptized them, and that very Day Three thousand Persons were added to the Church. Some Days after St. Peter and St. John were going to the Temple at the Hour of Prayers, and found at the Gate of the Temple a Man of more than forty Years of Age, who from his Birth had been a Cripple, so that he could not walk. This Man seeing Peter and John, asked an Alms of them. Then Peter said to him; I have neither Silver or Gold, but what I have I will give you. In the Name of Jesus of Nazareth, rise up and walk. Presently he got up, walked, and went into the Temple along with them, lifting up his Voice, and glorifying God. He held St. Peter, telling the People then assembled, all that happened unto him. Then St. Peter taking this Occasion, told the People, that it was not by his own Power, that he had performed the Miracle they wonder'd at so much, but it was by the Power of Jesus Christ that this Man was healed. He then laid before them the great Crime they had committed, in putting Jesus Christ to death, who was the Saviour of the World and the Messiah. And after he had shewn them by all the Prophecies that Christ was to dye thus, he exhorted them to Repentance, and to make a proper Use of the Death of Christ.

Acts iii. 1, 2, 3.

He was thus speaking to the People, when the Priests and Sadducees coming upon them, they laid hold on Peter and John, and put them in Prison till the Day following, for now it was late. But the Number of those that were converted this Day, at this second Preaching of St. Peter, was about Five thousand. The Day following, the Senate, the Magistrates, and the Chief of the Priests being assembled, they made the two Apostles appear before them, when they were asked, in whose Name they had performed the Miracle of healing the lame Man. St. Peter answered them, That it was in the Name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom they had crucified, and whom God had raised again from the Dead. This is he, said they, who is the Corner-stone whom you have rejected, but who is he alone in whom we can hope for Salvation. The Boldness of Peter and John surprized them all, and causing them to be taken out of the Assembly, that they might deliberate among themselves on what Resolution to take, they agreed to order them to speak no more in the Name of Jesus Christ; then making them to come in again, they strictly charged them to teach no more in this Name. But Peter and John told them; Judge your selves which is most just before God, whether to obey you or to obey God; for we cannot help speaking of what we have heard and seen. The Senate then dismissed them with great Threats, if they should persist in being disobedient to their Orders.

Acts iv. 1, 2, 3, &c.

The two Apostles returned then to their Brethren, and related to them all that had passed. Having heard this, they raised their Voices to Heaven, and begged of God to give them Strength and Courage to declare his Word with perfect Liberty, and having finished their Prayers, the Place shook wherein they were assembled, and they were again filled with the Holy Ghost. At this time many of the Faithful sold their Estates, and brought the Money, and laid it at the Feet of the Apostles. Of this Number was a Man called Ananias, with his Wife Sapphira, who, by a private Agreement between themselves, concealed a Part of the Money for which they had sold their Land, and brought the rest to St. Peter as if it were the whole Sum. Ananias came first, and St. Peter said to him; Ananias, how came Satan to seduce you, and to prevail with you to lye to the Holy Ghost, by concealing part of the Price of your Land? 'Tis not Men that you thought to impose on, but God. Immediately Ananias fell down dead, and they carried him out and buried him. About three Hours after his Wife Sapphira came in, and St. Peter said to her almost the same Things he had before said to her Husband, and immediately she fell down also, and gave up the Ghost. This Accident infused a great Awe in the whole Church, and amongst all those that heard of it.

The Number of Believers considerably increased every Day, so that they even Acts v. 15, 16, 17, &c. brought out the Sick into the Streets, and laid them where Peter was to pass, that at least his Shadow might cover some of them, by which means they were healed of their Distempers. Then the High-priest and his Associates, that is, the Pharisees, caused the Apostles to be apprehended and put into Prison. But an Angel brought them forth, and bid them go into the Temple, and there boldly declare all the Words of Life which God had taught them. This they perform'd, upon which the Princes and Priests caus'd them to be brought before them, and having demanded why they had disobey'd their Orders, in continuing to speak still in the Name of Jesus Christ; Peter and the Apostles answer'd, that it was more necessary to obey God than Man. This Answer provok'd them very much, and they were going to condemn them to death, when Gamaliel prevail'd with them to change their Resolution, by representing to 'em, that if this Matter proceeded from God, 'twas in vain for them to oppose it; but if otherwise, then it would soon vanish of itself. So they dismiss'd the Apostles, after giving them thirty-nine Stripes apiece, and charged them to speak no more in the Name of Jesus Christ.

After the Martyrdom of St. Stephen, a Persecution was carry'd on against the Faithful at Jerusalem, and they were obliged to take Shelter in several Places. The Apostles alone continued at Jerusalem; Acts viii. 1, 2, 3, &c. St. Philip the Deacon going to Samaria, the Samaritans received the Word of the Lord, and several of them were baptized. Then St. Peter and St. John repair'd thither also, to give them the Holy Ghost; which St. Philip, being only a Deacon, had not Power to do. Simon the Magician was also baptized among others, and admiring the Power that the Apostles had, of conferring the Holy Ghost, would have bought the same Power of the Apostles, and accordingly offer'd Money to St. Peter. But Peter with Indignation reply'd to him, Thy Money and thou perish together, who thinkest the Gifts of God can be bought with Money! Thou hast no part with us, nor hast any Pretensions to this Ministry, for thy Heart is not right before God. Repent therefore of this Wickedness, and pray to God if perhaps he will pardon the wicked Thoughts of thy Heart. After this Peter and John return'd again to Jerusalem.

The Fire of Persecution being now pretty well extinguished, St. Peter departed from Jerusalem, [a] and visiting the Disciples from City to City, he came also to see the Saints that dwelt at Lydda. Here he found a Man call'd Æneas, who had been paralytick for eight Years. St. Peter said to him, Æneas, rise up; Jesus Christ the Lord cures you. He presently got up, and all that dwelt at Lydda that saw the Miracle were converted to the Lord. There was also at Joppa a certain holy Woman named Tabitha, who happening to die while St. Peter was at Lydda, the Disciples sent to desire him to come to them. Whereupon St. Peter came, and entering into the Chamber where Tabitha lay dead, he caus'd every body to go out, and betook himself to Prayers. Then turning himself towards the Corps, he said, Tabitha arise. At which Instant she open'd her Eyes, and seeing St. Peter, she sat up. This Miracle was much fam'd at Joppa, and was the Occasion that many were converted. St. Peter stay'd there a good while, taking up his Lodging with one Simon a Tanner.

Now there was at Cesarea of Palestine a Centurion call'd Cornelius, a Man that fear'd God, and to whom it was reveal'd by an Acts x. 1, 2, 3. Angel, that he should send to Joppa to Peter, who should tell him what he had to do. Cornelius immediately sent two of his Servants, and while they were upon the Road, the Lord sent a Vision to Peter, to prepare him to go to this Man without any Scruple, although he was not a Jew. For as yet the Door of the Gospel had not been to open'd the Gentiles. St. Peter then being upon the Terrass of his Host Simon, was seized with an Ecstasy, and saw, as it were, a great Sheet of Linen let down from Heaven, which was full of all Kinds of Animals and Reptiles, both clean and unclean. He had this Vision three times, and heard a Voice, saying, Arise Peter, kill and eat. But Peter answered, Lord, I have never eaten any thing unclean. The Voice reply'd, Call not that unclean which God has purified. After which the Sheet was again taken up into Heaven. At the same ſame Time the Men came in that had been ſent by Cornelius. They acquainted him with what had happen'd to their Maſter, and deſir'd him to go along with them to Ceſarea. The Day following St. Peter went along with them, and ſome of the Brethren of Joppa accompany'd them alſo.

He found Cornelius with his Kindred and Friends in Expectation of him. When Cornelius firſt ſaw him, he fell at his Feet as if to worſhip him. But Peter lifting him up, told him; I am but a Man as well as you. Coming into the Houſe, Peter ſaid to thoſe that were aſſembled together, You know what Averſion the Jews have for thoſe that are uncircumcis'd, and with what Caution they avoid all Correſpondence with them, and will not ſo much as go into their Houſes. But God has ſhew'd me, that I ought not to eſteem any Man as unclean and defiled, whom he has ſanctify'd; for which Reaſon I have made no Difficulty of coming to you. I pray you therefore to declare to me, for what Reaſon you have ſent for me. Then Cornelius related to him what had happen'd; and Peter giving Thanks to God, who had no Reſpect to the different Circumſtances of Perſons, began to preach Jeſus Chriſt to Cornelius, and to all thoſe that were preſent. While he was yet ſpeaking, the Holy Ghoſt deſcended upon all that heard him, and they ſpoke with Variety of Tongues. Then Peter ſaid, Can any one refuſe Baptiſm to thoſe that have already receiv'd the Holy Ghoſt as well as ourſelves? And he commanded that they ſhould be baptized in the Name of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Acts x. 14, 15, 16, &c.

When St. Peter was return'd to Jeruſalem, the Faithful of the Circumciſion ſaid to him, Why have you gone unto thoſe that are not circumcis'd, and why have you eat with them? But when Peter had related to 'em all that had paſſed, they were ſatisfy'd, and glorify'd God, who had given the Gift of Repentance, leading to Life, to the Gentiles as well as to the Jews. 'Tis thought that Peter went to Antioch a little after this, [a] where he founded the Chriſtian Church, of which he was firſt Biſhop. St. Chryſoſtom ſays, he continued there a long while; 'tis believed he was there ſeven Years, not continually, but at ſeveral Times. For during this Time he went to Jeruſalem, into the Provinces of Aſia Minor, to Bithynia, Cappadocia, and Pontus, as is concluded from the Epiſtle that afterwards he addreſs'd to the Faithful of thoſe Provinces. From thence he went to Rome, in the 42d Year of the vulgar Era, and the 2d Year of the Emperor Claudius, about five and twenty Years before his Martyrdom; which is the Time that the Church of Rome generally allows to the Biſhoprick of St. Peter. 'Tis thought that at his leaving Antioch, he there fix'd St. Ignatius in his Place.

'Tis ſaid, [b] that while he was at Rome under Claudius, he there contracted an Acquaintance with Philo, the Alexandrian Jew, and had ſeveral Converſations with him. See the Article Philo. 'Tis thought alſo, that the chief Occaſion of his Journey [c] was to oppoſe Simon Magus, who by his Deceits had perverted a great Number of Perſons, and was honour'd there almoſt as a God. The Preſence of St. Peter, and the true Miracles that he oppoſed to the Tricks of Simon, ruin'd or much diminiſh'd the Reputation of this Impoſtor. If at this Time St. Peter did not continue long enough at Rome, to undeceive thoſe that had been ſeduced by Simon, yet he did it effectually afterwards, at his Return, when he entirely defeated him, as we ſhall ſee in its Plac[e].

St. Peter being come to Jeruſalem, the Paſſover of the 44th Year of the vulgar Era, Herod Agrippa began a Perſecution againſt the Church. He put to the Sword St. James the Greater, Brother of John; and perceiving that his Death was acceptable to the Jews, he moreover cauſed Peter to be apprehended, and put him in Priſon, with a Deſign of putting him to death publickly after the Paſſover. In the Interim Interceſſion was made for him continually to God, by the Church. But the very Night that Herod thought of putting him to death, as Peter loaded with Chains was ſleeping between two Soldiers, the Angel of the Lord awakened him, broke his Chains, open'd the Door of the Priſon to him, and brought him the Length of a Street. Then the Angel leaving him, he ſaid, Now I find that the Lord has deliver'd me from the Hands of Herod, and from all the Expectation of the Jews. From thence he came to the Houſe of Mary the Mother of John, where many of the Faithful were aſſembled at Prayers. He knock'd at the Door, and a Damſel call'd Rhode coming to open it, when ſhe heard his Voice, inſtead of opening the Door to him, ſhe run in a Tranſport of Joy to acquaint the Family, that Peter was at the Door. Thoſe that heard her could not believe it, and ſaid it was his Angel, and not himſelf. But he continuing to knock, they let him in, when he inform'd them of what had happen'd to him.

He then left Jerusalem, but we are not told what became of him, 'till the Time of the Council held at Jerusalem, in the Year 51. 'Tis likely that before this Time he made his second Journey to Rome, from whence he writ his first Epistle, about the 50th Year of the vulgar Era. [a] It is dated from Babylon, that is, from Rome, as the Antients have explain'd it. [b] 'Tis thought that St. Mark, who was his Interpreter, was assisting to him in composing it, as to the Style. It is address'd to the Faithful of Bithynia, of Pontus, of Galatia, and of Cappadocia. It has a principal Regard to the converted Jews, though it speaks also of the Gentiles made Proselytes to the Church. It was sent by Silvanus, who is probably the same so famous in the Acts by the Name of Silas. It was written in Greek, and in it may be seen a Strength and Vigour not unworthy of the Prince of the Apostles.

St. Peter was obliged to leave Rome [c] by Order of the Emperor Claudius, who had banish'd all Jews from thence, because of the Tumults they continually rais'd there, excited by one Chrestus, as Suetonius says, meaning probably by this Name Jesus Christ. (Sueton. l. 5. c. 25.) The Chief of the Apostles return'd into Judea, where was held the Council of Jerusalem, in which, after a strict Examination of the Matter proposed to Peter and the Apostles, he spoke to them with much Wisdom, saying, that God having given his Holy Ghost and the Gift of Faith to the Gentiles as well as to the Jews, they ought not to impose the Yoke of the Legal Observances on the new Converts, which (as he says) neither we nor our Fathers have been able to bear. (Acts xv. 7, 8, &c.) But we believe, that 'tis through the Grace of Jesus Christ that both we and they shall be saved. St. James the Less, Bishop of Jerusalem, seconded this Opinion of St. Peter; and the Council came to this Conclusion, That no new Obligation should be imposed on the Gentiles, but only that they should be required to abstain from Fornication, from the Use of Blood, and from Meats offer'd to Idols. The Resolution of this Council was written to the Faithful of Antioch, because it was there this Question was first started.

Some Time after St. Peter coming to Antioch, [d] he eat and drank with the Gentiles, without regarding that Distinction of Meats enjoin'd by the Law. But after that, when some of the Faithful of Jerusalem came to Antioch, being converted Jews, St. Peter out of Fear to offend them separated himself from the converted Gentiles, and would no longer eat with them as before. St. Paul fearing, that what St. Peter did, might be interpreted, as if he had a Desire to oblige the Gentiles to Judaize, and to submit themselves to the Yoke of the Law, and so to revoke and annul what he himself had determined in the Council of Jerusalem: St. Paul, I say, withstood him to his Face, and openly expostulated with him, telling him, he was much in the wrong to endeavour to oblige the Gentiles, at least tacitly by his own Manner of acting, to live as the Jews do. St. Peter received this Reprehension with Silence and Humility, without having Recourse to his Primacy, to support what he had done; and the whole Church, says Pope Pelagius, reverences the Humility with which St. Peter submitted to the Reasons of St. Paul, and came into his Sentiments. (Tom. 5. Concil. p. 622. b. c. d.) Every body knows the Dispute heretofore agitated between St. Austin and St. Jerome, upon the Occasion of this Reproof of St. Peter by St. Paul. But as this does not belong to our Subject, we refer the Reader to the Letters of these two Fathers.

The Particulars of St. Peter's Life are little known, from the 51st Year of the vulgar Era, in which the Council of Jerusalem was held, 'till his last Journey to Rome, which was some Time before his Death. Then being acquainted by Revelation, that the Time of his Death was not far off, he had a Mind to write to the Faithful that had been converted by him, to put them in mind of the Truths he had before taught them. (Athanaf. de fuga. Vide 2 Pet. i. 14.) He sent them therefore his second Epistle, [e] in which he exhorts them to persevere in the Doctrine of the Apostles, and in the Practice of good Works, without suffering themselves to be seduced by false Teachers. 'Tis thought he means by those the Disciples of Simon Magus. He speaks with Commendation of the Epistles of St. Paul, of which even then some ignorant Pretenders began to make an ill Use. However, for some Time the Canonicalness of this Epistle was made a Question, [f] because it was thought to have some Difference of Style from the former Epistle. But this Diversity may proceed from the several Interpreters; for the Antients tell us, that besides St. Mark he had also Glaucias for an Interpreter, whom Basilides the Arch-heretick boasted to have for his Master. (Clem. Alex. l. 7. Stromat. p. 764.) Our Preface may be seen to this Epistle.

St. Peter and St. Paul came to Rome about the same Time, that is, about the Year of Christ 65, where they perform'd many Miracles, and made many Converts. Simon Magus, by his Tricks, continued to deceive the People; pretending himself to be the Messiah, and even attempting to ascend into Heaven. But he having caused himself to be carry'd up into the Air by his Demons, in a fiery Chariot, [a] St. Peter and St. Paul betook themselves to their Prayers; and then the Impostor, being forsaken of his Demons, fell down upon the Ground, and died by his Fall; not indeed immediately, but having broken his Legs, he was carry'd to Brunda, where, through Rage and Shame, he threw himself headlong from the Top of his House. This Place call'd Brunda was probably in Rome, for several of the Antients expresly Ambr. Serm. 68. affirm, that he died at Rome. St. Ambrose relates, that the Pagans being provoked against St. Peter, because of what had happen'd to Simon Magus, were in search of him to kill him, and that the Believers were urgent with him to quit Rome, in order to secure himself from their Fury. He was got already to the Gates of Rome, when he saw Jesus Christ coming in at the same Gate. Peter said to him, Lord, whither are you going? to which our Saviour answer'd, I am coming to Rome to be crucify'd over again. St. Peter understood, by these Words, that our Lord would have him stay there, and glorify him by his Death. He return'd, and related to the Faithful what had happen'd to him; he was taken and put into Prison, where, 'tis said, he continued for nine Months. Lastly, he was crucify'd at Rome in the Via Ostia, the 29th of June, on the same Day and in the same Place that St. Paul was beheaded. We are assured that he was fix'd to the Cross or Gibbet with his Head downwards, as he had desired himself of his Executioners. [b] This he did out of a Sense of Humility, for fear it should Ambrof. de interpell. Job. l. 2. l. 1. c. 1. be thought, as St. Ambrose says, [b] that he affected the Glory of Jesus Christ, and the more to augment the Pain of his Execution [c].

'Tis said, that the Body of St. Peter was Greg. Mag. l. 3. ep. 30. at first buried in the Catacombs, two Miles from Rome, from whence it was afterwards transported to the Vatican, where it has lain ever since. His Festival is celebrated with that of St. Paul, on the 29th of June. St. Peter died in the 66th Year of the vulgar Era, after having held the Primacy of Rome for about 24 or 25 Years. His Age might be about 74 or 75 Years. It is generally agreed, that St. Linus was his Successor. This is the Pourtraiture that Nicephorus gives us Niceph. l. 2. c. 37. of St. Peter, which he has probably taken from the antient Pictures that were preserved of this Apostle. He was not fat, but pretty tall and upright, having a fair and palish Countenance. The Hair of his Head and Beard was thick, frizzled, and not long. His Eyes were black, and blood-shot, his Eye-brows protuberant and lofty, his Nose something long, and rather flat than sharp.

Some of the Pagans heretofore accused St. Peter of Magick, and said he had com- Vide Aug. l. 13. c. 53. de Civit. The Ebionites im- Epiphan. hæref. 20. c. 15. puted several of their Superstitions to him, among others was their bathing every Day after eating, and their abstaining from the Flesh of Animals, and all Things that proceeded from Animals. All these Forgeries they had inserted in a Book intitled, The Voyages of St. Peter, which they ascribed to St. Clement. He has been made also the Author of several Books, [d] such were his Acts, his Gospel, his Revelation, a Work about Preaching, and another about Judgment. We have still a large History of St. Peter, call'd the Recognitions, imputed to St. Clement. St. Clemens of Alexandria cited the Revelation of St. Peter in his Hypotyposes. They In Excerptis Clem. p. 807. read this false Revelation in some Churches of Palestine on Good-Friday, in the fifth Sozomen l. 7. c. 19. Age. Origen rejects the Book of St. Peter's Preaching; but Clemens Alexandrinus Origen. de Princip. often quotes it [e]. The Nazarene Hereticks made use of St. Peter's Gospel. Origen relates something from it. The Orientals ascribe some Liturgies to him, but it is agreed that he had no Hand in 'em. These Things may be seen more at large in Baronius, and M. de Tillemont, T. 1. Hist. Eccl. St. Peter, Art. 39, 40. and in M. Fabricius, Cod. Apocryph. N. T. p. 374, 761, 800, 801, 802, &c.

St. Serapion, who was Bishop of Antioch Eufeb. l. 6. c. 12. Hist. Eccl. about the Year 200, for the Sake of Peace allow'd the Reading of St. Peter's Gospel in the Church of Rhossos in Cilicia; but being inform'd afterwards that use was made of it to support the Heresy of the Docetes, he read it, and acknowledg'd the greatest Part of the Rules of this Book to be good, but that however there was a Mixture of such as were evil and false. He therefore made an Extract from it, and a Refu-a Refutation of it, which he sent to the Church of Rhossos, 'till he could have Opportunity to go thither himself in Person.

We have already observed, that St. Peter was a marry'd Man. But the Fathers inform us, that after his calling to the Apostleship he renounced the Use of Marriage, and regarded his Wife afterwards only as his Sister. Some pretend that the Wife of St. Peter, as also those of the other Apostles that were marry'd, follow'd their Husbands, and assisted them in the Preaching of the Gospel, according to their Abilities, visiting and instructing those of their own Sex.

We are assured [a] that St. Peter's Wife suffer'd Martyrdom, and that this holy Apostle seeing her led to be put to death, cry'd out to her with great Resolution, Wife, remember the Lord. 'Tis said also, that he had a Daughter named Petronilla, or Petrina, whose Name is to be found in some Martyrologies on the 31st of May. Clemens Alexandrinus and Epiphanius acknowledge, that St. Peter had Children, and St. Austin mentions a Daughter of this Apostle. The Acts of Nereus and Achilleus relate several Things concerning her. The Bollandists may be consulted on May 31.

PETHAHIAH, or Pheteia, the Head of the nineteenth Family of the Sacerdotal Order. 1 Chron. xxiv. 16.

PETHOR, a City of Mesopotamia, of which the false Prophet Balaam was a Native. The Hebrew [b] calls this City Pethura. Ptolemy calls it Pachora, and Eusebius Phathura. He places it in the upper Mesopotamia. [c] We think it to be towards Thapsacus, beyond the Euphrates. St. Jerome in his Translation of the Book of Numbers, xxii. 5. has omitted this Name. He has only, To Balaam who dwelt upon the River of the Ammonites. He read the Hebrew otherwise than we do now. The Septuagint have it, To Balaam Son of Beor Pathura, who dwells upon the River of the Country of his People. Certain it is, that Balaam was of Mesopotamia. See Deut. xxiii. 4.

PETHUEL, or Phatuel, Father of the Prophet Joel. The Hebrews think, that the Fathers of the Prophets are also Prophets, when their Names are found mention'd in Scripture.

PETRA, the capital City of Arabia Petrea. It is appropriated to Palestine in the antient Notitia Ecclesiastica, and it was the Capital of what was call'd the Third Palestine. Sometimes Eusebius and St. Jerome also extend Palestine as far as the Red-Sea, to Elath, a City lying upon this Sea; so that it comprehended Idumea and Arabia Petrea. But it was not so in the Ages before. The old Name of Petra, they say, was Rekem, or as Josephus and Eusebius read it, Arke, or Arkeme, or Arkem. Josephus says, that the City of Rekem takes its Name from a King of Midian call'd Rekem. This is he mention'd by Moses, Numb. xxxi. 8. But we no where find in Scripture, that Rekem was the Name of a City.

In the second Book of Kings it is said, [d] that Amaziah King of Judah took Selah (the Rock, the Stone) by War, and call'd the Name of it Joktheel unto this Day, as it is there said. It is commonly thought that he means the City of Petra, the Capital of Arabia Petrea, but we cannot be certain of it. Amaziah may have taken by Storm some Rock, (Selah) to which the Idumeans had fled, and may afterwards have given to this Rock the Name of Joktheel, that is, the Obedience of the Lord.

The Word Petra, in Greek, signifies a Rock, and was probably given to this City because of its Situation upon a Rock, or because it is encompass'd by Rocks, or because, as they say, the greatest part of the Houses are dug into the Rock. It is call'd also by the Antients Agra, or Hagor, whence comes the Name of Agarenians. But neither can those Names be found in Scripture; so that unless it be meant in the second of Kings, xiv. 7. and Isaiah xvi. 1. xlii. 11. under the Name of Selah, or Rock, I do not see that it is any where mention'd in Scripture.

Strabo says, that Petra was the Capital of the Nabatheans, that the Mineans and the Gerreans brought their Perfumes thither to vend them; that the City was situate in a Plain full of Gardens, and water'd with Fountains, but all encompass'd with Rocks. Pliny speaks of it almost in the same Terms. He says the Nabatheans inhabit the City of Petra, situated in a Plain of about two thousand Paces over, water'd by a River, and surrounded on all Sides by inaccessible Mountains. This Description is very different from that given by the Geographer of Nubia, who says, that most of the Houses of Petra were dug out of the Rock; and Herodian gives us a Description of the Capital of the Agarenians, standing upon the Point of a very high Mountain. This Author calls it Atra. Dion does not name it, but in the Manner he speaks of it, it must be upon a steep Rock, in a very dry and barren Country. Trajan besieg'd it, and tho' he had made a Breach in it, yet he was forc'd to raise the the Siege. It appears, that the City he mentions was in Mesopotamia, a and therefore must be very different from the City of which we are now treating.

See Cellar. Geog. vet. l. 3. c. 14. Some Geographers think, that there were more than one Petra. St. Athanasius distinguishes b two, one in Palestine and the other in Arabia. He calls Arius or Macarius Bishop of Petra in Palestine, and Asterius Bishop of Petra in Arabia. Also the Paraphrasts Jonathan and Onkelos distinguish Rekem and Petra as two different Cities. Josephus speaks of Petra situated in the Country of the Amalekites, which is the same as Rekem or Petra, near which Aaron died; and he confounds it with Petra in the Land of the Midianites, which took its Name from King Rekem. Lastly, I am of Opinion, that we should distinguish Petra or Selah in the Country of Moab, or in the Eastern Idumea, of which Mention is made in Isaiah xvi. 1. xlii. 11. 2 Kings xiv. 7. which was afterwards call'd Joktheel, from the other Petra, call'd Rekem, situate in the South Idumea, or in Arabia Petrea, or in the Country of the Amalekites.

As to the Situation of this last City, it will be difficult enough to determine it. Strabo places it three or four Days Journey from Jericho, and five Days Journey from the Forest of Palm-trees, which is upon the Red-Sea. Pliny places it six hundred Miles from Gaza, and an hundred and twenty-five Miles from the Persian Gulph. But Cellarius and Reland think that the Numbers have been changed, so that it ought to be read, an hundred and twenty-five Miles from Gaza, and six hundred Miles from the Persian Gulph. Eusebius places Theman five Miles from Petra, Carcaria a Day's Journey from the same City, Beeroth Bene-jacan at ten Miles, and the City of Elath at ten Miles towards the East.

'Tis thought that the City of Krak, or Karak, lying on the Confines of Arabia and Syria, inclining towards the South, is the antient City of Petra in Arabia, which formerly was its Metropolis, and which we find in Ptolemy by the Name of Charat Moab, or Charat Moba, in Stevinus, Mobucharas; and perhaps Caraca in in 2 Macc. xii. 17. and Carcar in the Book of Judges, xi. 3. Carach or Crat signifies a Fortress, in Chaldee and Syriack. It is known to our Historians by the Name of Crak of Montreal. It was for a long Time in the Possession of the Christians at the time of the Holy War; but at last Saladin became Master of it in the 584th Year of the Hegira, and the 1188th of Jesus Christ. The Ajubites, his Successors, enjoy'd it 'till they were driven from thence by the Mamalukes. Mr. D'Herbelot thinks, that the Name Krak was given it from that of Arak, as it was called by the Jews.

D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 419, 420, 256.

Since that Time it has obtain'd the Name of Hag, or Hagiar, which signifies a Stone or Rock. It stands in the Province of Higiaz, and is no farther distant from Jemamah, on which it depends, than by a Journey of twenty-four Hours. The City of Agr, or Hagiar, has given its Name to a Country which is between Syria and Arabia, and which we call Arabia Petrea, where the People of Saleh, that is to say, the Themudites, inhabited heretofore. There are still to be seen in this Country, as the Mussulmen affirm, the Rocks and Caves where they hid themselves, to avoid the Anger of God, with which they were threatned by the Prophet Saleh. There are also seen the Graves of those that were kill'd in fighting against the false Prophet Museilemah, who pretended to do in the Jemen what Mahomet had done in the Higiaz.

The City of Hagiar, by its advantageous Situation, became the Capital and the Fortress of the Carmathes, from whence those Rebels for a long time infested the Dominions of the Chalifs of Bagdet, and so much harrassed the Pilgrims of Mecca, that the Pilgrimage was suspended for several Years. Abusaid built there a Castle called Hagiarah, which his Son Abouthaher exceedingly fortify'd, so that after that Hagiar passed for a Place that was impregnable.

There is another City call'd also Hagr, or Hagiar, lying farther into Arabia, which belongs to the Province of Baharain.

PHALANX. This is a Greek Word, given to the Macedonian Soldiery. The Phalanx was a Battalion of Two thousand or even of Eight thousand Footmen, of the best Troops of the Army. St. Jerome sometimes makes use of this Word to express the Troops of Israel, at a Time when the Macedonian Phalanges were then unknown. Goliah c stood and defy'd the Phalanges of Israel. The Hebrew reads it, the Ranks, or the Army of Israel drawn up in Battle Array.

Some Interpreters are of Opinion [a] that Phalti did not meddle with Michal all the while she continued in his House, for fear that both of them should incur the Penalty of Death, Levit. xx. 10. to be inflicted on Adulterers, because Michal had not been legally divorced; but these Reasons are frivolous. Saul look'd upon David as a Rebel to his King, and an Outlaw, whose Goods and Wives belong'd to him, and which he could absolutely dispose of. He would not have given Michal to Phalti, nor would he have received her, if he had not thought he might use her as his Wife. If Michal had no Children by Phalti, by whom then were those Children that the 2 Sam. xxi. 8. Scripture says she had, since 'tis known 2 Sam. vi. 23. she had none by David? See the Article MICHAL before.

PHANNIAS, or Phanasus, Son of Samuel, of the Race of the Priests, a Native of the Town of Aphtasi. He [b] was a brutish and ignorant Person, who was not only unworthy of the High Priesthood, but did not so much as know as he ought, what this Office was. After the Faction had made themselves Masters of the Temple, they usurped the Power of setting up and deposing the High Priests. Matthias the Son of Theophilus, was then in Possession of this Dignity. They pretended to appoint him a [c] Successor, and because that heretofore, according to their [d] Notions, the High Priesthood had been given by Lot, they proceeded by the same Way to the Election of an High Priest. They cast Lots upon the Sacerdotal Family of Eniakim, (which is probably the same as the Family of Jakim, 1 Chron. xxiv. 12. which was the Twelfth of the Sacerdotal Families) and the Lot fell upon Phannias. 'Twas under his Pontificate that the Temple was destroy'd by the Romans, in the 70th Year of the vulgar Era.

PHARAOH, a common Name of the Antiq. l. 8. c. 2. p. 268 Kings of Egypt. Josephus says, that all the Kings of Egypt, from Minæus the Founder of Memphis, who lived several Ages before Abraham, have always had the Name of Pharaoh, down to the Times of Solomon, far more than Three thousand and Three hundred Years. He adds, that in the Egyptian Language, the Word Pharaoh signifies a King, and that these Princes did not assume this Name, but when they ascended the Throne, at which time they quitted also their former Name. From hence it comes to pass, says Josephus, that Herodotus names none of the Kings of Egypt after Minæus the Builder of Memphis, though he had Three hundred and Thirty Kings for his Successors, because they had all the Name of Pharaoh; but because this Name did not pass to Women also, he names an Egyptian Queen Nicaule, who succeeded them. Lastly, I find, adds Josephus, from the antient Records of our Nation, that from the Age of Solomon no King of Egypt any longer had the Name of Pharaoh.

But Josephus is not very accurate in this Passage. True it is, Herodotus says, That Herodot. l. 2. c. 4. 99, 100. Mines or Minæus was the first King of Egypt, and Founder of Memphis; that there were Three hundred and Thirty Kings after him in Egypt; that after them there was a Queen called Nitocris, and not Nicaule, as Josephus writes it; but it is not true that these Kings had no other Name but Pharaoh. Herodotus says expresly, [e] That in the Books of the Egyptian Priests were read the Names and the Catalogue of Three hundred and Thirty Kings; that in this Number of Three hundred and Thirty, there were eighteen Ethiopians, and a Woman that was a Foreigner, call'd Nicotris, and that all the others were Egyptians. These Princes therefore had every one his proper Name mentioned in the Catalogue of the Egyptian Kings. So likewise we see in the Fragments of Manetho, [f] that every King of Egypt had a Name peculiar to him; and we find the Name Pharaoh only in Scripture.

What Josephus adds, concerning Queen Nicaule, or Nicotris, whom he pretends to be the same as the Queen of Sheba, of whom mention is made in Scripture, is 1 Kings x. 1, 2, &c. intirely fabulous; and as to what he says, that since the time of Solomon, the Kings of Egypt have no longer had the Name of Pharaoh, is manifestly false, since we still find this Name in the second Book of Kings, under Hezekiah, 2 Kings xviii. 21. under Josiah xxiii. 29, 30, 33, &c. where this Name is joined to Necho, which was the proper Name of this Prince, under Jehoiakim xxiii. 35. and in the Prophets Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel; who are much later than Solomon. It is very probable

Bochart thinks, that Pharaoh properly signifies the Crocodile, and that Ezekiel alludes to this when he says, Behold I am against thee, Pharaoh King of Egypt, the great Dragon that lyeth in the midst of his Rivers, which hath said, My River is mine own, and I have made it for myself. M. le Clerc thinks he has found the true Root of the Word Pharaoh, in the Arabic Verb Pharah, to be exalted, to be superior. Abbot Renaudot [a] says, that Pharaoh is the same as the Egyptian Word Pouro, which signifies a King. F. Kircher derives Pharaoh from the Root Pharah, which sometimes signifies to deliver; and he would have Pharaoh to signify one who is exempted from the Jurisdiction of the Laws.

We shall here give in a few Words the History of the Pharaohs, of whom the Scripture makes any mention. The first known to us is he, in whose time Abraham went down into Egypt, in the Year of the World 2084, before Jesus Christ 1916, before the vulgar Era 1919. When Abraham was compelled by the Famine to go down into Egypt, he told Sarah his Wife, who was a very beautiful Woman, that he desired her to say she was his Sister; easily foreseeing, that the Egyptians would be charmed with her Beauty, and might therefore take her away from him; and fearing they might also put him to death, for her sake, if they should know her to be his Wife. And, indeed, no sooner were they come into Egypt, but Sarah was brought to Pharaoh's Palace; and as she pass'd only for Abraham's Sister, he was very civilly treated, and grew rich in Egypt. He had there a great Number of Cattle and Slaves, in which consisted the chief Riches of those Ages.

Gen. xii. 10, &c.

But the Lord smote Pharaoh and his Family with great Infirmities, and gave him to know, that this Woman was Abraham's Wife. He order'd him to be sent for, and said to him; Why have you us'd me thus? Why did you tell me she was your Sister? Therefore take your Wife, and be gone. At the same time Pharaoh gave Orders, that his Servants should conduct them out of Egypt, with every thing that belonged to them. The proper Name of this King of Egypt is unknown: But it may be seen from this History, that he feared God, and that the true Religion was not intirely suppressed in Egypt.

The second Pharaoh spoke of by the Scripture, is he that reigned in Egypt in the time of Joseph, when he was sold thither by the Ishmaelitish Merchants, who had bought him of his [b] Brethren. This Prince, or perhaps his Successor, having had the mysterious Dream of seven fat Kine, and seven full Ears of Corn, consumed by seven lean Kine, and seven barren [c] Ears; and having been informed of Joseph's Abilities in interpreting Dreams, sent for him out of Prison, declared his Dream to him, and was so well satisfied with his Explication of it, that he made him Governor of all Egypt, and of his whole House, reserving only to himself, as we may say, the Name of King. So that Joseph was respected as Pharaoh's Father, and Regent of the whole Kingdom. This is the same Pharaoh that sent for and entertain'd the Patriarch Jacob, and his whole Family in Egypt, and gave them the Land of Goshen for a Habitation.

Gen. xlv. 8, 9.

The third Pharaoh known in Holy Writ, is he that persecuted the Israelites. Moses tells us, that he was a new King, and had no Knowledge of Joseph. [d] Surrexit interea Rex novus super Ægyptum, qui ignorabat Joseph. This Prince observing that the Israelites were become very numerous and powerful, resolved to depress them by Hardship and Labour. He made them build Cities of Tents, Pithom, and Ramases, and set cruel and pitiless Task-masters over them. But the more he oppressed them, the faster they multiply'd; insomuch that he gave Orders to the Egyptian Midwives, who assisted the Hebrew Women in their Labour, to put to death all the Male Children, and to save alive only the Females. But this Command was not strictly executed. The Midwives feared the Lord, and preserved alive not only the Female Children, but the Males also.

Pharaoh seeing this Project did not succeed to his Wishes, publish'd a Decree, that all the Male Children, born of Hebrew Women, should be thrown into the Nile, and that only the Females should be spared. This Order was perform'd with Rigour enough. Yet God suffer'd that Moses should be preserved, and even brought up in Pharaoh's own Court by his own Daughter, who by chance had found the Child as he was expos'd upon the Nile.

Nile. [a] Moses being grown up, and having kill'd an Egyptian, [b] who had abused an Hebrew, was obliged to fly from Egypt, to avoid that Death that Pharaoh had threatned him with.

Several Years after, [c] being about Eighty Years old, he return'd again by an Order from God, and perform'd those Miracles before Pharaoh, which we have related under the Article MOSES. There is a good deal of Probability, that this Pharaoh before whom Moses appeared, and in whose Sight he smote Egypt with so many Plagues, was a different Person from him who would have laid Hands on him after he had slain the Egyptian. This same Pharaoh having at last been compelled to send away the Hebrews, and to suffer them to go out of Egypt, soon repented of the Leave he had given, and pursued them at the Head of his Army with his Chariots. But he was drowned in the Red Sea, wherein he had rashly enter'd in the Eagerness of his Pursuit. Some Historians pretend to give us the Name of this Pharaoh; some, as Appion, call him Amosis, or Amasis; Eusebius calls him Chenchris, Usher calls him Amenophis. But we may assure ourselves, that there can be nothing certain of all this.

The fifth Pharaoh known to us, is he that gave Protection to Hadad, Son of the King of Edom, [d] who gave him to Wife the Sister of his own Queen, enriched him with Lands, and brought up his Son Genubah in his own Court. Hadad return'd to Idumea after the Death of David.

The sixth Pharaoh is he that gave his Daughter in Marriage to Solomon King of 1 Kings iii. 1. the Hebrews; and having taken Gezer, he set it on fire, drove the Canaanites out of it, and gave it for a Present to Solomon, in lieu of a Dowry for his Daughter,
1 Kings ix. 16. whom he had marry'd to this Prince.

The seventh is Shishak, [e] who entertain'd Jeroboam in his Dominions, a rebellious Subject of Solomon's, and afforded him a Refuge against the King his Master. The same Shishak declared War against Rehoboam, the Son and Successor of [f] Solomon, besieged and took Jerusalem, carried away all the King's Treasures, and those of the House of God, and particularly the golden Bucklers that Solomon had made; instead of which Rehoboam had others made of Brass, for the Use of his Guards. The second Book of the Chronicles informs us, that the Army of Shishak consisted of Twelve hundred Chariots, Sixty thousand Horse, and an infinite Number of Infantry that followed him out of Egypt. That this Army was composed of Libyans, Troglodytes, and Ethiopians, [g] not to reckon the native Egyptians; which gives us a grand Idea of the Power and Magnificence of Shishak.

The same Author adds, that he took the strongest Cities of Judah, and came and lay down before Jerusalem. And as Rehoboam and the Princes of Judah had shut themselves up in this City, resolving to hold out a Siege against Shishak, the Prophet Shemaiah declared to them from the Lord, that they should be delivered up into the Hands of the King of Egypt. Then they humbled themselves, acknowledged the Justice of the Sentence of God, and open'd the Gates to Shishak. See the Article of this Prince.

The eighth is that Pharaoh with whom Hezekiah made a League against Sennecharib King of [h] Assyria, in the Year of the World 3290, before Christ 710, before the vulgar Era 713. The Reader may see the whole of this Matter under the Articles SENNECHARIB and HEZEKIAH. This Pharaoh is probably the same whom Herodotus names Sethon, Priest of Vulcan, Herodot.
who came to meet Sennecharib before Pelusium, and to whose Assistance Vulcan sent l. 2.
an Army of Rats, which gnaw'd the Bowstrings and the Thongs of the Bucklers of Sennecharib's Soldiers.

The ninth is Pharaoh-Necho, or Nechos, Son of Psammitichus, who made War with Josiah, and subdued him. [i] Herodotus also mentions this Prince. See the Article NECHO.

The tenth is Pharaoh Ophrah, who enter'd into an Alliance with Zedekiah King of Judah, and attempted to come to his Assistance against Nebuchadnezzar King of Chaldea. 'Twas against this Pharaoh that Ezekiel pronounced several of his Prophesies. See Ezek. xxix. xxx. xxxi. xxxii. He is called Apries in Herodotus l. 2. c. 161. He is also mentioned in Habakkuk ii. 15, 16. See also Isaiah xix. xx. and Jeremiah xlvi. 16, &c.

And this is pretty nearly what the Holy Scriptures acquaint us with, concerning the Pharaohs, or the antient Kings of Egypt. To these the Mussulmen add some other Particulars, which have but little Certainty in them. Yet we shall D'Herbel.

the Reader's Curiosity. They tell us, that the Pharaoh who reigned in Egypt when Jacob went thither, was called Rian; and that the Name of his Successor was Massaab, and he to whom Moses addressed himself was called Cabous, or Valid. The first exalted Joseph to great Honours; the second continued to have some Regard for the Jews, in Consideration of Joseph; but that the third had forgot Joseph and himself too, affecting to pass for a Deity, and saying to his People, I am your sovereign Master, or your God. But the Hebrews utterly refusing to acknowledge him as such, drew upon themselves a furious Persecution, which did not end till Moses led them out of Egypt. Alcoran. c. Nazeat.

Eutychius the Patriarch of Alexandria relates, that the Oriental Christians gave the Name of Amious to the Pharaoh who was drowned in the Red Sea, as he pursued the Hebrews. Some Mahometans name him Sen-an Ben-Ulvan. They tell also several Circumstances of the Manner in which he enter'd into the Channel of the Red Sea; being drawn thither by the Archangel Gabriel, mounted upon a white Pad; and that after his Death, he was successively cast upon each Shore by the Waves, first upon that where the Hebrews were, and upon the other in sight of the Egyptians, that each Nation might see him, and be Witnesses of his Death and Punishment.

We might here give a List of the Pharaohs, if we had any Certainty about their Successions, and the Beginning of their Reigns. Manetho, from whom Eusebius and Julius Africanus have borrow'd what they say of them, is very different from the antient Egyptian Chronicon, cited by the Monk Syncellus; and each of them give so great an Antiquity to the Egyptian Dynasties, that all our Chronologers are forced to reject them either in the whole or in part. So that we shall not undertake to give here the Successions of the Pharaohs, as being a Matter of so great Uncertainty. Those that would enter more deeply into this Affair, may consult the Chronicon of Eusebius as given by Scaliger, and the Chronicon of Georgius Syncellus, and Sir Robert Marsham's Canon Chronicus Ægyptiacus, &c.

Genesis xxxviii. 27, 28, &c. PHAREZ, Son of Judah and Tamar. Tamar being just ready to lye in, found herself with Child of Twins. Pharez appeared first, and putting his Arm out, he immediately drew it back again. The Midwife tied a Piece of scarlet String about his Arm, saying, Why do you bring Divisions into the Family? or, Why have you broken the Wall of Separation? meaning that by this Motion he had disturb'd the Order of Birth, and given an Occasion for a Scruple, to know which was the First-born. And from hence he had the Name of Pharez given him. The Year of the Birth of these two Twins is not set down in Scripture. The Sons of Pharez were Hesron and Hamul. Numb. xxvi. 20, 21.

PHARISEES. The Sect of the Pharisees was one of the most antient and most considerable among the Jews, and its Original is not very well known. The Author of the fourth Book of Maccabees, Chap. 6. says, That in the time of John Hyrcanus the High Priest, there were three Sects among the Jews, the Pharisees, the Sadducees, and the Essenes. Josephus, after mentioning the Letter of Jonathan to the Lacedemonians, speaks of the three Sects here named; which Letter was writ in the Year of the World 3680, and Jonathan died in the Year following. Simon succeeded him, and govern'd eight Years. After Simon, succeeded Hyrcanus, who govern'd for nine and twenty Years. So that we may place the Rise of the Sect of the Pharisees about the Year of the World 3820, before Christ 180, before the vulgar Era 184.

St. Jerome places the Beginning of the Pharisees pretty late; for he says, The Scribes and Pharisees proceeded from the Division of the two famous Schools of Hillel and Shammai. To Hillel succeeded Akiba, Master of Aquila of Pontus, who lived in the second Age of the Church, and who translated the Holy Scriptures of the Old Testament out of Hebrew into Greek. 'Tis known from Josephus, that Shammai, or Samæas, lived in the Time of Herod the Great, and consequently not long before the Birth of our Saviour. The Rabbins also acknowledged Hillel as Founder of the Sect of the Pharisees, or at least as the chief Ornament of it. But we make no doubt but that it was more antient. We see by several Passages of Josephus,[a] that they were in Credit a long time before Herod, under the Reigns of Hyrcanus, Alexander Jannæus, and Salome his Wife. Hieron. in Isai. viii. Joseph. Antiq. l. 14. c. 17. p. 434.

The Pharisees take their Name from a Hebrew Word, which signifies Division or Separation, because they distinguished themselves from the other Israelites by a more strict Manner of Life, of which they made Profession. They imputed much to Destiny or Fatality, and to the eternal Decrees of God, which have appointed all Joseph. Antiq. l. 18. c. 2.

all things before Time was. Josephus, who himself was a Pharisee, [a] tells us, that the Opinions of this Sect nearly approached those of the Stoicks; who did not ascribe every thing to Destiny, but left to Men a Liberty of doing good Actions or not; so that their Notion of Fatality was not destructive of Free-will, as St. Epiphanius seems to have imagined. He adds, that they were much addicted to Astrology, thinking that by means of the Stars they might arrive at the Knowledge of the Secrets of Providence.

Epiphan. hæref. 16.

The Sect of the Pharisees was very numerous and far extended. The Reputation they gain'd by their Learning, and by the Regularity of their Lives, made them very early to become formidable even to Kings themselves. Alexander Jannæus King of the Jews was for his whole Life at variance with the Pharisees, and had often occasion to repent it. At his Death he told his Wife, that if she would reign peaceably after him, she must win the Pharisees to her Interest. [b] She follow'd this Advice, and the Pharisees taking the Opportunity, made themselves Masters of the Government, and the Queen let them dispose of every thing at their Pleasure.

When our Saviour Jesus Christ appear'd in Judea, the Pharisees were then in great Credit among the People, because of the Opinion they had conceived of their great Learning, Sanctity of Manners, and exact Observance of the Law. They fasted often, made long Prayers, paid their Tythes scrupulously, distributed much Alms: But all this was vitiated and corrupted by a Spirit of Pride, Ostentation, Hypocrisy, and Self-love. Like to whiten'd Sepulchres, they appear'd beautiful without, whilst within was nothing but Corruption and Deformity. They wore large Rolls of Parchment upon their Fore-heads, and Wrists, on which were written certain Words of the Law; and affected to have Fringes and Borders at the Corners and Hems of their Garments, broader than the other Jews wore, as a Badge of Distinction, and as greater Observers of the Law than others.

Matt.xxiii. 27.

There were some of them, as St. Jerom says, who fix'd Thorns to the bottom of their Robes, which as they walked might prick their Legs, and draw Blood from them, that they might make Mortification familiar to them, and be continually obliged to think on God. They often wash'd their Hands, and pretended to a great external Purity, never entering their House, or sitting down at Table, without washing. When they had been in the Streets, or in the Market, for fear they should have touched any unclean Thing, they wash'd from their Fingers Ends up to their very Elbows. They would not so much as touch a Publican, or any Man that they thought led an ill Life, nor would they eat, drink, or pray with him. All the Vessels they made use of, their Utensils, and very Beds, were often plunged in Water: And they often bathed themselves in cold Water, by way of Purification.

They kept many Fasts of Supererogation. The Pharisee in the Gospel boasts of his fasting twice a Week, that is, Monday and Thursday, according to Epiphanius; and they did it with greater Strictness than the other Jews. 'Tis these that our Saviour pointed at, when he says, Mat. vi. 16. Moreover when ye fast, be not as the Hypocrites, of a sad Countenance; for they disfigure their Faces, that they may appear unto Men to fast. Verily I say unto you, they have their Reward. But thou when thou fastest, anoint thy Head, and wash thy Face; that thou appear not unto Men to fast, but unto thy Father which is in Secret. And thy Father which seeth in Secret, shall reward thee openly. The Pharisees upbraided our Saviour and his Disciples, for eating and drinking as other Men, whereas they and the Disciples of John the Baptist fasted often. And Josephus gives an Account, that being young, he put himself under the Conduct of one called Banneus, a very austere Man, who eat nothing that was dress'd or prepared, but contented himself with what the Earth produced of its own accord.

In Matters of Religion the Traditions of the Antients were the chief Subject of their Studies; and to these they made Additions of their own as they thought fit, making their own Opinions to pass for Traditions of the Antients. By this means they had over-burthen'd the Law with a vast Number of trifling Observances, that were useless and disgustful, and which made it a heavy and insupportable Yoke. They had even alter'd it and corrupted it in important Articles, by their own perverse Interpretations of it, as our Saviour in his Gospel reproaches them with it. For Example, the Law commands us to honour Father and Mother: The Pharisees taught, that if we say to our Parents that are in Necessity, Father, or Mother, the thing that you ask of me is dedicated to God, it is no longer in my Power, but you shall have a Part in the Merit of my Offering; they were then freed from the Obligation of succouring their Parents.

Mark vii. 10, 11, 12.

The Observation of the Sabbath is another Point they had refined upon, and our Saviour

Saviour had often Debates with them upon this Head. They maintained, that upon this Day, it was not so much as allowed to heal a sick Person, though Christ did it only with a Word speaking. (Luke vi. 7. John ix. 16.) They found fault, that upon this Day the People brought their Sick to be healed. They were scandalized, that a Man carried away his Bed upon the Sabbath-day, after he had been cured of a Palsy. (Mark ix. 11. John v. 8, 9.) From all which they concluded, that Jesus Christ could not be a Man sent from God, because he so little observed that profound Rest, that they thought was to be kept on this Day. (John ix. 16.) St. Epiphanius relates surprizing Effects of these their great Austerities, (Epiphan. hæref. 16.) for preserving the Purity of the Body. There were some of them who almost deprived themselves intirely of Sleep. Others were used to sleep upon a Plank of a Foot broad, that if they should sleep too soundly, they might fall down upon the Ground, and so being awaken'd, they might go to Prayers. Others lay upon sharp and uneven Stones; others upon Thorns: So that even in Sleep they might practise Mortification.

Our Saviour upbraids them with making long Prayers, standing up in the Synagogues, or at the Corners of the Streets; and under pretence of Prayer, to consume Widows Houses. (Matt. xxiii. 14.) He also reproaches them with compassing Sea and Land to make a Proselyte, or to convert a Gentile; (Matt. xxiii. 15.) and after that, to make him still a greater Sinner than he was before, by teaching him a pernicious Doctrine, instead of shewing him the true Paths of Vertue. He says, they affect to build up the Tombs of the old Prophets, and openly to declare, that they disapprove of the Actions of their Fore-fathers who persecuted them; (Luk. xi. 47, 48. Matt. xxiii. 29.) while they themselves are actuated by the same Spirit, and oppose all those that would reclaim them from their Enormities. The Followers of this Sect condemned only the actual Commission of Sin, and thought themselves allowed to entertain any evil Desires, Thoughts and Designs, that were not attended with outward Acts of Sin. Thus Josephus laughs at Polybius, for thinking the Gods had punished Antiochus, (Antiq. l. 12. c. 13.) for having only form'd a Design to pillage the Temple of the Goddess Diana, though he had not put it in execution.

The Pharisees believed the Soul to be Immortal, and acknowledged the Existence of Angels and Spirits, (Acts xxiii. 8.) and admitted a kind of Transmigration of the Souls of good Men,[a] which might pass from one Body to another; whereas those of wicked Men were condemned to dwell for ever in Prisons of Darkness. 'Twas in consequence of these Principles, that some of the Pharisees said, that Jesus Christ was John the Baptist, or Elias, or some one of the old Prophets; that is, that the Soul of one of these great Men had passed into the Body of our Saviour. (Matt. xvi. 14.) They believed also the Resurrection of the Dead, and admitted of all the Consequences of it, against the Sadducees who rejected it. (Matt. xxii. 23.) Lastly, Josephus, who was a Pharisee, believed that the Demons that possessed Men, were nothing else but the Souls of wicked Men, (De bello, l. 7. c. 25.) which enter the Bodies of other Men, and are sometimes driven from thence by Exorcisms. We see some Foot-steps of this Opinion in the Gospel. See the Commentary upon St. Matthew, viii. 29, 30, 31.

The Sect of the Pharisees was not extinguished by the Destruction of the Temple at Jerusalem, and by the Dispersion of the Israelites. The greatest Part of the Jews that still subsist are of this Sect,[b] being as much devoted to their Traditions, which they call the Oral Law, as their Ancestors were. He that rejects the Oral Law is an Apostate, and deserves Death, say the modern Pharisees or the Rabbinists; for this is the Name that they now commonly go by. Benjamin of Tudela, who lived about the latter End of the Twelfth Age, says, That in his Journey he found Pharisees, that were continually bewailing the Desolation of Sion and of Jerusalem, who abstain'd from Flesh, and were always clothed in Black, fasting every Day except the Sabbath, and perpetually praying for the Deliverance of Israel.

The Opinions of the modern Pharisees are the same as of the antient. They leave every thing to the Disposal of Destiny, except what depends upon human Liberty. They say that all Things are in the Hand of Heaven, except the Fear of God; that is to say, that in the Exercise of Acts of Piety they have free Will, and may voluntarily determine themselves to Good or Evil. M. Basnage says, They do not differ from those that in Holland are called Remonstrants. (Hist. of Jews, l. 3. c. 2. art. 8.) Those of this Age are less strict than the Antients as to Food, and other Austerities of the Body; but they come nothing short of them in Vanity and Tenaciousness for the pretended Traditions of their Fathers. They also hold a kind of Metempsychosis, or Revolution of Souls. The Fathers who have writ concerning Heresies, have made a Heresy of the Pharisees, as if those that made Profession of this Sect had been separated from the Body of the Jews, as among us, Hereticks are excommunicated and rejected by the Orthodox: But it was not so with the Jewish Sects. Whatever Abuses and Corruptions might prevail among them, whether in Manners or Opinions, they were united in in Communion with the other Israelites. The Pharisees and the Sadducees even discharg'd the chief Offices of Religion and the State. The Reader may peruse our Dissertation upon the Sects of the Jews, printed before our Commentary upon St. Mark; and Serrarius and Basnage upon the same Subject.

PHARPAR, or Pharphar, is one of the Rivers of Damascus, or rather, 'tis an Arm of the Barrady or Chrysorrhoas, which waters the City of Damascus and the Country about it. 2 Kings v. 12. Are not Abana and Pharphar, Rivers of Damascus, better than all the Waters of Israel? The River of Damascus has its Fountain in the Mountains of Libanus. At its Approach to the City it is divided into three Arms, one of which passes through Damascus. The other two water the Gardens round about, and then re-uniting, they lose themselves at four or five Leagues from the City, towards the North. See Maundrel's Travels from Aleppo to Jerusalem.

PHARURIM. Nathanmelech, Eunuch to King Josiah, had his Dwelling at Pharurim, near the Entrance of the Temple. The Chaldee, and most of the Interpreters, think Pharurim signifies the Suburbs. We find in the Chronicles a Place to the West of the Temple, call'd Parbar. (1 Chron. xxvi. 18.) In short, I imagine Pharurim, or Phrurim, is the same as Phrourion in Greek, which signifies a Watch or Guard. Nathanmelech had his Abode near the Body of the Guard of the Temple.

PHASAELIS, a City situate three Leagues from Jordan, in a Plain, upon the Brook Carith. [a] Josephus says, that Herod built it in Honour of his Brother, (Antiq. l. 1. c. 16. l. 17. c. 9.) to the North of Jericho. He says nothing that it was built beyond Jordan, as they make Travellers believe.

PHASIRON, or Phaseron, one whose Family was cut off by Jonathan Maccabeus, because his Children sided with Bacchides. 1 Macc. ix. 66.

I. PHAZAEL, Brother of Herod the Great, and eldest Son of Antipater the Idumean. [b] Hyrcanus the High-priest and Prince of the Jews, having committed to Antipater the chief Authority in the Government of the Country, he made his eldest Son Phazael General of the Jewish Army, and Governour of Jerusalem and the Country round about. On several Occasions Phazael approved his Valour and Conduct. He beat Felix, who intended (Joseph. de bello, l. 1. c. 10. p. 729.) to revenge upon him the Death of Malichus, whom his Brother Herod had caused to be slain at Tyre. Some time after the Jews accused the two Brothers, Phazael and Herod to Mark Anthony, as having usurp'd the whole Authority, and left Hyrcanus only the Name of Prince. But Herod so well insinuated himself into Anthony's Favour, that his Enemies were forced to drop their Cause. Lastly, during the War of Antigonus against Herod, Pacorus Son to the King of the Parthians entering into Judea, resolved to place Antigonus upon the Throne. He caused Barzapharnes with his Troops to enter into Galilee, and sent before him towards Jerusalem one Pacorus Cup-bearer to the King of Persia, with a Body of Horse. Pacorus advanc'd with Antigonus to Jerusalem, where first they made themselves Masters of the City, and then of the Temple. Herod and Phazael, who had took Side with Hyrcanus, having shut themselves up in the Royal Palace, Pacorus stay'd in the Suburbs with his People. But Antigonus having desired him to come into the City, Phazael went to meet him, and received him into his House. Pacorus pretending to desire to appease these Commotions, advised Phazael to come along with him into Galilee, to meet Barzaphernes, and there to treat of Peace with him. Phazael fell into this Snare, and follow'd Pacorus into Galilee; where Barzaphernes at first received him very kindly, making him Presents; but afterwards caused him to be apprehended, and put in Prison. This Piece of Treachery was so resented by Phazael, that he dash'd out his own Brains against the Walls of his Prison.

II. PHAZAEL, Son of Phazael, who afterwards marry'd Salampso his Cousin German, and Daughter of Herod the Great.

PHAZAELE, a square Tower that Herod caused to be built at Jerusalem, in Honour of his Brother; it was forty Cubits square, and as much in Height. (Joseph. Antiq. l. 16. c. 9.) Above this Height were Portico's, supported by Arches; and in the Midst of these Portico's was a second Tower raised, adorn'd with fine Apartments and magnificent Busts, having Parapets and Redoubts above them. The whole Heighth in all might be about ninety Cubits. (Joseph. de bello, l. 6. c. 6. p. 914.)

PHEBE, a Deaconess of the Port of Corinth, call'd Cenchrea. St. Paul had a particular Esteem for this holy Woman; and Theodoret thinks the Apostle lodged at her House for some Time, while he continued in or near Corinth. (Theod. ad Rom. xvi. p. 115.) 'Tis thought she brought to Rome the Epistle he writ to the Romans, wherein she is commended and recommended in so advantageous a Manner. He says, I commend unto you Phebe our Sister, which is a Servant of the Church which is at Cenchrea: That ye receive her in the Lord, as becometh Saints, and that ye assist her in whatsoever Business she hath need of you: For she hath been a (Rom. xvi. 1, 2.)

Succourer of many, and of my self also. Some Moderns have advanced a Notion, that Phebe was Wife to St. Paul, but none of the Antients have said any thing like it. 'Tis thought in Quality of Deaconess she was employ'd by the Church in some Ministrations suitable to her Sex and Condition; as to visit and instruct the Christian Women, to attend them in their Sickness, distribute Alms to them. The Martyrologies mention Phebe on the third Day of September.

PHENICE, a Port of the Island of Crete, to the West of the Island. St. Paul having anchor'd at Phenice, when he was carry'd to Rome, [a] advised the Ship's Crew to spend the Winter there, because the Season was too far advanced.

PHENICIA, a Province of Syria, the Limits whereof have not always been the same. Sometimes its Extent has been defined from North to South, from Orthosia as far as Pelusium. [b] At other times its southern Limit has been Mount Carmel and Ptolemais. It is certain, that formerly, I mean from the Conquest of Palestine by the Hebrews, its Limits were narrow, and it had nothing of the Country of the Philistines, which took up all the Coast from Mount Carmel along the Mediterranean, as far as the Borders of Egypt. It had also very little Extent on the Land-side, because the Israelites, who had all Galilee, shut it up to the Mediterranean Sea.

Hieron. ad Isai. xxix. & ad Amos viii.

Thus when we speak of Phenicia, we must have a right Notion of the Time. Before Joshua made the Conquest of Palestine, all the Country was possessed by the Canaanites, the Sons of Ham, who were divided into eleven Families, of which the most powerful was that of Canaan the Founder of Sidon, and Head of the Canaanites properly so call'd, to whom the Greeks gave the Name of Phœnicians. 'Twas only these that preserved their Independance, not only under Joshua, but also under David, Solomon, and under the succeeding Kings. But they were subdued by the Kings of Assyria, and those of Chaldea. Then they successively obey'd the Persians, Greeks, and Romans; and at this Day Phenicia is in Subjection to the Ottomans, not having had any Kings of their own Nation, nor any independent Form of Government, for more than two thousand Years. For the Kings that the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Persians, and Grecians have sometimes left them, were tributary to the Conquerors, and had but a precarious Authority.

The chief Cities of Phenicia were Sidon, Tyre, Ptolemais, Ecdippe, Sarepta, Berythe, Biblos, Tripoli, Orthosia, Simira, Aradus. The Phenicians also antiently had Possession of some Cities in Libanus. Sometimes the Greek Authors comprehend all Judea under the Name of Phenicia. In the antient Notitia Ecclesiastica, they distinguish Phenicia above the Sea, and Phenicia of Libanus. The first contains the Cities of Tyre, Berythus, Arca, Gegarta, Paneas, Trierii, Sidon, Biblos, Orthosia, Aradus, Gonaiticus Saltus, Ptolemais, Tripoli, Botrys, Antaradus, Politiana; and Phenicia of Libanus contains Edessa, Abila, Justinianopolis, Gonaiticus Saltus, Laodicea, Damascus, Palmyra, Salaminia, Eliopolis, the Canton of Jambrudes, the Canton of Magludes, the Eastern Canton. By this may be seen how great the Extent of Phenicia was then.

Vide Reland. Palæst. l. 1. c. 9. p. 50.

PHENICIANS. Herodotus says, that the Phenicians inhabited at first upon the Red-Sea, whence they came and settled upon the Mediterranean, between Syria and Egypt. This may be easily reconciled with Moses, who says they came from Ham, who peopled Egypt and the neighbouring Countries. The Name Phenicia is not found in the Books of Scripture written in Hebrew, but only in those whose Original is Greek, as the Maccabees, and the Books of the New Testament. The Hebrew always reads Canaan, which Article may be perused by the Reader. However, St. Matthew, who wrote either in Hebrew or Syriac, calls her a Canaanitish Woman, whom St. Mark, writing in Greek, calls a Syrophenician, or a Phenician of Syria; because Phenicia then made a Part of Syria, and to distinguish them from the Phenicians of Africa, or the Carthaginians. The Name Phenician is derived, either from the Palm-tree call'd in Greek Phoinix, which are very common in Phenicia; or from a Tyrian call'd Phœnix, spoke of in Fable; or from the Red-Sea, from the Shores of which it is pretended they came. Phœnix sometimes signifies red, whence comes Puniceus and Phœniceus Color. Others derive it from the Hebrew Pinchas or Phineas; others from Bene-anak, Sons of Anak, or the Posterity of the Anakim. 'Tis well known that the Giants, the Sons of Anak, were very famous in Palestine.

and had left Footsteps of their Language in almost all the Isles, and upon all the Coasts of the Mediterranean Sea. But the most famous of their Colonies was that of Carthage. 'Tis thought that at Joshua's Invasion many of them retired into Africa and other Places. Procopius says, that at Tingis in Africa are found two Columns of white Marble, set up near the great Fountain, whereon was read in Phenician Characters; We are the People who took our Flight from before the Robber Jesus the Son of Nave. Our Dissertation may be consulted, concerning the Country to which the Canaanites retired, printed before our Commentary upon Joshua. (Procop. Vadalicis, l. 2. c. 10.)

PHENIX, or Phœnix, a most rare Bird, and the only one of its Species, of which many wonderful Things are related. 'Tis said it lives several Ages, and then is renew'd again from its own Ashes. The Rabbins [a] teach, that all the Birds having comply'd with the first Woman, and eaten of the forbidden Fruit along with her, the Phenix only would not eat of it, from whence it obtain'd a kind of Immortality. For at the End of a thousand Years a Fire proceeds out of the Phenix's Nest, and consumes it; but in such manner, that there remains, as it were, an Egg, from whence the Bird is again renewed and reproduced. Others say, that it being arrived to the Age of a thousand Years, it plucks off its own Feathers, and dies of mere Decay of Nature: But it soon is produced again from its own Body, and returns to Life.

Other Rabbins add, [b] that this Bird being in Noah's Ark, and out of Respect to the Patriarch not daring to ask Meat of him as the other Birds, Noah said to it, I pray God thou may'st not die. To which it answer'd, I shall die in my Nest, and I shall live as long as the Phenix. We shall examine this Passage hereafter; it suffices here to observe, that the Rabbins explain it of the Phenix. (Job xxix. 18.)

The Naturalists who have spoke of this Bird, say Things of it that are altogether incredible. 'Tis a Bird, as they say, of the Bigness of an Eagle, whose Head is crested with a most beautiful Tuft, and the Feathers of its Neck are gilt, and those of its Tail purple, with Carnation Down. Its Eyes are sparkling like two Stars. We are assured, that there is but one at a time in the whole World. According to some, it lives five hundred Years, according to others a thousand. Cheremon in Tzetzes makes its Life seven hundred Years long; Pliny but six hundred and sixty, or but five hundred and sixty, or five hundred and twenty-one; for Copies vary. Solinus, five hundred and forty. Hesiod says the Phenix lives as long as nine Ravens, and the Raven as long as nine Men, or nine Generations of Men. (Vide Plin. l. x. c. 2. & l. xiii. c. 4.)

Tacitus says, there are some that make it live for fourteen hundred and sixty Years, but it is generally thought its Age does not extend beyond five hundred; so that this is a Point of much Uncertainty. 'Twas related in his Time, that the first that had been seen in Egypt appear'd in the Time of Sesostris, the second under Amasis, and the third under Ptolemy Euergetes. Pliny says, that a Phenix was brought to Rome under the Reign of the Emperor Claudius, in the Year 800 from the Foundation of Rome; that it was shewn in the Assembly of the Senate, and that this Event was recorded in the publick Acts; but, says Pliny, no body doubted but this was false. (Tacit. Annal. l. 6. & l. 3. c. 9.)

As to the Manner in which it ends its Life, Authors are no more agreed upon this Fact, than upon its Age. 'Tis said, that when the Time of its Renovation approaches, it builds itself a funeral Pile of Branches of sweet-scented Trees, upon which it sits down and dies. From its Bones and Marrow there is first produced a Worm, which as it grows takes the Form of a Bird. When it is grown up, it takes up the Ashes of its Parent, and carries them into Armenia or into Arabia, and places them upon the Altar of the Sun. Herodotus says, it carries the Body of its Parent embalm'd in a Mass of Myrrh, which it deposits in the Temple of the Sun at Heliopolis in Egypt. (Herodot. l. 2. c. 73.) The Fathers [c] have often alluded to the Phenix, by way of Comparison, in their Proofs of a Resurrection. Some speak with doubt concerning what we have now said of the Phenix, and others again with full Assurance. (Origen. l. 4. contra Cels. ad Finem.) There are Letters from the King of Ethiopia, acquainting the Pope, that the Phenix was produced in his Kingdom; and 'tis related, that Pope Clement VIII. sent Queen Elizabeth, as a great Rarity, a Feather said to belong to the Phenix. But the most discerning are persuaded, that whatever is related about the Phenix is entirely fabulous. See Bochart De Animalibus sacris, p. 2. l. 6. c. 5. and our Dissertation upon that Passage of Job, xxix. 18. Sicut palma multiplicabo dies, printed before our Commentary upon the Book of Job.

In two Places the Seventy Interpreters have used the Word Phenix, as the Name of

of a Bird we now speak of, if some Commentators may be believ'd. Others maintain on the contrary, that in both these Passages they meant the Palm-tree, which in Greek is call'd Phoinix. These are the two Passages; Psal. xcii. 12. [a] The Righteous shall flourish like the Palm-tree; and Job xxix. 18. [b] I shall die in my Nest, and I shall multiply my Days as the Phenix. [as the Sand, in our Translation]. Tertullian and Epiphanius explain the first Passage by the Phenix. Bede and several Rabbins understand this Passage of Job of the same Bird. But as to the first, we need but cast our Eyes upon the Hebrew, to be convinc'd that it means the Palm-tree. The Word Thamar is not equivocal, but is known to signify the Palm-tree in Hebrew, as well as Phoinix in the Greek. The Hebrew Word Chul or Chol, which the Seventy have render'd by Phenix, is a Word of greater Uncertainty. Several Rabbins think it stands for a Bird; but we know that Chol in Hebrew, and in the Oriental Tongues that have any relation thereto, signifies Sand. The Similitude taken from a Multitude of Days compared to the Sand, is very expressive and common in Scripture. The most skilful Interpreters, the Chaldee, Syriac, Arabic, Montanus, Pagninus, Munster, Castalio, Junius, Mercerus, Vatablus, Codurcus, and a great many others understand it in this Sense. Even the Septuagint themselves insinuate it, by translating it, My Age shall grow old as the Succour of a Palm-tree. For what Sense would it be to say, the Succour of the Phenix?

PHERORAS, the fourth Son of Antipater, and Brother of Herod the Great. He is not much known in the History of the Jews, but only by his wicked Artifices, and the Confusion he occasioned in the Royal Family of his Brother. He was the chief Cause of the Death of Mariamne, the Wife of Herod, and also of his two Sons Alexander and Aristobulus. He refused to marry his Niece Salampso, his Brother's Daughter, because he was in love with a Servant Maid that he kept. However, afterwards he married Cypros, another of his Brother's Daughters, and join'd in the Conspiracy of Antipater against Herod. He withdrew from Jerusalem beyond Jordan, and resolved never more to see his Brother. [c] He kept his Word, and would never come to Jerusalem, though sent for by Herod, when he fell ill of a dangerous Fit of Sickness. But Herod did not do the same by him; for in Pheroras's last Sickness he went to see him, and shew'd him all the Tokens of brotherly Affection. Pheroras being about to die, caus'd a Box of Poison to be burnt, which Antipater had provided, and which was intended for Herod. [d] Herod made a magnificent Funeral for him, and knew not 'till after his Death the secret Measures concerted between him and Antipater, to take him out of the World by Poison. This Discovery was the Beginning of Antipater's Misfortunes.

PHIALA. This Word is generally translated by a Phial, or Vial, which signifies a little Glass Bottle. But it is certain, that the Greek Word Phiale, and the Latin Word Phiala, rather signifies a Cup, [e] a large open Vessel, something like a Plate or Bason. St. Jerome often uses the Word Phiala in his Translation, and it answers to the Hebrew Word Kaphoth, which signifies the Palm of the Hand, or Spoons. It is plain that this Word signifies a Vessel wherein to put Incense. In Numbers vii. 14. the Heads of the Families that offer the Caphoth, present them always full of Incense; and in the Books of Kings, Censers and Caphoth are always join'd together. It was therefore a kind of Cup, in which the Incense was placed upon the Shew-bread. See Levit. xxiv. 7. Pones super eos (panes) thus lucidissimum. The Septuagint have very well render'd this Word by Thuiske, derived from thus, a Box of Incense. It may be translated in Latin by Acerra. Many of 'em are found represented in the antient Marbles, but they are generally in the Form of oblong and square Boxes.

כפותיו 70. Θυίσκας. Exod. xxv. 29. xxxvii. 16.

In the Book of Judges, ch. v. 25. St. Jerome has translated the Hebrew Word Sepul, which signifies Simpulum, [f] by Phiala. In Phiala principum obtulit butyrum. The Simpulum was an Instrument with an Handle, the Extremity of which very nearly resembled our Spoon. They made use of it to fill out Wine, and to make Libations with it at Sacrifices. It appears pretty often upon antient Medals, among the Instruments of Sacrifices.

In the Book of Ezra, i. 9. they translate the Hebrew, or rather Chaldean Word Agartalim by Phiala. In Nehemiah vii. 70. St. Jerome has put Phialas for the Hebrew Word Misrakoth, which signifies rather pateras, or other Utensils to make Libations, or to pour out Liquors. Amos makes use of the same Term, to express the Cups that rich Men were served in at their Tables. Bibenti vinum in phialis. The Hebrew says, in Misrakim. And Zechariah acquaints us, that these Implements were were us'd to make Libations of Wine upon the Altar. Replebuntur ut phialæ, & quasi cornua altaris. It seems therefore by all these Passages, that Phiala does not signify a Vial. The same thing still appears from Rev. 5. 8. the Revelations, where St. John represents to us the twenty-four Elders, having Cups in their Hands, or a kind of Censers, full of Spices and Perfumes. Phialas plenas Rev. xv. 7. xvi. 1. odoramentorum. And elsewhere, the seven Angels holding seven golden Cups full of the Wrath of God triumphing, which they pour out upon the Earth.

'Twas unknown that this was the Source of Jordan, 'till Philip Tetrarch of Galilee discover'd it in a manner that left it no longer to be doubted. For he threw Chaff and Straw into the Lake, which found a Passage through subterraneous Channels to Panium, from whence 'till then it was thought that Jordan had its Source. See what has been said before upon the Articles MAGEDAN or DALMANUTHA. The Name Phiale has been given to several other Lakes, or Reservatories of Water. Reland. Palæst. l. 1. c. 41.

PHILADELPHIA, a City of Mysia, in Asia Minor. At the Time that St. John the Evangelist wrote his Revelations, the Angel or Bishop of the Church of Mysia was a very holy Man, to whom the Son of God directed these Words, Rev. iii. 7, 8, 9, &c. And to the Angel of the Church of Philadelphia write, These Things saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the Key of David, he that openeth, and no Man shutteth, and shutteth and no Man openeth: I know thy Works, behold, I have set before thee an open Door, and no Man can shut it; for thou hast a little Strength, and hast kept my Word, and hast not denied my Name. Behold, I will make them of the Synagogue of Satan, (which say they are Jews and are not, but do lye). Behold, I will make them to come and worship before thy Feet, and to know that I have loved thee. Because thou hast kept the Word of my Patience, I also will keep thee from the Hour of Temptation, which shall come upon all the World, to try them that dwell upon the Earth. Behold, I come quickly; hold that fast which thou hast, that no Man take thy Crown. Him that overcometh will I make a Pillar in the Temple of my God, and he shall go no more out; and I will write upon him the Name of my God, and the Name of the City of my God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of Heaven from my God; and I will write upon him my new Name.

'Tis unknown who this Bishop of Philadelphia was: Aureolus and De Lyra think Vide Hallox. vit. Quad. it was St. Quadratus, a Disciple of the Apostles, and an Apologist for the Christian Religion, who presented an Apology to the Emperor Adrian. The Greeks in their Office give him the Name of an Apostle; and Eusebius calls him an Evange- Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. 3. c. 37. list, in giving his Character, because he had devoted himself to go from Province to Province preaching the Gospel. But none of the Antients say, that Quadratus was Bishop of Philadelphia. There was a Quadratus also Bishop of Athens, and Martyr, about the Year of Christ 175; but he was different from the Apologist, and it could not be he to whom St. John addresses himself in the Revelations.

Philadelphia, otherwise Rabbath, or Rabbath Ammon, Rabbath of the Children of Ammon, or Rabat-amana, the Capital of the Ammonites, was situated in the Mountains of Gilead, towards the Source of the River Arnon. It is sometimes mention'd as belonging to Arabia, sometimes to Celesyria. Eusebius places it ten Miles from Jazer to the East. 'Tis very probable that this City was the Residence of King Og, since in the Time of Moses they still Deut. iii. 11. shew'd his Iron Bed, nine Cubits long, and four Cubits broad. Philadelphia was of the Number of the ten Cities of Decapolis Plin. l. 5. c. 18. beyond Jordan. Josephus extends Perea, or the Region beyond Jordan, from this River as far as Philadelphia. See RABBATH AMMON hereafter. 'Tis said this Joseph. de Bello, l. 3. c. 2. p. 533. c. City received its Name of Philadelphia from Ptolemy Philadelphus King of Egypt. St. Ignatius the Martyr, very probably, preached the Gospel here; and 'tis to the Church of this Place that he wrote his Epistle, directed to the Philadelphians.

PHILELLEN, that is to say, a Friend to the Greeks. They gave this Sirname to Aristobulus King of the Jews, Son and Successor of Alexander Jannæus. a

PHILEMON, a rich Citizen of the City of Colossæ in Phrygia. He was converted to the Christian Faith, with Appia his Wife, by Epaphras, the Disciple of St. Paul; for St. Paul himself did not preach at Colossæ. b Perhaps we should have known nothing of St. Philemon, had it not been on the Account of his Slave Onesimus, who having robb'd him, and run away from him, came to Rome, where he found St. Paul, and was very serviceable to him. St. Paul converted him, baptiz'd him, and then sent him back to his Master Philemon, c to whom he wrote a Letter still extant, and which passes for a Master-piece of that kind of Eloquence, which is natural, lively, strong, and pathetick, which was peculiar to St. Paul. Philemon
Philem. v. 2. had made a Church of his House, and all his Domesticks as well as himself were of the Houshold of Faith. His Charity, Liberality, and Compassion, were a sure Refuge to all that were in Distress. The Menæ, 22. Nov. insinuate, that he went to Gaza in Palestine, of which he was the Apostle and first Bishop. From thence he return'd to Colossæ, where he suffer'd Martyrdom with Appia his Wife, in the Time of Nero. They relate several Particulars of his Martyrdom, and say, that his Body remain'd at Colossæ, where it perform'd several Miracles. His Name is set down in the Martyrologies on the 22d of November.

2 Tim. ii. 16, 17, 18. PHILETUS. St. Paul writing to Timothy, in the 65th Year of Christ, and a little while before his own Martyrdom, speaks thus: But shun profane and vain Babblings, for they will increase unto more Ungodliness. And their Word will eat as doth a Canker; of whom is Hymenæus and Philetus; who concerning the Truth have erred, saying, that the Resurrection is past already, and overthrow the Faith of some. We have nothing very certain concerning Philetus; for we make small Account of what is read in the false Abdias, in the Life of St. James major, even supposing this Author had not put the Name of Philetus instead of Phygellus. This is the Substance of what is found in Abdias. St. James the Son of Zebedee passing thro' the Synagogues of Judea and Samaria, preached every where the Faith of Jesus Christ. Hermogenes and Philetus strenuously opposed him, affirming, that Jesus Christ was not the Messiah. Hermogenes was a notable Magician, and Philetus was his Disciple; who being converted, was desirous to bring his Master to St. James, but Hermogenes bound him up so by his Magick Art, that he could not come at the Apostle. Philetus found means to make St. James acquainted with what had happen'd to him, upon which St. James unbound him, and Philetus came to him. Hermogenes perceiving how ineffectual his Art was against the Saint, became himself a Convert, as well as Philetus.

1. PHILIP, King of Macedon, and Father of Alexander the Great. This Prince is spoke of in Scripture, but only by Incident, on Occasion of his Son Alexander. Philip was kill'd at Egea, a City of Macedonia, by Pausanias Son of Cerastus, while he was celebrating the Nuptials of his Daughter Cleopatra with Alexander King of Epirus; in the Year of the World Diodor. an. 3668, before Christ 332, before the Vulgar 1. 4. PHILIP, Son of Herod the Great, and of one of his Wives call'd Cleopatra. He marry'd Salome the Daughter of Herod sirnamed Philip, and of Herodias: This Herodias is she who is so well known in Matth. xiv. 3. Mark vi. 17, 19, 22. the Gospel, by the Death of John the Baptist; and Salome her Daughter, the Wife of Philip, is she who danced before Herod, and asked for the Head of that holy Forerunner of Christ. In the Will of Herod, Antiq. l. 17. c. 10. p. 599. Philip was named after Archelaus, and he bore the Title of Tetrarch of Trachonitis, Gaulonitis, Batanea, and Paneas. While Archelaus went to Rome, to solicit the Confirmation of his Father's Will from Augustus, he left his Brother Philip in De Bello, l. 2. p. 776. d, e, f. Judea, to govern it, and take Care of his Affairs. Some time after, Varus Governor of Syria sent Philip to Rome also, De Bello, l. 2. c. 8. p. 782. a. to assist his Brother Archelaus, or to take Care of his own Interests.

As soon as Augustus had confirmed Herod's Will, Philip return'd into his Tetrarchy, and lived there many Years as a peaceable and moderate Prince, that was contented with his Condition, and placed his Antiq. l. 18. c. 6. whole Delight in Well-governing his People. When he went abroad, if any one apply'd to him for Justice, he presently stopt, in what Place soever he was, caus'd a Tribunal to be set up, which he always carry'd with him for that Purpose, gave the Parties a Hearing, and determined the Cause upon the Spot. 'Twas he that built the Walls round the City of Paneas, Antiq. l. 18. c. 3. and gave it the Name of Cesarea Philippi: He also enlarged the Town of Bethsaida, St. Peter's native Country, lying upon the Lake Gennesareth, and gave it the Name of Julias, in Honour of Julia the Daughter of Augustus. He died in the 33d Year of the Vulgar Era, 37th of Jesus Christ, Antiq. l. 18. c. 6. after 37 Years Reign. This was the 20th Year of the Emperor Tiberius.

5. PHILIP, otherwise Herod-Philip, [b] Son of Herod the Great, and of the second Mariamne Daughter of Simon the High-Priest. This Herod-Philip married Herodias, by whom he had Salome, she who danced before Herod, and asked her Father for the Head of John the Baptist, (as mention'd in the foregoing Article). Herodias left him, and married Herod-Antipas his Brother. See Herod-Antipas, and Herod-Philip, under the Article of the HERODS.

6. PHILIP the Apostle: He was a Native of Bethsaida in Galilee. Eusebius says he was a married Man, and had several Daughters. Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. 3. c. 31. Jesus Christ having seen him, invited him to follow him, saying to him, Follow me. Philip follow'd him; and soon after, finding Nathanael, John i. 43, 44, &c. Philip said to him, We have found the Messiah, of whom Moses and the Prophets have spoke, Jesus son of Joseph of Nazareth. Nathanael asked him, Can any good thing come out of Nazareth? To which Philip replied, Come yourself and see. Then he brought Nathanael to Jesus, and they went with him to the Marriage of Cana in Galilee. Clemens Alexandrinus mentions it as a Thing universally acknowledged, that it was St. Philip that Stromat. l. 3. p. 436. gave our Saviour the Answer, when he was bid to follow him, Let me first go to bury my Father. To which our Saviour Matth. viii. 21, 22. answer'd, Let the Dead bury their Dead. Tertullian assures us expresly, that it was one of the Apostles, but the Evangelists Tertul. de Baptismo, c. 12. do not say it was this Apostle: And it would be very strange, that St. John, who tells us so particularly what Christ said to Philip, at his Call to the Apostleship, should not mention so remarkable a Circumstance.

St. Philip was call'd at the very beginning of our Saviour's Mission, in the 30th Year of the Vulgar Era, and about a Year after he was appointed an Apostle. When Luk. vi. 13. Mat. x. 2. John vi. 5, 6, 7. our Saviour intended to feed the five thousand Men, that follow'd him, he asked St. Philip, only to prove him, whence Bread might be bought for such a Multitude of People. Philip answered, That two hundred Peny-worth would not be sufficient for every one to taste a little. Some Gentiles, having a Curiosity to see Jesus Christ, a little before his Passion, they addressed themselves to St. Philip, John xii. 20, 22. who mention'd it to St. Andrew, and these two together to Christ. At the Last Supper, Philip asked our Saviour, that he would please to shew them the Father, John xiv. 8, 10. and that was all they desired. But Jesus answered them, That seeing the Son, they saw the Father also. And this is all we find of him in the Gospel.

Clemens Alexandrinus says [c] that St. Philip marry'd some of his Daughters. Theodoret says, [d] he preached in the two Phrygia's; and Eusebius [e] says he was buried at Hierapolis in Phrygia Pacatiana. Polycrates Bishop of Ephesus [f] assures us, that St. Philip, with St. John, celebrated the Passover on the Fourteenth Day of the Moon. Euseb. Hist. Eccl. l. 3. c. 39. same Author seems to say, that Papias had been inform'd by the Daughters of St. Philip, that a dead Man had been restored to Life in the Time of this Apostle. The false Histories that we have of St Philip, pretend that he died at the Age of Fourscore and seven Years, under Domitian or Trajan. There hath been a Book of Acts falsely imputed to this Apostle, which was condemned by Pope Gelasius; as also a Gospel Epiphan. Hæres. 26. c. 13. used by the Gnosticks. The Bollandists may be consulted concerning the History of this Saint, on the First Day of May.

As to his Daughters, Polycrates Bishop of Ephesus says, that two of 'em lived in Virginity, and were buried with their Euseb. l. 3. c. 31. Father at Hierapolis. 'Twas from them, that Papias was informed of the raising of Sozomen, l. 7. c. 27. a dead Person: And Sozomen thinks that it was they themselves that had restored him to Life. Polycrates speaks also of another Daughter of St. Philip, who lived in Euseb. l. 3. c. 31. great Sanctity, and died at Ephesus. This is, probably, she that was marry'd; and, perhaps, it was this last that the Greeks honour'd by the Name of Hermione, Vid. Vales. Not. in Euseb. p. 55. who, they say, was buried at Ephesus, and was Daughter of St. Philip the Apostle.

7. PHILIP, the second of the seven Deacons chosen by the Apostles after our Acts vi. 5. Saviour's Resurrection. This Deacon, Isidor. Pelus. l. 1. p. 449. Acts xxi. 8, 9. they say, was of Cesarea in Palestine. It is certain, that his Daughters lived in this City. After the Death of St. Stephen, all the Christians, excepting the Apostles, having left Jerusalem, and being dispers'd in several Places, St. Philip Acts viii. 1, 2, 3, &c. went to preach at Sebaste or Samaria, where he performed several Miracles, and converted many Persons: He baptized them; but being only a Deacon, he could not give them the Sacrament of Confirmation †, and the Holy Ghost: Wherefore, he made known to the Apostles at Jerusalem, that Samaria had received the Word of God; that they should come and lay Hands on them, and communicate the Holy Ghost to them. St. Peter and St. John came thither; and the Samaritans that were converted received the Holy Ghost by their Means. Simon Magus had been admitted to Baptism, among others, by St. Philip: But St. Peter would not lay his Hands on him, and rejected, with Contempt and Execration, the Proposal he made to him, of purchasing with Money the Power of communicating the Holy Ghost.

St. Philip was, probably, at Samaria, when the Angel came to command him to go on the Southerly Part of the Country, in the Road that leads from Jerusalem to Old Gaza: For there were two Cities of Gaza, the Old and the New; the Old was then forsaken, and was upon the Road to Egypt. Acts viii. 5, 26, 27, &c. Philip obey'd, and there met with an Ethiopian Eunuch, belonging to Candace Queen of Ethiopia, who had the Care of her Revenues, and had been at Jerusalem, to worship God there; he was then returning into his own Country, and was reading the Prophet Isaiah, as he travelled in his Chariot. Then the Spirit of God said to Philip, Go on, and approach to this Chariot. Philip coming to the Chariot, heard the Man reading the Prophet Isaiah, and said to him, Do you understand what you read? To which the Eunuch answered, How should I understand, except Some-body explain it to me? He desired therefore Philip to come and sit down by him in the Chariot. The Passage he was reading was this; He was led as a Sheep to the Slaughter; and like a Lamb dumb before his Shearer, so opened he not his mouth. The Eunuch says then to Philip, Pray, who does the Prophet here speak of? Is it of himself, or some other? Then Philip began to instruct him concerning Jesus Christ. And having gone on together for some time, they came to a Fountain, when the Eunuch said to Philip, Here is Water; what hinders me from being baptized? Philip told him, He might be so, if he believed with all his Heart. He replied, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. He then caused the Chariot to stop, and they both went down into the Water, where Philip baptized the Eunuch. [a] Being come out of the Water, the Spirit of the Lord took away Philip, and the Eunuch saw him no more. But Philip was found again at Azotus, and preached the Gospel in all the Cities he passed through, 'till he returned to Cesarea of Palestine, which is about thirty Leagues from Azotus.

'Tis thought that this Eunuch was the first Apostle of the Ethiopians; [b] and the Abyssines boast of having receiv'd the Christian Faith from him. Some believe [c] he preached Jesus Christ in Arabia Fælix, and in Taprobana; but these are such as think his Mistress, Queen Candace, reigned in Arabia Fælix. The most prevailing Opinion is, that this Eunuch belong'd to a Queen of the Peninsula Meroe, to the South of Egypt. Women commonly reign'd Vid. Strab. l. 17. But to return to St. Philip: The Scripture does not inform us what he did after this time, that is, after the 33d Year of Menæa xi. Octob. the Vulgar Era. The modern Greeks say, that this holy Deacon left Palestine, to go to Tralles in Asia, where he founded a Church, of which he was the Apostle and Bishop, and where he rested in Peace, after performing many Miracles. The Latins, after Usuard and Ado, say, on the 6th of June, that he died in Peace at Cesarea, and that three of his Daughters were there Adon. & Martyrol. Rom. vi. Jun. buried with him. Ado adds, that the fourth died at Ephesus; but he has mistaken this fourth Daughter of St. Philip the Deacon, for St. Hermione Daughter of St. Philip the Apostle, of whom we have just now spoke. Caius, also, an ancient Priest of the Romish Church, apparently confounds the Daughters of Philip the Deacon, with those of the Apostle of the same Name, when he says, that the four Caius apud Eufeb. Hist. Eccl. l. 3. c. 31. Daughters of the Deacon dwelt at Hierapolis in Phrygia. When St. Paula came to Cesarea, in the Year of Christ 386, she had a mind to see the House of St. Philip, and the Chambers of his Daughters. The Hieronym. PHILIPPI, a City of Macedonia, and a Acts xvi. 12, 13, &c. In the Year of Christ 52. Roman Colony. St. Paul came to preach there in the 52d Year of the Vulgar Era, and there converted several People; among others, Lydia a Seller of Purple. He also cast out a Devil from a Servant-Maid, who had a Familiar Spirit, by which she foretold future Events, and thereby brought great Gain to her Masters. These stirr'd up the whole City against St. Paul; and the Magistrates caused him to be seized, whipt, and put in Prison. But the Day following they let him out again, and made Excuses for their ill Treatment of him, after they had been inform'd that he was a Citizen of Rome.

PHILIPPIANS: The Philippians were always full of Acknowledgment, for the Grace of Faith they had receiv'd from God, by the Ministry of St. Paul: They Phil. iv. 16. assisted him on several Occasions: They sent him Money while he was in Achaia; Phil. i. 12, 13. In the Year of Christ 61. and being inform'd that he was a Prisoner at Rome, they sent a Deputation to him by Epaphroditus their Bishop, to be serviceable to him on all Occasions. Epaphroditus fell sick; and St. Paul, in order to deliver the Philippians from the Concern they were in, at the hearing of his Sickness, sent Epaphroditus to them again, when he was recover'd, and writ the Epistle by him, which we have still remaining. This Epistle is address'd to the Philippians, in which he commends their Liberality, and shews great Acknowledgment, for the Readiness he found in them, of being helpful to him in his Necessity. See the Article of St. PAUL.

PHILISTINES, a People that came from the Isle of Caphtor in Palestine, being Descendants from the Caphtorims, who came from the Casluhims, Children of Mizraim, as Moses informs us; and, by Consequence, are originally from Mizraim the Father of the Egyptians. Moses says, elsewhere, that the Caphtorims, being come out of Caphtor, drove out the Avims which dwelt from Hazerim to Azzah (or Gaza), and dwelt in their stead: Therefore, 'tis only since the time of the Avims (or Avites), or Canaanites, that the Philistines came into Palestine, and that they have so long possess'd the Country of which they made themselves Masters. We do not precisely know the Time of their coming out of the Isle of Caphtor; but they had been a long Time in the Land of Canaan, when Abraham came thither, in the Year of the World 2083, before Christ 1917, before the Vulgar Era 1921. We have attempted to shew, in the Article CAPHTOR, or CAPHTORIM, that this Word intimates the Isle of Crete. Amos ix. 7. Jerom. xlvii. 4. Gen. x. 13, 14. Deut. ii. 23.

The Name Philistine is not Hebrew. The Septuagint generally translate it by Allophyloi, Strangers. The Pelethites and Cherethites were also Philistines; and the Seventy sometimes translate Cherethim, by Cretai, Cretes. See what we have said upon the Articles PELETHITES and CHERETHITES. The Casluhims, or Casluchims, the Fathers of the Caphtorims, dwelt originally in Pentapolis Cyrenaica, according to the Paraphrast Jonathan; or in the Canton Pentaschenites of Lower Egypt, according to the Jerusalem Paraphrast. We find in Marmarica, the City of Axilis, or Azylis; and in Libya bordering upon Egypt, Sagylis, or Satylis; and this out of Ptolemy. These Names have a sensible Resemblance to Casluhim. This Country is situate near Egypt, where all the Children of Mizraim had their Settlement: It is placed over-against the Isle of Crete. Strabo allows but a thousand Furlongs Distance between the Port of Cyrene, and that of Crete, called Criou Metapon, or, the Ram's Forehead. There was, heretofore, a great Intercourse between Cyreniaca and the Isle of Crete, as appears from Strabo and Pliny: It is therefore probable, that the Casluhims sent Colonies to this Island from Cyreniaca, which afterwards pass'd from thence to the Coasts of Palestine. This Hypothesis appears to me to be the most probable of any that has hitherto been advanced. פלישתים Philistim, Gr. Ἀλλόφυλοι. כרתים Κρῆτες. Vid. Ezec. xxv. 16. Sophron. ii. 5, 6. Strab. l. 17. p. 837.

Besides the Conformity which is observable between the Words Cherethim and Crete, we also find a great Resemblance blance between the Manners, the Arms, the Deities, the Customs of the Philistines and the Cretans; as may be seen in our Dissertation concerning the Original and the Deities of the Philistines, prefix'd to the First Book of Kings.

The Philistines were a powerful People in Palestine even in Abraham's time, since they had then Kings, and were in Possession of several considerable Cities. They are not comprehended in the Number of the Nations devoted to Extermination, and whose Territory the Lord had abandon'd to the Hebrews. Lastly, they were not of the cursed Seed of Canaan. However Joshua did not forbear to give their Land to the Hebrews, and to set upon them by Command from the Lord, because they possessed a Country which was promised to the People of God. But these Conquests of Joshua must have been ill maintain'd, since under the Judges, under Saul, and at the Beginning of the Reign of King David, the Philistines had their Kings, and their Lords, which they called Sazenim; since their State was divided into five little Kingdoms or Satrapies, and since they oppress'd the Israelites during the Government of the High Priest Eli, and of Samuel, and during the Reign of Saul.[a] True it is, that Tamgar, Sampson, Samuel and Saul made head against them, and killed some of their People, but they did not reduce their Power. They continued independant down to the Reign of David, who subdued them to his Government.

Josh. xv. 45, 46, 47.

They continued in Subjection to the Kings of Judah down to the Reign of Jehoram Son of Jehoshaphat, that is, for about Two hundred and forty six Years.[b] Jehoram made War against them, and probably reduced them to his Obedience again, because it is observed in Scripture, that they revolted again from Uzziah, and that this Prince kept them to their Duty for his whole Reign.[c] During the unfortunate Reign of Ahaz, the Philistines made great Havock in the Territory of Judah; but his Son and Successor Hezekiah, subdued them again. Lastly, they regain'd their full Liberty under the latter Kings of Judah; and we may see by the Menaces made to them by the Prophets Isaiah, Amos, Zephaniah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel, that they brought a thousand Hardships and Calamities upon the Children of Israel, for which Cruelties God threatned to punish them with great Misfortunes.

2 Chron. xxviii. 18. 2 Kings xviii. 8.

Esar-haddon, Successor to Sennacharib, besieged Azoth and took it, by the Arms of his General Thasthan, or Tartan. Psammiticus King of Egypt took the same City, after a Siege of Twenty-nine Years, according to Herodotus; and this is the longest Siege of any City known. During the Siege of Tyre, which held out for Thirteen Years, Nebuchadnezzar made use of a Part of his Army to subdue the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and other Nations bordering upon the Jews. There is great Probability that the Philistines could not withstand him, and that they were reduced to his Obedience, as well as the other People of Syria, Phenicia and Palestine. Afterwards they fell under the Dominion of the Persians, then under that of Alexander the Great, who destroy'd the City of Gaza,[d] the only City of the Phenicians that durst oppose him. After the Persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, the Asmoneans pared off by degrees several Cities from the Country of the Philistines, which they subjected to their Jurisdiction. Tryphon, Regent of the Kingdom of Syria, gave to Jonathan the Asmonean, the Government of the whole Coast of the Mediterranean, from Tyre as far as Egypt; and consequently all the Country of the Philistines. The Name Palestine comes from Philistine, altho' these People possess'd but a small Part of this Country.

not acknowledge him as a God, and utter'd blaſphemous Expreſſions that were very horrible. He told them, that they had indeed offer'd Sacrifices for his Health, but that they had alſo offer'd their Sacrifices to others. Then with a more ſerious Air, he asked them why they refuſed to eat Swines-Fleſh; and laſtly, upon what Grounds they could juſtify their Pretences to the Right of Denizons. He put theſe Queſtions to them by fits and ſtarts, without ſtaying for a Reply, or hearing what the Jews had to ſay to them. Philo compoſed ſeveral Works, a good Part of which are ſtill extant, and which are very much eſteemed by intelligent Perſons. Photius believes, that it was from him that the Cuſtom was firſt introduced into the Church, of explaining the Scriptures Allegorically; and true it is, that the Fathers, eſpecially Clement of Alexandria and Origen, have often follow'd the Method of Philo; but it cannot be deny'd, but that the Cuſtom of turning the Scripture into Allegory, was in uſe long before Philo, as may be ſeen in the Book of Wiſdom, [a] and in Eccleſiaſticus. Joſephus teſtifies, that he had a Deſign to compoſe a Work, in which he would explain what Moſes had concealed under his Allegories. Laſtly, St. Paul has often uſed this manner of explaining Scripture, ſo that it may be eaſily ſeen it was familiar to the Jews, and that Philo was neither the firſt nor the principal Author of it. See the Article ALLEGORY.

Several of the Antients have thought, that Philo intended to deſcribe the way of Life of the firſt Chriſtians of Alexandria, in his Book intitled, Of a contemplative Life, wherein he repreſents the Manner of living of the Therapeutæ. The Reader may peruſe what has been written pro and con upon this Argument, for ſome Years paſt. Father Montfaucon has maintained the affirmative Side of the Queſtion, and M. Baſnage, M. du Pin, and M. N. Preſident of Dijon, the negative Side. 'Tis worth while to read what has been ſaid on both Sides upon this famous Queſtion. 'Tis ſaid that Philo [b] was acquainted with St. Peter at Rome, under the Emperor Claudius; that he ſpoke with him, and contracted a Friendſhip with him. Photius ſays, that he even embraced Chriſtianity, but quitted it again out of Diſcontent: But this Circumſtance does not appear from any antient Writer. The Time of his Death is unknown.

The Greeks make him Biſhop of Sinope in Pontus, and ſet his Feaſt upon the fourth of November. Origen believes, that Philologus was Husband to Julia, mentioned in the ſame Place; but others doubt whether Julias is not rather the Name of a Man than a Woman.

PHILOSOPHY. St. Paul bids the Coloſſians beware, leſt any Man ſpoil them through Philoſophy. Ne quis vos decipiat per Philoſophiam. And in the Acts, St. Luke relates, That when St. Paul came to Athens, he there found Epicurean and Stoick Philoſophers, who made a Jeſt of his Diſcourſes. The ſame Apoſtle in many Places of his Epiſtles, oppoſes the falſe Wiſdom and wiſe Men of the Age, which is nothing elſe but the Pagan Philoſophy, always contrary to the Wiſdom of Jeſus Chriſt, and the true Religion; which in the Notion of the Philoſophers and Sophiſts of this World, ſeem'd to be mere Folly, being built neither upon Reaſoning nor Evidence, nor the Eloquence and Subtilty of thoſe that preach'd it, but upon the Power of God, and his ſingle Authority, upon the Operation of the Holy Ghoſt, which actuated the Hearts and Minds of thoſe whom he called to the Faith.

(Coloſſ. ii. 8. Acts xvii. 18.)

The Word Philoſophy is derived from the Greek Word Philos, a Lover, and Sophia, Wiſdom. Pythagoras was the firſt who took up the Appellation of a Philoſopher, or a Lover of Wiſdom, inſtead of Sophos, or a wiſe Man, which was given to all before him, who were excellent in the Sciences. In the Holy Scripture we find real wiſe Men, and real Works of Philoſophy, in the Book of Proverbs, the Eccleſiaſtes of Solomon, the Book of Wiſdom, and Eccleſiaſticus. Theſe are moral Works, wherein we find a vaſt Number of excellent Maxims of Religion, of Piety, of Conduct for all States of Life. There is but little Reaſoning or Argumentation. The antient Orientals did not ſo much amuſe themſelves with Reaſoning, as the Greek Philoſophers. They went directly to the Matter, and deliver'd their Precepts by way of Sentiment and Maxim. The Book of Eccleſiaſtes is a kind of Diſpute, wherein are exhibited the Reaſonings of the Wicked, and of thoſe that deny the Immortality of the Soul, and Providence, and that place their chiefeſt Good in Pleaſure, Riches,

[b] Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccl. l. 2. de Viris illuſt. c. 11.

Riches, and Honour. Their Reaſons are alledg'd with Strength, but Solomon ſhews the Vanity and Inconcluſiveneſs of them, and determines in favour of Religion, and of the Fear of God.

The Book of Job is alſo a kind of Treatiſe of Philoſophy, in which three or four Perſons diſpute by turns concerning Providence, the Proceedings of God towards Men, and upon this important Queſtion, Whether all the Evils that happen to us in this World, are Puniſhments for our Sins, or if they are not ſometimes ſent by the Wiſdom of God, as Proofs and Trials of his Elect?

The Book call'd the Wiſdom of Solomon, is a Work of moral Philoſophy, chiefly compos'd for the Inſtruction of great Men, and Princes of the Earth. Eccleſiaſticus takes in a vaſt Scope; it comprehends all Conditions of Life, and gives moral Precepts to all ſorts of Perſons. [Eccluſ. vi. 23.] It derives the Name of Sophia, Wiſdom, from the Hebrew Word Zaphniah, a ſecret thing, and deſcribes to us the Employment of a Hebrew Philoſopher, [Ecc. xxxix 1, 2, 3.] as a Man applying himſelf to the Diſcovery of the Senſe of antient Parables, to the Study of the Wiſdom of the Antients, of the Writings of the Prophets, of the Hiſtories of famous Men; to travelling in diſtant Countries, to learn the Manners and Sentiments of different Nations, and to know the Good and Evil that is among Men. But his chief Employment is in praying to the Lord, and in intreating Knowledge from him. If he grants it, the wiſe Man will pour out the Treaſures of his Wiſdom as a plentiful Rain, and his Reputation will ſpread itſelf to the Ends of the World.

About the ſame time that the ſeveral Sects of Philoſophers were formed among the Greeks, as the Academicks, the Peripateticks, the Stoicks, one might obſerve alſo among the Jews, by a ſort of Emulation, ſeveral Sects of Philoſophers to ariſe, as the Eſſenians, the Phariſees, and the Sadducees. The Phariſees had ſome Reſemblance to the Stoicks, the Sadducees to the Epicureans, and the Eſſenians came near to the Academicks. The Phariſees were proud, vain, and boaſting, like the Stoicks. The Sadducees, who deny'd the Immortality of the Soul, and the Exiſtence of Spirits, freed themſelves at once, like the Epicureans, from all Solicitude about Futurity. The Eſſenians were more moderate, more ſimple and religious, and therefore approached nearer to the Academicks.

Juſt as the Philoſophy of the Greeks, after it had been for a long time honour'd and reſpected, for the Merit of thoſe that profeſs'd it, afterwards fell into Diſrepute and Contempt, by the Sordidneſs of the Vices of thoſe that took upon themſelves the Name of Philoſophers; ſo among the Hebrews, the Phariſees, for example, who at the Beginning had recommended themſelves for their ſteady adhering to the Law of God, made themſelves afterwards very odious to thoſe in Power, and contemptible to all good Men, by their exceſſive Ambition, and the erroneous Interpretations that they gave to the Law of the Lord.

The Philoſophers againſt whom St. Paul inveighs, in his Epiſtle to the Romans, boaſted the Extent of their Knowledge, the Purity of their Morality, the Eloquence of their Writings, the Strength of their Reaſonings, and the Subtilty of their Arguments. Their Weakneſſes were Pride, Curioſity, Preſumption, Hypocriſy, Ambition. They aſcribed every thing to human Reaſon, and would be ſuperior in every thing. And although their Lives were full of Diſorders, that were ſhameful and even injurious to human Nature, yet they would paſs upon the World for good Men, and boaſting of their Knowledge of God, they diſhonour'd him by their Actions. To them St. Paul oppoſed the Humility of the Croſs of Jeſus Chriſt, the Force of his Miracles, the Purity of his Morals, the Depth of his Myſteries, and the evident Proofs of his Miſſion.

'Tis diſputed whether or no the Heathen Philoſophers have not borrowed the fineſt Sentiments of their Morality from the Sacred Scriptures. The Fathers have been much divided upon this Queſtion: Some of them have maintained the Affirmative Side, and ſome the Negative. Philo the Jew teaches, [Phil. l. 1. de vita Moſ. p. 657 658.] that before the Tranſlation of the Books of Moſes, made at the Inſtigation of Ptolemy Philadelphus, the Gentiles had no Acquaintance with the Sacred Books. Ariſtæus makes Demetrius Phalereus to ſay, [Ariſt. de 70 Interp.] that the Greek Hiſtorians, Poets, and Writers, have made no mention of the Books of the Hebrews; and that ſome Writers being deſirous of inſerting ſomething from them into their Works, were prevented by divine Puniſhments that happened to them, and of which he gives Inſtances. Origen maintains, [Origen. in Cantic. Canticor.] that the Name of Moſes was unknown to the Greeks, and that his Name is not to be found in any of their Writings. Joſephus the Hiſtorian, [Joſeph. l. 1. cont. App. p. 1051.] acknowledges the Silence of the Greeks, and gives this Reaſon for it; That they had not read the Books of the Jews. Lactantius ſays expreſly, [Lactant. de origen. Err. l. 2. c. 11.] that the Prophane had never read the Sacred Writings. Nullas literas veritatis attigerant. In another Place, that it was ſurprizing [Idem de vera ſapientia l. 4. c. 2.] that Pythagoras and Plato ſhould go into Egypt, into Chaldea and Perſia, to be inform'd of the Religion and Cuſtoms of thoſe People, and not go into Judea, whither they might eaſily have paſſed, and where they might have found what they vainly ſought elſewhere.

But

But other of the Fathers, and those the greater Number, have been for the Affirmative: They assure us, that the most celebrated of the Philosophers were acquainted with the Sacred Books, and the Prophets. St. Austin thinks, [a] that Pythagoras knew Jeremiah in Egypt. Others believe that he also conversed with Ezekiel in Judea: [b] That he was acquainted with the Jews, and borrow'd several of their Laws, which he admitted into his Philosophy. [c] Clemens Alexandrinus, speaking to the Greeks, asserts, [d] That whatever there is of Truth in the Laws of Plato, was derived from the Hebrews; that from thence their Poets have borrow'd all their finest Thoughts, and all their noblest Expressions. Justin Martyr [e] undertakes a particular Discussion of this Matter, and shews, by many Examples, that Orpheus, Homer, Solon, Pythagoras, Plato, and many Others, have travelled into Egypt, and have consulted the Books of Moses. Celsus the Philosopher, an Enemy to the Christians, acknowledged the Conformity that was to be found between the Sentiments of Plato and those of Moses and the Jewish Prophets. And from thence he ridiculously concludes, that it was the Hebrews who had imitated the Greeks; as if Moses and the other sacred Writers had been more modern than Plato and the Greek Poets.

Tertul. Apologet.

Tertullian maintains, that the antient Law-givers of the Heathen had nothing valuable but what they had borrow'd from the Hebrews. Sciatis ipsas quoque leges vestras, quæ videntur ad innocentiam pergere, de divina lege, ut antiquiore, formam mutuatas. That their Poets and Philosophers had drawn from the Fountain of the Prophets; that by the subtil Artifice of the Devil, some Stroaks of Truth have slipt into the Writings of the Profane, in order to undermine the same Truth at such Time as God should manifest it to the World. For the greatest Part of Mankind have either not Penetration enough, or not Sincerity enough, to distinguish the Truth from such Errors as they find it blended with. Justin Martyr had the same Way of Thinking. Eusebius has employ'd two entire Books of his great Work of the Gospel-Preparation, to shew that Plato had taken the principal Things of his Philosophy, and of his Theology, from the sacred Books of the Jews. Theodoret advances, that the antient Philosophers Pherecides, Pythagoras, Thales, Solon, and Plato, had travell'd into Egypt, and had received Instructions, not only from the Egyptians, but also from the Hebrews, even so far, as that Pythagoras received Circumcision, which the Egyptians had borrow'd from the Jews. St. Ambrose seems to think, [f] that one of Plato's chief Designs in coming into Egypt, was to consult the Laws of Moses, and the Oracles of the Prophets. Eruditionis gratia in Ægyptum profectus, ut Mosis gesta, legis oracula, Prophetarum dicta cognosceret.

But as this Question is concerning a Fact, it ought to be examined from Facts, rather than by Authorities. The Proofs from Fact are of two Kinds. First, The Agreement of Notions and Expressions, between the sacred Authors and the prophane, in such Matters wherein naturally they could not agree. Secondly, The Acknowledgment of Those who copied from Others, or the Testimony of cotemporary Authors. But in the Writings of the Poets and the prophane Philosophers, we find no Acknowledgment that they had borrow'd any thing from the sacred Writers; none of their cotemporary Writers take any Notice, that they did any thing like this. Those Strokes of Resemblance that may be observed between the sacred and prophane Authors, are merely fortuitous, and in such Passages wherein Men of Sense might easily be suppos'd to coincide, without copying from one another: Therefore nothing can be concluded from hence, in favour of the Opinion of Those, who pretend that the Greeks had read and imitated the Hebrew Writers.

Nay, they could not so much as have read them; for they must either have read them in the Originals, or else in Translations. The Grecians did not study foreign Languages; and the Jews were infinitely jealous of the Sacredness of their Books, nor would communicate them to prophane Heathens: Neither could they read them in any Versions; for there were none before that of the Septuagint, made by the Order of Ptolemy Philadelphus, a long Time after Pythagoras, Plato, Aristotle, Socrates, Chrysippus, Zeno, and the ancient Greek Philosophers and Legislators. There is even a great Propability, that the said Version of the Septuagint is still more modern than the Age of Philadelphus, as may be seen under the Article SEPTUAGINT.

Another famous Question, that has been debated on Account of the old Philosophers, is that, concerning their eternal Salvation. 'Tis enquired whether they, by only following the Light of Reason, and living good moral Lives, in the Eye of the World, independantly of the Law and the Gospel, whether they, I say, could escape Damna-

Rom. ii. 9, 10, 11, 12. Damnation and eternal Misery? St. Paul, in his Epistle to the Romans, seems not to exclude even the Gentiles, who have lived good and virtuous Lives, from the Felicity of Heaven. Thus he expresses himself: The Philosophers of the Gentiles are without Excuse; because, having known God, they have not glorified him as God. If therefore they had glorified him, they might have been excused. He goes on: Tribulation and Anguish upon every Soul of Man that doeth Evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile: But Glory, Honour, and Peace to every Man that worketh Good, to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile: For there is no Respect of Persons with God. For as many as have sinned without Law, shall also perish without Law; and as many as have sinned in the Law, shall be judged by the Law. For when the Gentiles, which have not the Law, do by Nature the things contained in the Law; these having not the Law, are a Law unto themselves: Which shew the Work of the Law written in their Hearts; their Conscience also bearing Witness, and their Thoughts the mean while accusing, or else excusing one another. And ver. 26. Therefore if the Uncircumcision (or, the Gentile) keep the Righteousness of the Law, shall not his Uncircumcision be counted for Circumcision? And shall not Uncircumcision which is by Nature, if it fulfil the Law, judge thee, who by the Letter and Circumcision doest transgress the Law?

From all these Passages, it may be concluded, That the Philosopher of the Gentiles, who keeps the Law of Nature, and who worships God, is not less justified before the Sovereign Judge, who makes no Acceptation of Persons, than the Jew, who observes the Ceremonial Law: And He will even condemn the prevaricating Jew. Justin Martyr maintains, That the old Philosophers who lived conformably to Reason, were already Christians, tho' they did not know Jesus Christ; because they already follow'd his Rules and Doctrine: Such, among the Greeks, were Socrates, Heraclitus, and some others; and among the Barbarians, Abraham, Ananias, Azarias, Mizael, Elias, and several others. Clemens Alexandrinus says, That those who lived before Christ, had two Methods of obtaining Justification; the Law, and Philosophy. Philosophy might make them Just, or, at least, dispose them to Justice, or to one Degree of attaining it: It produced a kind of Justice, but not entire and perfect. He adds, That the Gentiles who died before our Saviour's Death, in Hell waited for His Coming, or that of the Apostles; and there having heard their Preaching, they believed, and were saved.

St. Chrysostom advances, That the Gentiles who lived before Jesus Christ, might be saved, without confessing him: That all that was requir'd of them, was, that they should renounce the worshipping of Idols, and should acknowledge and adore one only God, the Creator of all Things: That if, moreover, they have lived a regular and commendable Life, they shall have their Portion in the Happiness of Heaven; according to that Decision of St. Paul; Glory, Honour, and Peace to every Man that worketh Good. Origen says, That when the Soul of Jesus Christ departed from his Body, it had several Conversations with the Souls of the Dead, to convert those that were most tractable, or best disposed to receive his Doctrine. Gregory of Nazianzen, speaking of Jesus Christ's Descent into Hell, leaves it in Doubt, whether he saved all that were there, without Exception, or only those that had believed. Hilarius the Deacon, quoted under the Name of Ambrosiaster, assures us, That Jesus Christ deprived Hell of its Captives that were detained there, either on the Account of Adam's Sin, or, for their own Transgressions; and carry'd such to Heaven in Triumph, who were converted at his Preaching.

(Chrysost. Homil. 37. in Matth. p. 431.) (Rom. ii. 10.) (Origen. contra Celsus, 1, 2. p. 438.) (Greg. Nazianz. Orat. 42.) (Ambrosiast. in Eph. iv. 8.)

We may find these Sentiments scatter'd up and down in several ancient Authors, whom we have quoted in our Dissertation concerning the Salvation of the Gentiles, before the Epistles of St. Paul. The Jews allow a Place in Paradise to more than one Kind of Gentiles: They think, for Example, that those who have faithfully observed the Commandments, which, they say, were given to Noah, shall be in the Number of those who shall obtain Salvation; as also those who have known God, who have entertain'd rational Notions of the Deity, who have lived in a regular and laudable Manner: They give Instances in Socrates and Plato. The Thalmudists exclude from Salvation four Sorts of People; that is, such Gentiles as resemble Baalam and Doeg, and Jews which are like Achitophel and Gehazi. Whence it is to be inferr'd, that Pagans, who are like neither Baalam nor Doeg, according to them, may be admitted to Happiness.

(Rab. Moses, & Rab. Meyr. Gubar.)

There are cited also Tostatus, Catharinus, Erasmus, and perhaps some other modern Authors, who seem to think, that some of the antient Philosophers, as Socrates, Plato, and Seneca, were in a State capable of Salvation; all which is upon a Supposition, that they knew God, and that they lived in a moral and laudable Manner. But when this Opinion is examin'd according to strict Theological Rules, and when we inquire more narrowly into the Sentiments and Lives of those Philosophers who have been most celebrated, we are soon undeceived as to the good Opinion that had been entertain'd of their boasted Merit.

Senti-

Certain it is, that without Faith it is
Heb. xi. 6. impossible to please God. Sine fide impossibile est placere Deo. That Faith without
Jam. ii. 26. good Works is dead. Fides sine operibus mortua est. That without at least an implicit Faith in our Deliverer, our Messiah, Acts iv. 12. we cannot attain Salvation. Nec enim aliud nomen est in cœlo datum hominibus, in quo oporteat nos salvos fieri. But the Philosophers, whose Merit is most cry'd up, had neither Faith enliven'd by Charity, nor good Works, nor Belief in the Messiah. It cannot therefore be asserted, that they had any Title to eternal Salvation.

Socrates, the most unexceptionable of them all, is accused of being addicted to that abominable Vice of the Love of Boys.
Juven. Sat. 2. Aristoph. nubib. Tertull. Apologet. He worshipped the Clouds, he us'd to swear by a Dog, by an Oak, by a Duck. Lactantius makes him a Buffoon and Merry-Andrew, if he intended thereby to rally the Religion of the Athenians, among whom he lived, and the Solemnity of an Oath; or makes him a Fool, if he held these Things as Gods. The Disciples of Socrates vindicated their Master from the Imputation of Atheism, of which he was accused, and prove that he worshipped the Gods of the Grecians. At his Death he gave Orders, that a Cock should be sacrificed to Æsculapius. Can any Marks of a Saint, or of one predestinated to Salvation, be found in this Character?

Seneca, the Object of the Admiration of several of the Antients, compos'd a Book
Aug. l. 10. c. 6. de Civit. Dei. of Pagan Superstitions, and after having shewn the Ridiculousness of them, he concluded, that the wise Man ought to observe these Things in compliance to Custom and the Laws, and to practise them in outward Appearance, without any in-Dio l. 61. & in excerptis Vales. p. 685, 686. ward Belief of them. Dio upbraids this Philosopher with the Commission of heinous Crimes, and with instructing his Pupil Nero to practise the same; with heaping up immense Riches in a very little Time, and with increasing them by daily Usury. Such were the most compleat of the Pagan Philosophers, Men that had a barren Knowledge of the Deity, which they dishonour'd by their Manners, and by their absurd Notions of Religion. We shall not farther enlarge upon this Subject, having treated of it elsewhere in a particular Dissertation, placed before the Epistle to the Romans.

The Orientals observe, that the Philosophy of Thales Milesius, who took Water to be the Principle of all Things, has a near Relation to that of Moses and the Egyptians, who were pretty much in the same Principles, as also the Phenicians, who contended for the Production of all Things out of temper'd Mud and watry Sediments; whereas the Persians and Zoroaster made a nearer Approach to the Principles of Anaxagoras, who suppos'd Fire to be the first natural Cause of all material Things.

1. PHINEHAS, or as the Jews pronounce it, Pinchas, Son of Eleazar, and Grandson of Aaron. He was the third High-priest of the Jews, and discharged this Office from the Year of the World 2571, 'till towards the Year 2590, before Christ 1410, before the vulgar Era 1414. He is particularly commended in Scripture for the Zeal he shew'd in vindicating the Glory of God, when the Midianites had sent their Daughters into the Camp of Israel, to tempt the Hebrews to Fornication and Idolatry. For Zimri having publickly enter'd into the Tent of a Midianitish Woman named Cozbi, Phinehas rose up from among the People, [a] took a Poniard in his Hand, enter'd after Zimri into that infamous Place, and stabb'd both Man and Woman at one Blow, in those Parts that were chiefly concern'd in this criminal Commerce. Upon which the Plague or Distemper ceas'd, [b] with which the Lord had already begun to punish the Israelites.

Then the Lord said to Moses; Phinehas the Son of Eleazar the High-priest has turn'd away my Wrath from the Children of Israel, because he has been zealous in my Cause, and has hinder'd me from destroying them. Wherefore acquaint him, that I give him my Covenant of Peace, and the Priesthood shall be given to his Posterity by a perpetual Covenant, because he has been zealous for his God, and has made Atonement for the Crime of the Children of Israel. This Promise that the Lord made to Phinehas, to give him the Priesthood by a perpetual Covenant, evidently included this tacit Condition, that his Children should continue faithful and obedient; [c] since we know that the Priesthood passed out of the Family of Eleazar and Phinehas to that of Ithamar, and that it return'd not to the Posterity of Eleazar 'till after about an hundred and fifty Years.

This is what we find concerning the Translation of the High-priesthood from one Family to the other. This Dignity continued in the Race of Phinehas, from Aaron down to the High-priest Eli, for about about three hundred and thirty-five Years.[a] The Manner and Causes of this Change are unknown. It re-enter'd again into the Family of Eleazar under the Reign of Saul, when this Prince having put to death Abimelech, and the other Priests of Nob, he gave the High-priesthood to Zadok, who was of the Race of Phinehas. At the same Time David had Abiathar with him, of the Race of Eli, who perform'd the Functions of High-priest. So that after the Death of Saul, David continued the Priesthood to Zadok and Abiathar conjunctly. But towards the End of David's Reign, Abiathar having espoused the Interests of Adonijah to the Prejudice of Solomon, he was in Disgrace, and Zadok only acknowledged as High-priest. The Priesthood continued in his Family 'till after the Captivity of Babylon, and even to the Destruction of the Temple. But from the Beginning of Zadok's Priesthood alone, and the Exclusion of Abiathar, to the Ruin of the Temple, is a thousand fourscore and four Years.[b]

We read also another memorable Action of Phinehas in which he still shew'd his Zeal for the Lord. 'Twas when the Israelites that were beyond Jordan[c] had raised upon the Banks of this River a vast Heap of Earth; those on the other Side fearing they were going to forsake the Lord, and to set up another Religion, deputed Phinehas and other chief Men amongst them, to go and inform themselves of the Reason of their erecting this Monument. Who when they had found, that it was only in Commemoration of their Union and common Original; Phinehas took Occasion from hence to praise the Lord, saying; We now know that the Lord is with us, since you are not guilty of that Prevarication we suspected you were.

Ecclus. xlv. 23. This is the Commendation that Jesus the Son of Sirach gives of Phinehas. The third in Glory is Phinees the Son of Eleazar, because he had Zeal in the Fear of the Lord, and stood up with good Courage of Heart, when the People were turned back, and made Reconciliation for Israel. Therefore was there a Covenant of Peace made with him, that he should be the chief of the Sanctuary and of his People, and that he and his Posterity should have the Dignity of the Priesthood for ever. According to the Covenant made with David Son of Jesse, of the Tribe of Judah, that the Inheritance of the King should be to his Posterity alone; so the Inheritance of Aaron should also be unto his Seed. God give you Wisdom in your Heart, to judge his People in Righteousness, that their good Things be not abolished, and that their Glory may endure for ever.

We do not exactly know the Time of the Death of Phinehas. But as he lived after the Death of Joshua, and before the first Servitude under Chushan-rishathaim, during the Time, that there were neither Kings nor Judges in the Land, and every one did what was right in his own Eyes; his Death is put about the Year of the World 2590, before Christ 1410, before the vulgar Era 1414. 'Twas under his Pontificate that the Story of Micah happen'd, as also that of the Tribe of Dan, when they made a Conquest of Laish, and the Enormity that was committed upon the Wife of the Levite of the Mountain of Ephraim. Phinehas's Successor in the High-priesthood was Abiezar or Abishuah. Judg. xvii. 6. xviii. 1. xxi. 24. Judg. xx. 28.

The Rabbins allow a very long Life to Phinehas. There are those that believe he lived to the Time of the High-priest Eli, or even to the Time of Sampson. Others will have it, that he was the same as Eli, or rather as the Prophet Elias, which would still prolong his Life for some Ages. The Author of the Hebrew Traditions upon the Book of Kings, says that the Jews are of Opinion, that the Man of God who came to the High-priest Eli from the Lord, to reproach him with his Indolence concerning the Government of his Sons, was no other than Phinehas. Some make him live as far as the Time of David, others to the Time of Samuel;[d] but there is great Probability that they mean nothing else, but that in the Person of the Prophet Elijah was to be seen all the Zeal of the High-priest Phinehas; in like manner as the Angel said, that John the Baptist should come in the Spirit, and with the Zeal of Elijah.[e] The Jews believed a kind of Transmigration of the Souls of good Men. See the Commentators upon Matth. xvi. 14. and Lightfoot, Harmon. par. 2. to John i. 20, 21. p. 386. Chronic. Euseb. ad an. 1560. Vide Orig. t. 7. in Johan. Auth. Tradit. Heb. in 1 Reg. ii.

2. PHINEHAS, Son to Eli the High-priest, and Brother to Hophni. See the Articles ELI and HOPHNI before.

1. PHLEGON, mention'd by St. Paul in his Epistle to the Romans; he was made Bishop of Marathon in Attica, according to the Greeks. They place his Festival on the eighth of April, and the Latins commemorate him on the same Day. We know none of the Particulars of his Life. Rom. xvi. 14.

2. PHLEGON,

[a] Aaron was appointed High-priest in the Year of the World 2513. Eli was acknowledg'd High-priest and Judge of Israel in 2848.
[b] Zadok was High-priest alone, and Abiathar disgraced, in the Year of the World 2989. The Temple was destroy'd in the Year of the World 4073, in the 70th Year of the vulgar Era.

2. PHLEGON, a Freed-man of Adrian. He compos'd a History digested by the Olympiads, as far as the Year of Christ 140. In this History he takes Notice, that in the fourth Year of the two hundred and second Olympiad, which determines about the Middle of the 33d Year of the common Era, there happen'd the greatest Eclipse of the Sun that had ever been seen, [a] the Stars being seen in the Heavens at Noon-day; that afterwards there was a great Earthquake in Bithynia. Several Criticks believe, that this was that Darkness that happen'd at the Death of Jesus Christ. 'Tis upon this Account that we put the Name of Phlegon here.

PHOTINA. This is the Name that the Greeks give to the Samaritan Woman, that was converted by our Saviour. See John iv. 7, 8, 9, &c. They tell long Stories of her Martyrdom, and of that of her Children and Sisters; but nothing of this can be rely'd on. See Bollandus on March 20, p. 80. and the Martyrologies on the same Day; and Salazar M. Hispan. p. 330. Basnage's History of the Jews, t. 6. l. 8. c. 4. n. 19. See SAMARITAN.

PHRAORTES. We have said, after Herodot. l. 1. c. 102. some learned Man, that Phraortes King of the Medes, mention'd by Herodotus, is the same as Arphaxad, who was conquer'd by Nebuchadnezzar, and of whom Mention is made in the Book of Judith. This has prevail'd with us to take Notice of his History in this Work.

After Dejoces, the first King of the Medes, and Founder of Ecbatane, succeeded Phraortes, of whom we are speaking. "Not contenting himself with the "Empire of the Medes, he declared War "against the Persians, and was the first "that brought them into Subjection to the "Medes. Finding himself Master of those "two potent and warlike Nations, he "subdued the greatest part of the People "of Asia, whom he attempted one after "another. At last he made War with "the Assyrians, whose Capital was Ninive, a People that formerly possess'd "the Empire of Asia, but then forsaken "by their Allies, though still powerful "enough to make Head against him. "Phraortes carrying the War into their "Country in the twenty-second Year of "his Reign, was defeated, and perished "with the greatest part of his Army. His "Successor was his Son Cyaxares."

This is what Herodotus informs us of Phraortes: And see what the Scripture Judith. c. 1. 2, 3. tells us of Arphaxad: In the twelfth Year of the Reign of Nebuchadnezzar, who reigned in Ninive the great City, in the Days of Arphaxad, which reigned over the Medes in Ecbatane. And built in Ecbatane Walls round about, &c. Herodotus ascribes the Building of Ecbatane to Dejoces Father of Phraortes; but that is not inconsistent with Phraortes's continuing to beautify and fortify the City. The Scripture adds; "After that he boasted of his "Power, as being invincible; by the "Strength of his Army, and by the Multitude of his Chariots: But Nebuchadnezzar King of the Assyrians, who "reigned at Nineve the Great, made War "in the twelfth Year of his Reign with "Arphaxad, and overcame him in the "great Plain of Ragau, near the Euphrates, the Tigris, and the Jadason, in "the Country of Arioch King of the "Elymeans." The twelfth Year of Nebuchadnezzar falls, according to our Chronology, in the Year of the World 3347, before Christ 653, before the vulgar Era 657.

The Characters which the Scripture gives to Arphaxad, are the same that Herodotus imputes to Phraortes; he is King of the Medes, subdues several Nations to his Government, is at last subdued himself by Nebuchadnezzar King of Ninive and the Assyrians. The Difference of Names ought not to be any Objection in the Oriental Historians. We know that they almost always differ from the Greeks, in the Names which they give to their Princes. See F. Montfaucon, in his Book concerning the Truth of the Book of Judith, our Preface to the same Book, and for the contrary Opinion, M. Basnage's Jewish Antiquities, t. 2. p. 252, &c.

PHURAH, or Phara, the Servant of Gideon, who went with him to spy the Judg. vii. 10, 11. Camp of the Midianites.

PHUT, or Phuth, the third Son of Ham. Gen. x. 6. We believe he peopled, either the Canton of Phtemphu, Phtemphuti, or Phtembyti, set down in Pliny and Ptolemy, whose Capital was Thara in Lower Egypt, inclining towards Lybia; or the Canton call'd Phtenotes, of which Buthus was the Capital. The Prophets often speak of Phut. In the Time of Jeremiah, Phut was under Jerem. xlvi. 9. the Obedience of Necho King of Egypt. Nahum reckons up this People in the Nahum iii. 9. Number of those who ought to have come to the Assistance of No-ammon or Diospolis. See the Commentary upon Genesis x. 6.

PHYGELLUS, or Phigellus, was a Christian of Asia, who happening to be at Rome while St. Paul was there in Prison, in the 2 Tim. i. 15. 65th Year of Christ, forsook him in his Necessity, with Hermogenes. Aversi sunt à me omnes qui in Asia sunt, ex quibus est Phygellus & Hermogenes. Phygellus is unknown upon any other Account but this, which by no means is to his Honour. Metaphrastes in his Discourse upon St. Peter and St. Paul, says, that the Apostle having having made Phygellus Bishop of Ephesus, this Man seduced the converted Jews, and prevailed with them to renounce the Faith. We read several Things concerning Philetus and Hermogenes in the Life of St. James major, written by Abdias. There is something of Probability that this Author has put Philetus for Phygellus, as we read it in the Latin Edition of Sixtus Quintus. But these Circumstances are altogether as uncertain as those related by Metaphrastes. Ambrosiaster says, that Phygellus and Hermogenes were Deceivers and Hypocrites, who attended the Apostle only to learn what they could from him, and afterwards to calumniate him, and raise Persecutions against him. But when they saw themselves discover'd, they departed from him. (In 2 Tim. i. 15.)

PHYLACTERY. This Word is taken from the Greek, and properly signifies a Preservative, such as the Pagans us'd to carry about them, to preserve them from certain Evils, Diseases, or Dangers. They wore, for Example, Stones or Pieces of Metal engraved under certain Aspects of the Planets. All the Eastern part of the World is still to this Day fill'd with this kind of Superstition, and the Men do not only wear Phylacteries for themselves, but for their Animals also. But this Sort of Preservative does not belong to our Subject. What concerns us, are those Phylacteries mention'd by Jesus Christ in the Gospel. [a] He says the Scribes and Pharisees make broad their Phylacteries, and enlarge the Borders of their Garments. These Phylacteries were certain little Boxes, or certain Rolls of Parchment, wherein were written certain Words of the Law. These they wore upon their Foreheads, and upon the Wrists of their Left-Arm. See upon what they founded this Custom. God said to 'em in Exodus; And it shall be for a Sign unto thee upon thy Hand, and for a Memorial between thine Eyes. (Exod. xiii. 9.) And a little farther; And it shall be for a Token upon thine Hand, and for Frontlets between thine Eyes. (Exod. xiii. 16.)

The Jews writ upon their Phylacteries these four Passages of the Law: 1st, Sanctify unto me all the First-born: whatsoever openeth the Womb among the Children of Israel, both of Man and Beast, it is mine. And what follows, as far as the 10th Verse of the 13th Chapter of Exodus. 2. From the 11th Verse of the same Chapter, And it shall be when the Lord shall bring thee into the Land of the Canaanites, &c. as far as Verse 16. 3. From the 4th Verse of the 6th Chapter of Deuteronomy, Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord, and what follows to Verse the 9th of the same Chapter. 4. Lastly, from the 13th Verse of the 11th Chapter of the same Book, And it shall come to pass, if you shall hearken diligently to my Commandments, &c. to the End of Verse 21 of the same Chapter.

Here is what Leo of Modena informs us particularly about these Rolls. (Ceremonies of the Jews, p. 1. ch. 11. n. 4.) Those that were to be fasten'd to the Arms were two Rolls of Parchment writ in square Letters, with an Ink made on purpose, and with much Care. They were roll'd up to a Point, and were inclosed in a Sort of Case of black Calves-skin. Then they were put upon a square Bit of the same Leather, but something stiffer, from whence hung a Thong of the same, of about a Finger's Breadth and a Cubit and a half long. These Rolls were placed at the Bending of the Left-Arm, and after the Thong had made a little Knot in Form of the Letter Jod, it was wound about the Arm in a spiral Line, which ended at the Top of the middle Finger. It was call'd Teffila shel-jad, or the Teffila of the Hand.

That of the Forehead was composed of four Pieces of Parchment, upon each of which was written one of the Sentences before-mention'd. These four Pieces were join'd together in a Square, and they writ upon them the Letter Schin, or ש. Then they put over them a little Square of stiff Calves Leather, from whence proceeded two Thongs like the former. This Square was put on the Middle of the Forehead, and the Thongs going round the Head made a Knot behind like the Letter Daleth, and then came round again to the Breast. They call'd this Teffila Shelrosh, the Teffila of the Head. The modern Jews content themselves with putting on these Phylacteries only at Morning-prayers. Some of the most Devout put them on at the Time of Noon-prayers also, but they are under no Obligation to do this.

Some Antients think, [b] that the Use of the Tephelims (for thus the Jews call what the Gospel names Phylacteries) is as antient as Moses; and several Interpreters [c] will have it, that at the Time of our Saviour this Custom was general, and that even he himself wore them; and that he reproves in the Pharisees only the Affectation of having larger Phylacteries than other Men. But I cannot prevail with my self to think, that this Custom ever generally obtain'd. St. Jerome says, [d] that in his Time, the Indian, Persian, and Babylonish Jews very commonly wore these Rolls upon their Foreheads, and that those that wore them were esteem'd as the most religious and devout. This therefore was not universal, even among the Jews beyond the Euphrates, and much less among those on this Side that River. The same St. Jerome

Jerome thinks, that the Pharisees wrote the Decalogue upon these Phylacteries. St. Chrysostome [a] writing upon the same Passage, condemns the Abuse of them among Christians, who carried Phylacteries about their Necks, in which were written certain Names of Angels in Hebrew, or some parts of the Gospel. St. Jerome takes Notice of the same Abuse, and Pope Gelasius has condemned this Sort of superstitious Phylacteries. Buxtorf may be consulted concerning these Tephilims, Synag. Jud. c. 4.

PIGEON. See what is said before under the Article DOVE.

Hos. vii. 11. The Prophet Hosea says, that Ephraim is like a seduced Pigeon or Dove, that is without Understanding. Factus est Ephraim quasi Columba seducta, non habens cor. The Dove or Pigeon is a simple Animal, without Craft, without Defence, without Understanding. For this is the Sense of the Words, non habens cor. The Hebrews suppos'd the Understanding to be lodg'd in the Heart. See Hos. iv. 11. Prov. vii. 7. ix. 4, 16. x. 21. xii. 11. Ecclus. xvi. 23. As to the Words, Columba seducta, Commentators observe, that this Bird is the only one that does not protect and defend its young ones, and expresses no Concern when they are taken away: But returns always to the same Hole, to build her Nest therein, notwithstanding the frequent Experience she has had, that Worms, Vermin, Birds, or Men have taken away or destroy'd her Young that were deposited there.

But I should rather choose to explain this Passage of such Pigeons as suffer themselves to be seduced, to go to strange Pigeon-houses. 'Tis said that in Cairo, and other Cities of Egypt, there are your Pigeon-stealers, who make it a kind of a Trade, to entice other Peoples Pigeons to their own Pigeon-houses. The Talmudists exclude this Sort of People from any of the Employments of the Sanhedrim.

Psal. lxviii. 13. The Psalmist, describing Pigeons, says, that they are white as Silver, and their Back is yellow as Gold. Pennæ columbæ deargentatæ, & posteriora dorsi ejus in pallore auri. In Palestine the greatest part of their Pigeons were white. Their Plumage is compar'd to Silver, because of its Likeness, and to Gold for its pale or green Colour. For the Hebrew, instead of pallor auri, reads viriditas auri. Prophane Authors give the Epithets of pale and green to this Metal. Inauratâ pallidior statuâ, says Catullus. And Miratus Scythicas virentis auri flammas Jupiter, says Martial. Mart. l. 12. Ep. 15.

The Prophets frequently compare the People to Flights of Pigeons. Isaiah compares the Jews to Pigeons, or to Doves murmuring under their Disgraces. Quasi columbæ meditantes. Isai. lix. 11. xxxviii. 14. He makes use of the same Word meditating, to express the murmuring Noise of the Dove, in the Canticle of Hezekiah. Nahum says, that the Women of Nineveh are carried away captive, and murmur like Stock-Doves. Nahum ii. 7. Minantur gementes ut Columbæ, murmurantes in cordibus suis. See Jerem. xlviii. 28. Ezek. vii. 16. Hos. ix. 11, &c. We see in the same Prophets, that the Pigeons often made their Nests in the Clefts of Rocks. Columba mea in foraminibus petræ. Cant. ii. 14. And, Jerem. xlviii. 28. Estote quasi columba nidificans in summo ore foraminis.

In Egypt, in Arabia, in Syria, and in Mogul, they make use of Pigeons for conveying of Letters, when they have Occasion for extraordinary Expedition. They fasten the Letter under the Wing of the Bird, and letting her go, she flies with great Rapidity to the Place where she is to go. 'Tis said, that in Holland they have made Use of this Contrivance at some Sieges. This has some Relation to what was done by Noah, when he let the Dove go out of the Ark. The Prophet asks from God the Wings of a Dove. Psal. lv. 2. Hosea says, that the People of the Lord shall fly out of Egypt like a Bird, and out of Assyria like a Dove. Hos. xi. 11. This may very well express that Eagerness of Pigeons brought up to carry Letters, to return to the Place of their ordinary Habitation, and to their own Nest.

PI-HAHIROTH. The Hebrews departing from Succoth, came to Etham. [b] Then the Lord said to Moses, Speak unto the Children of Israel, that they turn and encamp before Pi-hahiroth, between Migdol and the Sea, over against Baal-zephon, before it shall ye encamp by the Sea. The Word Pi-hahiroth may be explain'd by The Pass of Hiroth, or The Mouth of Hiroth. Moses in the Book of Numbers, calls it simply Hiroth, [c] and Eusebius, as also St. Jerome, in his Book of Hebrew Places, calls it in the same manner. Others translate it, Over-against the Ditches. The Ita Syr. Seventy in Exodus xiv. 2. translate, Over against the Village; others, over-against the Pass of Liberty, or the Pass of Drought. Rab. Salom. Fag. We think Hiroth to be the same as the City Heroum, or Heroopolis, situated at the Extremity or the Point of the Red Sea, or Strab. Plin. alii. else the City of Phagroriopolis, placed by Strabo

[a] Chrysost. Homil. 43. in Matth. p. 932. f.

[b] Exod. xiii. 20. xiv. 2. פי החירות 70. 'Απέναντι τῆς ἐπαύλεως. E regione suburbii. As if they had read עירות instead of חירות.

[c] Numb. xxxiii. 8. מפני החירות 70. 'Απέναντι Εἰρώθ.

Strab.l.17. Strabo about the same Place, and the Capital of the Canton of Phagroriopolitis. There is great Probability that Pi-hahiroth stands for the Pass which was near Heroum. 'Twas beyond this Pass that the Hebrews went to encamp upon the Red Sea.

PILA, a City of Palestine. Ululate habitatores Pilæ. In the Hebrew 'tis habitatores Machtes, or Inhabitants of Maktesh, of the Jaw-tooth, or of the Mortar. Maktesh is put for a Jaw-bone in the History of Samson, where it is said, that this Hero drank Water that God caus'd to come forth from a Jaw-bone, or from a Rock that had some Resemblance to it. The Place where this happened preserved the Name of Lechi or of Maktesh; and it is very probable, that it is to this Place that Zephaniah addresses these Words, Howl, ye Inhabitants of Maktesh. Ye Philistines or Inhabitants of Maktesh, your Destruction is at Hand. See what we have already said upon the Article of LECHI.

(Zeph.i.11. מכתש Machtes. Judg. xv. 14.)

Sanct. Tir. Riber. &c. Other Interpreters think, that Maktesh in this Place of Zephaniah, stands for the City of Jerusalem, which in a figurative Sense is call'd The Mortar, in which those were to be bray'd and beaten to Powder, that should be found in it, when it was taken by Nebuchadnezzar.

Hieron. in Sophron. St. Jerome seems to think, that Maktesh was a certain Quarter of the City Jerusalem, near the Fountain Siloam. This Place might be called the Mortar, because of its Depth. The Rabbi Solomon explains it of Tiberias, because it was situated in the deepest Valley of the Country. The Chaldee understands it of the Valley of Kidron.

PILATE, or Pontius Pilate. It is not known what Family or Country he was of, but it is believed he was of Rome, or at least of [a] Italy. He was sent to govern Judea in the Room of Gratus, in the Year 26 or 27 of the vulgar Era. He govern'd this Province for ten Years, from the twelfth or thirteenth Year of Tiberius, to the twenty-second or twenty-third Year of the same Emperor. Pilate was a Man of an impetuous and obstinate Temper, who disturb'd the Repose of Judea, and gave occasion to the Troubles and Revolt that follow'd after. Having sent his Troops from Cesarea to Jerusalem, in order to pass the Winter in this City, he caus'd at the same time his Ensigns to be carry'd, on which were the Images of the Emperor; whereas the other Governors did not use to let their Ensigns enter into the City, because they would not exasperate the Jews, who thought that all Images and Representations were contrary to their Religion. Wherefore Pilate caus'd them to be brought in cover'd, and only by Night. But the Day following the Matter being discover'd, the Jews from the Country ran into the City, and afterwards went in great Numbers to Cesarea, to entreat Pilate to take away those Images. Pilate refused it, and the People continued five Days and five Nights making Supplication to him, without any Intermission.

At last on the sixth Day, Pilate having caus'd a Tribunal to be set up in an open Place of Cesarea, sent for the Jews as if he intended to give them an Answer. But he posted Soldiers round the Place, who inclosed them in when they were assembled, and threatned to massacre them every one, if they did not retire. Then the Jews threw themselves on their Faces, and presented their Necks to the Soldiers, as being ready to receive the Blow. Pilate was astonished at their Intrepidity, and presently caus'd his Images to be brought back to Cesarea.

Philo [b] relates another History that happen'd under Pilate, which has some Relation to the foregoing. He bethought himself of consecrating golden Bucklers to Tiberius, in the Palace of Herod. These Bucklers were without Figures or Images, and had only an Inscription, importing, that they were consecrated to the Emperor. But this, however, alarm'd the Jews, who were jealous for their Religion. The Magistrates of Jerusalem, with the four Sons of Herod at their Head, and follow'd by all the People, came to Pilate, desiring him not to suffer a thing so contrary to their Law. But Pilate with his usual Obstinacy was inflexible to their Intreaties. They persisted, and conjured him not to put them under a Necessity of sending a Deputation to the Emperor, to cause this Order to be revoked. Pilate was greatly afraid of this Deputation, apprehending the Jews would then make known his Insolence, Cruelty, Rapines, and Outrages to the Emperor. They contented themselves with writing to the Emperor, and Tiberius writ back the same Day to Pilate, telling him that he was very much dissatisfied with his Undertaking, and ordered him immediately to remove those Bucklers from Jerusalem.

St. Luke [c] acquaints us, that Pilate had mingled the Blood of some Galileans with their Sacrifices, and that the Matter having been related to Jesus Christ, he said, Think you that these Galileans were greater Sinners than other Galileans, because they suffer'd this Calamity? No, I assure you. And if you do not repent, you shall all perish in like manner. 'Tis unknown upon what Occasion Pilate caus'd these Galileans to be be slain in the Temple, while they were Sacrificing; for this is the Meaning of that Expression, of mingling their Blood with their Sacrifices. [See Theophylact. Euthym. Grot. Brug. &c.] Some think they were Disciples of Judas the Gaulonite, who taught, that the Jews ought not to pay Tribute to foreign Princes; and that Pilate had put some of them to death, even in the Temple; but there is no Proof of this Fact. [Maldon. Bez.] Others think, that these Galileans were Samaritans, whom Pilate cut to Pieces in the Village of Tirataba, [Joseph. Antiq. l. 18. c. 5.] as they were preparing to go up to Mount Gerizim, where a certain Impostor had promised to discover Treasures to them. But this Event did not happen before the Year 35 of the common Era, and consequently two Years after the Death of Jesus Christ.

At the Time of our Saviour's Passion, Pilate made some Endeavours to deliver him out of the Hands of the Jews. He knew they had deliver'd him up, and pursued his Life with so much Violence, only out of Malice and Envy. [Matt. xxvii. 18.] His Wife also, who [a] had been disturbed the Night before with frightful Dreams, sent to tell him she desired him not to meddle in the Affair of that just Person. [Mat. xxvii. 19.] He attempted to appease the Wrath of the Jews, and to give them some Satisfaction, by whipping Jesus Christ. [John xix. 1. Matth. xxvii. 26.] He try'd to take him out of their Hands, by proposing to deliver him or Barabbas, on the Day of the Festival of the Passover. [b] Lastly, he had a Mind to discharge himself from pronouncing Judgment against him, by sending him to Herod King of Galilee. [John xxiii. 7, 8.] When he saw all this would not satisfy the Jews, and that they even threaten'd him in some manner, saying he could be no Friend to the Emperor, if he let him go; [John xix. 12, 15.] he caus'd Water to be brought before all the People, washed his Hands, and publickly declared himself innocent of the Blood of that just Person. [Mat. xxvii. 23, 24.] Yet at the same time he delivered him up to his Soldiers, that they might crucify him. This was enough to justify Jesus Christ, and to shew that he held him as innocent; but it was not enough to vindicate the Conscience and Integrity of a Judge, whose Duty it was, as well to assert the Cause of oppressed Innocence, as to punish the Guilty and Criminal.

He order'd to be put over our Saviour's Cross, as it were, an Abstract of his Sentence, and the Motive of his Condemnation, Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews; [John xix. 19.] which was written in Latin, Greek, and Hebrew. Some of the Jews murmur'd at it, and remonstrated to Pilate, that he ought to have written, Jesus of Nazareth, who pretended to be King of the Jews. But Pilate could not be prevailed with to alter it, and gave 'em this peremptory Answer, That what he had written, he had written. Towards Evening he was apply'd to for Leave to take down the Bodies from the Cross, that they might not continue there the following Day, which was the Passover and the Sabbath-day. This he allowed, [John xix. 31.] and also granted the Body of Jesus to Joseph of Arimathea; that he might pay his last Duties to it. Lastly, when the Priests, who had solicited the Death of our Saviour, [John xix. 33.] came to desire him to set a Watch about the Sepulchre, for fear his Disciples should steal him away by Night; he answer'd them, that they had a Guard, and might place them there themselves. [Mat. xxvii. 65.] And this is the Substance of what the Gospel tells us concerning Pilate.

Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Eusebius, and after them several others both antient and modern, [Just. Apol. 2. Tert. Apol. c. 5. 21. Euseb. hist. Eccl. l. 2. c. 2.] assure us, that it was formerly the Custom for Roman Magistrates, to prepare Copies of all verbal Processes and judicial Acts, which they pass'd in their several Provinces, and to send them to the Emperor. And Pilate in compliance to this Custom, having sent Word to Tiberius of what had passed relating to Jesus Christ, the Emperor writ an Account of it to the Senate, in a Manner that gave Reason to judge, that he thought favourably of the Religion of Jesus Christ, and shew'd that he should be willing they would decree divine Honours to him. But the Senate was not of the same Opinion, and so the Matter was dropp'd. It appears by what Justin says of these Acts, that the Miracles of Jesus Christ were mentioned there, and even that the Soldiers had divided his Garments among them. Eusebius insinuates, that they spoke of his Resurrection and Ascension. Tertullian and Justin refer to these Acts with so much Confidence, as would make one believe they had had them in their Hands.

However, neither Eusebius nor St. Jerome, who were both inquisitive and understanding Persons, nor any other Author that writ afterwards, seem to have seen them, at least not the true and original Acts. For as to what we have now in great Number, they are not authentick, being neither antient nor uniform. The Pagans forged false Acts of the Passion of Jesus Christ, about the Beginning of the fourth Age. [Vid. Euseb. l. 9. c. 5. p. 350.] They were little favourable to us without doubt, and were very different from those that Justin and Tertullian had cited in the second Age. The Quartodecimans had also the Acts of Pilate, by which they justified themselves in their Error. [Epiphan. hæres. 50. c. 1. p. 420.] They were, however, different from those now mentioned, it not being to be supposed that Christians would have Recourse to a Work contrived by the Pagans; and they varied varied from each other, the one asserting that Jesus Christ suffer'd the Eighteenth, and the other the Twenty-fifth of March. Lastly, these Acts are not allowed as authentick by those that have spoke of them, as St. Epiphanius.

[b] Matthew xxvii. 16, 17, 20, 21, 26. John xviii. 39, 40.

Greg. Tur. l. 1. hist. Fran. c. 21.

Gregory of Tours thought he had got the real Acts of Pilate; but the Fragment he cites from it plainly proves, that it was probably the false Gospel of Nicodemus, which has been suppress'd more than once, and wherein is to be found the Substance of what is related by Gregory of Tours, which is, that the Priests having laid hold on Nicodemus, shut him up in a Chamber, and there kept him themselves; but that he was miraculously delivered, the Walls of the Prison being taken up into the Air by help of Angels, and being afterwards restor'd to their former Condition. And when the Chief Priests required of the Soldiers to produce the Body of Jesus Christ, which had been committed to their Charge; they answer'd, Do you yourselves produce Nicodemus, whom you had shut up; for to speak the Truth, neither can you render Nicodemus, who was a Benefactor of God, nor can we render Jesus, who was the Son of God. At these Words the Priests in great Confusion sent away the Soldiers. This Sketch of the Gospel of Nicodemus, and the whole Work itself, are what we cannot by any means obtrude as authentick Pieces. [a]

Vid. Evan. Nicod. c. 13. & 15.

We have, besides, a Letter of Pilate to Tiberius, in the Recapitulation of the false Hegesippus, and in a Writing ascrib'd to Marcellus the Disciple of St. Peter. [b] It may be seen printed in the Chronicon of Martinus Polonus, in Sixtus Senensis, and in several others, though with some Variations. 'Tis thus translated from the Latin: "Pontius Pilate to [c] Claudius wisheth "Health. By the Envy of the Jews a "thing has lately happen'd here, of which "I my self was a Witness, which will "involve them and their Children in a "dreadful Punishment. For their Fathers "having had Assurances from God, that "he would send them his Saint from "Heaven, to be their real King, and who "was to be born of a Virgin; God did "really accomplish this Promise to them, "while I was Governor of Judea. And "the Jews having seen, that he restored "Sight to the Blind, and Health to the "Paralytick; that he cleansed the Lepers, "drove out Devils from those that were "possess'd, raised the Dead, had Command over the Winds, walked dry upon "the Sea, and did many other Miracles; "while the whole Multitude look'd upon "him as the Son of God, the chief of the "Jews conceived an extream Envy and "and Jealousy against him. They seized "him, deliver'd him up to me, and form'd "many false Accusations against him, saying he was a Magician, and a Transgressor of their Law. As to my self, thinking what they said of him to be true, I "caus'd him to be whipp'd, and then "deliver'd him up to their Will. They "crucify'd him, and set a Watch at his Sepulchre. But the third Day he rose again, "while my Soldiers guarded his Tomb. The "Malice of the Jews was such, that they "gave Money to the Soldiers, and bid "them say that his Disciples took away "his Body. But when the Soldiers had "received the Money, they could not "forbear from owning the Truth. They "declared that Jesus Christ was risen, and "that the Jews had given them Money "not to speak of it. Of this I thought "proper to give you Notice, that Credit "may not be given to the Lyes of the "Jews.

Sixt. Sen. l. 2. Bibl.

There is yet another pretended Letter of Pilate to Tiberius, in Florentinius, p. 113, and another in the History of Jesus Christ, written in Persian by Jerome Xavier. The Bollandists on the fourth of February, p. 450, have given a spurious History of our Saviour, sent to Tiberius by Pilate. Lastly, M. Fabricius has given one in Greek, which is taken from a Manuscript of M. Colbert's, mark'd 2493. And M. Cottelier quotes another, which is also in Greek in the King's Library, N°. 2431, which are not better than those we have already mention'd. I say nothing of the pretended Letter of Lentulus, who, they say, govern'd Judea immediately before Pilate, and which gives an Account to the Senate of the Person and Miracles of Jesus Christ. He gives Testimony to his Miracles, and describes him as a Man of a comely Stature, a majestick Air, temper'd with Severity and Sweetness, which at the same time makes him both beloved and respected; having long flaxen Hair, lank from the Root to the Ears, and then curled from the Ears to the Shoulders; a large Beard, parted like his Hair. His Visage fair, enliven'd with a little Red; his Eyes Blue, &c. This Letter has been several times printed, but it is generally agreed to have no better Authority than the Acts of Pilate before mentioned.

[d] About the Year 34 of the vulgar Era. Joseph. Antiq. l. 18. c. 4.

To perform this Design, Pilate took the Money out of the Sacred Treasury. The People made an Uproar, and gathered together to the Number of several Thousands, making Outcries against the Governor. There were some so violent, as even to speak injurious Words against him. Pilate coming into the City, caused many of his Soldiers to disguise themselves, and mix themselves with the Multitude; and having call'd them together, as soon as they began to cry and speak insolently, he made a Sign to the Soldiers, who falling on, struck indifferently all about them, without distinguishing the Innocent from the Guilty. By this violent Means he appeas'd the Sedition.

After this Story, Josephus relates what we have mentioned before, concerning the Samaritans, who being seduced by an Impostor that promised to discover many precious Vessels, which he said had been hid by Moses in Mount Gerizim, assembled together in great Numbers. They had armed themselves, and made a Stop at the Village of Tirataba, that they might ascend Mount Gerizim all together. But Pilate having before taken Possession of the Height of the Mountain with his Horse and Foot, set upon them at Tirataba, defeated them, and slew a great Number of them, put the rest to Flight, and put to Death the Chief of those that fell into his Hands. Then the Samaritans went with their Complaints to Vitellius Governor of Syria, maintaining that the Conflux of People at Tirataba was with no Intention to revolt, but only to secure themselves from the Severity of Pilate. Upon which Vitellius sent Marcellus, one of his Friends, into Judea, to take the Care of this Province, and at the same time order'd Pilate to repair to Rome, and give an Account of his Conduct to the Emperor Tiberius. Thus Pilate quitted the Government of Judea in the 36th Year of Jesus Christ, or of the vulgar Era, and in the 23d Year of Tiberius. This Emperor was dead before Pilate arrived at Rome.

We know not the Particulars of what happen'd to this Governor, but it is received as an antient Tradition, that he was banished to Vienne in Dauphine, where he was reduced to such Extremity, that in Despair he kill'd himself with his own Sword. Eusebius quotes this Fact as extracted from Authors, who had digested (as he says) the Roman History by Olympiads. He seems to intimate Phlegon, the Freed-man of Adrian. They shew a Lake above Lucern in Switzerland, called the Lake of Pilate, wherein they affirm this Governor threw himself, being pursued in his Flight from the Place of his Exile. The People add, That upon a certain Day of the Year, they see an Apparition in the Habit of a Judge, which presently disappears, by plunging itself into the Lake. The People of Lucern are persuaded, that if the Water of this Lake is disturb'd, or if any thing be cast into it, a Storm would be immediately raised in the Country. Wherefore they take great Care to warn the Travellers that go to see it, not to throw any thing in that may trouble the Water. But those that have given us a Description of it, and have examined it with some Care, make themselves Mirth with these popular Opinions. See Gesner in the Description he has made of it, and Hofman's Dictionary in the Article PONTIUS PILATE.

Ado Chro. Ætat. 7.

Euseb. l. 2. c. 7. Vid. Oros. l. 7. c. 5.

M. Simon, in his Dictionary of the Bible, has gather'd together seven or eight pretended Sentences of Pilate against Jesus Christ, or rather the Sentence of this unrighteous Judge, model'd after eight different manners by modern Authors. As Anselmus in his Book of the Passion, Vincent Ferriere, Lansperg, William of Paris, the Gospel of Nicodemus, John of Carthagena, Sempronianus, Adrichomius. But we shall be easily forgiven, if we omit these, as things of no Authority. The Gospel does not say so much as that Pilate pronounced any Sentence, but only that he gave him up to the Will of the Jews, who demanded with loud Cries, that he should be crucified. And it was in effect to pronounce a Sentence against him, to consent to what they demanded, and to suffer them to execute that Sentence they had already pronounced against him themselves.

Mat. xxviii. 26. Mark xv. 15. Luk. xxiii. 24. John xix. 16.

This Governor is described, by Philo the Jew, as a Judge that us'd to sell Justice, and, for Money, pronounced any Sentence that was desired: He mentions his Rapins, his Injuries, his Murders, the Torments he inflicted upon the Innocent, and the Persons he put to Death without any Form of Process. Lastly, He describes him as a Man that exercised an excessive Cruelty during all the Time of his Government.

Philo de Legatione ad Caium.

As to the Letter of Pilate to Tiberius, it was formerly read in the Churches of France; and I have found it in the ancient Manuscript of Luxueil, from whence F. Mabillon has taken what he has printed of the Cursus Gallicanus.

The popular Tradition of Vienne in Dauphine, is, That Pilate was banished to this City, which was the Place of his Nativity: Even to this Day, they call an ancient Edifice, which has the Form of a Temple, and which is call'd Notre Dame de la Vie, by the Name of Pilate's Pretorium. Upon this Tradition, the Magistrates had caused to be inscribed upon the Front of this Edifice, This is the Head of Pilate's Sceptre. Mr. Chorier, in his Antiquities of Vienne, has confuted these Suggestions;

he thinks that the Memory of a certain Italian call'd Humbert Pilati, has given Occasion to the People to call a Tower which is at Vienne, near the Rhone, the Tower of Pilate; and a Country-house near St. Vallier, the House of Pilate, &c.

PILDASH, or Pheldas, Son of Nahor and Milcah. Gen. xxii. 22.

PILEHA, or Phalea, one of the Chief-Priests, that sign'd the Covenant which Nehemiah renew'd with the Lord. Nehem. x. 24.

Exod. xiii. 21. Ibid. Judith xx. 40. PILLAR: A Pillar of Clouds, a Pillar of Fire, a Pillar of Smoke, signify a Cloud, a Fire, a Smoke, which are raised up towards Heaven in the Form of an irregular Pillar. The Pillars of Heaven, Job xxvi. 11. and the Pillars of the Earth, Job ix. 6. Psal. lxxiv. 4. are metaphorical Expressions, that suppose the Heavens and the Earth to be as an Edifice, raised by the Hand of God, and founded upon its Basis or Foundation. This appears from Job, ch. xxxviii. 4, 5, 6. those Words of Job; Where wast thou when I laid the Foundations of the Earth? Declare, if thou hast Understanding. Who hath laid the Measures thereof, if thou knowest? or who hath stretched the Line upon it? Whereupon are the Foundations thereof fastened, or who laid the Corner-stone thereof? The Antients imagined the Earth to lie upon a Flat, and that the Heavens rested upon its Extremities.

The Pillars of the Church, James, Cephas, Gal. ii. 9. and John. And when James, Cephas and John, who seemed to be Pillars, perceived the Grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right Hands of Fellowship. And in the Revelations; Rev. iii. 12. Him that overcometh, will I make a Pillar in the Temple of my God. He shall be the Support, the Strength, and the Ornament of the House of God. The Church of Jesus Christ, is call'd, by St. Paul, the 1 Tim. 3. 15. Pillar and Ground of the Truth. When the Lord sent Jeremiah to preach to the Jer. i. 18. Nations, he says to him, Behold, I have made thee this day a defenced City, and an Iron Pillar, and Brazen Walls against the whole Land; able to withstand all the Efforts of thy Enemies, and incapable to yield to their Violence.

PINE, Pinus, a Tree sufficiently known, and of the Nature of the Fir-tree. Isaiah says, a That Man has planted a Pine, of which he has made an Idol. The Hebrew Word Oren, by the Septuagint and St. Jerom is translated by a Pine. Others interpret it by an Elm *. In another Place of the same Prophet, b we find also Pine in the Vulgate: But the Hebrew has Tasbur, which the Septuagint renders the Cedar; other Interpreters, the Elm †. Lastly, In the Chronicles, c mention is made of the Wood of the Pine: But the Hebrew reads Algumim ‖; which, probably signifies in general, Trees that are fat and resinous, or those Trees that produce Gum. In the First Book of Kings, chap. x. 11. in the Hebrew is read Almugim, instead of Algumim. The Rabbins explain it by Coral; others, by Ebony; and others, by Brasil. True it is, we know but little of the Nature of the greatest Part of the Trees and Vegetables mention'd in the Hebrew Text. See J. H. Ursin. Arboretum Biblicum.

PINNACLE of the Temple. When the Devil had tempted Jesus in the Desart, Then the Devil taketh him up into the holy Matth. iv. 5, 6. City, and setteth him on a Pinnacle of the Temple; and saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thy self down; for it is written, He shall give his Angels Charge concerning thee, &c. This Pinnacle whereon Jesus Christ was set, was, probably, no other than that Gallery, or Parapet, or Wall on the Top of the Buttresses, which surrounded the Roof of the Temple, properly so call'd. For it is well known, that in Palestine the Roofs were cover'd with Terrasses, or Plat-forms; round about which they made a low Wall, to hinder any one from falling down. The Law itself had appointed this, Deut. xxii. 8. Josephus tells us, That the Joseph. Antiq. l. 6. c. 6. in Lat. Roof of the Temple was defended with pretty tall Golden Spikes, to hinder Birds from lighting thereon, that they might not defile it with their Dung. It was not therefore upon the Roof of the Temple, that Jesus Christ was placed, but upon the Wall that surrounded the Roof.

PIRAM, or Pharam, King of Jarmuth, who came to the Assistance of Adonizedek King of Jerusalem, and was overcome by Joshua, who slew him, and hang'd him up, after his Death. See Josh. x. 3, 24, 25, 26.

PIRATHON, or Pharaton, a City of the Tribe of Ephraim, in the Mountain of Amalek. Abdon, Judge of Israel, was of this City, and was buried there. Bac- Judg. xii. 15. chides caus'd this City to be fortify'd. Jos. Antiq. l. 13. c. 1. It is call'd Pharathoni, in 1 Mac. ix. 50.

PISCINA PROBATICA, a Pool where they wash'd the Sheep that were to be sacrificed in the Temple. Probatica comes from the Greek Word Probaton, a Sheep. See what has been said before, on the Article BETHSAIDA, or BETHESDA.

PISGAH, or Phasga, a Mountain beyond Jordan, in the Country of Moab. The Mountains Nebo, Pisgah, and Abarim make but one Chain of Mountains, near Mount Peor, over-against Jericho, upon the Road from Li[illegible] to Esbus, or He[illegible]bon. See PISIDIA, a Province of Asia Minor, having Lycaonia to the North, Pamphilia to the South, Cilicia and Cappadocia to the East, and the Province of Asia to the West. St. Paul preached at Antioch of Pisidia. Acts xiii. 14. and xiv. 23.

PISON, or Phison, one of the four great Rivers that watered the Terrestrial Paradise. We take it to be the Phasis, a famous River of Cholchis. Moses says, that it runs through all the Land of Havilah, and that excellent Gold is found there. (Gen. ii. 11, 12.) This River has its Source in the Mountains of Armenia, and discharges itself into the Euxine Sea. At its Mouth it is above half a League wide, and in depth above sixty Fathoms. There is hardly any River in the World that makes more Turnings and Windings, because of the Mountains it finds in its Way; from whence it came to pass that in the Time of Pliny, (Plin. l. 6. c. 4.) there were an hundred and twenty Bridges over this River: And this is, perhaps, what Moses hinted at, when he says, that Pison compasseth the whole Land of Havilah, which Land we take to be Cholchis. The Gold of this Country is much celebrated. All Antiquity extols the Riches of Cholchis. Strabo observes, (Strab. l. xi.) That the Rivers and Brooks of this Country, (or of the neighbouring Countries, for we cannot tell how far its ancient Limits might extend) carried Lumps of Gold along with their Waters, which the Inhabitants gathered upon Sheep-skins with their Wool on, or in Wooden Trays with Holes bored in them. We think the Gold of Phaz, Uphaz, or Ophaz, sometimes mentioned in Scripture, (Cant. v. 11. Jer. x. 9. Dan. x. 5.) is the same with that of Pison, or of Phasis. See our Commentary on Genesis, chap. ii. 11, 12. Many think the Pison to be the Ganges: But this River is too far from the Euphrates and the Tigris, which, Moses tells us, ran through the Earthly Paradise, as well as the Pison and the Gihon.

PISTICA NARDUS, true Spikenard; pure, and not adulterated. 'Tis probable, that the true Reading is Spicata nardus, Spike-nard. See SPIKENARD, and the Commentary on St. John. chap. xii. 3.

PITCH. See BITUMEN.

PITHOM, or Phithom, one of the Cities that the Children of Israel built for Pharaoh in Egypt, (Exod. i. 11.) during the Time of their Servitude. This is, probably, the same City as Pathumos mention'd by Herodotus, (Herodot. l. 2.) which he places upon the Canal made by the Kings Necho and Darius, to join the Red-Sea with the Nile, and by that Means with the Mediterranean. We find also, in the ancient Geographers, (Strab. Ptolem. Plin. &c.) that there was an Arm of the Nile, call'd Pathmeticus, Phatmicus, Phatnicus, or Phamiticus. (Descript. Ter. Sanct.) Bochart says, That Pithom and Ramesses are about five Leagues above the Division of the Nile, and beyond this River: But this Assertion has no Proof from Antiquity. This Author contents himself with relating what was said of Egypt in his own Time. Marsham will have Pithom to be the same as Pelusium, or Damietta.

PITY. See MERCY.

PLAGA: This Word is taken sometimes for a Coast, or a certain Point of the Compass. Plaga orientalis, the Eastern Coast: Ad australem plagam Cerethi, to the South of the Cerethites, or Philistines: Plaga maris, the Coast of the Mediterranean Sea, that is to the West: Amos iii. 12. In Samaria, in plaga lectuli, & in Damasci grabato; Those that dwell in Samaria, in the Corner of the Bed, and in the Couch of Damascus. The Israelites flatter themselves with a long Peace, and Rest in Quiet upon their own Beds, and upon the Bed of Damascus, under the happy Reign of Jeroboam II. and in Alliance with the Kings of Damascus. But the Lord shall soon rouse them, and break their Rest.

Plaga, in the Sense of a Blow, or Stroke, signifies Wounding, Chastisement, Plagues sent by God, or Misfortunes proceeding from Men. For Example; God smote Pharaoh with great Evils, great Troubles. Flagellavit Dominus Pharaonem plagis maximis. (Gen. xii. 17.) The Leprosy, is call'd Plaga lepræ, the Correction of the Leprosy; (Levit. xiii. 2, 3, 9, &c.) because it was consider'd as a Blow from the Hand of God. The Leprosy of Buildings, is call'd Plaga lepræ, as well as that of Men. The Lord sent the Plague, or Mortality, amongst the Israelites, after the Eating of Meat: Et percussit eos plagâ magnâ nimis. (Judg. xi. 33. & xv. 8. 1 Mac. v. 3.) The Punishment with which God smote the Philistines, by sending against them a Multitude of Rats, is call'd a Plague.

God tells David, That if his Son, who is to succeed him in the Kingdom, (2 Sam. vii. 14.) shall fall into the Commission of any Faults, he should be punished with the Plague, with which he punishes the Children of Men: Arguam eum in virga virorum, & in plagis filiorum hominum; I will not destroy him, but I will treat him as a Father treats his Children, and as I am used to punish the Children of Men. The Wound or Sore of the Heart, plaga cordis, (1 Kings viii. 38.) means Sin, secret Iniquity, the Wounds of the Soul. Siquis cognoverit plagam cordis sui, &c. Plaga cæcitatis, Blindness; (Tob. ii. 13.) Plagâ inimici percussi te; I smote you, as an Enemy; (Jer. xxx. 12.) I have given you a mortal Wound. God struck Antiochus, insanabili & invisibili plagâ, (2 Mac. ix. 5.) with a Distemper that was incurable, invisible, internal, and secret. The Hemorrhoidal Woman, in the Gospel, (Marc. v. 29.) was cured of her Plague, plagâ suâ, sus, of her Disease, by touching the Hem of the Garment of Jesus Christ.

1 Tim. i. 10. Ἀνδραποδισταῖς. In the English, Men-stealers.

PLAGIARY. St. Paul, writing to Timothy, places Plagiaries among the greatest Miscreants. The Word Plagiary, in this Passage, signifies one that steals away a Free-born Person, to sell him for a Slave. Also the Name of Plagiary was given to those who bought or detain'd a Free-man as a Slave. Thus was Joseph sold by his Brethren, who therefore became Plagiaries. 'Tis the greatest Injury and Insult that can be committed against a Man, thus to rob him of his Liberty. The Word Plagiary has also been extended to such, as appropriate to themselves the Works or Writings of another, who copy them, and give them out as their own.

PLAGUES of Egypt. We have already spoke of these under the Article of MOSES. The Hebrews call by the Name of Plagues, all Diseases sent by way of Punishment and Correction from God; as the Pestilence, Infection, the Leprosy, sudden Death, Famine, Tempests; in a Word, all Calamities whether publick or private.

PLAIN. In Palestine we find two large Vales, known to Historians and Geographers by the Name of Plains. One is extended along the Jordan from Tiberias to Segor or Seor, about the Length of Twelve hundred Furlongs, and the Breadth One hundred and twenty Furlongs. The other is call'd the Plain or the Field of Esdraelon or Legio, because of these Cities standing in it; or the Valley of Jezreel, because of the City of Jezreel. It reaches from East to West, from Scythopolis standing upon the Jordan, to Legion at the Foot of Carmel, the Length of about five and twenty Leagues. Eusebius and St. Jerom give still a larger Extent to the great Plain that lies upon the Jordan; because, they say, it begins from Libanus, and reaches to the Wilderness of Paran. The Valley or Plain of Jericho was in this great Plain, and made a Part of it, as may be seen from Eusebius. These great Plains are sometimes call'd, the Plains of Aulon, or Aulos, or Araba.

Eusebius in Ἐγγαδί.

PLANET: The Word Planet is not to be found in Scripture; and we cannot say whether the ancient Hebrews distinguish'd the Planets Venus, Jupiter, Mercury, Saturn, and Mars, from the Fixed Stars. Excepting the Sun and Moon, they placed all the other Celestial and Luminous Bodies in the Rank of Stars. See STARS.

PLANE-TREE, Platanus. The Hebrew Word Harmon, which the Septuagint and St. Jerom translate by a Plane-tree, in Genesis; by modern Interpreters, who generally follow the Rabbins, is render'd by a Chesnut-tree. In Ezekiel, the Septuagint translate it by a Fir-tree. So true it is, that we have but little Certainty, concerning the Signification of the Names of Trees, in the Hebrew Text. The Reader may consult J. H. Ursin's Arboretum Biblicum.

PLATANE, a Village of the Sidonians, near the City of Berytus, where Herod left his two Sons while their Cause was deciding. Joseph. Ant. l. 16. c. ult. p. 578. a.

PLAY, to Play. The Hebrews use the Word to Play, to express all Kinds of Diversions, as Dancing, Sports of Exercise, Toying, and Amusements proper for Recreating the Mind, and to give Pleasure to it. The Hebrew Word Zachak, which signifies to Play, is also commonly us'd for Laughing, Mocking, Jeering, Insulting. When Sarah saw Ishmael play with her Son Isaac, she was offended at it: It was a Play of Mockery or Insult, or, perhaps, of Squabbling, as in the Second Book of Samuel. Surgant pueri & ludant coram nobis; Let the young People, or Soldiers, get up, and play before us; Let them Fight, as it were, by way of Play. But the Event shews, that they fought in good Earnest, since they were all kill'd.

2 Sam. ii. 14.

We see another Kind of Play in Exodus: When the Israelites had set up the Golden Calf, they began to dance about it, and to divert themselves: The People sate down to eat and drink, and rose up to play. When Samson was deliver'd up by Dalilah into the Hands of the Philistines, they bored out his Eyes, put him into Prison, and some time after made him come into their Presence, to divert them by the Tricks they play'd him, and by the Motions he was forced to make, to avoid them, and to skreen himself from their Insults: Præceperunt ut vocarent Samson, & ante eos luderet; qui adductus de carcere, ludebat coram iis.

Exodus xxxii. 6.

Judg. xvi. 25.

The Women that came out to meet David and Saul, when they returned victorious from the Slaughter of Goliah, danced and play'd upon Instruments, and shew'd their Mirth after a thousand manners: Egressæ sunt mulieres cantantes chorosque ducentes —— in tympanis lætitiæ & sistris, & præcinebant ludentes, &c. In the Procession that was made, when the Ark was removed from the House of Obed-edom to the Palace of King David, he danced with great Alacrity, play'd upon Instruments, and testify'd his Joy before the Lord: David autem & omnis Israel ludebant coram Domino. And when Michal upbraided him, for not observing that Gravity and Decency that was suitable to his Rank, he answer'd; Et ludam, & vilior fiam; I will play, and be still more vile in my own Eyes.

Sarah the Daughter of Raguel, opening her whole Heart before the Lord, said to him; I have never associated my self with those that play: Nunquam cum ludentibus miscui me. And Jeremiah: Non [illegible]

Tob. iii. 17.

Jer. xv. 17.

concilio ludentium; I have never haunted the Assemblies of those that are given to Play and Diversion. And the same Prophet, speaking to the Daughter of Sion, tells her, That the Time shall come, in which she shall be rebuilt, and that she shall divert herself again in Dancing with her Equals: Adhuc ornaberis tympanis tuis, & egredieris in choro ludentium. (Jer. xxxi. 4.) Solomon represents Wisdom, as playing before the Lord, and takes her Pleasure in living among Men; Ludens coram eo omni tempore, ludens in orbe terrarum. (Prov. viii. 30, 31.) Baruk seems to point at the Diversion of Fowling, by the Name of Play; Where are the Princes of the Nations, who domineer over the Beasts of the Earth, and play with the Fowls of the Air? Qui in avibus cœli ludunt. (Baruk iii. 17.)

I cannot perceive, in Scripture, any particular Sorts of Plays; neither Games of Hazard, nor Plays or Theatrical Representations, nor Races either of Horses or Chariots, nor Combats of Men or Beasts. Solomon speaks of nothing like this; tho' he frankly owns, that he had indulged himself in all Kinds of Pleasure: He mentions only fine Buildings, Gardens, Vineyards, Orchards, Fish-ponds, good Eating and Drinking, heaping up Gold and Silver, Singing-men and Singing-women, &c. In their Descriptions of Prosperity and profound Peace, they speak neither of Games, or Shows, but only of well-cultivated and fruitful Fields, wherein every one may enjoy his Repose under his own Vine, and his own Fig-tree, partaking of the Fruits of his Labours in Security; where the old Men, sitting in publick Places, may deliberate about their Affairs in common, and where the young People may cloath themselves in glorious Apparel, and in Ornaments proper for going to War. The Israelites were a laborious and warlike People, who confin'd almost all their Plays and Diversions to the Pleasures of the Country, and to those which they found in the Festivals of the Lord, in their Religious Journeys, and in the Meals they eat in the Temple.

I speak of the Times in which the Observation of the Law was kept up, and of the old Times of the Hebrew Republick. For when they grew irregular, they gave in to the utmost Excesses of idolatrous Nations, and deliver'd themselves up to their wicked and shameful Sports and Diversions. From the Time of the Reign of the Grecians, I mean, after the Death of Alexander the Great, and the Government of the Kings of Syria in Judea, they began to take an Inclination to the Sports and Exercises of the Grecians. There were Gymnasia, or Schools of Exercise, to be seen in Jerusalem, and Places where they put in Practice all the Exercises of the Greeks, Wrestling, Racing, Quoits, &c. (1 Mac. v. 16. 2 Mac. iv. 13, 14, 15.) And when the Romans succeeded the Greeks in their Government there, Herod built Theatres and Amphitheatres in the Cities of Palestine, and caused all Sorts of Games to be represented there. Josephus may be consulted on this Head; and the Dissertation compos'd by Mr. Vagenseil, concerning the Sports of the Hebrews.

PLEIADES. The Pleiades are Seven Stars beyond the Bull, which appear at the Beginning of the Spring [a]. Job speaks of the Pleiades,[b] and of the Hyades, which are Seven other Stars in the Bull's-head, and which mark out the East Point and the Spring. The Hebrew reads Chima: Canst thou bind the sweet Influences of the Pleiades? Can you hinder the Pleiades from rising in their Season? He gives them the Name, the sweet Influences of Chima; because of the Agreeableness of the Spring-season. St Jerome has translated Chima, by Hyades, Job ix. 9. and by Pleiades, Job xxxviii. 31. and by Arcturus, the Bear's-tail, in Amos v. 8. Aquila sometimes translates it in like manner. The Bear is one of the most Northern Constellations; and Chima rather signifies the Pleiades.

PODERIS. This Word is taken from the Greek [c], and properly signifies a Robe hanging down to the Feet; but it is chiefly used to express a Linen Garment, a Surplice, a Shirt. St. Jerome, in his Epistle to Fabiola, says, It was light, and close to the Body; Strictam & corpori adhærentem, eamque similem militum camisiis. The Jewish Priests were cover'd with this Kind of long Surplices, during the Time of their Attendance in the Temple; and this was the proper Habit of their Order. The Author of the Book of Wisdom gives also the Name of Poderis to the Long Robe of the High-Priest, at the Bottom of which were little Bells and Pomegranates; (Wisdom xviii. 24. vulgat.) In veste poderis quam habebat, totus erat orbis terrarum. The Septuagint translate the Hebrew Word Ephod, by Poderis, Exod. xxviii. 31. And in Ezekiel ix. 2, 3. they translate the Hebrew Word Bad, by the same Term. Bad, properly signifies a linen Robe. In Exod. xxv. 7. and xxxv. 8. they render the Hebrew Word Coschen in like manner, which signifies the High-Priest's Breast-plate, Pectoral, or Rational of Judgment; which, surely, was no long Robe: but it was consider'd as making a Part of the long Robe call'd Mehil, which also they translate by Poderis, Exod. xxviii. 4. St. John, in his Revelations, (Rev. i. 13. vulgat.) says, says, that Jesus Christ appear'd to him in a Poderis, which was a sacerdotal Habit, commonly call'd, an Albe or Surplice, as Liran says upon this Place.

POETRY of the Hebrews. No Point of Criticism has been more canvass'd among the Learned, than this concerning the Poetry of the Hebrews. The most skilful Commentators, and the most able Criticks, have abundantly labour'd this Argument, and yet we cannot say the Matter is exhausted, or the Difficulty clear'd up. Doubts and Difficulties still remain, and are likely always to remain, since we cannot pretend to know, nor ever shall know, the true Pronunciation of the Hebrew Language; and consequently we cannot perceive either the Harmony of the Words, or the Quantity of the Syllables, which yet constitute the whole Beauty of Verses. Nor have we in Hebrew, as we have in Greek and Latin, Rules for ascertaining the Quantity of Syllables, the Number of Feet, Rules for the Cadence and Construction of Verses; and yet it is plain the Hebrews observed all these Things, at least in some measure, since in their Poems we observe Letters added to, or cut off from, the Ends of the Words, which shew some Submission to the Rhyme, or to the Number, or to the Measure of the Syllables. Nor have we now any Notion of the Tune and Dance which generally accompany'd the Hebrew Poetry; for we know that they were sung, and were made on purpose for it. And the Scripture frequently speaks of Choirs and Dances in the Ceremonies of Religion. Thus we know but very imperfectly, and are not like to know much better, the Verses and Poetry of the Hebrews.

From the manner in which Josephus, Origen, Eusebius, and St. Jerome have spoke of the Hebrew Poetry, it should seem that, in their Time the Beauty and Rules of it were very well known. Josephus [a] affirms in several Places, that the Songs composed by Moses are in Heroick Verse, and that David compos'd several Sorts of Verses and Songs, Odes and Hymns, in Honour of God, some of which were in Trimeters, or Verses of three Feet, and others in Pentameters, or Verses of five Feet. Origen and Eusebius have espoused the same Sentiments, whether it were out of mere Deference to the Opinion of Josephus, or whether their own Judgments were convinc'd of it, is uncertain. Origen understood the Hebrew, and Eusebius was one of the most learned Men of his Time.

Vid. Euseb. Præp. l. xi. c. 3.

Præfat. in Chronic. Euseb.

St. Jerome has carry'd this Notion still farther, affirming, that the Psalter was composed in Alcaick, Iambick, and Sapphick Verses, in the manner of those of Pindar and Horace. And that the Songs in Deuteronomy and Isaiah, the Book of Job, and those of Solomon, are in Hexameter and Pentameter Verses. He says elsewhere, that the Canticle of Deuteronomy is in Iambick Verses of four Feet, as also Psalm cxviii. Beati immaculati in via, and cxliv. Exaltabo te, Deus meus Rex; whereas Psalm cx. Confitebor tibi, Domine, and cxi. Beatus vir qui timet Dominum, are in Iambick Verses only of three Feet.

In Ep. 135 ad Paul. Urb.

He observes in the Lamentations of Jeremiah a kind of Sapphick Verses, and Verses of three Measures. In several Places he speaks of the Book of Psalms, [b] as of a Work composed of Lyrick Verses, like those of Pindar, Alcæus, Horace, Catullus, and Serenus. In his Preface to the Book of Job, he says, that from these Words, Pereat dies in quâ natus sum, are Hexameter Verses, composed of Dactyls and Spondees, wherein are sometimes intermix'd other Feet of the same Measure, though they have not the same Number of Syllables, because of the Variation of the Language. Sometimes (says he) without any Regard to the Quantity of Syllables, the Poet makes you perceive a kind of Cadence or Harmony, which sensibly affects those that are skilful in the Rules of Poetry.

Philo says, [c] that the Essenians have antient Poems, the Verses of which are of several Forms and Measures. Some of 'em have three Members, others are Hymns which were sung at the Sacrifices, others were rehearsed at Meals, and others were accompany'd with Dances. We are inform'd, that Franciscus Vetablus had discover'd the true Method of the Verses of Job and the Psalter, but as yet nobody has been let into Vetablus's Secret. Theodore Herbert thought he had found Verses in the Bible, like to those in Greek and Latin, and he has really taken Notice of some. Meibomius boasted, that for above two hundred Years nobody but himself had arrived at the Knowledge of the Hebrew Poetry; but he kept this Knowledge to himself, and did not think proper to communicate it to the World. We only know, that by means of his Poetry, and of the Alterations he makes in the Text, he takes the whole Scripture to Pieces. Francis Gomar, in his Treatise call'd Davidis Lyra, has pretended to give the Rules of the Hebrew Poetry, just like those of the Greek and Latin; but he brought upon himself a Confutation from Lud. Capellus, which has not been answer'd yet.

nion has been espoused by a good Number of Partisans. Others maintain, that in the old Hebrew Verses there is neither Measure nor Feet to be found. Scaliger even affirms, that their Language, as well as those of the Syrians, Arabians, and Abyssins, is not capable of the Restraint of Feet or Measures. Austin of Eugubium says, that the Hebrews have neither Heroick Verses, nor Iambicks, nor of any other Measure; but only something that resembles it, like the Songs of barbarous Nations. This Opinion is supported by Louis Capel, Martin Martinius, Samuel Bohlius, Wasmurh, Aust. Pfeiffer, and some others. Grotius a also declares for this, and is indeed the Sentiment which we think the most probable. See our Dissertation upon the Hebrew Poetry, prefix'd to our Commentary upon Exodus, and the Authors we have already cited.

As to the Poetry of the modern Hebrews, the Reader may consult the Grammarians, and particularly Buxtorf's Thesaurus, which gives the Rules of it, and the several Kinds into which it is divided. See also Morini Exercit. Biblic. l. 2. Exer. 18. c. 7. p. 537, &c.

POETS. There is no Doubt to be made, but that the antient Hebrews had their Poets; and we have still remaining in the Bible a good Number of Canticles, and other Pieces of Poetry. What seems to me very remarkable is this, that all their Poetry is dedicated, by the Application they have made of it, to the Celebrating of the Greatness of God, and the Magnificence of his Works. The Hebrew Poets, so many of 'em at least as have any Works handed down to us, were all Men inspired of God. We find among them, Kings, Law-givers, Prophets. Moses, Baruch, David, Solomon, Hezekiah, Job, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and most of the Prophets, have compos'd Poems or Pieces in Verse. And what Kind of Poetry? why, the most pompous, the most majestick, and the most sublime that can be conceived. The Expression, the Sentiments, the Figures, the Variety, the Action, every thing is surprizing. But as to the Laws of this Poetry, they are entirely unknown to us, as has been observed before.

Tit. i. 12. St. Paul gives to the Pagan Poets the Name of Prophets. One of themselves, even a Prophet of their own said, &c. Because among the Heathen, Poets were what Prophets were among the Hebrews. They were look'd upon as inspir'd, and animated with the Spirit of Apollo. They spoke by Enthusiasm, Oracles were commonly deliver'd in Verse, the Poets were the Interpreters of the Wills of the Gods.

The Poet quoted here by St. Paul, is Epimenides. The Antients relate many Particulars of him, which prove, that they esteem'd him as an inspir'd Person, and favour'd by the Gods. Aristotle says, that he did not indeed foretell future Events, but that he discover'd Things that were past and unknown. Diogenes Laertius and Plutarch give an Account, that seeing the Fort of Munichium, which is the Port of Athens, he cry'd out, O the Blindness of Men! If the Athenians could but foresee the Misfortunes that this Fort will create to them, they would demolish it with their Teeth. The Truth of these Words was evinced some Years after, when King Antigonus placed a Garison there, to curb the City of Athens. Another Time he encouraged the Athenians, who were in Apprehension of an Invasion from the Persians. He told them, that it would be ten Years before they came, and that then they would be obliged to return again, after having suffer'd great Losses. He also foretold to the Lacedemonians and Cretans, the Captivity to which the Arcadians should one Day reduce them. 'Twas probably from such Predictions as these, whether true or false, that made the Greeks consider Epimenides as a Prophet, and which were a Reason to St. Paul for his giving him the same Appellation, whether by way of Irony, or otherwise.

The same Apostle quotes the Poet Aratus, who was a Native of Cilicia as well as himself. He cites these Words from him, We are the Children and the Race of God. Ipsius enim & genus sumus. This is but a part of a longer Passage, the Sense of which is this: We must begin from Jupiter, whom we must by no means forget. Every thing is replete with Jupiter. He fills the Streets, the publick Places, and Assemblies of Men. The whole Sea and its Harbours are full of this God, and all of us in all Places have need of Jupiter. 'Twas certainly not to prove the Being, or to enhance the Merit of Jupiter, or to procure Authority to the Poet Aratus, that the Apostle quotes this Passage. But he has deliver'd out of Bondage, as we may say, a Truth which this Poet had utter'd, without penetrating into the true Meaning of it. He has made use of it to prove the Existence of the true God, to People that were not convinced of the divine Authority of the Scriptures, and would have rejected such Proofs as the Apostle might have derived from thence.

Acts xvii. 28. Τοῦ γὰρ καὶ γένος ἐσμέν.

POINTS, or Vowels. Though the Hebrews in their Alphabet have both Vowels b and Consonants, like other Nations, yet it is true, however, that in writing they do a Grot. in Luc. i. 46. Erant enim ῥυθμοὶ Hebræorum non ἔμμετροι, sed lege soluti, cujusmodi etiam erant, & nunc quoque [illegible] eorum saltationes.

b Their Vowels are, Aleph, Vau, Jod, He, Gnain; א, ו, י, ה, ע. The He is rather an Aspiration than a Vowel.

do not always place their Vowels with the Consonants. Sometimes the Vowels that are inserted are not pronounced; or lastly, these Vowels having sometimes one Sound and sometimes another, being sometimes long and sometimes short, it is very difficult to those that have not been long acquainted with the Hebrew Tongue, to read rightly the Books written in Hebrew. 'Twas this Difficulty that gave Occasion to the Invention and Use of the pointed Vowels, which are certain Points placed below or above the Consonants, which supply the Place of Vowels, when they are wanting, or which determine their Sound, Quantity, and Value, when they are present.

The Grammarians reckon fourteen pointed Vowels, viz.

| Five long. | | Five short. | | Four very short. | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| א Camets | ā | א Patach | ă | א Shevah | ĕ |
| א Tzere | ē | א Segol | ĕ | א Chateph patack | ă |
| אי Chirec | ī | אי Chirec short | ĭ | א Chateph segol | ĭ |
| וא Cholem | ō | א Chametz chatuph | ŏ | א Chateph cametz | ŏ |
| וא Shurec | ū | א Kibbutz | ŭ | | |

If we have Recourse to the Rabbins, and to some Hebrew Grammarians among the Christians, concerning the Antiquity of these Points, we must believe them as antient as the Hebrew Scriptures themselves, and must derive their Original from Moses, or from Esdras, or from the Antients of the great Synagogue, who lived in the Time of Esdras and of Nehemiah. [a] But the most Judicious believe this Invention to be much more modern. Some [b] refer their Original to the Massorites, or to the Doctors of the School of Tiberias, who lived about the 500th Year of Jesus Christ. F. Morinus thinks, that it was from the Arabians that the Hebrews received both the Art of Grammar, and also the Use of these Points. But the Arabians themselves did not begin to write but very late; for when the Empire of the Mahometans was settled, about the Year 622, they had not had the Use of Letters very long. The Names of these pointed Vowels, which are entirely Arabick, are a Proof that they were originally dirived from these People. Besides, the first Grammarians that the Jews had, being Arabians, and having writ in their own Language, it is very probable, that the pointed Vowels are of their Invention, and proceed from the same Source from whence their Art of Grammar is derived.

F. Morin, who has examin'd this whole Matter to the Bottom, as to what concerns the Antiquity of the pointed Vowels, shews that they were not yet invented in the Time of Origen, nor in the Time of St. Jerome, nor even in the Time of the Doctors that composed the Talmud, which was not finish'd but in the Seventh Century. The same Author running over the several Works that were composed by the Jews in the eighth and ninth Ages; the first Footsteps that he meets with of the pointed Vowels are in the Writings of the Rabbins Ben-aser, Head of the School of the Western Jews, and in those of Ben-nephtali, Head of the School of the Eastern Jews, who lived about the Year 940, or about the Middle of the tenth Century. It follows then, that we cannot well place the Introduction of the Points before the Middle of the tenth Century. See Morin. Exercit. Biblic. l. 2. Exer. 18. c. 1, 2, 3, &c. Walton's Proleg. 3. n. 38, &c. and the other Writers who have composed Prolegomena to the Scriptures; as M. Du Pin, F. Frassen, and F. Thomassin, in his Method of studying the Scripture.

The modern Jews admit indeed of the pointed Vowels, and of Bibles printed with these Points, for ordinary Use; but the Books they publickly make use of in their Synagogues, the authentick Rolls from which they solemnly read the sacred Text, are still without Points. As at the Beginning the Samaritans also did not put any Points in their Pentateuch, which was written in the antient Hebrew Characters. The Scrupulosity of each of these in this respect, is a Proof of the Novelty of the pointed Vowels.

It had been thought, that Esdras had inserted the pointed Vowels in the Hebrew, 'till the Time of Elias Levita, a German Jew, who about the Middle of the sixteenth Century wrote against this Opinion, and maintain'd, that the pointed Vowels were not receiv'd 'till after the Compleating of the Thalmud, about the Year of Christ a Vid. Morin. Exercit. Bibl. Exer. 18, l. 2, c. 1, 2, 3, &c. Briani Waltoni Prolegom. Biblic. Prol. 3, art. 38, &c. & alios passim. b Elias Levita. Vide & Kimchi, Aben-ezra, Judam Levit. & alios apud Tiam.

Christ 500; that 'till that Time the Manner of reading the sacred Text, and of supplying the Vowels therein, was only preserved by Tradition. All the Jews in general, as well those who referr'd the Points to Esdras, as those who ascrib'd them to the Massorites, maintain, that the manner of reading, according to this Punctuation, is of divine Authority, and that it may not be allow'd to make the least Alteration therein. But the greatest part of our Criticks, even of those that hold Esdras for the first Author of the Points, maintain it to be a mere human Invention, and that no Scruple should be made of mending it, when the Tenour of the Discourse, the Analogy of Things, or the Rules of good Criticism can offer a better Sense.

These are the chief Reasons urged by the two Buxtorfs, Father and Son, [a] to prove the Antiquity of the pointed Vowels. First, two antient Books call'd Babir and Zohar, the first of which was written a little before the Birth of Jesus Christ, and the second a little after, which expressly mention the pointed Vowels in more Places than one. Secondly, the Massorites of Tiberias, to whom the Invention of the Points is ascribed, do not appear to have had sufficient Capacity for this Work, nor does any antient Author impute it to them. Aben-ezra, a Rabbin of the twelfth Age, is the first who does them this Honour. Thirdly, that since the Hebrew has ceas'd to be the vulgar Tongue of the Jews, that is, since the Captivity of Babylon, it was not possible to teach this Language without the Assistance of the pointed Vowels; therefore at least they must have been in being since Esdras, and have always been in use from that Time. Fourthly, by subverting the Authority of the pointed Vowels, and putting them upon the Footing of an Invention merely human, the Text will be given up to uncertain Reading and arbitrary Explications, which will overturn the Certainty and Authority of the Holy Scriptures.

But to these Reasons we may thus reply: First, that the Books Babir and Zohar have nothing near that Antiquity that has been imputed to them. There are even found Things in these Books, that must have been written above a thousand Years since that Time, at which they are pretended to be written. No antient Author has either own'd them or quoted them. Secondly, the Massorites of Tiberias were certainly in being a long Time in Judea; and abstracting from the Notion that has been received of their Capacity, and from the Testimony of Aben-ezra and of Elias Levita, it is known with great Certainty, that the pointed Vowels were not found out before their Time.

Thirdly, that since the Hebrew Tongue has ceas'd to be a living Language, and spoke by the Jews, the Necessity of the pointed Vowels is not so great as is pretended. The Samaritans, who understand Hebrew no better than the Jews, have no Points to this Day; yet they read the Hebrew Text in Samaritan Characters. The Arabians had Points but late. One might very well be without them in their Language, as also in the Hebrew, the Syriack, and the Chaldee, even on Supposition that these were not living Languages, provided we preserve the antient Character, provided we speak a Language that has some Affinity to those whose Character we preserve, and lastly, that this Language, dead as it is, may however subsist in the Ecclesiastical Offices, in the Prayers, and even in an infinite Number of Terms written in the Language of Commerce and Conversation. Upon this Supposition, which is really the Case in which the Jews are at present, in respect of the Hebrew, the Difficulty of reading the Hebrew without Points is vastly less than one would imagine. We certainly know that many Jews, who are far from knowing this Language to Perfection, yet, however, can read Hebrew without Points, and even write it too. This is enough to prove, whatever may be said to the contrary, that they might have done well enough without Points, for several Ages, and that we might still do well enough without them. Add to this, that the Hebrew Tongue is not absolutely destitute of Vowels; it has three or four, viz. Aleph, Jod, Vau, and Hain; He and Cheth are Aspirations. These Letters and these Aspirations are every where to be found in the Text. One Vowel alone is sufficient for the reading a whole Word. To judge of the Force of these Reasons, it is necessary to understand the Language.

The fourth Proof relating to the Authority of these pointed Vowels has but an indirect Glance to their Antiquity; and it is easy to retort the Argument against those that use it, by applying it to the Greek and Latin Tongues, which have always had Vowels. Without meddling with the Vowels, cannot one often take the same Passage in ten different Senses, and that without changing any thing in the Words, or Accents, or Punctuation, only by altering the Order and Structure of the Words? Can this be said to give up the sacred Text to an uncertain Reading, and to arbitrary Explications? Is there any Language in the World, in which one does not often happen upon equivocal Expressions, Amphibologies, philologies, and Uncertainties, and that notwithstanding Points, Accents, and Vowels? I own that the Hebrew without Points is more subject to this than any other Language; but Tradition, good Sense, the Coherence of the Discourse, Custom, supply Rules to correct these pretended Inconveniencies. And what would be the Event, if we were always obliged servilely to follow the Punctuation of the Massorites? How many Passages have been happily restored, or explain'd, by having Recourse to antient Versions, and by quitting the Manner of Reading assign'd by the Massorites?

POLYGAMY. Polygamy was tolerated among the Hebrews, and authorized by the Example of the Patriarchs. We do not see it established by any Law, and the Scripture, which transmits to us the Name of the first bigamous Person, and of
Gen. iv. 19. his two Wives, seems to insinuate, that his Action was not approved of by good People, and that he was afraid of the Consequences. For he says thus to his two Wives, Adah and Zillah: Hear my Voice, ye Wives of Lamech, hearken unto my Speech. For I have slain a Man to my wounding, and a young Man to my hurt. If Cain shall be avenged seven-fold, truly Lamech seventy and seven-fold. As if he would thus comfort his Wives, who were terrify'd with the Irregularity of his Polygamy: This is not a Crime that deserves Death; I have not kill'd a Man. Whoever shall dare to lay his Hand on me, will be severely punish'd for it. Compare my Action to that of Cain, and then conclude, that if the Murderer of Cain shall deserve Punishment, how much more shall he deserve it that shall murder Lamech?

The Rabbins maintain, that Polygamy was in use from the very Beginning of the World, and that before the Deluge every Man had two Wives. Tertullian on the contrary thinks, [a] that Lamech was the first who transgressed the establish'd Order of God, by marrying two Wives, and that Polygamy commenced from a Man that was accursed. Numerus matrimonii à maledicto viro cæpit. He says, that the bad Example of this Man had Consequences, which continued down to the total Subversion of the Jewish Nation, and that before the Deluge nobody imitated Lamech. St. Jerome says, [b] that Lamech, who was an Homicide and a bloody-minded Person, was the first who divided one Flesh to two Wives, and that the Flood expiated his Parricide and his Polygamy together. (He supposes Lamech to have kill'd Cain.) Pope Nicholas I. [c] accuses Lamech of Adultery, because of his Polygamy; and Pope Innocent III. maintains, [d] that it was never allow'd to have a Plurality of Wives at once, without a Permission and particular Revelation from God.

'Tis upon this Supposition that they justify the Polygamy of the Patriarchs. 'Tis believed that God permitted it to them, or at least that he tolerated it for superior Views. The Laws of Moses plainly suppose this Custom, and yet condemn it not. The Rabbins allow the King to have as far as 18 Wives, after the Example of Rehoboam King of Judah, who had to that Number. They allow the Israelites to marry as many as they can maintain. But for all this, Examples of Polygamy among private Persons were not common. The wiser Men among them easily saw the Inconveniencies that attended this Irregularity. But instead of Wives they took Concubines, which Practice was not liable to the same Disorders. There is this Difference between a Wife and a Concubine, according to the Rabbins; that a Wife was marry'd by Contract, and had her Dowry, whereas the Concubines were taken without Contract, and lived in a State of Submission and Dependance, under the Matron of the Family, as Hagar in respect of Sarah; and that the Children of the Concubines had no Share in the Inheritance.

The Saviour of the World reduced Marriage to its primitive and lawful Condition, by revoking that Permission that tolerated Polygamy and Divorce. He allows Christians to have but one Wife, according to those Words of the Creator: In the Beginning God created them Male and Female, wherefore a Man shall cleave unto his Wife, and they two shall be but one Flesh.

Polygamy is no longer allow'd the Jews at present, neither in the East nor in the West. The Emperors Theodosius, Arcadius, and Honorius forbid it them by their Decrees. The Mahometans, who allow Anno 393.
themselves this Liberty, will not, however, allow it to the Jews in their Dominions. The Samaritans, who are extremely devoted to the Laws of Moses, marry but one Wife, and make it a Crime in the Jews, that they secretly practise Polygamy in the East. There was a Book printed at London, call'd Polygamia triumphatrix, the Author of which was one Lyserus, a Native of Saxony, who conceal'd himself under the Name of Theophilus Aletheus. This Work has been confuted by several learned Men.

Polygamy is divided into simultaneous and successive. The first is, when a Man has more than one Wife at a Time. It is condemned condemned by both Canon and Civil Law. Successive Polygamy is, when a Man has several Wives one after another, each of which he marries after the Decease of the preceding Wife. It is allow'd in the Church, though with a good deal of Regret, the Fathers and Councils having often testify'd, that they did not approve of second Marriages. And the Canons do not admit into Holy Orders such as are under this Incapacity, unless they obtain an express Dispensation for it. [a] POLYGLOTT. This Word literally signifies a variety of Languages, and this Name is given to the Bibles publish'd in several Languages, or at least in three, of which the Texts are ranged in different Columns. Some of these Polyglotts contain all the Books of the Bible, others contain but a Part. These following are the principal Polyglotts that have yet appeared.

1. The Bible of Francis Ximenes of Cisneros, Cardinal of the Order of St. Francis; it was printed in 1517, in four Languages, in Hebrew, Chaldee, Greek, and Latin.

2. The Bible of Justiniani Bishop of Nebio, and of the Order of St. Dominick; it appear'd in 1518, in five Languages; in Hebrew, Chaldee, Greek, Latin, and Arabick. Only the Psalter was printed, the rest remaining in Manuscript.

3. John Potken, Provost of the Collegiate Church of St. George at Cologn, caus'd the Psalter to be printed in 1546, in four Languages, Hebrew, Greek, Chaldee, or rather Ethiopic, and Latin.

4. The Jews of Constantinople caus'd to be printed in 1546, in the same City, the Pentateuch in Hebrew, Chaldee, Persian, and Arabick, with the Commentaries of Solomon Jarchi.

5. The same Jews caus'd also to be printed in 1547, at Constantinople, the Pentateuch, in four Languages, in Hebrew, Chaldee, the vulgar Greek, and in Spanish.

6. John Draconitis of Carlostad in Franconia, in 1565, made an Edition of the Psalter, the Proverbs of Solomon, and the Prophets Micah and Joel in five Languages, in Hebrew, Chaldee, Greek, Latin, and German. The Death of the Author prevented the Compleating of the Impression of this Work.

7. Benedictus Arias Montanus had the chief Care of the Edition of the Polyglott Bible perform'd by Christopher Plantin, by the Order of Philip II. King of Spain. This Bible is in eight Volumes, and was finish'd in 1572. 'Tis in Hebrew, Chaldee, Greek, and Latin, with the Syriac Version of the New Testament. 'Tis properly but a Copy of that of Cardinal Ximenes.

8. There appear'd at Heidelberg in 1586, an Edition of the Books of the Old Testament in Hebrew and Greek, with two Latin Versions; one of St. Jerome, and the other of Santes Pagninus, ranged in four Columns, at the Bottom of which were Notes ascribed to Vatablus. This was the Reason that it obtain'd the Name of the Polyglott Bible of Vatablus.

9. David Wolder, a Lutheran Minister, in 1596, at Hambourg, caus'd to be printed by James Lucius, a Bible in three Languages, Greek, Latin, and German.

10. Elias Hutter, a German, printed several Polyglotts. The first is a Bible in six Languages, printed at Nuremberg in 1599. There was only printed the Pentateuch, the Books of Joshua, Judges, and Ruth. There was the Hebrew, the Chaldee, the Greek, the Latin, and the German of Luther; and as to the sixth Language, the Copies varied according to the Nations they were designed for. Some had the Sclavonian Version of the Edition of Wittemberg; others the French of Geneva; others the Italian also of Geneva; and others the Saxon Version from the German of Luther.

This Author also gave the Psalter and the New Testament in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and German. But his chief Work is the New Testament in twelve Languages, Syriack, Greek, Hebrew, Italian, Spanish, French, Latin, German, Bohemian, English, Danish, and Polish. This Polyglott was printed at Nuremberg in 1599, in two Volumes in Folio, and in four Volumes in Quarto.

11. The Bible of M. le Jay in seven Languages, was printed at Paris by Anthony Vitre in 1645. It contains the Hebrew, Samaritan, Chaldee, Greek, Syriack, Latin and Arabick. He has follow'd the Greek Version printed at Antwerp, as also the Chaldee and Latin. Nothing can be more magnificent than this Impression, as to the Paper and Character; but Complaint has been made of the many Faults that are to be found in it.

12. No sooner did the Polyglott of M. le Jay appear in England, but the Learned Men of this Nation undertook to give a new Edition of it more correct, more extensive, and more perfect. They accomplished this Design in 1657, and produced a new Polyglott in five Volumes, with Prolegomena, and several other Treatises in the first Tome, several new Oriental Versions in the Fourth and Fifth, and a very large Collection of various Readings in the Sixth. Brian Walton was the Undertaker of this Edition, which he finish'd in 1657. Hence it is that this Bible has the Name of Walton's Polyglott. Those that that are curious to know the History of these Polyglotts more at large, may consult F. le Long of the Oratory, in his Work call'd, An Historical Discourse of the principal Editions of the Polyglott Bibles, printed at Paris by Pralard in 1713.

POLYMITA. These were Works of several Threads and several Colours. 'Tis said in Genesis,[a] that Jacob made his Son Joseph a Coat of divers Colours, tunicam polymitam. The Hebrew has it a Coat of Passim. And the same Text makes use of 2 Sam. xiii. 18. a like Expression, to denote the particular kind of the Robe of Thamar the Daughter of David. 'Tis thought that Passim signifies different Colours, variegated Stripes, tunicam fasciatam, such as the eastern People still wear. St. Jerome puts sometimes into the Latin Text of the Scripture,[b] opere polymito instead of opere polymitario. The Hebrew Letter is opere cogitantis, a Ezekiel xxviii. 24. רקמה Polymitaria. Work of Tapestry. Ezekiel makes use of the Term Polymito; or rather St. Jerome in his Translation of Ezekiel, has used this Word to express the Hebrew Meshi, which the Rabbins and several Interpreters explain by Silk. In another Place of the Ezek. xvi. 10, 13. משי Meshi. same Prophet, St. Jerome has translated Rakamah, which signifies Works of Embroidery, by Polimitarius.

BOLYMITARIUS, or Polimitarius. This Term is found in several Places of the Vulgat, as Exodus xxxv. 35. xxxvi. 35. xxxviii. 23. xxxix. 5. It answers to the Hebrew Word Choshcb,[c] which properly signifies a Workman that contrives and labours with his Mind and Imagination. It appears by examining the Passages where it is found, that it signifies a Workman in Tapestry, one that makes Veils of several Colours, and Webs of different Threads. This is the true Signification of Polymitarius, which is derived from the Greek, and which literally signifies one that works in several Colours, as Weavers of Tapestry, and Turkey Carpets. These Works are also call'd Phrygia, Phrygionica, Babylonica, Alexandrina, and even Plumaria, because of the Resemblance of the Arts of Embroidery and Tapestry.

It appears from Moses, that the Makers of Tapestry Polymitarii, who worked for the Tabernacle in the Wilderness, made use not only of Wool of the Colour of Purple, Hyacinth, Azure, and Crimson,
Ex. xxxix. 3. 9. but also of gold Thread. Incidit bracteas aureas, & extendit in fila, ut possent torqueri cum priorum colorum subtegmine. We cannot know exactly how they drew their Gold into Threads; but there is no Room to doubt, but that Gold Thread was made use of, in the Embroidery of the High-Priest's Pectoral.

POMGRANATE. The Pomgranate is a kind of Apple, cover'd without with a reddish Rind, and Red within, which opens Length-ways, and shews red Grains within, full of Juice like Wine, with little Kernels. God gave Orders to Moses, to put embroider'd Pomgranates, with golden Bells between, at the Bottom of the High Priest's blue Robe or Ephod. Ex. xxviii. 33.
Pomgranates being very common in Palestine, and being a very beautiful Fruit, the Scriptures often make use of Similitudes taken from the Pomgranate.

The Pomgranate Tree, malus punica, or malo-granatum, is the Tree or Shrub that bears the Pomgranates. There are of two Sorts, wild and domestick. The cultivated Pomgranate Tree has several small angular Boughs, armed with Prickles, and cover'd with a reddish Bark. Its Leaves are small, like to those of Myrrh, but not so sharp, of a green Colour, drawing towards Red. Its Blossom is large, beautiful, of a red Colour inclining to Purple, compos'd of several Stalks in the Form of a Rose, in the Hollow of the Cup. This Cup is oblong, hard, Purple, having a Figure something like that of a Bell. This Garden Pomgranate Tree sometimes bears double Flowers, and then it has no Fruit.

The Wild Pomgranate Tree is a Shrub like the former, but it is more rude and thorny. Its Blossoms are called Balausts by the Apothecaries. They are Astringent, and very good in a Dysentery, Diarrhœa, and Lientery.

We are assured, that in Perou there have been seen Granates as large as a Barrel; that the Spaniards, by way of Curiosity, carry them in the Procession of the Sacrament. The Mussulmen speaking of the Holy Land, say, That five Men could hardly carry a Grape of this Country, and that five Persons might hide themselves in one Shell of their Pomgranates. This is carrying the Hyperbole as far as it will go.

POMPEY. Cneius Pompeius, surnamed the Great, one of the most celebrated Captains that the Roman Commonwealth ever had. His Name indeed is not to be found in the Scriptures, but Josephus speaks of him often, nor can we be dispensed with from saying, in a Word, how he behaved towards the Nation of the Jews. Having finished the War against Tigranes, in the Year of the World 3938, and that against several other People in 3939, he sent Scaurus[d] into Judea, who arriving at Damascus, and being informed of the Troubles of Judea occasion'd by the two Brothers Hircanus and Aristobulus; he he came thither in great Haſte, thinking to make great Advantage of their Diviſion. No ſooner had he enter'd into this Province, but he received Ambaſſadors from both, each of them deſiring his Friendſhip and Protection. But Ariſtobulus having preſented him with Three hundred Talents, he declared for him, and ſent Word to Hyrcanus and Aretas, who kept Ariſtobulus beſieged in Jeruſalem, that if they did not deſiſt from this Undertaking, he ſhould uſe them as Enemies to the Romans. So that Ariſtobulus was thus deliver'd from the Danger that threatned him.

Some time after Pompey himſelf came to Damaſcus; Hyrcanus and Antipater came to wait on him, and complain'd of the Proceedings of Scaurus, who had ſuffer'd himſelf to be corrupted by Ariſtobulus's Money; and they intreated him to fix Hyrcanus upon the Throne of Judea, which belonged to him by Birth. The Beginning of the next Year, [a] Pompey having again heard the mutual Complaints of Hyrcanus and Ariſtobulus, and alſo of the Jews, who complained againſt them both, he ſent them back in Peace, ſaying, he would ſoon come into Judea, and then he would decide their Controverſy. But Ariſtobulus withdrawing himſelf, inſtead of ſtaying for Pompey's Determination, he fortify'd himſelf, and put himſelf into a Poſture of oppoſing him, if he ſhould pretend to dethrone him.

After Pompey had finiſhed his War againſt Mithridates, he marched into Judea, [b] where Hyrcanus and Ariſtobulus came before him, and pleaded their Cauſe, each maintaining their ſeveral Pretenſions in his Preſence. Afterwards Pompey having order'd Ariſtobulus to ſurrender his Fortreſſes into his Hands; he obey'd, though not without Difficulty, and at the ſame time withdrew to Jeruſalem, to prepare for the Event. Pompey would not give him time to fortify himſelf, but follow'd him cloſe; and when he came near the City, Ariſtobulus fearing to engage himſelf in a War againſt the Romans, came out to meet him, promiſed him to put the City into his Hands, with a great Sum of Money, and beſeeched him not to come to an open Breach with him. Pompey forgave him what was paſs'd, and ſent Gabinius to receive the Money, and to take Poſſeſſion of the City. But Ariſtobulus's Soldiers ſhut the Gates againſt him, ſo that he was forc'd to return without performing his Commiſſion.

This Procedure provoked Pompey, who thereupon ſecured Ariſtobulus, and kept him in Bonds; and then marched againſt Jeruſalem. He firſt made Propoſals of Peace to the Beſieged, but finding they rejected them, he began to form the Siege of the City. He encamped on the North Side of the Temple, which was the weakeſt Part of the City. The Roman Soldiery being uſed to Labour and Fatigues, ſoon raiſed Terraſſes whereon to place their Machines, and to batter the Walls. But the Jews defended themſelves with ſo much Courage, and made ſo many Sallies againſt the Beſiegers, that if the Sabbath-day had not interrupted their Oppoſition, the Romans could never have compleated their Approaches. The Romans therefore perceiving that on this Day they made no Attacks, but contented themſelves to be upon the Defenſive, they made no Attack againſt them, but only carry'd on their Works.

When they were finiſh'd, they began to batter the Towers and Walls of the Temple with Machines they had brought with them from Tyre. One thing gave great Cauſe of Admiration to Pompey, that during the whole Siege, as if they had been in a profound Peace, the Jews did not forbear to offer Morning and Evening their accuſtom'd Sacrifices to God, not ſuffering any Proſpect of Danger to interrupt them. The third Month of the Siege the Breach being found practicable, the Romans in great Numbers pour'd into the Temple, where they made a dreadful Slaughter of the Prieſts, and of all ſuch as had taken Refuge there. Cornelius Fauſtus, the Son of Sylla, was the firſt that enter'd the Breach. This was the firſt Year of the Hundred and ſeventy-ninth Olympiad, a Day of Faſting among the Jews, in Memory of the Volume of Jeremiah, which was burnt by King Jehoiakim, the Twenty-eighth Day of this third Month of the Civil Year, which is called Caſleu, and which anſwers partly to our Month of November, and partly to December, in the Year of the World 3941, before Chriſt 59, and before the vulgar Era 63.

Pompey being enter'd into the Temple, there ſaw ſuch Things as were not allow'd to be ſeen, but only by the Prieſts alone. In the inward Part of the Temple he found the Golden Table, the Candleſtick, with the Veſſels and Cenſers, and a great Quantity of Incenſe. And beſides this there was about Two thouſand Talents of Silver in the Treaſuries of the Temple. But he meddled with nothing of all this, and when he had given Orders to have the Temple clear'd of the dead Bodies that were there in great Number, the Day following he cauſ'd Sacrifices to be offer'd to God. After this he reſtor'd Hyrcanus to the High Prieſthood, and to the Government ment of his Nation; but he forbad him to wear the Diadem, or to assume the Title of King. As to Aristobulus, he kept him in Bonds, and carry'd him to Rome with two of his Daughters, and all the Sons he had. Concerning the War, the Reader may consult Josephus Antiq. l. 14. c. 8. and Usher on the Year of the World 3941, where he relates not only what he finds in Josephus concerning this War, but also what prophane Authors have said about it. The rest of the Life of Pompey has no Relation to our Design. When this great Man was conquer'd by Julius Cæsar at Pharsalia, he came into Egypt, where he was basely put to death by the Officers of the young Ptolemy, the last King of Egypt, in the Year of the World 3956, before Christ 44, before the vulgar Era 48.

'Tis thought St. Peter preached in Pontus, because he addresses his first Epistle to the Faithful of this Province, and to those of the neighbouring Provinces. The Septuagint and Onkelos have kept to the original Word Ellasar; St. Jerome has follow'd Symmachus in translating it King of Pontus. Grotius thinks he was King of the Elizarians, a People of Arabia mentioned by Ptolemy. But it is much more credible he was a King beyond the Euphrates, as well as the other Kings confederated with Chedorlaomer.

POOR. This Word is often taken for a Man that is humble, afflicted, and mean in his own Eyes, and in the Eyes of God. Humilem & pauperem justificate, & factus est Dominus refugium pauperi, & oculi ejus in pauperem respiciunt, &c. In these Passages and others of the like Importance, the Word Poor is not taken for a Man that is destitute of the good Things of the Earth, but for a Man that is sensible of his Misery and Indigence, and applies for Succour to the Mercy of God. In this Sense the greatest and richest Men of the World are the poorest in the Eyes of God.

In Exodus, chap. xxiii. 3. Moses forbids the Judges To countenance a poor Man in his Cause: Or, as he says elsewhere, Thou Levit. xix. 15.
shalt not respect the Person of the Poor, nor honour the Person of the Mighty; but in Righteousness shalt thou judge thy Neighbour. In a Word, judge without respect of Persons, have only Truth and Justice before your Eyes, consider that you stand in the Place of God upon the Earth.

One of the Characters of the Messiah was to judge the Poor, and to preach the Psal. lxxii. 2, 4. Isai. xi. 4. Matt. xi. 5.
Gospel to them. Jesus Christ chose to himself Disciples that were poor, and the greatest Part of the first Believers were really poor Men, as we may see by St. Paul, and others in Ecclesiastical History.

Solomon says, The Rich and Poor meet Prov. xxii. 2.
together; that they are like each other in one thing, that is, that God created them both, and that both Riches and Poverty are of his bestowing. He says elsewhere, The Poor and Deceitful Man meet together, Prov. xxix. 13.
or the Debtor and Creditor. That is to say, that they belong to God, and that each are in the Hands of his Providence. That the Rich should not be exalted, nor the Poor be discouraged; they are both equal in the Eyes of God.

Jeremiah says, speaking to Jerusalem, Jerem. ii. 34.
In thy Skirts is found the Blood of the Souls of the poor Innocents. In alis tuis inventus est sanguis animarum pauperum & innocentum. The Word Ala in this Passage is taken for the Skirts of a Garment. Sanguis animarum, is as much as to say, the Blood of a Person put to death.

Amos reproaches the Israelites with Amos iii. 6. viii. 6.
having sold the Poor for a contemptible Price, and for Shoes and Sandals. Probably he aims at the Rich, who thus sold their poor Debtors for Things of no Value.

St. James seems to carry the Obligation, James ii. 1.
of not respecting Persons, so far as to give no Mark of Distinction to Persons in Power, or raised to Dignity, in the publick Assemblies of Religion. These are his Words; My Brethren, have not the Faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of Glory, with respect of Persons. For if there come unto your Assembly, a Man with a Gold Ring, in goodly Apparel, and there come in also a poor Man in vile Rayment; and ye have Respect to him that weareth the gay Cloathing, and say unto him, Sit thou here in a good Place, and say to the Poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my Footstool: Are ye not then partial in your selves, and are become Judges of evil Thoughts? But all this ought to be understood rather of an inward Preference, and of the Sentiments of the Heart, than of external Marks a Gen. xiv. 1. In the Year of the World 2079, before Christ 1921, before the vulgar Era 1925.

Marks of Respect. It is never allow'd a Christian to prefer a rich Man before a poor one, only because he is rich, and to think better of him, to judge him more worthy of Esteem and Consideration, rather than he that has not the same Advantages of the Goods of Fortune.

In Scripture, the Poor in general are often put for the meaner People, and for such Inhabitants of the Country as are in the lowest Condition of Life, without considering whether they have Accommodations suitable to their State.

Poverty, in the Old Testament, was consider'd by the carnal Jews as a great Evil, Job xxxvi. 8. and a Punishment from God. Job speaks of it as of a Prison, and a State of Bondage. Si fuerint in catenis & in vinculis paupertatis.
Isai. xlviii. 10. And Isaiah speaks of it as of a Furnace or Crucible, wherein Metals are purified. Ecce excoxi te, sed non quasi argentum; elegi te in camino paupertatis. God try'd Job and Tobit by Poverty; they belong'd to the New Covenant; they knew the Value of Suffering, of Humiliation, of Indigence. They knew how to make a right use of them, and to apply them to their own Advantage. They were already poor in Spirit, in the Disposition of their Hearts, before God made them to feel the Effects of an actual Poverty. See POVERTY.

PORPHYRIO. [a] A sort of Water-fowl, which has the Name Porphyrio given to it, because of its red Beak. It has the Ground of its Plumage of a blue Colour; the Half of its Tail, towards its Extremity, is of a whitish Ash-colour, its Eyes are black, its Beak and Legs are of a purple Colour, and very splendid. It has four Claws, disposed like those of a Pye. This is a rare Bird; there are seen of them about Narbon a City of Spain, where they call it by the Name of Calamon. Pliny says, that it comes from the Islands Balearides, that it is very beautiful, and that it is as big as a Cock. 'Tis observ'd to drink Water as if it bit it, and that it dips its Food in Water, and conveys it to its Beak with its Foot. Elian affirms, That the Greeks and Romans never used to eat this Bird at their Feasts.

This Bird haunts the Rivers. Pliny says, That at Comagene they are found in great Plenty. From its Fore-head, or the upper Part of the Beak, to the Top of the Head, it has a yellow Spot resembling that of a Coot, but of a different Colour. The part of the Head below this Spot, and the Fore-part of the Neck, are of a greenish Colour. It has hardly any Tail. Elian says, That in the House where it is kept, if it perceives the Woman to commit Adultery, it discovers it to the Husband by certain Motions that it makes. But these are Fables. Moses prohibits the Use of it to the Jews, perhaps because of its Voracity. The Continence and the Modesty of this Bird is pass'd into a Proverb, Porphyrione castior. 'Tis thought to be a sort of Hern. The Jews believe it to be the Wood-pecker. The Samaritan Translator is for the Pelican. Bochart will have it the Vulture. The Hebrew Word Rachamah signifies Mercy; and the Care and Tenderness of the Vulture for its Young is well known. The Egyptians took the Vulture for the Symbol of Pity.

PORTIUS FESTUS. See FESTUS.

POSSESSION of the Devil. Possession and Obsession differ in this, that in Obsession the Devil acts outwardly, whereas in Possession he acts within the Patient. See OBSESSION before. Examples of Possession are common, especially in the New Testament. Jesus Christ and his Apostles have cured great Numbers of such as were possess'd; and Ecclesiastical Historians still furnish us with many other Instances. But as it has been found by many Examples, that often the Credulity of the Simple has been imposed on, by fictitious Obsessions and Possessions; some pretended Free-thinkers have maintained, that all these Obsessions were nothing else but Diseases of the Mind, and the Effects of a distemper'd Imagination: That Persons sometimes thought themselves to be possess'd in good earnest; that others feign'd themselves to be so, in order to carry on some Designs; in a Word, that there never were any real Possessions or Obsessions. The most plausible Arguments that they bring for this Opinion are such as follow:

The Devil cannot naturally act upon our Bodies. He is of a spiritual Nature, and by his Will only cannot move our Limbs, nor act upon our Fluids, nor Organs, without an express Allowance from God. If he had naturally this Power, the World would be full of People that were possess'd or obsess'd; he would be always exerting his Hatred against Man, and would exercise his Power and Authority to the utmost that his Pride and Malice could suggest. How many Men should we see every Day possess'd, agitated, tormented, choak'd, strangled, thrown from Precipices, drowned, burnt, if the Devil had this Power we impute to him? If it be said that God moderates this Power, that he restrains the Devil, and does not allow him to

to exercise his Malice against Sinners and wicked Men; do not we see on the contrary, that he often possesses or obsesses very harmless Persons? We know what Sufferings he inflicted upon Job; we see Children possess'd, and other Persons, whose Lives seem to have been exempt from any great Crimes or Disorders.

Why do we not see Men and Women possess'd, but only at certain Times, and in certain Countries? That there are whole Nations, where the Thing is not so much as known? How is it that they are only seen in such Countries where the People are generally Superstitious, and in such Persons as are of a weak Understanding, and of a melancholly Temper? That if we examine those Men and Women, who either are or have been possess'd, we shall find none but what have some of the Qualities and Weaknesses now mentioned.

If we suppose the Devil to suspend the Operations of the Soul of the Party possess'd, and to usurp the Office of the Soul to himself; or even that several Devils agitate and possess the same Demoniack, the Difficulty will be still much greater. What Conception can we have of that Soul, that no longer acts in the Body which it animates, and which surrenders up itself to the Devil, as we may call it? How can all these Evil Spirits combine and concur to govern the same Man? If all this can be done without a Miracle, what Proof can there be of Miracles to incredulous People? May it not be said, that all such Things that we call Miracles, are no other than Operations of the Devil? And if a Miracle be requir'd, that a Man should be possess'd of the Devil, it would make God the Author, or at least a Co-operator with the Devil, in his Obsessions and Possessions of Men.

We have so many Examples of natural Things, which however appear to be Supernatural, that there is Room to imagine, that what are call'd Possessions of the Devil, may be of this Kind. So many People have fancy'd themselves to be turned into Wolves, or Oxen; to be made of Glass or Butter; to become Kings or Princes: No one in this Case has Recourse to the Devil, or to a Miracle, to explain the Phænomenon. They tell us roundly, that it is a Disorder in the Brain, a Disease of the Mind or Imagination caus'd by a Heat of the Bowels, or by the Predominance of black Bile. Nobody has Recourse for a Cure to Exorcisms, or to the Priests. They apply themselves to Physicians, take Medicines, use the Baths; they look out for Methods of curing the Imagination of the Patient, or of giving it another Turn. Would it not be the same with such as are possess'd? Would they not obtain a Cure by natural Remedies, by purging them, cooling them, deceiving them dextrously, and making them imagine that the Devil has forsaken them and fled away? There have been remarkable Experiments of this kind; but if we should relate them, the Favourers of Possessions would still say, that these People were not indeed possess'd, and will not deny but there has been much Delusion in this Matter. But they will still maintain, that among the great Number of Demoniacks, it cannot be deny'd, but there must have been some that were really possess'd. The others maintain, that there never were any such, and that whatever has happen'd to those that were reputed to be possess'd, might conveniently be explain'd by natural Means, without having any Recourse to the Devil. This is the whole Knot of this Dispute.

The Defenders of Possessions of the Devil observe, that if this were only an Illusion, Jesus Christ and his Apostles, and the whole Church, would be in an Error, and must wilfully involve us in one too, by speaking, acting, and praying, as if there were real Possessions. Our Saviour speaks to, and commands the Devils, who actuated the Possess'd; which Devils answer'd and obey'd, and gave Proofs of their Presence by tormenting those miserable Creatures, which they were obliged to quit. They put them into violent Convulsions, throw them upon the Ground, leave them for dead, take Possession of Hogs, and hurry those Animals into the Sea. Can this be called Delusion? The Prayers and Exorcisms of the Church [of Rome,] what are they but Pageantry and Grimace, if Possessions be nothing else but whimsical and imaginary Distempers? Jesus Christ alledges it as a Proof of his Mission, that the Devils are cast out; he promises his Apostles the Luke vii. 20, 21. same Power that he exercised himself against those wicked Spirits. Can all this be no- Mark xvi. 17. thing but Chimera?

'Tis allow'd, that there are several Tokens of Possession which are equivocal and fallible, but there are others also which are indubitable. A Person may counterfeit a Demoniack, and imitate the Actions, Words, Motions, Contortions, Cries, Howlings, and Convulsions of one that is possess'd. Some Efforts, that seem to be supernatural, may be the Effect of an heated Imagination, melancholy Blood, or Trick and Contrivance. But if a Person all on a sudden should speak and understand Languages that he has never learn'd, talk of sublime Matters he has never study'd, discover Things that are secret and unknown. Should he lift up himself into the Air without visible Assistance, act and speak in a Manner very distant from his natural Temper and Condition: If all this should happen without any Inducement from Interest, Passion, or any other natural Motive: If all all these Circumstances, I say, or the greatest part of them, should concur in the same Possession, can there be any Room to suspect that it is not a real one?

But there have been many Possessions, in which all these Circumstances have concurr'd together. There have therefore been real ones, but especially those which the Gospel declares as such. God was pleased to permit, that in our Saviour's Time there should be many such in Israel, to furnish him with Occasions of signalizing his Power, and to supply us with more Proofs of his Mission and Divinity.

Though we must own, that true Possessions of the Devil are very rare, and very difficult to be distinguish'd, yet it cannot be allow'd that they are miraculous. They do not happen without the Permission of God, but they are neither contrary nor superior to the Laws of Nature. Nobody thinks he has recourse to a Miracle, when he says, that a good Angel inspires him with good Thoughts, or prompts him to avoid any Danger. It is suppos'd in like manner, that the Devil may tempt us to Evil, excite irregular Impressions in our Bodies, or raise Tempests. The Scripture imputes to evil Angels the Death of the First-born of Egypt, and the Destruction of Sennacherib's Army. It imputes to good Angels the raining of Fire, by which Sodom and Gomorrah were consumed. These Events are miraculous in some of their Circumstances, but not in all. God only suffers the Demons to act; they then only exercise a Power that is natural to them, which was before suspended and restrain'd by the Power of God. Men generally conclude too hastily concerning the Power of a Spirit, which they know so little of.

Joseph. Antiq. l. 7. c. 25. Josephus was of Opinion, that Possessions of the Devil, were caused by the Souls of wicked Men, who dreading to repair to the Place of their Punishment, seize upon the Body of some Man, toss it and torment it, and do what they can to destroy it. This Sentiment appears to be peculiar to Josephus; for the generality of Jews did not doubt but that it was the Devils who had Possession of the Demoniacks. The Scripture shews us in Tobit, that the Demon Asmodeus was put to flight by the Fumes of the Liver of a Fish. Josephus relates, that Solomon compos'd Exorcisms to drive out the evil Spirits out of the Bodies of those that were possess'd, and that a Jew named Eleazar cured some that were possess'd, in the Presence of Vespasian, by putting a Ring under their Nose, in which was inclosed the Root of an Herb recommended by Solomon. At the same time that the Name of this Prince was pronounced, and the Exorcism that he had taught, the Patient fell upon the Ground, and the Devil ceased to torment him. They believed therefore, that the Devils could act upon Bodies, and that Bodies also made an Impression upon them. Upon this Subject of Possessions and Obsessions of the Devil, the Reader may consult our Dissertation which we have compos'd for that Purpose, and is printed in the new Collection of our Dissertations by themselves, in three Volumes in Quarto, at Paris, 1720.

POSTS. This Name is given to Messengers or regulated Couriers, appointed to carry with Expedition the Dispatches of Princes, or the Letters of private Persons in general. Lewis Horninck has written a very accurate Treatise, concerning the Original of Posts. He makes four Kinds of 'em, those that go on Horse-back, by Water, in a Chariot or Chaise, or those that travel on Foot. We may also refer to the Article of Posts, the Manner of conveying Intelligence by Beacons, or Signals, which are set up at several Distances on the Tops of Mountains. This latter Method we may observe to have been made use of in Scripture. Isaiah says, That the Lord shall set up a Signal among the Nations, to gather together the scatter'd Children of Israel, and to bring them back into their own Country, from the four Corners of the Earth. Elsewhere he says, That Signals shall be set up to assemble the Troops that were to compose the Army of Darius the Mede. And again, All ye Inhabitants of the World, and Dwellers on the Earth, see ye, when he lifteth up an Ensign on the Mountains, and when he bloweth a Trumpet, hear ye. These Signals were set up on the Tops of very high Trees or Masts. Till ye be left as a Beacon [or Mast] upon the Top of a Mountain, and as an Ensign on an Hill. See Isaiah xxxiii. 23. xlix. 22. lxii. 10. Jerem. iv. 6. i. 2. li. 12, 27.

'Tis thought that the Use of Posts is derived from the Persians. Diodorus Siculus observes, That the Kings of Persia, that they might have Intelligence of what pass'd through all the Provinces of their vast Dominions, placed Centinels at Eminences, at convenient Distances, where Towers were built. These Centinels gave notice of publick Occurrences from one to another, with a very loud and shrill Voice, by which News was transmitted from one Extremity of the Kingdom to another with great Expedition.

But as this could not be practised except in the Case of general News, which it was expedient that the whole Nation should be acquainted with; Cyrus, as Xenophon relates, set up Couriers and Places for Post-horses, building on purpose on all the high high Roads, Places for the Reception of the Couriers, where they were to deliver their Pacquets to the next, and so on. This they did Night and Day, so that no Rain or bad Weather was to stop them; and, in the Judgment of many, they went faster than Cranes could fly. This is what Xenophon says.

Herodot. l. 8. c. 98. Herodotus owns, That nothing swifter was known, for a Journey by Land. Xerxes, in his famous Expedition against Greece, planted Posts from the Egean Sea to Shushan, or Susa, to send Notice thither of what might happen to his Army: He placed these Messengers from Station to Station, to convey his Pacquets, at such Distances from each other as an Horse might easily travel.

We see Couriers or Posts plainly described in the Book of Esther: It is there said, That Ahasuerus, otherwise Darius, Son of Hystaspes King of Persia, sent Expresses to all the Nobles of his Kingdom, to give them Orders to put to Death all the Jews in their respective Provinces: Missæ sunt per Cursores Regis ad universas Provincias. And when these first Orders were to be revoked, Dispatches were sent by the Couriers; Missæ per Veredarios qui per omnes Provincias discurrerent. (Esth. iii. 13. — Esth. viii. 10.)

D'Herbel. Bibliot. Orient. p. 287. col. 1. The Orientals impute to Darius King of Persia, Cotemporary with Philip King of Macedon, the Invention of Posts through all the Provinces of his Kingdom, that he might easily know every thing that passed therein. Plutarch. lib. de Fortun. Alex. Darius Codomannus, who was conquered by Alexander the Great, was a Courier of the King, before he obtain'd the Regal Power.

The Greeks borrow'd the Use of Posts from the Persians, and, in Imitation of them, called them Angari. Matth. v. 41 Jesus Christ, in his Gospel, alludes to these Angares, or Posts, when he says, If any one compels you to go a Mile with him, do not refuse to go two Miles; Si quis te angariaverit milliarium, vade & duo: Because the Cities were compell'd to provide Horses, or Couriers, for the publick Posts.

Among the Romans, it was Augustus that first set up publick and regular Posts. They were at first young Men, active and nimble, who run from Post to Post, and delivered Pacquets from Hand to Hand. Afterwards they were changed into Post-Chariots and Horses, for the greater Expedition: Sueton. in August. Juvenes primò modicis intervallis, deinde vehicula disposuit. Adrian regulated the Posts with more Regularity than before, and discharg'd the People of the Obligation they were under before, of furnishing Horses and Carriages.

Procopius assures us, that the Emperors appointed Posts upon the great Roads, to be ready at Hand, and that they might be speedily inform'd of whatever pass'd in the Empire: There were not fewer than five Posts a-Day, and sometimes eight: They kept forty Horses at each Post, and as many Post-men and Riders as were necessary. Justinian dismiss'd the Posts at several Places, and particularly those that went from Calcedon to Diacibiza, which is the ancient Lybissa, famous for Hannibal's Tomb, lying in the Gulph of Nicomedia. The same Author tells us, that Justinian set up Ass-Posts in several Places of the Levant.

The Use of Posts having declined with the Empire, Charlemaign made many Attempts, about the Year 807, to restore them again: But his Undertaking was not prosecuted by his Successors. Lewis XI. [a] is thought to have set up the Common Posts at every two Leagues Distance, throughout the Kingdom of France. Count Taxis first set them up in Germany at his own Expence: And, as a Recompence, the Emperor Matthias, in 1616, gave him, in Fee, the Office of Post-Master General, to himself and his Successors, for ever. [b]

As high as the Ninth Century there were Publick Couriers set up in several Places of the Ottoman Empire: [c] Some went on Foot, and others on Horse-back, and carry'd Dispatches from the Emperor with wonderful Diligence. There are some also among the Chinese; but they are appointed only to carry Orders from the King, and the Governors of Provinces, and, in a Word, for Publick Affairs, and those of the greatest Consequence.

POTIPHAR, or Putiphar, an Officer of the Court of Pharaoh King of Egypt, and General of his Troops, according to the Version of the Vulgate, or Chief of his Butchers or Cooks, according to the Hebrew [d]. The same Text calls him Eunuch [e]: But it is very probable that this Word, in this Place, means only an Officer of the King's Court. Certain it is, that Potiphar was married, and had Children also, if Asenath Daughter of Potipherah, who was given to Joseph for Wife, were his Daughter, as most of the Interpreters agree, and as it will be mention'd afterwards.

Potiphar then having bought Joseph, [f] who was sold to him as a Slave by the Midianites, who had bought him of his Brethren; he seeing all Things to prosper in his Hands, took an Affection to him, Gen. xxxix. 1, 3, 4, &c. and gave him the Superintendance of his whole whole House. But, some Years after, [a] the Wife of Potiphar, having taken an unlawful Liking to Joseph, and having even solicited him to the Crime of Adultery, Joseph refused her. Then, the Love of this Woman being changed into Rage, she accused him to her Husband, of making Attempts upon her Chastity. Potiphar being too easy to believe this Accusation, put Joseph into Bonds; and having, by Employment, the Charge of the Prisoners, he laid this Care upon Joseph; whether he had found out his Innocence, or whether he thought him fitter for this Office than any other of his Domesticks, as being himself confined in the Prison with the other Prisoners.

But God had replenish'd Joseph with his own Spirit, and had given him an extraordinary Talent of Interpreting Dreams, (Gen. chap. xl, xli.) which made him known to Pharaoh, upon the Occasion related under the Article of Joseph. This Prince made him Ruler of his own House, and of all the Land of Egypt, [b] and gave him in Marriage Asineth Daughter of Potipher, or Potipherah, Priest of Heliopolis, or Priest of the City of On, according to the Hebrew. (Gen. xli. 45.)

Opinions are divided upon the Question, whether this Potiphar be the same as Joseph's Master. The Hebrews [c], Origen [d], St. Jerom, Abbot Rupert, Tostat, and some others, think it is the same Person. And the Jews, cited in Origen, think it was Asineth that informed Potiphar of the Injustice of the Accusation that her Mother had form'd against Joseph. The Quality of Chief of the Army of Pharaoh, and that of Head of the Cooks or Butchers, or, of those that slew the Victims; (for the Hebrew Text [e] may signify all these), are not incompatible with the Dignity of Priest of Heliopolis. The different Ways by which the Names of Potiphar are written, in Genesis, chap. xxxviii. where the Master of Joseph is mention'd, and in chap. xli. wherein his Father-in-Law is mention'd, is so inconsiderable, that it hardly deserves to be taken Notice of. Lastly, Tho' the City of Heliopolis, wherein Potiphar was Priest, was pretty far from that of Tanis, where the King of Egypt kept his Court, and where Potiphar had an Employment; it was not so far off, but that these two Employments were very consistent. Potiphar might divide his Time between the King's Service, and his Attendance at the Temple of Heliopolis, in Quality of Priest of this City; for it appears from Strabo, (Strabo l. 16.) that anciently there were a great Number of Priests in this City, where their chief Employment was to study Philosophy and Astronomy, and where are still to be seen great Apartments where they had their Habitations. Nothing in Egypt was more grand than these Priests, and several among them have been exalted to the Crown itself. Their Quality of Priests, did not exclude them either from Offices at Court, or in the Camp.

We think, therefore, that no Inconvenience can follow, from supposing that Potiphar, Joseph's Master, might afterwards become his Father-in-Law; and we have answer'd beforehand such Reasons as have been brought to support the contrary Opinion. These Reasons may be seen under the Article Asineth, and in our Commentary upon Genesis, chap. xli.

POTTER. Frequent mention is made of the Potter, in Scripture. Jeremiah represents him to us at work, sitting upon two Stones. (Jer. xviii. 3. על האבנים super duos lapides.) And the Author of Ecclesiasticus says, So doth the Potter sitting at his Work, and turning the Wheel about with his Feet; who is alway carefully set at his Work, and maketh all his Work by Number: He fashioneth the Clay with his Arm, and boweth down his Strength before his Feet. (Ecclus. xxxviii. 29, 30.) Homer, quoted by Strabo, saith, That the Potter turns his Wheel with his Hands. (Homer. Strab. l. 7. Geograph.) And at this Day there is a great Difference in the several Manners and Postures used by the Potters, when they work at their Art.

When God would shew his absolute Dominion over Men, and his irresistible Power over their Hearts, he has often recourse to the Similitude of a Potter, who makes what he pleases of his Clay; sometimes a Vessel of Honour, and sometimes of Dishonour; now forming it, and then breaking it; now preserving it, and then rejecting it. Thou shalt break them with a Rod of Iron; thou shalt dash them in Pieces like a Potter's Vessel. (Psal. ii. 9.) As the Clay is in the Potter's Hand, to fashion it at his Pleasure; so Man is in the Hand of him that made him, to render to them as liketh him best. (Ecclus. xxxiii. 13.) Shall the Thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus? Hath not the Potter Power over the Clay, of the same Lump, to make one Vessel to Honour, and another unto Dishonour? (Rom. ix. 21.) See also Jer. xviii. 2, 3, &c.

POTTERS FIELD; the Field that was bought with the Money, for which Judas sold our Saviour Christ, and which he brought back again to the Temple. (Mat. xxvii. 7, 10.) See the Article Aceldama. This Field is seen to this Day to the South of Mount Sion, and about a Stone's Cast from the Pool of Siloam: It is surrounded by Walls of the Length of seventy Cubits, and of the Breadth of fifty; and cover'd with a Vault, with seven Openings above, to let down down the Bodies which are to be buried there, and which are consumed in the Space of twenty-four Hours. This Earth must necessarily abound with the Spirit of a very corrosive Salt, that can dissolve Flesh in so little Time. They say it was the Empress Helena that caus'd the Vault to be built over this Field, which is still there to be seen; and 'tis said likewise, that she loaded several Ships with the Earth of Aceldama, and order'd it to be carry'd to Rome, where it was laid near the Mount Vatican, and still preserves to this Day its Quality of consuming dead Bodies in the Space of four and twenty Hours. This Place is call'd the Holy Field, and serves for a Burying-place to Strangers. Cornelius à Lapide assures us, that he has seen it at Rome, and that he was inform'd of this Matter by the Curate of the Place.

Adrichom. Cornel. à Lapide in Matth.

We cannot tell what Use the Potter could make of this Field, except it was to dry his Pots before he baked them; and the Price of thirty Pieces of Silver, for which it was bought, shews it was of no considerable Value. Raban Maur is quoted, to shew, that Judas himself was the first that was buried in this Place. The Jews of Pisa, they say, have a Burial-place very like this at Rome, where the Bodies are consumed in a very short Time; and they think themselves happy that they can be buried there, because they think the Earth was brought from Jerusalem. The Jews of the neighbouring Cities esteem it as an Honour, that they can be buried there; which is some Comfort to 'em, for their Misfortune, that they cannot be buried at Jerusalem.

We read in the Mishna, that they did not allow Malefactors, or such as were executed for their Crimes, a Burial in the Tombs of their Fathers, except that their Flesh had first been consumed in other Places appointed for the Punishment of such Offenders. And 'tis, perhaps, for this Reason, that Joseph of Arimathea begg'd the Body of Jesus from Pilate, that he might immediately lay him in a private Sepulchre, before he was laid in this publick Burying-place, where he might have been undistinguish'd from the common Criminals.

POVERTY. Voluntary Poverty is commended, in the Gospel, as the first of the Beatitudes: Jesus Christ has sanctify'd it in his own Person, and in that of his Parents; in that of his Apostles, and of the most perfect of his Disciples. But Involuntary Poverty, especially when it is extreme, can only be consider'd as a Consequence of Sin, and as a Punishment from God. Solomon besought the Lord, to give him neither Poverty nor Riches; that is, he look'd upon both Extremes, as two dangerous Rocks to Vertue: He asked only for what was convenient for him; Mendicitatem & divitias ne dederis mihi, tribue tantùm victui meo necessaria. Nothing is more earnestly recommended in the Ancient Law, and also in the New, than Alms and Compassion to the Poor.

Prov. xxx. 8.

Moses would have them to be admitted to the religious Feasts that were celebrated in the Temple; and order'd, that in the Fields, in the Vineyards, and upon the Trees, something should be left on purpose for them; that in the Sabbathical Years and the Years of Jubilee, all should be left in common for the Poor, the Widow, and the Orphan. He commanded them to lend to the Poor, and acquainted them that the Poor should never be wanting in the Country, but that they should always have Opportunity to bestow their Alms. That if any Pledge be taken from the Poor, they shall not enter their Houses to take it by Force, but shall receive what is offer'd; and that if the Poor is forced to give his Goods or his Cloaths, they shall be restor'd him at Night, that he may have wherewith to cover himself. Jesus Christ has above all carry'd this Point of the Law of Moses, concerning Alms-giving, to its highest Pitch of Perfection; he has practised it himself, he has recommended it to his Disciples, and has inspired his Servants with the tenderest Charity towards the Poor. He advised those that would in earnest become his Disciples, to sell all that they had, and give it to the Poor. He gives us excellent Rules for the practising of Charity, and avoiding Vain-glory and Ostentation, which otherwise may be the Occasion of losing all the Fruits of our Charity. See Matth. vi. 1, 2, 3, 4.

Deut. xvii. 11, 12. Lev. xix. 10. & xxiii. 22. Exod. xxiii. 11. Deut. xv. 8, 9. Deut. xxiv. 12, 14. Matth. xix. 21. Luke xviii. 22.

The Jews take great Care of the Poor of their Nation. In most considerable Cities they have several established Societies, on purpose for the Poor. One of 'em, for Example, receives Alms for such Poor as are too modest to ask for themselves; another makes a Gathering for the Redemption of Captives; a third for providing Portions for poor Maidens. Besides which, there are two Persons appointed for the ordinary Collection, which is made every Sabbath-day. They go from House to House, without ever parting, that they may not be liable to the Suspicion of violating their Trust; and when they distribute what they have gather'd, they call a third Person to their Assistance. Every Saturday the Parnassim, or Judges of the Synagogue, give to each poor Person wherewith to maintain themselves and Family for the whole following Week.

Leo of Modena, of the Ceremonies of the Jews, p. 1. c. 14.

When any one is found to be under any urgent Necessity, and which exceeds their ordinary Charities, the Chanter passes thro' the Synagogue, and says, to all those that promise their Relief, Blessed be such an one, who gives for such an Occasion. Every one promises according as he is disposed, and afterwards they gather from House to House what has been promis'd; for the Jews meddle not with Money on the Saturday. These Promises are always strictly perform'd. If the Synagogue of the Place is not thought to be sufficient for the present Occasion, they give out a Certificate, which they send to other Synagogues, who receive it into their Houses, and give their Contributions to it both publick and private.

Vide apud Selden. de Jure Nat. & Gent. l. 6. c. 6. 'Tis a Maxim of the Talmudists, that a poor Man ought never to be sent away empty-handed, even tho' we could afford him but a Grain of Wheat. According to them, the least charitable should give a tenth part of their Estate, and others as far as a fifth part. Nor is it sufficient to relieve the Poor in his present Necessity, but he must be cloathed suitably to his Birth and Education; and he must have a Horse and a Slave bought for him, if he had such before he fell into Poverty. Those that refuse the Rates they are assessed at, are punish'd by the Judges, as they formerly were by the Sanhedrim, who condemned them to the Penalty of the Whip, 'till they had satisfy'd what had been demanded of them. Maimonides says, that sometimes Entry was made into their Houses, and Pledges were forcibly taken for such Alms as were due from them.

PRAYER. The Prayers that we direct to God, are the ordinary Conveyance of the Graces that we receive from him. The Prayers of a just Man are of great Power with God. The Saints both of the Old and New Testament have pray'd; Jesus Christ himself, the great Example of the Righteous, and of the Elect, taught us to pray, to inform us, that 'tis by that we honour God, and draw down upon our selves his Favours and his Graces. Multum valet deprecatio justi assidua, says St. James. (Jac. v. 16, 17.) The Apostle St. Paul throughout almost all his Epistles, entreats the Faithful to pray for him, or offers to God his own Prayers for them.

Publick Prayer. Quite down from the first Promulgation of the Law, the Hebrew Nation did not intermit to have publick Prayer in the Tabernacle, or in the Temple, as Time served. This publick Prayer consisted in the Offering of the Evening and Morning Sacrifices, every Day of the Year, and in the Prayers that the Priests and Levites offer'd up in this Place. We do not pretend to affirm, that there was then a regular Form or Office established in the Temple, something like what we see in our religious Communities: But there was something equivalent to it; every Day they offer'd there Sacrifices, Incense, Offerings, First-fruits; they perform'd there every Day the Ceremonies for the Redemption of the First-born, for the Purification of such Men or Women as had contracted any Pollutions; in a Word, they came thither from all Parts of Palestine, to discharge their Vows, and to satisfy their particular Devotions, not only on the great and solemn Days, but also on ordinary Days; but nothing of this was perform'd without Prayer.

The Author of Psal. cxix. says, that he pray'd to God, or praised him seven times a-day. Septies in die laudem dixi tibi. And the Author of Psal. lv. says; Evening and Morning, and at Noon will I pray, and cry aloud, and he shall hear my Voice. Daniel bent his Knees three times a-day, and (Dan. vi. 10.) worshipped the Lord, opening his Windows, and turning himself towards Jerusalem. Tribus temporibus in die flectebat genua sua, & adorabat. The Levites that were appointed to take Care of the Temple, lifted up their Hands in the Night-time, and encouraged one another to adore the Lord. In noctibus extollite manus vestras in sancta, & benedicite Domino. (Psalm cxxxiii. 2.) The Psalmist says, that he arose in the Middle (Psal. cxviii. 62.) of the Night, to praise the Lord. Media nocte surgebam ad confitendum tibi. In Nehemiah (Nehem. ix. 3.) we see four Hours of Prayer on a Fast Day. Surrexerunt ad standum & legendum quater in die, & quater confitebantur & adorabant Dominum.

Some Rabbins inform us, that Abraham instituted Morning-prayer, Isaac that at Mid-day, and Jacob that at Evening. Others think, that nothing was fix'd relating to the Hour or Form of Prayer, 'till the Time of the Captivity of Babylon.[a] Before that Time every one pray'd as his Devotion prompted him, and according as his Heart was disposed. But during the Captivity, Esdras observing that several Jews mingled foreign Terms with their Prayers, which were not suitable to the Sanctity of that Exercise; he compos'd eighteen Benedictions, which every Israelite is obliged to learn, and to repeat every Day. The Rabbi Gamaliel added a nineteenth to them, a little while before the Destruction of the Temple. It is against Apostates and Hereticks, and it is not doubted but under these Names he meant the Christians. Sure it is that these eighteen Prayers are of great Antiquity; for the Mishnah speaks of them as of a Formula that had been for a long Time established. (Misnah in Barachot. c. 4. §. 3.)

The same Esdras also fix'd the Time for Prayer.[b] And as they offer'd to God the perpetual Sacrifice in the Evening and Morning,

[a] Basnage's History of the Jews, t. 5. l. 7. c. 17. art. 3. commentat. in Act. iii. 1.

[b] Maimon. apud Vitring. de Syn. l. 1. part. 2. c. 12.

Morning, he appointed two ſolemn Prayers for theſe two Seaſons. On Feſtival Days and the Sabbath there was a Sacrifice about the Middle of the Day; he order'd a third Prayer for this Time alſo. And becauſe the Evening Sacrifice was conſuming in the Night-time, he appointed a Nocturnal Prayer.

However, there are but three Hours that are obligatory each Day for Prayer, in the Morning, at Noon, and in the Evening. Morning Prayer might be perform'd any time from Sun-riſing to the third Hour of the Day; that is, 'till nine o'Clock in the Morning in the Equinox. That in the Middle of the Day, from the third Hour to the ſixth; that is, from nine in the Morning 'till Noon. That in the Evening from three o'Clock in the Afternoon 'till ſix in the Evening, during the Equinox. The Prayer that was added on Feſtivals was ſaid about nine o'Clock, and might be compleated at Noon. That upon Faſt Days was not ſettled.

The publick Prayers that were celebrated in the Synagogues, were perform'd thrice every Day. The Miniſter began the Service with a Prayer which was call'd Kaddiſh, becauſe therein they ask'd of God to ſanctify his Name, after this Manner; O God, let thy Name be magnify'd and ſanctify'd in the World, which thou haſt created according to thy good Pleaſure. Let thy Kingdom have Dominion therein, let Redemption flouriſh, and let the Meſſiah come ſpeedily, that thy Name may be glorify'd, &c. This Prayer paſſes for the moſt antient that the Jews have preſerved; and as it is rehearſed in the Chaldee Language, it gives Room to think, that it was compoſed during the Babylonian Captivity, or a little Time after the Return from that Captivity. The People anſwer, Amen. It ſeems to be from hence that our Saviour borrow'd thoſe Words in the Lord's Prayer; Hallowed be thy Name, thy Kingdom come.

After this Anthem, or Benediction, they heretofore repeated the Decalogue, which is the Foundation of the Jewiſh Religion. But at preſent they content themſelves with reading a Paſſage out of the fifth Chapter of Deuteronomy, which begins with theſe Words; Hear, O Iſrael. When this Leſſon is ended, as alſo the Benediction that follow'd, the whole Aſſembly aroſe, and pray'd ſtanding with a low Voice, the Miniſter as well as the reſt. After this private Prayer, every one goes three Steps backwards out of Reſpect, and the Miniſter repeats the eighteen Prayers, of which the three firſt contain the Praiſes of God, the twelve following regard the Neceſſities of the Church and of private Perſons, and the three laſt contain a Confeſſion of their own Unworthineſs and Inſufficiency. It is allow'd after the third Bleſſing to reſume their Places again, that is, to advance three Steps forwards.

When they are come to the Prayer which is call'd Modim, they muſt ſtoop a little. They ſit down while they repeat other Prayers, ſometimes they hang down their Heads, at other Times they lift up their Voice, according to the Tenour of the Prayer that is pronounced. After ſeveral Benedictions and ſeveral Pſalms, they repeat the Anthem, by which the Office was begun. Then the Miniſter pronounces the Benediction to the People, who withdraw, ſaying; Lord, do thou guide me in thy Juſtice, and prepare the Way before me, becauſe of my Enemies. And ſuch are the Morning Prayers.

Thoſe at Noon and at Evening are alſo perform'd regularly every Day. The Miniſter of the Synagogue preſides therein, and the Prayers, the Benedictions, and the Leſſons are different, but yet almoſt in the ſame Order. The Language they uſe is the Hebrew, with ſome Forms of Prayer in the Chaldee Tongue. The Generality of the Jews do not perfectly underſtand either of theſe Languages; but the long Uſe they have had, of praying in theſe Tongues, and the great Number of Words they are ſtill acquainted with in both, are the Reaſons that they do not anſwer Amen without ſome Underſtanding of what they ſay. Juſt as among us [Roman Catholicks] many Perſons that never ſtudy'd the Latin Tongue, yet, however, underſtand it pretty well in the Reading of the Goſpel, and in the Pronunciation of the Prayers of the Church, ſo as to join their Attention to that of the Prieſts.

Every Jew is oblig'd to repeat an Hundred Benedictions in a Day. To theſe Benedictions they muſt add certain Extracts out of the Pſalms, which are the moſt effectual for raiſing a Spirit of Piety. They chiefly make Choice of the latter Verſes of the hundred and forty-ſixth Pſalm, and every one ſings them according to the Cuſtom of his Country. The Germans ſing them higher, and with greater Vehemence than others. The Spaniards and thoſe of the Levant approach nearer to the Turkiſh Way of Singing; and the Italians ſing them compoſedly, and with Eaſe.

When they have ſung theſe Pſalms, they read the Shema, that is to ſay, three different Sections taken out of Deuteronomy vi. 4, 9. xi. 19, 21. and Numbers xv. 37, 41. They are call'd Shema, becauſe the firſt of theſe Sections begins by the Word Shema, which ſignifies, Hear. Theſe Sections of Scripture are interrupted by Prayers and Bleſſings, which often mention the Unity of God. Theſe Prayers are ended by bleſſing God who redeems Iſrael; and when they pronounce theſe laſt Words, they riſe up, and begin to repeat the eighteen Prayers

Prayers and Benedictions, which Esdras left to the great Synagogue, to be a Rule and Standard for all their Prayers. When they have rehearsed these Benedictions, they sit down, they stoop with their Faces to the Ground, they raise their Heads a little, and begin their private Prayers. They repeat the hundred and forty-sixth Psalm, and then go about their Business.

Some repeat their hundred Benedictions one after another, that they may be discharged of them, as of a Task and Labour imposed upon them. But the Doctors condemn this Custom, because each Benediction should be placed in its proper Place, and connected to its proper Subject. In the Evening they begin their Prayers again, pretty nearly in the same Form; at least Maimonides tells us so, and he is the most exact of the Jewish Authors, and one whom Christian Writers chiefly rely upon.

Leo of Modena, Ceremonies of the Jews, part. 1. c. 9. Leo of Modena says, that the Custom of the greatest Part of the Jews is, to repeat along with their Morning Prayers in the Synagogue, the hundred Benedictions we now spoke of. For which Reason they call these Prayers in the Morning, Meah Beracoth, that is, the hundred Benedictions. He says, moreover, that the Rabbins have obliged the Jews to repeat Blessings and Praises peculiar to God, not only in their Prayers, and every Time they receive any Favour from him; but also on all unforeseen Occasions, and at every Action they do, whether they eat or drink, or smell any sweet Savour; lastly, for every Precept of the Law, or of the Rabbins. And this they extend to whatever new or extraordinary Thing presents itself to them. For they have different Benedictions for every thing. The Particulars of this may be seen in a large Treatise, which the Rabbins have composed about this Matter.

In the Morning, as soon as they are up, they say; Blessed be Thou, O Lord our God, King of the World, who restorest Life to the Dead, who enlightenest the Blind, and who spreadest the Earth over the Waters: And several other Things of a like kind. If they wash their Hands, according to the Precept, they say; Blessed be Thou, O Lord our God, King of the World, who hast sanctify'd us by thy Precepts, and hast commanded us to wash our Hands. When they apply themselves to study the Law; Blessed be Thou, &c. who hast given us the Law. When they take Food; Blessed be Thou, &c. who bringest Bread out of the Earth. When they drink; Blessed be Thou, &c. Creator of the Fruit of the Vine. At eating such Fruits as grow upon Trees; Blessed be Thou, &c. Creator of the Fruit of the Tree. For Fruits of the Earth; Blessed be Thou, &c. Creator of the Fruits of the Earth. For good Scents; Blessed be Thou, &c. who hast created such a Smell or Scent. When they see a high Mountain, or a wide Extent of Sea; Blessed be Thou, &c. Creator of all Things at the Beginning. At the Commencing of solemn Festivals, or when they eat, or put on any thing new; Blessed be Thou, &c. who hast given us Life, and hast preserved us to this Day. If any one dies that belongs to them; Blessed art Thou, Judge of Truth.

Lastly, On all Occasions, before and after every Action, they repeat some Blessing to God, thinking it to be a Sin of Ingratitude, to enjoy or make use of any thing in this World, without first acknowledging by some Thanksgiving, that they hold it from God, and that he is Lord and Master of every thing.

In the Jewish Prayers we may observe in general, their excessive Length, and their Battology, or their tedious Repetitions, which Jesus Christ reproaches them with in his Gospel. When ye pray, use not vain Repetitions as the Heathen do; for they think that they shall be heard for their much Speaking. They are not at all reform'd by this, in the Length of their Prayers. Secondly, as to their Posture. They generally pray sitting, or stooping with their Faces towards the Ground. They stretch out their Feet and their Hands, and make a loud Cry. Jesus Christ pray'd thus in the Garden of Olives. He prostrated himself, and sent forth a great Cry. Who in the Days of his Flesh, when he had offer'd up Prayers and Supplications, with strong Crying and Tears. Thirdly, they think that Prayers are to supply the Place of Sacrifices, which are ceased by the Destruction of the Temple and its Altars; they give them the same Name, and impute to them the same Efficacy. Basnage, History of the Jews, t. 5. l. 7. c. 17. Matth. vi. 7. Heb. v. 7.

It is very likely that the Prayers of the first Believers were formed upon the Model of those of the Jews. We have seen some Traces of the first and chief Benediction of the Jews, in the first Articles of the Lord's Prayer. Our Saviour principally intended to oppose its Brevity to the Battology of the Jews. St. Paul gives Directions, that the Faithful should pray in all Places, and at all Times, lifting up pure Hands towards Heaven, and blessing God for all Things, whether in eating or drinking, or doing any other Action; and that every thing may be done to the Glory of God. In a Word, our Saviour has recommended to us, to pray without ceasing. Vigilate omni tempore orantes. Ephes. vi. 18. 1 Thes. v. 17. 1 Tim. ii. 8. 1 Cor. x. 31. Luk. xviii. 1. xxi. 36.

The Reader will not be displeased to see here the eighteen Prayers appointed by Esdras, and the nineteenth appointed by Gamaliel. This is commonly placed in the twelfth Place, and we shall not remove it from thence.

I. "Blessed

I. "Bleſſed be thou, O Lord our God, "God of our Fathers, God of Abraham, "God of Iſaac, God of Jacob; the great "God, the powerful, the terrible, the "high-exalted, the liberal Diſpenſer of "good Things, the Creator and Poſſeſſor "of the Univerſe; who remembreſt the "good Actions of our Fathers, and who "in thy Love doſt ſend a Redeemer "to their Poſterity, for the Love of thy "Name. O King our Succour, our Sa-"viour and our Buckler: Bleſſed be thou, "O Lord, the Shield of Abraham.

II. "O Lord, thou art potent for ever. "Thou raiſeſt up the Dead, thou art "powerful to ſave, thou ſendeſt the Dew, "thou ſuppreſſeſt the Winds, thou mak-"eſt the Rain to deſcend upon the Earth, "and by thy Goodneſs thou ſupporteſt all "living Creatures. Thy rich Mercy raiſes "up the Dead, thou lifteſt up thoſe that "fall, thou cureſt the Sick, thou unbind-"eſt thoſe that are in Fetters, thou ſheweſt "the Truth of thy Promiſes to thoſe that "ſleep in the Duſt. Who is comparable "to Thee, O Lord Almighty? who is "like to thee, O King? who killeſt and "makeſt alive, and who makeſt Salvation "to ſpring up like the Graſs of the Field. "Thou art faithful, even to raiſing us "from the Dead. Bleſſed be Thou, O "Lord, who raiſeſt up the Dead.

III. "Thou art holy, and thy Name is "holy, thy Saints praiſe thee every Day, "for Thou art a great and an holy King. "O God, bleſſed be Thou, O Lord, O "God moſt holy.

IV. "'Tis Thou whoſe Goodneſs giveſt "Men all their Knowledge, and teaches "them Wiſdom. Grant us thy Mercy, "give us Knowledge, Wiſdom, and Pru-"dence. Bleſſed be Thou, O Lord, whoſe "Goodneſs gives Underſtanding and Know-"ledge to Men.

V. "Bring us back, O Father, to the "Obſervation of thy Law, and grant that "we may continue firm to thy Precepts, "devoted to thy Worſhip, O King, and "converted to Thee, by a perfect Repen-"tance in thy Preſence. Bleſſed be Thou, "O Lord, who art willing to receive us "to Repentance.

VI. "Have Mercy on us, O Father, for "we have ſinned. Pardon us, O King, "for we have tranſgreſſed thy Laws. For "thou art a merciful God, and ready to "forgive. Bleſſed be Thou, moſt merci-"ful Lord, who ſo abundantly diſplayeſt "thy Mercies, in the Pardon of our Sins.

VII. "Look with Pity on our Afflicti-"ons, we beſeech Thee. Take our Side "in all our Quarrels. Plead our Cauſe in "all our Differences. Make haſte to re-"deem us by a perfect Redemption, for "the Love of thy Name. For Thou art "our God, our King, and a powerful "Redeemer. Bleſſed be Thou, O Lord, "the Redeemer of Iſrael.

VIII. "Cure us, O Lord our God, and "we ſhall be cured, ſave us, and we ſhall "be ſaved, for thou art our Praiſe. Send "us Health, give us a compleat Remedy "for all our Weakneſſes, our Pains, and "our Wounds. For thou art a God that "cureſt, and thou art merciful. Bleſſed "be Thou, O Lord our God, who cureſt "thy People Iſrael.

IX. "Bleſs us, O Lord our God, in all "the Works of our Hands. Bleſs all the "Seaſons of the Year for our uſe. Give "us Rain and Dew, with thy Bleſſing "upon all our Country. Repleniſh the "whole Earth with thy Benedictions, and "ſend neceſſary Moiſture upon all the "Places of the habitable Earth. Bleſſed "be Thou, O Lord, who extendeſt thy "Benediction upon the Year.

X. "Aſſemble us all together, at the "Sound of the great Trumpet, to cauſe "us to enjoy Liberty. Diſplay the Stan-"dard, to bring back into their own Coun-"try all thoſe of the Captivity, from the "four Corners of the Earth. Bleſſed be "Thou, O Lord, who aſſembleſt the diſ-"perſed of thy People Iſrael.

XI. "Reſtore us our Judges as heretofore, "and our Counſellors as at the Beginning. "Put away from us Affliction and Trou-"ble. Do Thou only reign over us, in "thy Goodneſs and Mercy, in Juſtice and "Equity. Bleſſed be Thou, O Lord our "God, who loveſt Juſtice and Equity.

XII. (This twelfth Prayer is thought to be againſt the Chriſtians.) "Let there be "no Hope for them who renounce the true "Religion. Let all Hereticks, how many "ſoever they may be, periſh as in a Mo-"ment, and let the Kingdom of Pride be "quickly deſtroy'd in our Days. " be Thou, O Lord, who causest the " Horn of our Salvation to flourish.

XVI. " Hear our Voice, O Lord our " God, most beneficent Father; pardon " us, and have Mercy on us. Receive " our Prayers in thy Mercy and Favour, " and send us not away out of thy Pre- " sence, O King, with empty Hands. For " Thou hearest with Pity the Prayers of " thy People Israel. Blessed be Thou, O " Lord, who hearest our Prayers.

XVII. " Accept thy People Israel, O " Lord our God, and have Regard to " their Prayers. Restore thy Worship in " the inward Parts of thy Temple. Make " haste to receive with Favour and Love " the Burnt-offerings of Israel, and their " Prayers; and let the Worship of Israel " thy People be always acceptable to " Thee. Blessed be Thou, O Lord, who " restorest thy divine Presence to Sion.

XVIII. " We render Thee our Praises " and Thanksgivings, for Thou art the " Lord our God, the God of our Fathers " for ever. Thou art our Rock, and the " Rock of our Life, the Buckler of our " Salvation. We render Thee our Thanks " from Generation to Generation, and we " will declare thy Praises, for our Life is " always in thy Hands, and our Soul is " ever depending on Thee, because thy " Signs are always with us; and thy Mi- " racles and marvellous Goodness are con- " tinually before our Eyes, Morning, " Evening, and Night. Thou art good, " and thy Compassions cannot be exhau- " sted. Thou art merciful, and thy Kind- " nesses never fail. We hope in Thee for " ever, and may thy Name, O King, be " for ever blessed for so great Favours. " May it be magnify'd and glorify'd for " all Eternity, and may every thing that " breathes pay Thee its Tribute of Thanks. " Selah. And may they celebrate thy " Name in Truth and Sincerity, O God of " our Salvation and our Succour. Selah. " Blessed be Thou, O Lord, whose Name " is good, and to whom it is fit always to " render Praises and Thanksgivings.

XIX. " Grant to us, and to Israel thy " People, Peace, Favour, Blessing, Grace, " Kindness, and Piety. Bless us, O our " Father, bless us all together, by the " Light of thy Face. For by the Light " of thy Face Thou hast given us, O Lord " our God, the Law of Life, Love, Kind- " ness, Equity, Benediction, Piety, Life, " and Peace. May it please Thee at all " Times and Seasons to bless thy People " Israel, and to grant them Peace. Bles- " sed be Thou, O Lord, who blessest thy " People Israel, and givest them Peace. " Amen.

Prayers for the Dead. I shall confine myself here to what is found in Scripture, concerning Prayer for the Dead. In the second Book of Maccabees it is said, that Judas, sirnamed Maccabeus, made a Gathering throughout the Company, to the Sum of two thousand Drachms of Silver; he sent it to Jerusalem to offer a Sin-offering, doing therein very well and honestly, in that he was mindful of the Resurrection. For if he had not hoped that they that were slain should have risen again, it had been superfluous and vain to pray for the Dead. And also in that he perceived that there was great Favour laid up for those that died godly. (It was an holy and good Thought.) Whereupon he made a Reconciliation for the Dead, that they might be delivered from Sin. 2 Maccab. xii. 43. The Law does not enjoin Prayers for the Dead; but the Practice of the Jews, founded upon their Opinion of the Immortality of the Soul, and the Rewards and Punishments of another Life. The modern Jews follow the Tradition of their Ancestors, in the Prayers and Alms which they make for the Dead.

Difficulties are started concerning this Passage of the Maccabees now quoted. How could it be said, that these Soldiers died in Piety, qui cum pietate dormitionem acceperant, who had transgressed the Law by a kind of Sacrilege, taking Things that had been consecrated to Idols? and how could Alms and Sacrifices be of Use to them? For we know that mortal Sin is not expiated by this kind of Things. It may be answer'd, that Judas might presume that the Soldiers were touch'd with Repentance for their Crime before they died: That God had inflicted Death upon them, to expiate in this Life a Fault that was not mortal, or that these Men had an Intention of delivering up these Spoils to the General after the Battle, without reflecting upon their having been consecrated to Idols. Lastly, the Charity of Judas inspired him with Sentiments of Indulgence, which we are not allow'd to condemn; and without entering upon this Inquiry, it is enough for us to shew, that his Opinion was, that Alms, and Sacrifices, and Prayers were of use for the Consolation of the Dead. We require no more to be granted here.

Another Passage, proving the Belief and Practice of Prayers for the Dead, is taken out of the Second Epistle of St. Paul to Timothy, chap. i. 18. The Lord grant unto him (Onesiphorus) that he may find Mercy of the Lord in that Day. And in how many Things he ministred unto me at Ephesus, thou knowest very well. There is great Probability that Onesiphorus was dead at that Time. St. Paul speaks of him as of a Man no longer in this World. In the same Epistle, ch. iv. 19. he salutes the Family of Onesiphorus, but does not mention him himself. Grotius does not doubt but that Onesiphorus was dead; if it were were so, here is an express Instance of Prayers for the Dead, by St. Paul himself.

PRE-ADAMITES, or Men that are supposed to have lived before Adam. Those that think the World to have been eternal, and that it has been several times renew'd, pretend, that there were formerly Men before Adam, and this Opinion is to be found among several of the Antients. Clemens Alexandrinus, for Example, in his Book call'd Hypotyposes, held the Eternity of Matter, the Metempsychosis, and that there were several Worlds before Adam. Julian the Apostate was of Opinion, that there were many Men created at the Beginning; and this is also the Sentiment of many of the Mahometans. The Author of the Book Cozai speaks of some ancient Records, wherein mention is made of Janbuzar, Zagrit, and Roane, who lived before Adam. 'Tis said there, that Janbuzar was Adam's Master. The Rabbi Abrar assures us, that Jafar Jonan of the Turks, who lived about the Year 770, was a Pre-Adamite; since he maintain'd, that there had been three Adams before him who is mention'd by Moses; and there should be still seven others, since the World was to undergo so many Renovations.

The Jews, at least some of them, are suspected to maintain the Opinion of the Pre-Adamites. Some pretend, [a] That Moses himself, has taught, that there had been two Worlds; because he began the Book of Genesis by the Letter Beth, [b] which is the second Letter of the Alphabet, and stands for two. An ancient and famous Rabbin holds, [c] That God created seven Things before the Universe; the Law, Hell, Paradise, the Throne of his Glory, the Sanctuary, the Name of Messiah, and Repentance; all which is founded upon some Passages of Scripture, which ascribe Eternity to those Things. Maimonides suspected this Rabbin to fall in with the Opinion of Plato, who held the Eternity of the World. La Peirere pretended, That his System of the Pre-Adamites was taught by the Rabbins, and he quotes several of them in his Favour. But it must be acknowledged, that the Generality of the Jews are against him, and maintain the Creation as an Article of Faith.

The Opinion, That there were Men before Adam, is common among the Orientals. Giafar Sadich, one of the twelve Imans, being asked if there was any other Adam before ours; made answer, That there had been three before him, and that there will be still seventeen after him. And when he was asked, If God would create other Men, after the End of the World; he replied, Wou'd you have the Kingdom of God remain empty, and his Power idle? That God has been Creating through his whole Eternity, is a pretty general Opinion among the Mussulmen; That the Pyramids of Egypt were rais'd before Adam, by Gian-ben-Gian, Universal Monarch of the World, in those Ages that were before this first Man. They assure us, That there have been forty Solymans, or Universal Monarchs, of the Earth, who reigned successively for the Course of a great many Ages before the Creation of Adam. All these pretended Monarchs govern'd each over Creatures of their own Species, who were different from those of Adam's Posterity, tho' they were rational, as Men are; some of 'em had several Heads, others many Arms, and some were composed of many Bodies: Their Heads were still more extraordinary, some resembling those of an Elephant, others those of a Buffalo, or a Boar, or other Animals more monstrous. Such are the Dreams of the Oriental Mythologists.

In the last Age, La Peirere revived this Opinion of the Pre-Adamites: He says, [d] That God created Men in great Numbers, in all Parts of the World, long before the Creation of Adam. According to him, the first Men are those from whence proceeded the Gentiles; and Adam was Father of the chosen Race, or of the Jewish Nation; That Moses had no Design to trace the Original of Mankind in general, but only of the Hebrews, from whence he derived his Birth; and speaks of other Nations, but only as they have some Relation to the Jewish Affairs. He likewise asserts, That Noah's Deluge was not Universal, and that it only extended to such Countries as were inhabited by the Race of Adam: That Adam having transgressed the Commandments of God, introduced Sin into the World, and infected all his Posterity with it; but that the Gentiles, being descended from the Pre-Adamites, and not having received the Law, or any Commandment from God, did not fall into Prevarication, tho' their Lives were not exempt from Crimes; but these Crimes were not imputed to them: These might be called the Faults of Matter, with which God was not offended, because of the Ignorance of those who committed them.

We would not here be at much Pains to refute so wild and monstrous an Hypothesis: The Reader may see what we have said upon Genesis ii. 7. and such Writers as have expresly written against this Author. He renounced his Error, and lived in Retirement with the Fathers of the Oratory at Notre-dame des Virtus, near PRECIOUS. 1 Sam. xxvi. 21. The Life of Saul was precious in the Eyes of David, when having found him alone, and at a Distance from his Company, he did not think fit to lay his Hands upon him; that is to say, he look'd upon it with Reverence, and as a Thing of great Value, which it was not Psal. cxvi. 15. allow'd him to take away. Precious in the Sight of the Lord is the Death of his Saints, says the Psalmist: God has too great an Esteem for it, to give it up to the Psal lxxii. 14. Wicked. And elsewhere; Precious shall their Blood be in his Sight. The Septuagint and Vulgate read, Honorabile nomen eorum coram Isai. xiii. 12. illo. And Isaiah; Pretiosior erit vir auro; The Enemy shall be more desirous of killing the Men, than of obtaining the Booty.

Precious is also us'd for rare, or scarce: Thus in the Days of Eli the High-Priest; 1Sam.iii.1 The Word of the Lord was precious in those Days; and God did not frequently communicate himself, or there were but few Prophets. And Job, speaking of Men, Job xxviii. 10. says, Omne pretiosum vidit oculus ejus; There is nothing so rare or precious, but he desires to see, and to enjoy it. And Prov. xviii 17. ויקר רוח איש תבונה׃ Solomon; He that moderates his Words, is wise and prudent; and he that opens not his Mouth, often has Understanding. Pretiosi spiritus, vir eruditus. The Hebrew has; Pretiosus spiritus, or qui rarò spiritum emittit est vir intelligentiæ.

Si separaveris pretiosum à vili, quasi os Jer. xv. 19. meum eris; If you know how to distinguish that which is precious or valuable, from that which is vile, you shall be as the Mouth of God. 'Tis God that thus speaks to Jeremiah; If you know how to value the Gift of Prophecy as you ought, and that Function to which I appoint you, you shall be my Mouth, my Ambassador, the Interpreter of my Will and Pleasure.

PREDESTINATION, to Predestinate. This Word is taken from the Latin, Prædestinare, which sometimes barely signifies a Designation or Appointment of any particular Thing to a particular Use, or of any Person to some particular Office, or Employment. But, in the Language of the Church, and of Divines, Predestination is taken for the Design that God has formed from all Eternity, of bringing by his Grace, to Faith and eternal Salvation, some certain Persons; whilst he leaves others to continue in their Infidelity, or in their Corruptions. Those that are so left are the Reprobate, and the others are the Predestinated.

Predestination is distinguished into two Kinds; one to Grace, and the other to Glory. All that are predestinated to Grace, are not therefore predestinated to Glory; because that several of those may forfeit that Grace, and may not persevere in doing good: Whereas, the others receive from God the Gift of Calling to the Faith, of Justification, and of Perseverance; and, finally, of Glory. 'Tis of these last that St. Paul speaks; Moreover, whom he did Rom. viii. 30. predestinate, them he also called; and whom he called, them he also justified; and whom he justified, them he also glorified.

All Divines agree, and 'tis an Article of our Faith, That Predestination to Grace is of meer Favour; otherwise, Grace would not be Grace; which is an Absurdity. But Opinions are divided concerning Predestination: Some will have it to be meerly gratuitous; and others believe that God has formed his Decree of Predestination upon a View of the future Merits of the Elect. St. Austin, the Fathers that have succeeded him, Thomas Aquinas, and the most celebrated Schools of the Latin Church, hold Predestination to be of meer Favour. Some Greek Fathers, and some Latin Divines, adhere to that Predestination that is made upon a Foreknowledge of the future Behaviour of the Elect. St. Austin thus defines Predestination; he says, It is Aug. de Dono Perseverantiæ, c. 14. n. 35. a Foreknowledge and Preparation of efficacious Means; in Virtue of which, the Elect are most certainly saved: Hæc est prædestinatio sanctorum nihil aliud, præscientiæ, & præscientia scilicet, & præparatio beneficiorum, quibus certissimè liberantur quicumque liberantur. And this great Doctor was so fully persuaded of the Gratuitousness of Predestination, consider'd in its full Extent, that is to say, taken as an absolute Decree of God, who determines the Glory of his Elect, by certain effectual Means that he has prepared to bring them to it; that he makes no Scruple to give this Opinion, as the Belief Idem de Dono Perseverantiæ, c. 23. of the Church; and to maintain, that no one can oppose it, without being guilty of an Error: Idem de Dono Perseverantiæ, c. 19. n. 48. Hoc scio, neminem contra istam prædestinationem, quam secundùm scripturas sanctas defendimus, nisi errando, disputare potuisse.

The ancient Hebrews were persuaded, as well as we, that God had a Foreknowledge of what each of us should be, do, and become, both as to Good and Evil. This is included in the very Notion of God, of his Providence, and infinite Knowledge. God says to Jeremiah, Before I Jer. i. 5. formed thee in the Belly, I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the Womb, I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a Prophet unto the Nations. But when we endeavour to form a just Idea of their System of Predestination and Reprobation, and how they reconreconciled Grace and Free-Will, the Matter is not very eaſy. Theſe Things were not then ſo much enquired into as they have been ſince; and Men had not taken ſo much Pains to form Syſtems of Theology, for the Explaining of theſe Myſteries, which are ſtill ſo profound and ſo obſcure, after all our Diſcoveries.

Philo [a], Joſephus [b], and the Rabbins [c] are of Opinion, That in the Beginning God created all the Souls that exiſt, and all the Matter that compoſes the Univerſe: So that when a new Body is formed, it is not animated by a Soul newly created, but by one that was created at the Beginning of the World. Philo thinks that Angels, Demons, and the Souls of Men, are of the ſame Nature, and differ only in the Name: That as there are good and bad Genii, ſo there are good and bad Souls: That Souls, as well as Angels, have their Abode in the higheſt Region of the Air; from whence they deſcend to animate Bodies, and bring with them their good or bad Qualities: That they enjoy a perfect Liberty; and, according to the good or bad Uſe they make of it, they are puniſhed or rewarded, to all Eternity.

Joſeph. l. 18. Antiq. c. 2. & de Bello, l. 2. c. 12, &c. Joſephus acknowledges, that the Phariſees ſtand up for Fate, yet without excluding the Free-will of Man, and the Sovereign Power of God over his Creatures. That Souls that have lived well, at their Departure out of the Body, return to the Place from whence they came, with a Power of returning afterwards to animate ſome other Body; whereas the Souls of the Wicked are condemned to everlaſting Puniſhment. The Eſſenians think, That Souls are attracted, by I know not what Inclination, to incloſe themſelves in Bodies; that ſuch as live an innocent Life therein, depart, after the Death of the Body, to certain delightful Places beyond the Ocean; and thoſe of the Wicked, to dark Places, where they live in Torment.

Wiſd. viii. 19, 20. The Author of the Book of Wiſdom, whom ſeveral have thought to be Philo, makes Solomon thus ſpeak; I was a witty Child, and had a good Spirit: yea, rather, being good, I came into a Body undefiled. Where we ſee the ſame Principles as we have obſerv'd in Philo. John ix. 2. The Apoſtles, in the Goſpel, propos'd a Queſtion to Jeſus Chriſt, when they ſaw a Man that was born blind, Whether it was for the Puniſhment of his own Sins, or for thoſe of his Parents, that this Man was born blind? They therefore had a Notion, that his Soul had an Exiſtence before, and had offended God, before he animated the preſent Body.

Origen, [d] who believed the Pre-exiſtence of Souls, as well as the Hebrews, had alſo, probably, received from them his Syſtem of the Predeſtination and Reprobation of Men; according to which, he affirm'd, that God forms his Decree of Saving or Damning, of Rewarding or Puniſhing Men, upon the Knowledge he has of the good or bad Qualities with which their Souls are endued, before their Infuſion into the Body; and of the good or bad Uſe they have made of their Liberty, before their Birth, and of the Uſe they will make of it when they ſhall live upon the Earth. He was perſuaded, that before the Soul animates the Body, it is in full Liberty of doing Good or Evil; and that all the Good or Evil, the Proſperity or Adverſity, that happens to it in this Life, are either Rewards or Puniſhments for what it has perform'd well or ill in a former State: That it was for this, that Jacob was preferr'd before Eſau; that one is beloved, and the other hated; one appointed to Dominion, and the other to Subjection.

Thus, according to Origen, [e] we are not predeſtinated by the Preſcience of God, but from a Conſideration of our previous Merits. Jacob deſerved to be predeſtinated, for the Care he took of purifying his Soul; whereas Eſau, having not uſed the ſame Diligence to make himſelf worthy of God's Favours, deſerved to become a Veſſel of Diſhonour: That St. Paul alſo furniſhed from himſelf the Cauſe of his Election, to Him who knows all Things before they happen, God foreſeeing that he would labour more abundantly in the Vineyard of the Church. 'Twas from this Syſtem of Origen, that Pelagius form'd his Sentiments concerning Predeſtination and Reprobation. Which gave Occaſion to St. Jerom to ſay, That the Pelagian Hereſy is only a Branch of the Errors of Origen, and that Origen was the Predeceſſor of Pelagius: Doctrina tua Originis ramuſcula eſt. Hieron. Ep. ad Cteſiph.

St. Chryſoſtom, who may be conſider'd as the Oracle and the Mouth of the Greek Church, kept at a Diſtance from the Opinions of Origen, by maintaining, That God does not reject nor predeſtinate Men on Account of their paſt good or bad Actions, but only upon the Knowledge of their future Merits or Demerits: Whence is it, (ſays he) that Jacob is beloved, and Eſau hated? 'Tis becauſe one is good, and the other is bad. And whence is it, that, before their Birth, God determined, that the Elder ſhould be in Subjection to the Younger? 'Tis becauſe God has no need to ſtay for the Event of Things, as we muſt do, Chryſoſt. in Epiſt. ad Rom. ix. p. 325.

to judge whether a Man shall be good or bad; he sees that even before he is born. 'Twas by the Effect of his Prescience, that he chose Jacob and rejected Esau. He knew before their Birth what they would one Day prove. When he chose St. Matthew, there were several Persons who appear'd better than he; but by his infinite Penetration, he knew how to discover the Value of that Jewel, that then lay upon a Dunghill.

He adds, speaking of Pharaoh, that this hardened Prince became a Vessel of Wrath, only by his own Iniquity: That the Hebrews were Vessels of Mercy, for nothing but their Integrity and Simplicity. In another Place he says, that the Kingdom of Heaven was prepared for the Elect from the Beginning of the World, and before they were born, because God foreknew what they would afterwards be. And writing upon those Words of the Psalmist; Thou understandest my Thought afar off, he thus reasons: Some People are absurd enough to say, such an one is a good Man, because God has chosen him and loved him; and such another is wicked, because God hated him. But the Prophet here tells us, on the contrary, that God proves us by our Works. He knows whether we will be vertuous or no, even before our Birth. And by that he gives us Proofs of his Prescience, he confirms it by our Works, for fear it should be imagin'd, that his Prescience was the Cause of our Vertue.

The Greek Fathers that came after St. Chrysostome have express'd themselves much in the same manner, and the modern Greeks have follow'd the Sentiments of the Fathers before them. In the several Projects that have been form'd, for the Reunion of the Greek Church with the Latin, there were no Difficulties started about the Doctrine of Predestination and Reprobation. There was an Agreement, as to the Substance of this Article, though there was a Difference among the Greeks and Latins, as to their Way of expressing themselves. Both of them condemned Pelagius and Celestius, and maintain'd that Man was unable to do any good, without the Supernatural Assistance of God's Grace: Whereas Pelagius pretended, that Man might make use of his Liberty without the Assistance of Grace, and that Grace itself was conferr'd upon him only in proportion to his Merits. The Reader may see our Dissertation upon Predestination and Reprobation, which we have prefix'd to the Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans.

PRIEST. This Word comes from the Greek Word Presbyteros, which properly signifies an Elder, or an old Man. The Hebrew Word made use of in Scripture for a Priest, is Cohen; [a] the Greek, Hiereus, and the Latin, Sacerdos or Presbyter. But this last Word, in the Latin Text of Scripture, does not always stand for a Priest. For Example, Judith sent to call to her House Ozias, and Chabris and Charmis, the Elders of the City; Presbyteros civitatis. Jesus the Son of Sirach advises the Poor to humble themselves before the Antients, and to appear with a respectful Air before the Great. Presbytero humilia animam tuam. And elsewhere, be present in the Assembly of the Elders; In multitudine Presbyterorum prudentium sta. The Name of Presbyteri, or Elders, is given also to the two Judges of Israel that were Susanna's Accusers. But in the Latin of the New Testament, the Word Presbyter is always appropriated to the Priests. [b]

Judith viii. 9. Eccluf. iv. 7. Ecclus. vi. 35. Dan. xiii. 28.

In the Old Testament, the Priesthood was not annex'd to a certain Family, till after the Promulgation of the Law of Moses. Before that Time the First-born of every Family, the Fathers, the Princes, the Kings were Priests, born in their City and in their House. Cain and Abel, Noah, Abraham, and Job, Abimelech and Laban, Isaac and Jacob, offer'd themselves their own Sacrifices. In the Solemnity of the Covenant that the Lord made with his People, at the Foot of Mount Sinai, Moses perform'd the Office of Mediator, and young Men were chosen from among the Children of Israel, to perform the Office of Priests.

Exod. xxiv. 5, 6.

But after that the Lord had chosen the Tribe of Levi to serve him in his Tabernacle, and that the Priesthood was annex'd to the Family of Aaron, then the Right of offering Sacrifices to God was reserved to the Priests alone of this Family. The Lord says, That no Stranger, which is not of the Seed of Aaron, come near to offer Incense before the Lord; that he be not as Korah, and as his Company. The Punishment of Uzziah King of Judah is well known, who having presumed to offer Incense to the Lord, was suddenly smote with a Leprosy; put out of his Palace, and excluded from the Administration of Affairs to the Day of his Death. However it seems, that on certain Occasions the Judges and Kings of the Hebrews have offer'd Sacrifices to the Lord, especially before a constant Place of Worship was fix'd at Jerusalem. See 1 Sam. vii. 9. where Samuel, who was no Priest, offer'd a Lamb for a Burnt-sacrifice to the Lord. See also 1 Sam. ix. 13. where it is said, that this Prophet was to bless the Offering of the People, which should seem to be a Function appropriated to the Priests. Lastly, 1 Sam. xvi.

Sacrifices. I know that theſe Paſſages are commonly explain'd, by ſuppoſing that 2 Chron. i. 5. theſe Princes offer'd theſe Sacrifices by the Hands of the Prieſts; but the Sacred Text will by no means favour ſuch Explications; and it is very natural to imagine, that in the Quality of Kings and Heads of the People, they had the Privilege of performing ſome Sacerdotal Functions upon ſome extraordinary Occaſions. So we ſee David conſulted the Lord, being cloathed with the 2 Sam. vi. 14. 1 Sam. xxiii. 9. xxx. 7. Prieſtly Ephod, and upon another Occaſion he gave a ſolemn Benediction to the People. 2 Sam. vi. 18, 1 Kings viii. 55, 56. His Son Solomon alſo did the ſame.

Numb. iii. 41. The Lord having reſerved to himſelf the Firſt-born of all Iſrael, becauſe he had preſerved them from the Hand of the deſtroying Angel in Egypt, by way of exchange and as a kind of Compenſation, accepted of the Tribe of Levi for the Service of his Tabernacle. Thus the whole Tribe of Levi was appointed to the ſacred Miniſtry, but not all in the ſame manner: For of the three Sons of Levi, which were Gerſhon, Kohath, and Merari, and which are the Heads of the three great Families, the Lord choſe the Family of Kohath, and out of this the Houſe of Aaron, to exerciſe the Functions of the Prieſthood. All the reſt of the Family of Kohath, even the Children of Moſes and their Deſcendants, remain'd of the Order of mere Levites. But having already mention'd, under the Article Levites, all that concerns them, I ſhall not repeat it here, but confine myſelf to what belongs to the Prieſts only.

The High-prieſt was at the Head of all religious Affairs, and was the ordinary Judge of all Difficulties that belong'd thereto, and even of all Matters that concern'd the Juſtice and Judgments of the Jewiſh Deut. xvii. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12. Nation. If there ariſe a Matter too hard for thee in Judgment, between Blood and Blood, between Plea and Plea, and between Stroke and Stroke, being Matters of Controverſy between thy Gates; then ſhalt thou ariſe, and get thee up into the Place which the Lord thy God ſhall chooſe. And thou ſhalt come unto the Prieſts the Levites, and unto the Judge that ſhall be in thoſe Days,[a] and enquire; and they ſhall ſhew thee the Sentence of Judgment. And thou ſhalt do according to the Sentence, which they of that Place (which the Lord ſhall chooſe,) ſhall ſhew thee, and thou ſhalt obſerve to do according to all that they inform thee. According to the Sentence of the Law which they ſhall teach thee, and according to the Judgment which they ſhall tell thee thou ſhalt do; thou ſhalt not decline from the Sentence which they ſhall ſhew thee, to the right Hand nor to the left. And the Man that will do preſumptuouſly, and will not hearken unto the Prieſt (that ſtandeth to miniſter there before the Lord thy God,) or unto the Judge, even that Man ſhall dye, and thou ſhalt put away the Evil from Iſrael. Laſtly, the Reader may conſult our Diſſertation upon the Polity of the Hebrews, prefix'd to our Commentary upon the Book of Numbers; and the great Work of Selden, De Synedriis veterum Hebræorum.

The High-prieſt only had the Privilege of entering into the Sanctuary once a Year, Levit. xvi. 2, 3, 4, &c. which was the Day of ſolemn Expiation, to make Atonement for the Sins of the whole People. See the Article Expiation. He ought to be born of one of his own Tribe, whom his Father had married a Virgin, and was to be exempt from all Levit. xxi. 13. thoſe corporal Defects mentioned in Leviticus. Non accedet ad miniſterium ſi cœcus Levit. xxi. 17, 18. fuerit, ſi claudus, ſi parvo vel grandi vel torto naſo; ſi fracto pede, ſi manu; ſi gibbus, ſi lippus, ſi albuginem habens in oculo, ſi jugem ſcabiem, ſi impetiginem in corpore, vel herinoſus. In general, no Prieſt that had any corporal Defects could either offer Sacrifices, or enter into the Holy Place, to preſent the Shew-bread there. All that was allow'd him was this, to be maintain'd by the Sacrifices that were offer'd at the Tabernacle. Levit. xxi. 21, 22, 23.

God had appropriated to the Perſon of the High-prieſt the Oracle of his Truth; ſo that when he was habited with the proper Ornaments of his Dignity, and with the Urim and Thummim, he gave Anſwers to the Queſtions made to him, and God diſcover'd to him ſecret and future Things. Ex. xxviii. 30. It was forbidden him to mourn for any of Ecclus. xlv. 12. his Relations, even for his Father or 1 Sam. xxiii. 9. xxx. 7. Mother, or to enter into any Place where a dead Body lay, that he might not contract any Uncleanneſs. He could not marry a Levit. xxi. 10, 11, 12. Widow, nor a Woman that had been divorced, nor a Harlot, but a Virgin only of his own Race. He was to obſerve a ſtrict Levit. xxi. 13, 14. Continence

Vid. Exod. xxxix. 1, 2, 3. &c.

The Habit of the High-prieſt was much more magnificent than that of the other Prieſts. He had about his Waiſt a Pair of Drawers of fine Linen, and next his Skin a Linen Tunique of a particular Make. Over this Tunique he wore a long Robe of an Azure Colour, or of Hyacinth, at the Bottom of which was a Border adorn'd with little golden Bells and Pomegranates, made of Wool of different Colours, and ranged alternately at equal Diſtances. This Robe was girded about him with a broad embroider'd Saſh, which in Scripture is call'd the Ephod. It conſiſted of two coſtly Ribbons, which going round the Neck and coming over the Shoulders, croſs'd each other at the Breaſt; then turning behind, it ſerved as a Saſh to gird up the Robe afore-mentioned. Upon the Shoulders the Ephod had two large precious Stones, upon each of which were engraven Six of the Names of the Tribes of Iſrael; and before upon the Breaſt, at the Place where the Ribbons croſs'd each other, was fix'd the Pectoral or Rational of Judgment, which was a ſquare Piece of a very precious and ſolid Work, ſix Inches wide, in which were ſet twelve precious Stones, upon each of which was engraved the Name of one of the Tribes of Iſrael. Some think the Rational was double, like a Pocket or Bag, in which was included the Urim and Thummim. Others believe the Urim and Thummim were two Hieroglyphical Figures, which hung at the Bottom of the Pectoral.

The High-prieſts Tiara or Bonnet was more adorn'd and more coſtly than that of any other Prieſt, but it is not diſtinctly known what Form it was of. See what we have ſaid before under the Article CIDARIS. That which chiefly diſtinguiſh'd the Tiara of the High-prieſt, was a Plate of Gold that hung down from the Bonnet upon his Forehead, upon which was written or engraven, Holineſs to the Lord. This Plate was ty'd behind his Head with two Ribbons faſten'd at its two Ends.

2 Chron. xxix. 34. xxxv. 11.

The ordinary Prieſts ſerved immediately at the Altar, offer'd the Sacrifices, kill'd and flea'd them, and pour'd their Blood at the Foot of the Altar. They kept up a perpetual Fire upon the Altar of Burnt-ſacrifices, and in the Lamps of the golden Candleſtick that was in the Sanctuary; they kneaded the Loaves of Shew-bread, baked them, offer'd them upon the golden Altar in the Sanctuary, and changed them every Sabbath-day. Every Day, Night, and Morning, a Prieſt appointed by caſting of Lots at the Beginning of the Week, brought into the Sanctuary a ſmoaking Cenſer, and ſet it upon the golden Table, otherwiſe call'd the Altar of Perfumes.

See Luke i. 9.

Ex. xxviii.

Antiq. l. 3. c. 8.

The common Habit of the Prieſts was a Surplice or Tunique of Linen without Seam, with a Saſh of ſeveral Colours, hollow like the Skin of a Serpent, of looſe Work, about three Fingers Breadth. 'Tis thus deſcribed by Joſephus. He adds, that the Prieſts wore it upon their Breaſts, under their Arms; that a kind of Flower-work was there repreſented, with Threads of Scarlet, Purple, and Hyacinth; that it went twice round the Body, was tied before, and the Ends hung down to the Feet, to render the Prieſts more venerable. When they were in the Act of Sacrificing, they threw this Girdle over the Left Shoulder, that they might perform their Office with the greater Freedom. The Rabbins make this Saſh to be two and thirty Cubits or Elns long.

Ex. xxviii. 39. xxxix. 3. 5.

'Tis thought the High-prieſt's Saſh was of a more precious Work, for Moſes ſays it was made by the Art of the Embroiderer; and it is believed, that beſides the Threads of Purple, Crimſon, and Hyacinth, there were alſo Threads of Gold. Others maintain, that it differ'd in nothing from thoſe of the other Prieſts. The Reader may ſee Braunius, who has carefully examin'd all theſe Particulars, in his Treatiſe concerning the Habits of the Hebrew Prieſts. The High-prieſt had two Saſhes or Girdles, one to gird up his Linen Tunique, which he wore under, and the other to gird up his Robe of Azure, and which is call'd Cheſcheb ephudath, Levit. viii. 7. which we have now deſcribed by the Name of Ephod.

Antiq. l. 3. c. 8.

The Cap or Bonnet of the Prieſts [a] is call'd in Hebrew, Migbaoth, and that of the High-prieſt is call'd Miznepheth. But the Rabbins aſſure us, that theſe two Words ſignify but one and the ſame thing, and that the Bonnet of the Prieſts, as well as that of the High-prieſt, was a Cap made of a Border of Linen ſixteen Elns long, which went round the Head ſeveral times, and made a Cap not unlike a Head-piece, as the Hebrew Word Migbaoth inſinuates, which has the ſame Signification. Joſephus thus deſcribes it: "It is compoſed "of ſeveral Folds of a linen Border, "folded back and ſewed, ſo that it ap-"pears like a thick Crown worked up of "Linen. Over this Cap there is a Cloth "that covers it quite, and comes down to "the Forehead, to hide all the Plaits and "Seams."

Hieronym ad Fabiol.

Laſtly, St. Jerome gives us a Deſcription of it, that agrees neither with that of the Rabbins nor of Joſephus. This Bonnet, ſays he, is round, and like to that which is repreſented upon the Head of Ulyſſes, as if a Sphere was cut into two equal Parts, and one of the Parts was taken for a Bonnet. There is no Point at the Top, a Exodus xxviii. 11, 4. מגבעות Migbaoth. Lat. Cidaris.

Top, and it does not cover all the Hair, but leaves a third Part to be ſeen before; and that it may not fall off, it is ty'd behind with a Ribbon. Its Matter is of fine Linen, and it is cover'd with a Cloth, to hide the Foldings and the Seams. Moſes inſinuates to us, [a] that they were indeed tied on with a Ribbon, when he ſays, that at the Conſecration of the Prieſts their Bonnets were tied on.

As to the High-prieſt's Tiara, the Rabbins hardly make any Difference between it and the Bonnet of the other Prieſts, except that the High-prieſt's is flatter, and more approaching to the Form of a Turbant; whereas that of the other Prieſts more reſembles a Night-cap, riſing a little to a Point at the Top. Joſephus gives us a magnificent Deſcription of it, probably taken from what he had ſeen in his own Time, at the Temple of Jeruſalem. He ſays it was a Cap of the Colour of Hyacinth, or of an Azure Blue, which was put over the other Cap of the Shape of a Turbant, of which a Deſcription is given before. It covers the hinder Part of the Head, and the two Temples, and is incompaſs'd by a treble Crown of Gold, where there are little Buds of the Flowers of the Plant Henbane. The Circuit of theſe Flowers is interrupted on the forepart of the Tiara, to make Room for the Plate of Gold, on which the Name of God was engraven. (Antiq. l. 3. c. 5.)

The Prieſts did not wear their Hair long in the Temple, yet they did not ſhave their Heads, but only clipt their Hair with Sciſſars. Caput ſuum non radent, neque comam nutrient; ſed tondentes attondent capita ſua. They did not appear with their Heads bare during their Ceremonies. To appear bare-headed and uncover'd before any one, was look'd upon as a want of Reſpect, as it is ſtill among ſome Nations. They wore linen Drawers as well as the High-prieſt, when they went up to the Altar, that they might not ſhew any thing indecent there. The Levites had no peculiar Habit in the Ceremonies of Religion; but about the ſixty-ſecond Year of Chriſt they obtain'd from King Agrippa, that they might wear a linen Tunique as well as the Prieſts: Which Joſephus ſays, was look'd upon as an evil Preſage, Experience having always ſhewn, that Innovations in the antient Practices of religious Worſhip are always attended with ſome Diſaſter. (Ezek. xliv. 20. See Levit. x. 6. xxi. 5.) (Exodus xxviii. 42. xxxix. 27.) (Joſeph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 8. p. 699.)

The Prieſts were not ſuffer'd to offer Incenſe to the Lord with ſtrange Fire, that is, with any other Fire but what ſhould be taken from the Altar of Burnt-ſacrifices. 'Tis known with what Severity God chaſtiſed Nadab and Abihu for having fail'd herein. The Prieſts and Levites waited by the Week and by the Quarter in the Temple. They began their Week on the Sabbath-day, and ended it on the next. Moſes had fix'd the Age at which they were to enter on the ſacred Miniſtry, at twenty-five or thirty Years, and they were to end it at fifty: But in David's Time this Order was changed, and they were obliged to attend the Service of the Temple as ſoon as they were twenty Years of Age. [b] Thoſe that would dedicate themſelves to perpetual Service in the Temple, were well received, and were maintain'd by the conſtant and daily Offerings. (Levit. x. 1, 2.) (2 Kings xi. 1, 7.) (Numb. viii. 24. iv. 3.) (Deut. xviii. 6.)

The Lord had given no Lands of Inheritance to the Tribe of Levi, in the Diſtribution of the Land of Promiſe. He intended that they ſhould be ſupported by the Tythes, the Firſt-fruits, the Offerings that were made in the Temple, by their Share of the Sin-offerings and Thankſgiving-offerings that were ſacrificed in the Temple, of which certain Parts were appropriated to the Prieſts. In the Peace-offerings the Prieſts had the Shoulder and the Breaſt. In the Sin-offerings they burnt upon the Altar the Fat that covers the Bowels, the Skin of the Liver, and the Kidnies. The reſt belong'd to the Prieſt. The Skin or Fleece of every Sacrifice alſo belong'd to him; and this Article alone was no mean Allowance. When an Iſraelite kill'd any Animal for his own Uſe, he was to give the Prieſt the Shoulder, the Stomach, and the Jaws. He had alſo a Share in the Wool when the Sheep were ſhorne. All the Firſt-born, both of Man and Beaſt, belong'd to the Lord, that is to ſay, to his Prieſts. The Men were redeem'd for the Sum of five Shekels. The Firſt-born of impure Animals were redeem'd or exchang'd, but the clean Animals were not redeem'd. They were ſacrificed to the Lord; their Blood was ſprinkled about the Altar, and all the reſt belong'd to the Prieſt. See the Article FIRST-BORN. The Firſt-fruits of Trees, that is, thoſe that came on the fourth Year, belong'd alſo to the Prieſt. (Levit. vii. 33, 34.) (Levit. vii. 6, 7.) (Philo de præmiis Sacerdotum.) (Deut. xviii. 3.) (Deut. xviii. 4.) (Numb. xviii. 15, 16.) (Numb. xviii. 17.) (Lev. xix. 23, 24.)

They offer'd at the Temple the firſt of all the Fruits of the Earth, and the Quantity was fix'd by Cuſtom, which was between the fortieth and the ſixtieth Part. Beſides this, they offer'd whatever any one had vow'd to the Lord. See the Article FIRST-FRUITS before. They gave alſo to the Prieſts and Levites an Allowance out of the Dough that they kneaded. They had the Tythe of all the Fruits of the Land, and of all the Animals which were fed under the Shepherd's Crook. And when the Levites had collected all the Tythes and all the Firſt-fruits, they ſet apart the Tythe of that for the Prieſts. Thus (Lev. xxvii. 31, 32.) (Numb. xviii. 26.)

AARON AND HIS SONS CONSECRATED BY MOSES.

Thus though the Priests had no Lands or Inheritance in the Country, they lived however in great Plenty, and were abundantly supplied with what was necessary for their Subsistance. God had also provided them with Houses and Accommodations, by appointing them eight and forty Cities for their Habitation. In the Precincts of these Cities they possess'd only as far as a thousand Cubits beyond the Walls. Of these forty-eight Cities, six were appointed to be Cities of Refuge, for the Sake of those that should commit any casual and involuntary Manslaughter. The Priests had thirteen of these for their Share, and all the others belong'd to the Levites.

Numb. xxxv. 1, 2, 3.

Josh. xxi. 19, 20.

One of the chief Employments of the Priests, next to attending upon the Sacrifices and the Service of the Temple, was the Instruction of the People, and the deciding Controversies; the distinguishing the several Sorts of Leprosie, the Causes of Divorce, the Waters of Jealousy, Vows, all Causes relating to the Law, the Uncleannesses that were contracted several Ways; all these Things were brought before the Priests. For the Priests Lips should keep Knowledge, and they should seek the Law at his Mouth; for he is the Messenger of the Lord of Hosts. They publickly bless'd the People in the Name of the Lord. In the Times of War their Business was to carry the Ark of the Covenant, to consult the Lord, to sound the holy Trumpets, and to pronounce these Words at the Head of the Army; "Hear, O "Israel, you are now going to fight with "your Enemies, but fear not, for the "Lord is in the midst of you; he will "fight for you, and defend you from all "Danger."

Numb. x. 8, 9.

The Consecration of Aaron and of his Sons was perform'd by Moses in the Desart with great Solemnity, and this is what pass'd upon that Occasion. Aaron and his Sons wash'd themselves all over in Water, and presenting themselves to Moses at the Tabernacle of the Covenant, with the Sacrifices that were to be offer'd for them, Moses first dress'd them with all the Ornaments mention'd before, then with the Oyl of the sacred Unction he anointed Aaron by pouring it upon his Head. Afterwards he offer'd up a Calf for a Sin-offering, and Aaron and his Sons having laid their Hands on this Sacrifice, Moses kill'd it, put some of its Blood with his Finger upon the Horns of the Altar, burnt the Fat upon the Fire of the Altar, and sent the Flesh, the Skin, and the Dung to be burnt without the Camp. After which he offer'd a Ram for a Burnt-offering. Aaron and his Sons laid their Hands upon the Head of the Victim, and Moses kill'd it, sprinkling the Blood about the Altar, and burning the Flesh and the Bowels upon the Altar of Burnt-sacrifices.

Deut. xx. 3, 4. Exod. xl. 12. Lev. viii. 1, 2, &c.

Lastly, they presented the Ram which was to serve for the Consecration of the Priests. Aaron and his Sons laid their Hands upon its Head; Moses kill'd it, and taking of the Blood of this Ram, he touch'd with it the Tip of the right Ear of each, the Thumbs of their right Hands, and the great Toes of their right Foot, and sprinkled the rest of the Blood upon the Altar. Then taking the Fat of the Kidneys and Bowels, the Rump, the Kidneys, and the right Shoulder of the Victim, with a Leaf of unleaven'd Bread, a Cake and a Wafer, he put them successively into the Hands of Aaron and of his Sons, who lifted them up before the Lord, with a waving Motion, Moses at the same time supporting and guiding the Hands of each. After which Moses received these Things again, and burnt them upon the Altar of Burnt-sacrifices, because it was the Sacrifice of the Consecration of Aaron and of his Sons. Then taking the Oyl of Unction, and the Blood that was upon the Altar, with these he sprinkled Aaron and his Sons, habited as they were in all their sacred Ornaments. This Ceremony was continued for seven Days successively, beginning it every Day in the same Manner, at least as to the offering of Sacrifices, the Unctions, and Aspersions; for it does not appear that Aaron and his Sons were dress'd every Day in their sacerdotal Habits. For these whole seven Days the Priests continued in the Court of the Tabernacle, without going out of it.

In this whole Ceremony Moses perform'd the Office of consecrating a Priest. It is much to be doubted, whether at every new Consecration of a High-priest all these Ceremonies were repeated. It is very probable they contented themselves with cloathing the new High-priest in the Habit of his Predecessor, as was put in Practice at the Death of Aaron. Others think they gave them the Unction also, which perhaps might be in use to the Babylonish Captivity, though there is no Proof of this Fact. We know on the contrary, that Jonathan the Asmonean contented himself with putting on the High-priest's Habit at the Feast of Tabernacles, in order to take Possession of this Dignity; and Agrippa King of the Jews having offer'd to Jonathan Son of Ananus the High-priesthood, a second Time, Jonathan thank'd him for it, saying, It was enough for him to have once received the Ornaments of this supream Dignity, which he would willingly resign to some other that should be more worthy of it.

As to the ordinary Priests, we do not see that any particular Ceremony was us'd for their Consecration; they were admitted to the Exercise of their Functions by filling their Hands, as the Scripture speaks, or by making them perform the Functions of their Order. But when the Priests had fallen away from the Lord, or had been a long Time without performing their Office, as it sometimes happen'd under the Reigns of some of the later Kings of Judah; for Example, under Ahaz, Ammon, and Manasseh, they thought it necessary to sanctify anew such Priests, who had been absent from the Holy Place, who for a long Time had interrupted the Exercise of their Ministry, or who had never yet exercis'd it; as it happen'd under Hezekiah and Josiah, when the Number of the Priests that were sanctify'd not being found sufficient for the great Number of Sacrifices that were to be offer'd, they were forced to employ the Levites in fleaing the Sacrifices; for the Levites were much sooner sanctify'd than the Priests. [a] Levitæ quippe faciliori ritu sanctificabantur quam Sacerdotes. (2 Chron. xxix. 34. 2 Chron. xxxv. 12.)

However, we must acknowledge, that we do not know what was done upon these Occasions, for the Consecration, or rather for the Sanctification of the Priests. Nor is it certain, whether any thing else was requir'd than the ordinary Sanctification, which was, the Exemption from legal Defilements and Uncleannesses, which was necessary for the approaching to holy Things. The Hebrew Text of the Passage now quoted reads only, "For the Levites "were upright of Heart, to sanctify them- "selves, rather than the Priests." The Levites shew'd more Zeal and Readiness than the Priests, to assist in this Ceremony.

As to the Priests of the new Covenant, their Dignity is vastly more exalted than that of the Hebrew Priests, because their Functions are more noble, and their Object more sacred and divine. They consecrate the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ upon the Altar; [b] they have the Power to bind and to loose, to remit or to retain Sins, they bear a sacred and inviolable Character. The Christian Priesthood is the Substance and the Truth, of which that of the Jews was but the Shadow and the Figure. Jesus Christ the everlasting Priest, according to the Order of Melchisedeck, abides for ever, as St. Paul observes; whereas the Priests, according to the Order of Aaron, were mortal, and therefore could not continue long. (Hebr. vii. 23, 24, &c.) The Priesthood of Jesus Christ is one, divided among many Priests, who partake of his Power, and who exercise in his Name the Functions of his Ministry. The Consecration given by Moses to Aaron and his Sons, was not again to be repeated to their Successors, because the Priesthood was always to continue in the same Family; whereas the Christian Priesthood not being continued to any particular Family, was to be conferr'd on every one of the Priests with distinct Ceremonies.

Lastly, the corporal Defects, which excluded from the legal Priesthood, and from the Privileges that attended it, ought in Proportion to be understood in an exalted and spiritual Sense, in respect of the Christian Priesthood. We have elsewhere spoke of the Superiority of the Bishops above Priests, and of the Primacy of the Pope, the Bishop of Rome, which we believe to be of Divine Right. [c] The Qualities that St. Paul requires in a Bishop, may be seen 1 Tim. iii. Tit. i. 7, &c.

[a] 2 Chron. xxix. 34. כי הלוים ישרו לבב להתקדש מהכהנים.
[b] Or rather, they consecrate the Elements of Bread and Wine, to be the Symbols and Representations of that Body and Blood; which is no mean Prerogative of the Christian Priesthood.
[c] What the Church of England holds in regard to the Primacy or Supremacy of the Bishop of Rome here mention'd may be seen in the Place referr'd to.

69. Theophilus Son of Jonathan, made in 4040, depos'd in 4044, of the vulgar Era 41.

70. Simon ſurnamed Cantharus, and Son of Simon Boethus, was made in 4044, of the vulgar Era 41.

71. Matthias Son of Ananus, made in 4045, of the vulgar Era 42.

72. Elioneus, made in 4047, 'till 4048, of the vulgar Era 45. Simon Son of Cantharus was a ſecond Time made High-priest in 4048, and depos'd the same Year, of the vulgar Era 45.

73. Joseph Son of Caneus, made in 4048, 'till 4050, of the vulgar 47.

74. Ananias Son of Nebedeus, made in 4050, 'till 4066, of the vulgar Era 63.

75. Ismael Son of Phabeus, made in 4066, of the vulgar Era 63.

76. Joseph surnam'd Cabei, the same Year 4066.

77. Ananus Son of Ananus, the same Year.

78. Jesus Son of Ananus, made in 4067, of the vulgar Era 64.

79. Jesus Son of Gamaliel, the same Year.

80. Matthias Son of Theophilus, made in 4068, 'till 4073, of the vulgar Era 70.

81. Phannias Son of Samuel, made in 4073, of the vulgar Era 70, which is the Year of the Destruction of the Temple of Jerusalem by the Romans, and of the entire Abolition of the Jewish Priesthood.

PRIESTHOOD, Sacerdotium. We may distinguish four Kinds of Priesthood. 1. That which belongs to Kings, to Princes, to the Heads of a Family, to the Firstborn. This may be called a natural Priesthood, because Nature and Reason teach us, that the Honour of offering Sacrifices to God should belong to the Greatest in Dignity. 2. The Priesthood according to the Order of Melchisedech, which does not differ from that now mentioned, but in its Dignity; because Melchisedech was raised up of God, to represent the Priesthood of Jesus Christ. 3. The Priesthood of Aaron and his Family, which subsisted as long as the Religion of the Jews was a true Religion. 4. Lastly, the Priesthood of Jesus Christ, and of the new Law. We have spoken of Melchisedech in a particular Article. As to the Priesthood of Aaron, See AARON before, and PRIEST.

The Priesthood passed from the Family of Ithamar into that of Eleazar, according to what the Lord had declared to the High-priest Eli. But this was not done presently. (1 Sam. ii. 30, 31, 32, &c.) The Family of Eli still possess'd the Priesthood for a good while. This High-priest had for Successor his third Son Abitub, or according to others, Abijah, to whom succeeded Abimelech, who was put to death by Saul, with the other Priests at Nob. [a] This Prince then gave the High-priesthood to Zadoc. But Abiathar Son of Abimelech having adhered to the Interests of David, was continued in the Possession of the High-priesthood in the Kingdom of Judah. So that for a good Part of David's Reign, we find the High-priesthood to be exercised by the two High-priests Zadoc and Abiathar, the first of the Family of Eleazar, and the second of that of Ithamar. Lastly, towards the End of David's Reign, Abiathar having adhered to the Party of Adonijah against Solomon, he was disgraced, [b] and Zadoc alone acknowledg'd as High-priest. He then began to exercise his High-priesthood at Jerusalem, whereas before he had only perform'd the Functions of it upon the Altar of Gibeon. (1 Kings ii. 26, 27. 1 Chron. xvi. 39.)

Some have pretended, that the High-priesthood was exercised, even after the Law took place, by others besides the Family of Aaron. For this are produced the Examples of Moses, Joshua, Samuel, and Saul, who sacrificed on some Occasions. But granting these Facts to be indisputable, yet nobody denies, first, that a Prophet may not extraordinarily, and by a particular Revelation, offer up Sacrifices. Secondly, that this Liberty was not of much greater Extent before the building of the Temple, than after the publick Worship of God was fix'd at Jerusalem. Thirdly, that it is not certain but that Joshua, Samuel, and Saul might offer their Sacrifices by the Hands of Priests; for often the Scripture affirms that to be done by a Man's self, which is only done by his Orders. See PRIESTS before.

The Hebrew Word Cohen, which signifies Priest, is sometimes put for a Prince. For Example, it is said that Jethro the Father-in-Law of Moses, was Priest of Midian, that is, according to some Interpreters, that he was Prince or Governor of his City. (Ex. ii. 16. כהן) In the second Book of Samuel it is said, [c] That the Sons of David were Priests, that is to say, Princes, and consider'd in the Country as Priests. Filii autem David sacerdotes erant. The Septuagint say, they were principal Courtiers, the Chief of the Court. The Author of the first Book of Chronicles [d] explains this, saying, they were the nearest at the King's Hand. They had the chief Employments at Court.

As to the Priesthood of Jesus Christ, which is infinitely superior to all the other, as to its Duration, its Dignity, its Prerogatives, its Object, and the Power which is annexed to it; the Priests of the New Law partake of the Royal Priesthood of Jesus Christ; they exercise his Priesthood and his Power. 'Tis properly Jesus Christ that baptizes, that gives the Holy Ghost in Confirmation, that binds and looses in the Sacrament of Penance, * that offers his own Body and his own Blood upon the Altar; † in a Word, that performs all the Functions

* Our Church does not admit of Penance as a Sacrament, which are only two, Baptism and the Supper of the Lord.
† This Offering was once made, at Christ's death upon the Cross, and needs not be repeated. And we are told by our Church, That the Sacrifices of Masses, in which it was commonly said, that the Priest did offer Christ for the Quick and the Dead, to have Remission of Pain and Guilt, were blasphemous Fables, and dangerous Deceits. Art. XXXI.

Functions of the sacred Miniſtry by the Hands of the Prieſts his Miniſters. The Prieſthood of Aaron was to have an End, but that of Jeſus Chriſt is everlaſting. That of Aaron was limited to his own Family, was exerciſed only in the Temple, and among only one People; its Object was nothing but bloody Sacrifices and Purifications, which were only external, and could not remit Sins; but the Prieſthood of Jeſus Chriſt is extended to the whole Chriſtian Church, ſpread over the Face of the whole Earth, and among all the Nations of the World. It exerciſes the Power of Jeſus Chriſt even over Souls, in forgiving or reſtraining Sins; it opens the Channels of ſupernatural Graces, it offers the Hoſt as an Expiation for all the Sins of the World. § The Epiſtle of St. Paul to the Hebrews ſhould be conſider'd by thoſe, that would comprehend the Excellence of the Prieſthood of the New Law, above that of the Law of Moſes. Hebrews iv. 14, 15, &c. alſo v. vi. vii. viii. ix. See alſo 1 Peter ii. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9.

Among all Nations the Prieſthood was ſo honourable and elevated a Station, and at the ſame time ſo commodious, that it was look'd upon by the People with ſome ſort of Jealouſy; ſo that the Lord, to expreſs to the Hebrews what great Favours he would confer upon them, ſays, that he would make them Kings and Prieſts.
Ex. xix. 6. Eritis mihi in regnum ſacerdotale. And St. Peter makes the ſame Promiſe to the Chriſtians, or rather he tells them, that they are in earneſt what Moſes promiſed to 1 Pet. ii. 9. the Iſraelites. Vos autem genus electum, regale ſacerdotium, gens ſancta. And St.
Rev. i. 6. John in the Revelations ſays, that the Son of God has made us Prieſts and Kings to God his Father. Fecit nos regnum & ſacerdotes Deo Patri ſuo. The Prieſthood of Chriſtians does not allow indifferently to all, the Liberty of offering the Sacrifice of the New Law; but it conſiſts in the Participation of the Prieſthood of Jeſus Chriſt, which is exerciſed in the Church by Prieſts legally ordain'd and conſecrated. Any one of the Faithful may offer up to the Lord, in an Union with the Sacrifice of Jeſus Chriſt, his own Body, his Inclinations, his Pleaſures, his temporal Goods. He may offer up the divine Sacrifice of the Altar in an Union of Heart and Intention with the Prieſt; laſtly, he may every Moment offer up to the Father the Merits of that Sacrifice which Jeſus Chriſt has once offered upon the Croſs. And this is that in which the Exerciſe of the Prieſthood of mere Laicks conſiſts. Beſides, as the Prieſthood of the New Law is not ſucceſſive, nor confin'd to one Family; all Chriſtians may aſpire at the Glory of the Prieſthood, and endeavour by their Virtue and good Lives, by their Innocence and acquired Abilities, to become worthy of this Honour.

We have already enlarged upon the Rights, Prerogatives, Functions, Ornaments, and Revenues of the Prieſts of the Old Law, under the foregoing Article. We cannot do the ſame thing here in reſpect of the Prieſts of the New Law, becauſe neither Chriſt in the Goſpel, nor his Apoſtles in any of their Writings which they have left us, have expreſs'd all the Ceremonies that are to be uſed in the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, nor all the Circumſtances that are to accompany them. The Apoſtles have left ſome of theſe things to be regulated by the Wiſdom and Diſcretion of the Heads of the Church, though they taught the greateſt Part of them to the Faithful of their own Times, vivâ voce, from whom we have received them by the Canal of Tradition.*

PREPARE. The Word Præparare, or Parare, is often us'd for founding, fixing, eſtabliſhing. It anſwers to the Hebrew Word Kun, which bears the ſame Signification. Præparans montes in virtute ſua. He founds, he fixes the Mountains by his Power. Parata ſedes tua ex tunc. Thy Seat, thy Throne is eſtabliſhed from all Eternity. Super flumina præparavit orbem terræ. He has fix'd the Earth upon the Rivers, or upon the Waters.

PRESENTATION. By this Word is generally underſtood the Preſentation made by the Parents, of their Firſt-born Children to the Lord in the Temple; or that which they made of their Children, or of any other thing, that they had vowed to preſent to the Lord. Thus Samuel the Son of Elkanah, and of Hannah, was preſented to 1 Sam. i.
the Lord on theſe two Accounts, both as 11, &c.
the Firſt-born of Hannah, and as vow'd by her to the Lord. As the Firſt-born, he might have been redeem'd and reſtor'd to his Parents for the Sum of five Shekels: Lev. xxvii.
But having been vow'd to the Lord, to be 6. employ'd in his Service all the Days of his Life, he continued at the Tabernacle from the Age of three Years, where he perform'd all the Services he was capable of.

The Holy Virgin preſented our Saviour at the Temple, on the Day of her Purification, becauſe he was her Firſt-born; and Luke ii.
ſhe redeem'd him, according to the Law, 22, &c.
for the Sum of five Shekels. The ſame obtain'd as to all the Firſt-born in Iſrael.

Laſtly,

§ Our Church ſays, The Offering of Chriſt once made, is that perfect Redemption, Propitiation, and Satisfaction for the Sins of the whole World, both Original and Actual, and there is none other Satisfaction for Sin but that alone. Art. XXXI.

* The Church of England thus declares herſelf concerning Traditions, in her XXXIVth Article; It is not neceſſary that Traditions and Ceremonies be in all Places one, or utterly like; for at all Times they have been diverſe, and may be changed according to the Diverſity of Countries, Times, and Men's Manners, ſo that nothing be ordained againſt God's Word. And afterwards. Every particular or national Church hath Authority to ordain, change, and aboliſh Ceremonies or Rites of the Church, ordain'd only by Men's Authority, ſo that all things be done to edifying.

Protevang. Jacobi n. 7, 8, 9, 10. Laſtly, there is an antient Tradition in the Church, delivered in very antient Monuments, though but little credited becauſe of ſome Circumſtances found therein which are falſe and uncertain, that the Virgin Mary was devoted to the Temple by her Parents; that ſhe was preſented there at the Age of two Years; that ſhe abode there, and was fed by the Hand of an Angel, till ſhe was twelve Years old. Then the Prieſts ſaid to the High-Prieſt Zachariah, 'Tis time to place out Mary, for fear the Temple of the Lord ſhould be defiled. Betake yourſelf therefore to Prayer, and we will perform whatever the Lord ſhall reveal to you. Zachariah having put on the ſacred Habit, enter'd into the Sanctuary; and as he was at Prayer, the Angel of the Lord ſaid to him; Aſſemble the Elders of the People, and let each of them bring a Wand, and he ſhall be appointed for Mary's Huſband, by whoſe Wand God ſhall perform a Miracle. All the Elders of Iſrael met therefore at the Temple, and each of them gave in his Wand, which they received again the next Day, without any thing extraordinary appearing. But when the High-prieſt gave Joſeph his Wand again, a Dove aroſe from it, and lighted upon Joſeph's Head. Then the High-prieſt gave him to Wife Mary, the Daughter of Joachim and Ann.

Evangel. de Nativ. Mariæ. n. 6, 7, 8. The Goſpel of the Birth of the Virgin, ſays much the ſame thing; That Mary was offer'd at the Temple by her Parents, to be bred up there with the Girls that were there kept. That having arrived to the Age of fourteen Years, the High-prieſt ſaid to all the Girls of that Age, that they might return to their Parents to be diſpoſed of in Matrimony. But Mary anſwer'd, that ſhe had been offer'd for ever to the Service of the Lord, and that ſhe had taken a Vow of Virginity. Then the High-prieſt not knowing what Reſolution to take in a Caſe ſo extraordinary, betook himſelf to Prayer with all the People that were then aſſembled in the Temple, being then a great Feſtival. The High-prieſt then heard a Voice from the midſt of the Sanctuary, that he ſhould aſſemble all thoſe that were unmarried of the Family of David, and that Mary ſhould be given to him whoſe Wand ſhould flouriſh, and upon whom the Holy Ghoſt ſhould alight in the Shape of a Dove.

Joſeph was therefore convened among the reſt, who was now very old. And as at firſt he did not preſent his Wand, God did not cauſe any extraordinary Sign to appear; but the ſecond time having brought his Wand with the others, it flouriſhed and the Holy Ghoſt alighted upon it in Form of a Dove. So Mary was given to him, that he might be the Guardian of her Virginity. I know that theſe Legends are of no Authority in the Church; but the principal Fact, to which theſe Circumſtances have been added, is however certain. That is, that the Holy Virgin was preſented at the Temple, that ſhe had made a Vow of Virginity, and that ſhe marry'd Joſeph, who was to be only the Guardian and the Witneſs of her Virginity. In the antient Greek Fathers we find ſome Alluſions to theſe Hiſtories; but theſe Circumſtances in general are not more to be truſted in the Fathers themſelves, than in thoſe Originals from whence they have taken them.

There is no Law in the Old Teſtament, by which the Parents were obliged to offer their Firſt-born Daughters to the Lord; and we have no Evidence that it was the Cuſtom to breed up young Girls in the Temple. Moſes ordains, That if a Girl Lev. xxvii. 6.
had been vow'd to the Lord, from the Age of a Month to five Years old, ſhe was redeem'd by giving to the Temple, or to the Prieſts, the Sum of three Shekels. It is true, there is Mention made in two Places of the Scripture, of devout Women that waited at the Door of the Tabernacle; Ex. xxxviii. 8. 1 Kings ii. 22.
and St. Luke ſpeaks of the Daughter of Phanuel, who did not ſtir from the Temple. But there is no Probability that theſe Per- Luke ii. 36.
ſons were dedicated to the Lord from their Infancy, or that they continued always in the Temple, without the Power of quitting it and marrying themſelves. On the contrary, it is very probable, that theſe Perſons were under no other Obligation of continuing there, than what their own Devotion or Reſolutions had laid upon them.

PRESEPE, or Præſepium, a Manger, for Beaſts to eat out of. The Holy Virgin was compell'd to put the new-born Infant Jeſus in a Manger, belonging to the Stable in which ſhe lay, becauſe ſhe had no Cradle, or other Place wherein to put him. The antient Fathers tell us,[a] That the Stable wherein Joſeph and Mary were obliged to take up their Quarters, was a Cave made in a Rock. The Manger might alſo be hollow'd in the Rock; but within the Manger of Stone, there might be alſo a wooden Trough, wherein the Child Jeſus lay. The Manger preſerv'd at Rome is a wooden Manger. A Latin Author quoted by Baronius,[b] under the Name of St. Chryſoſtom, ſays, That the Manger wherein Jeſus Chriſt lay was made of Earth, but that it was taken away to have a Silver one put in its Room.

The Painters have been uſed to repreſent near the Manger of our Saviour, an Ox and an Aſs. To juſtify which they quote this Paſſage Isai. i. 3. Habak. iii. 2. Passage of Isaiah, The Ox knoweth his Owner, and the Ass his Master's Crib; and that other of Habakkuk, Thou shalt be known between two Animals. And several of the Fathers say, [a] That Christ was known in his Manger by the Ox and the Ass. The Author of the Poem under the Name of Lactantius is directly for his Opinion, as also the Author of the Book of Promises, cited under the Name of St. Prosper. But notwithstanding these Authorities, several of the Criticks doubt whether the Ox and the Ass were then in the Stable of Bethlehem, neither the Gospel, nor the more antient Fathers having taken any Notice of it. And the Passages of Isaiah and Habakkuk brought to prove this, do not shew it fully and expresly.

PRESIDENT, Præses. This Term is given in general to all those that preside over others in any Affair or Business. As to those that are chief of a Band of Musick, over the Affairs of the Country, of the City, or Temple. Particularly it is given to the Governors of Judea, after this Nation was reduced to a Province by the Romans. See Matthew xxvii. 2, 11, 14. xxviii. 14. Luke ii. 2. xx. 20. xxi. 12. Acts xxiii. 24, &c. See also the Article GOVERNOR.

גת, Gath. Torcular. Græc. Ληνός. PRESS, Torcular; in Hebrew, Gath. Mention is often made in Scripture of a Press. But this Word is used, not only for the Machine by which the Grapes are squeezed, but also for the Vessel, or Vat, wherein the Wine runs from the Press, in which it is received and preserved, and which, in Hebrew, is call'd Jekeb; and in Greek, Laccos. Whence proceed these Expressions: He digged a Wine-press in his Vineyard; Your Presses shall run over with Wine; Thy Presses shall burst out with new Wine; To draw out of the Press; Zeeb they slew at the Wine-press of Zeeb. It was a kind of subterraneous Cistern, in which the Wine was received and kept, 'till it was put into Jars or Vessels of Earth or Wood. See Plin. l. 14. c. 21. Columel. l. 12. c. 18. Cato de re Rust. c. 113. where they speak of these Cisterns under-ground, wherein the Wine was put. We have spoken at large of the Presses, and of all that belongs to the Manner of Keeping the Wine, in the Commentary upon Jeremiah, chap. xlviii. 11.

(Margin: יקב, Jekeb. Græc. Λάκκος, or Ληνός. Isai. v. 2. Mat. xxi. 33. Joel iii. 18. Prov. iii. 10. Hag. ii. 16. Judges vii. 25.)

In the Psalter, we read several Titles of the Psalms, which intimate, Pro Torcularibus, For the Presses, which is differently explain'd. Some think, [b] that the Psalms are Songs of Rejoycing for the Vintage, which were chiefly sung at the Feast of Tabernacles, after the Harvest and the Vintage. Others think, [c] that Gitthith, which is the Hebrew Word translated by Presses, signifies an Instrument of Musick. The Fathers [d] explain them in a spiritual Sense, of the Church of Jesus Christ, who is the mystical Vine in which the Press is built, according to the Description of our Saviour in the Gospel. We think that we may translate the Hebrew by, A Psalm addressed to the Master of Musick, who presided over the Band of Gittites. In the Temple were several Bands of Singers, of which some might be of the City of Gath.

PRETORIUM. The Name of Prætorium, is given, in the Gospel, to the House wherein dwelt the Roman Governor of Jerusalem: [e] 'Twas there that the Governor sate in his Judicial Capacity, and where Jesus Christ was brought before him. Notwithstanding all the Revolutions that happen'd to Jerusalem, especially during the Siege of Titus; and notwithstanding the Ruine and Desolation of the whole City, after it was taken by the Romans, they pretended to shew Travellers the Prætorium, or the Palace of Pilate, where, afterwards (as they say) a Church was built.

St. Paul speaks also of the Prætorium (or Palace), wherein, being at Rome, he gave Testimony to Jesus Christ: Ita ut vincula mea manifesta fierent in Christo, in omni Prætorio, & in cæteris omnibus. Some think, [f] that by this Name, he means the Palace of the Emperor Nero. Others will have it to be the Place where the Roman Prætor sate to do Justice, and where he had his Tribunal. It is certain that the Emperor's Palace did not bear the Name of Tribunal; but St. Paul being accustom'd to call by this Name the Governor's Palace at Jerusalem, might also give this Name to the Emperor's Palace at Rome. Others have maintain'd, that under the Name of the Prætorium at Rome, St. Paul would express the Camp of the Pretorian Soldiers, whither this Apostle might have been carry'd by the Soldier that always accompany'd him, and who was fasten'd to him by a Chain, as the Manner was among the Romans. Phil. i. 13.

PRIAPUS, a false God of the ancient Pagans, whom the Gentiles pretended to be the Son of Bacchus and Venus. Venus brought him into the World at Lampsacus upon the Hellespont, where he was in great Honour. They sacrificed to him an Ass; and he was honoured as the God of Gardens and Orchards. He was represented with his obscene Parts of a monstrous Bigness. In some Places of Scripture there is mention

[a] Nazianz. Orat. de Christ. Nativ. Nyssen. de Christi Generat. Prudent. in Cath. die 8. Cal. Jan. [b] Psalm viii. 1. על הגתית׃ 70. Ὑπὲρ τῶν ληνῶν. Vide & lxxx. 1. & lxxxiii. 1. [c] Ita Rab. Quid. mention made of the God Priapus; and 'tis said that the Ladies of Jerusalem offer'd Sacrifices to him, and that Maachah the Mother of Asa King of Judah was his High-Priestess. But this Prince caus'd his Temple to be demolish'd, or the Cave wherein Abominations were committed in Honour of Priapus; he burnt the Statue of this infamous Deity, and oblig'd the Queen his Mother to renounce his Worship.

1 Kings xv. 13. 1 Chron. xvi. 16. מפלצת לאשרה. The Hebrew says, that Maachah had made a Miphlezeth for Asherah; that he destroy'd her Miphlezeth, and burnt it by the Brook Kidron; that he took away from his Mother the Sovereign Authority, because she had done this. It is not agreed on, that Miphlezeth signifies the God Priapus. Several Moderns translate this Word by a Scare-crow; and, perhaps, 'tis this that St. Jerom understands by the Word Priapus, which served as a Scare-crow to defend the Gardens.

Hor. l. i. Sat. 8.

——— Inde ego furum aviumque

Vide Seld. de Diis Syris. Sintag. 2. c. 5. But there is still more Likelihood, that she made some of those obscene Figures that the Pagans call'd Phallus, and Ithyphallus, in Honour of Adonis the Spouse of Venus, or of Astarta. Phallus is plainly deriv'd from the Hebrew Word Phalaz, which is the Root of Miphlezeth; and Asherah, in Honour of whom Maachah made the Miphlezeths, was the same as Astarta, or Venus.

PRIDE. This is a Sin very odious to God and Man, and which the Scripture condemns in a Multitude of Places. For what is to be seen in the whole Sacred History, but the Pride, the Presumption, the Vanity of Men overthrown? What else can can be seen, but the Humility, the Meekness, the Acknowledgment of Human Weakness, to be exalted, supported, recompensed? 1 Pet. v. 5. Jam. iv. 6. God resisteth the Proud, and giveth Grace to the Humble. Prov. xxix. 23. A Man's Pride shall bring him low; but Honour shall uphold the humble in Spirit. Prov. xvi. 18, 19. Pride goeth before Destruction; and a haughty Spirit before a Fall. Better is it to be of an humble Spirit with the Lowly, than to divide the Spoil with the Proud.

Pride is also put for the Hardness and Insolence of a Sinner, in Opposition to Sins of Infirmity or Ignorance: Numb. xv. 30. But the Soul that doth ought presumptuously, the same reproacheth the Lord; and that Soul shall be cut off from among his People. And elsewhere, Deut. xvii. 12. And the Man that will do presumptuously, and will not hearken unto the Priest, or unto the Judge, even that Man shall die. The Lord treated the Egyptians with the strictest Rigour, because they acted with Pride and Insolence towards the Hebrews: Exodus xviii. 11. Eò quid superbè egerint contra illos. Job and the Psalmist have mark'd out Pharaoh by the Name of the Proud: Job xxvi. 12. Prudentia ejus percussit superbum, says Job; Psalm lxxxviii. 11. Humiliasti sicut vulneratum superbum, says the Psalmist. Isaiah makes use of the same Isai. li. 9. Expression, to mark out the Destruction of Pharaoh; Numquid non tu percussisti superbum. And Ezekiel; Ezekiel xxxii. 12. Vastabunt superbiam Ægypti. The Chaldeans shall destroy the Pride, the Insolence, the Cruelty of Egypt. See also Nehem. ix. 16, 29.

The Scripture also often reproaches the Moabites with their Pride: It points them out, under the Name of Children of Haughtiness, or Pride; for so we translate what is said in the Book of Numbers; Numbers xxiv. 17. And destroy all the Children of Sheth. The Hebrew may signify, He shall destroy all the Children of Pride, or Haughtiness; which is confirm'd by this Passage of Jeremiah, which alludes to this in Numbers: Jeremiah says, Jer. xlviii. 29. We have heard the Pride of Moab, (he is exceeding proud), his Loftiness and his Arrogancy, and his Pride and the Haughtiness of his Heart. Compare Numb. xxi. 28. with Jeremiah xlviii. 45. in the Hebrew. See also Isai. xvi. 6.

The Pride of Jordan, is known in the Prophets, to express the Inundations of that River. See Jer. xii. 5. & xiii. 9. & xlix. 19. Zech. xi. 3. and what we have observed upon this in the Article JORDAN.

The Pride and the Proud, Superbia & Superbus, often represent Babylon and the Babylonians. In Isaiah, Isai. xiii. 19. Inclyta superbia Chaldæorum, expresses Babylon: And Babylon the Glory of Kingdoms, the Beauty of the Chaldees Excellency, shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrha. Jeremiah, speaking of the King of Babylon, says, Jer. l. 31, 32. Behold, I am against thee, O thou most Proud, saith the Lord of Hosts; for the Day is come, the Time that I will visit thee. And the most Proud shall stumble and fall, and none shall raise him up: And I will kindle a Fire in his Cities, and it shall devour all round about him. See also Psal. cxviii. 21, 51, 69, 78, 85, 122.

PRINCE, Princeps. This Name is sometimes taken for the Chief, the Principal. Thus we say, The Princes of the Families, of the Tribes, of the Houses of Israel; the Princes of the Levites, of the People, of the Priests; the Princes of the Synagogue, or Assembly; the Princes of the Children of Reuben, of Judah, &c. Also, it is often taken for the King, the Sovereign of the Country, and for his principal Officers. Thus we say, the Princes of the Army of Pharaoh, Phichol Prince of the Army of Abimelech. Potiphar was Prince or Chief of the Butchers, or of the Guards of the Kings of Egypt; and Joseph was in Prison with the Prince of the Bakers. And so of others.

Prince

Prince of the Priests, sometimes expresses the High-Priest actually in Office [a], or he that had formerly possess'd this Dignity. Acts iv. 6. And sometimes, he that was at the Head of the Priests, waiting in the Temple [b], or an Intendant of the Temple, or the Head of the Sacerdotal Families. Whence it comes, that often in the Gospel [c] mention is made of the Princes of the Priests, in the Plural Number.

Prince of the City, Princeps Civitatis; [d] he had in the City the same Authority as the Intendant of the Temple had in the Temple: He took Care of the Preservation of the Peace, and to keep good Order.

Prince of the Synagogue. In the Old Testament, [e] this Term signifies, those that presided over the Assemblies of the People, the Chief of the Tribes and Families of Israel. But in the New Testament, the Prince of the Synagogue, is he that presides over the Religious Assemblies Luke viii. 41. Acts xiii. 15. & xviii. 17. 17. held in the Synagogues. This is he that the Jews call Nasi of the Synagogue. He had several Associates, which were also call'd Princes or Chiefs of the Synagogue. Acts xiii. 8.

Prince of this World. St. John often gives this Name to the Devil, who boasts of having all the Kingdoms of the Earth John xii. 31. & xiv. 30. & xvi. 11. at his Disposal. Matth. iv. 9.

Prince of the Captivity. This is the Name that the Oriental Jews give to him, whom they acknowledge as their Chief, and whom they obey in the Provinces beyond the Euphrates, under the Dominion of the Persians. See Basnage, in his History of the Jews, t. 2. l. 4. c. 3.

Here is the Succession of the Princes of the Captivity, from the Destruction of the first Temple, taken out of the lesser Chronicon of the Jews, call'd Seder-olam-Zutha.

1. Jechoniah, carry'd away by King Nebuchadnezzar.

2. Salathiel his Son, under King Beltesbazzar.

3. Zerubbabel Son of Salathiel, who brought the People back into Judea, under the Reign of Cyrus.

4. Meshullam Son of Zerubbabel. Prophecy ceased in his Time. He dy'd, as the Jews say, under Alexander the Great.

5. Hananiah, under the Reign of Salmon, Alascan, and Mapparis, Kings of the Grecians, Successors of Alexander the Great. (Salmon is Ptolemy Son of Lagus, Alascan is Seleucus, and Mapparis is Cassander.) Hananiah died in the Year 140 of the Greeks, or of the Seleucidæ.

6. Barachiah Son of Hananiah, under Ptolemy, who caus'd the Law to be translated into Greek; and under Antiochus, who built Antioch. He died in the Year of the Greeks 170.

7. Hasadiah his Son, in the Year 175. The Jews being ill treated by Nicanor, made an Insurrection, and slew him, with his whole Army.

8. Esaiah his Son.

9. Abdiah his Son, who died under Herod the Great.

10. Shemaiah his Son, who makes the Tenth Generation of the House of David from the Captivity.

11. Shecaniah his Son, who died in the Year 166 from the Destruction of the Temple, or the 236th Year of the Christian Era.

12. Hezekiah his Son, who was buried at Arbeel.

13. Nathan, Posthumous.

14. Hana his Son.
15. Akob his Son.
16. Nahum his Son.
17. Jochanan his Son.

(These four Heads or Princes had but one Chief or Master of the Academy, whose Name was Nahamel.)

18. Shaphet his Son.

19. Anam, or Hona his Son. Samuel the Lunatick was his Counsel. Nahardea was taken in his Time. He procured himself to be buried in Judea, near Chaia.

20. Nathan his Son, with Ezekiel his Counsel. The Persians resolved to persecute the Jews, in the Year 245 from the Destruction of the Temple.

21. Nathan his Son, with the Doctor Sazbi.

22. Akabiah his Son, with the Rabbi Ada. He was buried in Judea. The King of Persia subdued Syria.

23. Marhona his Brother, with the Doctors Abal, and Joseph Son of Hama. Sapor took Nisibe.

24. Ocba his Brother, with the Doctor A. Henanel.

25. Aba his Nephew, with Rabba and Rabbena. The World was without a King in the Year 416 from the Destruction of Jerusalem.

26. Chana his Brother.

27. Saphira his Brother, with Atta Marpoteus.

28. Cahana his Son, with Rabbena.

29. Hona his Nephew.

30. Hona Unkle of the former. He marry'd the Daughter of Hanina Head of the Academy.

31. His Son was the Destruction of the House of David: For having abused Hanina, the Plague destroy'd the whole Family, except,

32. Zutra, Posthumous. Isaac Head of the Academy was kill'd under his Government. Mir the Great appear'd; he saw a Column of Fire; he rebell'd against the Persians, acted as a King for seven Years; was kill'd. Zutra also was hang'd.

This is a pompous Succession of the Princes of the Captivity; but those that have enquir'd nearly into it, find many Errors and Anachronisms in it. (Basnage's Hist. of the Jews, t. 2. l. iv. c. 11.) They pretend, That the Princes of the Captivity were not establish'd in Babylonia 'till the Beginning of the Third Century from Jesus Christ, in 220; That the Succession exhibited by the Author of the lesser Chronicle, which we have here given, is not supported by the Authority of any ancient Author; That neither Josephus, nor Justin Martyr, in his Dialogue against Tryphon, have known any thing of these pretended Princes of the Captivity beyond the Euphrates; That the Tradition of the Sages, upon which it is founded, is of very slender Authority in Matter of History. If Nathan, whom the Chronicon affirms to retire into Palestine, while Simeon, Father of Judas the Holy, was Patriarch there, had been Prince of his Nation beyond the Euphrates, he would hardly have quitted that Dignity, to accept of that of Father of the House of Judgment, in a small City of Palestine, such as Tiberias was. He return'd beyond the Euphrates, after he had continued a good while in Judea; and as he had there seen a Patriarch the Head of his Nation, he entertain'd an Ambition of doing the same at Babylon. He set up, therefore, his Son Huna, who may be reckon'd the first who had borne this Title beyond the Euphrates.

As to the Title of Prince, the Reader is not to be led into any Mistake by it. In Scripture and in Jewish Authors, it often means no more than a meer Head of a Family, or he that is appointed to preside over his Equals. The Heads of the Synagogues of Germany, and of some Provinces of Italy, take the Title of Duke, or of Princes of the Jews. This makes 'em never the greater Men, nor gives them the greater Liberty.

(Gen. xxi. 33.) Principes exercitus, in Genesis, signifies Generals of an Army, which might not be very numerous; or even the Captains of a Prince's Guards. Abraham is call'd, by those of Hebron, Princeps Dei, a great Prince. (Gen. xxiii. 6. & xl. 20.) The Prince of the Bakers, was Pharaoh's Chief Baker. The Princes of the Families of the Levites, were the Heads and the Chief of those Families. The Prince of the Priests, is the High-Priest. Nicodemus is call'd a Prince of the Jews; (John iii. 1. Vulg.) that is to say, he was of great Consideration among the Jews. A Prince of the Pharisees, is one that is much distinguish'd in that Sect; &c.

PRINCIPIUM, Beginning. This is the most general Acceptation of this Word: In principio creavit Deus cœlum & terram; (Gen. i. 1.) At the Beginning of Time, God created the Heaven and the Earth. In principio, sometimes also signifies, from Eternity. In principio erat Verbum; (John i. 1.) The Word was from the Beginning. And Wisdom says of herself, Ab initio & ante sæcula creata sum: (Ecclef. 24. 14.) And elsewhere, The Lord possess'd me in the Beginning of his Way, before his Works of Old: I was set up from Everlasting, from the Beginning, or ever the Earth was. (Prov. viii. 22, 23.)

Principium also denotes the Eastern Coast; as in this Passage; God created the Garden of Eden at the Beginning, in Principio. (Gen. ii. 8.) The Hebrew says, Eastward.

Principium filiorum; The Eldest of the Children. (Gen. xlix. 3.) Principium gentium Amalec; (& Deut. xxi. 17.) Amalek is the first, the most ancient, the most formidable of the Nations. Principium filiorum Ammon; (Dan. xi. 41.) The Chief, the Choice, the Principal of the Children of Ammon. Principium viarum Domini. The Behemoth, or Elephant, is the noblest of (Job xl. 14.) Animals that God hath made; 'tis by that, as we may say, he began to display his infinite Power; it is the Master-piece of his Ways. He only speaks of Terrestrial Animals. Tecum principium in die virtutis tuæ. (Psal. cix. 3. עמך נדבות Græce, μετὰ σου ἡ ἀρχὴ.) In this Passage, Principium may be taken two ways; either for Eternity, from which the Word was begot by the Father; or for the Power, the Command, the Authority of the Son, which must especially shine forth, in the Day of his Power, or at the Day of Judgment: The Greek Fathers readily understand it in this Sense. The Hebrew Text is differently translated. The Jews read; Thy People is devoted to Thee in the Day of thy Might; They freely expose themselves to the greatest Dangers, to follow Thee in the Day of Battle. The Septuagint have read otherwise; Liberality, Principality is with Thee. The Hebrew Word Nadab, which signifies, to be liberal, to offer voluntarily and freely, is also put sometimes for a Prince: For Liberality is a Quality that chiefly belongs to Princes. Principium Verborum tuorum veritas; (Psal. cxviii. 160. ראש דבריך אמת) The Word of God is essentially founded upon Truth. Truth, Fidelity, and Certainty, are the Characteristicks of his Words and Promises.

Promiſes. The Hebrew has literally; The Head of thy Word is Truth.

Iſai.41.26. A Principio, expreſſes a Time at a great Diſtance. God challenges Idols and Idol-worſhippers to diſcover thoſe Things which have paſſed à principio, in ancient Time, from the Beginning of the World. He Iſai. lii. 4. ſays, That his People went down into Egypt, à principio, a very long Time ago. The Jews complain to the Lord, That they are forſaken of him, and delivered up Iſai. lxiii. 19. to the Nations, as at the Beginning, before he had declared himſelf their God, and they were admitted as his People. Johan.viii. 25. Principium qui & loquor vobis; I am the Beginning, I that ſpeak to you. 'Twas thus that Jeſus Chriſt anſwer'd the Jews, when they asked him, Who art thou? I am the Beginning; This is the Name that agrees to me beſt of all; 'Tis by Me that all Things were firſt created, and ſtill ſubſiſt. This is the Name that St. Paul Col.i.18. gives him; Qui eſt principium primogenitus ex mortuis. And St. John, in his Revelations; Rev. i. 8. Ego ſum Alpha & Omega, principium & finis. The Words before mention'd, Principium qui & loquor vobis, by others are otherwiſe explain'd. Before I tell you who I am, hear firſt what I have to ſay to you. The Greek Text favours this Explication; it does not read it in the Nominative, but in the Accuſative: Principium quod & dico vobis; Before all things, hear what I have to ſay to you. Otherwiſe; I am what I have told you from the Beginning, and frequently ever ſince.

PRINUS, a Sort of green Oak, otherwiſe call'd Holm-Oak. 'Tis call'd green Oak, becauſe it preſerves its Leaves in the Winter. Theſe Leaves are like to thoſe of Lawrel, but whitiſh, rough without, and with Teeth that ſeem to be as Thorns. One of the Elders that accuſed Suſanna, ſaid he had ſeen her with a young Man Suſan. 59. under a Holm-Oak, ſub prino; and Daniel Πρῖνος σχίσει. making an Alluſion to the Word Prinus, anſwer'd him; The Angel of God waiteth with the Sword to cut thee in two, that he may deſtroy you. The Greek reads Priſai, which is, to ſaw. The Commentators may be ſeen concerning this Alluſion in the Greek, which ſeem to prove, that this Part of Daniel was never in Hebrew.

PRISCILLA, or Priſca, [a] a Chriſtian Woman, very well known in the Acts, and in St. Paul's Epiſtles. She is ſometimes taken Notice of there before her Huſband Aquila. They were at Corinth [b] when St. Paul come thither, and had the Happineſs of entertaining him at their Houſe, where he lodg'd a good while, becauſe St. Paul and Aquila work'd at the ſame Buſineſs, which was that of making Tents of Leather, for the Uſe of the Army. Aquila and Priſcilla left Corinth with St. Paul, and came along with him to Epheſus. [c] Here they dwelt for ſome Time, and preach'd the Goſpel. Their Houſe was ſo well regulated, that St. Paul calls it a Church. From thence they went to Rom. xvi. 5. Rome, where they were when St. Paul writ his Epiſtle to the Romans, in the Year of Chriſt 58, and he ſalutes them firſt of all, and with great Commendations. They return'd into Aſia ſome time afterwards, and St. Paul writing to Timothy, deſires him to 2 Tim. iv. 19. In the Year of Chriſt 65. ſalute them on his Account. 'Tis thought they died here, and the Latin Martyrologies obſerve their Memory on the eighth of July. The Greeks celebrate the Feaſt of Aquila on the fourteenth of the ſame Month.

PROCHORUS, or Procorus, one of the Acts vi. 5. ſeven firſt Deacons. He was choſen ſoon after our Saviour's Aſcenſion, in the Year 33 or 34 of the common Era. The Greeks think he was the firſt Biſhop of Nicomedia. Ado ſays he ſuffer'd Martyrdom at Antioch the 9th of Auguſt, after having made himſelf very famous by his Miracles. We have an Hiſtory of St. John the Evangeliſt, under the Name of Prochorus; but it is modern, and full of idle Stories, unworthy of the holy Deacon here mention'd.

PROCULA, or Proſcula, or Claudia Procula: This is ſaid to be the Name of Pilate's Wife. Vincent of Beauvais [d] quotes the falſe-Goſpel of Nicodemus, which aſſigns her this Name of Procula: But the Copy of this Goſpel, printed by Fabricius, has not this Name; it has only Matrona Evangel. PROFANE. This is said of the Contempt and Abuse of holy Things. A Man who is defiled, and touches any sacred Thing, pollutes or profanes it. He is called profane, who is not distinguish'd by any sacred Character. Profane Persons are not to meddle with, to speak or write upon sacred Matters. A profane Man, or Laick, is not to touch the holy Vessels, or to be employ'd in divine Mysteries. He that makes a Jest of sacred Things, who profanes them by the Abuse he makes of them, who defiles himself by impure or shameful Actions, is a profane Person. The Heb. xii. 16. Scripture calls Esau profane, because he sold his Birth-right, which was consider'd as an holy Thing. The Egyptians would not admit the Hebrews to their Tables, because they held them as profane. Pro-

To profane the Temple, to profane the Sabbath, to profane the Altar, are common Expressions, to denote the Violation of the Repose of the Sabbath, the entering of Foreigners into the Temple, the Irreverences that are committed there, the impious Sacrifices that are offer'd on the Altar of the Lord.

The fourth Year they offer'd what was produced in the Temple. Lastly, in the fifth Year the Owner had the Liberty of making use of the Fruit as his own, which then became profane or common. Jeremiah promises the Israelites, that they should return again Jer. xxxi. 5. נטעו נטעים וחללו

The Vulgate says, Plantabunt plantantes, & donec tempus veniat, non vindemiabunt. They should not touch thereof 'till the fifth Year. The Hebrew says, Plantabunt plantantes, & profanabunt.

PROFOUND, Deep. The Latin Word profundus, or profundum, is often put for the Grave, or for the Place wherein Souls are detain'd after Death. The antient Hebrews placed it below the Waters, in the most profound Abyss. It is as high as Heaven, what canst thou do? deeper than Hell,

Rom. viii. 39. St. Paul says; that nothing shall be able to separate us from the Love of God, neither the most exalted Height, nor the profoundest Depth: Neque altitudo, neque profundum: Nor Heaven, nor the Abyss, nor Angels, nor Devils. This is a kind of

Isa. xxxi. 6. Hos. ix. 9. To sin profoundly is read in Isaiah, and in Hosea, to denote a long Habit of Crimes, an obstinate Course of Idolatry; or else a profound and very great Iniquity, a Crime that has taken deep Root in the Soul by long and inveterate Custom. Profunde peccaverunt, ut in diebus Gabaa. They have carry'd on their Wickedness to such a Pitch, as to imitate the antient Crimes of Gibeah, says Hosea; Return to the Lord, as you have so profoundly withdrawn yourselves from him, says Isaiah. Convertimini sicut in profundum recesseratis. And
Isa. vii. 2. elsewhere; Ask from the Lord a Token from the Depth of Hell. The Hebrew says literally; Make your Demands deep, ask something difficult, something as it were conceal'd in the Bottom of Hell.

PROMISES. The Word Promise in the New Testament is usually taken for those Promises that God heretofore made to Abraham and the other Patriarchs, to send them the Messiah. 'Tis in this Sense that St. Paul Gal. iii. 16. Rom. iv. 13, 14, 15, & passim. Acts vii. 18. commonly uses the Word Promise. Abrahæ dictæ sunt promissiones. The Time of the Promises is the Time of the Coming of the Messiah. The Children of the Promise are, first, the Israelites descended from Isaac, in Opposition to the Ishmaelites descended from Ishmael and Hagar; and secondly, the Jews converted to Christianity, in Opposition to the incredulous Jews, Rom. ix. 8. Gal. iv. 28.
who will not believe in Jesus Christ: The Christians have enjoy'd the Promises made to the Patriarchs, from which the incredulous Jews have fallen away. The holy Spirit of Promise, which the Christians Eph. i. 13.
have received, signati estis spiritu promissionis sancto, signifies the Holy Ghost which God has promis'd to those that shall believe in him, which is the Pledge of their everlasting Happiness. The first Commandment to which God has annex'd a Promise, primum mandatum in promissione, is that, Eph. vi. 2.
Honour thy Father and thy Mother; to which God has subjoin'd this Promise, that their Days shall be multiply'd upon the Earth.

Promises in general also denote eternal Life, which is the Object of a Christian's Hope. Ut reportetis promissiones. The an- Heb. x. 6.

Lastly, the Word Promise is often put for a Vow. If a Woman makes a Vow, and her Husband shall not give his Consent to it, she is not to be held to her Promise: Non tenebitur promissionis rea. And Numb. xxx. 13.

PROPHET. This Word comes from the Greek, Prophetes, which signifies one that foretells future Events. The Hebrews at the Beginning call'd them Seers. After- 1 Sam. ix. 9. ראה videns.
wards they call'd them Nabi, which comes from the Root Nibba, to foretell, to divine. נביא Nabi. Propheta.
Also the Scripture often gives them the Name of Men of God, and of Angels, or Messengers of the Lord. The Verb Nibba to prophesy, in the Hebrew is of very great Extent. Sometimes it signifies to foretell what is to come; at other times, to be inspired, to speak from God. God says to Exod. vii. 1. Moses, Aaron thy Brother shall be thy Prophet; that is to say, he shall explain thy Sentiments to the People. St. Paul in his Epistle to Titus, i. 12. quoting a profane Poet, calls him a Prophet; One of themselves, even a Prophet of their own: Because the Pagans thought their Poets inspired by the Gods. The Scripture often gives the Name of Prophet to Impostors, who falsely boasted of Inspiration.

As the true Prophets, at the times that they were transported by the Motions of God's Spirit, were sometimes agitated in a violent Manner; those Motions were call'd Prophesying which they exhibited, who were fill'd with a good or evil Spirit. For 1 Sam. xviii. 10. Example, Saul being moved by an evil Spirit prophesy'd in his House; that is to say, he was agitated with Violence, as the Prophets were. To prophesy is also put for to sing, to dance, to play on Instruments. Thou shalt meet a Company of Prophets, says 1 Sam. x. 5, 6. Samuel to Saul, coming down from the high Place, with a Psaltery, and a Tabret, and a Pipe, and a Harp before them, and they shall prophesy. And the Spirit of the Lord shall come upon thee, and thou shalt prophesy with them, and shalt be turned into another Man. We read in the Chronicles, that the 1 Chron. xxv. 1. Sons of Asaph were appointed to prophesy upon Harps.

1 Cor. xi. 4, 5. xiv. 1, 3, 4, &c. This Term is also used in St. Paul, for explaining Scripture, speaking to the Church in publick; probably because they that exercised these Functions were look'd upon as replete with the Holy Ghost, and gave themselves Motions like those of Enthusiasts. The Scripture uses this Term in an extraordinary Sense, instead of saying, to work a Miracle, to raise the Dead. Thus it is said of the Bones of Elisha, that after Ecclus. xlviii. 13. his Death his Body prophesy'd, because they had restored a dead Person to Life, as if they had still been actuated by the Soul of this Prophet. Lastly, 'tis said, that the Bones of the Patriarch Joseph prophesy'd Ecclus. xlix. 15. also after his Death, because they were as a Pledge of the Promise he had made to his Brethren, that they should one Day be deliver'd from their Servitude in Egypt, and that they should be in Possession of the Land of Canaan.

The most usual Way by which God communicated himself to the Prophets was Inspiration, which consisted in illuminating the Mind of the Prophet, and exciting his Will to proclaim what the Lord dictated to him from within. 'Tis in this Sense that we acknowledge as Prophets, all the Authors of the Canonical Books of Scripture, both of the Old and New Testament. God also communicated himself to the Prophets by Dreams and nocturnal Visions. Joel promises to the People of the Joel ii. 28. Lord, that their young Men should see Visions, and their old Men should have prophetick Dreams. St. Peter in the Acts Acts x. 11, 12. fell into an Ecstacy at Noon-day, and had a Revelation concerning the Call of the Gentiles to the Faith. The Lord appear'd to Abraham, to Job, to Moses in a Cloud, Gen. xvi. 10. and discover'd his Will to them. He has Job. xl. 1. often made his Voice to be heard in an articulate Manner. Thus he spoke to Moses Exod. xiii. 21, &c. Exod. iii. 2. in the burning Bush, and upon Mount Sinai, and to Samuel in the Night. St. Au- 1 Sam. iii. 4. stin acknowledges three Sorts of Prophets; Aug. Præfat. in lib. 19. contra Faust. those of the Jews, those of the Gentiles, and those of the Christians. Those of the Jews are known: Those of the Gentiles are their Poets and their Divines; and those of the Christians are the Apostles, and Apostolical Men, of whom Jesus Christ has said; * Wherefore behold, I send unto you Prophets, and wise Men, and Scribes.

We have in the Old Testament the Writings of the sixteen Prophets; that is, of four greater Prophets, and twelve lesser Prophets. The four great Prophets are Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel. Baruk is commonly reckon'd with Jeremiah. The Jews do not properly place Daniel among the Prophets, because (they say) he lived in the Splendour of temporal Dignities, and in a kind of Life different from that of the other Prophets. The twelve lesser Prophets are, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Micah, Jonah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zachariah, and Malachi.

This is pretty nearly the Chronological Order in which they may be ranged.

1. Hosea prophesy'd under Uzziah King of Judah, who began to reign in the Year of the World 3194; and under Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, Kings of Judah, and under Jeroboam II. King of Israel, and his Successors, to the Destruction of Samaria, which happen'd in the Year of the World 3283.

2. Amos began to prophesy in the twenty-third Year of Uzziah, and of the World 3219, and about six Years before the Death of Jeroboam II. King of Israel, which happen'd in the Year of the World 3220.

3. Isaiah began to prophesy at the Death of Uzziah, and at the Beginning of the Reign of Jotham King of Judah, in the Year of the World 3246. He continued to prophesy to the Reign of Manassah, which began in the Year of the World 3306. He caus'd Isaiah to be put to Death by sawing him with a Saw.

4. Jonah lived in the Kingdom of Israel under the Kings Joash and Jeroboam II. about about the ſame time as Hoſea, Iſaiah, and Amos. Jeroboam II. died in the Year of the World 3220.

5. Micah lived under Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, Kings of Judah. Jotham began to reign in 3245, and Hezekiah died in 3306. Micah was contemporary with Iſaiah, but began later to propheſy.

6. Nahum appeared in Judah under the Reign of Hezekiah, and after the Expedition of Sennacherib, that is, after the Year 3291.

7. Jeremiah began in the thirteenth Year of the Reign of Joſiah King of Judah, in the Year of the World 3375, and Zephaniah propheſy'd about the ſame time. Jeremiah continued to propheſy under the Reigns of Shallum, Jehoiakim, Jeconiah, and Zedekiah, to the taking of Jeruſalem by the Chaldeans, in the Year of the World 3416. 'Tis thought he died two Years after in Egypt, in 3418. Baruch was the Diſciple and Amanuenſis of Jeremiah.

8. Zephaniah appear'd at the Beginning of the Reign of Joſiah, and before the twenty-eighth Year of this Prince, which is the Year of the World 3381; and even before the taking of Nineveh, which happened in 3378.

9. Joel under Joſiah, about the ſame time as Jeremiah and Zephaniah.

10. Daniel was taken into Chaldea in the Year of the World 3398, which was the fourth Year of Jehoiakim King of Judah. He propheſy'd at Babylon to the End of the Captivity, which happen'd in 3468, and perhaps longer than that.

11. Ezekiel was carry'd Captive to Babylon along with Jeconiah King of Judah, in the Year of the World 3405. He began to propheſy in the Year 3409. He continued till towards the End of the Reign of Nebuchadnezzar, who died in the Year of the World 3442.

12. Habakkuk lived in Judea at the Beginning of the Reign of Jehoiakim, about the Year 3394, and before the coming of Nebuchadnezzar into the Country in 3398. He dwelt in Judea during the Captivity, and carry'd Food to Daniel in the Lyon's Den.

13. Obadiah lived in Judea after the taking of Jeruſalem, which happen'd in 3414, and before the Deſolation of Idumea, which happen'd (as we believe) in 3410.

14. Haggai was brought to Jeruſalem in 3414; he return'd from the Captivity in 3468, and propheſy'd the ſecond Year of Darius Son of Hyſtaſpes, which was the Year of the World 3484.

15. Zachariah propheſy'd in Judea at the ſame time as Haggai, and he ſeems to have continued to propheſy after him.

16. Malachi has not put any Date to his Prophecies. If he was the ſame as Eſdras, as is very probable, he may have propheſy'd under Nehemiah, who return'd into Judea in 3550.

Under the ſeveral Articles of theſe Prophets, may be ſeen the Proofs of what is here advanced, and the Particulars of their Lives and Actions, of their Prophecies, their Characters, and Deaths.

Beſides the Prophets we have now mentioned, there are found the Names of a great many more in the Scripture. Clemens Alexandrinus reckons up Thirty-five after Moſes, and Five before him, which are Adam, Noah, Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob. He reckons five Propheteſſes, which are Sarah, Rebeccah, Miriam the Siſter of Moſes, Deborah, and Huldah. Epiphanius [a] reckons up Seventy-three Prophets, and ten Propheteſſes, in both the Old and New Teſtament. The Prophets are, 1. Adam. 2. Enoch. 3. Noah. 4. Abraham. 5. Iſaac. 6. Jacob. 7. Moſes. 8. Aaron. 9. Joſhua. 10. Eldad. 11. Medad. 12. Job. 13. Samuel. 14. Nathan. 15. David. 16. Gad. 17. Jeduthun. 18. Aſaph. 19. Heman. 20. Etham. 21. Solomon. 22. Ahiah. 23. Shameah. 24. Oded. 25. Eli, the High-prieſt at Shiloh. 26. Joad. 27. Iddo. 28. Azariah. 29. Anani, otherwiſe Azariah. 30. Jehu. 31. Micaiah the Son of Imlah. 32. Elijah. 33. Uzziel. [b] 34. Eliad. 35. Jeſus Son of Hananiah. 36. Eliſha. 37. Jonadab. 38. Zachariah otherwiſe Hananiah. 39. Another Zachariah. 40. Hoſea. 41. Joel. 42. Amos. 43. Obadiah. 44. Jonah. 45. Iſaiah. 46. Micah the Moraſthite. 47. Nahum. 48. Habakkuk. 49. Obed. 50. Abdadon. 51. Jeremiah. 52. Baruch. 53. Zephaniah. 54. Uriah. 55. Ezekiel. 56. Daniel. 57. Eſdras. 58. Haggai. 59. Zachariah. 60. Malachi. 61. Zachariah Father of John the Baptiſt. 62. Simeon. 63. John the Baptiſt. 64. Enoch. 65. Methuſalah. 66. Lameel. 67. Balaam. 68. Saul. 69. Abimilech. 70. Amaſa. 71. Zadok. 72. The anonymous Prophet that came to Bethel. 73. Agabus, mentioned in Acts xxi. 10. He might have added the Apoſtles, and particularly St. Barnabas, Simon Niger, Lucius of Cyrene, and Manahem, mentioned in the Acts xiii. 1, 2. And he might have omitted others, for Example, Ethan, who is the ſame as Jeduthun; Joad, Obed, Abdadon, all unknown, and Balaam, who was a wicked and falſe Prophet; and ſome others who hardly deſerve to be put into the Liſt of true Prophets.

The Hebrews in the Book Megillah, c. 1. acknowledge but Forty-eight Prophets, and seven Prophetesses. The Prophets are, 1. Abraham. 2. Isaac. 3. Jacob. 4. Moses. 5. Aaron. 6. Joshua. 7. Phinehas. 8. Elchanah. 9. Eli. 10. Samuel. 11. Gad. 12. Nathan. 13. David. 14. Solomon. 15. Iddo. 16. Micajah the Son of Imlah. 17. Obadiah. 18. Ahijah. 19. Jehu Son of Anani. 20. Azariah Son of Oded. 21. Haziel Son of Matthaniah. 22. Eliazar Son of Dodo. 23. Hosea. 24. Amos. 25. Michah the Morasthite. 26. Amos (probably the Father of Isaiah.) 27. Elijah. 28. Elisha. 29. Jonah. 30. Isaiah. 31. Joel. 32. Nahum. 33. Habakkuk. 34. Zephaniah. 35. Jeremiah. 36. Uriah. 37. Ezekiel. 38. Daniel. 39. Baruch. 40. Neriah. 41. Seraiah. 42. Mahaziah. 43. Haggai. 44. Zechariah. 45. Malachi. 46. Mordecai. 47. Hanameel Father of Jeremiah. 48. Shellum the Husband of Huldah.

The Prophetesses are, 1. Miriam Sister of Moses. 2. Deborah. 3. Hannah the Mother of Samuel. 4. Abigail. 5. Huldah. 6. Esther. 7. The Midwives of Egypt, who preserved the First-born of the Hebrews.

After Malachi no Prophets were found in Israel as before; so that in the Time of the Maccabees, [a] when the Altar of Burnt-sacrifices was demolished, which had been prophaned by the Gentiles, the Stones thereof were set aside, till a Prophet should arise to declare what should be done with them. But in this Interval God did not desist from raising up inspired Writers, as the Authors of the Books of Esther, of Judith, of the Maccabees, of Wisdom, and of Ecclesiasticus, which the Christian Church has received into her Canon. * 'Twas about the same time that the three Sects were form'd, the Essenians, the Pharisees, and the Sadducees, which afterwards became so famous among the Jews.

Aug. l. 18. de Civit. c. 41. The Prophets, according to St. Austin, were the Divines, the Philosophers, the Instructors, and the Guides of the Hebrew People in the Ways of Piety and Virtue. They generally lived retired from the People, in some Country Retreat, and in a sort of Community, where they and their Disciples were wholly employ'd in Prayer, in labouring with their Hands, and in Study. Their Habitations were plain and simple, which they built themselves, and cut down the Wood for this Purpose. Yet they exercised no Trade for Gain, nor did they undertake any Work that was too laborious, or inconsistent with the Repose that their Employment required. Thus Elisha quitted his Plough, as soon as Elijah had called him to the prophetick Office. 1 Kings xix. 20. Zechariah says, he is no Prophet, but an Husbandman. Zech. xiii. 5. Amos says, he is no Prophet, but an Herdsman, and a Gatherer of Sycamore-fruit. Amos vii. 14.

Elijah was cloathed with Skins, and girded with a Girdle of Leather. 2 Kings i. 8. Isaiah wore Sack-cloth, that is, a coarse rough Habit, of a dark brown Colour, which was the ordinary Cloathing of the Prophets. Zechariah says, speaking of the false Prophets who imitated the true Prophets of the Lord, as to their Outside, that They should not wear a rough Garment to deceive. Zech. xiii. 4. In the Revelations, the two Witnesses, thought to be Enoch and Elijah, are represented as cloathed in Sackcloth. Rev. xi. 3. Their Poverty is conspicuous in all their Actions. The Presents they received were only Bread, Fruits, and Honey, as being made to poor Men. 1 Sam. ix. 7, 8. 1 Kings xiv. 3. The first Fruits of the Earth were given them, as being Persons that possess'd nothing themselves. 2 Kings iv. 42. The Woman of Shunem, that entertain'd Elisha, put into the Prophet's Chamber no Furniture but what was plain and necessary. 2 Kings iv. 10. The same Prophet refuses the rich Presents of Naaman, and drives away from his Presence Gehazi who had received them. 2 Kings v. 26. Their Frugality appears through their whole History. 'Tis well known what is related of the wild Gourds, (Coloquintida) that one of the Prophet's caus'd to be boiled for the Refreshment of his Brethren. 2 Kings iv. 38, 40. The Angel gave to Elijah only Bread and Water for a long Journey. 1 Kings xix. 6. Habakkuk brought to Daniel nothing but Broth or Pottage. Bell & Dragon, 33. Lastly, Obadiah, the Governor of Ahab's Houshold, gave nothing but Bread and Water to the Prophets that he fed in the Caves. 1 Kings xviii. 7.

All the Prophets were not Observers of a strict Continency; for Samuel had Children, and Isaiah had a Wife, who is call'd the Prophetess. Isai. viii. 3. Hosea received Orders to marry a Prostitute. Hosea i. 2, &c. But there were no Women or Wives in the Societies of the Prophets. Neither Elijah nor Elisha had any that we hear of, and we see with what Reserve the Woman that entertained Elisha accosted him and spoke to him; she speaks to him only by the Interposition of Gehazi; she dares not so much as enter in to him, or present herself before him. If in the Transport of her Affliction she would throw herself at the Feet of Elisha, Gehazi hinders her, and takes her away. 2 Kings iv. 27. The Prophets were often exposed to the Railleries, the Insults, the Persecutions, the ill Treatment both of Kings and People, whose Vices and Irregularities they undertook to reprove.

* None of these Books are received into the Canon of Scripture by the Church of England; but are admitted into the Number of Apochryphal Writings, which the Church doth read for Example of Life and Instruction of Manners, but yet it doth not apply them to establish any Doctrine. See Article VI.

Heb. xi. 35, &c. St. Paul acquaints us, that many of them died by a violent Death. Others were tortured, not accepting Deliverance, that they might obtain a better Reſurrection. And others had Trial of cruel Mockings, and Scourgings; yea, moreover of Bonds and Impriſonment. They were ſtoned, they were ſawn aſunder, were tempted, were ſlain with the Sword: They wander'd about in Sheep-skins and Goat-skins, being deſtitute, afflicted, tormented. (Of whom the World was not worthy.) They wander'd in Deſarts, and in Mountains, and in Dens, and Caves of the Earth. Such were the Lives and the Deaths of the Prophets.

We ſhall not here enter into the Particulars of their Lives, becauſe this is already done in their ſeveral Articles. The Reader may alſo ſee our Prefaces before each of them, and our general Preface upon the Prophets. Father Boulduc, a Capuchine, in his Book called Eccleſia ante legem, pretends, that the Prophetical Order began even before the Deluge; that then it was divided into ſeveral Branches, and that theſe different Orders compoſed the whole Eccleſiaſtical Hierarchy. Upon this Occaſion he delivers many things that are very particular and extraordinary, and which certainly may be ſaid to be very viſionary. They that love ſuch kind of Entertainment, may conſult the Author himſelf.

Προσήλυτος. גר Ger. נכר Necher. PROSELYTE. This Term comes from the Greek Word Proſelytos, which ſignifies a Stranger, one that comes from Abroad, or from another Place. The Hebrew Word Ger or Necher, has the ſame Signification. In the Language of the Jews they go by this Name, who come to dwell in their Country, or who embrace their Religion, though they are not Jews by Birth. In the New Teſtament they are call'd ſometimes Proſelytes, and ſometimes Gentiles, fearing God, or Godly. Viri religioſi & timentes Deum. Acts ii. 5. x. 2, 22. xiii. 16, 50.

The Hebrews diſtinguiſh two Kinds of Proſelytes. The firſt are called Proſelytes of the Gate, and the others, Proſelytes of Juſtice. The firſt are thoſe that dwelt in the Land of Iſrael, or even out of this Country, and who, without obliging themſelves to Circumciſion, or to any other Ceremony of the Law, fear'd and worſhipp'd the true God, obſerving the Rules that were impoſed upon the Children of Noah, which we have already enumerated under the Article NOACHIDES. Of this Number was Naaman the Syrian, Nebuzardan General of Nebuchadnezzar's Army, Cornelius the Centurion, the Eunuch of Queen Candace, and ſome others, of whom mention is made in the Acts of the Apoſtles.

The Rabbins teach, that in order to make a Proſelyte of Habitation, or of the Gate, he that would enter into this Engagement, muſt promiſe with an Oath, in the Preſence of three Witneſſes, to keep the ſeven Precepts of the Noachidæ; that is, according to them, that Law of Nature to which all the Nations of the World are obliged, and the Obſervation of which might bring them to eternal Salvation. The Jews ſay, That the Proſelytes of the Gate have ceaſed in Iſrael, ever ſince the Obſervation of the Jubilee has been left off, and that the Tribes of Gad, of Reuben, and of Manaſſeh, abiding on the other Side of Jordan, were led away Captive by Tiglath-pileſſer. But theſe Obſervations are not juſt, ſince we ſee many Proſelytes in the Time of Jeſus Chriſt, and that our Saviour reproaches the Phariſees with compaſſing Sea and Land to make a Proſelyte, and after this, with making him a greater Sinner than he was before. (Matt. xxiii. 15.) And St. Luke in the Acts ſpeaks of a great Number of Proſelytes, and thoſe that fear'd God, that were then at Jeruſalem, when the Holy Ghoſt deſcended upon the Apoſtles. (Acts ii. 11.) I am apt to believe, that the greateſt Part of theſe were Proſelytes of Juſtice; but it cannot be deny'd but that ſome of them might be Proſelytes of the Gate.

The Privileges of Proſelytes of the Gate were, firſt, that by the Obſervation of the Rules of natural Juſtice, and by Exemption from Idolatry, Blaſphemy, Inceſt, Adultery, and Murder, they might have Pretenſions to eternal Life. Secondly, they might dwell in the Land of Iſrael, and have a Share in the outward Proſperities of the People of God. 'Tis ſaid they did not dwell in the Cities, but only in the Suburbs and the Villages. But it is certain, that the Jews have often admitted voluntarily into their Cities, not only Proſelytes of Habitation, but alſo Gentiles and Idolaters, as appears by the Reproaches they ſuffer'd on this account, through the whole Scriptures. In the time of Solomon there were in Iſrael One hundred Fifty-three thouſand and Six hundred of theſe Proſelytes, whom this Prince compell'd to hew Wood, to draw and to cut Stones, and to carry Burthens for the Building of the Temple. (2 Chron. ii. 17, 18.) Theſe Proſelytes were Canaanites, who had continued in the Country ever ſince Joſhua's Time. Moſes forbad the Iſraelites to eat any Animals that died of themſelves, or were ſtrangled, ſo that the Blood remain'd in them, but order'd them to ſell or give ſuch Animals to the Strangers and Proſelytes. (Deut. xiv. 21.)

The Proſelytes of Juſtice, are thoſe that were converted to Judaiſm, who had engaged themſelves to receive Circumciſion, and to obſerve the whole Law of Moſes. Thus were they admitted to all the Prerogatives of the People of the Lord, as well in this Life as the other. The Rabbins inform us, that before Circumciſion was ad-ministred to them, and before they were admitted into the Religion of the Hebrews, they were examin'd about the Motives of their Conversion; to know whether their Change was voluntary, or whether it proceeded from any Reasons of Interest, Fear, Ambition, or such like. Maimonides assures us, that under the happy Reigns of David and Solomon, they received no Proselyte of Justice, because there was Reason to fear, that it was rather the Prosperity of these Princes, than any Love to their Religion, that made them Converts to Judaism. The Talmudists say, that Proselytes are as it were the Canker and Rust of Israel, and that too much Caution cannot be taken not to admit them too easily. (Vide Seld. de Syned. l. 2. c. 2. art. 5.)

When the Proselyte was well proved and instructed, they gave him Circumcision; and when the Wound of his Circumcision was healed, they gave him Baptism, by plunging his whole Body into a Cistern of Water, by one only Immersion. This Ceremony being a judicial Act, was to be perform'd in the Presence of three Judges, and could not be done upon a Festival Day. (Vide Seld. de Jure Nat. & Gent. l. 2. c. 2, 3.) The Proselyte also caus'd Circumcision and Baptism to be administer'd to his Slaves, who had not yet compleated thirteen Years of Age. But those that were so old or older, could not be compell'd, but he must sell them to others, if they were obstinate in not embracing Judaism. As to Female Slaves, they were only to be baptized, if they would become Converts, if not, they were to be sold to others. The Baptism that a Proselyte had once received, was never repeated, neither in the Person of the Proselyte, though he should afterwards apostatize, nor in that of his Children, that should be born to him after Baptism, unless they were born from a Pagan Woman; in which Case they were to be baptized as Pagans, because they follow'd the Condition of their Mother. Partus sequitur ventrem.

Boys that had not yet compleated the twelfth Year of their Age, and Girls that had not arrived to their thirteenth Year, could not become Proselytes, till they had first obtained the Consent of their Parents, or in Case of Refusal, the Concurrence of the Officers of Justice. Baptism in respect of Girls, had the same Effect as Circumcision in respect of Boys. Each of them by means of this, received (as it were) a new Birth, so that those that were their Parents before, were no longer look'd upon as such after this Ceremony, and those that before were Slaves, now became Freemen. Children born before the Conversion of their Father had no Right to inherit. If a Proselyte died without having had Children after his Conversion, his Estate belong'd to the first Occupier, and not to the publick Treasury. When Proselytes became Jews, they received from Heaven a new Soul, and a new substantial Form. This is what the Rabbins teach concerning their Proselytes of Justice.

They require three Things in a compleat Proselyte, which are Baptism, Circumcision, and Sacrifice;[a] but for Women only Baptism and Sacrifice. 'Tis thought that our Saviour made Allusion to the baptizing of Proselytes, when he told Nicodemus, that for those that would obey the Law, it was necessary they should be born again. (John iii. 5, 10.) Except a Man be born of Water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God. And when Nicodemus appear'd surprized at this Doctrine, our Saviour says to him, Art thou a Master of Israel, and knowest not these Things? As though he would insinuate, that what he had now told him had nothing extraordinary in it, since the Baptism of Proselytes was a thing practised every Day in Israel.

Moses in Deuteronomy, excludes certain Persons from the Privileges of the People of Israel, or, as he there speaks, from the Congregation of the Lord. (Deut. xxiii. 1, 2, 3, &c.) Some for ever, and others only for a certain time. All Eunuchs, in whatsoever manner they became so, are excluded for ever. Bastards, or illegitimate Children were not to be admitted till after the tenth Generation. The Moabites and Ammonites were in the same Circumstances. He received the Egyptians and Idumeans after the second Generation. It was allow'd to these Persons to be converted to the Lord, and to become Proselytes, when they pleased. The Door of Conversion was always open to them. Johannes Hircanus Prince of the Jews,[b] compelled the Idumeans to be circumcised, and to embrace the Law of Moses; and from this time, says Josephus, they were look'd upon as Jews. Achior Prince of the Ammonites,[c] became also a Jew, without any other Preparation than that of being instructed in what he was to believe and observe in this Religion: Therefore the Power of being converted was not taken away from these Nations, but they were not admitted to Offices or Employments, to Dignities and the other external Prerogatives of the People of God, till after a certain time, and till they had given sufficient Proofs of their Perseverance in the true Religion.

The Hebrews believe, that the Populace of Egypt, that follow'd the Israelites, when they left that Country, vulgus promiscuum innumerabile ascendit cum eis, (Exod. xii. 38.) were all Converts and Proselytes of Justice: They will

Some Rabbins inform us, that in the Time of Solomon they receiv'd the Gentiles to Judaism by Baptism only, because of the great Number that then became Converts. But others acquaint us, as before observed, that then they would admit of no Proselytes in Israel. If he that presented himself to be admitted as a Convert had already been circumcised, they contented themselves with just opening the Scar left after Circumcision, so as to draw a few Drops of Blood. As to the Sacrifices that the Proselyte was to offer, I observe, that Jethro the Father-in-Law of Moses offered Burnt-Offerings and Peace-Offerings to the Lord. [Exodus xviii. 12.] 'Tis said, that anciently the Proselytes offered for a Burnt-Offering a Sacrifice of large Cattle, or two Turtles, or two young Pigeons: But as now, for a long Time, the Jews have neither Temple nor Altar, they do not oblige their Proselytes to offer Sacrifices. [Προσευχή. Oratio. Juvenal. Sat. 3. v. 296. In quâ te quæro Proseuchâ.] PROSEUCHE. The Word Proseuche is Greek, and signifies Prayer. It is taken for the Places of Prayer of the Jews, and was pretty near the same as their Synagogues. But the Synagogues were generally in the Cities, and were Cover'd Places; whereas, for the most part, the Proseuches were out of the Cities, and upon the Banks of Rivers, having no Covering, except, perhaps, the Shade of some Trees, or some cover'd Galleries. [Acts xvi. 12.] In the Acts, mention is made of the Proseuche of Philippi in Macedonia, which was out of the City. Maimonides says, That the Proseuches ought to be built in such Manner, that those that come into them, may turn their Faces towards the Temple of Jerusalem; Respect being had to the Situation of the Place and of the City where they were. [3 Macc. cap. ult.] The Author of the 3d Book of Maccabees often says, That the Jews of Egypt, being deliver'd from the Danger to which they had been exposed under Ptolemy Philopator, built a Proseuche near the City of Alexandria. [Epiphan. hæres. 80.] St. Epiphanius says, That at two Miles from Shechem there was a Proseuche of the Samaritans, situate in a Plain, built in Form of a Theatre, and without a Roof; in which, (says Epiphanius) as well as in every thing else, they copy from the Jews. However, we must allow, that often Josephus and Philo confound the Proseuches with the Synagogues, and that they place them in the Cities. * See SYNAGOGUE.

PROVERBS. The Hebrews give the Name of Proverbs, Parables, or Similitudes, to moral Sentences, Maxims, Comparisons, or Enigma's, express'd in a Stile that is Poetical, figurative, close and sententious. The Hebrews call this Kind of Proverbs Mishle. [Mishle. Παραβολαί. Parabolæ.] Solomon says, That in his Time, Maxims of this Sort, were the chief Study of the Learned: A wise Man will endeavour (says he) to understand a Proverb, and the Interpretation; the Words of the Wise, and their dark Sayings. [Prov. i. 6. Ecclus. xxxix. 1, 2, 3.] And Jesus the Son of Sirach says, He will keep the Sayings of the renowned Men; and where subtil Parables are, he will be there also: He will seek out the Secrets of grave Sentences, and be conversant in dark Parables. The Queen of Sheba came from the utmost Parts of the Earth to see Solomon, to prove him, and to propose dark Riddles to him; [1 Kings x. 1.] Tentare eum in ænigmatibus. Hiram King of Tyre (they say) kept a Correspondence, by Letters, with Solomon, and proposed enigmatical Questions to him, and explain'd those that were proposed to him by Solomon. [Menander & Dius apud Joseph. Antiq. l. 8. c. 2.] The ancient Sages of Greece had also this kind of Exercise in much Esteem. Cleobulus composed no less than three thousand Songs and mysterious Sayings; and Cleobulina his Daughter writ enigmatical Verses. [Diogen. Laert. in Cleobul.]

The Proverbs of Solomon, are, without doubt, the most valuable Part of his Works: He tells us himself, they were the Fruits of his most profound Meditations, and of his most excellent Wisdom: Because the Preacher was wise, he still taught the People Knowledge; yea, he gave good Heed, and sought out and set in Order many Proverbs. [Eccles. xii. 9.] In this Book we find Rules for the Conduct of all Conditions of Life; for Kings, Courtiers, Men engaged in the Affairs of the World; for Masters, Servants, Fathers, Mothers, Children. Some have doubted whether Solomon alone was the Author of this Book: Grotius thinks this Prince took Care to have a Compilation made, for his own Use, of whatever was then excellent in Points of Morality, from all the ancient Writers of his own Nation; [Rab. & Grot. in Prov.] That under Hezekiah this Collection was enlarged, by adding whatever of this Nature had been written since Solomon; 'Twas Eliakim, Shebna, and Joah (says he) that compleated this Collection. [2 Kings xviii. 18.] But these Conjectures not being supported by any Proof, ought not to be of such Weight with us, as to make us depart from the Opinions of the Fathers and Interpreters, who ascribe this whole Book to Solomon.

True it is, we may there obſerve ſome Difference of Style and Method: For Example; the nine firſt Chapters, which have for their Title The Proverbs of Solomon, are written as a continued Diſcourſe, and may be conſider'd as a Preface to the whole Book; and to Chap. x. where we ſee the ſame Title again, the Style changes to ſhort Sentences, which have little Connexion with one another, and which, generally, contain a kind of Antitheſes. This goes on to Ver. 17. of Chap. xxii. Here we find a new Style to prevail, that approaches nearer to that of the nine firſt Chapters, and ſupports it ſelf to Chap. xxiv. Ver. 23. where there is a new Title in theſe Words, Hæc quoque Sapientibus. This גם אלה לחכמים is ſtill addreſs'd To the Wiſe; or, Here are ſome farther Sayings of the Wiſe. Their Style is ſhort and ſententious. At the beginning of Chap. xxv. we read, Theſe are alſo Proverbs of Solomon, which the Men of Hezekiah King of Judah copied out. And, doubtleſs, it was upon this Authority that Grotius has advanced, that this Collection was made by Eliakim, Shebna, and Joab, famous Men under the Reign of Hezekiah. This Collection goes on as far as Chap. xxx. 1. where we read thus; The Words of Agur the Son of Jakeh. Laſtly, The Title of the xxxi. and laſt Chapter, is this; The Words of King Lemuel.

From all which, it ſeems certain, that the Book of Proverbs, in the State we find it at this Day, is a Collection of Part of the Proverbs of Solomon, compiled by ſeveral Hands. Wherefore we cannot conclude from hence, that this is not the Work of Solomon. This Prince being in-
1 Kings iv. 32. ſpired of the Holy Ghoſt, had compoſed no leſs than three-thouſand Proverbs. Several Perſons might have made Collections of them; Hezekiah, among others, as mention'd in Chap. xxv. Agur, Iſaiah, Eſdras might have done the ſame. From theſe ſeveral Collections the Work was compoſed, that we have now in our Hands. Nothing is more reaſonable to be admitted than this Suppoſition. It is no-where here ſaid, that Solomon himſelf had made a Collection of Proverbs and Sentences. The Title, Solomon's Proverbs, rather ſhews the Au-
Vid. Zemach David, & Seder Olam. Rabba, c. 15. thor, than the Compiler. The Rabbins generally maintain, That King Hezekiah, obſerving the Abuſe that the People made of ſeveral of the Works of Solomon, chiefly of thoſe which contained the Virtues of Plants, and Secrets of Natural Philoſophy, he ſuppreſſed ſeveral of theſe Works, and only preſerved thoſe that are handed down to us.

No Doubt is made of the Canonicalneſs of The Book of Proverbs. We only know Concil. C. P. iv. Collat. 4. The Greek Verſion of this Book is often very different from the Hebrew, and adds a great many Verſes that are not found in the Original. The Roman Edition of the Greek tranſpoſes whole Chapters. For Example: After Chap. xxiv. ver. 22. it inſerts the fourteen firſt Verſes of Ch. xxx. Then it returns to Ver. 23. and the reſt of Chap. xxiv. After which, it puts Ver. 15. and the reſt of Ch. xxx. Then Ch. xxxi. and, laſtly, Ch. xxv. and thoſe that follow, as far as Chap. xxix. After which, is Chap. xxxi. Ver. 10. and the reſt, which conclude the Book. I don't mention the leſſer Tranſpoſitions which may be ſeen in the Body of the Book; nor is it known from whence theſe Irregularities have proceeded. In the ancient Latin Editions we ſee ſeveral Verſes added, which have been left out from the Time of St. Jerom: Yet there ſtill remain ſome, which have been mark'd and ſuppreſs'd in the firſt Tome of the new Edition of St. Jerom.

PROVIDENCE. 'Tis a Tenet of the Chriſtian and Jewiſh Religion, That God diſpoſes and governs every Thing by his Providence; That this Providence is Eternal and Infinite; That it extends over all Things, even to the Hairs of our Heads, to the moſt minute Animals or Herbs of the Field. is incapable of doing or committing Evil; That we are the only Cauſes of our own Happineſs or Misfortune, according to the good or ill Choice we make, in the Uſe of our Liberty.

But theſe Notions are rejected by the generality of the Jews; tho' they are not agreed among themſelves, in the manner of explaining the Effects of Providence. See Baſnage's

PSALMS. The Book of the Psalms, is call'd, in the Hebrew, [a] Sepher Tehillim, The Book of Hymns. In the Gospel it is named, sometimes, The Book of Psalms; and sometimes only, The Prophet, or David, from the Name of its principal Author. This Book is justly esteem'd as a kind of Abridgment of the whole Scripture: It contains, in short, whatever is found in the other sacred Books. Psalmo-
Aug. Præf. in Psalm. rum liber quæcumque utilia sunt ex omnibus continet, says St. Austin. 'Tis a general Cassiodor. Præf. in Psalm. Library, wherein we may meet with whatever is requisite for our Salvation, says Cassiodorus; In hoc libro spiritualis Bibliotheca
Ambrof. Præf. in Psalm. instructa est. The sacred History instructs us, says St. Ambrose, the Prophecies declare what is to come, the Reproofs restrain the Wicked, the Morality persuades them; but the Psalms produce all these Effects. Agreeableness and Usefulness are there so happily mix'd, that it is not easy to decide which is most prevalent. Certat in Psalmo doctrina cum gratia simul. Hence proceeds that great Veneration that has always been given to the Psalms. 'Twas almost become a general Rule, That the Bishops, the Priests, and all religious Persons, were to have the Psalter by heart: The Church has made it a principal Part of her Service, and has obliged her Ministers to rehearse some Portions of it every Day.

The Hebrews commonly divide the Psalter into five Books; and several of the Fathers [b] admit of this Division, and think it very ancient. Eusebius says, It may be observ'd in the Hebrew Original, and in the best Editions of the Septuagint. St. Ambrose expresly refutes those who rejected this Division, and who thought it contrary to the New Testament, which quotes the Psalter only as a single Book. This last Reason was satisfactory to St. Hilarius [c], St. Jerom [d], and St. Austin [e], so as to cause them to give up this Division of the Psalter into five Books, as being contrary to Scripture. Modern Commentators are not more unanimous than the Antients upon this Point: Some think the Psalter was distributed into five Books by the same Authors that collected the Psalms; but Others will have this to be much more modern, and even since the Times of the Apostles. In Reality, this Dispute is of no great Consequence.

But what persuades us that this Distribution is very antient, and even from the Time of the first Authors that collected the Psalms into a Body, is, that at the End of each Book we read the same Conclusion, which seems to have been put there by Esdras, or by those that had the Vid. Muis the Captivity of Babylon. This is certain, that neither the Jews nor Christians have ever reckon'd the Collection of Psalms but as one Book, in the Enumeration of the Books of Holy Scripture. The first Book of the Psalter, according to the Hebrews, ends at our fortieth Psalm. The second at the seventy-first. The third at the eighty-eighth. The fourth at the hundred and fifth. The fifth at the hundred and fiftieth. The four first Books conclude with these Words, Amen, Amen, in the Hebrew, and with fiat, fiat, in the Latin. The fifth with Hallelujah both in the Hebrew and the Latin.

The Number of Canonical Psalms has always been fix'd among the Jews, as also among the Christians, at one hundred and fifty; for the hundred and fifty-first, to be found in the Greek, has never been received as Canonical. But tho' the Number of the Whole has been agreed on, yet there is a Variety in their Distribution. The Jews make two of the ninth, and begin their tenth at these Words of Psalm ix. 22. Why standest thou afar off, O Lord? so that from this Place to Psalm cxiii. their Citations and Numbers are different from ours, and from those of the Greeks. They are always a Psalm before us, and that which is our nineteenth is their twentieth, and so of the rest. The Protestant Churches, following this Division of the Hebrews, quote the Psalms in like manner; which is necessary to be observed in reading their Books.

At Psalm cxiii. When Israel went out of Egypt, they recede still farther from us, for for they divide this Pfalm into two, and begin the cxiv. at thefe Words, Not unto us, O Lord. So that Pfalm cxiv. according to the Greeks and Latins, is their cxvi. But afterwards they come nearer us again, by uniting Pfalms cxiv. and cxv. together, fo that they differ from us but by one as far as the cxlvi. And then uniteing again Pfalms cxlvi. and cxlvii. they coincide with us, and continue to reckon with the Vulgate to the End of the Pfalter.

There is alfo fome Difference among the antient Greek and Latin Copies, about the Divifion of the firft and fecond Pfalm; fome making but one of both, and others dividing them into two, as we do at this Day. 'Tis true in general, that the Divifion of the Pfalter is not of that Antiquity that might be imagin'd, and that fometimes one is obliged, in order to purfue the Senfe of fome of the Pfalms, to connect one to another, or to feparate them, as the Matter requires. St. Hilarius affirms, [a] that in his Time the Diftribution of the Pfalms was not yet fettled among the Hebrews, and that fome divided them in one manner, and fome in another. Origen makes the fame Obfervation. [b] He fays, that in the Hebrew the Pfalms are mark'd by 1, 2, 3, &c. and in the Time of Kimchi, that is, in the twelfth Age, the Matter was yet undetermined. [c] In our Preface upon the Pfalms, Art. II. and in the Commentary, it may be feen, that often feveral Pfalms have been made of what ought to have been but one, by the Intention of the Author that compofed them.

It is a Tradition among the Hebrews and Chriftians, that Efdras is, if not the only, yet the principal Author of the Collection of the Book of Pfalms. Eufebius, St Hilary, Theodoret, the Author of the Synopfis printed under the Name of St. Athanafius, venerable Bede, and feveral others impute this Honour to him. Philafter fays, that wife Men of the Jewifh Nation having collected them together, ranged them in the fame Order that they had received from their Anceftors, who had preferved them from the Hands of their Enemies. Even before the Captivity there was a Collection of the Pfalms of David, fince Hezekiah, when he reftor'd the Worfhip of the Lord in the Temple, caus'd the Pfalms of David to be fung there. In the Library that Nehemiah erected at Jerufalem, he caufed the Pfalms of David to be depofited.

Speculative Men have exercis'd themfelves very much, upon the Order and Difpofition that the Pfalms ought to obferve among themfelves. They have difcovered Myftery and Defign, fome in one manner and fome in another. Some [d] have thought they could obferve a Succeffion of the Events of the Life of David. Others have pretended, that Regard was had to the Order of the Solemnities that were celebrated in the Temple. St. Chryfoftom obferves, that generally fpeaking the firft Pfalms are upon Subjects of Sorrow, and the latter upon more joyful and comfortable Subjects. St. Auftin acknowledges, that he could not yet difcover the Myftery of the Difpofition of the Pfalms, but that it feems to him, that every fiftieth hath a Relation to the Vocation, the Juftification, and the Glorification of the Saints; fince the fiftieth relates to Repentance, the hundredth to Mercy, and the hundred and fiftieth to the Praife of God in his Saints. But St. Jerome obferves, that it is impertinent to expect in the Pfalter a chronological Series of Canticles, which have relation to certain Events of Hiftory, fince it is not the Cuftom of the Authors of Lyricks to obferve any fuch Order in their Compofitions; and indeed, a very little Examination of the Text and Spirit of the Pfalms may convince us, that thofe that undertook this Collection had no other Defign, than to give us all thefe holy Canticles as they found them, with a religious and exact Scrupulofity, without putting themfelves to the Trouble either of retrenching what had been already repeated, or of fupplying what might feem deficient, or of connecting what had been feparated, or of feparating what had been improperly join'd together. They have left the Care of making thefe Obfervations to thofe that were to ftudy the Letter of the Pfalms. See our Preface to the Pfalms, Art. III.

The Authority and Canonicalnefs of the Book of Pfalms have always been acknowledg'd by both Jews and Chriftians. Philaftius fays, that the Nicolaites, the Gnofticks, and the Manichees deny'd that David was a Prophet, or that his Works were the Effect of the Infpiration of the Holy Ghoft. Alfo fome Anabaptifts have deny'd the Infpiration of the Book of Pfalms. But the general Sentiment of the Chriftian Church has always been, that all the hundred and fifty Pfalms contain'd in the Pfalter were the Work of the Holy Ghoft. One thing only creates a Difficulty with fome Perfons of Piety, that in the Pfalms we fometimes find a kind of Imprecation againft the Wicked, and the Enemies of the Prophet. But the Fathers and Interpreters commonly explain thefe Paffages, as if they were Predictions of thofe Calamities mities that were to befall them, or Wishes for their Conversion. As if it were said, that they should certainly perish, if they continued in their disorderly Courses; or, let them perish if they were not converted. St. Chrysostom says, that in these Passages the Psalmist does not so much deliver his own Sentiments, as those of others. St. Athanasius maintains, that he makes these Curses and Imprecations, not against Men his visible Enemies, but against the Devils which are his invisible Enemies. The Reader may see M. Bossuet, Bishop of Meaux, in his Preface to the Psalms, and our Commentary upon Psalm xxxiv. p. 373, 374.

Chrysost. in Psal. cxxxvi. 11. Athan. Argumento in Ps. lxxii.

Nothing can be a greater Argument of the Obscurity of the Book of Psalms, than the great Number of Commentaries that have been made upon them, and which are still made every Day, in order to explain them. Bocchius and Draudius have reckon'd up above five hundred. Father Le Long of the Oratory, in the second Tome of his Bibliotheca Sacra, has enumerated as far as six hundred and thirty, without reckoning those which have wrote upon the Scripture in general, or those that have commented upon a Part of the Psalms only; so that if we would comprehend all these, it may be affirm'd, that above a thousand Writers have undertook to illustrate the Psalms. The Difficulty of succeeding in the Explication of these divine Canticles proceeds from several Sources. The first is, the Obscurity of the Hebrew Text. The second is, the Nature of the Style, which is very sublime, and at the same time very different from our manner. The third is, the Abstruseness of the Matter. The Hebrew Text of the Psalms is more obscure than that of the other Books of Scripture, as in general the Style of Poetry is more difficult than that of Prose. Besides, the Copyers having understood it less, and having oftner transcrib'd this Book, have occasion'd many Faults therein. We need but compare the several Manners in which the Seventy, the Syriack, and St. Jerome have translated this Text, with what we read at this Day, to perceive this Difference.

Men are agreed about the Authority of the Book of Psalms, and acknowledge the Authors to have been divinely inspired; but they are not agreed whether they are owing to one Author or to many, or who he was, or they were, who composed them. Some assert they all belong to David, which others again deny. St. Chrysostom, [a] St. Ambrose, [b] St. Austin, [c] Theodoret, [d] Cassiodorus, [e] Euthymius, [f] Philastrius, [g] and many of the Moderns, maintain, that David alone was the Author of them all. St. Hilary, [h] the Author of the Synopsis ascribed to Athanasius, and several others, pretend the contrary. The Reasons of each Opinion are to be discuss'd. Those that think David to have written the whole Psalter, rely upon these: 1. That in Scripture this holy King is marked out by his Character of Psalmist of Israel. The sweet Psalmist of Israel said, The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, &c. 2 Sam. xxiii. 1, 2. 2. In all the Ceremonies wherein mention is made of Singers, or of Psalms, generally the Psalms of David are intended. Thus at the Dedication of the Temple of Solomon, the Levites rehearsed the Canticles that David had composed. When Hezekiah was about to restore the Worship of the Lord in the Temple, he commanded the Levites to praise the Lord with the Words of David and of Asaph the Seer. Asaph was principal Musician in David's time, to whom this Prince sent his Canticles, in order to be set to Musick by him, and to be sung by the Choir over which he presided. At the Dedication of the second Temple, after the Return from the Captivity, they sung the Praises of the Lord in the Canticles that David had composed. Nehemiah sets up the Psalms of David in the Library he had founded at Jerusalem. Jesus the Son of Sirach commends the Zeal of David, for having composed Hymns to be sung before the Lord. In the New Testament our Saviour and his Apostles always quote the Psalms by the Name of David's; [i] and make use of 'em as such, in the Presence of the Jews, who never contradicted them in this, though in every thing else they were ready enough to oppose them, and very glad to find Room for an Objection. Nor do they only quote under his Name such as bear the Title of David, but they cite others also under his Name, which have no particular Title; as the second Psalm quoted by St. Peter, Acts iv. 25.

But, 3. The antient, uniform, and constant Use of the Church, which gives to the Psalter the Name of the Psalms of David, is another Proof of the Persuasion propagated from the very Beginning, that this holy King and Prophet was the Author of these divine Canticles. Usus Ecclesiæ catholicæ spiritus sancti inspiratione, generaliter & immobiliter tenet, ut quicumque eorum Psalmorum cantandus fuerit, Lector aliud prædicare non audeat, nisi Psalmos David, says Cassiodorus. Philastrius has carry'd this Matter so far, that he places those among Hereticks, who deny'd that David was the Author of all the Psalms. Perez in in his Commentary upon the Pfalms afferts, that Jofephus the Hiftorian, Jonathan the Paraphraft, and all the antient Jews were perfuaded, that David compofed the whole Pfalter; but that the Rabbins relinquifh'd this Opinion, when they found themfelves prefs'd hard by Origen, who affaulted them by Paffages quoted from this very Book. But what could the Rabbins gain by denying David to have been the Author of the Pfalms, fince they acknowledg'd them all to have been infpired, and to have been the Work of fome of the Prophets? In what remains to us of Origen, we cannot diftinctly fee what was his Opinion upon this Queftion; but Genebrard affures us, that the Talmudifts and Rabbins commonly teach, that all the Pfalms are not to be afcribed to David as their Author.

This is what has been advanced to prove, that David was the Author of the whole Pfalter. But the contrary Opinion has been fupported with good Arguments, and the Number of thofe that contend, that David has had Partners with him in this Honour, is not inferior to thofe of the Opinion now propofed. St. Hilary [a] fays exprefly, that the Pfalms have for their Authors the Perfons whofe Names they bear in their Titles. Abfurdum eft Pfalmos David dicere vel nominare, cum ibi Auctores eorum ipfis infcriptionum titulis commendantur. St. Jerome in his Letter to Sophronius, which is a Preface to the Pfalter, fays the fame thing as St. Hilary; and in another Place he looks upon it as an Error to affirm, that all the Pfalms are of Hieron. Ep. ad Cyprian. 139. David. Sciamus errare eos, qui omnes Pfalmos David arbitrantur, & non eorum quorum nominibus infcripti funt. We read in a Note upon the Title of the firft Pfalm, in the Commentary of St. Auftin upon the Pfalter, that all the Pfalms are not David's. Non enim omnes Pfalmi à David editi funt. But the Learned think, that this Annotation does not belong to him, and that his true Sentiments are to be found in l. 17. c. 14. of The City of God, where he evidently declares himfelf on the Side of David, faying; Mihi credibilius videntur exiftimare, qui omnes illos centum & quinquaginta Pfalmos ejus operi tribuunt.

The Greek Fathers are not lefs inclined to that Opinion, that feveral Authors were concerned in compofing the Pfalms, than the Latin Fathers were. St. Athanafius [b] difapproves the contrary Opinion. He reckons up but feventy-two Pfalms that belong to David, and thinks that thofe without Titles are to be afcribed to the fame Author as the Pfalm aforegoing. In his Synopfis, if it be his Work, he fays there are Pfalms of Jeduthum, of Afaph, of the Sons of Korah, of Haggai, of Zechariah, and of Heman: That there are fome which belong to all thefe Authors together, as thofe that have in the Title Hallelujah. He adds, that the Name of the Pfalms of David was given to the Pfalter, becaufe he was the firft Author of this kind of Works, he regulated the Order, the Seafons, and the Functions of fome other Writers, whofe Names are at the Head of fome of the Pfalms. Eufebius of Cæfarea afcribes to David only feventy-two of the Pfalms. [c] He thinks the others belong to thofe whofe Names they bear. The Sons of Korah compofed eleven, Afaph twelve, Solomon two, Mofes one, Ethan the Ezrahite one. He reprefents David to us in the Midft of a Band of infpired Muficians, finging alternately as the Holy Ghoft infpired them, while all the reft, and even David himfelf, continued in Silence, contenting themfelves to anfwer in the Chorus Hallelujah.

To thefe Authorities of the Fathers may be added the Suffrage of an infinite Number of modern Authors, as the Rabbins, and many Chriftian Commentators of all Communions, the greateft part of which acknowledge, that in the Pfalter there are many Canticles that were written fince David's time, and which carry in themfelves the Marks of their Novelty; for Example, when they fpeak of the Captivity of Babylon, which happen'd long after the time of David. True it is, that the Titles of the Pfalms are very antient; but there are many of them that have other Names befides that of David. We may conclude from thence, that at leaft at that time they were thought not to belong to David. And this Argument will have ftill more Weight with them, who contend, that the very Titles of the Pfalms are owing to Infpiration, as we fhall now fee.

The Titles of the Pfalms, are a Matter about which Interpreters have much exercis'd their Sagacity, and in which we have very little Light or Certainty. Some of 'em have a profound Refpect for thefe Titles, and look upon them as making a Part of thefe divine Canticles. Others think they were added afterwards, and that they are of fmall Confideration. Some imagine thefe Titles to be, as it were, a Key to the Pfalm, and that whoever could underftand them well, might eafily enter into the Senfe of the Author. Others believe them of little Importance for the underftanding of the Text, as having been added in After-times, and that very often at random. It is faid again by others, that even allowing thefe Infcriptions might have been ufeful for the right underftanding of the Pfalms, yet we can have have but little Uſe from them, the greateſt Part of 'em being now ſo obſcure, that the moſt learned Interpreters dare not flatter themſelves that they underſtand them, and own they contribute nothing to illuſtrate the Pſalm. Parum eſt damni in hujus vocis (haggittith) ignoratione, cum illa, ut & aliæ ſimiles, quæ paſſim occurrunt in titulis Pſalmorum, ad argumentum & materiam carminis, nihil prorſus pertineant, ſays De Muis, one of the moſt learned Commentators that we have upon the Pſalms. (In Pſalm viii. 1.)

The Fathers are generally agreed as to the Obſcurity of theſe Titles, but they have a far different Opinion of their Uſefulneſs. Origen delivers a Notion that he had learn'd from a Jew, about the Obſcurity of the Scriptures in general, which will be very appoſite to the Book of Pſalms. The Scripture, ſaid he, is like a vaſt and magnificent Building, wherein are many Apartments and Chambers, every one of which has its proper Key: But the Key that is found at every Door is not that which belongs to it. Often it is miſplaced, and the Buſineſs is to find it out, and to diſtinguiſh it from many others. (Origen. edit. Huet. t. 1. p. 39.) St. Auſtin ſays, that the Title declares the Subject of the Pſalm. Tanquam præco Pſalmi eſt titulus Pſalmi. (Aug. in Pſal. 139. p. 1552.) The Title of the Pſalm and the Pſalm itſelf, are two things that ought not to be ſeparated, ſays St. Hilary, they mutually ſupport and aſſiſt each other. Cum ſibi invicem auctoritatem præſtent Pſalmus & titulus, debilis erit ſermo, ſi de aliquo eorum ſine altero diſſeratur. (Hilar. in Pſal. cxix. Prolog. p. 367. n. 1.) The Title is the Key of the Pſalm, ſays the Author of the Commentary upon the Pſalms, printed under the Name of St. Jerome. (Hieronym. Prol. in Pſal.) As one cannot enter into the Houſe without the Key, ſo the Canticle cannot be underſtood except the Title be explain'd. Quid eſt titulus niſi clavis? In domum non ingreditur, niſi per clavem; ita & unius cujuſque Pſalmi intellectus per clavem, id eſt, per titulum intelligitur.

St. Auſtin gos ſtill farther, for he looks upon theſe Titles as inſpired, as well as the reſt of the Pſalm. (Aug. in Pſal. lxiv.) Upon Pſalm lxiv. whoſe Title is A Song of Jeremiah and of Ezekiel, &c. he ſays, We are here to acknowledge the Voice of holy Inſpiration, by the Title of this Pſalm. And elſewhere, ſpeaking of the Title of the Fiftieth Pſalm, which is, A Pſalm of David, when Nathan the Prophet came unto him, after he had gone in unto Bath-ſheba, he ſays, This is not to be found in the Body of the Pſalm, but is read at length in the Books of the Kings: But both of theſe are divine Scripture. Utraque autem Scriptura canonica eſt. (Angl. li.) Theodoret [a] is ſtill more expreſs, for he ſays that theſe Titles were added by Eſdras, who was inſpir'd by the Holy Ghoſt; and that they were read and preſerved by the Seventy Interpreters, who themſelves had received Inſpiration from Heaven, and who would not be forward to mingle the Notions of Men with the Words of the Holy Ghoſt. The Jews in their Synagogues chant the Titles of the Pſalms, as well as the reſt of Scripture, and the Rabbins expound them in their Commentaries. The Septuagint and St. Jerome have preſerved them in their Tranſlations, and in the ſacred Texts. The greateſt Part of both the Antients and Moderns have conſider'd them as a Key to the Pſalms. Without them how ſhould we diſtinguiſh the Authors of each Pſalm? M. Boſuet Biſhop of Meaux, ſays poſitively, that they were put at the Head of the Pſalms by the Inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt, to point out to us the Author and Subject of every one of theſe divine Canticles; and that we ought not to ſeparate the Inſcriptions of the Pſalms from the Body of the Scriptures, ſince they are read in a continued Order, and without Diſtinction, not only in the Hebrew Text, but in all the Verſions. (Boſuet in Pſalmos. Diſſert. de Pſalmis, c. 6. p. 68.) For the ſame Opinion, the Reader may conſult M. Du Pin, in his Preface to the Pſalms, Article the Third.

But I think this is carrying the Matter too far, to maintain that all the Titles of the Pſalms in general are Canonical and from Inſpiration. Many Catholick Divines [b] have poſitively aſſerted, that the greateſt Part of them are of no Uſe for the Explanation of the Pſalm. The Fathers, and among others, St. Auſtin, Hilary, Theodoret, Caſſiodorus, have acknowleged, that often theſe Titles have no relation to the Body of the Pſalm, and that in the Place they were put they contributed nothing to the Senſe. The Catholick Church has never made any Injunction that they ſhould be ſung in her Office, nor has ever determin'd them to be Canonical. For it is agreed, that the Council of Trent, by declaring the Text of the Latin Vulgate to be Canonical and Authentick, has never pretended to receive into the Canon all the Titles of the Holy Books. The Septuagint, and the other later Greek Tranſlators, have added Titles to ſome of the Pſalms which have none in the Hebrew. If the Titles of the Pſalms had been look'd upon as Canonical, would any body have been permitted to meddle with them, to alter them, to ſupreſs them, to add to them? Which of the Commentators is there, whether Jew, Catholick, or Proteſtant, who thinks it incumbent upon him to follow the Title of the Pſalm in his Commentary? And yet both Jews and Chriſtians receive the Pſalms as holy Writ.

And

And therefore in this Queſtion we ſhould obſerve a due Medium. 1. To treat the Titles of the Pſalms with great Reſpect, becauſe there are, doubtleſs, a great Number of them that are authentick. 2. To acknowledge ſuch as are derived from the firſt Authors, from the antient Prophets, or, laſtly, from Eſdras, to be canonical and inſpired. 3. That thoſe which have been added, either before or after Eſdras, by Jews not inſpired, or by the Greeks; alſo thoſe that are apparently againſt Hiſtory, or contrary to the Spirit of the Pſalm, deſerve no particular Conſideration on their own Account. 4. Laſtly, that the Fathers themſelves, who ſeem to have thought them to be canonical and inſpired, are to be underſtood to ſpeak of thoſe that were in the original Text, and written by the Hand of Eſdras, or of the antient Prophets; for as to the reſt, they make no Difficulty to give them up, as may be ſeen in Theodoret upon ſeveral Occaſions. The Reader may ſee our Diſſertation upon the Titles of the Pſalms, Pag. xxix. xxx. wherein we examine this Queſtion at length. See alſo Father Alexander, *Hiſt. v. Teſt. According to the Titles of the Pſalms, as they are found in our Bibles, there are ſeventy-two that bear the Name of David; fifty that are without the Name of their Author; but the Rabbins hold, that they are to be referr'd to that Author, whoſe Name is immediately before: And this Tradition of the Jews is related and received by Origen, by St. Jerom, by Euſebius, by Hilary, and Athanaſius. Beſides the hundred and fifty Pſalms now mention'd, and which are receiv'd as Canonical, there is one more which is not in the Canon, and which is to be found neither in the Hebrew, nor in the Chaldee, nor in the Vulgate; but it is read in the Syriac, in moſt of the Greek Copies, in the Arabick, in the Anglo-Saxon Verſion, in the Books of the Prayers of the Greeks. St. Athanaſius [b], Euthymius [c], Vigilius of Thapſus [d], the Author that interpolated the Epiſtles of St. Ignatius [e], make mention of it, and quote it. St. Chryſoſtom alludes to it, in his ſeventeenth Homily to the People of Antioch. Its Title is, A Pſalm of Thankſgiving of David, when he had overcome Goliah. It begins thus; I was the leaſt of my Brethren, and the youngeſt of the Houſe of my Father, and I fed my Father's Sheep, &c. We have given it in Latin and French, with an Explication, at the End of our Commentary upon the Pſalms.

The Author of the Synopſis attributed to St. Athanaſius, ſays, That David had compoſed three thouſand Pſalms, out of which Number King Hezekiah ſelected one hundred and fifty, and ſuppreſs'd all the reſt. He quotes this, as taken out of the Chronicles, where we read nothing like it. A Greek Author call'd Joſephus Chriſtianus, ſays the ſame thing, and quotes it as in the Chronicles. Michael Glycas cites Pſellus, who ſays the ſame thing, and he ſeems to believe it himſelf: He adds, That after the Captivity, Eſdras ſelected the hundred and fifty Pſalms which we find in our Bibles, out of three hundred, or more, which he had before him. The Author of the Syriac Verſion ſays, That ſome add twelve Pſalms to the End of the Pſalter; but he rejects them as uſeleſs, and without Authority.

The Hebrew Text calls them, [f] A Song of Aſcents: The Chaldee, A Song that was ſung upon the Steps of the Abyſs. This Explication is taken from the Tradition of the Hebrews, which relates, That when they were laying the Foundations of the the Temple, at the Return from Babylonish Captivity, there came out of the Earth such a prodigious Quantity of Water, that it rose to the Height of fifteen Cubits; and that it would have drowned the whole World, if Achitophel, the famous Achitophel who hang'd himself in the Time of David, about five-hundred Years before, had not stopt its Progress, by writing the ineffable Name of Jehovah upon the fifteen Steps of the Temple. To the same Event they refer Psalm cxxix. De profundis clamavi, &c. which is one of the Psalms of Degrees. This is what the Jews say about them. Junius and Tremellius translate the Hebrew by, A Song of Excellencies; or, An excellent Song: Which Translation is not disapprov'd by De Muis, and by other skilful Interpreters. But the common Translation, or Psalms of Degrees, has more generally obtain'd.

But whence have they this Denomination? The Interpreters think, 'twas because they were sung upon the fifteen Steps of the Temple. They are not agreed about the Place where these Steps were. Some think them to be without this holy Place; Others, at its Entry. Others think them to be the fifteen Steps mention'd by Joseph. de Bello, l. 1. c. 14. in Græco, p. 917.

Josephus, to ascend from the Inclosure of the Women in the great Court. Lastly; Others will have them to be the Steps by which they ascended from the Court of the Priests, to the Porch which was before the holy Place. But it cannot be proved, neither from Josephus, nor from Scripture, that the Steps of the Porch, or of the Gates of the Temple, or those without the Temple, were just fifteen in Number. We see, by Ezekiel, that one had eight, and the other had seven Steps. Besides, we do not find, by any Passage of Scripture, that the Levites sung upon the Steps of the Temple; their Place was round about the Altar of Burnt-Offerings, in the Court of the Priests.

Ezek. xl. 22, 26, 31, 37, 49.

Some have thought, that these were call'd Psalms of Degrees, because they were sung in a Gallery, which was in the Ezra ix. 4.

Court of Israel, where, sometimes, the Levites read the Law. But we do not find, by any Passage of Scripture, that Singers were placed in this Gallery, or that they sang these Psalms in particular. The Author of the Commentary upon the Psalms, Pseudo-Hieron Exposit. 2. in Psal. cxix.

printed under the Name of St. Jerom, says, that in the Temple there were several Degrees of Dignity among the Priests and the Levites. This is true: But it is not any-where said, that these Degrees were fifteen. There were assuredly four and twenty sacerdotal Families, and as many of the Levites. But what does all this make for the fifteen Psalms of Degrees? Some Rabbins, and a good Number of Commentators, translate the Hebrew by Psalms of Elevation; because (they say) they were sung with an exalted Voice, or because at every Psalm the Voice was raised.

But, no longer to multiply Conjectures in this Matter, I shall now produce my own Hypothesis. I translate the Hebrew by A Song of Ascent, or, of the Coming up of Israel from the Captivity of Babylon. The Scripture commonly applies the Phrase, to ascend, to express this Return. Cyrus, in his Proclamation in Favour of the Jews, says, Who is there among you, of all his People? His God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem. And a good Ezra i. 3, 5. & ii. 2. & vii. 5, 6.

Number of Persons presented themselves to go up, says Ezra. And Shesh-bazzar brought up with them of the Captivity, that were brought up from Babylon to Jerusalem. Now these are the Children of the Province, that went up out of the Captivity.

Ezra i. 11. & ii. 1.

This Ezra went up from Babylon. And there went up some of the Children of Israel. For upon the first Day of the first Month was the beginning of the going up from Babylon. In Psalm cxxi. which is one of the Psalms of Degrees, it is said, whither the Tribes go up (to Jerusalem.) Lastly; Jeremiah, foretelling the Return from the Captivity, says, Then will I bring them up, and restore them to this Place. Ezekiel expresses himself in the same manner.

Ezra vii. 6, 7, 9.

Jer. xxvii. 22.

Ezekiel xxxix. 2.

All these Expressions sufficiently shew, that the Hebrews commonly made use of the Term to go up, when they spoke of their journeying from Babylon to Jerusalem; because Babylon was situated in a Plain, and Jerusalem in a mountainous Country. Therefore, it is very natural to call those Psalms of Ascent, which were composed on the Occasion of the Deliverance from the Captivity of Babylon, whether it were to implore this Deliverance from God, or to return Thanks for it after it had happen'd; and this is what is really observed in those Psalms. They have all some Relation to this great Event. They make mention of it in several Places; and the greatest Part of 'em cannot be otherwise explain'd. This alone wou'd suffice to determine us to explain in this Sense the Term Psalm of Degrees, or, of Ascent. We need not exhibit here a great Number of Passages taken out of these Psalms, to prove the Truth of what we advance; to open the Psalter only, is enough to convince any one. See our Dissertation, which serves as a Preface to the Psalms of Degrees.

Acrostick Psalms. These are Psalms, that, in the Hebrew, begin every Verse, or half Verse, with a Letter of the Alphabet, ranged according to the Order of the Alphabet. These Psalms are, PSALTER, or, Book of Psalms. See Psalms.

PSALTERY, Psalterion, or Psalterium. The first of these two Words is Greek, and the other Latin, each of 'em signifying either the Psalter, or Book of Psalms; or else, an Instrument of Musick, call'd the Psaltery. As to the Psaltery, or Instrument of the ancient Musick, of which mention is sometimes made in Scripture, we think it answers to the Hebrew Word Nebel, [a] which the Septuagint generally translate by Psalterion, or Nablon. 'Twas an Instrument of Wood, having Strings, and which was made use of, with other Instruments, in the Solemnities and Ceremonies of Religion [b]. It should seem, by some Passages of the Psalms, that the Nebel was the same as the Decachord, or Instrument of Ten Strings, call'd in Hebrew Gnashur; but in other Places it is sufficiently distinguish'd from it: Upon an Instrument of ten Strings, and upon the Psaltery; or upon the Nebel and the Gnashur.

Psal. xxxiii. 2. & cxliv. 9.

Psal. cxii. 3.

Certain it is, that these two Instruments had a great Conformity to each other. The ancient Nablium was very near of the Figure of a Delta Δ, according to Saint Jerom, Cassiodorus, and Isidorus, having a hollow Belly above, and strings stretch'd from Top to Bottom over-against this Cavity, which makes them give a Sound, when touch'd by the Finger or the Bow. The Difference observ'd by St. Basil, St. Austin, St. Hilary, and those above cited, between the Psalterion and the Cithara, is, that the Psaltery was play'd upon below, and gave its Sound above; whereas the Cythara was play'd upon above, and sounded below.

Josephus says, that the Nablia of the Temple of Jerusalem were made of a precious Metal call'd Electrum; but the Books of Kings and the Chronicles expresly shew, that Solomon made them of Almugim or Algumim-wood, which is a Sort of Wood unknown to us. The same Josephus says, in another Place, That the Nablium had twelve Strings, and that it was touch'd with the Fingers. Aristotle speaks of a Triangular Psaltery, the Strings of which were all equally distended. Juba, in Athenæus says, That Alexander of Cythera added several Strings to the Psaltery, and laid it up in the Temple at Ephesus, as the Master-piece of his Industry.

The modern Psaltery is a flat Instrument, of a Triangular Form: It is strung with three Rows of Strings, of Iron or Brass Wire, tuned to an Unison, or to an Octave, raised upon two Bridges which are on the two Sides; these Strings are extended from Side to Side, and are play'd upon by a kind of Bow. Thus is this Instrument very different from the ancient Psaltery.

PSEPHINA. Josephus speaks of a Tower at Jerusalem, and of a Gate of the same City, which was call'd Psephina, or Psephinos.

PSEUDO-APOSTOLI [c], Pseudo-Christi [d], Pseudo-Prophetæ [e], false Apostles, false Christs, false Prophets. The Term Pseudo comes from the Greek Pseudos, which signifies a Lye.

I. PTOLEMAIS, a City of Phœnicia, upon the Mediterranean Sea, having Mount Carmel to the South, being a considerable Sea Port. Its antient Hebrew Name is Accho. See Judges i. 31. The Greeks have given it the Name of Ake, and we have already spoke of it under the Name Accho. The Greeks not knowing that Accho was a Hebrew Word, have derived Ake from the Verb Akeomai, which signifies to cure or heal; imagining that it took this Name, because Hercules had been cured here of the biting of a Serpent. The River Belus or Beleus, falls into the Mediterranean near Ptolemais. See Belus. I have not found who the Ptolemy was, that gave his Name to this City. It afterwards became a Roman Colony under the Reign of Claudius, and there are several antient Medals that prove it a Roman Colony. The Christians that undertook the Expedition of the Holy War, gave it the Name of Akre, or of St. John of Acre. The Arabians at this Day call it Acca. This City was assign'd by Joshua to the Tribe of Ashur, who did not drive out the Inhabitants. Ummah, an unknown City mentioned in Joshua xix. 30. might well be Accho, which the Transcribers have changed to Ummah.

The Crusado's gave the Name of St. John of Akre to this City, because of a magnificent Temple, which was there dedicated to St. John. This City is built in a triangular Form, wash'd by the Sea to the West and South, surrounded by two strong Walls Walls towards the Land, at about fifty Paces from each other, and fortify'd by a great Number of Towers at equal Distances. On the first Wall towards the East was a Tower larger and stronger than the rest, call'd the King's Tower; and at the middle Angle was such another Tower, which was always call'd the cursed Tower. And it proved its Right to this Name; for it was by this that the Saracens enter'd the City, and took it, as was observed at that time. Juste proinde maledicta vocata est Turris illa, qua maledicta gens Saracena subintravit, anno 1291, & qui illi nomen imposuit, eventum tam diri infortunii nesciens quid diceret, prophetavit. This was the last City that the Christians had possession of in Syria. The Sultan of Egypt, Elpy, firnamed Melle-messor, having besieged it in 1291, with Sixty thousand Horse, and an Hundred thousand Foot, the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem defended it bravely; but at last they were forced to give Ground; it was taken and almost destroy'd.

PTOLEMY. All the Kings of Egypt, from Ptolemy Son of Lagus, to the Conquest of Egypt by the Romans, [a] bore the Name of Ptolemy. We have given a List of these Kings, and the Duration of their several Reigns, under the Article EGYPT. At present we shall give an Abstract of the Lives of those that are mentioned in Scripture.

I. PTOLEMY, Son of Lagus, firnamed Soter, or Saviour, after the Death of Alexander the Great, brought the Body of this Prince into Egypt, [b] in order to be interr'd at Alexandria. In the Distribution of Alexander's Conquests among his Generals, the Government of Egypt fell to Ptolemy. He at first contented himself with the Title of Governor, nor took upon himself the Title of King, till after the Death of all of Alexander's Race. Yet he manag'd the Minds of the People of Egypt, and of the neighbouring Princes, with a View of laying a solid Foundation for his future Power. Some Years after he was settled in Egypt, [c] he bethought himself of reducing Phenicia and Cele-syria. At first he endeavoured to corrupt Laomedon with Money, who govern'd those Provinces under Antipater and Perdiccas. But not succeeding this Way, he sent one of his Generals named Nicanor into this Province, who took Laomedon, and in a little time made himself Master of Cele-syria and Phenicia.

Ptolemy himself marching into Judea, enter'd into Jerusalem, while the Jews were in no other Concern but to observe the Sabbath. [d] Appian says, That having brought the City into Subjection, he demolish'd its Walls; and Josephus from Aristeus adds, That this Prince carried away about One hundred thousand Jews from Palestine into Egypt, out of which Number he chose about Thirty thousand, and incorporated them into his Armies, putting them into his Garrisons, as knowing that the Jews were very religious Observers of their Fidelity. He gave up the rest to his Soldiers, that they might make Slaves of them for their necessary Occasions. From hence proceeds that great Number of Jews, that were afterwards to be found in Egypt, Libya, and the Cyreniaca.

Two Years before his Death, [e] and at the Beginning of the thirty-ninth Year of his Reign, Ptolemy, the Son of Lagus, associated with him in the Kingdom his Son Ptolemy Philadelphus, whom he had by Berenice, after which he reign'd two Years along with him. Justin affirms, That Soter not only associated his Son with him in the Throne, but reduced himself to the Quality of one of Philadelphus's Guards, judging it to be more glorious to be the King's Father, than to be King himself. Pater ei regnum non tantum publice tradidit, sed etiam privatim officium Regi inter satellites fecit; omni regno pulchrius Regis esse Patrem dicens. We are assured, that Demetrius Phalereus had advised him to leave his Kingdom, not to Ptolemy Philadelphus Son of Berenice, but to the Son of Euridice: And this was the Reason that afterwards Philadelphus sent Demetrius into Banishment. See hereafter the Article of the SEVENTY INTERPRETERS. Ptolemy Son of Lagus, died two Years after he had associated his Son with him in the Kingdom, in the Year of the World 3721, before Christ 279, before the vulgar Era 283, in the fortieth Year of his Reign.

(Vid. Just. l. 16. Pausan. in Atticis. Lucian. in longævis.)

II. PTOLEMY PHILADELPHUS, Son of Ptolemy Soter, whom we have now discoursed of, was associated in the Kingdom from the Year of the World 3719. Justin even affirms, that his Father Ptolemy intirely quitted to his Son, and esteem'd it as a sufficient Honour to become one of his Life-Guards. But other Historians think, he continued to reign with Philadelphus to the Year 3721, which was the Year of his Death, and the first of the Reign of Philadelphus. This Prince was firnamed Philadelphus,

[a] That is, from the Year of the World 3631 to 3974, or from the Death of Alexander to the Death of Cleopatra Spouse of Mark Anthony. [b] In the Year of the World 3681, before Christ 319, before the vulgar Era 323. [c] In the Year of the World 3685, before Christ 315, before the vulgar Era 319. Philadelphus, that is, a Lover of his Brethren, probably by way of Irony; for upon several Pretences, he caus'd two of his Brothers to be put to death. The younger was called Argeus, and was Son of Berenice as well as himself, and the other was Son of Eurydice. He was one of the most powerful Princes that ever reign'd in Egypt. But nothing gave a greater Lustre to his Reign than his Love for Learning, the Library he founded at Alexandria, and the Version of the Septuagint, which 'tis said he procured to be made. Epiphanius affirms, he began this Undertaking of the Version of the Septuagint in the seventh Year of his Reign, in the Year of the World 3727, before Christ 273, before the vulgar Era 277. We have spoken at length of this Translation under the Article of the SEVENTY INTERPRETERS, where we have shewn that what is related concerning it, is at least very doubtful, not to say worse of it. But though we retrench such of the Circumstances of this History, as are plainly fabulous, yet we adhere to the main Part of the Story, which is, that under the Reign of this Prince the Jewish Scriptures were translated out of Hebrew into Greek, either in whole or in part; or, that the Jews of Egypt then translated the Pentateuch at least, for the Use of such among them as could no longer understand the Hebrew or the Chaldee. The Authors may be consulted, who have expresly treated of these Matters.

The Antients [a] are all unanimous in their Testimonies, concerning the Affection that Ptolemy bore for the Sciences, and the Care he took to collect Books and to erect a copious Library; but no other than the false Aristæus, and such as have followed him, have affirmed that Demetrius Phalareus was his Librarian. We have already seen in the History of Ptolemy the Son of Lagus, that this Philosopher was not in favour with Philadelphus, but had been banished by him; and 'tis known he was accessory to his own Death, by causing himself to be bit by an Asp, not being able to support the Tiresomness of his Banishment. Vitruvius mentions Aristophanes, and Suidas speaks of Zenodotus, who were Library-keepers to Philadelphus, at the Alexandrian Library. Aristæus is the only original Author who assigns this Employment to Demetrius. Josephus allows Philadelphus thirty-nine Years of Reign, Clemens Alexandrinus thirty-seven, and Ptolemy, Porphyrius, and Eusebius, but thirty-eight. Usher thinks he reigned in all eight and thirty Years, and about eight Months. He fixes his Death in the Year of the World 3758, before Christ 242, before the vulgar Era 246. He had for Successor his Son Ptolemy sirnamed Euergetes, or the Benefactor, Son of Arsinoe, who was the Daughter of Lysimachus. Philadelphus had also a Daughter called Berenice, whom he married to Antiochus Theus, King of Syria, as will be seen in the following Article.

III. PTOLEMY EUERGETES, or the Benefactor, Son of Ptolemy Philadelphus, ascended the Throne of Egypt in the Year of the World 3758, before Christ 242, before the vulgar Era 246. His Father Ptolemy Philadelphus, for a long time having had War with Antiochus Theus, at last made Peace with him, and gave him his Daughter Berenice in Marriage, [b] and in the mean while his Wife Laodice was alive, by whom he had had two Children. This Marriage was celebrated with extraordinary Magnificence, and Philadelphus gave his Daughter so much Gold and Silver to her Portion, that she was thence call'd Phernophoros, or the Dowry-bringer. But this Alliance did not prove happy. Antiochus was poisoned by his Wife Laodice, who likewise gave Orders, that Berenice and the young Son she had by Antiochus, should be killed also. In the mean time Philadelphus died, and Euergetes being informed of the Danger his Sister was in, who had betaken herself to the Asylum of Daphne, made haste into Syria with an Army to her Assistance: But he came too late, for Berenice and her Son were assassinated. But such a Number of the Cities of the Kingdom of Syria submitted themselves to the Government of Euergetes, that he thereupon found himself the most powerful King of the East. Josephus says, That when this Prince came to Jerusalem, he there offered Sacrifices to the Lord, as a Thanksgiving for the many Successes he had received from him. Concerning this, See Dan. x. 5, 6. and St. Jerome upon this Passage of Daniel.

Euergetes did not less distinguish himself for his Love of Books and Learned Men, than his Father had done. Galen assures us, that this Prince caused exact Copies to be taken of all the Books that came to his Knowledge, and which deserved any Consideration. No sooner did any Ship arrive at Alexandria, but he caused all the Books therein to be brought to him, of which he took Copies and returned them to the Owners, setting up the Originals in his Library. Having once borrowed of the Athenians the Works of Euripides, Sophocles, and Eschylus, with a Promise of returning them again as soon as Copies should be taken of them, and for Security of this, having given them a Pledge of fifteen Talents, Talents, which makes at least Two thousand Five hundred Pounds Sterling; he kept the Originals himself, and sent them back the Copies very neatly and faithfully transcribed, with permission also of keeping the fifteen Talents, which he had sent as a Pledge.

Under the Reign of Euergetes, Onias II. was High-priest of the Jews,[a] a Man of no Integrity, and who thought of nothing but heaping Riches together. He refusing to pay the King of Egypt the Sum of twenty Talents, which was due to him by way of Tribute, this Prince had taken a Resolution of sending Troops into Judea, to ravage the whole Country. But Joseph Son of Tobias, Nephew to the High-priest Onias, coming to Alexandria, he gave such Satisfaction to the King, and so far insinuated himself into his Favour, that he obtained the Farm of all the Tributes of Cele-syria, Phenicia, Samaria, and Judea, procured Two thousand Soldiers to be granted him, in order to levy the Tributes, amassed great Sums for his own Use, and paid besides Sixteen thousand Talents to the King instead of eight that he had before, and continued in this Employment for Twenty Years.

Ptolemy Euergetes died after he had reign'd five and twenty Years.[b] Tacitus says, that under his Reign was seen in Egypt, the Bird call'd Phœnix, which appear'd in the Country, accompany'd by many other Birds, which flocked to it, because of the Novelty of the Sight. Polybius says, that Euergetes died of a Distemper; but Justin affirms he was put to death by his Son and Successor Ptolemy Philopator.

IV. PTOLEMY PHILOPATOR, Son of Ptolemy Euergetes, began to reign in the Year of the World 3783, before Christ 217, before the vulgar Era 221. He had the Name of Philopator, or Lover of his Father, given him by way of Irony or Antiphrasis, because he had put his Father to death. Huic ex facinoris crimine cognomentum Philopator fuit, says Justin. He had also the Name of Tryphon, or the Glutton; also of Gallus, because he carried the Ensigns and the Crown of Ivy, like the Galli or Priests of the great Goddess; and because he affected to appear crown'd with Ivy in the Ceremonies of Bacchus. This Prince spent his whole time in Luxury, Drunkenness, and Debauchery, as if he had been a King for no other End but to follow his Pleasures.

Antiochus the Great, King of Syria, made War against him, and took several Places from him in Cele-syria and Palestine,[c] before he would make any Attempt to oppose him, leaving this Matter to the Care of his Generals. But the Year following, Antiochus having advanced as far as Raphia, Ptolemy came forth to meet him with a powerful Army, and gave him Battle. At first the whole Advantage was on the Side of Antiochus, who, besides being a great Commander, had also an Army of excellent Soldiers. But Arsinoe, the Sister and Wife of King Philopator, having her Hair dishevelled, and her Eyes full of Tears, passed through the Ranks of the Soldiers, and so raised their Courage and Resolution, that they at last obtain'd an intire Victory over the Army of Antiochus. Antiochus therefore retiring with the Remains of his Army, all the Cities of Syria and Palestine, that had been obliged to submit to him, return'd of themselves to the Obedience of Philopator, omitting nothing that might shew their Zeal and Fidelity to his Government.

The chief of the Jews also having sent their Deputies to him, to congratulate with him and offer him Presents, they found him disposed to come in Person to Jerusalem. When he came thither, he enter'd into the Temple, admiring its Beauty, Magnificence, and OEconomy. He desired also to enter into the Sanctuary, in which no one was to enter but the High-priest alone, and he only once in a Year. This Attempt of the King, filled the whole Temple with Tears and Lamentations, the Noise of which spread into the City, and put it into the utmost Consternation. The High-priest Simon then betaking himself to Prayers, between the Temple and the Altar of Burnt-sacrifices, as soon as he had finished his Prayer, Philopator found himself struck with so great a Terror, that he began to tremble, and could hardly stand on his Legs; and his Attendants were forc'd to carry him out of the Temple half dead.

3 Macc. i. 11.

When he return'd to Alexandria, he plunged himself, as before, into all manner of Excesses, and began to persecute the Jews of Egypt, compelling them to forsake their Religion: For this Purpose, he caus'd to be put up at Alexandria reproachful Edicts against them, full of Blasphemies against God, commanding the Jews to sacrifice to the Gods of the Country, on the Penalty of being deprived of their Privileges, of their Right of Freedom of the City, of being reduced to the Condition of the meanest Inhabitants of Egypt, and brought into Servitude; and whoever should refuse Obedience to this Ordinance, should be put to Death. But even those that comply'd with the Orders of the King, were not continued in their ancient Privileges; they were marked with a red-hot Iron, having the Representation of an Ivy-

Ivy-Leaf, and were ſeparated from the Citizens of Alexandria, as being reduced to the Condition of the meaneſt Subjects of the Country. To preſerve their ancient Rights, they were required to initiate themſelves into the Myſteries of Bacchus. He alſo put up this Inſcription upon the Tower that was at the Entry of his Palace, That no one ſhould enter but ſuch as ſacrificed to his Gods.

Some of the Jews gave Way to this Perſecution; others bribed his Officers with Money, to skreen themſelves from Oppreſſion. But the King finding it out, he ſwore the Deſtruction, not only of the Jews of Alexandria, but of all others in any Part of Egypt. He thereupon publiſh'd an Edict, by which he order'd all the Governors of his Cities and Provinces, to ſend to him in Chains all the Jews in their ſeveral Diſtricts, with their Wives and Children, that they might all be put to Death at Alexandria, as Enemies to the State. By the ſame Edict he forbid any to conceal a Jew, upon Pain of Death, and promis'd to the Informer the Eſtate of any one that ſhould make ſuch Concealment. When 3 Macc. iii. theſe Orders were brought into the Provinces, they made all the Jews ſet out for Alexandria, without any Regard to Age or Sex; and as ſoon as they arrived there, the King order'd a Liſt to be taken of them. For this Purpoſe they were ſhut up in the Hippodrome, without being ſuffer'd to enter into the City; and with them were put all the Jews of Alexandria, when it was perceived they came by Stealth to bring them Suſtenance. Thoſe that were appointed to take this Liſt were forty whole Days about it, without being able to finiſh it; after which time they came to the King, and declared it was impoſſible for them to take an exact Liſt, the
3 Macc. iv. Number of them was ſo prodigious.

They prepared two Liſts of theſe Jews. One contain'd the Names of thoſe who had conſented to ſacrifice, whoſe Lives were to be preſerved, but without enjoying their antient Privileges of Freemen of Alexandria, which they poſſeſs'd before. The other was a Liſt of thoſe who refuſed to change their Religion, and who therefore were to be put to death. The King commanded that theſe laſt ſhould be ſhut up in the Hippodrome, and be expoſed to the Elephants, who were to tread them under Foot. Hermon the Keeper of the Elephants made them drunk, by giving them Wine mingled with Incenſe, to make them the more ſavage and unrelenting. But God brought it to paſs, that the King (as his Cuſtom was) having drank to exceſs over-night, ſlept ſo faſt as not to awake 'till the tenth Hour of the Day following, that is, 'till four o'Clock in the Afternoon. This being his Time of Dinner, his Officers awaked him to ſit down to Table, where he continued 'till the Night was far ſpent. Then he ſent for Hermon, and asked him in great Wrath, Why he had let the Day paſs away without executing his Commands againſt the Jews? Hermon, and the King's Friends there preſent, excuſed themſelves, alledging, that every thing had been ready for Execution from betimes in the Morning, but they durſt not awake him, nor in his Abſence perform his Commands againſt the Jews. 3 Macc. v.

Then Philopator gave freſh Orders, that the Elephants ſhould be ready againſt the Day following; at which time early in the Morning Hermon preſented himſelf before him, and acquainted him, that all Things were ready for putting the Jews to death. But this Prince having forgot the Orders he had given, treated Hermon very roughly, and commended the Fidelity the Jews had always ſhewn to himſelf and his Predeceſſors. However, ſetting himſelf to drink again with his drunken Companions, he ſent for Hermon again, and asked him why he had not obey'd his Commands. Hermon and thoſe that were with him having acquainted him with what had paſs'd, he made an Oath to ſend all the Jews to their Graves the Day following, and gave Orders to Hermon that the Elephants ſhould be ready againſt the next Morning. To this he likewiſe added, that when he had deſtroyed all the Jews in Egypt, he would go into Judea, and there put all to Fire and Sword; that he would raze their Cities, burn the Temple of Jeruſalem, and deſtroy thoſe Prieſts that had refuſed him Entrance into it.

The Jews being inform'd of what had paſſed, made their Addreſſes to God by fervent Prayer, hoping for no Aſſiſtance but from him alone. And the Day following Philopator came out of the City with his Guards, and with the Troop of Elephants that were to ſqueeze the Hebrews to Pieces; and almoſt the whole City of Alexandria came thither alſo, to be Spectators of this bloody Maſſacre. When the King was come near the Hippodrome, and the Jews had renew'd their Cries and Lamentations, all on a ſudden two Angels were ſeen to appear, who preſented them- 3 Macc. vi.
ſelves before the King and the whole Multitude, with a terrible Aſpect but a majeſtick Brightneſs. The Jews only could not ſee theſe Angels. This Apparition ſtruck the King with ſo much Terror, that he continued, as it were, without Motion. He was ſeized with a great Trembling through his whole Body, he forgot his uſual Fierceneſs, and perceived his Fury to be changed into Compaſſion. The Elephants turn'd about againſt their Maſters and the Soldiers that manag'd them, whom they trod under Foot. The King turn'd his his Wrath against his own Officers, and complain'd of their thus treating the Jews, as if they had done it by their own Authority; and gave Orders that the Jews should be unbound, and set at perfect Liberty. He furnish'd them with Provisions, that they might make Feasts of Rejoycing 3 Macc. vi. and Thanksgiving for seven Days, and suffer'd them to take Revenge on such of their Brethren as had renounced their Religion, of whom they slew about three hundred.

After this they obtain'd an Instrument from the King, by which they were declared innocent, and sent back with Liberty into their several Countries. The King commended and extoll'd their Fidelity, and that of their Ancestors, both towards himself and his Predecessors the Kings of Egypt; ordering the Governors of the Provinces to protect them, and to treat all such as Enemies to the King and State, as should any way molest or disturb them.

Before they dispersed to return every Man to his own Home, the Jews erected a Column, and built a Proseuche, or Oratory, in the same Place where they had been miraculously deliver'd. After which every one went to his own House, and had their Goods restored them, which had 3 Macc. vii. been confiscated to the King's Use. All this happen'd in the Year of the World 3788, before Christ 212, before the vulgar Era 216, between the Egyptian Months Pachon and Epiphi, which answer to our May and July.

Philopator died after he had reign'd seventeen Years, [a] and had for his Successor Ptolemy Epiphanes.

V. PTOLEMY EPIPHANES, succeeded his Father Ptolemy Philopator, being but four Years old, according to St. Hieron. in Dan. xi. Justin. l. 30. c. 1. Jerome, or five according to Justin. As soon as Antiochus the great King of Syria, and Philip King of Macedon, saw the Kingdom of Egypt in the Hands of a Child, they enter'd into secret Measures to take him out of the Way, and to divide his Diod. [b] But after some time [c] Ptolemy Epiphanes sent his General Scopus thither with a good Army, who retook the Cities and Provinces that Antiochus had conquer'd. But scarce a Year pass'd away, but that Antiochus subdued them again. 'Twas then the Jews surrender'd themselves to Antiochus, and always adhered firm to his Interests after- Joseph. And for this Reason upon several Occasions Antiochus gave them particular Marks of his Confidence and Friendship, by those Letters of which the Copies are preserved in Josephus.

In the Year of the World 3812, Antiochus gave his Daughter Cleopatra in Marriage to Ptolemy Epiphanes King of Egypt, with the Prospect of being Master himself, by that Means, of the Dominions of this young Prince. But the Governors of young Epiphanes penetrating into this Design, and Cleopatra espousing her Husband's Interests rather than her Father's, they defeated his Intentions: At last Epiphanes undertaking a War against Seleucus King of Syria, [d] and one of his Generals having asked him what Assistance he depended upon, in order to make his Designs succeed; Epiphanes answer'd, that he depended upon no other Assistance than the Purses of his Friends. When this Answer was spread among the People, the Generals of Epiphanes began to be in Pain for their Wealth, thinking they were to be plunder'd for the carrying on of this War. Wherefore they prevented him by Poison, after he had reign'd four and twenty Years, Hieron. in Dan. xi. according to Eusebius, Clemens Alexandrinus, Porphyry, and St. Jerome. He left two Sons, Ptolemy Philometor who succeeded him, and Ptolemy Physcon his younger Son.

VI. PTOLEMY PHILOMETOR, Son of Ptolemy Epiphanes and Cleopatra, reign'd thirty-five Years; from the Year of the World 3824 to 3859, before Christ 141, before the vulgar Era 145. Judea being then not in Subjection to the Kings of Egypt, the general Affairs of the Jews had but little Relation to those of this Prince. But the Affairs of Antiochus Epiphanes King of Syria, of whom we have already given an Account, were much involv'd with those of the Hebrews. 'Twas under the Government of Philometor that the Temple call'd Onion was built in Egypt, [e] the History of which may be seen under the Titles ONION and ONIAS IV.

Josephus informs us, that Ptolemy Philometor and his Queen Cleopatra had so Lib. 2. cont. App. p. 1064. much Confidence in the Jews of Egypt, that they trusted them with the Care of the Kingdom; and that Dositheus and Onias, both Jews, were the Generals of their Armies; and that when the City of Alexandria rose up in Arms, in Favour of Ptolemy Physcon against Cleopatra, the Jews stood by her, and kept the City to its Duty. But this did not happen 'till after the Death of Philometor, [f] as we shall see in the following Article. Under the Reign of of Philometor arose in Egypt the Peripatetick Philosopher Aristobulus, a Jew by Nation, who is mention'd by Clemens Alexandrinus and Eusebius, [a] who have preserv'd some Fragments of him.

About the same time [b] there arose at Alexandria a great Dispute between the Jews and Samaritans. The Jews maintain'd, that the Temple of Jerusalem was the only Place where God had appointed to be worshipped, according to the Law of Moses; and the Samaritans on the contrary pretended it was the Temple on Mount Gerizim. This Controversy was pleaded with great Earnestness before King Philometor and his Counsellors; and each Party engaged themselves by an Oath, in the Name of God and of the King, to produce no other Proofs but out of their own Law, and besought the King to put to death such of the Advocates of each Party, that should act contrary to this Oath. The King and his Council having heard the Reasons on both Sides, decided the Cause in Favour of the Jews, and condemned to death Sabas and Theodosius, the Advocates of the Samaritans.

Jos. Antiq. l. 13. c. 6.

Jonathan Maccabeus, who flourish'd at this Time, espoused the Party of Alexander Balas King of Syria, Son-in-law to Philometor, against Demetrius; and had valiantly maintain'd the War against Apollonius, whom Demetrius Nicanor, Son of Demetrius Soter, had sent into Palestine with a great Body of Troops. Jonathan, assisted by Simon his Brother, fought with him and beat him, kill'd a great Number of his Men, took and burnt Azoth and the Temple of Dagon, to which Apollonius and his People had retir'd, and then return'd in Triumph to Jerusalem. Two [c] Years after [d] Philometor went into Syria, on Pretence to assist his Son-in-law Alexander Balas against Demetrius, but really to make himself Master of his Dominions, and passed thro' Palestine. The People of Azoth shew'd him their City and Temple destroy'd, with Heaps of Bones of the Dead which they had piled up by the Way-side, enlarging upon the Calamities that Jonathan had made them suffer. But the King did not seem to take any Notice of it, and Jonathan coming to join him at Joppa, with a magnificent Attendance, the King gave him a very favourable Reception. Jonathan accompany'd him as far as the River Eleutherus, after which he return'd to Jerusalem.

1 Macc. x. 67, 69.

Philometor being received as a Friend into all the Cities of the Dominions of Balas, he made his Entry into Antioch, where being acknowledged as King, he placed two Diadems upon his Head. He died the Year following [e] in the Hands of his Physicians, who thought to have effected upon him the Operation of the Trepan, [f] in order to cure him of a mortal Wound he had received in his Head, in a Battle he won from Alexander Balas King of Syria.

VII. PTOLEMY PHISCON, or Fat-guts, otherwise call'd Euergetes or the Benefactor, Son of Ptolemy Epiphanes, and Brother to Ptolemy Philomator, reign'd in the whole fifty-three Years, partly with his Brother and partly alone, from the Year 3859. He had great Contests with his Brother, which did not end 'till the Death of Philometor. Cleopatra the Wife of this Prince, was desirous to preserve the Crown for her Son, against the Enterprizes of Physcon, who attempted to become Master of it; and Onias the Jew, the Founder of the Temple Onion, undertook the Defence of the Queen and the young Prince, and brought a small Army to Alexandria. Physcon prepared to march against him, and at the same time resolved to expose all the Jews of Alexandria to be squeezed to Pieces under the Feet of the Elephants. But God brought it about in Favour of the Jews, that the Elephants having been made drunk on purpose, turn'd their Fury against their Managers, of whom they slew several. Physcon himself saw a Man with a terrible and threatning Countenance, that forbid him to do any Harm to the Hebrews; and one of his most beloved Concubines, whose Name by some is call'd Ithaca, by others Irene, interceding with him to spare the Jews, he pardon'd them upon her Request, and repair'd all the Mischief he had done to them. Josephus adds, that even to his Time the Jews of Alexandria yearly celebrated the Day of this Deliverance; but it is very probable that this Historian has not distinguish'd Physcon from Philopator, and that he has put under the former what happen'd under the latter. For we have already seen under Philopator a History very like this, of the Jews that were to be exposed to the Elephants.

Physcon being desirous to terminate the Differences he had with his Sister Cleopatra, the Sister and Wife of his Brother Philometor, made a Proposal of Marriage to her; which being concluded upon, [g] Physcon was received into Alexandria, and acknowledged as King. But being willing to secure the Kingdom, he put the young Prince, his Nephew, to death, as he was in the Arms Arms of his Mother, the very Day of their Marriage. [a] This Action made him extremely odious to the Egyptians, whom he still farther provok'd by all Sorts of Cruelties. He divorced Cleopatra, took the Daughter of this Princess to Wife after he had deflower'd her, kill'd his own eldest Son, lest the People of Alexandria should make him King in his Place, put to death another of his Sons that he had by Cleopatra, and to compleat his Cruelties, he cut off his Head, Feet, and Hands, and sent them in a close Basket to the Queen, the Mother of the young Prince, as a Present he made her on her Birth-day. [b] After all these Inhumanities Physcon died in Peace, after he had reign'd nine and twenty Years from the Death of his Brother, and left three Sons living. He bequeathed the Government of the Kingdom to Cleopatra his Sister and Wife, with Power to choose for King which of his three Sons she should judge fittest to reign. She first chose Alexander, the youngest of them, hoping to find him the most obedient to her Desires: But the People of Alexandria obliged her to take the eldest, Ptolemy Lathurus, [c] who reign'd along with her for ten Years.

VIII. PTOLEMY LATHURUS, Son of Ptolemy Physcon and Cleopatra, began to reign in the Year of the World 3888. He sent about six thousand Men of his Army to Antiocus Cyzicenus, who came to the Assistance of the Samaritans, when they were besieged by John Hyrcanus Prince and High-Priest of the Jews. But Antiochus was obliged to retire, and the Egyptian Troops were defeated or dispersed in several different Encounters; so that this Assistance served the Samaritans in no stead, and Hyrcanus became Master of the City, after a Year's Siege. [d]

Lathurus did not long enjoy the Kingdom of Egypt. Cleopatra his Mother was weary of having a Partner in the Government, and animated the People of Alexandria against him, [e] compelling him to withdraw to Cyprus. While he was in this Country, the Inhabitants of Ptolemais sent to ask his Assistance against Alexander Janneus King of the Jews, who kept them, as it were, besieged. Lathurus put to Sea with his Army: But the People of Ptolemais altering their Resolution, sent to thank him, and to prevent his coming. Yet Lathurus continued his Course, and disembarquing his Men at Sycaminum, near Ptolemais, Alexander Janneus drew off his Troops from before Ptolemais, and sent secretly to Cleopatra, to desire Assistance against Lathurus. In the mean time, he pretended to accommodate Matters with him, offer'd him very advantageous Proposals, with a Promise of four-hundred Talents of Silver, if he would deliver him up those Places that Zoilus had Possession of in that Country.

But Lathurus perceiving that Alexander Janneus held secret Correspondence with his Mother Cleopatra against him, he broke with him, and did him all the Mischief he could. Coming into Judea with Part of his Troops, while the rest of his Army lay before Ptolemais, Alexander Janneus march'd against him with a powerful Army, and gave him Battle near Azoph upon Jordan. The Victory, for some time, was in Suspence; but at last Lathurus broke through the Jewish Army, put it to flight, and pursued it as long as his Troops had Strength to follow and kill those that fled. 'Tis said, That, on this Occasion, were kill'd about thirty thousand Jews; and others say, fifty thousand [f]. We are assured, that when Lathurus had retired, towards Evening, into some of the Villages of the Jews, and finding only Women and Children, he order'd his Soldiers to cut them in Pieces, and to boil them in Kettles; that when their Husbands or Fathers should return, they might see the Slaughter, and think that their Enemies fed upon human Flesh, and might therefore be in greater Terror of them.

Cleopatra, Lathurus's Mother, being alarm'd with the Progress of her Son's Arms in Palestine, [g] where, without Resistance, he made Havock of all before him, and where he had taken the City of Gaza, which is in a manner the Gate of Egypt; she sent out an Army by Land, and provided a Fleet at Sea, to stop him in his Career. She gave the Command of her Land Army to two Jews, Chelcias and Ananias, both of 'em Sons of Onias, who founded the Temple Onion in Egypt. The Queen sent her Son Alexander with her Fleet into Phenicia, where having landed his Army, several Cities surrender'd to him: (Joseph. Ant. l. 13. c. 18, 21.) But Ptolemais shut her Gates against him. Chelcias, one of her Generals by Land, died in Cele-syria. Lathurus hasted into Egypt, thinking to find it unprovided of Troops, but he was deceived in his Expectation. He there found more Resistance than he thought for, and the Queen his Mother sending some Forces against him, he was obliged to withdraw out of Egypt. [h] Thus he

IX. PTOLEMY MACRON, Son of Dorymenes, was made Governor of the Iſle of Cyprus by Ptolemy Philometor King of Egypt. During all the Minority of this Prince, he kept the whole Revenues of this Iſland, nor would ſend any of it to the Regents of the Kingdom. But as ſoon as the King came to Age, he gave in his Accounts, and ſent the whole Sum that he had been collecting all the time of the King's Minority. Some time after this, having received ſome Diſcontent at ſome Proceedings of the King of Egypt, he withdrew his Fidelity, and deliver'd up the Iſle of Cyprus to Antiochus Epiphanes King of Syria. This Prince received him into the Number of his Friends, and gave him the Command of the Troops he had in Phenicia and Cele-ſyria. We are told in the ſecond Book of the Maccabees, chap. iv. 45, &c. that Menelaus, the Uſurper of the High-prieſthood, being accuſed before Antiochus Epiphanes, in the Year of the World 3834, and being upon the Point of being caſt by this Accuſation; he gave a Bribe to Ptolemy Macron to ſtand his Friend. This he did while the King was at Tyre, and was the chief Inſtrument that Menelaus, guilty as he was, was declared innocent, and his Accuſers condemned to death.

[b] Macron ſent away Nicanor and Gorgias, two experienc'd Commanders. But Judas defeated them alſo, as is mention'd in the firſt Book of the Maccabees, iii. 38, &c. After the Death of Antiochus Epiphanes, Ptolemy was no longer in Favour as before. His Enemies gave the young Eupator an ill Opinion of him, and repreſented to him, that a Man who had once fail'd in his Fidelity to his Prince, was never afterwards to be truſted. He had alſo made himſelf ſuſpected by the Courtiers, becauſe upon ſeveral Occaſions he had ſhewn his Diſlike at their Proceedings againſt the Jews. So that at laſt, being no longer able to bear theſe Reproaches, he took Poiſon and kill'd himſelf. [c] The Author of the Latin Verſion of the ſecond Book of Maccabees, x. 12. calls him Ptolemeus Macer; but his true Name is Ptolemeus Macron. Macer in Latin ſignifies lean; but Macron in Greek ſignifies tall.

X. PTOLEMY, Son of Abubi or Abobi, Son-in-law of Simon Maccabeus, and Governor of the Caſtle of Doch or Dagon, and of the Plain of Jericho. This Man being puff'd up with Pride, pretended to the Government of all Judea, and with this View form'd a Deſign againſt the Life of Simon Maccabeus his Father-in-law. [d] Simon was then employ'd in viſiting all the Cities of Judea; and arriving at Jericho with his two Sons, Matthias and Judas, [e] he went to lodge with his Son-in-law, at the Caſtle of Doch or Dagon. Ptolemy made a great Entertainment for them, and in the Midſt of Supper, ſome Men provided for that Purpoſe entering the Room, kill'd Simon and his two Sons, and ſome of their People. He gave Information of this to Antiochus Sidetes King of Syria, deſiring him to ſend him ſpeedy Aſſiſtance, in order to deliver the Country from the Yoke of the Maccabees, and that he might take Poſſeſſion of it in the King's Name. At the ſame time he ſent Meſſengers to Gazara, to kill John Hyrcanus the eldeſt Son of Simon; and gave Orders to others of his People to go to Jeruſalem, to ſeize the City and the holy Mountain.

But God did not permit him to ſucceed in theſe Projects. John Hyrcanus was quickly advertis'd of this Villainy, and put upon his guard. He caus'd thoſe to be ſlain that Ptolemy had ſent to put him to death, and haſting away with all Speed, he came ſoon enough to Jeruſalem, to fruſtrate the Deſigns that Ptolemy had upon it. For John was received into the City, and the Gates were ſhut againſt Ptolemy, who had attempted to enter on the other Side. This is what is related by Joſephus. The firſt Book of the Maccabees does not inform us what was the Event of this Murder, committed on the Body of Simon and his Sons. But the Book we quote under the Name of the fourth of the Maccabees ſays, that Ptolemy having maſſacred Simon and his two Sons, Hyrcanus being acquainted with it retired to Gaza, (probably Gazera or Gadera) whither Ptolemy purſued him with all his Forces. But the People of Gaza taking Side with Hyrcanus, ſhut the Gates againſt Ptolemy, who was therefore oblig'd to retire. Thence Hyrcanus went to Jeruſalem, ſalem, was acknowledg'd as High-prieſt and Prince of his Nation, aſſembled a great Army, and march'd againſt Ptolemy, who had ſhut himſelf up in the Caſtle of Dagon.

He lay down before it, and began to batter the Place with his Rams. But as he was upon the Point of becoming Maſter of it, Ptolemy caus'd the Mother and two Brothers of Hyrcanus to be brought upon the Wall, and had them whipp'd in a pitileſs Manner, threatning, that if he perſever'd to preſs him, he would there whip them to death. Hyrcanus was overcome by his Compaſſion, and diſcontinued the Attack. But his Mother encourag'd him to go on, repreſenting to him, that their Death was unavoidable; and as for himſelf, that no Conſideration ſhould prevail with him to forbear revenging the Death of his Father Simon. Hyrcanus being animated afreſh by theſe Diſcourſes, began the Aſſault again with new Vigour; and Ptolemy alſo began again to whip the Mother and Brethren of Hyrcanus. But he not being able to bear this Spectacle, retired into his Camp, contenting himſelf to keep the Caſtle block'd up. In the mean time the Feaſt of Tabernacles being come, he was obliged to go to Jeruſalem, there to diſcharge his Office as High-prieſt; and Ptolemy taking the Advantage of his Abſence, withdrew himſelf into another Place, whither Hyrcanus could not follow him.

This is what is ſaid by the Author of the fourth Book of the Maccabees. Joſephus relates the ſame Story in his Antiquities, l. 13. c. 14, 15. and in the firſt Book of the War of the Jews, c. 2. p. 710. But he adds, that Hyrcanus was obliged to quit the Siege becauſe of the ſabbatical Year which then began; and that Ptolemy withdrew to Zeno ſirnamed Cotyla, who was King of Philadelphia, the capital City of the Ammonites. But theſe are Circumſtances that are ſufficiently refuted by Salian upon the Year of the World 3919, and by Uſher upon the Year 3869. The firſt Book of the Maccabees, which the Church [of Rome] receives as Canonical, ſays nothing of the Mother of Hyrcanus, and affirms expreſly, that Ptolemy not only murther'd Simon at the Banquet, but his two Sons alſo; which gives us Occaſion to believe, that the whole Story is no more than a mere Fiction.

I. PUA, Phua, or Phurah, Son of Iſſachar, and Head of the great Family of the Punites. Numb. xxvi. 23.

II. PUA, or Puah, of the Tribe of Iſſachar, Father of Tola, who was Judge of Iſrael. Judg. x. 1.

III. PUA and Shiphrah, Midwives of Egypt, to whom Pharaoh gave his Commands, that when the Iſraelitiſh Women were brought to Bed, the female Children only ſhould be ſaved alive, and the male Children be deſtroy'd.[a] Joſephus[b] thinks that theſe Midwives were Egyptians, in which Opinion he has ſeveral Followers. But the Hebrews, St. Auſtin, and ſome others, contend for their being Iſraelites. Aug. cont. Mend. c. 15. The Rabbins even pretend, that Puah was the ſame as Jocabed, the Mother of Moſes and Aaron; and that Shiphrah was Miriam the Daughter of Jocabed, and Siſter to Moſes and Aaron. But this is beyond all Probability, tho' it is very likely they were of the Race of the Hebrews, ſince they ſhew'd ſo much Fear of God on this Occaſion. Beſides, what likelihood is there that the Hebrews, who had ſo much Averſion to the Egyptians, ſhould employ them to attend their Women when they lay in?

There were, doubtleſs, more than two Midwives among ſo numerous a People as the Iſraelites; but Puah and Shiphrah were the moſt noted. The Scripture ſays, that Exod. i. 17, 18, 19. they did not obey the King's Commands; but that being with-held by the Fear of God, they preſerved the Male Children alive. And when Pharaoh expoſtulated with them about this Matter, they made him Anſwer, That the Hebrew Women were not as the Egyptian; for they could bring forth of themſelves, without the Aſſiſtance of a Midwife. The Hebrew Text ſays, literally, that the Hebrew Women are as wild Beaſts; or, are Brought-to-Bed with the ſame Eaſe as the Beaſts of the Field. Others tranſlate it, They are ſo ſtrong, as not to need a Midwife to bring them to Bed. 'Tis thought that they told a Lye,[c] in affirming this to the King: For the Egyptian Women, and all the Eaſtern Women in general, are Brought-to-Bed with great facility, and often have no Occaſion for Midwives,[d] yet this cannot be ſaid in general of all the Hebrew Women. And when Moſes ſays, that God rewarded them, and built their Houſes, in Conſideration of the Fear of God, that they had ſhewn in this Matter; yet he does not commend or approve of Lying, but only their Piety, Compaſſion, and Fear of God, that they teſtify'd on this Occaſion. Remunerata eſt benevolentia, non fallacia; benignitas mentis, non iniquitas mentientis, ſays St. Auſtin. Aug. lib. cont. Mend c. 15.

Inſtead of theſe Words, God built their Houſes; the Hebrew has only, He built them Houſes. appointed by the King, who were to examine whether the Children were Male (Ita pleriq; Interp.) or Female. Others refer this to God himself, who rewarded them, by giving them a numerous Posterity; for that is the Sense (Exod. i. 21. ויעש להם בתים,) of the Words, He built their Houses. But the Hebrew Text shews, that this has no respect to the Midwives, but to the Hebrews, whose Houses God built up, by giving them a Multitude of Children.

PUBERTY. This is the Age wherein the Hairs begin to grow, in young People, in those Parts which Decency forbids to name. Among the Romans, the Age of Puberty was between fourteen and sixteen; so that, at their Entrance upon the seventeenth Year, they took the Toga virilis, as beginning then to be Men. Among the Athenians, the Youths did not commence Ephebi, or pass the Age of Puberty, 'till they were eighteen. Lastly; Among the Hebrews, the Age of Puberty, for Boys, was between thirteen and thirteen and a half; so that at thirteen they were still reckon'd Children. From thirteen to six Months after, they were Puberes; and after thirteen and a half, they were reckon'd Men, were subject to all the Precepts of the Law, and, in particular, were obliged to marry.

As to the Girls, the Age of Puberty began at twelve Years, and commonly ended at twelve Years and a half; unless, at this Age, Nature had not yet produced the Marks of Puberty, which made an Exeption to the common Rule. As soon as a Girl had attained the Age of twelve Years and a half, or that the Tokens of Puberty had appear'd on her, she was then at Liberty, and her Father had no longer any Power to hinder her from marrying, but she was entirely Mistress of her own Conduct. But the Rabbins advise Fathers very earnestly, to make haste to marry their Daughters, as soon as they have attain'd the Age of Puberty, that is, when they are full twelve Years old [a]. St. Paul seems to allude to this Custom, when he says, [b] But if any Man think that he behaveth himself uncomely towards his Virgin, if she pass the Flower of her Age, and Need so require, let him do what he will, he sinneth not; let them marry.

From what we have now said, it is plain, that the Hebrews marry'd their Daughters very young. And when the Scripture would express the Irregularities of an infamous Woman, it says, she forsakes the Guide of her Youth, or of her (Prov. ii. 17.) Puberty; Reliquit ducem pubertatis suæ; The Man to whom she gave her first Inclinations. And also, when it would represent to us a strict Mourning, it compares it to that of a young Widow, who has lost the Spouse of her Youth; Plange (Joel i. 8.) quasi virgo accincta sacco super virum pubertatis suæ.

PUBLICAN, Publicanus; in Greek, Telones; a Farmer or Receiver of Publick Money, an Officer of the Revenue, a Man employ'd in Collecting such Impositions as are hateful to the People. Among the Romans there were two Sorts of Farmers: Some were General Farmers, who in every Province had their Deputies and Under-farmers, who collected the Revenues and other Profits of the Empire, of which they gave Account to the Emperor. These Principal Farmers were Men of great Consideration in the Government; and Cicero says, that among these, were (Cicero Orat. pro Planc.) to be found the Flower of the Roman Knights, the Ornament of the City, and the Strength of the Commonwealth: Flos equitum Romanorum, ornamentum civitatis, firmamentum Reipublicæ, Publicanorum, ordine continentur. But the Deputies, the Under-farmers, the Commissioners, the Publicans of the lower Order, were look'd upon as so many Thieves and Pickpockets. Theocritus being once asked, Which was the most cruel of all Beasts; made answer, That among the Beasts of (Theocrit. apud Musonium.) the Wilderness, they were the Bear and the Lion; among the Beasts of the City, they were the Publican and the Parasite.

Among the Jews, the Name and Profession of a Publican was the most odious thing in the World: This Nation, in a particular manner, valued themselves upon their Freedom; We be Abraham's (John viii. 33.) Seed, and were never in Bondage to any Man. They could not, without the utmost Reluctancy, see Publicans in their Country, rigorously exacting those Tributes and Impositions that were laid on them by the Romans: Especially the Galileans or Herodians, the Disciples of Judas the Gaulonite, submitted to this Badge of Servitude, not without the greatest Impatience, and thought it even unlawful to pay Tribute to a foreign Power; as they shew'd by that Question they put to Jesus Christ, Luke xx. 22. Is it lawful for us to give Tribute unto Cesar, or no? Those of their own Nation that undertook this Employ, they look'd upon as no better than Heathen; Let him be unto thee as an Heathen (Matthew xviii. 17.) Man, and a Publican. 'Tis even said, that they would not allow them to come into their Temple, or their Synagogues, nor admit them to partake of their publick Prayers, or of their Offices of Judicature, or allow them to give Testimony in a Court of Justice [c]. Lastly; We are assured, they would not accept of their Presents at the Temple, no more than they would of the Price of Prostitution, or of Blood, or of any thing else of the like Nature.

It appears by the Gospel, that there were many Publicans in Judea, in the Time of our Saviour. Zaccheus, probably, was one of the principal Farmers, since he is call'd Luke xix. 2. the Chief among the Publicans; but Saint Matthew was only an inferior Publican.
Luke vii. 34. The Jews reproached our Saviour with being a Friend of Publicans and Sinners, and of eating with them. And our Saviour Matth. xxi. 31. told the Jews, that Harlots and Publicans should be preferred before them in the Kingdom of Heaven. In the Parable of the Publican and Pharisee, who made their Prayers together in the Temple, we see with what Sentiments of Humility the Luke xviii. 10. View of his Condition inspired the Publican: He keeps afar off, and, probably, dares not so much as enter the Court of the People; he is afraid to lift up his Eyes to Heaven; he smites his Breast, and submissively asks Pardon of God. Zaccheus assures our Saviour, who had done him the Honour to accept of a Lodging in his House, that he was ready to give half of Luke xix. 8. his Goods to the Poor, and to return fourfold of whatever he had unjustly acquir'd: And this, because at that time the Roman Laws requir'd, [a] that whenever any Farmer was convicted of Extortion, he should be obliged to render four times the Value of what he had extorted.

Some have thought, [b] that by the Jewish Laws, it was forbid to pay any Tribute, or to exercise the Profession of a Publican; from this Passage of Deuteronomy, [c] Non erit vectigal pendens de filii Israel. But, 1*st*, It is certain, that there were Publicans of the Race of Israel; such were Zaccheus and St. Matthew; tho' their Employment was very odious among their Brethren. 2*dly*, The Herodians, that refused to pay Tribute to Strangers, did not found their Persuasion upon this Law; since it is not found in the Original Text of Moses; and the Hebrews otherwise explain this Passage of Deuteronomy. 3*dly*, The Disciples of Judas Gaulonites founded their Refusal to Joseph. Antiq. l. xviii. c. 2. pay Tribute, upon their being the People of the Lord, and because it was not permitted to a true Israelite to acknowledge any other Sovereign but God.

PUBLIUS: He was Chief or Governor
Act. xxviii. 7, 8, 9. of Malta, when St. Paul was shipwreck'd by a Tempest upon this Island, in the Year of Christ 60, or of the Vulgar Era. This Publius receiv'd St. Paul and his Company into his House very kindly, and treated them for three Days with great Humanity. St. Paul, in Acknowledgment, restor'd the Governor's Father to his Health, who was ill of a Fever and Bloody-flux. 'Tis said, that not only Publius the Father, but the whole Island also, was converted to the Christian Faith [d]. Ado, with several Latin Writers, affirm, That Publius joyning himself to St. Paul, was by this Apostle made a Bishop, and sent to preach the Gospel; That coming to Athens, he was made Bishop of this Church, and there ended his Life by Martyrdom [e]. But this Opinion cannot be supported; since Publius Bishop of Athens did not suffer Martyrdom 'till the Time of Marcus Aurelius.

PUBLIUS LENTULUS. We have a Letter of one Publius Lentulus, pretended to have been Governor of Judea before Pilate, in which he gives an Acount of our Saviour Jesus Christ to the Senate of Rome, in a very advantageous manner. This Piece is to be found in many Manuscripts, and several Printed Books: It begins thus; Apparuit temporibus istis, & adhuc vivit, vir præditus potentiâ magnâ, nomine Christus Jesus, &c. But this a Piece of errant Forgery, unknown to the Antients, and deserving the utmost Contempt. Publius Lentulus was never Governor of Judea; and Pilate was in this Office all the Time of our Saviour's Preaching: But before Christ went to the Baptism of John, he was not famous in Judea [f].

PUDENS, mention'd by St. Paul, in 2 Tim.
the Year 65, when he wrote his Second iv. 21. Baron. an.
Epistle to Timothy from Rome. Baronius, 44. §. 61.
with some others, have believed, that Pudens was a Roman Senator converted by St. Peter, with whom St. Paul abode for some time. But there is Reason to think, that he confounds him with another Pudens who was a Senator, and who is said to be the Father of Praxedus and Prudentiana, in the Time of Pope Pius, above an hundred Years after the Epistle to Timothy was written. The Greeks keep the Festival of St. Pudens, the Disciple of the Apostles, on the 14th of April: They put him in the List of the Seventy Disciples, and say, that after the Death of St. Paul, he was beheaded by Nero. There are some that think [g] that Claudia, mention'd by St. Paul after Pudens, was Wife to this holy Man. The common Tradition is, [h] That St. Peter not only lodg'd with Pudens, but also celebrated the divine Mysteries there, and there consecrated the first Church at Rome, which has since been made that of St. Peter in Bonds.

Puer. Græc. παῖς Heb. נער, Nahar. PUER. This Word literally signifies a Child. Commonly it expresses the lowest Jer. i. 6. Age. A, a, a, Domine Deus, nescio loqui, quia puer ego sum. The Name of Puer, is given to young Men pretty well in Age:
Genesis xxxvii. 30. For Example; to Joseph, when he was sold by his Brethren, being then about
Gen. xxi. 16. eighteen Years old; to Isaac, of twenty-
Gen. xliv. 20. one Years old; to Benjamin, twenty-four Years old. Sometimes it signifies meerly the Son of a Person, without any Regard to his Age; at other times it denotes a Exodus xxxiii. 2. Servant. Thus Joshua is call'd Puer Mosi, the Servant of Moses. Abraham is call'd
Gen. xxiv. 52. the Servant of God; Quod cum audisset puer Abraham.

Puer, is sometimes used to shew Sim-
1 Cor. xiv. 20. plicity and Ignorance; Nolite pueri effici sensibus. Be ye not Children in Under-Eccles. x. 16. standing, but become such in Malice. Woe
Isai. iii. 4. to that Country whose King is a Child, (says the Wise Man). In Isaiah, the Lord threatens the Jews to give them Children for their Kings; Dabo pueros principes Isai. lxv. 20. eorum. And the same Prophet, when he describes the Time of the Messiah, says, There shall be no Child that shall live but a few Days, nor Old Man that shall not compleat the Time of his Life. He that shall die at an hundred Years of Age, shall die a Child, and the Sinner of an hundred Years old shall be accursed: Puer centum annorum morietur, & peccator centum annorum maledictus erit. Tho' a Man should die at the Age of an hundred, yet he shall be said to die young; and it shall be at an hundred Years of Age, that God shall smite in his Anger those that fall into Wickedness.

2 Samuel ii. 14. Pueri, is often said of Soldiers; *Surgant
2 Samuel iii. 22. pueri & ludant.* And elsewhere: *Pueri
David & Joab*; The Soldiers of David
1 Kings xx. 15, 17. and of Joab. Pueri principum provin-ciarum; The Soldiers of the Governors of 1 Mac. i. 7, 9. the Provinces. Pueri Alexandri, are the Generals of Alexander the Great, the Princes that attended him, and were the Companions of his Victories. Isaiah re-Isai. ii. 6. proaches the Jews with being addicted to strange Children: Pueris alienis adhæse-runt. Some understand it, of the detestable Crime of the Sodomites; as likewise
Joel iii. 3. in Joel; Posuerunt puerum in prostibulo.
Cyrillus Theodor. Others think that Isaiah upbraids them with having married strange Wives, by whom they had Children. Others understand it more simply; They have abandon'd themselves to imitate strange Nations; they have followed their Idolatry, and have contracted Affinity with them.

Puella is also us'd in the same manner as Puer, for a young Girl, a Servant, a Waiting-maid, a Maid of Honour, a marriageable young Woman, a Virgin;
Judith xvi. 14. and sometimes, a Woman: For Example;
Filii puellarum compunxerunt eos. And in
Amos; Filius & pater ejus ierunt ad Amos ii. 7.

PUL, or Phul, King of Assyria: He 2 Kings xv. 19.

him, and confirm him in the Kingdom.
The King of Israel gave him a thousand Talents of Silver, and Pul continu'd in the Country 'till this Sum was entirely paid.
We conjecture that Pul was the Father of Sardanapalus, who added the Name of Pal or Pul to that of Sardan; as Merodach added the Name of Baladan to his own, and so call'd himself Merodach-baladan. If this Conjecture is true, it must be then allow'd, that Pul is the same as Anacindaraxes, or Anabaxares, the Name which profane Authors give to the Father of Sar- Athen. lib. vii. & xii. Dipnos.
danapalus. Stephanus Bizantinus calls him
Cyndaraxes; Julius Africanus, Acracarnes; Strab. Suid. Arrian. and Eusebius, Acrazapes. Pul is properly the first King of Assyria, of whom we find any mention in Scripture.

PUNISHMENTS of the Hebrews. There were several Sorts of Punishments in use among the Jews, which are mention'd in the Scripture. They may be reduced to these following. 1. The Punishment of the Cross. 2. Suspension, or the Punishment of the Rope. 3. Stoning. 4. Fire.
5. The Tympanum, or Whipping. 6. Imprisonment. 7. The Sword, or Beheading. 8. The Precipice, or throwing down a Rock. 9. To be torn a-pieces by Thorns, or under the Feet of Animals.
10. The Saw, to be cut through the Middle. 11. To be thrown down into a Place full of Ashes, and to be there stifled.
12. Cutting off the Hair of the guilty Person. 13. To put out his Eyes. 14. To stretch them out upon the Wooden Horse.
There are still a good many others, either mention'd in the Books of the Maccabees, or in that of the Government of Reason;
as that of the Burning Pan; to tear off the Skin by the Hairs of the Head; to burn the Sides and Bowels with lighted Torches; to tear with Combs of Iron; to stretch upon the Wheel; to cut off the Extremities of the Hands and Feet.

We have already spoke of most of these Punishments, under their particular Articles: For Example; of the Cross, Lapi-dation, the Tympanum, the Saw, the Whip,
Precipitation into a Tower fill'd with Ashes.
We shall only speak briefly of those, of which nothing has been said elsewhere.

The Rabbins tell us of many Formalities which accompany'd and follow'd the Decision of the Judges in Criminal Cases.
When the Matter concerned Life and Death, they proceeded with great Deliberation. After the Witnesses had been heard, the Affair was put off to the next Day; the Judges went Home, eat but little,

THE PUNISHMENT OF THE RACK OR TYMPANUM.

THE PUNISHMENT OF SCOURGING.

little, and drank no Wine. The Day following they assembled again, two by two, to examine the Circumstances of the Proceeding over again, at more Leisure. After this Examination, the Judgment might be rectify'd; insomuch, that he that before was for the Condemnation of the Criminal, may now be for Absolving him; or he that had Acquitted him, may now be for his Condemnation.

The Sentence being then confirm'd and pronounced, the Criminal was led away to Execution. A Man placed at the Door of the Court, held an Handkerchief in his Hand; a little farther was an Horseman, or a Cryer on Horseback. If any one offer'd himself to say any thing in Favour of the condemned Person, the first Centinel made a signal with his Handkerchief, and the Horseman gallop'd away, to have the Prisoner brought back again. Two of the Judges went on each Side of him, to hear if he had any thing farther to offer in his own Justification. The Criminal might be brought back as often as five times, to hear those that could say any thing in his Defence. If there was nothing further to retard the Execution of the Sentence, it was publish'd with a loud Voice; Such an one is abandon'd, for such a Crime; Such and such have depos'd against him: If any one have any Proofs of his Innocence, they may now produce them.

The Jews were of Opinion, That the Death of Offenders, might be of great Merit to procure their Salvation, if they suffer'd to satisfy the Justice of God, and to make Atonement for their Sins. They were exhorted to confess their Faults, and to say, Let my Death be for an Expiation of all my Sins. Their Maxim was, That he that confesses his Faults, has a Share in the Life to come.

They gave to Criminals, at their Execution, Wine mingled with Incense, Myrrh, and other strong Drugs, that were proper to stupify the Senses, and to make them lose the Sensation of Pain. Solomon advises to give Wine to such as are overwhelm'd with Pain. (Prov. xxxi. 6.) And we see an Instance of this Piece of Humanity, in what was offer'd to Jesus Christ at his Passion; they would have given him Wine mix'd with Myrrh before his Crucifixion, and Vinegar when he was upon the Cross. (Mat. xxvii. 34. 48.) These Observations are general, and belong to all that are executed.

Suspension, or the Punishment of the Rope. I do not observe any Crime in the Law, for which the guilty Person was condemned to be Hang'd. They often hung up Men after their Death; but I cannot see that any were hung alive. The Jews maintain, That none but Idolaters and Blasphemers underwent this Punishment. Achitophel hung himself; (2 Sam. xvii. 23.) and also Judas. (Mat. xxvii. 5. Acts i. 18.) Moses pronounces him to be accursed, that is hung upon a Tree, and he would have him cut down before the Setting of the Sun. (Deut. xxi. 23.) Haman and all his Sons were hung upon an high Gallows. (Esth. xvi. 18.) Pharaoh's chief Baker was first beheaded, and afterwards hung upon a Gibbet. (Gen. xli. 13.) Moses order'd those Princes of Israel to be hang'd upon Gibbets, who had any Share in their Crimes who worshipped Baal-peor. (Numbers xxv. 4.) Joshua hang'd up the King of Ai, and he continued upon the Gallows 'till the Evening. (Josh. viii. 29.) Another time he hung up five Kings of the Canaanites. (Josh. x. 26.) The Philistines hung up the Bodies of Saul and Jonathan on the Walls of Beth-shan. (2 Sam. xxi. 12.) Jeremiah says, that the Princes of Israel were hung up by the Hand, after their Death, by the Chaldeans. (Lam. v. 12.) The Soldiers of Antiochus Epiphanes hung up dead Children on the Necks of their Mothers, who had circumcised them. (1 Macc. i. 62.)

From all these Examples, may be inferr'd, that sometimes they hung up Men alive, and sometimes hung up their Carcases after they were dead.

The Punishment of the Fire, was very common among the Hebrews. When Judah was inform'd that his Daughter-in-Law Tamar was with Child, he would have had her burnt as an Adulteress. (Genesis xxxviii. 24.) The Law of Moses inflicts the Punishment of the Fire upon the Daughters of the Priests, who were guilty of Fornication: (Lev. xxi. 9.) Sacerdotis filia, si deprehensa fuerit in stupro, & violaverit nomen patris sui, flamis exuretur. The People beyond the Euphrates inflicted the same Punishment upon those who fell into Crimes, that were contrary to that Respect, which, according to them, was due to the Gods. Abraham was cast into the Fire, because he would not worship the Gods of the Chaldeans. (Gen. xi. 31. Nehem. ix. 7.) Nebuchadnezzar caus'd Daniel and his Companions to be thrown into the burning Fiery Furnace, upon the same Occasion. (Dan. iii. 6.) Moses order'd him to be burnt alive, who should marry the Mother and her Daughter. (Lev. xx. 4.)

Jeremiah informs us, that Nebuchadnezzar order'd Zedekiah and Ahab to be roasted in a Pan, for committing Iniquity in Israel, and abusing their Neighbours Wives. (Jer. xxix. 22.) Antiochus Epiphanes exercised the same Punishment against the Brethren Maccabees: He put some to Death in Pots and burning Pans; others were roasted upon Spits, which were apply'd to their Backs, and forc'd into their Bowels. (2 Macc. vii. 35. Joseph. de Imperio Rationis, c. 9.) The Author of Ecclesiasticus says, That the Flesh of the Wicked shall be punished by Worms, and by the Fire; (Ecclus vii. 22.) probably, because they were expos'd in the Fields, and burnt in the Valley of Hinnom: We are assured, that they burnt there the Carcases of Men, and other Creatures, to prevent the Stench from infecting the City; and to this Jesus Christ seems to make Allusion, when he says, Mark ix. 43.45.47. says, That the Worm of the Damned dies not, and their Fire is not quenched.

Some Jewish Authors pretend, that he that was condemned to the Fire, was not burnt in the Flames: He was set up to the Knees in a Dunghil, his Throat ty'd about with a large Piece of Cloth, which was strain'd by the two Ends, 'till the Patient was forced to open his Mouth. If he would not open it, it was forced open by an Instrument. Then they poured melted Lead down his Throat, 'till his Bowels were consumed. They found this sort of Punishment, upon what is said, * That the Fire did not consume the Bodies of the Children of Aaron. So that they thought it not lawful for them to consume the Bodies of their Brethren. Besides, they thought this a more merciful kind of Death. The Rabbi Eleazar objecting against this Determination, and affirming that he had seen the Body of a Priest's Daughter burnt, who had committed a Crime; it was answer'd to him, That then the Sanhedrim must have been compos'd of ignorant People, or of Cushites and profane Persons, who did not understand the Law.

Imprisonment was not consider'd as a Punishment, but was to keep and secure a Person accused or suspected. Joseph detain'd his Brother Simeon in Prison, to be assured of the Truth of what his Brethren had told him, concerning his Father and his Brother Benjamin. (Gen. xliii. 19.) The Blasphemer that was brought to Moses, (Lev. xxiv. 12.) and the Man that was found gathering Sticks on the Sabbath-day, (Numb. xv. 34.) were put in Ward 'till the Lord declared the Kind of Punishment they were to undergo. Jeremiah (Jer. xxxii. 2, 8.) and John the Baptist (Matthew xiv. 3.) were shut up in Prison, that they might not have the Power of Speaking with so much Freedom to the People.

But, often, Imprisonment was made a Punishment, when it was attended with Shame and Severities. When Joseph was unjustly accused by Potiphar's Wife, he was put into Prison, and loaded with Fetters. (Genesis xxxix. 20.) Samson was taken by the Philistines, (Judg. xvi. 21.) cast into a Dungeon, had his Eyes put out, and forced to grind at the Mill. Hoshea King of Israel, Jehoahaz, and Manasseh King of Judah, were shut up in Prison by their Conquerors the Kings of Assyria and Chaldea. Zedekiah underwent the same Hardships, to which was added the Punishment of having his Eyes put out. Ahab King of Israel gave Orders, that the Prophet Micaiah should be shut up in Prison; (1 Kings xxii. 27.) that he should be fed with the Bread of Affliction, and drink of the Water of Distress, 'till his Return from his Expedition against Ramoth-gilead.

Bonds, Fetters, Shackles, Manacles, and Chains, which usually attended Imprisonment, must be look'd upon as Punishments, which were a great Aggravation to that of being kept in Prison. Bonds, Hand-cuffs, and Chains are still known, and in use; but the ancient Hebrews had a kind of Yoke, framed of two Pieces of Wood, long, and pretty broad, in which they made a Notch for the Criminal to put his Neck in. Jeremiah received an Order (Jer. xxviii. 2.) from the Lord, to make Bonds and Yokes, and to put them upon his Neck, and to send some to the Kings of Edom, Moab, Ammon, and Tyre, to declare their approaching Captivity by the King of Chaldea. They also made use of Stocks, wherein were Holes at several Distances, through which they made the Prisoners put their Legs, at a greater or lesser Distance, according as they had a mind to torment them more or less. See Job xiii. 27. & xxxiii. 11. Prov. viii. 22. Prudentius has described this Punishment, in these two short Verses;

To throw headlong into the Sea from a Precipice, with a Stone ty'd about the Neck, was not a common Punishment: If it has been sometimes us'd among the Hebrews, it was in singular Cases. Amaziah (2 Chron. xxv. 12.) King of Judah forced ten thousand Idumeans, whom he had taken Prisoners of War, to leap from the Top of a high Rock. There are some of Opinion also, that they precipitated from the Rock of Horeb, or Oreb, the King of the Midianites of the same Name, when they were defeated by Gideon; Interfecit Oreb in petrâ Oreb. (Judg. vii. 25.) The Jews intended to precipitate Jesus Christ from the Top of (Luke iv. 29.) their Mountain. St. James the Just was thrown down from the highest Part of the Temple, into the Valley below. Zachariah Son of Baruch was put to Death in (Joseph. de Bello, l. 5. c. 1.) the midst of the Temple, and his Body thrown into a deep Place that was beneath the Walls of that holy Place. Jesus Christ mentions the Punishment of casting a Man (Mat. xviii. 6.) into the Sea, with a Stone about his Neck: Expedit ei ut suspendatur mola asinaria in collo ejus, & demergatur in profundum maris. (Grot. & le Clerc, in Mat. xviii.) We are told, this was a common Punishment among the Syrians.

The Punishment of the Sword. In Scripture we meet with several Instances of Decapitations. Pharaoh's chief Baker had (Gen. xl.) his Head cut off; after which, his Body was hung upon a Gibbet. Abimelech Son of of Gideon cut off the Heads of seventy Sons of Gideon, his Brethren, upon one Judg. ix. 11. Stone. The People of Samaria cut off the Heads of seventy of the Sons of Ahab, and 2 Kings x. 7. sent them in Baskets to King Jehu. John the Baptist was beheaded in Prison, by Mar. xiv. 8, 11. the Order of Herod. 'Tis needless to enlarge any farther upon this Subject, as it will not supply us with any particular Observation, either upon the Matter or Instrument of this Sort of Execution.

To tear to death under Thorns, under Harrows, under the Feet of Elephants, are things not to be heard of among the Western People; but we find some Examples of them in Scripture. When Gideon returned from pursuing the Midianites, he tore with Thorns and Brambles of the Desart, the chief Men of the City of Succoth, who had insulted him. 'Tis Judg. viii. 16. thought that David did something like this 2 Sam. viii. 2. to the Moabites. And he smote Moab, and measured them with a Line, casting them down to the Ground; even with two Lines measured he, to put to death, and with one full Line to keep alive. What is said in the Text of casting them down to the Ground, is favourable to this Explication.

He made the Ammonites undergo a Pu- 2 Sam. xii. 31. nishment that was still more cruel. Populum (Regis Ammon) adducens serravit, & circumegit super eos ferrata carpenta, divisitque cultris, & traduxit in typo laterum. That is, he put them under Saws, and under Harrows of Iron, and under Axes of Iron, and made them pass thro' the Brick-kiln.

We shall particularly speak of the Punishment of the Saw, under the Article SAW. The Harrows or Sledges of Iron here mentioned, were Machines proper for thrashing of Corn, in order to get the Grain out of the Straw; of which there were several Kinds. But they were all loaded with Iron or Stones for bruising the Straw. See HARROWS. Lastly, he made them pass under Axes of Iron, and through the Places for making of Bricks. Whether by these last Words we are to understand the Furnace in which the Bricks are burnt, or the Place where the Earth is beat and macerated, in which these miserable Wretches were executed; these Punishments were very horrible, but were tolerated among those People, who allowed themselves the Liberty of putting all to death that they took in War.

Ptolemy Philopator, King of Egypt, [a] thinking to enter by Force into the Sanctuary of the Temple of Jerusalem, and being prevented by the Priests, resolved to exterminate all the Jews in his Dominions, who would not embrace the Pagan Religion. He had a List taken of them, and gave Orders to the Keeper of his Elephants, to give those Creatures a Quantity of Wine mingled with Incense, to increase their Fury by this intoxicating Liquor. After this the Jews were to be exposed to them, to be trod under Foot and killed by them. But God prevented the Execution of this barbarous Design: For the Elephants turn'd themselves against the Soldiers that were to manage them, and trod them to Pieces. The Prophet Micah alludes to this kind of Punishment, when he says, He shall gather Mic. iv. 12, 13. them as the Sheaves into the Floor. Arise and thresh, O Daughter of Zion, for I will make thine Horn Iron, and I will make thy Hoofs Brass, and thou shalt beat in Pieces many People. Amilcar the Carthaginian General, caused some Carthaginians and Prophyr. de abstin. l. 2. p. 227. some Strangers, who had betray'd the Interests of the Republick, to be trod under Foot by his Elephants.

To cut off the Hair of guilty Persons, seems to be a Punishment rather shameful than painful; and yet it is thought, that Pain likewise was added to the Disgrace; and that they were not contented to shave or cut the Hair, but tore it off with Violence, as if they were plucking a Bird alive. This is the genuine Signification of the Hebrew Word, [b] and of the Greek as it is read in Nehemiah. I contended with them, and smote certain of them, and plucked off their Hair. Sometimes they put hot Ashes on the Skin, after they had torn off the Hair, to make the Pain the more exquisite. 'Twas thus they served Adulterers at Athens; as is observed by the Scholiast Ariftoph. nubibus. on Aristophanes.

This kind of Punishment was common in Persia. King Artaxerxes made some Alter- Plutarch. apothegm. ations in it. Instead of plucking off the Hair of such of his Generals, who had been guilty of a Fault, they were obliged to lay aside the Tiara. The Emperor Domitian caused the Hair and Beard of the Philosopher Apollonius to be shaved. Philostrat. l. 3. c. 24. In France they cut off the Hair of Sorcerers and Magicians. This Torture has often been inflicted upon the Martyrs of the Christian Religion. In the impious Book that the Jews composed of the Life of Jesus Christ, under the Name of Toledos Jesu, they say their Ancestors caused his Hair to be cut off, and afterwards his Head to be rubb'd with a Liquor, which prevented the Hair from growing again, and made him bald all his Life after. It is observed in the Book, call'd The Government of Reason, and which is quoted under the Name of the fourth Book of the Maccabees,

4 Macc. c. 7. 2. Macc. vii. 4. cabees, that Antiochus Epiphanes caus'd the Hair and Skin and all, to be tore from the Heads of some of the Seven Brethren the Maccabees.

To pluck out the Eyes, and to make blind, are Punishments not common; and though Moses had appointed, that an Eye should be given for an Eye, and a Tooth for a Tooth,[a] yet it is the Opinion of Commentators, that this was very seldom put (Ita Rabb. & Interp. passim.) in Practice according to the Letter; and that the Offender was generally punished by a pecuniary Penalty, which was converted to the Use of the injur'd Party. When the Philistines laid hold on Samson, and intended to prevent his doing them any more Harm, they put him in Prison, (Judg. xvi. 1.) and bored out his Eyes. Eruerunt oculos ejus. When Nahash King of the Ammonites made War with the City of Jabesh-gilead, (1 Sam. xi. 2.) he threatned them to admit of no other Composition with them, but that of their submitting to have every one his right Eye put out. Nebuchadnezzar took King Zedekiah, and had his Children put to death in his Presence, then caused his Eyes (2 Kings xxv. 7.) to be put out, and afterwards had him carried to Jerusalem in Chains.

To cut off the Extremities of the Feet and Hands, was a Piece of Cruelty formerly exercised by Adonibezek, (Judg. i. 6, 7.) King of Bezek, upon seventy Kings who had the Misfortune to be conquer'd by him, and who eat like Dogs under his Table. But God thought fit to have him tortured after the same manner that he had tortured others. The Israelites conquer'd him, took him, and cut off the Extremities of his Hands and Feet. David treated the Murderers (2 Sam. iv. 12.) of Ishbosheth in the same manner, and had their Bodies hung up over the Pool of Hebron. Antiochus Epiphanes also cut off the Extremities of the Hands and Feet (1 Macc. i. 4. & 2 Macc. vii. 4.) from the seven Brothers Maccabees. When Alexander the Great came near to Persepolis, a Company of Eight hundred Greeks came to present themselves before him, and to entreat his Protection and their own Liberty. (Diodor. Sicul. Just. Quint. Curt.) They had been taken Captives by the Kings of Persia, and been maimed by them, some having their Feet or Hands cut off, and others their Noses. They had also the Marks of Slavery imprinted upon them, which were a sort of rough Characters in their Skins, that could not be got out.

The Punishment of the Wheel is not known in the Canonical Books either of the Old or New Testament. But it is found in the fourth Book of the Maccabees, otherwise called The Government of Reason, (4 Macc. seu de imperio rationi c. 9. In Græc. 10.) which is commonly ascribed to the Historian Josephus. He says, that the fifth and sixth of the Brethren Maccabees were put upon the Wheel. The first of them was dragged upon a Machine, which the Author calls Catapulta, upon which they ty'd his Knees with strong Chains, and violently bent his Back upon a Wheel, so that he was rolled like a Scorpion about the Wheel. The second was also brought and fastened with Violence upon the Wheel, so that all his Bones were dislocated; then they burned his Sides and Bowels with red hot Spits, which the Soldiers had heated for that Purpose.

I doubt not but what is here called a Wheel, is nearly the same thing as the wooden Horse or Tressel, concerning which so much has been said. The Reader may compare what is here said of the Punishment of the Wheel, with what has been said of the wooden Horse, and he will find almost the same Characters observable in both. They violently stretch'd out the Criminals upon the Machine, drawing their Limbs with Ropes or Pullies; then they whipt them, dislocated their Joints, burnt their Sides, tore off their Skin with Iron Pincers, kept them lying sometimes upon their Backs, sometimes upon their Bellies, sometimes with their Heads uppermost, sometimes bending double, and sometimes with their Heads hanging downwards. The Form of the Wheel gave them Opportunity of putting the miserable Patients into all manner of painful Postures. The Wheel to which Ixion was fastened according to the Fable, was always turning round. Suidas says, that they used to fasten Slaves to the Wheel, and there whip them. The Acts of the Martyrs often tell us, that they stretch'd the Bodies of these Saints upon the Engine, and there made them suffer several Kinds of Torture.

To be exposed to wild Beasts, and to fight with the Beasts, was a Punishment very frequent among the Romans. It has some relation to that which we have mentioned before, of being squeezed to death under the Feet of Elephants. St. Paul (1 Cor. xv. 32.) says, that he fought with Beasts when he was at Ephesus. Ad bestias pugnavi Ephesi. See what has been said in the Article of St. PAUL. Sometimes they were only expos'd to the Beasts, to be devour'd by them, as St. Ignatius the Martyr was to the Lions; either to serve as Sport to them, as Saint Perpetua, who was exposed to a wild Cow, being enclosed within Nets, that she could not make her Escape; or, lastly, to fight with the Beasts, as was the Case of St. Paul at Ephesus.

Sometimes they demolished the Houses of Offenders, and reduced them to a common Place for Filth and Dung. Thus was treated the Temple of Baal by King Jehu. Destruxerunt ædem Baal, & fecerunt pro ea latrinas. (2 Kings x. 27.)

latrinas. Nebuchadnezzar threatened the Diviners of Chaldea, to make them undergo this Punishment and Disgrace, if they did [Dan. ii. 27.] not declare his Dream to him. Domus vestræ publicabuntur. He afterwards decreed the same Penalty to all such, as should not worship the God of Shadrach, Meshech, [Dan. iii. 29.] and Abednego. And King Darius in the same manner threatned those, who should [Ezr. vi. 11.] any how withstand the Jews. Domus ejus publicetur. However, there are good Interpreters, who explain these Passages only as Confiscations to the King's Use.

Some are of Opinion, that the Punishment of Impaling was not unknown to the Persians, and that it is intimated by Ezra. [Ibid.] Tollatur lignum de domo illius, & erigatur, [Vat. Grot.] & configatur in eo. Others will have it, that the guilty Person was to be hanged on a Post that should stand upright, after the Demolition of his House. Others under- [Shindler & Lud. de Dieu, in 1 Esdr.] stand it, that they were to be fixed to a Piece of Wood belonging to the House, and there to undergo the Punishment of Whipping.

PUNITES. See Puah I.

PUNON, or Phunon, a Station of the [Numb. xxxiii. 42, 43.] Hebrews in the Wilderness. 'Tis also call'd Phæno, Phaino, and Metallo-phænon, because of the Mines of Metals there found. [Euseb. in Φαινών.] Eusebius says, that this Place was situate between Petra and Segor; and elsewhere [Idem in Δαυδάν.] he places it four Miles from Dedan. St. [Athanas. Epist. ad Solitarios.] Athanasius says, that these Mines of Phanos were so dangerous, that Murtherers condemn'd to work there, could not live but a few Days. We find Bishops of Phenos in the Subscriptions of the Councils.

'Tis thought to be at Punon that Moses erected the Brazen Serpent, for the Cure of the murmuring Israelites, who had been bit by the fiery Serpents. Others believe this happened at the Encampment of Zalmonah. The Matter is thus related in the Book of Numbers.[a] The People began to be tired of their Journey, and to murmur against the Lord. Wherefore the Lord sent Serpents among them, the biting of which burned like Fire. The Hebrew [הנחשים השרפים] reads Seraphim, Serpents, or burning Serpents, which is generally understood by the Præster, a sort of Serpent, which by its biting causes a great Inflammation in the Face, and a Swelling through the whole [Lucan l. 9.] Body. Isaiah says expresly, that the Saraph [Isai. xiv. 29. xxx. 6. מעופף שרף] was a flying Serpent, and Historians inform us, that such are found in Arabia and Egypt. See Herodot. l. 2. c. 76. and the Authors quoted in Bochart, de Animalibus sacris, part. 2. l. 3. c. 13. and the Article Serpent hereafter.

But Moses goes on thus: Several Israelites having been kill'd and wounded by the biting of these Serpents, the People came to Moses, and said to him; We have sinn'd in speaking against the Lord, and against thee. Pray to him, that he would deliver us from these Serpents. Moses therefore having pray'd for the People, the Lord said to him; Make a Brazen Serpent, and set it up for a Sign: Whosoever is bit, and shall look upon it, shall be forthwith healed. Moses therefore made a Serpent of Brass, and fix'd it upon a Standard, to serve as a Sign; and whoever look'd upon it when wounded, were immediately healed. Our Saviour in the Gospel says to Nicodemus; As Moses lifted up the Serpent in the Wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted [John iii. 14, 15.] up; that whosoever believeth in him, should not perish, but have eternal Life. Shewing by this, that he was to die upon the Cross, for the Salvation of Mankind.

We have shewn under the Article Nohestan, that this Brazen Serpent was preserved among the Jews to the time of King Hezekiah; and that this wise Prince seeing the Abuse that was then made of it by the People, who paid an idolatrous and superstitious Worship to it, he caused it to be destroy'd, and named it Nohestan, in Derision.[b]

PUR, or Phur, or Purim; that is to say, Lots. This was a very solemn Feast of the Jews, instituted in Memory of the Lots that were cast by Haman, the Enemy of the Jews. These Lots were cast in [Esther iii. 7.] the first Month of the Year, and mark'd out the twelfth Month of the same Year, for the Execution of Haman's Design, which was to destroy all the Jews of the Kingdom of Persia. Thus the Superstition of Haman, in casting and pursuing the Event of these Lots, was the Cause of his own Ruin, and of the Preservation of the Jews; who had now Time to avert this Blow, by means of Esther the Spouse of Ahasuerus, and to remove those ill Impressions he had conceived of the Jews. In memory of this so signal and miraculous Deliverance, the Jews instituted a Feast, to which they gave the Name of Pur or Purim. See the Articles Haman, Esther, and Mordecai.

The Word Phur or Pur is rather Persian than Hebrew. It properly signifies Lot; and in that Passage of the Vulgate, Missa est sors in urnam, quæ Hebraicè dicitur Phur; the last Word has not relation to urnam but to sors. The Feast of Lots was celebrated among the Jews of Shushan on the 14th Day of Adar, and among the other People of the Persian Empire on the 15th of the same Month, which answers to our February. See Esther ix. 18, 19, 21. and 2 Macc. xv. 39. The Jews have exactly kept this Feast down to our Times, and and these are the Ceremonies they observe in the Celebration of it.[a] On the Eve of the Feast, if it is a Day on which they may fast, they keep a strict Fast, in memory of that kept by Esther and Mordecai. If the Day will not allow them to fast, because it may happen to be the Sabboth, or the Eve of the Sabboth, on which they never fast, they anticipate the Fast; that is, instead of fasting on the 13th of Adar, they fast on the 11th of the same Month. According to Rule they should remain without eating for four and twenty Hours, or from one Evening to the next; and from thirteen Years old they are obliged to keep this Fast.

On the Eve of the Feast, they give their Alms liberally to the Poor, that these also may make much of themselves on the Feast of Lots: And on the Day of the Feast they send a Share of what they have at Table, to those that have need. On the Evening of the Thirteenth of Adar, when the Feast begin, they assemble in the Synagogue, and light up their Lamps; and as soon as the Stars begin to appear, they begin to read the Book of Esther. They continue the reading of it from one end to the other. There are five Places in the Text, wherein the Reader raises his Voice with all his Might, and makes such a dreadful Howling, as to frighten the Women and Children. When he comes to the Place that mentions the Names of the ten Sons of Haman, he repeats them very quick without taking Breath, to shew that these ten Persons were destroyed in a Moment. Every time the Name of Haman is pronounced, the Children with great Fury strike against the Benches of the Synagogues with Mallets, or Stones, and make lamentable Cries. 'Tis said that heretofore they used to bring into their Synagogues a great Stone, with the Name of Haman written upon it, and all the while the Book of Esther was reading, they struck against it with other Stones, till they had beat it to Pieces.

After the Reading was finish'd, they return'd into their Houses, where they made a Meal rather of Milk-meats than of Flesh. The Day following, early in the Morning, they return'd to the Synagogue, where, after they had read that Passage of Exodus, wherein is mention'd the War of Amalek, they begin again to read the Book of Esther with the same Ceremonies as before. After which they return home, and make as good cheer as they can, and pass the rest of the Day in Sports and dissolute Mirth, the Men dressing themselves in Womens Cloaths, and Women in the Mens, contrary to an express Prohibition of the Law. (Deut. xxii. 5.) And their Doctors have decided upon this Point,[b] that upon this Day they may drink Wine 'till they cannot distinguish between, Cursed be Haman, and Cursed be Mordecai. Heretofore they used to erect a Gibbet, and upon it to burn a Man made of Straw, which they call'd Haman. But it was thought they had an Inception of insulting the Christians upon the Death of Christ, and therefore the Emperors forbad them to use this Ceremony, on Penalty of forfeiting all their Privileges. (Cod. de Judæis & Cælicol. L. Jud.)

The Feast of Purim, or Lots, in the manner that the Jews observe it, has a good deal of Resemblance to the antient Bacchanalia of the Pagans. Pleasures, Diversions, Joy, good Cheer, make as it were the very Essence of it. The Spirit of Revenge which animated the Jews of Shushan against their Enemies, has pass'd even to their Posterity. They deliver themselves up to it without Measure and without Bounds. They allow themselves the drinking of Wine even to Excess, because, say they, it was by making King Ahasuerus drink, that Esther procured the Deliverance of the Jews. They compel every one to be present at the Synagogue, Man, Woman, Child, and Servant; because all had a Share in the Deliverance, as all were expos'd to the Danger. On this Day Scholars make Presents to their Masters, Heads of Families to their Domesticks, great ones to those of mean Condition. In a Word, the whole Day is spent in Joysulness and Feasting. (Leo of Modena, Ceremonies of the Jews, p. 3. c. 10.) As it is said in the Book of Esther; That they should make them Days of Feasting and Joy, and of sending Portions one to another, and Gifts to the Poor. (Esth. ix. 22.)

This Festival continues for two Days, but only the first of them is kept with Solemnity. During these two Days they may work or do Business; yet they refrain the first Day, though they are not obliged to it. The second Day they read no new Lesson in the Synagogue, and the Feast is not so great; but they however shew some Marks of Festivity. When the Year consists of thirteen Months, and that there are two Adars, that is to say, when at the End of two or three Years there is a supernumerary Month in the Lunar Year, they reckon'd the Month Adar twice over, which they insert between February and March, and then the second Adar is call'd Ve-Adar. See the Articles MONTH and INTERCALATION. When therefore there are two Adars, they celebrate the Feast of Lots twice over; the grand Purim is on the fourteenth of the first Adar, and the lesser Purim is on the fourteenth of the second

Basnage, Hist. of the Jews, t. 5. l. 7. c. 16.

On the Eve of the Festival they gather the Half-shekel which was formerly paid to the Temple, and which at present they distribute among such as undertake a Journey to Jerusalem, whither several of them repair out of Devotion, and where they covet to be buried; believing that all the Jews are to rendezvous there at the last Judgment, and that they shall even pass thither thro' the Bowels of the Earth.

They read the Text of Esther, not out of a printed Book, nor out of a Book in Form of ours, but out of a Roll of Vellum, in the antient Manner, which is wrote with a particular kind of Ink. After they have spread open the Volume, they make three Prayers, to thank God for calling them to this Ceremony, for having deliver'd them, and for having continued their Lives to the Celebration of this Festival. On this Day the Reader may sit down while he reads, whereas at other Times he must stand up while he reads the Law. The reading of the Book of Esther is concluded with Curses against Haman and his Wife Seres, with Blessings of Mordecai and Esther, and with Praises to God for having preserved his People. Rest is observed very religiously, especially the first Day; and the Jews tell us, that a Man having sown Flax on this Day, not one Grain of it came up.

It was the Emperor Theodosius II. who forbad the Jews to erect Gibbets, to fix an Image upon them, which they call'd Haman, and afterwards to burn them both; because it was not fit that in their Festivals they should insult the Mysteries of the Christian Religion. This Decree was publish'd through the whole East in the Year 408, and directed to Anthemius, who was Prefect there. Yet three Years after, some Jews in the Extravagance of their Passion and Height of their Frolicks, notwithstanding this express Prohibition of the Emperor, fasten'd a young Christian to a Gibbet instead of a Haman, whom they whipp'd so cruelly, that he died on the Spot. This Fact was committed in the City of Inmestar, situated in Chalcis and Syria. The Christians in the Country took up Arms; the Fight was bloody, because the Jews were numerous in those Parts. The Governor of the Province having acquainted Theodosius with it, he gave Orders for the Punishment of those that were the Occasion of the Riot, which then was soon appeas'd.

Idem. t. 8. l. 8. c. 6. p. 194.

PURGATORY.[a] This Word is not to be found in Scripture, neither in the Old or New Testament. But the sacred Authors of both the Covenants believed the thing intended by this Word, and have express'd it in equivalent Terms, upon more Occasions than one. We mean therefore by the Word Purgatory, that State of those Souls, which having departed out of this Life without expiating certain Impurities that deserve not eternal Damnation, or which not having undergone the Punishments due to their Sins, expiate them by such Punishments as God inflicts on them, before they enjoy his Presence.

'Tis said in the Maccabees, that when Judas had stripp'd his Soldiers who had been slain in Battle, he found hid under their Cloaths Things that had been consecrated to Idols, which the Law forbad to take away. Non inferes quicquam ex Idolo in domum tuam. 'Tis added, Then every Man saw that this was the Cause wherefore they were slain. All Men therefore praising the Lord the righteous Judge, who had opened the Things that were hid, betook themselves unto Prayer, and besought him, that the Sin committed might wholly be put out of Remembrance. And when he had made a Gathering throughout the Company, to the Sum of two thousand Drachms of Silver, he sent it to Jerusalem to offer a Sin-offering, doing therein very well and honestly, in that he was mindful of the Resurrection. For if he had not hoped that they that were slain should have risen again, it had been superfluous and vain to pray for the Dead. And also in that he perceived that there was great Favour laid up for those that died godly. It was an holy and good Thought. Whereupon he made a Reconciliation for the Dead, that they might be delivered from Sin. This Passage fully declares the Sentiments of the Jews before the Time of our Saviour.

2 Mac. xii. 43, &c.

Deut. vii. 25, 26.

As to the New Testament, Christ in the Gospel says, that there are certain Sins that shall not be forgiven, neither in this World, nor in the World to come. Consequently he allows, that there are some Sins that may be forgiven in the other World. St. Paul prays for Onesiphorus then departed, The Lord grant unto him that he may find Mercy of the Lord in that Day. But if Prayers may be made for the Dead, then there is a Purgatory, and a State wherein they may be benefited by our Prayers.

Matth. xii. 32.

2 Tim. i. 18.

The Jews acknowledge a kind of Purgatory, which continues for one whole Year after the Person is departed. During these first twelve Months, the Soul is at Liberty

[a] The Reader is here to be warn'd, that the Church of England declares herself intirely against this Doctrine of Purgatory, saying in her twenty-second Article, That the Romish Doctrine concerning Purgatory, &c. is a fond thing, vainly invented, and grounded upon no Warranty of Scripture, but rather repugnant to the Word of God. It seems rather to owe its Original to the Fictions of the heathen Poets, than to any clear Revelation from Scripture.

Liberty to come upon Earth, to visit its Body, and to frequent those Places and Persons, to which it had a particular Relation during its Life here. They pray for the Repose of the Dead for all this Time, and are persuaded, that they administer much Consolation to them by their Prayers, that they procure Rest for them, and Pardon of their Sins.

The Place wherein the Prevaricators of Israel are punished after their Death, or such Jews as are one Day to be deliver'd out of their Pains; this Place is the same as Hell, where the Impious are kept, or such whose Calamity is without Resource and without Hope. But there is a great deal of Difference between these two Sorts of Sufferers; first, as to the Pain, which is much more tolerable as to the former than the latter; and secondly, as to the Duration of it, since that of the Prevaricators of Israel will one Day have an End, and may be much shorten'd and abated by the Prayers and Offerings of the Living; whereas the Torments of the Wicked are to endure for ever.

We read some Stories in the Books of the Rabbins, which prove, that Purgatory is a popular Opinion among them. The Rabbi Elisha Son of Abia fell into the Error of the two Principles, from which he was converted towards the End of his Life. However, his Salvation was doubted of. One of his Friends, call'd Meir, undertook to cause Smoke to proceed out of his Tomb, as a Token that he was in Purgatory. Another Rabbi named Jehonan took upon himself to cause this Smoke to cease, as a Token that he was deliver'd out of Purgatory. They both accomplish'd what they had propos'd, and then it was no longer doubted but that Elisha was saved.

Vide Cod Chagigeah Bartolocci t. 2. p. 152

The Rabbi Akiba saw once in a Church-yard, a Man that had been departed a good while, walking in great Haste with a Burthen of Wood upon his Shoulders. Akiba ask'd him if he had Occasion for any Assistance. The dead Man told him, that in his Life-time he had been a Receiver of Customs, and to expiate the Extortions he had committed in this Employment, he was condemned to perform the Office of carrying Wood in this manner. He desir'd him to inform his Widow and Son of the State he was in. Akiba found out the Wife and Son, and taught him to say, Blessed be the Lord, and let him be blessed. And no sooner had he pronounced these Words, but his Father was deliver'd out of Purgatory, and appear'd to Akiba to thank him. We have as much Contempt for this kind of Stories as they deserve; but they may serve as a Proof, that the Jews believe a Purgatory.

Rab. Tanchan. Parasch. Toledoth Noah.

They call Purgatory, Abraham's Bosom, the Treasury of the Living, the Garden of Eden, and Upper Gehenna. Hell they call the Lower Gehenna. They believe that all the Israelites have a Portion in the World to come, or the State of Happiness, either immediately after Death, or after they have attoned for their Sins in Purgatory. There are but a very small Number of their Nation, who are great Profligates, that are for ever excluded out of Heaven.[a] As for the rest, they hold that they continue not above a Year in Purgatory. The Sabbath-day is a Day of Remission for the Souls in Purgatory; they do not burn upon that Day. The Jews offer up a great many Prayers, and Works of Satisfaction, on the Day of solemn Expiation, for the Comfort of such Souls as are in the Upper Gehenna.

The Mussulmen, whose false Religion is a Composition of Judaism, Christianity, and Deism, have, doubtless, borrow'd from the Jews and Christians the Notions they have of Purgatory. They acknowledge at least two of 'em. The first is what they call Adhabalcabor, the Penalty of the Sepulchre. No sooner is a Man buried, but two Angels call'd Moukir and Nekir examine the dead Man, and condemn him to expiate the Crimes he has committed in that same Place: But at the Day of Judgment they are deliver'd from them by their Submission to the Justice of God, and by the Intercession of their false Prophet. In this first Judgment of the Sepulchre, it is allow'd every one to speak in his own Justification; but at the last Judgment Men must not dare to say any thing, nor presume to bring any Extenuation or Excuse. The Turks call'd Motazals do not admit of this first Purgatory of the Sepulchre; but it is the general Belief of the other Mahometans.

D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 57.

The second Purgatory, according to many of the Mussulmen, is the Place call'd Araf, lying between Paradise and Hell. What divides them is only a Vale, according to some, or a thick Wall, according to others. They are not agreed who they are that inhabit this Araf. Some place the Patriarchs and Prophets there, others the Martyrs, and the most eminent for Sanctity among the Faithful. But several Doctors dispose of such Mussulmen there, whose good and bad Actions approach so near to an Equality, that they had not Merit enough to deserve Paradise, nor Demerit enough to be condemned to the Pains of Hell. From thence they see the Happiness of the Blessed; but they do not partake of it; and this Privation gives them their greatest Torment. But at the great Day of Judgment, those that are kept in this this Place will proſtrate themſelves before the Throne of the great Judge, will acknowledge and adore his Power, and by thoſe Acts of Adoration their good Actions will ſo far exceed their bad ones, that they will be admitted into Happineſs.

Beſides theſe two Purgatories now mention'd, they have ſtill a third call'd Barzak. (D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 191.) By this Name the Mahometans call that Space of Time which is to paſs between Death and the Reſurrection. They think there is neither Paradiſe nor Hell for Men during this Interval. This ſeems to have been taken from the Opinion of ſome of the Fathers, not well underſtood, who have thought that the State of Souls was not fix'd and determin'd, 'till after the Day of Judgment.

PURIFICATIONS. There were ſeveral kinds of Purifications among the Hebrews, which had relation to the ſeveral Impurities that might be contracted. See before the Article of Legal Impurities. We have alſo ſpoke of ſeveral of theſe Impurities, as Occaſion was offer'd in the different Articles. See for Example, Leprosy, Gonorrhea, Dead Bodies, Nazarites. When a Woman was brought to Bed of a Boy, ſhe was eſteem'd impure for forty Days; (Lev. xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.) that is, ſeven Days during which ſhe could not touch any thing, but that it became defiled. After this ſhe was ſtill impure for thirty Days, but her Impurity was ſuch, as did not hinder her from taking Care of her houſhold Affairs. She was only excluded from the Uſe and Participation of holy Things. If ſhe had brought forth a Girl, ſhe was judged unclean for ſixty Days; that is, two Weeks in which ſhe could not touch any thing without defiling it, but the reſt of her Time ſhe was only excluded from the Uſe of holy Things, and might not go to the Temple, nor celebrate the Paſſover, nor eat of the Peace-offering, &c.

When the Days of her Purification were ended, ſhe carry'd a Lamb to the Entrance of the Tabernacle, or the Temple, to be offer'd for a Burnt-offering, and a young Pigeon or Turtle for a Sin-offering. If ſhe was not of Subſtance enough to offer a Lamb, ſhe gave two Turtles, or two young Doves, of which one was for a Burnt-offering, and the other for a Sin-offering.

Though the Holy Virgin was not ſubject to the Law that ſays, [a] Mulier ſi ſuſcepto ſemine pepererit maſculum, &c. yet ſhe did not ſcruple to comply with it, to give us an Example of the profoundeſt Humility and Submiſſion. (Luke ii. 2, 22, &c.) And to preſerve the Memory of this, the Church has inſtituted the Feaſt of the Purification of the Virgin Mary, commonly call'd Candlemas-Day, which is kept on the ſecond Day of February, and on which thoſe of the Church of Rome carry Wax Candles in their Hands, as it were, to ſhew more ſenſibly the coming of Jeſus Chriſt, whom Simeon in his Canticle, pronounced on this Occaſion, calls the Light of the Gentiles, and the Glory of the People of Iſrael. But thoſe that have moſt examin'd into this Matter think, that the true hiſtorical Reaſon of the ſolemn Proceſſion made upon this Day, was inſtituted to wear out the Memory of thoſe profane Sacrifices, that the Pagans us'd to make in the Month of February, [b] to luſtrate or purify the Men, Fields, and Cities; and that the Candles us'd in this Solemnity were inſtead of the Torches carry'd by the Pagans in the Feaſts of Lupercalia, [c] wherein naked Men ran through the Streets with lighted Torches, and committed a thouſand Inſolencies.

This Feaſt was ſolemnly inſtituted by the Emperor Juſtinian, about the Middle of the ſixth Century; and perhaps in ſome Places it was celebrated before. But this Prince fixed it to the ſecond Day of February, and ordain'd, that it ſhould be celebrated in an uniform Manner through the whole Empire. And this was readily follow'd by ſuch Places as were not under his Dominion. They gave to this Feaſt the Name of Hypapante, which in Greek ſignifies meeting, becauſe when Jeſus Chriſt came into the Temple, Simeon and Anna may be ſaid to have come before him, and there to have met with Joſeph and Mary, in order to give their Teſtimony of him.

In the ſame Feaſt is celebrated the Memory of the Preſentation of Jeſus Chriſt in the Temple, in Quality of the Firſt-born of Mary, in Obedience to the Law which enjoyns, that all the Firſt-born Children ſhould be preſented to the Lord, (Exod. xiii. 13.) and redeem'd by their Parents with the Sum of five Shekels. We have already ſpoken of this Law under the Article of First-born, and we have there examin'd whether Jeſus Chriſt was ſubject to it, having not been conceived and born as other Men. Upon the Feaſt of the Purification of the Virgin Mary, the Reader may conſult the Bollandiſts on the ſecond of February; Father Thomaſſin in his Treatiſe upon the Feaſts, M. Baillet, and thoſe that have wrote Notes upon the Martyrologies; M. de Tillemont, t. 1. n. 7. upon Jeſus Chriſt.

able in the ordinary Way of Life; for Example, ſuch Pollutions as they contracted at the Burial of the Dead, to whom they were obliged to pay their laſt Duties; made uſe of the Aſhes of the Red Heifer which was ſacrificed for this Purpoſe at Jeruſalem, and the Aſhes of which were diſtributed to all Iſraelites at a Diſtance. Numb. xix. 5. See the Article RED HEIFER.

If a Man and Woman made uſe of the Marriage-bed, they were unclean 'till the Levit. xv. 16,17,18. Evening; they waſh'd their Cloaths, and purify'd themſelves by Bathing. If a Woman had her monthly Infirmities, ſhe was Levit. xv. 19,20,21, &c. unclean for ſeven Days; whatever ſhe touched during thoſe ſeven Days was defiled; and thoſe that touched her Bed, Cloaths, or Seat, were unclean 'till the Evening, were to waſh their Cloaths, and to purify themſelves by Bathing. If during the time of this Infirmity, any Man ſhould come near her, he would be defiled for ſeven Days, and the Bed they lay upon would alſo be polluted. If it were with his Knowledge that he then came near her, and the Affair was brought before the Judge, both of them were to be put to Levit. xx. 18. death. The antient Chriſtians on many Occaſions look'd upon theſe Infirmities of Women as Defilements, and did not think it lawful then to come near them, perhaps as much out of Decency as Religion. The Turkiſh Women even to this Day forbear to come to Church while this laſts. The Indians do not ſo much as ſuffer their Women to come into their Houſes, while they have this Malady upon them. (Tournefort's Travels to the Levant, t. 1. p. 44.)

Even involuntary Pollutions that might Deut. xxiii. 10. happen in Sleep, were puriſy'd by Bathing. He to whom this happen'd was to go out of the Camp, and not to return 'till after Sun-ſet, and after he had waſh'd himſelf in Water.

The Hebrews had an infinite Number Mark vii. 3,4,7,8. of other Purifications. For Example; they did not ſo much as eat, nor ſit down to Table, 'till after they had waſh'd their Hands, by pouring Water from their Fingers Ends up to their Elbows. When they return'd into their Houſes, they were to waſh their Hands. They alſo purify'd their Pots and Cups, their Beds, and whatever elſe they made uſe of, following the Traditions of their Elders. They more than once reproved Jeſus Chriſt and his Matth. xv. 2. Apoſtles, for not waſhing their Hands be- Mark. vii. 2. fore they ſate down to eat. At the Feaſt John. ii. 6. of the Marriage of Cana, there were ſix great Pitchers of Water ſet forth, for the Purification of the Gueſts.

PURIM, ſee Pur before.

PURITY; the Words Pure and Purity, are taken in Scripture in two different Senſes: 1. For External Purity; and, 2. For Internal. External Purity is either in reſpect of ſuch Perſons as are capable of partaking of holy Things, and of performing among Men the Duties of civil Life; or in reſpect of Animals which are declared pure by the Law, and of which they were allow'd to eat; or laſtly, in reſpect of ſuch Things, which having none of the Impurities expreſs'd in the Law, are fit for all the Uſes for which they are intended: As for Example; Cloaths, Houſes, Utenſils, were capable of Impurities, which hinder'd their being made uſe of. No ſooner were they purged from theſe Impurities, but they became clean, and might be uſed without any Scruple.

To recover this State of Purity when loſt, and to wipe out any contracted Impurity, there were ſeveral Sorts of Purifications appointed by the Law. We have already ſpoken of theſe under the Article IMPURITIES. Things that were impure of their own Nature, as Carcaſes and Animals that died of themſelves; and ſuch as were ſo by the Appointment of God, as Animals declared impure by the Law, could never become clean. But Men or Women overtaken by any tranſient Inconveniencies, which render'd them unclean for a Time, might recover their uſual Purity, when theſe Inconveniencies or Accidents were paſs'd or expiated. 'Twas the ſame in reſpect of Cloaths, Houſes, and Goods; they were purified by Water, Fire, or by ſome Luſtrations. As to ſuch Perſons as had contracted any Impurities, ſometimes it was neceſſary that they ſhould offer certain Sacrifices of Expiation. But the moſt general Method of Purification was the Bath, or the waſhing of the whole Body. When a Man had been defiled by touching a dead Body, or by aſſiſting at a Funeral, he was waſh'd with the Water of Luſtration, in which was mixed ſome of the Aſhes of the Red Heifer, which had been ſacrificed on the Day of the ſolemn Expiation. See the Article of IMPURITIES.

Internal Purity conſiſted in Innocence of Life, in the Purity of the Mind and Heart, in Juſtice, and in the exact Obſervation of the Law of the Lord; and the only Way of recovering this Purity when impaired, was the Converſion of the Heart, the Deteſtation of Sin, and inward Sorrow and Compunction for it. Theſe Diſpoſitions, accompany'd by the Sacrifices required by the Law, in ſuch Caſes wherein Men had fallen into any Faults of Negligence, Inadvertency, or Ignorance, or even of Perverſeneſs and Malice, might obtain Pardon for 'em, not by virtue of the external Sacrifice, but by means of the Faith, Contrition, and Charity of him that offer'd it.

Moſes is not very explicit upon the Means of recovering this internal Purity, nor is he ſo minute and accurate upon this, as upon external Purity; and that becauſe as a Law-giver, his firft and principal View was to reftrain the Hands of Men, and to regulate the external State of his Commonwealth. Not but that Mofes, and the other facred Authors of the Old Teftament, fay enough to thofe that have a mind to underftand, to prove how little they rely'd upon thefe outward Purifications and Sacrifices, in refpect of the inward Affections of the Heart, of Contrition, Faith in God, and Charity. St. Paul in his Epiftles, and particularly in that to the Hebrews, has admirably difplay'd this Truth to us, telling us, that the Sacrifices and Ordinances of the old Law were of no Virtue in themfelves, to heal the inward Diftempers of the Soul, and to repair the Outrages done to God by our Sins.

In the new Law, Chriftians are freed from the Yoke of Ceremonies and legal Impurities, and efteem as real Defilements, none but thofe of the Soul. Their chief Care is (or ought to be) employ'd, in preferving an inward Purity and Innocence of Mind, and to recover thefe by Repentance, whenever they fhall have the Frailty to part with them. See the Article REPENTANCE.

PURPLE, the Colour of Purple; in Hebrew, Argaman, in Greek, Porphyros, in Latin, Purpura. The Greeks alfo made ufe of the Word Amorge, which is derived from the Hebrew Argaman. 'Tis thought that the fine purple Colour was firft invented by Hercules Tyrius, whofe Dog by chance having eaten a Shell-fifh call'd Murex, or Purpura, and returning to his Mafter with his Lips tinged with a purple Colour, gave occafion to the Difcovery of this fine and precious Dye. But fure it is, that Purple is much more antient than Hercules, fince we find it mentioned by Mofes in feveral Places; except under the Name of Hercules, the Tyrians mean fome very antient Hero, whom the Greeks afterwards confounded with others. However this be, the Colour of Purple was of a very deep Red, and at the fame time foft and fhining. Pliny compares it to the Colour of a Rofe, which makes fome approach to a black Colour. Nigricantis rofæ colore fublucens: Or, of coagulated Blood drawing towards Black, the Red of which has a foft kind of fhining. Concreti fanguinis nigricans afpectu, idemque fufpectu refulgens. Purple was of more Sorts than one. One was deeper, drawing towards Violet, mingled with a little Red, which was the Ground of it. The other was of a deep Red, but fhining, as coagulated Blood. Another more faint, pretty near as our Scarlet. They pretended that the true Purple fhould ftrike the Sight mildly and agreeably, in a manner not fo forcibly as the Carbuncle. Afpectu leniter blandum, neque in oculos ut carbunculi vibrat.

Mofes made ufe of much Wool of a purple Colour in the Works of the Tabernacle, and in the Ornaments of the High-prieft. Purple was the Colour made ufe of by Princes and great Men, by way of Diftinction. In the Book of Judges it is obferved, that they made Gideon a Prefent of the purple Habit, which the Kings of Midian ufed to wear. The Spoufe of the Virtuous Woman was cloathed with Silk and Purple. The wicked rich Man of the Gofpel, was cloathed in Purple and fine Linen. We fee by Jeremiah and Baruch, that the Babylonians put upon their Idols Habits of a purple and azure Colour. When Daniel had explain'd the Writing that God caufed to appear to Belfhazzar, while he was making his impious Feaft at Babylon; he (Daniel) was cloathed in Purple, and adorn'd with a Chain of Gold. Alexander Balas King of Syria, fent to Jonathan Maccabeus, a Crown of Gold, and a Habit of Purple, allowing him to take the Title of the King's Friend. Laftly, to make the Royalty of our Saviour ridiculous and contemptible, they cloathed him with a purple Robe at the time of his Paffion.

PYGARGUS. This Word literally fignifies White Buttocks. This Name is given to a kind of Eagle with a white Tail. In Mofes, it fignifies a four-footed Animal, called in Hebrew, Difhon, as much as to fay Afh-coloured. The Tragelaphus has a Part of its Back Afh-colour'd; and Bellon, under the fame Name Tragelaphus, defcribes an Animal with afh-colour'd Spots or Streaks on its Sides. Pliny fpeaks of a kind of Roe-buck call'd Pygargus. Herodotus, Ælian, and Juvenal, mention it alfo. See Bochart. Animal. facr. p. 2. l. 3. c. 20. And probably this is what the Septuagint and Vulgate mean here by Pygargus.

PYGMIES. Mention is made of the Pygmies in the Latin Tranflation of Ezekiel. Every one knows what the Meaning of Pygmies is. They were extreamly little Men, from whence the Word Pygmy comes, which fignifies a Man of the Stature of a Cubit.

And thefe were at continual War with the Cranes, from whom they had much ado to defend themfelves. But it is believed, that thefe People never exifted any where elfe, but in the Imagination and Writings of the Poets. The Hebrew Word Gamadim, dim, has some Relation to Pymæi, since literally it may signify Men of the Stature of a Cubit. But what should Pygmies do upon the Walls of Tyre, in order to defend them? for there they are placed by Ezekiel, as being good Warriors. The Seventy have rendered Gamadim by Guards, as if they had read Somerim. Symmachus has rendered it by the Medes; as if he had read Gam Madai, and the Medes. The Chaldee makes it the Cappadocians. By a slight Alteration, one might read Gomarim instead of Gamadim. But the Gomerim are well known in Gen. x. 4. among the Children of Japheth; and in Ezek. xxxviii. 6. where he mentions them as a very warlike People. Pliny speaks of a City of Phenicia called Gamade; unless there is some Fault in the Text, and instead of Gamade should be read Gamale.

PYRÆA, or Pyrethea, were great Inclosures uncovered, that were dedicated to the Sun, in which a perpetual Fire was kept up, in honour of this Luminary, which was worshipped by most of the Eastern Nations. See before the Article CHAMANIM, and what we have said under the Article PERSIA, concerning the Religion of the antient Persians. See also FIRE, and ZOROASTER.

PYRAMIDS. The Pyramids of Egypt are well known, by the Descriptions that have frequently been given of them, both by Antients and Moderns. 'Tis thought they were intended for Tombs for the antient Kings of Egypt. The Mahometans pretend, that they were built by the Preadamites. They mention particularly Gian-ben-gian, the universal Monarch of the World, in the Ages that went before Adam's Creation. Ezekiel speaks of the Sepulchres of the Kings of Egypt, or rather he describes in a poetical Manner, the Retinue of Pharaoh going down to Hell, or into the deepest Parts of the Earth, with his Army put to death by the Sword of the Chaldeans. Son of Man, wail for the Multitude of Egypt, and cast them down, even her, and the Daughters of the famous Nations, unto the nether Parts of the Earth, with them that go down into the Pit; or into Hell, or the Place where the Souls of antient Heroes are contained; Whom dost thou pass in Beauty? Go down, and be thou laid with the Uncircumcised. "The Sword "has been drawn, Egypt has been put to "death, make her go down with all her "Multitude; the most Mighty among the "Dead shall come to receive her, to attend "upon her publick Entry. They shall "make their Compliments at her Arrival. "There is Asshur with his People; there is "Elam; there Meshech and Tubal, they have "their Abode there; they lie down in their "Tombs, having their Swords under their "Heads. You shall crumble to dust in the "midst of these uncircumcised People: There "is Edom, his Kings and his Captains. There "are the Princes of the North, and all the "Men of Violence. Pharaoh has seen them, "and has comforted himself for the Multitude of his People, who are slain by the "Edge of the Sword, &c.

PYTHAGORAS, a famous Philosopher, whom some think to have been a Disciple of the Prophet Ezekiel: For they will have Nazaratus the Assyrian, the Master of Pythagoras, to be the same as Ezekiel. Certain it is, that Pythagoras travelled into Chaldea and Egypt; and it is pretended, [a] that it was in these Voyages that he learned what he knew about the Law of Moses, and especially his Tetrachys, or Quartenary, which is thought to be nothing else but the sacred Name Jehovah, consisting of four Letters.

But it may be demonstrated, that Pythagoras could not have seen Ezekiel in Chaldea. This Prophet was carry'd thither along with King Jeconiah in 3405, and began to prophesy in 3409; he prophesy'd yet in 3430, fourteen Years after the Taking of Jerusalem. He might then be about fifty Years old, supposing him not to have been above Five and twenty, when he was carry'd away Captive beyond the Euphrates. After the Year 3430, we have no certain Date, either of the Life or Death of this Prophet.

Dionysius Halicarnassensis shews, that Pythagoras came into the World about the Forty-seventh Olympiad, four Generations after Numa. Usher places his coming into Egypt in the Year of the World 3457, under the Reign of Amasis. He continued there Two and twenty Years, according to Jamblicus. He was taken and carried to Babylon by the Soldiers of Cambyses, in the Year of the World 3479. He returned into Italy at the Time that Brutus deliver'd his Country from the Yoke of the Tarquins, about the Year 3506. Therefore it is not credible that Pythagoras could have been the Disciple of Ezekiel. Jamblicus, in the Life of this Philosopher, says, That he went gladly and dwelt long in the Temple of Mount Carmel in Phenicia, or in Palestine. This Passage is made use of to prove, that he had had Correspondence with the Jews.

The generality of those who have mentioned this Philosopher, will have him to have been a Disciple of Zoroaster at Babylon, and that he derived all that fine Knowledge from him, by which he afterwards became so famous in the West. For we make no doubt but that it was Zoroaster, whom Porphyry describes under the Name Zabratus, or Zaratus, and Clemens Alexandrinus under the Name of Nazaratus. Thus he relates relates the Matter.[a] When Cambyses conquer'd Egypt, he there met with Pythagoras, who had repair'd thither in the View of instructing himself in the Learning of the Country. He took him Prisoner, and sent him with his other Captives to Babylon, where Zoroaster lived at that time. He committed himself to the Discipline of that great Man; " Zoroaster purified him " from the Defilements of his Life past, " instructed him in such things, in which " a vertuous Man ought to be free; he " taught him what were the Principles of " the Universe, and the Secrets of Nature.

This History agrees very well with our Chronology, and it is allow'd that Pythagoras was at Babylon, and that he improved much by the Acquaintance he had with the Magians. Besides, what we have taken notice of before, he there learned Arithmetick, Musick, the Knowledge of divine Things, and particularly the Doctrine of the Immortality of the Soul. All the antient Greek Authors acknowledge, that he was the first that taught these important Truths. But he did not teach them in their native Purity; but disfigured them with his Notion of a Metempsychosis, which he had borrowed from the Indians, where also it is said, that he had travelled. He made the Soul's Immortality to consist in a certain Revolution or Transmigration of the Soul out of one Body into another.

Many Touches have been observed in the Doctrine of Pythagoras, in his Maxims, and in the Lives of his Disciples, which have made it be suspected, that he derived several things from the Therapeutæ and the Essenians, and that he was one of the Number of those antient Disciples of the Prophets, from whom the Carmelites boast that they take their Original.[b]

The Pythagoreans abstained from Meat, brought all their Goods into a common Stock, eat nothing that had had Life, rejected all anointing with Oil, contemn'd Pleasures, wore white Cloths, not Linen, but Woollen, abstained from Swearing, had a great Veneration for old Men, never durst make Water before the Sun, kept Silence for a long time in their Schools, paid an immense Deference to the Sentiments of their Masters.

Pythagoras acknowledg'd an Unity of Principle, from whence proceeded the Duality in an indefinite manner. But this Duality always adhered like Matter to its Principle, or its Author. They believed that all things proceeded from this Unity. Some have imagin'd that they perceived in these Expressions, the Unity of the Godhead in three Persons. He condemned all Images of the Deity, and would have his Worship to be burthened with as few Ceremonies as might be. God was the principal Object of his Worship and of his Studies. He said that Salt at Meals was the Symbol of Union; and among the Hebrews in their Sacrifices, it was esteemed as a Token of the Covenant with God, who had forbid that any Victim should be offer'd to him without Salt. The figurative and symbolical Manner in which he gave his Instructions, was borrowed from the Hebrews, and other Orientals, who generally concealed the Mysteries of their Knowledge under Allegories and Parables. Jesus Christ himself forbids his Disciples to give their Holy Things to Dogs, or to cast their Pearls before Swine.

All these things together confirm their Conjecture, who suppose Pythagoras to have had some Communication with the Hebrews, either in Egypt, or in Chaldea, or in Palestine.

PYTHON. The Grecians gave to Apollo the Surname of Pythius, because he killed the Serpent Python; and as Apollo was regarded as the God of Divination and of Oracles, 'twas said that those that had the Gift of foretelling future Events, were filled with the Spirit of Python. The Septuagint and Vulgate have often used this Expression, to signify Fortune-tellers, Magicians, Ventriloquists, or such as spoke out of their Bellies. Among all these sort of People were much Knavery, Imagination, and often diabolical Operations. Under Penalty of Death God had forbid his People to consult this kind of Wizards. Saul had drove them out and destroyed them, throughout all the Land of Israel, and yet after this had the Weakness to have recourse to a Sorceress. Moses ordered them to be stoned, that were possessed by the Spirit of Python, or had a familiar Spirit. The Kings of Judah that forsook the Lord, such as Manasseh, increased the Number of Wizards; and the pious Kings, such as Josiah, rooted them out of their Country. When St. Paul in the City of Philippi in Macedonia, found a Pagan Servant-Maid that was possess'd by a Spirit of Python, and who brought great Gain to her Masters by Fortune-telling, he drove out this evil Spirit, and delivered the Maid from it; but this so provoked her Masters, that they raised a Tumult against him on this account.

(Ovid. Met. l. 1. v. 441, &c.) (Deut. xviii. 11. Levit. xx. 6.) (1 Samuel xxviii. 7, 8, &c.) (Levit. xx. 27.) (2 Kings xxi. 6.) (2 Kings xxiii. 24.) (Acts xvi. 16.)

The Hebrew Word Ob or Oboth, which the Vulgate translates by Python, signifies also a Bottle or Vessel of Leather, wherein Liquors were put. Perhaps this Name was given to Wizards, because at the times that they were in their Fits of Enthusiasm, whether real or feigned, they swell'd ſwell'd and became big as a Bottle, and they were heard to bring out their Words as it were from the Bottom of their Stomach; from whence the Latins called them Ventriloqui, and the Greeks, Engaſtrimythoi; that is, People that ſpeak out of their Bellies. Iſaiah ſays, that Jeruſalem being afflicted and brought low, ſhall ſpeak as it were out of the hollow of the Earth, as a Pythoneſs. She ſhall groan, and bring out her Words, as from the Bottom of a Cave.

In the Article of Samuel, it ſhall be inquired, whether the Witch of Endor caus'd this holy Man really to appear to Saul, or whether it was only an Illuſion on his Part, and a mere Forgery on hers.

Diodorus Siculus relates, that at Delphos there was a certain Pit, from whence a Vapour proceeded that diſturbed the Underſtanding. A Shepherd having obſerved, that whatever came near it and looked into it, preſently fell a dancing, and cry'd out in a manner different from what was uſual to them; he had a mind to go near it himſelf, and having look'd into it, he was ſeized with a kind of Enthuſiaſm, which made him foretel future Things. At the Report of this Miracle, great Numbers had a mind to look into this Pit, and were all ſeized with this Spirit of Prophecy. But as ſeveral of them were violently agitated by this Vapour, and fell down the Precipice, they thought convenient to pitch upon one Woman only to be a Propheteſs, and to exerciſe alone the Function of giving out Oracles. And for fear that ſhe might fall into the Hole, as well as others, they built her a kind of Stool with three Feet, upon which ſhe might ſupport herſelf, when ſhe received the Vapour, had her Fits of Enthuſiaſm, and foretold future Events. This Machine was afterwards called a Tripos, and became a ſacred Inſtrument at Sacrifices; and the Propheteſs was called Pythian. Such was the Original of the Oracle at Delphos.

'Tis reported that the moſt antient Temple of Delphos was only compoſed of Branches of Laurel Trees. Afterwards it was made of Wax and Bees Wings; then it was made of Braſs. The Mythologiſts pretend, that a Dragon call'd Python kept the Entrance, from whence Themis pronounced the Oracles. That Apollo came thither, and ſlew this Dragon with his Bow and Arrows, which gave him the Name of Pythian Apollo. Others ſay, that the Serpent Python was produced by the Earth, after the Flood of Deucalion. That Juno made uſe of this Dragon, to hinder the Delivery of Latona, the eldeſt Daughter of Jupiter, which obliged her to fly to the Iſland of Aſteria, afterwards called Delos, where ſhe was brought to Bed of Apollo and Diana. That the Python ſetting upon theſe two Infants in their Cradle, Apollo killed him with his Arrows, from whence he had the Name of Pythian; and in Memory of this Atchievement, the Pythian Games were inſtituted. From hence it was alſo, that they gave the Name of Pythoneſs to thoſe Women, who undertook to foretel future Events.

QUA

QUADRAGENA. St. Paul uſes this Word to denote the thirty-nine Laſhes which were given in the Synagogues, to thoſe that were convicted of certain Violations of the Law. Quinquies quadragenas, una minus, accepi. Five times have I received forty Stripes, ſave one. 'Twas in obedience to Moſes's Command, who ordered, that the Judges ſhould condemn thoſe to be whipped, who ſhould deſerve this Puniſhment. And it ſhall be, if the wicked Man be worthy to be beaten, that the Judge ſhall cauſe him to lie down, and to be beaten before his Face, according to his Fault, by a certain Number. Forty Stripes he may give him, and not exceed; leſt if he ſhould exceed, and beat him above theſe with many Stripes, then thy Brother ſhould ſeem vile unto thee. They often went below this Number of Forty, becauſe of the Weakneſs of the Offender, or the Smallneſs of his Crime. But they never went above it, nor beyond the Number of thirty-nine Stripes.

Deut. xxv. 23.

I. QUADRATUS. Numidius, or Caius Umidius Durmius Quadratus, was made Governor of Judea in the Year 51 of the vulgar Era. In 52 he compoſed the Troubles of Judea, by putting to death ſuch of the Samaritans and Jews as had taken up Arms againſt the Romans. He ſent Cumanus to Rome, with a Tribune called Celer, to give account of their Conduct to the Emperor Claudius. Alſo he ſent thither Jonathan Son of Annas, Ananias the Highprieſt, and Ananus Son of Annas. Theſe laſt were carried thither loaded with Chains, as being the principal Authors of the Sedition. Quadratus's Succeſſor in this Government was Corbulo, whom Nero ſent thither in the Year of Chriſt 60, after the death of Quadratus.

See Joſeph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 5. De bello, l. 2. c. 21. p. 795.

II. QUADRATUS. There was alſo another Quadratus, an Apologiſt for the Chriſtian

Christian Religion, under the Emperor Adrian. He had been instructed by the Apostles, and was a Prophet, and full of the Holy Ghost. Many of the modern Interpreters will have him to be the Angel of Philadelphia, to whom Jesus Christ addresses himself in the Revelations. But it is not easy to reconcile this Opinion with the Chronology and History of this holy Man. Eusebius says, he was already become famous in the Church in the time of Trajan. He was of the Number of those Apostolical Men, who following the Zeal of their Masters, built up the Edifice of the Church, and sow'd every where the Seed of the Word of the Gospel. They began by distributing their Substance to the Poor, and then went from Province to Province, preaching Jesus Christ to them that had not yet heard of him. Their Preaching was generally attended with Miracles, and with the Power of the Holy Ghost; and they sometimes converted a whole Nation at once.

Quadratus is the first that composed an Apology for the Christian Religion. He presented it himself to Adrian, in the Year 126, according to the Chronicon of Eusebius. St. Jerom calls this Apology a very useful Work, full of strong Reasoning, replenished with the Light of Faith, and worthy of a Disciple of the Apostles. This Piece had Power enough to extinguish the Persecution, which was then raised against the Church. We have only a few Fragments remaining of it. St. Jerom and the Latin Martyrologies make Quadratus Bishop of Athens, under Marcus Aurelius, and will have him to have suffered Martyrdom in the Persecution of those Times. [a] But others think that Quadratus Bishop of Athens, was very different from the Apologist. See M. de Tillemont t. 2. QUAILS. 'Tis known, that God gave Quails to his People in the Wilderness, upon two Occasions. First, in the Wilderness of Sin, or Zin, a few Days after they had passed over the Red-Sea. The second time was, at the Encampment, call'd in Hebrew Kibroth-hataavah, or, The Graves of Lust. Both of these happen'd in the Spring, when the Quails pass'd from Asia into Europe. Then they are to be found in great Quantities upon the Coasts of the Red-Sea and the Mediterranean. God caus'd a Wind to arise, that drove them within and about the Camp of the Israelites; and 'tis in this that the Miracle consists, that they were brought so seasonably to this Place, and in so great Numbers, as to suffice for above a Million of Persons above a Month. The Hebrew Word Shalav [b] signifies a Quail, by the Agreement of the ancient Interpreters. And the Chaldee, Syriac, and Arabic Languages call them nearly by the same Name. Yet Mr. Ludolf, in his Ethiopic History, l. 1. c. 13. §. 96. takes great Pains to shew, that Moses did not here mean Quails, but Locusts.

Exod. xvi. 3----13. Numb. xi. 32. Psal. civ. 40.

These are the Reasons alledg'd by Mr. Ludolf, to prove that Moses intended not Quails, but Locusts, in Exod. xvi. 3, 13. and Numb. xi. 32. He observes, that the original Word Selavv may be derived from a Root that signifies Abundance; which agrees better with Locusts than Quails. He owns, that the Oriental Versions explain it by Quails: but he maintains, that they did not understand the true Sense of the Text. Porphyry observes, that an Army in Africa being ready to perish by Famine, was seasonably reliev'd by a Cloud of Locusts, which they fed upon. Ludolf conjectures, that it was a like Event that satisfy'd the Desires of the Israelites in the Desarts of Arabia. 'Tis an easy thing to prove, by the Testimony of many Authors, both ancient and modern, [c] that there is an almost incredible Number of Locusts in the East; that the People of Arabia live upon the Locusts which are brought to 'em by the Winds; that they lay them up upon Heaps, preserve them in Salt, eat of 'em gladly, and serve them up even at Kings Tables; that they are of an excellent Taste, and very wholsome and nourishing.

Porphyr. de abstin. l. 1. c. 55.

Sometimes the Locusts fly in the Air in such vast Quantities as to darken the Sun, and to cover the Harvesters as with a Cloud of ill Omen. And when they come down upon a Country, they leave nothing untouch'd; they gnaw, devour, and blast every thing, even the hardest Wood. Whole Nations have been compell'd to forsake their Habitations, to avoid these troublesome Insects.

Plin. l. 10. c. 23.

Ludolf afterwards shews, that the Account of Moses is favourable to his Opinion. First; Locusts are good to eat, and expresly allow'd by the Law of Moses. Secondly; It was the Wind that brought the Animals, mention'd by that Law-giver, into the Camp: And this agrees much better to Locusts than to Quails. Thirdly; It is said, that they were scatter'd over the Field, and that they cover'd the Ground all over for a Day's Journey; that they were of the Depth of a Cubit; that they gather'd them up on Heaps; that they fill'd ten Omers with them. These Expressions are very difficult to reconcile, in the common Supposition of Quails, but may be very naturally underſtood of Locuſts. Fourthly; Theſe Animals were ſpread all round the Camp; or, according to the Vulgate, they dry'd them all round the Camp: Which cannot be underſtood of Quails; for they would ſoon have been full of Worms, if they had been thus expoſed to the Sun. [Numb. xi. 32.]

But what overthrows all theſe Conjectures, is, Firſt, the Conſent of the Languages, and of the Oriental Verſions, which have underſtood Quails by the Name of Selavv. The Septuagint, Joſephus, and all the Commentators both ancient and modern, underſtand it in the ſame manner. Beſides, the Hebrews ask'd Moſes for Fleſh, being diſguſted with Manna; and would they have been contented with Locuſts?

Mahomet, in his Alcoran, ſpeaks of the Miracle that God perform'd in favour of the Iſraelites, by ſending them Fleſh. He makes uſe of the ſame Word with Moſes.* One of his Interpreters † ſays, that the Word Salva does not only ſignify Quails, but alſo Honey. Another Interpreter ſays, that the Word Salva is uſually explain'd by Sumani, which is a Word more in uſe among the Arabians, to ſignify a Quail; which the Perſians alſo call Semavah. However, adds he, this is a Bird peculiar to Arabia Felix, larger than a Sparrow, and ſmaller than a Pigeon, which has neither Sinews, Bones, nor Veins, and of which the Fleſh is very agreeable. He ſays beſides, that the Wind which God ſent was ſo violent, that it broke the Wings of thoſe Birds, and made them fall like a very thick Cloud into the Camp of the Iſraelites, who took them with their Hands, and eat them along with the Manna. What they tell us of this Bird, that it has neither Bones, Veins, or Sinews, muſt be underſtood as an Hyperbole, to expreſs its being very fat and tender, ſomething like our Fig-peckers, Ortolans, and Red-breaſts.

* Moſes ſays Selav, and Mahomet ſays Salva.

QUARREL. Solomon compares him, that, going along the Streets, meddles with the Quarrels of People unknown, to one that will take a Dog by the Ears, and ſo will raſhly expoſe himſelf to be bit. This is what we may ſee every Day, in publick Quarrels. Thoſe that endeavour to mediate a Peace among Perſons engaged in a Controverſy; inſtead of reconciling them, do but provoke 'em, and ſtill irritate them more, and often meet with Anger on both Sides for intermeddling. But it muſt not be concluded from hence, that we ought never to endeavour to reconcile our Neighbours; yet it muſt be attempted with a great deal of Prudence, Caution and Charity, for fear of increaſing that Evil which we undertake to appeaſe. [Prov. xxvi. 17.]

QUARTODECIMANS. This Name was given to certain Hereticks, who kept Eaſter-day always upon the Fourteenth Day of the Moon, upon whatſoever Day it happen'd: Whereas moſt of the Churches kept it upon the Sunday that follow'd the Fourteenth Day of the Moon. The Quartodecimans were a Branch of the Sect of the Montaniſts and Quintilians, according to Epiphanius. Yet they have not been properly treated as Hereticks, but ſince the Council of Nice, which ordain'd, That all the Churches ſhould keep Eaſter-day on the Sunday that follow'd the Fourteenth Day of the Moon. [Epiphan. hæreſ. 50. c. 1. Concil. Nic. can. 21. Arab.]

QUARTUS, a Diſciple of the Apoſtles, of whom mention is made by St. Paul, in his Epiſtle to the Romans. The Greeks keep his Feaſt on the 10th of November, and ſay he was of the Number of the Seventy Diſciples, and Biſhop of Berythus. The Latins, as Uſuard, Ado, &c. place his Feaſt upon the 3d of November. [Rom. xvi. 23.]

QUEEN of Heaven: This is the Name that the Hebrew Idolaters uſed to give to the Moon. Jeremiah, chap. vii. ver. 8. ſays, The Children gather Wood, and the Fathers kindle the Fire, and the Women knead their Dough to make Cakes to the Queen of Heaven. And elſewhere, ch. xliv. ver. 16, 17, 18. the diſobedient Iſraelites tell the ſame Prophet; As for the Word that thou haſt ſpoken unto us in the Name of the Lord, we will not hearken unto thee. But we will certainly do whatſoever thing goeth out of our own Mouth, to burn Incenſe unto the Queen of Heaven. —— But ſince we left off to burn Incenſe to the Queen of Heaven, and to pour out Drink-offerings unto her, we have wanted all things, and have been conſumed by the Sword, and by the Famine. We think it to be the ſame that is call'd Meni in the Hebrew of Iſaiah, chap. lxv. 2. But ye are they that forſake the Lord, that forget my holy Mountain, that prepare a Table for that Troop, and that furniſh the Drink-offering unto that Number. The Hebrew ſays, That prepare a Table for Gad, and furniſh the Drink-offering to Meni. See the Article MENI. We take all theſe to be nothing elſe than the Moon, Aſtarte, Trivia, Hecate, Diana, the Heavenly Venus, Iſis, according to the different Superſtitions of the People. • They ſet up Altars to her upon the Plat-forms or Roofs of their Houſes, at the Corners of the Streets, near their Doors, and in Groves. They offer'd Cakes to her, kneaded up with Oyl or Honey, and made Libations to her with Wine and other Liquors. The Rabbins think they printed upon theſe Cakes the Reſemblance of a Star, or Half-Moon.

QUESTION. Quæſtio. This Word is often put for Diſpute, Difficulty, Suit at Law. Si quid natum fuerit quæſtionis, if any Difficulty ſhould ariſe. St. Paul would have his Diſciples Timothy and Titus, to avoid [Ex. xxiv. 14.] [2 Tim. ii. 23. Tit. iii. 9.]

avoid vain Questions, or vain Disputes, which are only concerning Genealogies, and the Sense of the Law, because this kind of Questions are more apt to give Offence than to Edify. The wise Man [Ecclef. vii. 30.] says, that he knew God created Man upright; but that he has perplexed himself with a Thousand Questions, and incumbered himself with a Thousand tiresome and intricate Disputes.

Question or Punishment. 'Twas a Custom among the Romans, to put Criminals to the Question, by whipping them, not with Rods, but with Whips or Scourges. [Cornel. Menoch. Pif.] Some think, that the Offender was stripp'd to his Waist, and that his Hands were ty'd to a Pillar, that his Back might be stretch'd out to receive the Blows. Others will have [Lud. de Dieu.] it, that his Hands were fastened to a Stake drove into the Ground, of a Foot and half, or two Foot high; so that the Criminal stooping with his Face towards the Ground, might present his naked Back to the Soldiers. Lastly, others are of Opinion, [a] that the Soldiers tied him Neck and Heels, and held him stretch'd out upon the Ground, while other Soldiers beat him all over his Body. This way of whipping is still common among the Orientals.

When St. Paul made an Oration to the [Acts xxii. 21.] People at Jerusalem, and related to them the Manner of his Conversion, they listned to him very attentively till he came to that Part of his Discourse, where he told them that God had sent him to preach to the Gentiles; then they raised their Voices, and cried out, that he was not fit to live, and were going to put him to death. Lysias the Tribune gave Command, that he should be put to the Question; but when they were binding him, Paul asked a Centurion there present, Is it lawful for you to scourge a Roman Citizen, and uncondemn'd? The Centurion acquainted the Tribune with it, who presently came to Paul, and asked him whether or no he was a Roman Citizen? he continued to affirm it; then those that were to put him to the Question retired, and Lysias caus'd him to be unbound.

QUIA, or Quoniam: Because. This Particle answers to the Hebrew Ki, and to the Greek Hoti, the Signification of which is generally causal, and is translated by because. But sometimes also these Particles are redundant in the Discourse; and at other times they should only be translated by that, and other times by wherefore. 'Tis needless to give Examples of quia, when it signifies that and because, for they will recur often.

This same Particle seems to be redundant [Psal. cxxiii 1.] in these Passages. Nisi quia Dominus erat in nobis. If the Lord had not been with us. Nisi quia Dominus adjuvit me. Unless [Psal. xciii. 17.] the Lord had help'd me.

It is used for wherefore in this Passage of St. Luke. Remittuntur ei peccata multa, [Luke viii. 47.] quoniam dilexit multum. Cui enim minus dimittitur, minus diligit. The Tenour of the Discourse requires, that we should understand it, as hinted before. A Master had two Debtors, one of them owed him an hundred Pence, the other Fifty. They not having wherewithal to pay, he forgives them their Debts; which of the two ought to love him most? Doubtless he to whom the greatest Sum was remitted. He adds, Many Sins are forgiven this Woman, Quoniam dilexit multum. It is plain it should be translated, wherefore she loves much; but he to whom less is forgiven will love less. Here are other Examples, where quia is put for quapropter. Qui me misit, mecum est; quia ego quæ placita sunt [John viii. 29.] ei facio semper. And elsewhere; Vos autem [John xiv. 17.] cognoscetis eum, quia apud vos manebit. And in the Psalms; Ego clamavi quoniam exaudisti me. [Psal. xvi. 6.] And again; Credidi propter quod [Psal. cxv. 1.] locutus sum. The Hebrew says, Credidi quia locutus sum. Jeremiah; Qui dixistis, [Jer. xxix. 16.] suscitavit nobis Dominus Prophetas in Babylone, quia hæc dicit Dominus. Instead of, Quapropter hæc dicit Dominus, &c.

QUINTILIUS VARUS. It is not positively known whether or no Quintilius Varus was Governor of Syria the Year of our Saviour's Birth, but however this is [See Not. 4 of M. de Tillemont, upon J. C tom. 1. p. 447.] the general Opinion. He governed this Province with great Wisdom and Moderation to the time of the Banishment of Archelaus, in the sixth Year of Christ. He succeeded Saturninus in the Government of Syria, and had for Successor Quirinius or Cyrenius. Varus presided in the Assembly in which Antipater Son of Herod was judged. [b] He supported the Interests of Archelaus, another of Herod's Sons, before Augustus, [c] that he might obtain the Kingdom of Judea. He afterwards appeased the Troubles that had been raised in the Country, by the Avarice of Sabinus. [d] Lastly, being recalled from his Government of Syria, he and his whole Army perished in Germany, in the ninth Year of Jesus Christ. [e] Augustus tore his Cloaths at this News, and let his Beard and Hair grow for several Months; so much he laid this Loss to Heart.

Luk. xi. 3. Luke reads it; Panem nostrum quotidianum. But that of St. Matthew [a] has, Panem nostrum supersubstantialem da nobis hodie. The Greek Word Epiousios, made use of by the Evangelists, may signify either supersubstantialis, or sufficiens, or futurus, Hieron. in crastinus. St. Jerom observes, that the Matth. vi. Hebrew Gospel us'd by the Nazareans, had Machus, which signifies the next Day, or the future. Give us our Bread, or Food necessary to sustain us to Morrow, or for the Time to come. We have Recourse to thy Providence for our Support for the time to come. Theophylact and Suidas, Give us our sufficient Bread, the Nourishment we have need of. Epiousios in this Place, is oppos'd to Periousios, superfluous. Those that contend for the Reading which has Supersubstantialem, [b] maintain, that in this Prayer Christians do not ask of God the Nourishment of the Body, but that of the Soul, the Knowledge of the Will of God, his Word, his Grace, the holy Eucharist.

RAB

I. RAAMAH, Reema, or Regma, the fourth Son of Cush, [c] who peopled a Country of Arabia, from whence they brought to Tyre, Spices, precious Stones, and Gold. We think this Country to have been in Arabia fœlix, at the Entrance into the Persian Gulph.

II. RAAMAH, or Raamias; he return'd from Babylon with Zerubbabel. Nehem. vii. 7.

RAAMSES, or Ramesses, a City built by the Hebrews, during the time of their Ser-
Ex. i. 11. vitude in Egypt, and which probably took its Name from the King of the Country, who set them to work. Its Situation is Herodot. not known. Herodotus speaks of Papre-
l. 2. c. 59. 71, & 165. misus in the Lower Egypt, and Pliny joins Plin. l. 6. c. 27. together the Ramisians and Patamians; which are probably the People that inhabited the two Cities of Pithom and Raamses. He joins them to the Arabians bordering upon Egypt.

RAB, Rabbin, Rabban, Rabbam; a Name of Dignity among the Hebrews. The Name of Rab was given to Masters and Doctors, to the Chief of a Class, and to the principal Officers of the Court of a Prince: For Example, Nebuzaradan, General of the Army of King Nebuchadnezzar, is always called Rab Tabachim, [d] Magister Laniorum, the Master of the Esth. i. 6. Butchers, Cooks, or Guards. Esther says, that Ahasuerus appointed a Rab of his Court over every Table of his Guests, to take Care that nothing should be wanting.
Dan. i. 3. רב סריסים Daniel speaks of Ashpenaz the Rab of the Eunuchs of the House of Nebuchadnezzar, and of the Rab of the Saganim, or Chief of
Dan. ii. 48. the Governors or Peers. This Prophet himself was preferred to be Chief of the Interpreters of Dreams, or the Rab of the
Dan. v. 11. Chartumim. It appears that this Name came originally from the Chaldees; for before the Captivity, when any mention was made of Judea, we do not find it used, but only when any mention was to be made of the Officers of the King of Babylon.

Rab or Rabban, properly signifies Master, or one that excells in any thing; Rabbi or Rabbani, is my Master. Rabbin is the Plural. Thus Rab is of greater Dignity than Rabbi, and Rabbin or Rabbim, is a Word of greater Dignity than either Rab or Rabbi.

There were several Gradations before they could arrive at the Dignity of Rabbin, as among us to arrive at the Degree of Doctor. He that was Master or Head of the School, was called Cacham, or Wise; and he had the Name of Bachur, or Elou, who aspired to the Doctorship, and for this Purpose frequented the School of the Chacham. When he was further advanced, he had the Title of Cabar of the Rab, or the Master's Companion. Lastly, when he was further skill'd in the Knowledge of the Law and the Traditions, he was call'd only Rab, or Rabin, and Morena, our Master.

Leo of Modena says, that among the Cerem.
Jews it was a kind of Shame, to be known Jud. p. 2. to seek for the Doctorship, and this passed c. 3.
for a presumptuous Piece of Vanity. Thus there was no Examination for it, but when a Man was found to have studied the Oral Law more than any other Science, he was saluted by the publick Voice with the Title of Cacham, that is, Wise. At least this is the Custom among the Eastern Jews; whereas in Germany and Italy, he receives this Title from the most antient of the Rabbins, who either by Word of Mouth, or Writing, declares him Cabar of the Rab, Companion of the Master, or Rab, or Morena, Master.

The Cacham Rab, or Master Rabbin, decides all Sorts of Differences, determines what Things are allowed or forbidden, and judges in all Matters of Religion, and even in Civil Controversies. He celebrates Marriages, and declares Divorces. He preaches, if he has a Talent for it, and is Head of the Academies. He has the head Seat in the Aſſemblies, and in the Synagogues. He reprimands the Diſobedient, and can even excommunicate them; which procures him great Reſpect and Authority.

In their Schools they ſate upon raiſed Chairs, and their Scholars were at their Feet. Hence it is, that in the Acts of the Apoſtles, St. Paul is ſaid to have ſtudied at the Feet of Rabbi Gamaliel. (Acts xxii. 3.) Philo affirms, that among the Eſſenians, the Children ſate in the Schools at the Feet of their Maſters, who explain'd the Law to them after an Allegorical Manner. (Philo lib. quod omnis probus liber.) Ambroſiaſter, upon the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, informs us, that in their Schools the Rabbins ſate in their Chairs, the moſt advanced of their Scholars ſate by them upon Benches, and the leaſt ſate upon the Ground on Mats. The Jews are us'd to ſay to their Children, by way of Proverb, Roll yourſelves in the Duſt of your Maſters Feet; (Pirke Avoth. c. 1. §. 4.) inſtead of ſaying, Frequent their Schools diligently, and ſit down at their Feet. [a] Our Saviour upbraids the Rabbins and Maſters of Iſrael with their Vanity, and Eagerneſs to have the firſt Places at the Feaſts, and the head Seats in the Synagogues; (Matth. xxiii. 6.) alſo with their being ſaluted in the Streets, and deſiring to be call'd Rabbi, My Maſter.

The Studies of the Rabbins are employ'd, either upon the bare Text of the Law, or the Traditions, or the Cabala, which is the myſterious Doctrine contain'd in the Scripture. Theſe three Objects of their Study form ſo many different Schools, and different Sorts of Rabbins. Thoſe that chiefly apply themſelves to the Letter and Text of Scripture, are call'd Caraites, which is as much as to ſay Literaliſts. Thoſe that place their chief Study in the Traditions and Oral Laws of the Talmud, are call'd Rabbiniſts; as applying themſelves to the Doctrine and Opinions of their old Maſters, from whom they have received their Traditions by the Mediation of their Cachams. Laſtly, thoſe that give up themſelves to their ſecret and myſterious Divinity, which conſiſts in explaining the Scripture, according to certain Combinations of the Letters and Numbers, are call'd Cabaliſts; as much as to ſay Traditionaries, becauſe that theſe Explications and Combinations are perform'd according to certain Rules, which they have receiv'd from their Maſters.

(Leo of Modena, p. 5. c. 1.) Leo of Modena ſays, that the Caraites keep to the Pentateuque only, rejecting all the Explications, Paraphraſes, or Conſtitutions of the Rabbins. This Author adds, that they are originally Sadducees, but reform'd and meliorated; and that they might not become odious to all Sorts of Religions, they have thought fit to forſake ſuch Opinions of the Sadducees as gave moſt Offence, and to eſpouſe ſome of the moſt antient of the Traditions. But for all this the Rabbiniſts mortally hate the Caraites, and treat them only as Mamzerims, or Baſtards. They refuſe all Alliance with them, nor will they ſo much as converſe with 'em; and though a Caraite ſhould deſire to become a Rabbiniſt, the other Jews would not receive him.

M. Simon, in his Supplement to that Paſſage of Leo of Modena we have now cited, believes with F. Morin, that the Caraites did not appear among the Jews 'till after the Publication of the Talmud, or about the eighth Century; and that the moſt underſtanding of the Jews at that Time, being deſirous to withſtand that Multitude of Whimſies then impos'd under the ſpecious Name of Moſes, were call'd Caraites, by the Defenders of thoſe Traditions; as if they would inſinuate, that they adher'd only to the Letter of Scripture. We have but few of the Works of the Caraites. M. Simon quotes ſome of the Manuſcripts. It were to be wiſh'd that ſome of 'em were printed, which would be of much more uſe to us than thoſe of the Rabbiniſts, which every-where abound, and wherein we find a vaſt Number of Trifles, of vain, frivolous, and childiſh Explications, founded upon pretended Traditions of the Antients. The Rabbins are generally very ignorant in Hiſtory, Chronology, Philology, Antiquity, and Geography. They underſtand the Holy Language but very imperfectly. They know not the true Signification of a Multitude of Words that are found in the ſacred Text of Scripture. They are prodigiouſly conceited about their Traditions, ſo that there is very little Profit to be had by reading them; and 'tis known by Experience, that moſt of thoſe who have ply'd themſelves to peruſe their Books, have been but little benefited by them, and have entertain'd a perfect Contempt of their Underſtanding and Works. (See our Anſwer to M. Fourmont, Let. 2.)

Beſide the Names of Rab, and Rabbi, or Rabboni, which the Jewiſh Doctors aſſum'd to themſelves, they took alſo thoſe of Maran, Lord, More, Doctor, Cacam, Sage, Marbitz Thora, Couſin to the Law, becauſe the Law reſted upon them, Dom, or Sir. 'Twas chiefly in Spain that they took formerly this latter Title, which is ſtill given to Perſons of the firſt Diſtinction.

The chief Function of the Rabbins is to preach in the Synagogue, to make publick Prayers there, and to interpret the Law. They have the Power of binding and and loosing, that is to say, of declaring what is forbidden, and what is allow'd. When the Synagogue is poor and small, there is but one Rabbin, who at the same time discharges the Offices of a Judge and a Doctor. But when the Jews are numerous and powerful in a Place, they appoint three Pastors there, and a House of Judgment, where all their Civil Affairs are determin'd. And then the Rabbin applies himself to Instruction only, unless it is thought proper to call him into the Council, to give his Advice there; in which Case he takes the chief Place.

[a] Very learned Men think, that they never ſate down in the Temple, but only in the Synagogues. They will have it, that when our Saviour was ſitting in the Midſt of the Doctors, 'twas only in the Synagogue adjoining to the Temple. See Deylin. Obſerv. t. 3. c. 30.

They have the Authority of creating new Rabbins. They pretend, that formerly every Doctor had a Right of giving this Title to his Disciple: But that since the Time of Hillel they relinquish'd this Power, in Consideration of him, and restrain'd themselves to the asking the Leave of the Head of the Captivity, at least in the East. At present they content themselves with installing the new Rabbin in an Assembly of some Doctors. Sometimes it is sufficient for one Rabbin alone to lay on his Hands, when it is difficult for several to come together. In Germany they are created by Word only, and often at their Creation their Power is restrain'd to certain Functions, and not extended to others. For Example, to teach the Law, but not to judge; neither were they to exercise those Functions to which they were appointed, unless when their Master was absent.

The Rabbins omitted nothing to procure to themselves Credit, Authority, and Respect among the People, who yet were generally inclined to dispise them. They maintain, that their Laws and Commands were not to be transgress'd, but on the Penalty of hazarding the Lives of the Offenders. They quote the Example of Rabbi Jochanan, who made of one of his Disciples an Heap of Bones, because he would' not believe what he taught him. They boast also, that a Rabbin cannot be damn'd. They bring a Proof of it in the Person of Rabbin Acher, who fell into capital Errors and Crimes, which were enough to have plunged him into Damnation. 'Tis pretended that he derogated from the Power of the Supream Being, that he admitted of two Principles; that he had blasphemed against the Angel Metatron, that he had rode on Horseback on the Sabbath-day; that he had tore to Pieces a young Scholar, and had sent the divided Parts of his Body to thirteen Levites. But however, Rabbi Meir, the Disciple of Acher, maintain'd, that he was not damned, but only detain'd in Purgatory, which he proved by causing Smoke to come out of his Tomb on a Sabbath-day. Another Rabbin caus'd this Smoke to cease, and it was concluded from thence, that he was saved. Excerpta Gemaræ apud Hott. p. 101, &c.

The Jews have several Books which were composed by their Rabbins. These Books are written in Hebrew, tho' much different from that of the Bible. It is not so pure, and has a great Mixture of Words and Phrases taken from strange Languages. As their Writings are upon Subjects foreign to such as are treated of in the Bible, they have been obliged to borrow other Terms, proper to express what they would treat of; for Example, in Astronomy, Physick, Theology; but their Style is still in Imitation of what they find in the Scripture. Their manner of pronouncing Hebrew is different from each other. The Italians pronounce it otherwise than the Germans, and the Germans different from the Spaniards and the Levantines. The Characters they commonly use in their Writings are not so square nor so beautiful as those of the Bible: They are rounder, and more of a Running-hand. And he that reads and understands very well the Hebrew of the Bible, will neither read nor understand the Hebrew of the Rabbins. The Writing and Style of these Doctors is a particular Study.

Nine Classes of Doctors are distinguish'd among the Hebrews. [a] The first is that of Moses, Joshua, Eleazar, and the seventy Elders chosen by Moses, to ease himself in the Goverment. The second is that of the Exod. xviii. 21. Antients, who succeeded Joshua and Eleazar, and according to them comprehends the Judges, Senators, and the Sanhedrim. The third is that of the Prophets. The fourth is the great Synagogue composed of six score Persons, after the Return from the Captivity. The fifth is of the Tanaim, mention'd in the Mishna. The sixth of the Amoraim, or Commentators upon the Mishna. The seventh of the Giours, or eminent Doctors. The eighth of the Seboreans, or Doubters. The ninth and last of the Gaons.

We must not suffer ourselves to be prejudic'd by the pompous Titles that the Hebrews give their Doctors, nor by that pretended Antiquity that they ascribe to them. They would be very much puzzled to prove that long Succession of Rabbins they boast of, from Moses down to the present Times. Abraham Son of one call'd David, who lived at Pescaire at the Beginning of the twelfth Century, [b] has made a Succession of Rabbins quite from Adam to his own Time. Abraham Zaccuth a Abrah. Zacuth. Inchasim. Jew, drove out of Spain with the other Jews, compos'd a Catalogue of them from the Beginning of the World as far as the Year 1500. Gedaliah alſo has made a Traditional Chain of 'em down to the Year 1586, in which he lived. But there is ſo great a Difference in the Calculations of theſe Hiſtorians, they fall into ſuch Anachroniſms, they diſagree ſo much in the Names of theſe Doctors, that it is eaſy to ſee they go upon no certain Principles, nor have any diſtinct Knowledge of what they advance.

In vain do the Rabbins boaſt of the Antiquity of their Schools and of their Doctors; when we ſearch into the Bottom of theſe Things, we find nothing but Confuſion and Uncertainty. They ſpeak with great Emphaſis of their Schools at Japhne and Tiberias, ſet up in Paleſtine after the Deſtruction of the Temple; and of thoſe of Nahardea, Pundebita, and Sora, in the Eaſt. They produce Liſts of Doctors who have taught therein; but all theſe Things are ſo ill put together, that nothing can be concluded from them. They have certain Books, whoſe Antiquity they very much brag of; the Midraſchins, for Example, or Commentaries upon Scripture, which they ſay were compos'd by the Rabbins who liv'd in the Time of Judas the Holy; that is, in the Year of Chriſt 215. Yet the Gemara is quoted therein, which was compoſed a long time after the Midraſchins Rabboth, or the grand Commentaries imputed to Nachmanides, who lived, they ſay, at the End of the third Century; and yet Mention is made there of the Endeavour of the Emperor Julian, to rebuild the Temple of Jeruſalem. The Sentences of the Fathers, or Pirke Aboth, publiſhed under the Name of Eleazar, who lived under Gamaliel the ſecond, is much more modern than that Time, as may be ſeen from the Work itſelf.

We have ſpoken elſewhere of the Paraphraſts Onkelos, Jonathan, Joſeph the Blind, and of the Gemara, of the Thalmud, and the Miſna. Theſe Articles may be conſulted, and Bartolocci in his Bibliotheca Rabbinica, and Mr. Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, t. 7. l. 10. c. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.

The moſt famous Rabbins that they quote to us, are Nathan, Abenezra, Abraham Hallevi, Maimonides, or Moſes the Son of Maimon, Joſeph and David Kimchi, and Solomon Jarchi. But all theſe Doctors are modern. Nathan, Head of the Academy of Rome, who has explain'd all the Terms of the Thalmud, lived at the Beginning of the twelfth Century. Aben-ezra died in 1174; his Explications of Scripture are literal and grammatical, and they are in great Eſteem among Commentators. Abraham Hallevi was Cotemporary with Abenezra. Maimonides was born at Corduba in 1131. His Father Maimon pretended to be of the Race of David. 'Tis commonly affirm'd, that Maimonides is the firſt of the Doctors among the Jews who left off trifling. He is ſometimes call'd Moſes the Egyptian, becauſe he left Spain and went to ſettle in Egypt. He died at the Beginning of the thirteenth Century.

Joſeph Kimchi, who lived in 1160, has compos'd ſome Commentaries upon Scripture, which are in Manuſcript in the Library of the Vatican, and a Book againſt the Chriſtian Religion. We know that he dwelt at Narbonne, but it is diſputed whether he were a Spaniard or a Frenchman. He had two Sons, David and Moſes Kimchi, who were both famous for their Learning.

David Kimchi, Son of Joſeph Kimchi, apply'd himſelf much to Grammar, and his Works are very well eſteem'd. The Jews alluding to his Name, which ſignifies a Miller, or white with Meal, ſay by way of Proverb, That there is no Meal without Kimchi; that is, there is no real Knowledge without Kimchi. Moſes Kimchi, his Brother, has alſo compos'd a Work whoſe Title is, The Garden of Pleaſure, which is in Manuſcript in the Vatican Library.

Solomon Jarki was a Native of Troy in Champagne, but he had the Surname of Jarchi, or Jarki, that is, Lunatick, becauſe he taught in the Academy of Lunel in Languedoc, where the Jews had an Academy in the twelfth Age. He chiefly apply'd himſelf to the Study of the Thalmud; and his Commentary upon the Gemara ſeem'd ſo full of Erudition, that he was call'd the Prince of Commentators. Concerning theſe Rabbins, and all the reſt of 'em, the Reader may conſult the Authors before quoted, eſpecially the Bibliotheca Rabbinica of Bartholocci.

RABBAH, or Arebba, a City mention'd by Joſhua xv. 60. Perhaps it's the ſame as Arbea, or Hebron. St. Jerome ſpeaks of a City call'd Rebbo, bordering upon Eleutheropolis towards the Eaſt.

RABBATH, or Rabbat-Ammon, Rabbat-Ammana, or only Ammana; or Rabbath of the Children of Ammon, afterwards call'd Philadelphia, the capital City of the Ammonites, ſituated beyond Jordan. It was famous and conſiderable even in the Time of Moſes, who tells us, that there was ſtill to be ſeen there the iron Bedſtead of King Og. When David declared War Deut. iii. 1.

the Kings of Judah. Afterwards the Kings of Israel became Masters of it, with all the rest of the Tribes beyond Jordan.

But towards the Conclusion of the Kingdom of Israel, Tiglath-pileser having taken away a great Part of the Israelites of that Country, the Ammonites put in Execution many Cruelties against those that remain'd; from whence it follow'd, that the Prophets Jeremiah and Ezekiel pronounced very severe Prophecies against Rabbath, the capital City of the Ammonites, and against the rest of the Country, which probably had their Completion five Years after the Destruction of Jerusalem. Antiochus the Great took the City of Rabbath-Ammon about the Year of the World 3786. Some time before this Ptolemy Philadelphus had given it the Name of Philadelphia. 'Tis thought it was to this City of Philadelphia, that St Ignatius the Martyr wrote his Epistle, a little time before his Martyrdom. Philadelphia is not far from the Fountain of Arnon.

(Jer. xlix. 1, 2, 3. Vide & Sophon. ii. 8. Ezek. xxi. 20. xxv. 5. Jos. Antiq. l. 13. c. 17. Polyb. l. 5.)

RABBATH-MOAB, or Rabbath of the Children of Moab, the capital City of the Moabites, call'd otherwise Rabbat-Moba, Ar, Areopolis, Ariel of Moab, Kir-heres, or the City with Brick Walls. Clamabo ad viros muri fictilis, says Jeremiah. This City lay upon the River Arnon, by which it was divided into two; whence it is, that in the Books of Kings it is call'd the two Ariels of Moab, or the two Lions of Moab, in allusion to its Name Ar or Arie, signifying a Lion. This City has gone thro' a great Variety of Revolutions, and the Prophets have often threaten'd it with great Misfortunes. The Kings of Judah, Israel, and Edom once laying Siege to it, when the King of Moab saw he must fall into the Enemies Hands, he took his eldest Son, and was going to sacrifice him to his Gods. But this excited such an Abhorrence or Compassion in the Kings without the City, that they drew off, and broke up the Siege. We have already spoken of this City under the Article AR. The Romans generally kept a Garrison at Areopolis, because of the Importance of this Pass over the Arnon. See the antient Notitia, and Eusebius and St. Jerome upon the Word ARNON.

RAB-SHAKEH, or Rab-saces, that is, the chief Butler, or Cup-bearer. This is a Term of Dignity, and not a proper Name. Rab-shakeh was sent by Sennacherib King of Assyria to summon Hezekiah to surrender to him.[c] He made a Halt in the Fuller's Field, and sent to speak with Hezekiah. This Prince sent out to him Eliakim, Shebna, and Joah, three of the chief Officers of his Court. Rab-shakeh spoke to 'em in a very haughty and insolent manner, and told them in Hebrew, that they ought not to put any Confidence, either in the King of Egypt, who was not able to assist them, or in the Lord, whose Altars upon the high Places Hezekiah had destroy'd, and who had order'd Sennacherib to march against Judea. Then Hezekiah's Commissioners desir'd him to speak in the Chaldee Language, and not in the Hebrew, that the People upon the Walls might not hear their Conversation. But Rab-shakeh raised his Voice so much the more, and address'd his Discourse to the People, persuading them to surrender themselves to Sennacherib; adding such blasphemous Expressions as these, That as the Gods of the Nations were not able to secure their Worshippers from the Power of Sennacherib, so neither could the God of Israel protect them from the Force of his Arms.

After this Rab-shakeh return'd towards his Master, who had quitted the Siege of Lachish to meet the King of Egypt, who was then come forth to the Assistance of Hezekiah. But in this March the destroying Angel slew an hundred and eighty-five thousand Men of the Army of Sennacherib, so that he was obliged to hasten back to Nineveh, where he was put to death by his own Sons. See HEZEKIAH and ISAIAH.

RABSARIS, or Rab-sares,[d] Chief of the Eunuchs of King Sennacherib. He was sent with Rab-shakeh and Tartan, to summon Hezekiah to surrender. Rab-saris is not a proper Name, but a Name of Dignity.

RACA, or Racha; a Syriack Word, which properly signifies empty, vain, beggarly, foolish, and which includes in it a strong Idea of Contempt. Jesus Christ in the Gospel says, that whoever shall say to his Neighbour, Raca, shall be condemn'd by the Council or Sanhedrim. We read in the Hebrew Bible, that when Jephthah was driven away by his Brethren, he put himself at the Head of a Company of worthless People, of Rakim,[e] Men of desperate Fortunes. So Jeroboam the Son of Nebat assembled a Company of Rakim, Beggars, Sons of Belial. Lightfoot assures

1 Sam. xxx. 29. RACHAL, a City of the Tribe of Judah, whither David sent some of the Prey which he had taken from the Enemies, who had plunder'd Ziklag.

RACHEL, Daughter of Laban, and Sister of Leah. The Word Rachel signifies a Sheep. When Jacob fled from his Brother Esau's Resentment, he arrived in Mesopotamia, near the City of Haran or Charres; and finding some Shepherds there, he inquired if they knew Laban the Son of Nahor.[a] They answer'd him, We know him well, and there's his Daughter Rachel coming with the Flock. No sooner was Rachel come, but Jacob open'd the Well for her, water'd her Flock, embrac'd her, and told her he was the Son of Rebecca, Laban's Sister. Immediately Rachel ran home to her Father, and acquainted him with his Nephew's coming. Jacob was brought into Laban's House, and entertain'd there with great Civility; and when he had been there about a Month, Laban told him it was not fit he should serve him for nothing, and desir'd him to propose some Recompence, which he should be willing to give him. Jacob told him he would serve him seven Years, provided he would give him his younger Daughter Rachel in Marriage. Laban agreed to this, and the Day appointed for the Wedding being come, instead of Rachel, Laban put her elder Sister Leah in Bed to Jacob.

Jacob did not perceive the Trick that had been put upon him 'till the next Morning. Then he made bitter Complaints, and Laban could find no better Excuse for it than to tell him, that it was not the Custom of the Country to marry the younger Daughter before the elder: But if he was willing to serve him another seven Years, he should have Rachel also. This Jacob agreed to, and when the Week of Leah's Wedding was over, he marry'd Rachel. The Affection he had for Rachel made him have a kind of Indifference for Leah; but the Lord gave Children to Leah, and none to Rachel. This excited in her a great Gen. xxx. 1, 2, 3, &c. Aversion against her Sister; and she said to Jacob, Give me Children or else I die. Jacob with some Indignation made Answer; Do you take me for a God? Is it I that have made you barren? To which Rachel reply'd; Here is my Maid Bilhah, take her, that I may have Children by her. Jacob therefore taking Bilhah, she conceived and brought forth a Son, whom Rachel call'd Dan; saying, the Lord has judged me, and decided in my Favour. Bilhah had also another Son the Year following, to whom Rachel gave the Name of Naphthali.

One Day as Reuben, Leah's Son, returning home out of the Field, had brought to his Mother a certain Fruit call'd Dudaim, which is generally render'd by Mandrakes; Rachel said to Leah, Give me some of your Son's Mandrakes. Leah reply'd, Is it not enough that you take my Husband from me, but must you also take my Son's Mandrakes? Rachel tells her, that if she might have some of the Mandrakes, Jacob should be her's that Night. For it seems that Jacob divided his Favours equally among his Wives, as was the Custom of those Countries where Polygamy obtain'd. [b] At last the Lord remember'd Rachel; she conceived and brought forth a Son, whom she named Joseph, [c] saying, That the Lord shall still give me another Son. Some Years after [d] Jacob taking a Resolution to return into the Land of Canaan, Rachel unknown to Jacob, privately took away the Teraphim, or Domestick Gods, of her Father Laban.

See the Article Mandrakes.

See the Article Teraphim.

Jacob went away without acquainting his Father-in-law Laban with his Intention, and Laban knew nothing of it 'till three Days after his Departure. He then began his Pursuit after him, and overtook him after seven Days, upon the Mountains of Gilead. He reproach'd him very warmly with his clandestine Flight, and even used Threats, telling him, that if God had not warned him in a Dream not to do him any Violence, he should have made him repent of so rash a Resolution. To which he added, Why have you robb'd me of my Gods? Jacob being altogether ignorant that Rachel had done this thing, made him Answer; That whosoever the Gods should be found upon should be put to death, in Presence of all his Brethren. Examine every thing strictly, and take whatever you find belonging to you. Laban then began to search the Tents of Jacob, Leah, Bilhah, and Zilpah, without finding any thing. Then coming into Rachel's Tent, she hid the Teraphim under her Camel's Funiture, and sate down upon it. When her Father had searched every where and found nothing, she said to him; Let not my Lord be angry that I cannot rise in his Presence, for the common Infirmity of Women is now upon me. And thus she evaded her Father's Inquiry.

When Jacob had paſs'd over the Brook Jabok, he divided his Wives and Children into three Companies. He put the two Maids and their Children in the firſt Place; then Leah and her Children made the ſecond Company; and laſtly, Rachel and her Son Joſeph. This he did, that if Eſau ſhould do any Violence to the firſt Company, the ſecond and third might eſcape; or if he ſhould not ſpare the ſecond, that at leaſt the third might avoid his Fury. After he had paſs'd over Jordan, he went firſt to Salem, then to Shechem, and thence to Bethel, where he was to ſacrifice to God, who had appear'd to him at his going into Meſopotamia. Laſtly, as he advanced towards Hebron, and was not above a Furlong [a] from Bethlehem, otherwiſe call'd Ephrath, Rachel was ſeized with the Pains of Child-birth. She brought forth a Son, to whom ſhe gave the Name of Ben-oni, or the Son of my Pain; but Jacob gave him the Name of Benjamin, or the Son of my right Hand. Rachel's Pangs were ſo violent, that they kill'd her, and Jacob buried her in the ſame Place, erecting a Monument [b] for her, which continued for many Ages.

There is ſtill to be ſeen at this Day a kind of Pyramid or Dome, ſupported by four ſquare Pillars, which form as many Arches. This Monument is ſurrounded by a low Wall of three Foot high, with a little Entrance of three Steps. Cotovic ſays, that the Sepulchre is ſix Foot above the Ground, ſeven Foot long, and three and a half broad. The upper Part is round. On the two Sides of Rachel's Tomb there are two other empty ones. M. le Brun, who made a Draught of it on the Place, ſays this Tomb is cut in the Cavity of a Rock, and cover'd with a Dome, ſupported by four Pillars or Fragments of a Wall, which open to the Sepulchre. The Work is rude enough, and without any Ornament. The whole is as entire as if it had been but juſt made, and it is hard to imagine it has ſubſiſted ever ſince Jacob's time. But it may have been renew'd afterwards. Rachel died in the Year of the World 2265, or 2266; before Chriſt 1734, or 1755; before the vulgar Era 1738, or 1739.

Jer. xxxi. 15. Matth. ii. 18. The Prophet Jeremiah, and after him St. Matthew, have put Rachel for the Tribes of Ephraim and Manaſſeh, born from Joſeph the Son of Rachel. In Rama (or upon the high Places) was there a Voice heard, Lamentation and Weeping, and great Mourning, Rachel weeping for her Children, and would not be comforted becauſe they are not. This Prophecy was compleated when thoſe two Tribes were carried into Captivity beyond the Euphrates. St. Matthew has made an Application of this Prophecy to what happen'd at Bethlehem, when Herod put to death there all the Children of two Years old and under. Then Rachel, who was buried thereabouts, in ſome manner may be ſaid to make her Cries and Lamentations, for the Death of ſo many young Innocents, ſacrificed to the Jealouſy and the Cruelty of a diſtruſtful Prince.

RADDAI, the fifth Son of Jeſſe, and Brother of David. 1 Chron. ii. 14.

RAGABA, a very ſtrong Caſtle beyond Jordan. This is probably Argob, of which Mention is made in ſeveral Places of the Old Teſtament. [c] Euſebius places Argob in the Canton of Geraſa, fifteen Miles from it towards the Eaſt. Joſ. Antiq. l. 13. c. 23.

RAGAU, a large Plain wherein Nebuchadnezzar King of Nineveh, overcame Arphaxad King of the Medes, in the Country of Arioch King of the Elymeans. Theſe Plains of Ragau are probably thoſe that lie about Rages in Media, of which we ſhall preſently ſpeak. This Nebuchadnezzar that conquer'd Arphaxad, in our Opinion, is the Saoſduchim King of Aſſyria, who made War with Phraortes King of the Medes, in the Year of the World 3347, before Chriſt 653, before the vulgar Era 657. See the Preface to the Book of Judith. Judith i. 5, 6.

RAGES, or Ragæ, a City of Media, ſtanding upon the Mountains of Ecbatana. Tobit having depoſited the Sum of ten Talents with Gabael, a Citizen of Rages, or rather having lent it him, according to the Latin Vulgate, ſent his Son Tobias to fetch it. But he being obliged to ſtay ſome Time at Ecbatana, [d] to celebrate his Marriage with Sara the Daughter of Raguel; he deſired the Angel Raphael, whom he took only for a Man, to go to Gabael, and bring him the ten Talents; which Requeſt Raphael perform'd. Rages was a little Day's Journey from Ecbatana, and ſituate on the Southern Part of Media, in the Mountains that divide this Country from Parthia. Tob. i. 14.

I. RAGUEL, otherwiſe Jethro, Father-in-law to Moſes. See JETHRO.

II. RAGUEL, Father of Sara, and Father-in-law to young Tobias. He dwelt in the City of Ecbatana, and had a great Eſtate. But having given his Daughter Sara to ſeven Husbands ſucceſſively, the Evil Spirit had ſlain them all. However, Tobias coming to Ecbatana, the Angel Raphael urged him to demand Sara for Wife, and ſo much the rather, becauſe he was the neareſt Kinſman to Raguel, and therefore Tob. vi. 11—14.

Numb. xxxvi. 6. obliged to marry her, according to the Law. Raguel gave his Consent to this Marriage, though not without Difficulty, as fearing it might happen to him as it had happen'd to his Daughter's seven former Husbands. But the Lord preserving Tobias, Raguel kept him fifteen Days at his House, made great Feasts for all his Friends, gave him the Half of his Estate, and secured the other Half to him after his own death. [a]

I. RAHAB, an Hostess of the City of Jericho, who received into her House and concealed the Spies sent by Joshua to view the City. The Hebrew Text calls her Zona, [b] which St. Jerom and many others understand of a Woman of an ill Life. But others [c] think she was only an Hostess or Inn-keeper, and that this is the true Signification of the original Word. Had she been a Woman of ill Fame, would Salmon, a Prince of the Tribe of Juda, have taken her to Wife, or could he have done it by the Law? Besides, the Spies of Joshua would hardly have gone to lodge with a Prostitute, a common Harlot, they who were charged with so nice and dangerous a Commission. Those that maintain she was an Harlot pretend, that perhaps she was one of those Women that prostituted themselves in Honour of the Pagan Deities; as if this could any way extenuate her Crime, or the Scandal of her Profession, if it were true that she was a publick Woman.

But whatever was Rahab's Profession, the Spies of Joshua were no sooner entered her House, [d] but Notice was given of it to the King of Jericho, who sent to tell Rahab, that she must produce those Men Josh. ii. 3, 4, 5. that were come to her House. But she hid them, and told the Messengers, that it was true, indeed, such Men had been at her House, but she did not know from whence they came; and when the Gates of the City were shutting, they went out, and she could not tell whither they were gone. Pursue them quickly, she said, and you may overtake them. They forthwith pursued them, but in vain, for they were conceal'd upon the Terrass of Rahab's House.

When the King's Messengers were gone away, Rahab went up to the Terrass or Roof of her House, and said to the Israelites, I know the Lord has delivered this Country into your Hands, the Terror of your Name has seized us, and all our People are in a Consternation. Promise me therefore, that you will save the Lives of me and my Family, when you shall take Possession of this City. The Spies promis'd her with an Oath, and bid her tie a scarlet String to her Window, that her House might be distinguished when the Israelites should enter into Jericho. If we should touch any one that belongs to you, added they, which shall be then in your House, his Blood be upon us; but if they are without, their Blood shall fall upon their own Heads, and we will be blameless.

Having obtained these Promises, she let them down by a Rope that she fastened to her Window; for her House joined to the Walls of the City. She advised them to return by the Way of the Mountains, for fear of meeting those that had been sent in quest of them; and to continue upon the Mountains for three Days, in which time the Messengers would return, after which they might proceed on their Way. The Spies followed Rahab's Counsel exactly, and at the End of three Days arrived at Joshua's Camp, to whom they related all they had discovered at Jericho, which had happened to themselves, and the Promises they had made to their Benefactress Rahab. Some time after this, when the People for six Days had made a Circuit round Jericho with much Silence, Joshua commanded all Israel to make a Tour the seventh Time, and when the Priests sounded the Trumpets, Josh. vi. 16, 17.
to cast forth a very loud Cry. To which he added, that the whole City, and whatever was found therein, was to be utterly extirpated; only Rahab and those that were found in her House, should have their Lives saved.

Joshua's Orders were duly executed. The Walls fell down at the Cry of the Hebrews, and the City was taken and destroyed. Joshua sent the two Spies to the House of Rahab, to bring her out with all her Relations, that they might be secured from all Violence. As soon as they were come out, Joshua put fire to the City, and cursed him that should undertake to rebuild it. Rahab married Salmon, a Prince of Judah, by whom she had Boaz. Boaz was Father to Obed, and Obed to Jesse, the Father of King David. And again, Psalm lxxxix. 10. Thou hast broken Rahab in pieces, or the Egyptian. Isaiah li. 9. and xxx. 7. makes use of the same Word Rahab to mark out the Destruction of Pharaoh and his Army in the Red Sea.

See also Job xxvi. 12. By his Understanding he smiteth through the Proud; the Hebrew says, Rahab. The most skilful Commentators [a] explain this of Egypt, and particularly of that Part of Lower Egypt which is called Delta, because of its Likeness to the Letter Δ, making a Kind of Triangle, whose Base is the Mediterranean Sea. This Part of Egypt is still called Rib or Rif, the Pear, because of its Similitude to the Shape of this Fruit. M. d'Herbelot says, in his Bibliotheca Orientalis, that the Name Rif, is given to that Part of Egypt, which begins at Cairo, and stretches out towards the North: And that the Arabians call by the Name of Giouf, that Part of the same Country which the Greeks call Delta, and which contains all the Country enclosed by the Nile, till it empties itself into the Mediterranean Sea.

St. Jerom and the antient Greek Interpreters have often translated Rahab by Pride, or the Proud. But the Fathers, and such Interpreters [b] who have not consulted the Original, have understood by Rahab, no other than the Woman of Jericho, of whom we have spoke in the foregoing Article.

RAHAM, Son of Shema, and Father of Jorkoam, of the Race of Caleb. 1 Chron. ii. 44.

RAIN. It should seem by some Expressions of the Scripture, that the antient Hebrews imagin'd the Rain to be derived from certain great Reservatories, which they supposed to be above the Heavens, and which Moses calls the superior Waters, by way of Contradistinction from the inferior Waters, which are those of the Sea. For Example, Moses says, that at the Time of the Deluge, the Rain did not fall according to the ordinary Course of Nature, but that the Cataracts of Heaven were set open. [c] All the Fountains of the great Deep were broken up, and the Windows of Heaven were opened. And Hosea says, that in times of great Drought the Clouds cry to the Lord, beseeching him to permit the Waters which he keeps in his Treasuries and Repositories, to fall into them and replenish them. In other Places of Scripture, [d] the Clouds are described to us as great Bags or Bottles, filled with the Waters that are supply'd to them from the Firmament. Even the Dews themselves are represented as proceeding from the superior Waters. His Heavens shall drop down Dew.

(Hos. ii. 21. Deut. xxxiii. 28.)

The Sacred Writers often speak of the Rain of the former Season, and of the Rain of the latter Season: Imber temporaneus, & Imber serotinus. I will give you the Rain of your Land in his due Season, the first Rain and the latter Rain. So Hosea, He shall come unto us as the Rain, as the latter and former Rain unto the Earth. The Rabbins, and the Generality of Interpreters are of Opinion, that the former Rain, pluvia temporanea, called in Hebrew, Jorah, signifies the Rain of the Autumn; and that the latter Rain, pluvia serotina, called in the Hebrew, Malchush, signifies the Rain of the Spring-season. 'Tis known that the Jews began their Year at Autumn, which gives some Probability to their Opinion, who suppose the pluvia temporanea to signify the Rain that falls in Autumn. But on the contrary, we think that Jorah signifies the Rain of the Spring, and Malchush that of the Autumn. In Judea it commonly rained but in two Seasons, in the Spring and in the Autumn. Jorah is always put first, and Malchush afterwards. The natural Order of the Season is, that the Spring should come before the Autumn. Malchush is derived from the Verb Lakash, which signifies to make a Vintage, to delay, to put off, to gather in the After-marth, or the Grass that grows in the Meadows in the latter Season. Besides, Malchush signifies a Rain that is (as it were) earnestly desired by the Earth, as coming after the dry Season of the Summer. Joel says, He will cause to come down for you the Rain, the former Rain, and the latter Rain in the first Month. But if Malchush signifies the Rain of the Autumn, it will be easily granted, that Jorah must signify that of the Spring. The Septuagint [e] have taken it in the Sense we now contend for: And Hesiod [f] has express'd the Rain of the Spring and Autumn in Words of the same import, as those made use of by the Septuagint.

(Deut. xi. 14. Hos. vi. 3. יורה Jorah. מלקוש Malchush. Job xxix. 23. Prov. xvi. 15. Hos. vi. 3. Joel ii. 23.)

Moses describing the Land of Canaan, the Advantages of which he compares to those of Egypt, says, that the Land of Canaan is not like that of Egypt, where they are obliged to convey the Water by artificial Canals, and by great Labour and Industry, to water the Fields and the Gardens. For it never rains in this Country; whereas Palestine being a Country of Hills and Vales, is watered by the Rains from Heaven. Sed montuosa est & campestris, de cœlo expectans pluvias. We have already described, under the Article Foot, the Manner in which they water the Soil of Egypt, to which the Inundations of the Nile cannot arrive. As to the Land of Canaan, 'tis well known that it is water'd by copious Dews in the Summer, and by Showers of Rain in the Spring and Autumn. Whence it is that God promised the Israelites, if they will continue obedient to his Commands, that he would send them Rain in due Season. Dabo vobis pluvias temporibus suis. (Lev. xxvi. 3.) And on the other hand, Moses threatens them, if they depart from that Fidelity that they owe to God, to send them Showers of Sand and Dust. Det dominus imbrem terræ tuæ pulverem; (Deuteron. xxviii. 24.) Showers that will be more apt to dry up and burn, than to refresh the Earth.

Israelites,

The Hebrews often compare Speech and Discourse to Rain. Concrescat ut pluvia doctrina mea. (Deuteron. xxxii. 2.) And Ecclesiasticus, Tanquam imbres (sapiens) mittet eloquia sapientiæ suæ. (Ecclus. xxxix. 9.) Job says, that in the Time of his Prosperity, he was attended to with great Respect and Eagerness; that his Discourse distilled like soft Rain. Super illos stillabat eloquium meum. (Job xxix. 21, 22, 23.) That they expected it like Rain, and opened their Mouths as it were to receive the Rains of the latter Season. Expectabant me sicut pluviam, & os suum aperiebant quasi ad imbrem serotinum.

The Psalmist and Jeremiah observe, as an Effect of the Power of God, that he changes Lightning into Rain. (Psalm cxxxv. 7. Jer. x. 13. & li. 16.) Fulgura in pluviam facit. Lightning goes before Thunder and Rain; and when we perceive Lightning, and hear a fresh Clap of Thunder during a Storm, we conclude that the Shower will soon come. This is easy to be apply'd. Lightning and Thunder are produced only by the Shock of Clouds one against another; and the same Shock is the Cause of Rain also. The Prophet therefore may observe here, it is as it were the Fore-runner, and the natural Token of Rain. Perhaps also the People might be of Opinion, that Lightning was changed into Rain, or produced it as a Cause. Some understand it thus: God by his Power unites Lightning with Rain, Fire with Water; things which are naturally incompatible. (Chrysost. Theodor. Heraclit. Theodor. in Psalm.)

I. RAM, Son of Hezron, and Father of Aminadab, of the Tribe of Judah. 1 Chron. ii. 9.

II. RAM. Job xxxii. 2. Then was kindled the Wrath of Elihu, the Son of Barachel, the Buzite, of the Kindred of Ram. In this Place Ram is apparently put for Aram. Elihu was of the Race of Buz, Son of Nahor the Aramean, or Syrian.

RAM, or battering Ram. This is a well-known Engine of War. 'Tis mentioned by Ezekiel in two Passages, and Nebuchadnezzar made use of it at the Siege of Jerusalem. (Ezek. iv. 1, 2. & xxi. 22.) Pliny says, it was Epeus that invented the Ram at the Siege of Troy: (Plin. l. 7. c. 56.) But Vitruvius and Tertullian ascribe the Invention to the Carthaginians. (Vitruv. l. x. c. 19. Tertul. de Pallio.) I believe Ezekiel is the earliest Author that has made any mention of this Machine.

RAMAH, or Aramah; this Word signifies an Eminence, from whence it is that there are so many Places in Palestine, that go by the Name of Rama, Ramath, Ramatha, Ramoth, Ramathaim, Romola, and Ramathan. Sometimes the same Place shall be called at once Rama, Ramatha, Ramoth, and Ramathaim, all these Words only signifying an Eminence or high Situation. Sometimes Rama or Ramoth is joined to another Name, to determine the Place of such City or Eminence. Lastly, Ramah is sometimes put only for a high Place, and signifies neither City nor Village. These following are the chief Places that are mentioned in Scripture by the Name Ramah.

I. RAMAH, a City of Benjamin, situate between Gaba and Bethel, towards the Mountains of Ephraim, six Miles distant from Jerusalem towards the North. (Josh. xviii. 25. Judg. iv. 5. & xix. 3. Euseb. in locis.) Saint Jerom places it near Gaba, seven Miles from Jerusalem: (Hieron. in Osee v. Idem in Sophon. 1.) It was still in being in his Time, and was then only a small Village. This City stood upon the Road that went from Samaria to Jerusalem; (1 Kings xv. 17. 2 Chron. xvi. 1.) whence it was that Baasha King of Israel caus'd it to be fortify'd, that there might be no Passage out of the Land of Judah into that of Israel. (Joseph. Antiq. l. 8. c. 6.) Josephus calls it Ramathan.

I make no doubt but that this is the same as Ramatha, or Ramathaim-zophim, the Country of the Prophet Samuel. (1 Sam. i. 1, 19. & ii. 11, &c.) This City was on the Frontiers of Ephraim and Benjamin; and these Sorts of Cities were often inhabited by Men of both the Tribes. Rama, Ramath, and Ramathaim, may express but one and the same Place. The other Ramah, or Ramula, thought to be the Country of Samuel, cannot be so; as will be seen afterwards.

'Tis also very probable that Jeremiah speaks of this Ramah, when he says, that Nebuzar-adan, who had the Command of the Chaldean Army, having found him among the Captives at Ramah, whither they had been all brought together, set him at Liberty, and permitted him to go where-ever he pleas'd. (Jer. xl. 1, 2, 3.) And 'tis of the same Place that we explain that other Prophecy of Jeremiah, wherein the Lord comforts Rachel, for the taking away of her Children of the Tribes of Ephraim and Manasseh, which had been carried into Captivity: (Jer. xxxi. 15, 16, 17.) A Voice was heard in Ramah, Lamentation and bitter weeping: Rachel weeping weeping for her Children, refused to be comforted for her Children, because they were not. Thus saith the Lord, Refrain thy Voice from Weeping, and thine Eyes from Tears: for thy Work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord, and they shall come again from the Land of the Enemy. And there is Hope in thine End, saith the Lord, that thy Children shall come again to their own Border. St. Matthew hath made an Application of this Passage of the Mourning of Rahel or Rachel, to the Massacre of the Infants of Bethlehem by Herod. But it is plain, that That was not the literal and historical Sense of this Passage of Jeremiah.

Matth. ii. 18.

The Scripture often joins Ramah with Gaba, Geba, or Gibeah, as being two neighbouring Places: So Ezra ii. 26. Nehem. vii. 30. Isai. x. 29. Hosea v. 8. We also see, 1 Sam. xxii. 6. that when Saul abode in Gibeah, and sate under a Tree at Ramah, that he was inform'd of David's having been seen in the Forest of Haresh: But in this Place we take Ramah only to signify the Eminence that was at Gibeah.

II. RAMAH, or Ramatha, Ramola, Ramula, Ramba, Ruma, or Remphtis, a City lying to the West of Jerusalem, between Lydda and Joppa, as St. Jerom places it; or between Joppa and Jerusalem, as the modern Travellers describe it. Phocas puts it about six and thirty Miles from Jerusalem. Heretofore, near this Place, and towards Lydda, was to be seen the neat Church of St. George, with a Monastery bearing his Name, wherein the Body of this Saint and Martyr was deposited. Abulfeda, quoted by M. Reland, says, that this City was built by Solyman Son of Abdolmelic, after the Destruction of Lydda; and Sanutus also says, that the Arabians built it near Lydda, after the Crusadoes began to come into that Country. M. le Brun describes the fine Reservoirs of Water to be seen there, and many other Marks of Antiquity: He says it is but four Leagues from Jafa, or Joppa, and stands in a plain and even Country: He says also, that Lydda is on one Side, and about three Miles from Rama.

Hieron. in Epitaph. Paulæ. Le Brun, p. 251. Bernard. Monach. Itin. an. 870. Reland. Palæst. l. 3. p. 950. Sanut. in secretis fidel. crucis, p. 152.

These Circumstances determine me to think that this is the same Place that Eusebius and St. Jerom took for Arimathea, the Country of Joseph of Arimathea, so well known in the Gospel. St. Jerom places it between Lydda and Joppa: And Eusebius says it is in the Canton of Thamnis, and near to Diospolis, otherwise call'd Lydda. This is the same that was taken from Samaria, and added to Judea. See 1 Mac. xi. 34. and Josephus's Antiquities, l. 13. c. 8. p. 438. But if this be so, we must acknowledge this City to have been very ancient, and to have been in being long before our Saviour's time: And, consequently, when it is said, that it was built only since the Time of the Crusadoes, it must be understood only to have been then rebuilt, repair'd, or fortify'd anew. Eusebius and some others seem to have thought, that this City is the same as Ramath of Samuel, or Ramathaim-zophim of the Mountains of Ephraim. But this Opinion cannot be supported by any means.

Euseb. in 'Αριμαθαίμ. Hieron. in Epitaph. Paulæ. Matt. xvii. 57. Euseb. & Hieron. in Armatha-sophim.

III. RAMA, or Ramatha. Phocas says, in his Travels, that Ramah, or Armath, where the Great Samuel was born, was to be seen at about six Miles from Jerusalem, towards the West. Le Brun says, that going from Ramah in order to come to Jerusalem, he pass'd through Cobeb, Benop, Carith-leneb, Soud, Souba, and Samuel; which is a Church upon a Hill, where, they say, heretofore was the City of Samuel. But this City of Samuel was to the North, and not to the West, from Jerusalem, in the Mountains of Ephraim, and not in those of Judah. See the Article of ARIMATHEA.

IV. RAMA, a City of the Tribe of Naphtali, Josh. xix. 36. upon the Frontiers of Asher, Josh. xix. 29. St. Jerom read Horma in the Hebrew; but the Septuagint and Eusebius read Rama. The same Eusebius and Cyrillus of Jerusalem, upon Zechariah, p. 805, own there was a Rama in the Tribe of Asher, and another belonging to Napthtali.

RAMATH-LEHI, or Ramat-lechi, or the Height of the Jaw-bone, or the Cast of the Jaw-bone. 'Twas thus they call'd the Place where Samson threw the Jaw-bone upon the Ground, that he had taken up against the Philistines, and with which he had beat them. Probably, this is the same as the Place call'd Lehi, Judg. xv. 9.

RAMESSES, or Ramessê. Several Kings of Egypt are known by the Name of Ramesses. Syncellus reckons up six of 'em; viz.

Syncel. Chronic. p. 101, 103.

I. RAMESSES, the Successor of Uses, who reigned nine and twenty Years.

II. RAMESSE-MENES, fifteen Years.

III. RAMESSE-SEOS, three and twenty Years.

IV. RAMESSE-MENOS, nineteen Years.

V. RAMESSE-TUBAETE, nine and thirty Years.

VI. RAMESSE-VAPHRES, nine and twenty Years.

All these Princes reign'd successively; only between the second and third there was one call'd Thusimares. The same Syncellus speaks elsewhere of another Ramessês, whom he places between Armais and Amenophis, Kings of Egypt; and also of one call'd Rhampsis, whom he places between Kertos and Amenemes.

Manetho speaks of Ramessès or Armessès, and of Ramessès Miamum Predecessor of Amenophis. We have already taken notice elsewhere, that the Chronology of the ancient Kings of Egypt was very perplex'd; and that very little was known of the Actions of those Princes. Usher places the Reign of Ramessès, the Successor of Armais, in the Year of the World 2426, before Christ 1574, before the Vulgar Era 1578. He reigned but a Year and four Months; and Ramessès Miamum succeeded him, in the Year of the World 2427, and reigned sixty-six Years and two Months. His Successor was Amenophis. Usher thinks that Ramessès was that new King who oppress'd the Israelites in Egypt, and who knew not the Services that Joseph had done that Country. 'Twas he that caus'd to be built the Cities of Phitom and Ramessès, and that pursued the Israelites into the Red-Sea, where he was drowned, with all his Army.

Exod. i. 8. Exod. i. 11. Exod. xiv. 28.

Marsham places this Ramessès in the sixteenth Age of the Egyptian Era; which answers to the Reigns of Joash, Amasiah, Azariah, Jothan, and Ahaz, Kings of Judah. He thinks it was he that caus'd to be made the famous Obelisk mention'd by Pliny, Hermapion, and Ammianus Marcellinus, and which is still to be seen at Rome, before the Church of Lateran. The magnificent Encomiums of this Prince, which are read upon this Obelisk in hieroglyphical Characters, and the Empire of the World ascribed to him, cannot agree, according to Marsham, to any other than a Successor of Sesostris, whom he thinks to be much later than Moses's time.

Plin. l. 36. c. 8. Hermap. apud Ammianum. Marcel. l. 17. Ammian. Marcel. l. 17.

Pliny says, that Ramessès who caus'd the great Obelisk to be made, which we have now mention'd, reign'd in Egypt at the time of the Taking of Troy. Ramises quo regnante Ilium captum est. That this Obelisk was ninety-nine Foot high, and four Foot wide; That twenty thousand Men were employ'd to cut it: And that when it was rais'd in the City of Heliopolis, in order to excite the Care and Diligence of the Workmen, the King fix'd his own Son upon the Top of the Spire, that they might raise it with the greater Caution and Circumspection, for fear of killing the young Prince.

Plin. l. 36. c. 8.

When Cambyses King of Persia put Fire to the City of Heliopolis, he was moved with the Beauty of this Monument, and caus'd the Flames to be extinguish'd when they approach'd the Foot of this Obelisk. The Emperor Augustus, tho' he caus'd two others to be brought from Egypt to Rome, yet he durst not attempt to meddle with this. Constantine the Great resolved to remove it from the Place where it was, in order to bring it to Rome; but being surpriz'd by Death before he could accomplish his Design, the Obelisk was brought no farther than Alexandria. The Emperor Constantius, his Son, had it brought to Rome, and placed it in the great Circus. It is not known how long it continu'd there, nor when it was thrown down; but Sixtus V. having taken it out of the Ground, and having repair'd it as far as possible, erected it in the Year 1588, before the Portal of the Church of Lateran, where it is still at this Day.

RAMLA a City of Palestine, on the Road from Joppa to Jerusalem. See II. Ramah. This City was formerly very magnificent, and surrounded by strong Walls. We are assured, that the House there which is the ordinary Residence of Pilgrims, belong'd to Nicodemus a private Disciple of Jesus Christ. There are still to be seen two fine Churches, which at present are reduced to Mosques; one dedicated to St. John, and the other to the Holy Virgin, under the Name of the forty Martyrs, whose Bodies were brought from Sebaste in Armenia. About three Miles from thence are to be seen the Ruines of the ancient Lydda, very well known afterwards by the Name of Diospolis. This City belong'd to the three Toparchies added to Judea: It is celebrated for the Miracle of St. Peter, who there cured Eneas of his Palsy. At present it is only a small Village. The only Thing there worth Observation, is a Church of St. George, which seems to have been a pretty good one. The Mussulmen pay a great Reverence to the Tomb of Locman the Wise, near this Place; and the Sepulchres of the Seventy Prophets, who, they believe, were buried there.

RAMOTH, a famous City in the Mountains of Gilead. It is often call'd Ramoth-gilead; sometimes only Ramoth; and sometimes Ramath-mizpeh, or the Watch-tower *. Josephus calls it Ramathan, or Aramatha. This City belonged to the Tribe of Gad. It was assigned for an Habitation to the Levites, and was one of the Cities of Refuge beyond Jordan. It became famous during the Reigns of the later Kings of Israel, and was the Occasion of several Wars between these Princes and the Kings of Damascus, who had made a Conquest of it, and from whom the Kings of Israel, who laid claim to it, endeavour'd to regain it. Jehoram King of Judah was dangerously wounded at the Siege of this Place:

II. RAPHA, or Rephaiah, Son of Binea, of the Tribe of Benjamin. 1 Chron. viii. 37.

RAPHAEL, one of the seven Arch-Angels which are continually before the Throne of God, and are always at Hand to perform his Commands. The Name of the Angel Raphael is not found in Scripture, but only in the History of Tobit. (Tob. xii. 15.) It is not mention'd in the New Testament; and, in general, the Names of the Angels do not appear to have been known before the Captivity of Babylon. Tobit the Father having lent, or, according to the Greek Text, having only deposited, the Sum of ten Talents with a Jew call'd Gabael, resolved, in his old Age, to send his young Son Tobias to fetch this Money [a]. As Tobias, therefore, was seeking a Guide to conduct him from Nineveh to Rages a City of Media, he happily found an Angel, who having assum'd an human Form, offer'd himself, for a Drachma a Day, and his Food, [b] to conduct him safe to Rages, and to bring him back again to Nineveh. This holy Guide took the Name of Azarias, he eat and drank with Tobias during the whole Journey, and did nothing that could give him any Suspicion of his being an Angel.

They departed from Nineveh; and when they came to their Lodging upon the Banks of the River Tigris, Tobias went to wash his Feet in the River; when a great Fish made up to him, as if it intended to devour him. But Raphael bid him to seize it by the Fins, draw it to Land, cut it up, and take out the Heart, Gall, and Liver, which he was to reserve for an Use (Tob. vi. 1, 2, 3.) he would acquaint him with hereafter. When they came near to Ecbatana, Raphael (Tob. vi. 10, 11, 12.) said to Tobias; In this City dwells one call'd Raguel, who has an only Daughter whom you ought to marry, according to the Law; for you are her nearest Kinsman, and she is the only Heiress of the Goods of her Father. Tobias inform'd him, that he had heard this young Woman had already had seven Husbands, who had all been put to Death by an Evil Spirit. Raphael bid him take Courage, and told him, The Devil could have no Power over those, that enter'd into the State of Matrimony in the Fear of the Lord; That, besides, he had a sure Remedy against all Evil Spirits, in the Heart of the Fish he had about him; for he need but broil it on the Fire, and they would presently be put to flight.

They went therefore to Raguel's House; (Tob. vii. 1, 2, 3, &c.) and Tobias marry'd Sara. And by observing the Direction of Raphael he was secured from all Misfortunes, the Devil that had (in a manner) besieged Sara, being banish'd into the higher Egypt. While the Days of the Marriage were celebrating, Tobias desired Raphael to go to Gabael, and (Tob. ix. 1, 2, 3, &c.) to take up the Money out of his Hands, which was the chief Occasion of their Journey. Raphael accordingly went to Rages, and brought the Money to Ecbatana. After the Ceremony of the Marriage was over, Tobias and his Spouse took their leaves, in order to return to his Father at Nineveh. But when they came to Haran, in the midst of their Journey, Raphael persuaded Tobias to go before, to deliver his Father (Tob. xi.) and Mother from their Impatience, who were much grieved because of his long Absence. They went therefore together, and being arrived at Nineveh with old Tobit, who was blind; after the first Salutations were over, Tobias, by the Advice of Raphael, put upon his Father's Eyes the Gall of the Fish he had taken, by which in half an Hour's time the old Man recover'd his Sight again.

After this was over, they both apply'd themselves to Raphael, whom they took still for a Man, and desir'd him, that he (Tob. xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.) would accept of half of their Substance, as a Recompence for the great Services he had done them. Then Raphael told them in private, that they must give Thanks to God the Author of all their good Fortune. When you gave Alms, said he, and when you buried the Dead, I presented your Prayers to the Lord; and because you were acceptable in his Eyes, he brought you into Temptation in order to prove you. Now therefore the Lord has sent me to cure you, and to deliver Sara your Son's Wife from the Power of the Devil; for I am the Angel Raphael, one of the seven that are always before the Lord. Bless him therefore, and sing his Praises. It seem'd to you that I eat and drank with you; but as for me, I am fed with an invisible Food. I must now return to him that sent me. Having said this, he vanish'd out of their Sight. The Story of Tobit and Tobias may be further seen under their Articles.

[a] Tob. v. 5, 6, 7, &c. In the Year of the World 3322, before Christ 678, before the Vulgar Era 682. [b] The Vulgate makes no mention of this Bargain; but the old Hebrew, Greek, and Latin Texts take notice of it. The Roman Drachma or Denarius was about Seven pence three farthings of our Money.

The Word Raphael fignifies the Remedy of God, or the Phyfick of God; and nothing could agree better to the Part acted by the Angel on this Occafion, and to the Defign of God in fending him to Tobias and Sara, than the Name of the Phyfician of God.

He calls himfelf Azarias Son of Ananias the Great; and Tobit, who knew this Family, faid he was of an illuftrious Birth. The Hebrew, Greek, and Syriack Texts of this Paffage have it thus. My Brother, you are of a good and honeft Family, for I know Ananias and Joathan, Sons of the illuftrious Shemeias. We went together to worfhip the Lord at Jerufalem, to offer our Firft-fruits and Tenths of all our Fruits. They have not fallen into the Irregularities of their Brethren. You are of an illuftrious Race, my Brother.

It has been Matter of Inquiry, whether in all this Raphael did not tell a Lye? It fhould feem, that it cannot be deny'd but that he muft have told an Untruth, fince certainly he was neither Azarias, nor the Son of Ananias, nor an Ifraelite, nor, in a Word, was he a Man as he appear'd to be. [Vide Gataker, l. 1. contr. Edmund. Campian. p. 77.] He fpeaks contrary to his own Thoughts, and againft his own Knowledge; he made Tobias believe what was contrary to the Truth; he has in fome fort deceived him, and all that took him for an human Guide. But the Commentators [a] generally acquit him of Lying. He was fent of God, to conduct young Tobias, under the Shape of a young Man call'd Azarias; he was therefore to act and fpeak like him, and in his Name. The Angels that appear'd to the Patriarchs, and to Mofes, have fpoke and acted as if it were God himfelf, becaufe God fent them to reprefent his own Perfon. An Actor in a Tragedy that reprefents Cyrus, fays, without lying, that he is Cyrus. Befides, fupernatural Actions, fuch as are here in queftion, are not fubject to the common and ordinary Rules, but are of an higher Order and Character; they are figurative and myfterious, they have none of the Qualities effential to a Lye, confider'd as an Action purely human, moral, and contrary to Truth and Juftice.

'Tis inquired alfo how Raphael eat and drank? whether he did really eat and drink, or whether in Appearance only? The Opinions of Men are divided upon this Queftion. Some maintain that he did not drink, and Raphael feems exprefs for this Opinion, when he fays, It feemed to you that I eat and drank with you; but as for me, I am fed with invifible Food. Therefore he only feem'd to eat, and the Senfes of Tobias and the reft were impofed upon, when they thought he took Nourifhment, whereas really he took none. Others [b] pretend, that fuch Angels as have appear'd to Men have really eaten. Juftin Martyr [c] makes no Difficulty of it, fince in Heaven the bleffed Spirits are fed, as he fays, with the Bread of Angels, as the Scripture fpeaks. [Dialog. cum Tryphon.] Tertullian alfo acknowledges, that Angels having appear'd cloath'd with natural Flefh, may alfo have eaten really and naturally. [Tertul. cont. Marcion. l. 3. c. 9.]

St. Auftin [d] puts no other Difference between the eating of Men and Angels, excepting that we eat out of Neceffity, to repair our Strength and to fupport ourfelves; whereas Angels have no Occafion to eat. He thinks that when Raphael faid to Tobias, It feemed to you that I eat and drank, he does not deny his eating and drinking; but he means, that it feem'd to them, as if he eat and drank out of Neceffity, whereas he only did it becaufe he had a Mind to do it. 'Twas thus that our Saviour eat and drank after his Refurrection. But it may be ask'd, What became of that Nourifhment that the Angels took in their feveral Appearances, and that Jefus Chrift took after his Refurrection? why, it was difpers'd by Tranfpiration, by Rarefaction, and by other Ways unknown to us; but was not converted into the Subftance of thofe that took it. [Grot. Menoch. Juft. in Tob. xii.]

RAPHAIM, or Rephaim. This Word is appropriated to thofe Giants, who lived in the Holy Land before the Arrival of the Hebrews in that Country. There are fome Paffages of Scripture, wherein this Term is tranflated by Phyficians. For Example, [Pf. lxxxvii. 11.] Numquid mortuis facies mirabilia, aut medici fufcitabunt & confitebuntur tibi. The Hebrew has, Wilt thou make thy Miracles to difplay themfelves among the Dead, and fhall the Rephaim arife to declare thy Praife? But St. Jerome commonly tranflates this Word by Gigantes, Giants, and the Scripture often mentions Hell where the Rephaim groan, and whither the Wicked, the Impious, and the Shamelefs defcend. See the Article GIANTS.

RAPHANEA, a City of Syria, between which and Arca, or Arac, a City of Judea belonging to the Kingdom of Agrippa, the Sabbatical River flow'd, which we fhall fpeak of in its Place. RAPHIA, a famous City upon the Mediterranean Sea, between Gaza and Rhinocorura. I do not find its Name in the Books of the Old Teftament, which is pretty remarkable, except it be the City of Gath, which belong'd to the Rephaim; [1 Chron. xx. 6.] from whence perhaps it might have its Name Raphia or Rapheia. Gath could not be far from thence. Raphia is famous for the Victory that Philopator King of Egypt obtain'd here, over Antiochus the Great, King of Syria. [a] Josephus says, that Raphia was taken by King Alexander Janneus, and that having been ruin'd in the Wars, it was repair'd by Gabinius. The same Josephus and Polybius put Raphia as the first City of Syria, that is met with on the Road from Egypt. There are found some antient Medals that have been struck at Raphia, and some Bishops of this City are found in the Lists of the Eastern Councils.

RAPHON, a City beyond Jordan, upon a Brook, not far from Carnaim.

This City is hardly known in Scripture, but by the Victory of Judas Maccabeus over Timotheus. After the Defeat of his Army before the Fortress of Dathman, he assembled a new Army, composed of Arabians, and what other People he could get, to the Number of six-score thousand Foot, and two thousand five hundred Horse. And having sent the Women and Children, and all the Baggage, into the City of Carnion, or Ashteroth-Carnaim, which was a Place beyond Jordan of very difficult Access, he encamped at Raphon, or perhaps Saphon, beyond and to the North of the Brook Jabbok.

1 Macc. xii. 20.

Judas had then but six thousand effective Men: He sent to observe the Enemies Army, and Word was brought him, that it was very numerous, and consisted of all the neighbouring Nations; and that Timotheus was preparing to come to attack him. Judas presently march'd to meet him, and pass'd over the Brook at the Head of his little Army. The Enemy was so surpriz'd at this bold Attempt, that they could not stand the Assault, but fled with great Precipitation.

Ibid.

Observations on the Passage of the Brook Jabbok, and the Defeat of Timotheus near Raphon, by Judas Maccabeus.

1 Macc. v. 37, 38, &c. 2 Macc. xii. 20, 21, &c.

We may observe a surprizing Boldness and Intrepidity in all the Exploits of Judas Maccabeus, and an admirable Conduct in the Execution of them; not only to avoid the Stratagems of his Enemy, but even to make them fatal to themselves. Judas had no sooner Notice that Timotheus had raised a new Army, and that he was posted near Raphon, beyond the Brook Jabbok, but he sent to get Intelligence of this Army; and he was acquainted, that all the Nations round about had repair'd to Timotheus, and made up an extraordinary Army. And so it was indeed, in comparison of that of Judas, since the sacred Author says, that Maccabeus ranged his Army about him, which consisted of six thousand Men, and having divided them into Bands, he marched against Timotheus, who had six-score thousand Foot, and two thousand five hundred Horse. The Number of his Enemies does not dishearten him; he hears they are preparing to come to attack him, he does not think proper to stay so long for them, but resolves to prevent them, and to take the Field before them: And this Resolution makes him appear more formidable to his Enemies.

Timotheus, who was well acquainted with Judas's Valour, seems to have foreseen what would happen; and what he said to the principal Officers of his Army, leaves us no room to doubt of his Cowardice, and the little Bravery he shew'd at the Head of so numerous an Army. When Judas, says he, shall come with his People near the Brook, if he comes over to us first, we shall not be able to oppose his Efforts, because he will have all the Advantage over us. But if he is cautious of passing, and encamps on the other Side the River, let us go over to him and beat him. The learned Commentator says upon this, "That Timotheus intended to draw a Presage of his future Victory, or of his Defeat, from the free Motion of his Enemies, which of all Things in the World is the most uncertain, and the most superstitious." I shall make Answer to this, that there is no Superstition in it, and that every Day's Experience may teach us, that a skilful and prudent General may easily foresee, without being a Prophet, and without being tainted with Superstition, that if the Enemy takes such or such a Step, if he makes such a Motion, he may be beaten; but if he does the contrary, he is assured of Victory. Sometimes dangerous Expedients are resolved on, with a Notion that an unskilful Adversary will not perceive it, and in this one may be mistaken: So that here is an Uncertainty. Often the wisest Measures, built upon the nicest Rules of War, are frustrated by contrary Management, and Methods that were not expected. Because it was not imagin'd, that the Enemy was capable of putting them in Practice, which he often does by Chance, and without Design. M. de Turenne has acknowledged, that upon some Occasions he found himself more perplex'd against an ignorant General, than against one that was very knowing and skilful. But when we are well acquainted with the Genius and Capacity of our Antagonist, we take our Measures against him accordingly, and may be too hard for him, when-ever he makes an Attempt. The second Reflection of the Commentator seems to me more just than the former. "It muſt, however, be acknow-"ledged, ſays he, that Timotheus takes a "thing for a Preſage of his Victory, which "muſt ſhew a kind of Timorouſneſs in "the Troops of Judas." If he comes over the Brook we ſhall be beaten; but if he is afraid to paſs it, then we ſhall beat him. If this General had had more Courage, he would not have contented himſelf to ſtay beyond the Brook, with ſuch ſuperiour Forces; nothing would have hinder'd him from going over and meeting Judas, whom doubtleſs he might have ſurrounded; but he ſtay'd for him on the other Side, and was beaten, and that perhaps by his own Miſcarriage, that is, by hindering his General Officers of that Victory they might have obtain'd.

Now when Judas came near the Brook, ſays the ſacred Author, he cauſed the Scribes of the People to remain by the Brook, unto whom he gave Commandment, ſaying; Suffer no Man to remain in the Camp, but let all come to the Battle. 'Tis very likely Judas might apprehend, that there were timorous People in his Army, who were diſcouraged at the great Number of the Enemy, for which Reaſon he gave out theſe Orders. Without doubt the Brook was fordable, and Judas having divided his ſix thouſand Men into Companies, under different Captains, that is to ſay, into ſeveral Corps, of a conſiderable Depth according to Cuſtom, ſo he went firſt over unto them, and all the People after him. Judas might be accuſed of Raſhneſs, in venturing to paſs over a River with ſo few Troops, in the View of an Army of an hundred and twenty-two thouſand Men; if we were not aſſured that he put his whole Strength and his whole Truſt in the Lord, for his Protection, and that having ſuch an invincible Support, he durſt undertake any thing, and perform'd Prodigies of Valour. This is what the Author of 2 Macc. xii. 22, 23. the ſecond Book of Maccabees expreſſes very well in the manner following. But when Judas his firſt Band came in Sight, the Enemies (being ſmitten with Fear and Terrour, through the appearing of him that ſeeth all Things) fled amain, one running this Way, another that Way, ſo as that they were often hurt of their own Men, and wounded with the Points of their own Swords. Judas alſo was very earneſt in purſuing them, killing thoſe wicked Wretches, of whom he ſlew about thirty thouſand Men.

In the Maccabees it is a very remarkable thing, that we ſeldom or never find any Horſe in their Armies; we hear of nothing but Infantry, but ſo brave and ſo reſolute, that they make no Scruple to attack the Enemies Cavalry. And indeed, the great Depth with which they fought, made them impenetrable. As to the Army of Timotheus, I ſuppoſe his Foot ranged in a Phalanx, and his Horſe upon the Wings, according to the Method of the People of Aſia, which was that of all the Weſtern Nations, except the Romans. Judas fell on him vigorouſly, and with ſo much Bravery, that he open'd himſelf a Way into the Heart of the Enemy where-ever he made his Attack, and ſo put them to flight.

young ones cry unto God, they wander for lack of Meat. But thoſe who have more diligently examin'd the Nature of Birds and other Animals, are not agreed about this Fact, which indeed has too much the Air of a Fable to be believed without good Proofs.

Voſſius ſays, [a] that it is the extream Voracity of the young Ravens, that makes the old ones ſometimes forſake their Neſts, when they find themſelves not able to ſatisfy them. Others will have it, that this proceeds merely from the Forgetfulneſs of the old Ravens, that they think no longer of returning to their Neſts, in order to feed their Young. Others imagine, that Job and the Pſalmiſt allude to what is ſaid by ſome Naturaliſts, [b] that the Ravens drive out their young ones early from their Neſts, and oblige them to retire a great way off from the Habitation of their Parents; and that it is on this account, that Providence has the Care of their Support. Laſtly, there are others, who without refining upon theſe Paſſages, think it is only meant, that Providence extends its Care over all Beaſts and Birds, which in their manner call for its Aſſiſtance; and that Ravens are only put here inſtead of Birds in general.

for some time by means of the Ravens, who brought him Bread and Flesh every Morning and Evening. Some Interpreters, instead of Ravens, translate the Words of the Original by Arabians, or Merchants, or even Inhabitants of the City of Arabo, or Oreb, near to Bethshan.[a] To support these Translations it is observed, that the Raven being a Bird declared unclean by Levit. xi. 15. the Law, there is no Probability that God would make use of him in this Service. But notwithstanding these Reasons, the Generality of Interpreters and Commentators keep to the Version that renders it by Ravens. If those that supply'd Elijah with Flesh and Bread had been Men, why could they not also have supply'd him with Water, when the Brook Cherith was dry'd up; that he need not have been forc'd to look out for another Retreat, with the poor Widow of Zerephrath or Sarepta?

The Raven was consecrated to Apollo, as to the God of Divination. The Blackness Cant. v. 11. of the Raven is pass'd into a Proverb. His Locks are bushy, and black as a Raven. Yet however, there are white Ravens to be seen, and they are not rare in the Northern Countries,[b] where the Snow lies for a long time upon the Ground. It has been thought that the Raven conceived by its Beak, but this is a mere Fable. The Ra- Plin. l. 7. c. 48. ven lives a long time. Pliny says, that it lived the Age of nine Men; but he allows this to be a Story. We are assured, that they live sometimes an hundred Years. They feed upon Carrion, and eat the Bodies of Men that are hung up or crucify'd:

Zeph. ii. 14. Isai. xxxiv. 11. it. Zephaniah seems to insinuate, that they fed Ravens at the Doors of their Houses. Vox cantantis in fenestra, corvus in superliminari. But he rather insinuates, that after the Desolation of the Edomites, the Moabites, and the Ammonites, the Ravens[c] shall be seen upon their Windows, and upon the Doors of their ruinated Houses. This Bird may be pretty easily taught to talk, and to imitate the human Voice.

There are several Kinds of Ravens. Some have been seen that had their Bills and Legs as red as Coral. There is also a red Raven, Pyrrhus corax; it is smaller than a Crow, and about the Bigness of a small Owl or Howlet. Its Legs and Beak are yellow, inclining towards black, and every where else is quite black. This Bird is found in the Alps, in Swisserland, in Auvergne, in Candia, on Mount-jura. The Water-Raven has its Beak long and hooked at the End, the Top of the upper Part of its Bill is black, and the rest is of a Colour compos'd of red and yellow. The Feathers of his Wings and Back are of a Chesnut Colour, the Extremities of them are black, and all the rest is black. The Feathers of his Belly are white, those of his Back are ting'd with a blackish green at the Ends, and in the Middle with bright ash-colour and red. The upper Part of the Neck is cover'd with black and white Feathers, and the Fore-part with black and green. Its Wings are very long, and of the same Colour as its Back.

The Wood-Raven, call'd by the Lorrainers, the Sea-Crow, is of the Bigness of a Hen. To look on it at a Distance, it seems to be black all over its Body; but when we see it at hand, especially when the Beams of the Sun shine upon it, it appears of a green Colour. Its Bill is reddish and pretty long, its Feet are very like those of a Hen, it feeds upon Worms and Insects; its Legs are long and of a dark ruddy Colour. It builds its Nest at the Top of uninhabited Towers that are going to decay.

The Small-Raven, or Night-Raven, Nicticorax, haunts the Waters, and retires into the Reeds, where in the Night-time it makes a very disagreeable Noise, such as a Man when he is vomiting. It builds its Nest at the Tops of Trees, lays two or three Eggs, and generally feeds upon Fishes. We find in Moses the Name of a Bird which is translated Pelican, Psal. cii. 6. and Levit. xi. 18. which comes from a Root that signifies to vomit, and which may very well be the Raven of which we are now speaking. See the Article PELICAN before.

2 Cor. xii. 2, 4. third Heaven; this is said of a Man who is raised in Spirit into a supernatural State, even into Paradise, tho' his Body be still upon Earth. The Spirit of God rapt up Philip, and carry'd him far from the Place Acts viii. 39. where he had baptized the Eunuch. It carry'd him with so great Rapidity, that no human Force could have carry'd him so fast. Jesus Christ says in the Gospel, that since the Time of John the Baptist, the Kingdom of Heaven suffers Violence, and the Violent take it by Force. Vim patitur, Matth. xi. 12. & violenti rapiunt illud; which is explain'd after two different manners. To obtain the Kingdom of Heaven, and to arrive at eternal Life, we must use Violence towards ourselves, and towards our own Passions. We must mortify the Flesh, bear our Cross, exercise Penance. Otherwise, from the Time of John the Baptist, the Kingdom of Heaven, the Preaching of the Gospel, the Truth that Jesus Christ taught, suffers Violence, or is violently assaulted by the Wicked. The Kingdom of Heaven, as we may say, is exposed to the Plundering and the Violence of the Wicked. Or lastly, God refuses to none to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but lays it open to the Seizure of all. Every one enters therein that pleases.

The Son of God thought it no Robbery, no Rapine, to equal himself to God.
Phil. ii. 6. Non rapinam arbitratus est esse se æqualem Deo. He is God, and equal to God of his own Nature; 'tis neither Usurpation, nor Robbery, nor Injustice, if he calls himself equal to God. When Lucifer says, I will be equal to the Most High, 'tis Blasphemy, 'tis Usurpation, 'tis Sacrilege, 'tis the most heinous of all Crimes.

RAZIS, or Razias; he was one of the most considerable of the Doctors that were then at Jerusalem, at the time of the Persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes. After the Death of this Prince, and of Antiochus Eupator his Son, and under the Reign of Demetrius Soter Son of Seleucus; [a] Alcimus the Usurper having obtain'd the High-priesthood of the Jews, by giving Money to King Demetrius, was sent into Judea with Nicanor, who had Orders to support him in the Possession of this Dignity. But Nicanor being reconcil'd to Judas Maccabeus, and living in good Understanding with him at Jerusalem; Alcimus took Umbrage at it, and went to accuse Nicanor of betraying the King's Interests, affirming, that he kept Correspondence with Judas Maccabeus. Demetrius upon this writ to Nicanor, and order'd him to seize Judas, and to send him to Antioch. Nicanor therefore broke with Judas, and began to seek for Means of apprehending him; but Judas discover'd his Design and made his Escape.

Nicanor having fail'd in his Design, was resolved to make the Priests pay for it, and began to threaten them very much. At the same time Razis was accused to him, whom we now speak of, probably as being much in the Interest of Judas Maccabeus, and very averse to that of Alcimus, as having no Right to the High-priesthood. The Scripture does not expresly say what he was accused of, but it gives him this Testimony, that he was very zealous for the Interests of the City of Jerusalem, and of the whole Nation, insomuch that he was call'd the Father of the Jews. His Life was pure and unblameable, and in the Times of Persecution he had already given substantial Proofs of his Firmness to Judaism, [b] by his Opposition to those that would have introduced Idolatry into Israel. Nicanor therefore sent five hundred Men to arrest him, thinking that if he could succeed in bringing him over, it would make a great Impression upon the rest of the Jews.

When therefore Razis saw that the Soldiers would break into his House, and put Fire to it, and that he could not avoid falling into their Hands; he fell upon his Sword, choosing rather to die bravely, than to see himself in the Power of wicked Men, and to suffer Indignities unbefiting his Birth and Quality. But in the Hurry he was in, not having given himself a mortal Wound, and seeing the Soldiers enter in Multitudes into his House, he ran with great Resolution to the Platform of his House, and throwing himself from the Top to the Bottom into the Street, he pitch'd with his Head foremost upon the Ground. But neither did this Fall entirely dispatch him, so that he made new Attempts; he rais'd himself up, ran through the People, and got upon a sharp Stone, where he drew his own Bowels out of his Body, and threw them with both his Hands among the People, invoking the Ruler of Life and of the Soul, to restore them again to him another Day. And in this manner he died.

The Jews put Razis among their most illustrious Martyrs, and pretend to prove from his Example, and from those of Saul and Samson, that in some certain Cases the Murder of one's self is not only allow'd, but is alſo laudable and meritorious. Theſe Caſes are, firſt, the reaſonable Diſtruſt of a Man's own Strength, and the Fear that he may yield in time of Perſecution: Then, according to them, it is allow'd to prevent the Danger, by laying Hands upon our ſelves. The ſecond Caſe is, that when one can foreſee, that by falling into the Hands of the Enemy, they will thence take Occaſion to inſult the Lord, and to blaſpheme his Name. The Circoncellions, a Sort of noted Hereticks of Africa, in the Time of St. Auſtin, made uſe of the Example of Razis, to juſtify themſelves in thoſe Cruelties that they exercis'd againſt themſelves, by throwing themſelves headlong, and putting themſelves to Death in a thouſand different Manners; to promote, as they pretended, the Glory of God. Some modern Divines [a] endeavour alſo to vindicate Razis, by the Example of certain Chriſtian Virgins, who, to eſcape the defiling of their Bodies, threw themſelves into the Water, and were drowned. They add, That, in this, Razis acted by the Inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt; That the Manner of his former Life, and the Sentiments in which he died, would hardly allow one to doubt of his Salvation, and of the Integrity of his Action.

Nevertheleſs, St. Auſtin [b], Thomas Aquinas [c], and ſeveral other Caſuiſts [d], have maintain'd, that the Example of Razis being only related in Scripture, but not approved, nothing could be concluded from thence to juſtify the Morality of the Action. 'Tis agreed it was brave, and ſuch as might befit the greateſt of the Pagan Heroes: But the preſent Queſtion is, Whether it was agreeable to the Law of God, and to that eternal Order that God commands us to obſerve, and forbids us to interrupt? What does the Scripture commend Razis for, but becauſe he was very ſtedfaſt in Judaiſm, which was then the true Religion; very zealous for his Country, and for his Brethren; ſo that he was look'd upon as the Father of the Jews; and becauſe, at his Death, he call'd upon the Name of the Lord. But is this ſufficient to juſtify an Action ſo notoriouſly contrary to the Law of God? If Razis is neither juſt nor innocent, why ſhould he be imitated? ſays St. Auſtin. If he is juſt and innocent, why does he put a juſt Man to death; that is, why does he kill himſelf? Is it thus that the Martyrs us'd to behave themſelves? 'Tis already ſaid, that he died bravely and heroically; but were it not better to have died humbly, patiently, and ſubmiſſively? St. Auſtin's Words are; Dictum eſt quod elegerit nobiliter mori. Melius vellem humiliter; ſic enim utiliter. Illis autem verbis hiſtoria gentium laudare conſuevit, ſed viros fortes hujus ſæculi, non Martyres Chriſti.

The two Sons with which ſhe was big ſtruggling together in her Womb, and giving her ſome Uneaſineſs, ſhe went to conſult the Lord upon this Occaſion; who told her, That two Nations were in her Womb; That one of 'em ſhould overcome the other, and that the elder ſhould be ſubject to the younger. It is not agreed who was the Perſon that Rebekah here conſulted with: Some will have it, that ſhe went to Shem the Son of Noah; others, to Melchiſedech; others, to Heber; others, to Abraham: And, laſtly, ſome think ſhe went to ſacrifice upon Mount Moria, or upon the Altar that Abraham had erected in the Foreſt of Beer-ſheba, and that while ſhe ſlept God revealed this Matter to her. Father.

Father. Isaac had more Inclination for Esau, but Jacob was a Favourite to Rebekah: She found Means of making him obtain the Blessing of his Father Isaac, to the Prejudice of Esau; and this against Isaac's first Intention, who thinking himself near his Death, intended to give his last Blessing to his eldest Son Esau [a]. We have already related this famous History, under the Articles JACOB and ISAAC.

A great Famine having obliged Isaac to go to dwell at Gerar a City of the Philistines, of which Abimelech was King [b]; when the Inhabitants of the Place asked him who Rebekah was, he answered, she was his Sister, because he feared they might put him to Death, in order to possess his Wife. Abimelech had heretofore taken away Sarah, Abraham's Wife, upon whose Account the Lord had threatned him with great Calamities; he therefore distrusted the Truth of what Isaac had told him, that Rebekah was his Sister. He watched him so narrowly, that one Day he perceiv'd him to caress her in such a manner, as better agreed with an Husband than a Brother. Abimelech then order'd him to be call'd, and said to him; Why have you thus imposed upon us? It is plain she is your Wife; and if any one had abused her, you might have drawn upon us some great Punishment from God. Then he caus'd it to be publish'd in Gerar, That if any one should meddle with this Man's Wife, he should be put to Death.

Gen. xx. 5, 6, 7, 8.

Jacob, by the Management of his Mother Rebekah, having got his Father's Blessing by Surprize, to the great Prejudice of his Brother Esau; he could not but be in great Wrath with him on this Account, and secretly threatned to be his death for it, as soon as his Father's Head was laid. Rebekah had Notice of this Design, [c] and, to prevent it, advised Jacob to go into Mesopotamia to his Uncle Laban, and there to marry one of his Daughters; and when Esau's Passion should grow cool, she would send him Word, that he might return. She prevailed with Isaac to consent to this Journey, by insinuating to him, That her Life was become a Burden to her, on Account of the Daughters of Heth whom Esau had marry'd; and that if Jacob should also do the same, and take a Wife of this Country, her Life would no longer be supportable to her. After this Time the Scripture makes no farther mention of Rebekah; and the Year of her Death is uncertain: But it is plain, that she died before Isaac; because it is said, that Isaac was put in the Tomb with Rebekah his Wife, and that this Tomb was the same wherein Abraham and Sarah had been before buried, and where afterwards Jacob and Leah were deposited. Gen. xlix. 31. & xxxv. 29.

I. RECHAB and Baanah were the two Assassins of Ish-bosheth the Son of Saul. See ISH-BOSHETH, or Baanah. 2 Kings iv. 2.

II. RECHAB, Father of Jonadab, the Founder of the Order of Rechabites. It is not known in what Age this Rechab liv'd, nor what was his Original. Some will have him to proceed from the Tribe of Judah [d]. Others think he was a Priest, or at least a Levite [e]; because it is said in Jeremiah, that there shall be always found of the Descendants of Jonadab stedfast to the Service of the Lord. Some Rabbins pretend, that the Rechabites having marry'd the Daughters of the Priests or Levites, the Children produced by these Marriages were employ'd in the Service of the Temple. Others think, that indeed they waited in the Temple, but only as Servants, like the Gibeonites and Nethinims, who were nothing but the Servants of the Priests and Levites [f]. We read in the Chronicles, that the Rechabites were originally Kenites, and that they were Singers in the House of God; Canentes atque resonantes, atque in tabernaculis commorantes; hi sunt Cinæi, qui venerunt de calore patris domus Rechab. The Hebrew has it; Porters and the Obedient, that dwell under Tents; these are those that are called Kenites, who are descended from Hemath, Chief of the House of Rechab.

The Kenites were not of the Race of Jacob, but descended from Midian Son of Cush. They were the Issue of Hobab, or of Jethro the Father of Zipporah, and Father-in-Law of Moses. They enter'd into the Promis'd Land along with the Hebrews, and dwelt in the Portion of the Tribe of Judah, about the Dead-Sea. They were distinguish'd from the Israelites only by their retired Sort of Life, and by the Contempt they express'd of Cities and Houses. Some have thought, [g] that Hobab or Jethro was himself the first Founder of the Rechabites; that Rechab was one of his Names; that Jonadab, known in the Time of Jehu, was one of his Descendants; that Heber the Kenite follow'd the Institution of the Rechabites. Serrarius distinguishes between the ancient Rechabites, descended from and instituted by Jethro, and the new Rechabites instituted by Jonadab Son of Rechab, who liv'd in the Time of John King of Israel.

Jacob. Boulduc. de Eccles. ante leg. l. 3. c. 16. Father Boulduc has contrived a very extraordinary Scheme to explain this Matter of the Rechabites: He seeks their Original even before the Deluge, and fetches it as far as Enoch and his Descendants. After the Deluge they were known successively by the Names of Kenites, Kenizeans, Hebrews, Nazarites, Sons of the Prophets; lastly, Rechabites and Pharisees. All these People were a Sort of Religious, living in a Society, having their Superiors general and particular, just as we see it now among the several Religious Orders of the Latin Church. But from whence came the Name Rechab? Its Etymology is very remarkable: Elisha, seeing his Master ascend
2 Kings ii. 12. into Heaven, cry'd out to him; My Father, my Father, the Chariot of Israel, and the Horsemen thereof. The Hebrew Words are; My Father, my Father, the Rechab of Israel. And from hence the Name of Rechabites descended to the Disciples of Elijah and Elisha, Sons of the Rechabaim, or the two Chariots of Israel. But our Author does not think it sufficient to derive the Rechabites' from the Chariot of Elijah: He makes the Pharisees also to proceed from its Horses; for, in Hebrew, the Word Pharasim signifies Horses.

But it is altogether impertinent to have recourse to these harsh, remote, doubtful, and even childish Etymologies. The Jer. xxxv. 6, 7. Scripture it self acquaints us, that Jonadab the Son of Rechab, who lived in the Time of Jehu King of Israel, laid an Injunction upon his Posterity, never to drink any Wine, not to build Houses, not to sow any Grain, to plant no Vineyards, to have no Lands, and to dwell in Tents all their Lives. Such was the Institution of the Rechabites, or of the Children of Rechab. It laid no Obligation upon the other Kenites, nor the other Descendants of Jethro. And this they continued to observe for above three hundred Years [a]. In the last Year of the Reign of Jehoiakim King of Judah, Nebuchadnezzar coming to besiege Jerusalem, the Rechabites were forced to leave the Country, and to take Refuge in the City, yet, however, without quitting their Custom of lodging in Tents. During this Siege, Jeremiah received Order from the Lord, to apply himself to the Jer. xxxv. 1,2,3,&c. Disciples of Rechab, to cause them to enter into the Temple, and to offer them Wine to drink. Jeremiah perform'd the Orders of the Lord: But the Rechabites answer'd him; We will drink no Wine; for Jonadab the Son of Rechab our Father commanded us, saying, Ye shall drink no Wine, neither ye nor your Sons, for ever. Neither shall ye build House, nor sow Seed, nor plant Vineyard, nor have any: but all your Days shall dwell in your Tents, that you may live many Days in the Land where ye be Strangers. But it came to pass, when Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon came up into the Land, that we said, Come, and let us go to Jerusalem, for fear of the Army of the Chaldeans, and for fear of the Army of the Syrians; so we dwell at Jerusalem. Then came the Word of the Lord unto Jeremiah, saying, Thus says the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, Go, and tell the Men of Judah, and the Inhabitants of Jerusalem, Will ye not receive Instruction, to hearken unto my Words? saith the Lord. The Words of Jonadab the Son of Rechab, that he commanded his Sons not to drink Wine, are performed; for unto this Day they drink none, but obey their Father's Commandment: notwithstanding I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking, but ye hearkned not unto me. Lastly, directing his Discourse to the Rechabites, he tells them; Because ye have obeyed the Commandment of Jonadab your Father, and kept all his Precepts, and done according to all that he hath commanded you: Therefore thus saith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel, Jonadab the Son of Rechab shall not want a Man to stand before me for ever.

The Rechabites were, probably, led away Captives, after the taking of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans [b]; since we read, in the Title of Psalm lxxi. 1. that it was sung by the Sons of Jonadab, and by the principal Captives *, which were Ezekiel and Mordecai, carry'd away by the Chaldeans beyond the Euphrates, after the Taking of Jerusalem under King Jehoiakim. They return'd from their Captivity, and settled in the City of Jabez beyond Jordan; as it appears by the Chronicles; The Race of the Scribes that dwelt at Jabez, called Porters, obedient, and dwelling in Tents, are the Kenites, descended from Hemath Father of the House of Rechab †. 1 Chron. ii. 55.
There are some Difficulties in this Passage. There be those that think, that, in this Place, Jabez is not a City, but some Man, whom the Kenites acknowledge as their Master. However this be, no farther mention is made of the Kenites, in the Books written after the Captivity of Babylon.

Some have pretended, that the Assideans, of whom mention is made in the Books of

The Latin Vulgate has it; Cognationes quoque scribarum, habitantium in Jabes, canentes atque resonantes, & in tabernaculis commorantes. Hi sunt Cinæi, qui venerunt de calore patris domus Rechab. The English reads; And the Families of the Scribes which dwelt at Jabez; the Tirathites, the Shimeathites, and Suchathites: These are the Kenites that came of Hemath the Father of the House of Rechab. The Hebrew Original will admit of any of these Interpretations.

the Maccabees [a], were Succeffors and Followers of the Rechabites. Others [b] have confounded the Rechabites with the Effenians. But if the Affideans were the fame as the Effenians, their Principles and Opinions muft be the fame. But certain it is, that the Manner of Life of the Effenians, which is very well known, was very different from that of the Rechabites; as it appears from what Jofephus [c] fays of 'em, who informs us, that the Effenians had Fields which they cultivated in common; that they dwelt in Houfes; that they had neither Wives nor Children; and perform'd not their Religious Ceremonies with the other Jews in the Temple of Jerufalem. But all this was contrary to the Practice of the Rechabites. Hegefippus, as cited by Eufebius, [d] relates, that as St. James was led away to be put to Death, one of the Priefts of the Race of the Rechabites cry'd out to the Jews, as they were going to ftone him, What are you going to do? The juft Man prays for you. It is certain, as we have before obferved, that the Rechabites were not of the Race of the Priefts: But, as they ferved in the Temple, this Author might have taken them for Priefts; or he may have taken the Word Prieft in a generical Senfe, which will include all the Minifters of the Lord.

Benjaminus Tudelenfis fays, [e] that, in his Travels, he faw a large Country inhabited by the Sons of Rechab. Thefe are his Words: " From Pundabita upon the " Euphrates I went into the Country of " Seba, call'd at prefent Aliman, which " borders upon the Country of Sennaar or " Shinar. After a Journey of one and " twenty Days through Defarts, I arrived " at the Place inhabited by the Jews " call'd the Sons of Rechab, otherwife, " the People of Theima: For Theima is " the Beginning of their Territory, which " is govern'd at this Day by the Prince " Hanan. The City of Theima is large " and well-peopled. The Length of the " Country is twenty Days Journey, be- " tween the Northern Mountains. It " abounds with fine and ftrong Cities, that " acknowledge no foreign Jurifdiction. " The People of this Country make Ex- " curfions upon their Neighbours, and " even upon diftant Nations. They cul- " tivate their Fields, and breed Cattle, " having a large and fruitful Country. " They appropriate the Tythe of their " whole Income to the maintaining of " the Difciples of the Sages, who conti- " nually attend upon Preaching; and " to the Support of the Pharifees, who " bewail the Misfortunes of Sion, and the " Deftruction of Jerufalem; never making " ufe of either Wine or Flefh, going " always in Black, and having no other " Habitations but the Caves; fafting every " Day except the Sabbath, and being con- " ftantly at Prayer, to obtain from God " the Liberty and Return of Ifrael from " their Captivity.

" All the Jews of Theima and Thelimas " put up the fame Prayers to the Lord, " and they are in Number about one hun- " dred thoufand Men. Their Prince is " Solomon the Brother of Hanan, both of " the Race of David, as they prove by " the Genealogical Hiftories they preferve. " They generally wear torn Mourning " Cloaths, and faft forty Days for all the " Jews that are in Captivity. The Pro- " vince contains about forty Cities, two " hundred Towns, and an hundred Caftles. " The Metropolis of the Country is The- " nai; and the Number of Jews inhabit- " ing this Province is about three hun- " dred thoufand. The Metropolis now " mention'd is incompafs'd by good Walls, " which inclofe a large Spot of Ground " within them, where they fow good " Quantities of Wheat: For 'tis fifteen " Miles long, and as many broad; (that " is to fay, five large Leagues fquare, " and about fifteen Leagues round). " There is to be feen the Palace of King " Solomon, with very fplendid Gardens." And fuch is the Country of the Rechabites, according to this Traveller, who lived in the twelfth Century. But this whole Relation hath fo much the Air of a Fable, that no Credit ought to be given to it.

But without ftaying for thefe Years, when any Relation was rich enough, and had Power to redeem the Goods or Liberty of his Brother, the Law enabled him to do it. the Name of Redeemer to the near Relation that had a Claim to this Right. There are several Particulars upon this Head, which may be found in chap. xxv & xxvii. of Leviticus.

We see an Instance of the Practice of this Law, in the History of Ruth. Boaz being one of the nearest Relations of Elimelech, marry'd Ruth the Heiress of Elimelech, and by that means re-enter'd into the Possession of her Estate, which had pass'd through several strange Hands. Also Jeremiah redeem'd the Field of his Nephew Hanameel, which was upon the Point of being sold to another. He was also call'd The Redeemer of Blood *; in Hebrew, Goel haddam; who had a Right of taking Revenge, for the Blood of his Kinsman who had lost his Life [a]. To curb the first Transports of the Resentment of these Avengers, or of these Redeemers, God appointed Cities of Refuge through all the Coasts of Israel, to prevent Murders, and the Effects of violent Passion.

RED-HEIFER. The Lord spake unto Moses, saying: "Command the Children of Israel to bring to you a Red-Heifer, perfect and without Blemish, "which has never born the Yoke. You "shall put it into the Hands of Eleazar "the Highpriest, who, taking it without "the Camp, shall kill it before all the "People. He shall dip his Finger in the "Blood of this Heifer, and shall make "Aspersions seven Times towards the Entry of the Tabernacle, and shall burn it "in the Presence of all the People, putting "into the Flames not only the Flesh and "the Hide, but also the Blood and the "Excrements of the Victim. Also the "Priest shall cast into the Fire that consumes the Heifer, a Bundle of Cedarwood, some Hyssop, and double-dy'd "Scarlet. Then he shall wash his Garments and his Body, and returning into "the Camp, shall be unclean till the "Evening.

"He also that burns the Heifer, shall "wash his Body and his Cloaths, and shall "remain unclean until Evening. A Man "that is clean shall gather up the Ashes "of the Heifer, and shall carry them out "of the Camp into a clean Place, that the "Israelites may take of them, and preserve them carefully, and make use of "them to make a Water of Aspersion or "Separation, because this Heifer was burnt "for Sin. He that shall carry out the "Ashes shall wash his Body and his Cloaths, "and shall continue unclean till Evening. "This Ordinance shall be holy, and inviolably observed, not only by the "Israelites, but also by the Strangers that "live among you.

"He that shall have touched the Body "of a dead Man, and for this Reason "shall have contracted an Uncleanness "that continues seven Days, shall be "sprinkled with this Water the third and "the seventh Day, and shall then be purified. If he receives no Aspersion on "the third Day, but only on the Sixth, "he cannot be purified on the Seventh, "but on the Tenth or Eleventh. Whoever shall touch the dead Body of a Man, "and shall not be sprinkled with Water, "in which is mingled some of the Ashes of "the Red-Heifer, shall pollute the Tabernacle of the Lord, if he presumes to "present himself there in this Condition, "and shall be cut off from the midst of "his People. He shall be unclean, because he was not purified with the Water "of Expiation, and his Uncleanness shall "continue upon him."

This is what was ordain'd by Moses in this Matter, and these are the Reflexions that Commentators have made upon it. Spencer thinks, that this Ceremony has Relation to an Opposition to the Egyptian Superstitions. The Egyptians never sacrificed Cows or Heifers, and the Hebrews themselves seldom sacrificed any other but Male Animals. The first had Red Hairs in abhorrence, and all Animals of that Colour. The Hebrews made no Distinction in the Colour of their Victims, but only upon this Occasion. St Jerom, and several others think, that they sacrificed the Red-Heifer every Year, and distributed the Ashes into all the Cities and Towns of Israel. Some Rabbins maintain, that there was but one burnt from the Times of Moses to Esdras; and that from Esdras to the Destruction of the Temple by the Romans, there were but six burnt, or nine at most. The same St. Jerom teaches us, that this Ceremony was always performed upon the Mount of Olives, over-against the Temple, after the placing the Ark at Jerusalem; and the Jews inform us, that it was always the Highpriest that offered this Sacrifice, from the first Building of the Temple.

beyond Jordan were Bezer, Golan, and Ramoth-Gilead. They ſerved not only for the Hebrews, but for all Strangers alſo, that ſhould dwell in their Country. The Rabbins confined the Name Strangers only to ſuch as were Proſelytes; but in this I think they depart from the Deſign of the Law. The Lord alſo commanded, That when the Hebrews ſhould multiply, and ſhould enlarge the Limits of their Country, they ſhould add three other Cities of Refuge to thoſe now mentioned. And as this Command was never fulfilled, the Rabbins ſay, that the Meſſiah will accompliſh what God has commanded in this reſpect.

Maimonides from the Traditions of the Antients, aſſures us, that all the Forty-eight Cities, appointed for the Habitation of the Prieſts and Levites, were alſo Cities of Refuge; and that all the Difference between them was, that the ſix Cities appointed by the Law, were obliged to receive and lodge for nothing all that ſhould fly to them; whereas the other two-and-forty Cities might refuſe to admit ſuch as fled to 'em, and were not obliged to lodge them gratis. Beſides the Cities of Refuge, Philo Legat. ad Caium.
the Temple of the Lord, and eſpecially the Altar of Burnt-offerings, enjoy'd the Privilege of being an Aſylum. The Rabbins ſay, that generally the Altar was only for the Prieſts. Thoſe that took Sanctuary in the Temple, were preſently judged by the Judges; and if they were found Guilty of wilful Murder, they were forc'd away even from the Altar, and put to death without the Temple. But if they were found innocent, they had a Guard appointed them to conduct them ſafe to ſome City of Refuge.

Theſe Cities were to be of eaſy Acceſs, and to have ſmooth and good Roads to 'em, and Bridges where-ever there ſhou'd be Occaſion. The Width of theſe Roads was, at leaſt, to be two and thirty Cubits, or eight and forty Feet. When there were any Croſs-Roads, they took care to ſet up Poſts, with an Inſcription, directing the Way to the City of Refuge. Every Year, on the fifteenth of the Month Adar, which anſwers to our February Moon, the Magiſtrates of the Cities viſited the Roads, to ſee if they were in good Condition. The City was to be well ſupply'd with Water, aad all kind of Proviſions. It was not allow'd there to make any Weapons, that the Relations of the Deceaſed might not be furniſh'd there with Arms to gratify their Revenge. Laſtly; it was neceſſary, that whoever took Refuge there, ſhould underſtand a Trade or Calling, that he might not be chargeable to the Inhabitants. They us'd to ſend ſome prudent and moderate Perſons, to meet thoſe who were purſuing their Revenge for their Relations, that they might diſpoſe them to Clemency and Forgiveneſs, and might perſuade them to await the Deciſion of Juſtice.

Tho' the Manſlayer had fled to the City of Refuge, yet he was not thereupon exempt from the Purſuits of Juſtice: An Information was preferr'd againſt him; he was ſummon'd before the Judges, and before the People, to clear himſelf, and to prove the Murder was merely caſual and involuntary. If he was found innocent, he dwelt ſafely in the City to which he had retired; if otherwiſe, he was put to Death, according to the Severity of the Law. The Texts of Scripture are not very expreſs, whether the Affair was under the Cognizance of the Judges of the Place where the Murder was committed, or of the Judges of the City of Refuge, to which the Murderer had fled; and the Commentators are at Variance in this Matter. But it appears to us, from a Paſſage of Joſhua, that they were to undergo two Trials: Firſt in the City of Refuge, where the Judges ſummarily examined the Affair, and heard his Allegations at his firſt Arrival: Secondly, when he was taken back to his own City, to be judg'd by the Magiſtrates of the Place, who took the Cauſe into a more ſtrict and ſcrupulous Examination. If the latter Judges declared him Innocent, they had him re-conducted under a good Guard to the City of Refuge to which he had fled.

He was not therefore immediately set at Liberty: But to inspire the greater Horror, even of involuntary Murder, it seems as if the Law would punish it by a kind of Banishment; for he was obliged to dwell in this City, without going out of it, 'till the Death of the High-Priest: And if before this time he should any-where go out of the City, the Revenger of Blood might safely kill him: But after the High-Priest's Death, he was free to go where he pleas'd, and no one had any Right to molest him on this Account. See the Commentators upon Numb. xxxv. and Josh. xx. (Numbers xxxv. 25, 26, 27, 28.)

As to the Places of Refuge among the Greeks and Romans, we have already mention'd something of them under the Article AZYLUM: We have there spoke of the Azylum set up at Athens by the Heraclidæ, in the Temple of Misericordia. Theseus built one in the same City, in favour of the Slaves and poor People that should fly thither, from the Oppression of the Rich. There was also one in the Isle of Calauria. The Temples of Apollo at Delphos, of Juno at Samos, of Esculapius at Delos, of Bacchus at Ephesus, and many others in Greece, had the Privilege of being Asyla [a]. Romulus gave this Right to a Wood adjoyning to the Temple of Vejovis [b]. Ovid speaks of a consecrated Wood near Ostium, that enjoy'd the same Prerogative [c]. St. Austin observes [d], that the whole City of Rome was an Asylum open to all Strangers. The Number of these Privileged Places was grown so great in Greece, under the Emperor Tiberius, that he was obliged to recall their Licences, and to suppress them all [e]: But his Decree was little observed after his Death.

The Right of being an Asylum, pass'd from the Temple of Jerusalem to the Christian Churches. The Emperors Gratian, Valentinian, and Theodosius the Great, condemned to Banishment, to Whipping, to the Loss of Hair and Beard, all those that, of their own Authority, should take a Man out of a Church, who had fled thither for Refuge. Honorius and Theodosius the Younger order'd, that all such Offenders should be punish'd as if guilty of Treason. But afterwards they were obliged to retrench these Privileges, and to exempt certain Crimes from the Benfit of an Asylum. The Emperor Justinian allow'd, that they might take from the Asylum all wilful Murderers, Adulterers, Ravishers, or those that carry away Virgins. Innocent III. also excepts publick Robbers, and those that spoil the Fields in the Night-time. The Right of Azylum subsists still in Italy, and in some other Places. See Masius and Serrarius upon Josh. xx. (Cod. Justin. l. 9. tit. 29.) (Cod. Justin. l. 1. tit. 11.)

REGEM, or Regom, Son of Jahdai. 1 Chron. ii. 47.

REGEM-MELECH, or Rogom-Melech, and Sherezer, sent a Deputation to the Priests and to the Prophets at Jerusalem, to know if they were still to fast and to mortify themselves on the fifth Month of the holy Year, in Memory of the Destruction of the Temple of Jerusalem, which had been burnt by the Chaldeans on the tenth Day of the fifth Month [f]. The Answer of Zechariah the Prophet, was, That God little regarded their Fasts, which were not accompany'd by Justice and Charity: But he did not answer directly to the Question that had been proposed to him, concerning the Fast of the fifth Month. For which Reason they continu'd the Observation of it, and still continue it to this Day. (Zech. vii. 2, 3, 4, &c.)

It may be asked, Who were Regem-melech and Sherezer? Some think [g] they were Babylonian Proselytes, fearing God, and Officers of King David, who conform'd to the religious Observances of the Jews of their Country. Theodoret conjectures they were Chief of the Cushites settled in Palestine, or of some other People that came into this Country. Grotius, Sanctius, Menochius will have them to be Jews dwelling at a Distance from Jerusalem, and who had at their Head Sherezer and Regem-Melech. And indeed there is great Probability that this Deputation came from the Jews beyond Euphrates, of whom Sherezer and Regem-Melech were the Chief. For, could the Jews of Palestine be ignorant of what was to be observed in the Country where they lived; they who every Year went up thrice to Jerusalem?

REGENERATION. This Term is used in two Senses, by the sacred Authors of the New Testament: 1*st*, for that Spiritual Birth that we receive by Baptism; and, 2*dly*, for that New Life that we expect at the general Resurrection. By the Transgression of the first Man, we are all born Children of Wrath, according to St. Paul. To erase this Original Blemish, which makes us Children of the Devil, we must have a New Birth by Grace, which may make us Children of God. St. John mentions it in several Places: For Example; in the Beginning of his Gospel, he says, that all those who believe in Jesus Christ, and who receive him, become Children of God; not by the Will of the Flesh, nor (Ephes. ii. 3.) (John i. 12, 13.)

by the Will of Man, but by a New Birth that proceeds from God. And our Saviour, [John iii. 3, 4, 5.] speaking to Nicodemus, says, Verily, verily I say unto thee, Except a Man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God. Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a Man be born when he is old? Can he enter the second time into his Mother's Womb, and be born? Jesus ansered, Verily, verily I say unto thee, Except a Man be born of Water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God.

The Apostle St. Peter says in like manner, [1 Pet. i. 3.] that God has regenerated us; that is to say, has given us a New Birth, by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ, who gives us a lively Hope of obtaining an incorruptible and eternal Inheritance. And St. Paul, [Tit. iii. 5.] writing to Titus; Our Saviour has procured Salvation for us; not by the Works of Righteousness, which we have done, but according to his Mercy he saved us by the Washing of Regeneration, and Renewing of the Holy Ghost; that is to say, by Baptism. [1 John iii. 9.] And St. John; Whoever is born of God, doth not commit Sin; for his Seed remaineth in him: and he cannot sin, because he is born of God. This is the New Birth, or the Regeneration, which comes from God, and is exactly described, together with its Effects, which are to preserve us from Sin.

The second Acceptation of the Term Regeneration, has respect to another New Birth for another Life, for Eternity, or for Immortality. The first Regeneration makes us Children of God, endues us with Innocence, and gives us a Claim to eternal Life, which is the Inheritance of the Regenerate. But the second Regeneration, the Resurrection, puts us in Possession of this [Matth. xix. 28.] Inheritance: And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me in the Regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the Throne of his Glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve Thrones, judging the twelve Tribes of Israel.

[Proverbs xxiii. 32. & Isai. xi. 8.] REGULUS, a sort of Serpent, call'd also BASILISCUS, (which see). St. Jerom has render'd the Hebrew Word Zipphoni, [צפעני or צפע] by Regulus; which the Greeks have sometimes translated by Cerastes, and sometimes by Aspis. See, for Example, Prov. xxiii. 32. Isai. xi. 8. Jerem. viii. 17. The Hebrew Word Saraph, is render'd in Isaiah by Regulus [a], which signifies a Flying Serpent; of which we have treated under BRAZEN SERPENT. As for Zipphoni, it rather signifies the Basilisk [b]. See Bochart.

Regulus is also taken for a Little King, a Tributary Prince, that depends upon another. As for Example, Josh. xiii. 3. Vulg. Quinque Regulos Philistinorum.

Regulus is also put for an Officer of the King: As in John iv. 46, 49. Vulg. Erat quidam Regulus. The Greek has Basilicos [c], which may be translated by Regius, or Palatinus [d].

The City of Laish, or Dan, was situate in [Judges xviii. 28.] the Canton of Rehob, or, as the Hebrews call it, Rechob. [רחב Rechob.]

REHOB, an Israelite who return'd from the Captivity of Babylon. Nehem. x. 11.

REHOBOAM, or Roboam, Son and Successor of Solomon: He was born of Naamah an Ammonitish Woman, whom Solomon had [1 Kings xiv. 20, 21.] marry'd. He was one and forty Years old when he began to reign; and consequently, he was born in the first Year of his Father's Reign, or the Year before [g]. He began to reign in the Year of the World 3029, before Christ 971, before the Vulgar Era 975. His Father Solomon was about eighteen or nineteen Years old when Rehoboam was born. This Prince reigned seventeen Years at Jerusalem, and died in the Year of the World 3046, before Christ 954, before the Vulgar Era 958.

After the Death of Solomon, Rehoboam [1 Kings xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.] came to Shechem, because all Israel was there assembled, to make him King there. Jeroboam the Son of Nebat, who had headed a Sedition against Solomon, and had been forc'd, towards the End of his Reign, to take Refuge in Egypt, as soon as he heard this Prince was dead, return'd into Judea, and came to the Assembly of the People at Shechem. The Israelites would have made Terms with Rehoboam, and said to him, "Your Father loaded us with an hard "and heavy Yoke; but do you take off "from the Weight of this Yoke, and "we will serve you, as we have served "your Father." This Proposal makes it plain, that the Succession to the Kingdom was not then fully established in the House of David. Rehoboam reply'd to them, "Go all of you Home, and in "three Days return to me again, and I "will give you an Anſwer". In the interim he adviſed with the antient Counſellors of the State, who had been of his Father's Council, and they repreſented to him, that if he would give the People an obliging Anſwer, and condeſcend to their Requeſt, he would fix them to his Intereſt for ever. But Rehoboam did not like this Advice; he choſe rather to follow that of his young Counſellors, who had been brought up with him. They adviſed him to ſay to the People; "The leaſt of my "Fingers is thicker than my Father's whole "Body. You ſay he laid a heavy Yoke "upon you, and I intend to make it ſtill "heavier. My Father whip'd you with "Rods, but I will whip you with Scor-"pions."

The People returning again the third Day, as had been appointed, the King anſwer'd them roughly, according to the Advice of his young Counſellors; but he had ſoon reaſon to repent of it; for the whole Multitude began to cry out, What Part have we in David, or what Intereſt have we in the Son of David? To your Tents, O Iſrael; now David, look to your own Houſe. When the People were departed, Rehoboam ſent his Treaſurer Adoram or Hadoram after them, to perſuade them to return. But they took him and ſtoned him, ſo that he died upon the Spot. Rehoboam ſeeing this, thought it Time to betake himſelf to his Chariot, and to fly to Jeruſalem. The Tribes of Judah and Benjamin continued in their Fidelity to King Rehoboam; but the other ten Tribes would acknowledge no other for their King, but Jeroboam, the Son of Nebat; who took the Opportunity of this ſeditious Temper of the People, to execute a Deſign he had long been forming, of ſhaking off the Yoke of the Houſe of David.

Rehoboam was no ſooner come to Jeruſalem, [a] but he aſſembled together the Tribes of Judah and Benjamin, who had continued faithful to him, and put himſelf at the Head of One hundred and eighty thouſand choſen Troops, in order to reduce the revolted ten Tribes to his Obedience. But when the Prophet Shemaiah came to him with a Meſſage from the Lord, ſaying; Ye ſhall not go up, nor fight againſt your Brethren the Children of Iſrael; return every Man to his Houſe, for this thing is from me; they obey'd the Word of the Lord, and every one returned to his own Home. Then Rehoboam, continuing at Jeruſalem, began to apply himſelf to the ſtrengthening of his Kingdom againſt his Enemy Jeroboam, and fortify'd ſeveral Cities of his Dominions; as Bethlehem, Etam, Tekoa, Beth-zur, Shoco, Adullam, Gath, Mareſhah, Ziph, Adoraim, Lachiſh, Azekah, Zorah, Aijalon, Hebron. And after he had encloſed them with ſtrong Walls, he put Gariſons into them, laid up great Magazines of Wine and Oyl, and built Arſenals, well repleniſh'd with Bucklers, Lances, and other Arms.

1 Kings xiv. 22. 2 Chron. xi. 5, 6, 7, &c.

The Number of his Subjects was conſiderably encreas'd by the Addition of the Prieſts and Levites, who being in the Cities and Territories of Jeroboam, and ſeeing this King had aboliſh'd the Worſhip of the Lord, and made Prieſts for his golden Calves of the firſt of his Subjects that offer'd themſelves for this Service; they all withdrew themſelves into the Land of Judah and Benjamin, that they might be ready to perform their Functions in the Temple of the Lord at Jeruſalem. But Rehoboam and his People did not continue faithful to the Lord for above three Years. After this ſhort Space of Time, Judah alſo did Evil before the Lord, and provoked him by their Wickedneſs, more than their Fathers had done before them. They ſet up prophane Altars and Statues, and conſecrated Groves and High-places upon all the Hills and Eminencies. They had alſo Men and Women among them appointed for publick Proſtitution. In ſhort, they committed all the Wickedneſs and Abominations that had been committed by the Canaanites, whom the Lord had driven out before them.

Rehoboam marry'd eighteen Wives, and had to the Number of ſixty Concubines, or Wives of an inferior Order. By theſe he had twenty-eight Sons, and ſixty Daughters. But of all his Sons, he that he had moſt Affection for, and whom he intended for his Succeſſor, was Abijah, the Son of Maachah, the Daughter of Abſalom. No ſooner did he ſee himſelf confirm'd in his Kingdom, but he forſook the Lord, and all his People with him; when God, to puniſh their Prevarications, in the fifth Year of Rehoboam, ſent againſt Judah Shiſhak (or Seſac), King of Egypt, [b] who took away all the Treaſure of the Houſe of the Lord, the King's Treaſures, the golden Bucklers made by King Solomon, and laid waſte the whole Country. He brought with him an Army of twelve hundred Chariots, ſixty thouſand Horſe, and of Foot an innumerable Multitude. He ſubdued the ſtrongeſt Places of Judah, and reduced the whole Country, as far as Jeruſalem. Then the Prophet Shemaiah went to attend Rehoboam, and the Princes of Judah that were with him in Jeruſalem, and ſaid to 'em from the Lord; You have forſaken me, and I, in my Turn, have forſaken you, and delivered you into the Hands of Shishak. The Princes being convinced of the Justice of these Reproaches, humbled themselves, and made Answer; That the Lord was just in all his Proceedings. Then God said to Shemaiah, that he would not utterly abandon them, but only make them sensible of the Difference there is, between serving the Lord, and being subject to a foreign Power.

After the Departure of Shishak, Rehoboam caus'd brazen Bucklers to be made, in the room of those of Gold, that the King of Egypt had taken away; and when he went to the Temple, his Guards us'd to carry these brazen Bucklers before him, and afterwards lay them up in the Arsenal. The Lord had therefore Compassion of this Prince, because he humbled himself before him, and because there were still found some Remains of Righteousness in Judah. The History of the Reign of Rehoboam had been written at length, and with great Care, by the Prophets Shemaiah and Iddo; but these Accounts are not come down to our Hands, any more than the Particulars of those Wars which were continually between Rehoboam and Jeroboam, during the Time of their whole Reigns. Rehoboam died after he had reigned seventeen Years, was buried in the City of David, and left his Son Abijah his Successor to the Throne.

The Scripture speaks of this Prince in a manner that does not at all redound to his Honour. See what Jesus the Son of Sirach says of Rehoboam, after he had

REI. St. Jerom has understood this Word, 1 Kings i. 8. as if it signify'd some General of the Troops, or some chief Officer of the House of David. Semei, & Rei, & robur exercitus David, non erat cum Adonia. * The Septuagint have taken it in the same Sense. The Author of the Hebrew Traditions upon the Books of Samuel, the Kings, and Chronicles, will have Shimei to be the same as Nebat, Father to Jeroboam, and Governor to Solomon; and that Rei is the same as Ira, the Jairite, a chief Ruler about David, 2 Sam. xx. 26. The Hebrew [a] may be thus translated: Shimei and Rei, or Shomei and Roei may be the Hearers and Seers; that is, the Publick, all Israel, or those that acted with Circumspection, and knew the Intentions of the King. Or lastly, the Prophets and their Disciples, the Seers and their Auditors. Some Greek Copies read, Shimei and his Companions or Friends.

REINS, or Kidneys. The Hebrews ascribe to the Reins or Kidneys, Knowledge, Joy, Pain, Pleasure; hence it is Ps. vii. 10.

RELICKS. Reliquiæ. I do not pretend that the Word Reliquiæ, in any Passage of Scripture, is to be taken for Relicks, in the Sense it is understood by the Church [of Rome,] or for the Relicks of any Saints. Yet it cannot but be acknowledg'd, that the Hebrews had a Respect for such Relicks. They preserved for a long Time the Urn in which the Manna was kept, the Rod of Aaron, the brazen Serpent. They had a singular Veneration for the Tombs of the Patriarchs and Prophets; they repaired and adorned them. Elisha kept the Cloak of Elijah, as something very valuable; but this is not a proper Place to treat of this Matter.

Reliquiæ is commonly put for Posterity.
Psal. xxxvi. 17. Sunt Reliquiæ homini pacifico. The peaceable Man shall see a numerous Posterity; but the Posterity of the Wicked shall be rooted out. Reliquiæ impiorum interibunt. Often it is us'd for a small Number that escapes out of a War, from Captivity, or the Reliquiæ is also put for Provisions. Be- Deut. xxviii. 5. 17.

RELIGION. This Latin Word Religio, is taken in three Senses in Holy Scripture. First, for the external and ceremonial Worship of the Jewish Religion. Hæc Ex. xii. 43.

Secondly, Religio is put for the true Religion, the best manner of serving and honouring God. Religio munda & immaculata apud Deum & Patrem, hæc est; visitare Jacob. i. 27.
pupillos, &c. St. Paul says, that he had lived in the Sect of the Pharisees, which Act. xxvi. 5. was look'd upon as the most perfect of the Religion of the Jews.

Thirdly, and lastly, The Word Religion in Scripture, as well as in profane Authors, is often put for Superstition. Do not imitate those who affect to humble themselves before the Angels, and to pay them a superstitious Worship. Nemo vos seducat, volens in humilitate & Religione Angelorum, &c. Col. ii. 18.

Psl. xxxiv. 16. He says elsewhere, that the Face of the Lord is against them that do Evil, to cut off the Remembrance of them from the Earth. Psal. ix. 6. And thou hast destroyed Cities, their Memorial is perished with them. On the contrary, God has promised to the Righteous and Just, that their Memory shall be blessed, and shall never perish.

I. REMETH, or Ramath, or Beerremeth, or South-ramath. All these Words signify one and the same Thing; that is, a City of the Tribe of Simeon, in the southern Part belonging to this Tribe. Josh. xix. 21. 8. 1 Kings xxx. 27.

II. REMETH, a City of the Tribe of Issachar. Josh. xix. 21. The same as Ramoth, 1 Chron. vi. 73. and very likely also the same as Jerimoth, Josh. xxi. 29. It was a City assign'd to the Levites.

REMISSION, is sometimes taken for the Year of Jubilee, or the Sabbathical Year, in which the Slaves were set at Liberty, and in which every one return'd into his own Inheritance. Lev. xxv. 10. Num. xxxvi. 4. Deut. xv. 1, 2, 3, &c.

Remission is also used for the Pardon of Sins. Our Saviour says, that John did baptize in the Wilderness, and preach the Baptism of Repentance, for the Remission of Sins. And it is said in several Places of the New Testament, that the Bood of Jesus Christ was shed for us, to procure the Remission of our Sins. Mark i. 4. Luk. iii. 3. Ephes. i. 7. Col. i. 14. Math. xvi. 28, &c.

I. REMMON, or Rimmon; this Word may be taken in a generical Sense, for any Eminence. It also stands for a City in the Tribe of Simeon; probably the same as is ascribed to Judah, Josh. xv. 32. Nehem. xi. 29. and which is also call'd Remmus. Eusebius places it to the South of Judah, sixteen Miles from Eleutheropolis, to the South. We know that several Cities of Judah were yielded up to Simeon. Probably this is the City mention'd by Zechariah xiv. 10. De colle Remmon ad austrum. The Hebrew says, From Geba to Rimmon, South of Jerusalem. Josh. xix. 7. Euseb. in Remmon.

II. REMMON, a Village fifteen Miles from Jerusalem, towards the North. Euseb. in Remmon.

III. REMMON, Adad-Remmon, or Maximinianopolis. See Adad-Remmon.

REMPHAN, or Rephan. Amos [a] upbraids the Hebrews with having carry'd, during their Wanderings in the Wilderness, the Tent of their Moloch, the Image of their Idol, and the Star of their God [*]. And St. Stephen in the Acts [b], quoting this Passage of Amos, according to the Septuagint, says, Ye took up the Tabernacle of Moloch, and the Star of your God Remphan. This last Word has given occasion to a great Number of Conjectures. Grotius thinks it to have been the same Deity as Rimmon, of which we shall speak hereafter. The u Vowel has been changed into v Consonant, and instead of Remuan they have read Remvan. The Septuagint read Remman instead of Remmon, in the second Book of Kings, v. 18. This Remvan, according to him, is the Planet Saturn. Others derive Rephan from the Hebrew Word Rapha, to be negligent, soft, or slothful; because Saturn is the slowest or most slothful of all the Planets. Capellus and Hammond, in their Commentaries upon Acts vii. 43. think Remphan to be the Name of a King of Egypt, who was placed by his People in the Rank of the Gods. Diodorus Siculus says, that King Remphis succeeded Proteus. But this Author does not say that he had ever been deify'd, and speaks of him as a Prince very unworthy of having divine Honours paid to him. Grot. in Amos v. Diodor. l. 1. p. 39.

Louis de Dieu thinks, that Rephan is an Egyptian Term, and that in this Language it signifies Saturn. In a Coptick Alphabet that was sent from Rome to Scaliger, the Planet Saturn is call'd Rephan. The Arabick Word Reph, signifies Voracity, a Quality very well agreeing to Saturn, who, according to the Fable, devoured his own Children. Vossius believes Rephan, or, as Amos has it, Chiun or Chevan, was the Moon. Those that reject Rephan, and keep to the Hebrew Text of Amos, maintain, that Chiun or Chevan signifies Saturn. [c] The Arabians, Syrians, and Persians, thus call that false Deity. Others have thought, [d] that Rephan, of the Seventy, is a meer Fault of the Transcribers, who have taken a K for a P, and so instead of ΚΕΦΑΝ have read ΡΕΦΑΝ. And these are the principal Conjectures that have been proposed concerning Rempham. The Reader may see our Dissertation concerning the Idolatry of the Israelites in the Wilderness, printed before the Commentary upon the twelve lesser Prophets. REPAST, or Food that was set upon the Tombs of the Dead. Cœna mortui. [Baruch. vi. 31.] Baruch mentions it in these Words. Rugiunt autem clamantes contra Deos suos, sicut in cœna mortui. The Pagans howl in the Presence of their Gods, as in the Repast which is made for the Dead. He speaks of certain Solemnities, wherein the Idolaters us'd to make great Lamentations: For Example, in the Feasts of Adonis. As to the Repasts for the Dead, they are distinguish'd into two Kinds: One was made in the House of the Defunct, at the Return of the Mourners from the Grave. To this were invited the Kindred and Friends of the Deceased; where they did not fail to express their Grief by Cries and Lamentations. The other Kind was made upon the Tomb itself of the dead Person, where they provided a Repast for the wandering Souls, and believed that the Goddess Trivia, who presides over the Streets and Highways, repair'd thither in the Night-time. But in truth they were Beggars and poor People, who came thither in the Darkness of the Night, and carry'd away what was left upon the Tomb. [Ovid. Fast.]

Est honor & tumulis animas placare paternas,
Parvaque in extructas munera ferre pyras.

Sometimes, however, the Relations made a small Repast upon the Tomb of the Deceased. [Nonnius Marcell. ex Varrone.] Ad sepulchrum antiquo more silicernium confecimus, id est, περίδειπνον, quo pransi discedentes dicimus alius alii Vale.

The Custom of setting Food upon the Sepulchres of the Dead, was common among the Hebrews. Tobit thus advises his Son; [Tob. iv. 17.] Pour out thy Bread on the Burial of the Just, but give nothing to the Wicked. That is to say, not to partake in the Repast with the Relations, who perform'd the same Ceremony. And Jesus the Son of Sirach affirms, that [Ecclus. xxx. 18.] Delicates poured upon a Mouth shut up, are as Messes of Meat set upon a Grave. What is thus set upon a Tomb, is utterly lost as to the dead Person; he can have no Benefit from it. And elsewhere; [Ecclus. vii. 33.] A Gift hath Grace in the Sight of every Man living, and for the Dead detain it not.

This Custom was almost universal. We find it among the Greeks, the Romans, and almost all the People of the East. It still obtains in Syria, in Babylonia, and in China. St. Austin observes, that in his Time, in [Aug. Ep. 22. 29. nov. edit.] Africa, they laid Victuals upon the Tombs of the Martyrs, and in Church-yards. The thing at first was done very innocently, but afterwards it degenerated into an Abuse; and the greatest Saints, and most zealous Bishops, as St. Austin, and St. Ambrose, had much Difficulty to suppress it. St. Monica being at Milan, had a mind, according to Custom, to offer Bread and Wine to the Memory of the Martyrs; but the Porter would not open the Door to her, because St. Ambrose had forbid him; she therefore summitted with an humble Obedience. [Aug. Confess. l. 6. c. 2.]

The Repast that was made in the House of the Deceased among the Jews, was also of two Kinds. One was during the Time that the Mourning continu'd, and these Repasts were look'd upon as unclean, because those that partook of them were unclean, as having assisted at the Obsequies of the dead Person. Hosea says; Their Sacrifices shall be unto them as the Bread of Mourners; all that eat thereof shall be polluted. [Hos. ix. 4.] And in the Form that the Israelites made Use of, when they offer'd their First-fruits, they address'd themselves thus to the Lord; "O Lord, I have "not neglected thy Ordinances; I have not "used these things while I was in Mourn-"ing; I have made no Use of them at the "Funerals of the Dead." God would not permit Ezekiel to mourn for his Wife. Cover not thy Lips, and eat not the Bread of Men. [Eze. xxiv. 17.] And Jeremiah; Neither shall Men give them the Cup of Consolation, to drink for their Father, or for their Mother. [Jer. xvi. 7.]

The other Repasts made in the Time of Mourning, are those which were given after the Funeral. Josephus relates, that [Joseph. de bello, l. 2. c. 1.] Archelaus treated the whole People in a magnificent Manner, after he had compleated the seven Days Mourning for the King his Father. He there adds, That it was the Custom of his Nation to make great Feasts for the Relations, which could not be done without an Injury to many Families, which were not in a Condition to support such large Expences. St. Pauline commends [Paulin. illustrat. p. 29. 30.] Pammachius, for having made a great Feast for the Poor, in the Basilicon of St. Peter, on the Day of the Funeral of his Wife Paulina.

REPENTANCE, Pœnitentia; in Greek, Metanoia. This Word is generally taken for that Contrition, Compunction, Regret, or Reluctance that arise in us, after having done something that we ought not to have done; join'd to a sincere Resolution of imposing a suitable Punishment upon ourselves for it. Rom. xi. 22. For the Gifts and Calling of God are without Repentance: And especially for the Sorrow of having offended God. It is also taken for the Works of Penitence or Penance, Fasting, Weeping, Alms, and Works of Satisfaction; and for the Sacrament of Penance, by means of which we obtain Forgiveness of the Sins we commit after * Baptism. There is a false Repen- tance, as that of Antiochus Epiphanes, of Judas Iscariot, of Pharaoh, of Saul, of Ahab. Judas wanted Confidence in the Mercy of God, and therefore fell into Despair. Antiochus had no sincere Contrition. Pharaoh and Saul were terrified, but not moved by a true Repentance; they continued hardned, and changed neither their Minds nor their Manners. Ahab was indeed touched, but he wanted Perseverance in doing good.

* The Author speaks here according to the Tenets of the Church of Rome, which makes Penance one of her seven Sacraments. The Church of England admits and recommends the thing, but not under the Notion of a Sacrament.

Levit. v. 5. Vulg. In Leviticus it is said, That he that shall acknowledge his Sin, shall repent of it, and shall offer the Sacrifices appointed for this Occasion. Agat pœnitentiam pro peccato, & offerat, &c. But the original Text says only, That he that shall have sinned, that shall have acknowledged his Fault, and confess'd it, shall offer the Victims prescribed by the Law. It does not expresly mention Repentance; but enjoins to acknowledge and confess the Fault, and then to offer the Sacrifices of Expiation. This is certainly to repent of it; for if the Offender was not touch'd with Repentance, nothing of this could be done.

Judg. xxi. 6, 15. ינחם נחם In the Book of Judges, the Children of Israel repent, and are touch'd with Remorse concerning the Loss of a Tribe of their Brethren: That is to say, they repent at having push'd the War too far against one of their own Tribes. Conversus Israel valde doluit, & egit pœnitentiam super interfectione unius tribus ex Israel. They afterwards consider of means to repair this Loss.

1 Sam. xv. 29. Samuel says to Saul; The Victorious of Israel will not pardon. The Hebrew is, The Strength of Israel will not lye, nor repent, for he is not a Man that he should repent. God has rejected you irrevocably; he will not change his Resolution, as Men that make Resolutions, and then repent of them, and perform them not. He has pass'd his Sentence of Reprobation against you, and will not depart from it.

St. Paul says in the same Sense, [a] Sine pœnitentia enim sunt dona & vocatio Dei. The Gifts and Calling of God are without Repentance. God does not revoke his Favours, he never forsakes us first. Non deserit, nisi deseratur.

Wisd. v. 3. The Author of the Book of Wisdom represents the Wicked to us in another Life, as repenting and bewailing. That is, they are seized with Compunction and Despair, at seeing good Men in Honour, while they themselves are abject and in Trouble. We know that in another Life, Repentance and Remorse are useless.

Wisd. xii. 10, 19. The same Author says, that when God shew'd his Judgments against the Canaanites, and chastised them by degrees, he gave them Time for Repentance. Partibus judicans dabat locum pœnitentiæ. He says the same thing when he speaks of the Hebrews and the Children of God, to shew us that the Rigour which God exerts against the Elect, as well as against the Reprobate, has no other End but to reform them, and to oblige them to repent of their Faults.

The Word Pœnitentia is sometimes taken for Vengeance or Retribution: For Example, Ecclesiasticus says, [b] That Elijah gave Unction to Kings for Repentance. Qui unguis Reges ad pœnitentiam. The Greek reads, Who anointest Kings to exercise Vengeance. Elijah received Orders from the Lord, to give the Royal Unction to Jehu and Hazael, to inflict the Vengeance of the Lord upon the House of Ahab. 1 Kings performed this Command, but gave Commission to his Disciple Elisha.
But we do not read that Elijah himself xix. 15, 16.

The sacred Writers often represent God as a Prince, who is moved with Regret, or Repentance, or Relenting, for having suffer'd or resolved upon certain Things: For Example, Moses says, that God repented Gen. vi. 6, that he had made Man, seeing that the 7.
Wickedness of his Actions had proceeded to such Extremity. 'Tis elsewhere said, 1 Sam. xv.
that he repented of having made Saul King 11. over his People. This is not to be understood, as if God had conceived any Regret at any thing that he had done wrong, or that he repents of a false Step that he had made, as a Man does when he perceives he has committed an Error. God is not capable of Repentance in this Sense. But sometimes he changes his Conduct towards those that are unfaithful to him, and after having treated them with Mercy, he corrects them with Severity, as if he had repented of what he had before done in their Favour.

Also God is said to repent of the Evil he was about to inflict, when moved with Compassion towards the Miserable, or intreated by their Prayers, or disarm'd by their Repentance, he remits the Punishment of their Sins, or does not execute the Threatnings he had made against them. Thus it is said in the Psalms, That he re- Psal. cv.
pented according to the Multitude of his 45.
Mercies, and that he caused his People to find Favour in the Eyes of those, to whom he had given them up into Bondage. Et pœnituit eum secundum multitudinem misericordiæ suæ. And in Jeremiah, the Lord Jerem.
declares, that if his People repent of the xviii. 8.
Evil for which he reproves them, he will also repent of the Evil which he had intended to make them suffer. This is to say, he would shew Indulgence to his People, if his People would return to him, and repent of their Iniquities. But on the contrary, if his People would not hear his Voice, nor obey his Commands, he would repent of the Good he had intended to do them. Pœnitentiam agam super bono quod locutus fueram ut facerem ei.

Mark i. 4. Luk. iii. 3. Matth. iii. 11. The Baptism of Repentance, is that which John the Baptist preached to the Jews, when he baptized them in Jordan, and exhorted them to bring forth Fruits worthy of Matt. iii. 8. Luk. iii. 8. Repentance. His Baptism did not remit Sins, but it prevailed with Sinners to receive the Pardon of them from the Baptism of our Saviour.

Penitence of the modern Jews. See the Articles EXPIATION and CONFESSION.

The Sacrament of Penance [a] instituted by Jesus Christ, to abolish Sins that are committed after Baptism, consists in Contrition, or a sincere Grief for our Sins, in the Confession of our Sins, and in the Satisfaction, or in the Exercise of satisfactory Works, and chiefly in the Amendment of our Faults, or in a Change of our Life and Conversation. Our Saviour established this Sacrament, by giving to his Apostles, and by the same Means to the Bishops and Priests their Successors, the Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven, to open and shut it, to bind Matt. xvi. 19. and loose. He has appointed them Judges of his Church, in his Name to exercise their Jurisdiction over the Souls of the Faithful. He has also at the same time invested them with the Office of Physicians, to administer Remedies to the inward Diseases of Christians, such as their Charity and Wisdom may inspire them with, in order to effect a Cure. See the Conduct of St. Paul towards the incestuous Person of Corinth.

Jonah iii. 5, 6, 7, &c. Matth. xii. 41. Luke xi. 32. The Repentance of the Ninevites is celebrated even in the Gospel. Jesus Christ tells the Jews, that the Ninevites would rise up in Judgment against them, because they repented at the Preaching of Jonah, and the Jews would not be converted at the Preaching of Jesus Christ, who was so far above Jonah. This Prophet speaks of the Ninevites after this manner. The People of Nineveh believed God, and proclaimed a Fast, and put on Sackcloth from the greatest of them even to the least of them. For Word came unto the King of Nineveh, and he arose from his Throne, and he laid his Robe from him, and covered him with Sackcloth, and sat in Ashes. And he caused it to be proclaimed, and published through Nineveh by the Decree of the King and his Nobles, saying, Let neither Man nor Beast, Herd or Flock, taste any thing; let them not feed nor drink Water: But let Man and Beast be covered with Sackcloth, and cry mightily unto God; yea, let them turn every one from his evil Way, and from the Violence that is in his Hands. Who can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce Anger, that we perish not. And God saw their Works, that they turned from their evil Way, and God repented of the Evil, that he had said that he would do unto them, and he did it not.

I. REPHAH, or Rapha, Son of Beriah, and Grandson of Ephraim. 1 Chron. vii. 25.

II. REPHAH, or Arapha, Father of the antient Giants of Palestine, from whom they were call'd Rephaim or Raphaim. 1 Chron. xx. 4. Gen. xiv. 5. See REPHAIM.

REPHAIM, or Raphaim, the antient Giants of the Land of Canaan. There were antiently several Families of them in this Country. 'Tis commonly thought, that they were descended from one called Rephah or Rapha; but others imagine that the Word Rephaim properly signify'd Giants, in the antient Language of this People. There were of the Rephaim beyond Jordan, at Ashteroth Karnaim, in the time of Abraham, when Chedorlaomer made War against them. There were also some of them in Gen. xiv. 5 this Country in the Time of Moses. Og King of Bashan was one of the Posterity of the Rephaim. Also in the time of Josh. xii. 4. Joshua there were some of their Descendants in the Land of Canaan. Lastly, we Josh. xvii. 15. hear of them still in David's time, in the 1 Chron. City of Gath. The Giants Goliath, Sippai, xx. 4, 5, 6. Lahmi, and others, were some Remains of the Rephaim. Their Magnitude and Strength are known from Scripture. Our Dissertation upon the Giants may be consulted.

The Valley of the Rephaim or Giants, was a famous place in Joshua's time, and Josh. xv. 8. also in King David's. It is mentioned xviii. 16. likewise by Isaiah, xvii. 5. The Philistines 2 Sam. v. 18, 22. encamped there more than once. It is 1 Chron. xi. 15. xiv. 9. also called in the Greek, the Valley of the Titans, and in the Vulgate, the Valley of the Giants. Joshua places the Valley of 2 Sam. Rephaim as one of the Limits of the Por- xxiii. 13. tion of Judah. It was very near Jerusalem, and may be doubted whether it belonged to Judah or to Benjamin, because of the Proximity of these two Tribes. Eusebius places it in Benjamin, but Joshua xviii. 16. and those Passages of the Books of Samuel where it is mentioned, insinuate that it belong'd to Judah, and was to the South or West of Jerusalem.

REPHIDIM, or Raphidim, was a Station or Encampment of the Israelites in the Desart. Departing from the Wilderness of Exod. xvii. 1. Sin, they came to Rephidim, where the People wanted Water; they began therefore to murmur against Moses, saying to him, Why have you brought us out of Egypt, to make us dye with Thirst in this Desart, we, and our Children, and our Cattle?

Cattle? Moses then cry'd to the Lord, and said, What shall I do with this People? they are ready to stone me to death. God return'd him this Answer; Carry the People to the Rock of Horeb, and take some of the Elders along with you, I shall be there upon the Rock before you, and you shall strike it with your wonderful Rod, and Water shall gush out, that the People may drink. Moses in the Presence of the Elders, did what God had commanded him to do. He struck the Rock, and presently the Waters burst forth in abundance, with which the People quenched their Thirst. This Place is called Temptation, because of the Complaints of the Children of Israel, and because they there tempted the Lord, saying, Is the Lord among us, or is he not?

Rephidim could not be far from Horeb, because God order'd Moses to go from thence to the Rock of Horeb, to give the People Water. And 'twas this same Water that served the Israelites, not only in the Encampment of Rephidim, and in that of Mount Sinai, but also in their other Encampments, perhaps as far as Cadesh-barnea. 1 Cor. x. 4. St. Paul says, that this Rock followed them in their Journey, and that it was the Figure or Type of Jesus Christ. For they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ. Whether it was that the Stream of Water follow'd them, or that they follow'd the Running of the Water, or whether they always carried of this Water along with them, Ælian. var. hist. l. 12. c. 40. as Ælian says the Water of Choaspes always followed the King of Persia, that is, that it was always carried after him, because he would drink no other: Or, lastly, whether the Rock of Horeb might not be drawn upon a Carriage, in the Manner of a great Tun always full, and always open to whoever had Inclination to drink.

This last Hypothesis is embraced by the Rabbins, and by some of the antient Fathers. Tertull. de Patientia. For example, Tertullian; Post mannæ scatilem pluviam, post petræ aquatilem sequelam. Ambrof. de Sacrament. l. 1. c. 1. St. Ambrose, Nonne immobilis petra, quæ populum sequebatur? St. Chrysostom, Ambrosiaster, Photius, as cited by Oecumenius, Thomas and Cantacuzenus, in their Commentaries upon the Tenth Chapter of the first Epistle to the Corinthians, speak much after the same manner. The Jews add, that these Waters being granted for the Sake of the Merits of Miriam, the Sister of Moses, they failed as soon as she was dead; and hence it is, that at the Encampment of Cadesh-barnea, which was soon after the Death of Miriam, we see the People again fall into Numb. xx. 1, 2, 3, &c. Murmurings for want of Water. In our Commentary upon Exodus xvii. and upon the first Epistle to the Corinthians x. 4. these several Opinions are further examin'd and inquired into; the judicious Reader will easily form his own Sentiments, by having them barely mentioned here.

This Miracle at Rephidim happen'd in the Year of the World 2513, in the second Month after the Departure from Egypt. Travellers say, that at the Foot of the Mount of Horeb, is still to be seen the Brook of Water that God caused to gush out from thence, at the Instigation of Moses. Others say, that indeed there is a Stream that runs at the Foot of this Mountain; but as to the Rock itself, there is no Water that runs from it, but there may be seen, as it were, twelve Mouths, from Morizon, Voiage. l. 1. c. 1. whence Water may have flowed heretofore.

'Twas at the same Encampment of Rephidim, that Joshua obtained that famous Victory against the Amalekites, of which Exod. xviii. 8, 9, 10. we have already spoken more than once. See Amalek and Joshua. While Joshua and the Israelites fought against Amalek, Moses lifted up his Hands towards Heaven, and when he began to be weary, Aaron and Hur, who were with him upon the Mountain, supported his Arms, for they perceived, that while they were elevated, Israel had the Advantage; but as they began to sink, the Battle declined in favour of Amalek.

REPOSE, or Rest. This was enjoin'd the Israelites on the Sabbath Day, for the Glory of God, in that he rested after the six Days of Creation. See Sabbath.

Repose also signifies a calm, fix'd, and secure Habitation. You shall go before your Brethren, until the Lord shall give Rest to your Brethren, as well as to you, in Deut. iii. 20. the Land which they are going to make a Conquest of. And again; For ye are not Deut. xii. 9. as yet come to the Rest, and to the Inheritance, which the Lord your God giveth you. You are not as yet settled in that Land which you are to possess. And Naomi says to Ruth, My Daughter, shall I not seek Ruth iii. 1. Rest for thee, that it may be well with thee? I shall endeavour to procure you a Settlement. And David speaking of the Ark of the Covenant, which till his time had no fix'd Place of Settlement; Arise, O Lord, into Psal. cxxxii 8. thy Rest, Thou and the Ark of thy Strength. And Ecclesiasticus; O be merciful unto Jerusalem, thy holy City, the Place of thy Rest. Ecclus. xxxvi. 15.

In a moral and spiritual Sense, Requies stands for the fix'd and permanent State of Repose of the Blessed in Heaven for all Eternity.

St. Paul makes an Application of what is said of the Settlement of the Israelites in the Land of Promise, to that Repose the Saints are to enjoy in Heaven. Quibus juravi in ira meâ si introibunt in requiem meam. I swore to them in my Wrath, that Psal. xciv. 11. they should not enter into my Rest, or into the Land of Canaan. Therefore, says St. Paul, as they could not enter therein Heb. iii. 17, 18, 19. iv. 1, 2, 3. by reason of their Unbelief, let us be afraid of of following their Steps. For we cannot enter but by Faith, and by a ſtrict Obſervance of his Ordinances.

REPRESENTATION. The Law of God forbids all Sorts of Repreſentations of Men, Beaſts, Stars, or other Things, made in order to pay them a ſuperſtitious Worſhip; whether it be in Relievo, emboſſed, by Painting or Sculpture, in Wood, Stone, Plaiſter, Copper, Gold or Silver; every thing that may lead to Idolatry. Thou ſhalt have no other Gods before me. Thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelf any graven Image, nor the Likeneſs of any thing in Heaven above, in the Earth beneath, or in the Exod. xx. 3. 4. Waters under the Earth. But the beſt Interpreters take notice, that this general Prohibition muſt be limited agreeably to the expreſs Words of Leviticus xxvi. 1. where the ſame Command is repeated with the Addition of Ut adoretis ea; you ſhall make none of theſe things to worſhip them. We know that Moſes himſelf made Cherubims, and fixed them upon the Ark; that Solomon alſo made ſeveral Figures of Cherubims in the Sanctuary; that he had Brazen Bulls made to ſupport the Brazen Sea. Therefore, where there was no fear of Idolatry, there God did not forbid the bare making of Images and Repreſentations, when they were only made for Ornament.

פסל Sculptile. 70. Εἴδωλον, alias Γλυπτὸν, Sculptile. The Hebrew Word Peſel, which the Vulgate has render'd by Sculptile, Exodus xx. 3, 4. that is to ſay, a graven Image, is by the Septuagint tranſlated Idolum, a vain Repreſentation: And in Onkelos, by Zelum, which ſignifies an Image, a Picture. Therefore by this Word we may underſtand all kind of Figures in Relief; and under the Word omnem ſimilitudinem, which

REPROACH. This Word is uſed in two Senſes; for the Diſgrace or Confuſion that any one ſuffers himſelf, or for that which he is the Cauſe of to another. Among the Hebrews, to be uncircumciſed was a Reproach; and when Joſhua circumciſed the People that were born in the Take us to Wives, &c. The Lord ſtruck the Philiſtines with a ſhameful Malady in ano, and thereby loaded them with an eternal Reproach. Pſalm. lxxviii. 66.

Servitude, Slavery, involuntary Poverty, Subjection to their Enemies, to be ſtruck with any extraordinary Diſeaſe, as the Leproſy, &c. all theſe were reckon'd a Reproach, becauſe it was ſuppoſed to be the Effect of Cowardice, or Idleneſs, or the bad Management of thoſe that ſuffer'd them; or that they were a Correction ſent from God, to puniſh their Injuſtice and Impiety. Thus God in an hundred Places threatens his People, to make them a Reproach and a Proverb to Men, and which has alſo come to paſs in an hundred Inſtances, by the Servitudes with which they have been overwhelmed, and by the Misfortunes which have happened to them. The Pſalmiſt often complains, that God had made him a Reproach to thoſe that were about him, who inſulted over his Misfortunes and Diſgraces.

To take up a Reproach againſt his Neighbour; opprobrium non accepit adverſus Pſal. xv. 3.

REPROBATION. The Latin Word Reprobatio is often put to expreſs, that one rejects a thing that before one had admitted and embraced; or that we will no longer make uſe of a Perſon or Thing that we had before made uſe of. For example, St. Paul ſays, that God had reprobated, Heb. vii. 18.
rejected, or diſanull'd the Ceremonial Law, becauſe of the Weakneſs and Unprofitableneſs thereof. Reprobatio fit præcedentis Pſal. cxviii. 22. Matth. xxi. 42. Mark xii. 10. Luke xx. 17. 1 Pet. ii. 4. 7.
mandati, propter infirmitatem ejus & imbecillitatem. We read alſo, The Stone which the Builders (reprobated, or) refuſed, is become the head Stone of the Corner.

To reprobate, often ſignifies barely to reject. The Lord (reprobates or) bringeth Pſal. xxxiii. 10.
the Counſel of the Heathen to nought, he rejects and condemns it. A wiſe Sentence ſhall be (reprobated, or) rejected, when it cometh out of a Fool's Mouth; that is, it Ecclus. xx. 20.

calls the Princes of Judah reprobate Silver. Reprobate Silver ſhall Men call them, becauſe the Lord hath rejected them. That is, bad Silver of a coarſe Alloy, which will not be taken in Traffick. *

* Theſe Criticiſms, upon the Uſe of the Verb Reprobo, chiefly relate to the Latin Vulgate.

Laſtly,

Lastly, to reprobate, expresses the Decree of God, to abandon the Wicked to the greatest of Evils, by not taking them out of that Mass of Corruptions, in which we are all involved by our Birth, and in not affording them the Graces necessary to their arriving at eternal Happiness.[a] There are Reprobates, who at their Baptism receive Remission of their Sins, and afterwards several other actual Graces; but who do not receive the Gift of final Perseverance.[b] Others are lost, either because of their Birth, which is corrupted by original Sin, or as a Punishment of their actual Sins, of which they have made themselves guilty, and of which they have not repented. But all those whom God reprobates, he does not reprobate them by making them wicked but by not granting them the Benefits of his gratuitous Mercy. Merito namque peccati universa massâ damnata est; nec obdurat Deus impertiendo malitiam, sed non impertiendo misericordiam. Quibus enim non impertitur, nec digni sunt, nec merentur; ac potius ut non impertiatur, hoc digni sunt, hoc merentur.

REPTILES; in Latin, Reptilia; in Greek, Herpeta; in Hebrew, Ramisim. These are Animals that have no Feet, or at least such short ones, that they seem to creep or crawl upon the Ground. Thus Serpents, Earth-worms, Locusts, Catterpillars, Flies, are taken for Reptiles. The Hebrews put Fishes also in the Rank of Reptiles, whatever Nature or Shape they may be of. This Name is sometimes also extended to such Land Animals, as are not of the Nature of the great Beasts for Service, nor of the larger wild Beasts. In a Word, to creep upon the Earth, is sometimes used for moving, or going to and fro, as all four-footed Creatures do.

REPUDIATION, or Divorce. The Law of Moses allowed Polygamy and Divorce among the Hebrews.[c] We have already spoke of the Article of DIVORCE, and more at length in a Dissertation upon the same Subject, before our Commentary upon Deuteronomy. We shall only relate here what Leo of Modena says, concerning the modern Practice of the Jews in this Respect. A young Girl under ten Years of Age, whether she has a Father or not, if she is become a Widow, and afterwards marries an Husband by the Consent of her Mother and Brethren, and this Husband should happen to displease her, she may be unmarried again, till she has attained the Age of Twelve Years and a Day, which is the Age at which she commences Woman. It is enough for her to say, that she will not have such an one for her Spouse, of which she must take two Witnesses, who must put down her Refusal in Writing; and by Virtue of this Writing she is unmarried, and may marry again to whom she pleases. He that has defiled a Maid, or who has corrupted her in any manner, is obliged to take her to Wife by the Sentence of the Judges, without having it in his Power ever to put her away, and must give Fifty Shekels to the Father of the Woman. Deut. xxii. 28, 29.

Leo of Modena, Ceremonies of the Jews, p. 4. c. 4.

Moses allows a Man to put away his Wife, when he finds her disagreeable to him. When a Man hath taken a Wife and married her, and it come to pass that she find no Favour in his Eyes, because he hath found some Uncleanness in her; then let him write her a Bill of Divorcement, and give it in her Hand, and send her out of his House. What may be meant by the Uncleanness here mentioned, has been great Matter of Inquiry; and the Commentators may be consulted hereupon. But this is the Practice of the modern Jews, according to Leo of Modena. Though a Woman should give no Occasion of Complaint to her Husband by her Conduct, yet he may divorce her, if he found her not agreeable to him. However, except in the Case of Jealousy, or of some Misbehaviour with which he could accuse his Wife, he ought not to divorce her. But to prevent any Abuse that might attend this Indulgence of the Law, the Rabbins have contrived many Formalities to be gone through, to make the Affair tedious and troublesome; so that it often happens, that before the Divorce can be compleated, the Parties have chang'd their Minds, are reconciled again to each other, and live together in Friendship afterwards.

Deut. xxiv. 1.

Leo of Modena, Ceremonies of the Jews, p. 4. c. 6.

The Form of these Letters of Divorce, which they call Get, and which they give to a Woman, is drawn up by a Scribe, in the Presence of one or more learned Rabbins. It ought to be written upon ruled Vellum, and to contain neither more nor less than twelve Lines, and this with square Letters, and a Thousand other little trifling Circumstances which must be observed, as well in the Characters and the Manner of writing, as in the Names and Surnames of the Man and Woman. Besides, neither the Scribe, nor the Rabbins present, nor the Witnesses, are to be akin either to the Man or Woman, or to each other. This is the Substance of the Bill of Divorce. Upon such a Day of such a Month, of such a Year, I such an one voluntarily divorce thee, dismiss thee, and set thee free, thee such an one, who hast been formerly my Wife; and I permit thee to marry again with whomsoever thou pleasest. Signed by such and such, as Witnesses.

The Bill being written, the Rabbin examins the Husband with what Subtilty he is able, to find out whether it is with his full and free Consent that he repudiates his Wife. If it can be done, they take care that at least ten Persons may be present at this Action, besides the two Witnesses that sign, and two others to witness the Date. After this the Rabbin examines the Woman, and then the Husband gives her the Parchment into her Hands, extended and placed by each other, saying at the same time, "Here is thy Repudiation, I separate thee "from my self, and leave thee at Liberty "to marry whoever thou pleasest." The Woman takes it, and gives it to the Rabbin, who reads it once more; after which she is at full Liberty. There are besides, several other little Observances, which for Brevity I omit; they were only invented to create Delay and Difficulty, that the Parties may have the greater Opportunity of an Accommodation. The Rabbin advises the Woman not to marry again in less than three Months, for fear she may already be with Child. When they depart from thence, the Man and Woman separate from each other, and may no longer dwell together; and each of them may marry again to whom they think convenient. This is what Leo of Modena says of this Matter.

Moses by the Terms of the Law, allows only Men to divorce their Wives; at least, he says nothing that may give any Colour for Women to take this Liberty with their Husbands: And in the Old Testament we have no Example of any such Divorce, that is plain and explicit. Salome the Sister of Herod the Great, is the first that we know, who made a Divorce between herself and her Husband Costobarus; in which she acted, says Josephus, against the Laws of the Jews, which did not allow Wives to put away their Husbands, and which forbid such to marry others, without first obtaining a Bill of Divorce from their former Husbands. Herodias also, mention'd in the Gospel, had quitted her Husband, as may be inferr'd from what Josephus says of her. This Author says, that his own Wife also, whom he married after he had obtain'd his Freedom, quitted him at Alexandria, a little after he had marry'd her.

Matt. xiv. 3. Mark vi. 17. Joseph. l. 18. c. 7. Joseph. lib. de vita sua.

Jesus Christ takes Notice of the same Custom, when he says, If a Woman shall put away her Husband, and be married to another, she committeth Adultery. The three Sisters of the younger Agrippa, King of Trachonitis and Batanea, all usurped this Right of putting away their Husbands. Berenice the Elder, who had first marry'd Herod King of Chalcis her Uncle, afterwards marry'd Polemon King of Pontus, and repudiated him some time after. Mariamne the Sister of Berenice forsook Archelaus her first Husband, and marry'd Demetrius the Alabarch, or Head of the Jews of Alexandria. Lastly, Drusilla, after having been married to Aziz King of Emesa, left him some time after, and married Felix the Governor of Judea.

As to the Practice of Repudiation among Christians, limited, as it is by our Saviour, to the Case of Adultery only, we have already spoke of it under the Article DIVORCE. Our Dissertation may be read upon this Subject, as also Selden's Uxor Hæbraica, and the Commentators upon Matth. v. 32.

REPUTARE. This Word is, in some measure, consecrated to signify the reputed or imputed Righteousness of Abraham; according to that of St. Paul; Credidit Abraham Deo, & reputatum est ei in justitiam. Rom. iv. 3.

Reputare is also put for the Notion or Idea we have conceived of any one. Nonne extraneæ reputatæ sumus ab eo? Has he not treated us as if we were not his Daughters? Gen. xxxi. 15.

Reputare is also used for speaking or thinking within one's self: Saul autem reputabat inter se; Saul said within himself; I will not put him to Death, but I will expose him to the Arms of the Philistines. 1 Sam. xviii. 17. Aman reputans quod nullum alium Rex, nisi se, vellet honorare; Haman imagined, that the King thought of honouring none but him. Esth. vi. 6.

Jesus Christ, at his Passion, was numbred with the Transgressors: Cum iniquis reputatus est. Mark xv. 28. Under Solomon's Government, Gold and Silver were reputed as nothing in Jerusalem. 2 Chron. ix. 20. If a Fool did but know how to hold his Tongue, he would be reputed a wise Man. Prov. xvii. 28.

RESEN a City of Assyria, that was built by Ashur, between Nineveh and Calah, upon the River Chaboras in Mesopotamia: Gen. x. 12. we read of a famous City call'd Resine, or Resaine. There are also found some Medals that were struck in this City. See our Commentary upon Gen. x. 12. and Cellar. Asiæ, l. 3. c. 15. p. 733.

RESEPH. This Word is found in the Hebrew [a] of Habakkuk iii. 5. where the Vulgate translates it, Egredietur Diabolus antes pedes ejus. And the Septuagint; Egredietur in campos post pedes ejus. Aquila has translated Reseph by Volatile: Symmachus, Theodotion, and the fifth Edition, by Volucre a Bird, a flying Thing. It may very well be render'd; Burning Coals shall walk before him *; and be explain'd by the Fire of the Wrath of God, or by the Distempers with which he afflicts his Enemies; or by the Carbo, which is a kind of Pestilence. St. Jerom, from the Tradition of the Hebrews, says, that Reseph is a Demon, who exerts his Power over such as are like himself; in the same manner as Beelzebub Prince of the Devils, mention'd in the Gospel: That the Scripture gives him the Name of a Bird, because of his great Agility and Readiness: That it was he that tempted Eve in the Garden, and was cursed of God; whence came his Name Reseph, which may signify, to creep upon the Ground [a]: And, lastly, that this Serpent presented himself before our Saviour, after he came out of the Water of his Baptism, and tempted him in the Wilderness forty Days.

RESHEPH, or Reseph, Son of Rephah, a Grandson of Sarah the Daughter of Ephraim. The Text seems to say, that Resheph was the immediate Son of Sarah. 1 Chron. vii. 25.

RESPECT of Persons. God appointed, that the Judges should pronounce their Sentences without any Respect of Persons; That they should consider neither the Poor, nor the Rich, nor the Weak, nor the Powerful; That they should attend only to Truth and Justice. God has no Respect of Persons; Deus Personam non accipit, nec munera. And the Jews told our Saviour, That he told the Truth, without any Respect of Persons, and without Fear; Non enim respicis personam hominum. Saint Jude, instead of the Phrase, to have Respect of Persons, makes use of this, to Admire Persons; Mirantes personas quæstûs causâ. Isaiah lays it down as one of the distinguishing Marks of the Messiah, that he should have no Respect of Persons. Lev. xix. 15. Deut. xvi. 1, 17, 19. Deut. x. 17. 2 Chron. xix. 7. Mat. xxii. 16. Jude, ver. 16. Isai. xxiii. 2.

RESSA, a pretty famous City of Arabia Petrea; probably, the same as Rissah, an Encampment of the Children of Israel in the Desart; of which we shall speak in its Place. Josephus mentions the Castle of Ressa in Idumea: And St. Jerom, in the Life of St. Hilarion, says, that this Saint made Converts of the whole City of Ressa, situate between Cadesh and Gaza. Perhaps this is the City of Larissa, mention'd by William of Tyre [b]; and Arischi an Episcopal City in the Desart of the Children of Israel [c]. Laris was a Maritime City upon the Way to Egypt. Joseph. de Bello, l. 1. c. 12.

RESTITUTION. Natural Justice requires, that we should repair whatever Injuries we do to our Neighbour, whether in his Body, or his Estate, or his Reputation. The Law of Moses prescribed, [d] That they should give Life for Life, Eye for Eye, Tooth for Tooth, Hand for Hand, Foot for Foot, Burning for Burning, Wound for Wound, Stripe for Stripe. It also ordain'd, That they should render five Oxen for one Ox, and four Sheep for one Sheep: That the Thief should be sold, to make Restitution for what he had stole: That if the Thief should be found possess'd of any Beast of Service, as of an Ox, or of an Ass, or even of a Sheep, he should restore it two-fold: That whoever shall do any Damage in the Field of another, shall repair the Damage, according to the Estimation that should be made of it. He that, by Ignorance, should omit to give to the Temple what was appointed by the Law, for Example, in the Tythes or First-fruits, was obliged to restore it to the Priests, and a Fifth Part beside; over-and-above which, he was obliged to offer a Ram, for the Expiation of his Sin. Nehemiah prevail'd with all those Israelites to make Restitution, who had taken Interest of their Brethren: I pray you let us leave off this Usury. Restore, I pray you, to them, even this Day, their Lands, their Vineyards, their Olive-yards, and their Houses, also the hundredth part of the Money, and of the Corn, the Wine, and of the Oyl, that ye exact of them. Exod. xxii. 1, 2, 3, &c. Lev. v. 15. Nehem. v. 10, 11.

Zaccheus, in St. Luke, promises a four-fold Restitution, to all such as he had extorted upon, in his Office as a Publican: Et si aliquem defraudavi, reddo quadruplum. The Roman Laws condemned to a four-fold Restitution all such as were convicted of Extortion or Fraud. Zaccheus here condemns himself, and imposes that Penalty upon himself that the Laws subjected him to: To which he adds the half of all his Goods; which was what the Law did not require of him. Luk. xix. 8.

He that had kill'd a labouring Beast, or any other Beast, as an Ox, was to render another for it, or the Value of it. Lev. xxiv. 18, 21.

The Jews expected Elias, who was to restore all Things: Elias venturus est, & restituet omnia. This is an Allusion to those Words of Malachi; Behold, I will send you Elijah the Prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful Day of the Lord. And he shall turn the Heart of the Fathers to the Children, and the Heart of the Children to their Fathers, lest I come and smite the Earth with a Curse. Also St. Peter, in the Acts, calls the Last Day, The Day of Restitution of all Things; Usque in tempora restitutionis omnium. At the End of the World Jesus Christ will unite the Church with the Synagogue, the Jew with the Christian, the Christian with the Gentile: Then all Things will be restored to a perfect Union, and there will be but one Shepherd and one Flock. Mat. xvii. 11. Mark ix. 11. Mal. iv. 5, 6. Acts iii. 21.

RESURRECTION. The Belief of a Resurrection from the Dead, is an Article of Religion in common to the Jew and the Christian: It is found very expresly taught both in the Old and New Testament. I do not speak of that miraculous Resurrection, which consists in reviving for a time, to die again afterwards; as Elijah, Elisha, Jesus Christ, and his Apostles, have raised some from the Dead; but I mean a general Resurrection of the Dead, which 1 Kings xvii. 22. 2 Kings iv. 35.

will come to paſs at the End of the World, and which will be follow'd by an Immortality either of Happineſs or Miſery. For Example: The Pſalmiſt ſays, For thou wilt not leave my Soul in Hell, or in the Grave, neither wilt thou ſuffer thine holy one to ſee Corruption. Job; For I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he ſhall ſtand in the latter Day upon the Earth. And though after my Skin, Worms deſtroy this Body, yet in my Fleſh I ſhall ſee God: whom I ſhall ſee for my ſelf, and mine Eyes ſhall behold, and not another; though my Reins be conſumed within me. Ezekiel alſo, in his Viſion of a great Quantity of Bones in a large Field, and which, at the Breath of the Spirit of the Lord, began to unite, and to be covered with Fleſh, Nerves, and Skin, and at laſt to revive; has left us a Proof and an Aſſurance of a general Reſurrection. See alſo Iſaiah xxvi. 19.

The Author of the Book of Wiſdom ſpeaks of it in a very lively manner, when he ſays, that the Souls of good Men, and ſuch as ſuffer Perſecution in this World, ſhall receive a Recompence for it in the Day of Viſitation: For thus he calls the Reſurrection, in more Places than one. In the Second Book of the Maccabees we ſee the ſame Truth maintained in a more expreſs manner ſtill. One of the ſeven Brethren of the Maccabees, who ſuffer'd Death at Antioch under Antiochus Epiphanes, directing his Diſcourſe to this Tyrant, tells him, Thou, like a Fury, takeſt us out of this preſent Life; but the King of the World ſhall raiſe us up, who have died for his Laws, unto everlaſting Life. The Mother of theſe holy Martyrs encouraged them to the Combat, by the ſame Hope of the Reſurrection: And they were ſo entirely poſſeſs'd with it, that they deſpiſed Death, Tortures, and all the Menaces of the King.

2 Mac. vii. 9, 14, 23, 29.

At the Time that our Saviour appear'd in Judea, the Reſurrection from the Dead was received as one of the principal Articles of the Jewiſh Religion, by the whole Body of the Nation [a], except only the Sadducees, who deny'd it. The Jews then tolerated them; and even there were ſeveral of them who held ſome of the firſt Employments of the Republick [b]; but at this Day they look upon 'em as Hereticks, Epicureans, and maintain that they have no Share in the Life to come [c]. Our Saviour, in his Goſpel, has effectually confuted the Error of the Sadducees: He has promis'd his faithful Servants, that they ſhall enjoy a compleat State of Happineſs after the general Reſurrection. He aroſe himſelf from the Dead, to give us, in his own Perſon, a Proof, a Pledge, a Pattern of our future Reſurrection. St. Paul, [d] in almoſt all his Epiſtles, ſpeaks of a general Reſurrection; refutes thoſe who deny'd or oppos'd it; proves it to thoſe that had ſtarted any Difficulties about it; explains the Myſtery, the Manner, and ſeveral Circumſtances of it: He ſays, that to deny the Reſurrection of the Dead, is the ſame thing as to deny our Saviour's Reſurrection: If there be no Reſurrection of the Dead, then is Chriſt not riſen: And that, if we were not to riſe again from the Dead, we are of all Men the moſt miſerable.

1 Cor. xv. 13, 15, 16, 17, 19.

Some Jews teach, that all Men ſhall not riſe again, but only the Iſraelites; and, moreover, ſuch as have been very wicked among them, ſhall have no Part in this happy State. But others are of Opinion, that all Men in general ſhall riſe again. Some among them maintain, that when Men are once rais'd again, they ſhall be no more ſubject to Death. But others think they ſhall die again, and that their Souls alone ſhall enjoy everlaſting Happineſs. Upon this Subject ſee Menaſſe-ben-Iſrael, in his Third Book concerning the Reſurrection of the Dead.

Leo of Modena, in Part IV. Chap. xi. of The Ceremonies of the Jews, expreſſes himſelf thus in this Matter: "There are "Jews who think, with Pythagoras, "that Souls paſs from one Body to an"other; this they call Gilghul, or Circu"lation. They endeavour to ſupport their "Opinion from ſeveral Paſſages of Scrip"ture, taken chiefly out of Eccleſiaſtes "and Job. But this Notion is not "univerſal; and whether it be embra"ced or rejected, it makes no Schiſm "or Hereſy among them. As to the "Reſurrection of the Dead, 'tis one of "their thirteen Articles of Faith, That "at the End of the World, all the Dead "ſhall ariſe; and that God ſhall ſum"mon all Mankind to his general Judg"ment, whether in or out of the Body: "According to that of Daniel; And "many of them that ſleep in the Duſt "of the Earth ſhall awake, ſome to ever"laſting Life, and ſome to Shame and ever"laſting Contempt.

Dan. xii. 2.

'Tis alſo a common Opinion among the Jews, that all Men, at leaſt all the Iſraelites, ſhall ariſe in the Land of Iſrael; from whence proceeds that ardent Deſire they have always had, to be buried in this Country. They believe, thoſe that have this Advantage, will ariſe firſt, and, before all others, will enjoy the Happineſs of ſeeing the Kingdom of the Meſſiah. But then, what ſhall become of the Juſt who ſhall die and be buried out of the Land of Iſrael?

Iſrael? They anſwer, That God will open them Paſſages in the Earth, and ſubterraneous Conveyances, through which they ſhall roul into this Country; and when they are come thither, God will give them the Breath of Life, and they ſhall revive. They think it was for this, that Jacob and Joſeph ſhew'd ſo much Deſire to have their Bodies carry'd into the Land of Canaan. And we read in ſome of the Books of the Rabbins, that often they carry'd the Bodies of certain Jews, who had ſhew'd a more than ordinary Devotion, from very diſtant Countries, to be interred in the Land of Iſrael.

We have alſo ſeen, in the Chriſtian Church, a Variety of Opinions concerning the Reſurrection of the Dead. Several of the ancient Fathers [a] have acknowledged a two-fold Reſurrection. The firſt, is that which is to precede the Reign of the Meſſias, who is to reign a thouſand Years upon the Earth. The ſecond, is that which is to follow the Reign of a thouſand Years, and is to begin the Reign of the Saints in a State of everlaſting Happineſs. This is a Sentiment that theſe Fathers had borrow'd from the Jews; ſince it is found clear enough in the ſecond Book of Eſdras [b], in the Teſtament of the twelve Patriarchs [c], and in ſeveral of the Rabbins. We have treated of this Affair of the Reſurrection, in a particular Diſſertation, printed before the ſecond Tome of our Commentary upon St. Paul's Epiſtles.

The ancient Philoſophers that believed the Immortality of the Soul, admitted alſo of a Reſurrection. Whether they had received theſe Opinions from the Eaſtern People, among whom they had travelled; or whether they inferr'd a Reſurrection, from the Immortality of the Soul, as a neceſſary Conſequence; perſuading themſelves, that a Soul could not long continue, without being united to a Body. But this Reſurrection is by ſome explained after one manner, and by others after another. Pythagoras, who was the firſt that introduced the Sentiment of the Soul's Immortality among the Greeks, acknowledg'd a Metempſychoſis, or a Tranſmigration of the Soul out of one Body into another ſucceſſively. Thales [d] and Democritus [e] held alſo a kind of Reſurrection: But the Manner in which they explain'd it, is not known. As for Plato [f], we are better acquainted with what he thought about the Reſurrection: He was pretty much of Pythagoras's Opinion: He maintain'd, that the Souls that had already animated Bodies, paſſed from them into a State of Liberty, from whence they afterwards return'd to animate other Bodies.

This Doctrine of Plato was eſpouſed by the Phariſees among the Jews [g], and by Philo [h]. It appears alſo from the Goſpel, that many of the Jews admitted of a kind of Metempſychoſis among them, at the Time of our Saviour. But we find from other Authorites, taken from the Book of Wiſdom, and the Books of the Maccabees, that the Generality of the Nation held the Reſurrection much as we do now. And Jeſus Chriſt, in his Goſpel, ſuppoſes this Doctrine, and teaches it without any Contradiction, except from the Sadducees, who altogether deny'd it. The Apoſtles have urged it likewiſe: And notwithſtanding the Attempts of ſome Hereticks who oppoſed it, the Catholick Church has always conſtantly embraced it, as a fundamental Article of Chriſtianity.

John ix. 2. Mat. xvi. 14. Wiſd. iii. 6, 13. & iv. 15. 2 Mac. vii. 9, 14, 23, 29.

But there are many Opinions that have been tolerated in the Church, concerning the Time, the Manner, and other Circumſtances of this Reſurrection. When the Apoſtles asked of Chriſt, when the End of the World ſhould happen, and his Coming; He anſwer'd them, That the Angels themſelves did not know it, and he did not think it proper to be revealed to them: He only informs us, That this Laſt Day will come as a Thief in the Night, and ſhall ſurprize Mankind, when they leaſt expect it. St. Paul ſays, that at that Time many ſhall be alive, who ſhall paſs from Life to Death, and from Death to the Reſurrection, with ſuch Rapidity, that in the Twinkling of an Eye they ſhall be changed, and their Bodies ſhall be inveſted with Incorruptibility and Immortality.

Mark xiii. 32. Mat. xxiv. 43, 44. Theſſ. v. 2, 3, 4.

There are ſome Greek Fathers [i], and ſome Rabbins, who believe, that thoſe who ſhall then be found alive, ſhall not die at all, but ſhall only undergo that happy Change, of paſſing in an Inſtant from Life to Immortality. But the other Opinion ſeems to be more generally received, that all Men ſhall ſuffer the Sentence pronounced againſt the Children of Adam: Statutum eſt omnibus hominibus ſemel mori; poſt hoc autem Judicium: It is appointed for all Men once to die; and after Death, Judgment. Heb. ix. 27.

St. Jerom aſſures us, that the Tradition of the Jews is, That the Dead ſhall riſe in the Night-time, or at Break-of-Day, at the ſame Time as Jeſus Chriſt came out of his Tomb. This Tradition hath paſſed from the Synagogue to the Church, as may Chryfoft. in Matth. xxv. be feen by Lactantius [a], by St Chryfoftom, and by fuch Greek Writers as generally follow him. This Tradition is founded 2 Pet. iii. 10. upon thofe Words of St. Peter; The Day of the Lord will come as a Thief in the Night: And upon thofe of Jefus Chrift, Matth. xxv. 6. in the Parable of the Ten Virgins; At Midnight there was a Cry made, Behold, the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him. Prudent. hymn. cathemer. Prudentius, whofe Words are made ufe of by the Church [of Rome], in one of her Offices, thinks that the World will be at an End, and, confequently, the Refurrection commence, in the Morning. Thomas Aquinas, Toftatus, and Suarez, [b] on the contrary, are of Opinion, that it will be perform'd at Mid-day. * St. Paul informs us, 1 Cor. xv. 52, 53. that it will begin at the firft Sound of the Trumpet.

Thofe, among the Jews, who admit of a Tranfmigration of Souls, are perplex'd about the Manner in which the Refurrection is to be perform'd. For how can the Soul re-animate all the Bodies through which it has pafs'd? If it can animate but one of 'em, what muft become of the reft? Muft it have its own Choice, and return to that it likes beft? Thefe Difficulties very much gravel them. Some think it muft re-animate its firft Body; others, that it will be re-united with its laft; and that the other Bodies will remain in the Duft, as barren Trees are forfaken and deferted. I fhould rather conclude, that almoft all thofe who hold the Metempfychofis, do not admit of a general Refurrection; and that this Revolution, or fucceffive Paffage of the fame Soul through feveral Bodies, was what they underftood by a Refurrection. This I take to have been the Notion of thofe Pharifees mention'd by Jofephus.

'Tis inquired what will be the Nature of Bodies when raifed, what their Stature, their Age, their Sex? Jefus Chrift tells us Matth. xxii. 30. in the Gofpel, that after the Refurrection Men fhall be as the Angels of God; that is, according to the Fathers, they fhall be immortal, incorruptible, tranfparent, light, luminous, and, in fome fort, fpiritual, yet without quitting the Qualities of Bodies, as we find our Saviour's Body, after his Refurrection, was tangible, and had Flefh Luk. xxiv. 39. and Bones. But as Jefus Chrift laid afide the Brightnefs of the Glory of his Body, and did not fuffer it to fhew itfelf to his Difciples; the glorious and bright Emanations from the Bodies of the Bleffed, fhall Matth. xiii. 43. fhine as the Sun, as our Saviour expreffes it.

Some antient Hebrew Doctors [c] maintain, that Men fhall arife of the fame Stature, with the fame Qualities, and the fame corporal Defects that they had in their Life-time. That the Blind fhall arife blind, the Lame, lame, and fo of the reft. They confirm this Conjecture by the Excufe of Samuel, when he appear'd to the Witch of Endor, in the fame Shape that he had upon Earth; and by that Paffage of Ecclefiaftes; One Generation paffeth away, and another Eccl. i. 4. Generation cometh. Some Chriftians in St. Auftin's Time maintain'd the fame Opinion, which they founded upon Jefus Chrift's Appearance after his Refurrection, with all the Marks of his Wounds. But the holy Father hath confuted this Sentiment; [d] and undertakes to fhew, that if our our Saviour preferved the Marks of his Wounds, 'twas by an Effect of his Power, and to convince the Incredulity of his Difciples. See alfo what he fays, Enchyrid. de Fide, Spe, & Charitate, c. 9.

The Refurrection of Infants is attended with great Difficulties. If they are to arife little, weak, and fuch as they went out of this World; of what Ufe can their Refurrection be to them? And if they are to arife full grown, comely, like thofe of an advanced Age, they will not be the fame as they were, and this will not properly be a Refurrection. St. Auftin has treated of this Queftion with his ufual Accuracy and Modefty. [e] He will not venture to determine whether Children will arife fmall or great, but he rather inclines to that Opinion, which fuppofes them to arife as in a perfect Age. And elfewhere, [f] fpeaking of the Refurrection of Children Still-born, he fays, that the Refurrection will give them all the Perfection they would have had, if they had had time to grow up; and that it would fecure them from all fuch Imperfections, as they might have contracted had they liv'd longer. Many, both Antients and Moderns have thought, [g] that Men will arife at the Age at which Jefus Chrift died, that is, about the Age of thirty-three or thirty-five Years. So that both Old and Young will all appear to be about that Age, to fulfil thofe Words of St. Paul; Till we all come in the Ephef. iv. 13. Unity of the Faith, and of the Knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect Man, unto the Meafure of the Stature of the Fulnefs of Chrift. But the more judicious explain St. Paul, as meaning the Progrefs which the Faithful make both in Faith and Vertue, till they arrive at the compleat Age of Perfection.

Many Antients have doubted, [a] whether Women are to rise in their proper Sex. They grounded their Scruples upon those Words of Jesus Christ; In the Resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in Marriage; but are as the Angels of God in Heaven. (Matth. xxii. 30.) And upon what is said by St. Paul; To be conformed to the Image of his Son. (Rom. viii. 29.) To this is added, that, according to Moses, Man alone was created out of the Earth, and that Woman was taken out of Man, as an Accident or Accessory. But to this it is answer'd, that if a Distinction of Sexes is unnecessary after the Resurrection, it will be as much so for Men as for Women: That the Woman is not less perfect in her Kind than the Man; that the Manner in which Eve was form'd, is in some Sort more advantageous to her, than the Creation of the Man. He was created immediately from the Earth, but she from him. Lastly, The Sex of the Woman is nothing of a Defect or Imperfection of Nature. Non est enim vitium Sexus fœmineus, sed Natura, saith St. Austin. (Aug. de Civit. l. 22. c. 17.)

Other Difficulties that have been moved upon this Subject, may be seen treated on at full Length, in the Dissertations composed by us concerning the End of the World, and the general Resurrection.

The Resurrection of the Saints, who arose out of their Sepulchres at the Time of our Saviour's Death, and who, after his Resurrection came into the holy City, and appear'd to many, is a Subject which deserves to be consider'd here in a few Words. (Matth. xxvii. 51, 52, 53.) The Names of those that arose upon this Occasion are unknown. Some will have them to have been all the most antient Fathers and Patriarchs. Others, that they were the most modern ones, and such as were most known to the Jews then living. Others, that this Favour was granted only to those that were buried at Jerusalem, or thereabouts.

They dispute also about the Hour of their Resurrection. Some maintain that they did not rise till after our Saviour, who is call'd in Scripture the first Fruits of those that slept. (1 Cor. xv. 20.) Primitiæ dormientium & promogenitus ex mortuis. Origen, St. Jerome, [b] Gregory the [c] Great, Raban-Maur. Paschasius Radbert, Bede, Drutmar, Liran, the common Gloss, and several others, are of this Opinion. But St. Chrysostome, and the Greek Authors who generally follow him, Hilary, and many others, believe, that they arose at the Moment of our Saviour's Death; and that Jesus Christ raised them before he raised himself, to display his Triumph over Death in a more remarkable Manner. (Chrysost. in Matth. xxvii. Hilar. in Matth. xxvii.) It must be allow'd, that the Text of the Evangelist St. Matthew, is not decisive for either of these Opinions; but if it be true, (which cannot well be doubted) that the Souls of the Holy Patriarchs did not come out of the Limbus, till after Jesus Christ descended thither; it must also be allow'd, that they did not arise till after this Descent. Therefore it will necessarily follow, that some Space of Time must pass between the Death of our Saviour, and the Resurrection of the Saints.

But these Saints being thus raised, did they dye again, and re-enter into their Graves, after the Ascension of Jesus Christ, or did they ascend with him into Heaven? There is a Variety of Sentiments upon this Matter. Those that think Jesus Christ led them along with him into Heaven, as it were in Triumph, quote those Words of Hosea; I will ransom them from the Power of the Grave, I will redeem them from Death; O Death, I will be thy Plague; O Grave, I will be thy Destruction. (Hos. xiii. 14.) And those of the Psalmist; Thou hast ascended on high, thou hast led Captivity captive. (Psl. lxviii. 18.) And St. Paul; When he ascended up on high, he led Captivity captive, and gave Gifts unto Men. (Eph. iv. 8.) Is it probable, that after having restored Life to these Saints and illustrious Dead, God should think fit to make them submit once more to Death and the Grave? Would not this be to plunge them again into Pain and Bitterness, after giving them a Taste of Eternal Happiness? Lastly, Would it not be agreeable to the Justice, the Goodness, and the Majesty of that divine Deliverer, to compleat his Work, and to lead them along with him into Heaven, after he had restored them to Life upon Earth?

We might produce a great Number of the Fathers, who have been of this Opinion. Ignatius the Martyr, to the Magnesians. Origin, upon Matth. xxvii. and upon the Canticles. The Author of the Orthodox Questions, Quest. 84. Clemens Alexandrinus, Strom. l. 6. Eusebius of Cesaræa, in his Gospel-Demonstration, c. 12. Hilary upon Psalm. II. Venerable Bede, Raban-Maurus, Drutmar, Paschasius, Radbertus, and a Multitude of modern Interpreters, who maintain in a positive Manner, that the Holy Patriarchs raised with Jesus Christ, enjoy with him the Happiness of Heaven, and were the Partners of his Triumphant Ascension.

But the contrary Opinion is maintain'd not with less Authority, or fewer Proofs. St. Paul says expresly, that the holy Patriarchs, having obtained a good Report through Faith, received not the Promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect. (Heb. xi. 39. 40.) Therefore he did not think them yet raised, nor in Possession of the Glory of Heaven. He says elsewhere, That Jesus Christ is the First-fruits of those that slept the Sleep of Death, and were to arise one Day, not to sleep any more. Besides, if any one had been to rise with our Saviour, doubtless it would have been the Holy King David, John the Baptist, the Patriarchs and the Prophets buried at Jerusalem and in Palestine. (Ps. xv. 10.) But St. Peter, speaking to the Jews of Jerusalem, says expresly, (Acts ii. 29.) That David's Tomb was still to be seen among them; that David had foretold the Resurrection of our Saviour, but says nothing at all of his own. What Strength must his Reasoning have had, if David had been raised, and had ascended into Heaven with Jesus Christ? We know that the Relicks and the Tomb of John the Baptist have been shewn, as well before as after this Time; it was not therefore believed that they were ascended into Heaven, and admitted into Glory.

The Fathers that have treated upon this Subject with the greatest Care, have declared for the Opinion now proposed. (Tertul. l. de Animâ c. 55.) Tertullian purposely confutes those who thought, that the Patriarchs and Prophets ascended into Heaven after the Resurrection of our Saviour. St. Chrysostome (Chrysost. Homil. 40. in 1 Cor. xv.) says, that they who arose while Jesus Christ was upon the Cross, died again. And writing upon the Epistle to the Hebrews, (Idem. Homil. 28. in Heb. xi.) he owns with the Apostle, that the just Men of the Old Testament have not yet received their Reward. Theodoret also expresses himself after the same Manner. Theophylact and Euthymius, explaining the Twenty-seventh Chapter of St. Matthew, acknowledge, that the Holy Patriarchs arose to be as Proofs of the Resurrection of Christ; but that they afterwards died again, to rise a second Time at the End of the World. St. Austin, in his Epistle to Evodius, expresly treats of this Question, and explains himself clearly enough for the temporary Resurrection of those Saints. Thomas Aquinas, (D. Thom. 3. part. art. 53. art. 3.) having produced the Reasons upon which each of these Opinions is founded, declares himself for those that hold, that they died again; and this is the Opinion that to us seems to be best supported, both by the Scripture and by the Fathers. The Reader may consult upon this Matter, the Dissertation we have composed and inserted in the new Collection of Dissertations.

REU, or Ragau, or Retui, Son of Peleg, [a] was born in the Year of the World 1787. His Father was then thirty Years old. He begat Serug, being two and thirty Years old, in the Year of the World 1819, and died at the Age of two hundred and thirty-nine years, in the Year of the World 2026, before Christ 1974, before the vulgar Era 1976. It is not impossible, but that the City of Ragæ, and the Plain of Ragau, may have taken their Names from Reu, Rehu, or Ragau; for all these are the same in the Hebrew. All the Difference depends upon the Pronunciation of the Letter ע Ain or Gnain.

REUBEN, or Ruben, the eldest Son of Jacob and Leah; he was born in the Year of the World 2246, before Christ 1754, (Gen. xxix. 32.) before the vulgar Era 1758. One Day Reuben went into the Field, being yet very young, and there found a Fruit call'd in Hebrew, Dudaim, which is generally interpreted by Mandrakes, which he brought home to his Mother Leah. Rachel (Gen. xxx. 14.) was curious to taste them, and asked them of Leah, who gave them her upon Condition that Jacob should be her Bedfellow the Night following. Rachel gave her Consent, and Leah became with Child of Issachar. A long Time after this, Jacob being now return'd into the Land of Canaan, Reuben defiled his Father's Concubine Bilhah; for which Reason he lost his (Gen. xxxv. 22.) Birth-right, and all the Privileges of Primogeniture.

When Joseph's other Brethren had taken a Resolution to make away with him, Reuben endeavour'd by all means to deliver him out of their Hands. [b] He proposed to 'em, to let him down into an old Water-pit, in which there was no Water, that afterwards he might take him up again, and restore him to his Father Jacob. His Brethren therefore having stript him, let him down into the Pit. But while Reuben was gone at some Distance from them, they drew him out again, and sold him to some Ishmaelites that pass'd that Way. Reuben at his Return, going to the Pit, and not finding him there, tore his Cloaths, and said to his Brethren; "The Child is "not to be found, and whither shall I "go?" They deliver'd him out of his Perplexity, and acquainted him, that they had sold him to some People that were going into Egypt.

Jacob on his Death-bed [c] very warmly reproached Reuben with the Crime he had committed with Bilhah; saying to him, Reuben, thou art my First-born; my Might, and the Beginning of my Strength, the Excellency of Dignity, and the Excellency of Power, unstable as Water: thou shalt not excell, because thou wentest up to thy Father's Bed; then defiledst thou it. He went up to my Couch. Moses before his Death said also to the Tribe of Reuben; Vivat Ruben, (Deuter. xxxiii. 6. Vulg.) & non moriatur, & sit parvus in numero. Let Reuben live, and not die, but let his

Number

The English reads, let not his Men be few. Number be but small. And indeed the Tribe of Reuben was never very numerous, nor very considerable in Israel. They had their Inheritance beyond Jordan, in the most southern Part of this Canton, between the Brooks Arnon to the South, and Jazer to the North, having the Mountains of Gilead to the East, and Jordan to the West. The Time of Reuben's Death is unknown.

We read in the Apocryphal Book, call'd, The Testament of the twelve Patriarchs, that when Reuben was at the Age of thirty Years, he happen'd to see Bilhah, Rachel's Maid, and his Father Jacob's Concubine, as she was bathing her self naked in an open Place, and conceived such a violent Passion for her, that he could have no Rest till it was gratify'd. He found an Opportunity for it one Day, when Jacob was gone to visit his Father Isaac, and when his Brethren were at Gader, near Ephrata, or Beth-lehem. Then Reuben finding Bilhah to be drunk, and sleeping in her Tent in an indecent Posture, he indulged his Passion, and committed Incest with her. God revealed this presently to Jacob, by the Ministry of an Angel, and punish'd Reuben for it, by afflicting him with a Distemper, which held him for seven Months; and was so violent, that he had surely died of it, if his Father Jacob had not interceded for him by his Prayers. But Reuben at last was so fully sensible of his Fault, and conceived so great a Sorrow for it, that he impos'd on himself, by way of Penance, to eat neither Bread nor Meat, nor to drink any Wine, for the space of seven Years. But it is well known that this Book is of no Authority, being the Work of an Impostor, who would assert, as genuine, the spurious Book of Enoch, and other Jewish Traditions.

REUEL, or Rahuel, Son of Esau and Bashemath, the Daughter of Ishmael. Reuel was Father of Nahath, of Zerah, of Shammah, and of Mizzah. Gen. xxxvi. 4, 17.

REVELATION, in Greek, Apocalypsis. This Name is given in particular to a Book written by St. John, for which see Apocalypse before.

'Tis also call'd a Revelation, when God makes manifest any thing to Man in an extraordinary and supernatural Manner; whether by Dream, Vision, Ecstacy, or otherwise. St. Paul speaking of his Visions
2 Cor. xii. 1, 7. and Revelations, speaks of 'em in the third Person out of Modesty, and declares, that he could not tell whether he was in the Body, or out of the Body. Elsewhere he says, that he had not received his Gospel by the Ministry of Men, but by a particu-
Gal. i. 12. lar Revelation from God; furthermore, that he did not go to Jerusalem after his Conversion by the meer Motion of his own Mind, but in Consequence of a Revelation that he had for that purpose. Gal. ii. 2.

Lastly, The Word Revelation is us'd to express the Manifestation of Jesus Christ to the Jews and Gentiles, the Manifestation Luk. ii. 32. of the Glory with which God will glorify his Elect, and his faithful Servants at the last Judgment; and the Declaration of his Rom. viii. 19. just Judgments, in his Conduct both towards the Elect, and towards the Reprobate. Rom. ii. 5.

I need not speak of the common Acceptation of the Latin Words Revelatio and Revelare, which signify barely a discovering of what was before conceal'd; as to reveal a Secret, revelare aurem, to tell in the Ear, to tell in secret; revelare turpitudinem, or ignominiam, to discover in one's near Relation what ought to be hid, not to approach her, not to marry her.

REVENGE, as it includes a Sense of Sorrow and Trouble for the Injuries that are done to us, cannot by any means belong to God. None of his Creatures can disturb his Peace, or cause to him any Trouble or Resentment. Ultio doloris confessio est, says Seneca. Man has recourse to Senec. de ira. l. 3. c. 5. Revenge only because he is gall'd and sensible of Injuries. When therefore it is said in Scripture, that God revenges himself, it speaks after a popular and improper Manner. He vindicates the Injuries done to his Justice and his Majesty, and to the Order he has establish'd in the World, yet without any Emotion of Pleasure or Displeasure. He revenges the Injuries done to his Servants, because he is just, and because Order and Justice must be preserved. Men revenge themselves out of Weakness, because they are offended, because they are too much influenced by Self-love. A great Soul overlooks and despises Injuries; a Soul enlightened by Grace and Faith, leaves the Judgment and Revenge of them to God.

In the Old Testament God tolerated Revenge in certain Cases, to avoid greater Evils. For Example, he would have an Eye for an Eye, a Tooth for a Tooth, &c. Exod. xxi. 24. He permitted, or rather, he bore with it, that the Relations of a Man who had been kill'd might take Revenge of the Murderer. Propinquus occisi, statim ut invenerit eum, jugulabit. Numb. xxxv. 16, 17, 18, &c. And if a wilful Murderer should take Sanctuary in a City of Refuge, he was taken away from thence, and given up into the Hands of the Kindred of the dead Man, for them to take their Revenge on him. Mittent seniores civitatis illius, & arripient eum de loco effugii, tradentque in manu proximi cujus sanguis effusus est, & morietur. Deut. xix. 12. The Relations thought it their Duty to pursue to Vengeance such Murderers, and the Hebrews call'd those Goel or Revengers, to whom this sort of Vengeance appertain'd.

But

But this Toleration was granted only to the Hardneſs of the Hearts of the Jews: Ad duritiem cordis veſtri, as our Saviour tells them on the Occaſion of Divorce. God had ſufficiently declared himſelf, to make it underſtood by good Men, that Vengeance belong'd only to him. Mea eſt ultio, & ego retribuam. (Deuter. xxxiii. 35.) He forbids Malice and Revenge in expreſs Terms; he will not allow us to keep any Reſentment in our Hearts againſt our Brethren. (Levit. xix. 17, 18.) Non oderis fratrem tuum in corde tuo — Non quæras ultionem, nec memor eris injuriæ civium tuorum. And when God ſeems to have eſtabliſh'd the Lex Talionis, he does not thereby allow of Revenge, but ſets Limits to it. Non fomes, ſed limes furoris eſt, ſays St. Auſtin. (Aug. cont. Fauſt. l. 19. c. 25.) He does not intend to provoke to Anger, but to ſtop the Progreſs and Conſequences of it. Non ut id quod ſopitum erat, hinc accenderetur; ſed ne id quod ardebat, ultra extenderetur.

The Day of Revenge, or of Vengeance, ſometimes expreſſes the laſt Day of Judgment, in which God will take Vengeance of all his Enemies; and ſometimes the Day of Vengeance ſtands for the Puniſhment that God exerciſes upon his Enemies, when their Iniquities are arrived to their full Meaſure. See Exod. xxxii. 34. Iſai. xxxiv. 8. lxi. 2. lxiii. 4. Luke xxi. 22.

Vengeance is often expreſs'd in the Hebrew under the Word Conſolation; and tho' St. Jerom has generally put the Word Revenge, yet he has not omitted ſometimes to uſe the Words Comfort and Conſolation, in the Senſe of Revenge: For Example, (Iſa. i. 24.) Heu! conſolabor ſuper hoſtibus meis, & vindicabor de inimicis meis. And in the Maccabees, (2 Macc. vii. 6.) Deus conſolabitur in nobis quemadmodum in proteſtatione cantici declaravit Moyſes & in ſervis ſuis conſolabitur. And again in Iſaiah, (Iſ. lvii. 18.) Vias ejus vidi — & reddidi conſolationes ipſi. But the Examples are much more frequent in the Hebrew.

In Scripture ſometimes Revenge is taken for the meer Action of Aſſault, or for the Injury committed againſt another; but yet is not without the Colour and Pretence of juſt Revenge. Thus Nebuchadnezzar ſwears by his Throne, that he would be revenged of all thoſe foreign States that would not obey his Summons, and ſubmit themſelves to his Government; (Judith i. 12. ii. 1.) as if he had a Right of demanding this Submiſſion from them. In the ſame Manner the Idumeans wreak'd their Revenge againſt Judah, Pro eo quod fecit Idumæa ultionem, ut ſe vindicaret de filiis Judah. (Ezek. xxv. 12.) By theſe Expreſſions we muſt underſtand, to ſatisfy their Hatred, to ſhew their Ill-will.

When it is ſaid, that God grants his Revenge to any one; Deus qui dat vindictas mihi; (Pſal. xvii. 48.) this intimates, either that God gives up his Enemies to him into his Hands, to take Vengeance of them; or that he puniſhes them himſelf for having afflicted his Servants, by ſome terrible Effects of his Juſtice.

REVENGER, or Revenger of Blood. This Name is given in Scripture to him that had the Right, according to the Jewiſh Polity, of taking Revenge upon him that had kill'd one of his near Relations: Ultor ſanguinis. If a Man had been guilty of Man-ſlaughter, involuntarily and without deſign, he fled to a City of Refuge, and he was ſecured from the Purſuit of the Revenger of Blood. Liberabitur innocens de ultoris manu. (Numb. xxxv. 25, 27.) And when the Revenger ſhall purſue him hither to kill him, he ſhall not be deliver'd up into his Hands. Cumque ultor ſanguinis eum fuerit perſecutus, non tradent in manus ejus. (Joſh. xx. 5.)

REUMAH, or Roma, Concubine or ſecond-hand Wife to Nahor the Brother of Abraham. Reumah was Mother to Tebah, Gaham, Thahath, and Maachah. (Gen. xxii. 24.)

REZEPH, Reſeph, Reſiph, Reſapha, or Riſapha, a City of Syria, known in the 2d Book of Kings, ch. xix. 12. in Iſaiah, ch. xxxvi. 12. in Ptolemy, in the Tables of Peutinger, and in the Eaſtern Notitia.

REZIA, or Reſia, Daughter of Ulla, of the Tribe of Aſher. 1 Chron. vii. 39.

REZIN, or Raſin, King of Syria. He made an Alliance with Pekah Son of Remaliah King of Iſrael, to invade Ahaz King of Judah [a], and to make an Irruption into his Kingdom. The firſt Year of his Reign they laid Siege to Jeruſalem: But not being able to take it, they laid Waſte the Country round about, and went back again. The Year following they return'd into the Country of Judah, and the Lord deliver'd up to 'em the Army and the Country of Ahaz. After this, the two Confederate Princes ſeparated their Armies; and that of Reſin betook themſelves to plunder every-where, and to carry away the Captives: This they did without finding any Reſiſtance, and carry'd to Damaſcus the Captives and the Booty they had taken [b]. Pekah alſo, on his Part, kill'd in one Day and in one Battle an hundred and twenty thouſand Men of Ahaz's Army, and took two hundred thouſand Priſoners beſides. But when they were brought into Samaria, the Prophet Oded caus'd them to be ſent back into the Land of Judah.

About the ſame time, Rezin King of Syria aſſaulted Elath, or Ailat, upon the Red-Sea, and took it: He drove out the Jews from hence, and settled the Idumeans in their Room, who, probably, had engaged him to undertake this War. The Hebrew Text and the Vulgate seem to intimate, [a] that Rezin King of Syria made a Conquest of Elath for the Syrians. But the Tenour of the Discourse sufficiently shews, that it ought to be read, for the Idumeans; and that in the Hebrew it should be read Edom, instead of Aram. The Difference between these two Words, in the Original, is hardly to be perceived. Ahaz finding himself not strong enough to withstand Rezin and Pekah, apply'd himself to Tiglath-pilneser King of Assyria, and offer'd him a very large Sum of Money to come to his Assistance. Tiglath-pilneser first marched against Damascus, took the City, and put Rezin to Death: He also carry'd away his People to Kir, probably upon the River Cyrus in Iberia [b].

REZON, or Razon, Son of Eliadah: He revolted from his Master Hadadezer King of Zobah [c], while David made War against him, and putting himself at the Head of a Band of Robbers, he began to make Excursions into the Country about Damascus: He at last became Master of this City, and was acknowledged as King there. It should seem that he could not settle here, 'till toward the End of Solomon's Reign; for David made a Conquest of Damascus, as well as of the rest of Syria; and Solomon kept up his Command over all the Provinces that David had brought into Subjection. But if Rezon did not rule at Damascus 'till towards the End of Solomon's Reign, he must have lived a very long Time: For, from David's War with Hadadezer, which happen'd at the Beginning of David's Reign, about the Year of the World 2960, to the End of Solomon's Reign, who died in 3029, must be sixty-nine Years. Rezon must at least be five-and twenty or thirty Years of Age at the Time of these first Wars; since he was then a General of Hadadezer's Army, and presently became Head to a Troop of Freebooters: So that he must have been about ninety Years of Age when he began to govern at Damascus. If this should seem hardly credible, it may be allow'd, that Rezon might have reign'd at Damascus even in the Time of David and Solomon, but tributary to these Princes; and that he did not begin to revolt 'till towards the End of Solomon's Reign.

RHAMNUS, a Sort of Thorn, or prickly Bush, call'd Buckthorn. The Word Rhamnus is found in three Places of the Vulgate. Judg. ix. 14. Miserunt omnia ligna ad rhamnum: And ver. 15. Egrediatur ignis de rhamno: And, lastly, Psalm lviii. Priusquam intelligerent spinæ vestræ rhamnum. In all these three Places the Hebrew has Atad, which properly signifies a Bramble, or a Thorn. The Scripture speaks of it as of a thing very easily set on Fire, and which gives a very quick Flame. For Example, in the Passage of the Psalms now quoted; Priusquam intelligerent spinæ vestræ rhamnum, sicut viventes, sic in ira absorbet eos: That is, "Before they can "know that their Thorns are arrived to "the Strength of a Shrub, he will swallow "them, as it were alive, in his Anger." But the Hebrew says, "Before that your "Kettles can have receiv'd Heat from "your lighted Thorns, the Wrath of "God, like a Whirlwind, shall overthrow "them." *

אטד. LXX. Ῥάμνος. Vulgate Rhamnum.

RHEGIUM, a City of Italy, in the Kingdom of Naples. St. Paul landed here when he went to Rome, in the Year of Christ 61. St. Luke being then of his Company, and having said nothing of those Miracles that are pretended to have been performed by St. Paul in this Place; his Silence ought at least to render them very much suspected.

Act xxviii. 12, 14.

RHINOCEROS, an Animal thus call'd, because he has an Horn upon his Snout. There are several Animals that have Horns also upon their Snouts, or in the Middle of their Foreheads, which have often been confounded together, and which are not yet well distinguish'd in the Natural History of Animals. See what is said hereafter under the Article Unicorn. The Name Rhinoceros is found in the Vulgate in these Places, Numb. xxiii. 22. & xxiv. 8. Deut. xxxiii. 17. Job xxxix. 9, 10. The Hebrew Word Reem is render'd in the Septuagint promiscuously by Monoceros, Unicornis, or Rhinoceros.

ראם Rheem. Monoceros, or Rhinoceros.

The Arabians and Persians name that Animal Kerkhedan, which the Hebrews call Rehem, and we Rhinoceros. It is chiefly found in the Isle of Rami in the Indian Sea, distant three Days sail from the Island of Serendib. The Kerkhedan is smaller than the Elephant, but larger than the Buffalo. It has a Bunch under its Belly like unto what the Camels have upon their Backs. It has a very thick Horn upon its Snout, which the Indian Kings make use of at Table; for it sweats, at the Approach of any Kind of Poison whatever. This Horn being cloven through the middle, exhibits the Figure of a Man drawn with white Lines, among which are also seen the Figures of Birds.

* Psalm lviii. 9. these Words are thus read in our Version; Before your Pots can feel the Thorns, he shall take them away as with a Whirlwind, both living, and in his Wrath.

Father le Compte ſays, that the Rhinoceros is of the Length of an Elephant; but its Legs are ſhorter, and its Hoofs are cloven. 'Tis one of the moſt ſingular Creatures in the World. It has ſomething like a Boar, except that it is much larger; its Feet are thicker, and its whole Body more unweildy: Its Skin is cover'd all over with blackiſh Scales, large and thick, which are extremely hard, and divided into little Squares or Knobs a little raiſed above the Skin, ſomething like that of a Crocodile. Its Legs appear as if they had Boots on; and its Head as if cover'd behind with a kind of flat Hood, which makes the Portugueſe name it The Monk of the Indies.

Its Head is thick; its Mouth not wide; its Muzzle long, and arm'd with a thick and long Horn; which makes it terrible even to the very Tygers, to the Buffaloes, and the Elephants. But what is ſtill more wonderful in this Animal, is its Tongue, which Nature has cover'd with ſo hard a Membrane, that it differs but little from a File: Thus it fleas every thing that it licks, and eats with great Facility the rough Branches of Trees, tho' defended all round with ſharp Thorns: It bends them eaſily upon its Tongue, and breaks them in its Mouth without any Trouble. Feſtus ſays, that it is hunted for the ſake of its Skin, which is very hard and impenetrable, being cover'd all over with Scales, and about four Fingers thick: They make Suits of Armour of it, and Bucklers, as alſo Shares for the Plough.

City were thus mutilated. Diodorus Siculus relates the Matter thus: Actiſanus King of Ethiopia, being deſirous to clear his Kingdom of the Robbers that very much infeſted it, and yet not being willing to put them to Death, he apprehended as many of them as he could, ſlit their Noſes, and baniſh'd them into a deſart and barren Place, where they built them a City, which, becauſe of their Slit-Noſes, was

Near the City of Rhinocolura there is a River which ſeveral have taken to be the Joſh. xv. 4. 47. Iſai. xxvii. 12. 1 Samuel xxx. 9, 10, 21. Amos vi. 14. River of Egypt. But we take the River of Egypt to be no other than the Nile; and the Stream that runs near Rhinocolura, we think to be the Brook Beſor, or the River of the Wilderneſs, which is ſpoke of elſewhere in the Scripture. This City of Rhinocolura is aſcribed ſometimes to Syria, and ſometimes to Paleſtine, to which indeed it formerly belong'd, and ſometimes to Egypt [b], upon which it afterwards depended. Its Biſhop was a Suffragan of Peluſium. 'Tis ſaid, [c] it was at Rhinocolura that the World was divided by Noah among his three Sons. 'Tis unknown what the ancient Name of Rhinocolura was, I mean the Hebrew Name that this Place was known by, before the Grecians gave it the Name of Rhinocolura, and before the Story of the Slit-Noſes was invented. St. Hilarion, a famous Anchorite or Hermit of this Country, dwelt a long Hieron. in Vita S. Hilar.

RHODA, a young Maid who dwelt in the Houſe of Mary the Mother of John-Mark, who coming to open the Door to a Perſon that knocked at it, was ſo tranſported with Joy, at hearing Peter's Voice, whom ſhe thought to be in Priſon, and who had but juſt then been miraculouſly deliver'd from it by an Angel [d], that, without ſtaying to open the Door, ſhe ran back to acquaint the Believers with it, who were then aſſembled in the Houſe. They look'd upon her as viſionary or mad, but ſhe ſtill maintain'd ſhe heard Peter's Voice. The Apoſtle continuing ſtill to knock, ſhe went back, and open'd the Door to him. We know no other Circumſtance of the Life of Rhoda; for, as to her Exile and Martyrdom, which, 'tis pretended, ſhe ſuffer'd in the Iſle of Sardinia [e], we place them in the Number of Apocryphal Stories.

RHODES, an Iſland and famous City of the Archipelago, being an hundred thouſand Paces in Compaſs. Its ancient Name was Aſteria, Ophiuſa, and Etheria. The Name of Rodes, which in Greek ſignifies a Roſe, came either from the Nymph Rhodia, who was beloved by Apollo, and changed into a Roſe; or rather, from the great Quantity and Beauty of the Roſes that are to be ſeen there. This City is chiefly famous for its Brazen Coloſſus, which was one hundred and five Feet high, and was made by Chares of Lyndus: It continued perfect only fifty-ſix Years, being thrown down by an Earthquake, under the Reign of Ptolemy III. ſurnamed Euergetes, King of Egypt, who began to reign in the Year of the World 3758, before the Vulgar Era 244. The Saracens entirely broke it to Pieces, under the Reign of Conſtans II. and 'tis ſaid, they loaded nine hundred Camels with the Braſs that it afforded: It was twelve Years in making, and three hundred Talents were laid out upon it. 'Tis ſaid, this Coloſſus was ſo large, that no one could grasp its Thumb with his Arms. The Inside of this great Mass was filled up with large Stones, that being thus made heavy, the Winds and Tempests might not have Power to overset it. It was set up in the Harbour of Rhodes, having its two Legs extended, and fix'd upon two Pedestals, so that when Ships came into the Harbour, they might easily pass between. Some pretend, that the Rhodians were the Colossians, to whom St. Paul address'd one of his Epistles : But this Opinion is very ill founded. See COLOSSIANS. When St. Paul went to Jerusalem, in the Year of Christ 58, he went from Miletus to Coos, from Coos to the Isle of Rhodes, and from thence to Patara in Lycia.

Suidas, Glycas, Zomar. Eustath.

Acts xxi. 1.

The Septuagint, in Gen. x. 4. put the Rhodians among the Children of Javan. They, probably, read Rhodanim, instead of Dodanim, in the Hebrew [a]. The Samaritan Text reads also Rhodanim in the same Place ; and the Hebrew reads it also in the First Book of the Chronicles. Eusebius, St. Jerom, and Isidore, follow the Septuagint, and think the Isle of Rhodes to have been peopled by the Rhodanim, or the Posterity of Javan. Bochart does not reject that Reading that exhibits Rhodanim ; but he maintains, that this Word cannot signify the Rhodians in this Place, who are too modern to have been planted there by any immediate Son of Javan : He thinks that, in this Place, Moses rather intended to mark out the People of the Gauls, which are upon the Mediterranean, towards the Mouth of the Rhone, near Marseilles, where we find a Canton call'd Rhodanusia, and a City of the same Name.

Also the Septuagint, upon Ezekiel, [b] have translated the Children of the Rhodians, instead of the Children of Dedan, as it is read in the Hebrew. Probably, they read the Children of Redan, or Rodan ; but in Gen. x. 7. they read Dedan, as the Hebrew. In the Hebrew Text nothing is easier than to confound the Daleth and the Resh. If the Text of Genesis did not determine us to Dedan, we might admit the Rhodians in this Passage of Ezekiel ; for, in the Time of this Prophet, it is very probable that this Island was well-peopled.

RHODIUM, or Rhodiense Numisma. This Name is given, by the Learned, to two Silver Medals, which are preserved, one in the Treasury of the Church of the Holy Cross in Jerusalem in the City of Paris, and the other in that of St. John of Lateran at Rome, and are pretended to be such as were given to Judas, as the Price of our Saviour, when this Traytor sold him to the Jews. These Medals are certainly some of the ancient Money of Rhodes, as is seen by the Inscription Rhodion, and the Image of a Rose on one Side, and on the other Side the Head of the Colossus, or of the Sun. Goltzius and Antoninus Piso have had the same Medals in their Hands, and have caused them to be engraved. 'Tis not impossible but, by Chance, they may have given some Pieces of this Money to Judas, which might then be still current in the Empire, by the Consent of the Romans ; but it is much more probable, that Judas was paid in the Current Money of the Country, which was the Roman Money of the Emperor then reigning, or of some of his Predecessors. See Selden de Jure Nat. & Gent. l. 2. c. 8. Mat. xxii. 20, 21.

RHODOCUS, a Traytor in the Army of Judas Maccabeus, who went to the Camp of Antiochus Eupator King of Syria, to betray the Counsels of his Party. He was afterwards discovered, convicted, and put into Prison, in the Year of the World 3841, before Christ 159, before the Vulgar Era 163. 2 Mac.xiii. 21.

RHOMPHÆA. This Word is found in the Latin Text of the Book of Ecclesiasticus [c], the Revelations [d], and much oftener in the Greek Text of the Septuagint. It answers to the Hebrew Word Chanith, a Lance [e]; and to Cherib, which signifies a Sword [f]. Rhomphæa properly signifies a large and long Sword, which was formerly in use amongst the Thracians [g] : Thracas quoque rhomphææ, ingentis & ipsæ longitudinis, inter adjectos undique ramos impediebant. St. Isidore says, that rhomphæa is a long two-edged Sword, otherwise call'd Spatha. Suidas says, that this Name Rhomphæa was also given to the Pike, or to a long Dart.

RIBAI, Father of Ittai, of the Tribe of Benjamin. Ittai was one of the Heroes of David's Army. 2 Sam. xxiii. 29.

RIBLAH, Rebla, Riblata, or Reblata, a City of Syria, in the Country of Emath. Its Situation is unknown. St. Jerom [h] has taken it for Antiochia of Syria, or for the Country of Emath or Emmas, which was still, in his Time, the first Stage of those that travelled from Syria into Mesopotamia. We know not what was the ancient Name of the City of Antioch ; but we know the Name it bore after the Reign of the Seleucidæ, and what it still bears, is a new Name. St. Jerom had, probably, some particular Knowledge of this Matter, since he assures us so positively, and in so many Places, that the ancient Riblah was Antioch.

Yet

Yet however, this lies under great Difficulties. Antioch was at a good Distance from Emesa, or Emath; it was not upon the Road from Judea to Mesopotamia. When Moses describes the Eastern Limits of the Land of Promise, he says, And ye shall point out your East Border from Hazarenan to Shepham. And the Coast shall go down from Shepham to Riblah, on the East-side of Ain; and the Border shall descend, and shall reach unto the Side of the Sea of Chinnereth, (or, of Tiberias) Eastward. And the Border shall go down to Jordan; and the Goings-out of it shall be at the Salt-sea (or, the Dead-sea). The Name of Daphne is not found in the Hebrew; but the Chaldee Paraphrasts and St. Jerom explain the Fountain of Riblah by that of Daphne, near to Antioch. Ezekiel puts the Northern Bounds of the Land of Promise from the Mediterranean-Sea to Hazar-enan, or Atrium Enan. He says, that Emath is the City that limits the Holy Land towards the North; and that its Southern Limits go through the Middle of Auran, Damascus, and the Mountains of Gilead. He makes no mention of Riblah; but he marks out Emath, in the Territory of which Riblah was situate.

Numbers xxxiv. 10, 11, 12.

The Habitation of Riblah was one of the most agreeable of all Syria; whence it was that the Kings of Babylon were so willing to make their Abode there. Pharaoh Necho King of Egypt made a Stop there, at his Return from the Expedition of Carchemish; and having made Jehoahaz King of Judah to come thither to him, he deprived him of the Royal Dignity, and put Jehoiakim in his Place. Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon continued at Riblah, while his General Nebuzaradan laid Siege to Jerusalem; and after the Reduction of this Place, King Zedekiah and the rest of the Prisoners were brought to him to Riblah, where Nebuchadnezzar caus'd Zedekiah's Eyes to be put out, and made his Sons and principal Officers to be put to Death in the Presence of this unfortunate Prince.

RIF. We have affirmed in this Dictionary, after some Learned Men, that the Egyptians call that Rif, which the Greeks call the Delta of Egypt. But M. d'Herbelot, in his Oriental Dictionary, says, that the Name Rif is given to that Part of Egypt which begins at Cairo, and stretches out towards the North. And that the Arabians give the Name of Giouf to that Part of the Country which the Greeks call the Delta, and which comprehends all that Country inclosed by the Nile, 'till it discharges it self into the Mediterranean-Sea.

Exod. xv. 6.

To sit down at the Right-hand of God, is generally put for obtaining an Equality of Glory and Power. The Son of God is often represented as sitting at the Right-hand of his heavenly Father. Dixit dominus domino meo, Sede à dextris meis. And, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of Man sitting on the Right-hand of Power, and coming in the Clouds of Heaven.

Psal. cix. 1. Mat. xxvi. 64. Colos. iii. Hebr. i. 3. & x. 12, &c.

The Right-hand commonly denotes the South, as the Left-hand denotes the North. For the Hebrews speak of the Quarters of the World in respect of themselves, having their Faces turn'd towards the East, their Backs to the West, their Right-hands to the South, and their Left to the North. Thus Kedem, which signifies before, stands also for the East; and Achor, which signifies behind, marks out the West; Jamin, the Right-hand, is the South; and Shemol, the Left-hand, is the North. For Example; Doth not David hide himself with us in strong Holds in the Wood, in the Hill of Hachilah, which is on the South of Jeshimen? Heb. on the Right-hand of Jeshimen.

1 Samuel xxiii. 19, 24.

The Accuser was commonly at the Right-hand of the Accused; as for Example, Diabolus stet à dextris ejus. And in Zechariah, the Devil was at the Right-hand of the High-priest Jeshua to accuse him. Satan stabat à dextris ejus, ut adversaretur ei.

Psal. cviii. 6. Zech. iii. 1.

Often, in a quite contrary Sense, to be at any one's Right-hand, signifies to defend, to protect, to support him. As for Example: I have set the Lord always before me; because he is at my Right-hand, I shall not be moved. And elsewhere, For he shall stand at the Right-hand of the Poor, to save him from those that condemn his Soul.

Psal. xvi. 8. Psal. cix. 31.

To depart from the Law of God, neither to the Right-hand, nor to the left, is a frequent Scripture Expression, the Meaning of which is, that we must not depart from it at all, neither by attempting to go beyond it, and doing more than it requires, nor by doing less. But we must observe it closely, constantly, and invariably, as a Traveller, who does not go out of his Way, either to the right or to the left.

Our Saviour, in the Gospel, to shew with what Privacy we should do good Works, says; That our Left-hand should not know what our Right-hand does. Above all things we should avoid Vanity and Ostentation in all the Good we undertake to do.

Mat. vi. 5.

Dextralia, or Dextraliola, are Bracelets with which Men, as well as Women, us'd to dress themselves. It was of these Bracelets that Moses spoke, when he enjoin'd the Israelites to have always the Law of God in their Minds; and that it should be Exodus xxxv. 22. Numbers xxxi. 50.

Ex. xiii. 9. be for a Sign unto thee upon thine Hand, as a Seal fastned to their Ring or Bracelet. Compare this Passage with Ecclus. xlix. 13. Quomodo amplificemus Zerobabel? Nam & ipse quasi signum in dextra manu.

The Right and Left-hand joined together signify on this Side, or that Side, indifferently. If you go to the Right, I will go to the Left. Turn not aside from the Commandments of God, neither to the Right or Left; or do not turn from them at all. 1 Chron. xii. 2. David's Archers are commended, who could use their Sling as well with their Left-hands as Right; they were Ambidexters. Jonah iii. 11. In Jonah it is said, that there were above six-score thousand Persons in Nineveh, who could not distinguish between their Right and Left-hands. This may be understood as the former Passage, of Persons that could make use of either Hand indifferently, to fight with; but it is generally explain'd of Infants, who knew not yet any Distinction of Right and Left-hands, as a Token of their Innocence.

To give the Hand, dare dexteram, is a Mark of Society and Friendship. St. Paul Gal. xi. 9. says, that James, Cephas, and John, gave him the Right-hand. Dexteras dederunt mihi & Barnabæ societatis. In the Books of the Maccabees this Expression recurs very often. Demus dexteras hominibus. Postulaverunt ab eo dexteras. Dexteram dedit, accepit, abiit.

I. RIMMON, Remmon, or Remmona, a City of Zebulun, 1 Chron. vi. 77. Perhaps it is the same as Dimnah, or Dimona, or Damna, Josh. xxi. 35.

II. RIMMON, a Rock to which the Children of Benjamin retreated after their Defeat. Judg. xx. 45. xxi. 13.

III. RIMMON, an Idol of the People of Damascus. Naaman the Syrian, makes his Confession to Elisha, that he had often been in the Temple of Rimmon with the 2 Kings v. 18. King of Damascus his Master, who lean'd upon his Arm, while he paid his Adorations to Rimmon. 'Tis thought this God is no other than the Sun, and that the Name of Rimmon, or High, is given to Grot. in iv. Reg. 5. him, because of his Elevation. Grotius takes it for Saturn, because this Planet is Selden. de Diis Syris, Syntag. 2. c. 10. the most elevated of all. Selden will have it to be the God most-high, the God Elion of the Phenicians. Serrarius believes it to be the Goddess Venus. We know of no other God, in all Antiquity, but this, by the Name of Rimmon.

RIMMON-PAREZ, or Remmon-phares, an Encampment of the Israelites in the Numb. xxxiii. 19. Wilderness; from Rithmah they went to Rimmon-parez, and from hence to Libnah.

RIMMON the Beerothite; or of Beroth, the Father of Baanah and Rechab, the Murderers of King Ishbosheth. 2 Sam. iv. 5, 9.

RINGS. The Antiquity of Rings is known from Scripture and profane Authors. Judah left his Ring with Tamar. When Gen. xxxviii. 18. Pharaoh committed the Government of all Egypt to Joseph, he took his Ring from his Finger, and gave it to Joseph. After Gen. xli. 42. the Victory that the Israelites obtained over the Midianites, they offer'd to the Lord the Rings, the Bracelets, and the golden Necklaces, that they had taken from the Enemy. The Israelitish Women wore Numb. xxxi. 50. Rings, not only on their Fingers, but also in their Nostrils and their Ears. St. James distinguishes a Man of Wealth and Dignity by the Ring of Gold that he wore on his Finger. At the Return of the prodigal James ii. 2. Vir aureum annulum habens, &c. Son, his Father orders him to be dress'd in a new Suit of Cloaths, and to have a Ring put upon his Finger. When the Lord Luke xv. 22. threatned King Jeconiah with the utmost Effects of his Anger, he tells him, that Jer. xxii. 24. tho' he were the Signet or Ring upon his Finger, yet he should be torn off.

The Ring was us'd chiefly to seal with, and the Scripture generally puts it in the Hands of Princes and great Persons; as the King of Egypt, Joseph, Ahaz, Jezabel, King Ahasuerus, his favourite Haman, 1 Kings xxi. 8. Mordecai, who succeeded Haman in his Esther iii. 10, &c. Dignity, King Darius. The Patents and Dan. vi. 17. Orders of these Princes were sealed with their Rings or Signets, and it was this that secured to 'em their Authority and Respect.

The Ring was one of the Marks of Sovereign Authority. We have already observed, that Pharaoh gave his Ring to Joseph, as a Token of that Authority with which he invested him, and which he intended he should exercise over all his People. Quint. Curt. l. x. c. 5. When Alexander the Great gave his Ring to Perdiccas, this was understood as nominating him to be his Successor. When 1 Macc. vi. 15. Antiochus Epiphanes was at the Point of Death, he committed to Philip, one of his Friends, his Diadem, his Royal Cloak, and his Ring, that he might give them to his Son and Successor young Antiochus. Augustus being very sick of a Distemper which he thought mortal, he gave his Ring to Agrippa, as to a Friend of the Xiphilin. in Aug. greatest Integrity.

We read of certain magical Rings, to which several extraordinary Effects were ascribed, either as Preservatives against certain Evils, or for procuring certain Advantages and good Fortune. The Orientals, for Example, relate a thousand things of a pretended Ring of Solomon's, which Biblior. Orient. titul. Soleyman, p. 819. communicated to him a wonderful Sagacity, and caus'd him to be esteem'd the wisest and happiest of Kings. They tell us, that one Day this Prince put off his Ring to go into a Bath, when an infernal Fury Fury stole it from him, and threw it into the Sea. Upon this Accident Solomon would not sit upon his Throne for forty Days, not thinking himself able to govern as he should, when he was depriv'd of so necessary an Assistant. But at last he recover'd his Ring again, by the Means of a Fish that had swallow'd it, and which happen'd to be served up at his Table.

The Rings and Pendants for the Ears, so frequent in Palestine and Africa, were also probably superstitious Rings, Talismans, or Phylacteries, to which certain supernatural Effects were imputed. When Jacob arrived at the Land of Canaan, at
Gen. xxxv. 4. his Return from Mesopotamia, he gave Orders to his People to put into his Custody, all the strange Gods which were in their Hand, and all their Ear-rings which were in their Ears. This seems to insinuate, that those strange Gods were superstitious or magical Figures, engraven upon their Rings, their Bracelets, and the Pendants in their Ears. Or else, according to some Commentators, that these Rings and Pendants were upon the Hands, and in the Ears of these false Gods. St. Austin inveighs very pathetically against these Phylacteries of false
Aug. qu. cxi. in Gen. Gods, which his Countrymen the Africans fastened to their Ears, and to which they imputed a thousand supernatural and superstitious Vertues; intending by this kind of Ornament, not so much to dress themselves out to please Men, as to please and RINNAH, or Rinna, Son of Shimon, of the Tribe of Judah. 1 Chron. iv. 20.

RIPHATH, or Riphat, second Son of
Gen. x. 3. רִפַת Riphat. Gomer, and Grandson of Japhet. He is call'd Diphath in the Chronicles. The Re-
1 Chron. i. 6. דִפַת Diphat. semblance of the two Hebrew Letters ר Resh and ד Daleth is so much, that they are very often confounded. The Learned are not agreed about the Country that was peopled by the Descendants of Riphath. The Chaldee and Arabick take it for France; Eusebius for the Country of the Sauromatæ; the Chronicon Alexandrinum for that of the Garamantæ; Josephus for Paphlagonia.
Mela l. 1. Mela assures us, that antiently the People of this Province were call'd Riphatæi, or Riphaces; and in Bithynia, bordering upon Paphlagonia, may be found the River Rhebeus, a People call'd Rhebantes, and a Canton of the same Name. These Reasons have prevail'd with Bochart to believe, that Riphath peopled Paphlagonia. Others think he peopled the Montes Riphei, and this Opinion seems the most reasonable to us, becaause the other Sons of Gomer peopled the northern Countries towards Scythia, and beyond the Euxine Sea.

RISSAH, or Ressa, an Encampment of the Israelites in the Wilderness. They came from Libnah to Rissah, and from Rissah they went to Kehelathah. Numb. xxxiii. 22.

RITHMAH, or Rethma, an Encampment of the Israelites in the Desart. From Hazeroth they arrived at Rithmah, from whence they went to Rimmon-parez. This Numb.
Station must be in the Wilderness of Paran, xxxiii. 18.
not far from Cadesh-barnea.

RIVER. The Hebrews give the Name of the River, without any Addition, sometimes to the Nile, sometimes to the Euphrates, and sometimes to Jordan. 'Tis the Tenour of the Discourse that must determine the Sense of this uncertain and indeterminate Way of Speaking. They give also the Name of River to Brooks and Rivulets that are not very considerable.

Here follows a List of the principal Rivers or Brooks of Palestine.

The Jordan.
The Arnon, }
The Jabok, } beyond Jordan.
The Karith, }
The Sorek.
The Beser.
The Kishon.
The Belus.
The Brook of Jezreel, which falls into the Jordan, near Scythopolis.
The Eleuthera.
The Sabbation.
The Brook of Reeds, or of Kannah.
The Barrady, otherwise Abanah and Pharphar, Rivers of Damascus.

All these Rivers may be seen under their proper Articles, or under the Cities to which they belong.

The Name of River is sometimes given to the Sea; for Example, Jonah says, He Jonah ii. 4. found himself surrounded by the Rivers, that is, by the Waters of the Sea. And Habakkuk, speaking of the Passage through the Red Sea, says, That the Lord divided Habak. iii. 8, 9.
the Waters of the Rivers. And the Psalm- ist, That the Lord dried up the rapid Psal. lxxiv. 15.
Rivers, or the Rivers of Strength. And elsewhere, That the Lord had founded the Ps. xxiv. 2.
Earth upon the Sea, and established it upon the Rivers: Which signifies the same in both Places. Herodotus relates, [a] that when King Xerxes cast Bonds into the Hellespont, and order'd it to be whip'd, he said to it: 'Tis with good Reason that no Body offers Sacrifices to thee, O thou deceitful and turbulent River.

RIZPAH, or Respha, the Daughter of Aiah, the Concubine, or Wife of the second degree, to King Saul. This Prince having put to Death a great Number of the Gi- beonites, for what Reason, or upon what Occasion is not known; God, to punish this Massacre, sent a great Famine into the Land of Israel, [a] which held for three Years. David, who then reign'd, being acquainted by the Oracle of the Lord, that this Famine was sent as a Punishment for the Cruelty of Saul to the Gibeonites, caus'd them to come to him, and said to them; "What can I do to repair the "Injury that has been done you, that you "may bless the Lord's Inheritance?" They answer'd him; "Let seven of the "Children or Grand-children of Saul be "deliver'd to us, and we will hang them "up, to appease the Anger of the Lord." Then David gave them up Armoni and Mephibosheth, two Sons that Saul had by Rizpah, the Daughter of Aiah; and also five Sons that Michal, the Daughter of Saul, had by Adriel, the Son of Barzillai; or rather by Phaltiel. These they hung up upon the Mountain near to Gibeah, at the beginning of Barley-Harvest. (2 Sam. xxi. 1, 2, 3, &c.) (Vid. 1 Sam. xxv. 43.)

Then Rizpah the Daughter of Aiah took a Sackcloth and spread it upon the Rock; and continued there from the beginning of Harvest, till the Waters of the Heavens fell down upon them, or till the Lord sent his Rain upon the Earth, and restored it to its former Fertility. She hinder'd the Birds from tearing the Bodies by Day, and the ravenous Beasts from devouring them by Night. When this Action of Rizpah was related to David, he was moved with Compassion, and sent to fetch the Bones of Saul and Jonathan, which were at Jabesh-gilead, brought them to Gibeah, and put them in the Tomb of Kish, the Father of Saul; together with the Bones of the seven Men that had been executed by the Gibeonites.

On this Occasion they acted contrary to the Law of Deuteronomy, which orders that they should take the Bodies down from the Cross or Gibbit, before the setting of the Sun. Non permanebit cadaver ejus in ligno; sed in eadem die sepelietur. But these unhappy Remains of the Family of Saul were left there, probably from the beginning of the Spring to Autumn: Whether it was because the Crime of their Father deserved this severe Treatment, or because the Gibeonites, being only Proselytes of Habitation, were not obliged to the Observation of this Law of Moses. Lastly, Whereas God had order'd David to give Satisfaction to the Gibeonites, this Prince thought fit to leave the Management of it to themselves. (Deut. xxi. 23.)

A long Time before what we have now related, and soon after the Death of Saul, [b] Abner, the General of his Army, fell in Love with Rizpah, and took her for Wife, or, at least, us'd her as such. It was thought a heinous Crime, according to the Notions of those People, for a Subject to meddle with one of the Wives of a King. Ishbosheth, the Son of Saul, who reign'd at Mahanaim beyond Jordan, and who was supported in his regal State, only by the Credit of Abner's Valour, resented this as a great Injury, and upbraided him with daring to approach his Father's Concubine. Abner was so nettled at this Reproach, that from that Minute he vow'd the Ruin of Ishbosheth, and enter'd into a League with David, to bring into his Interest all those that had adhered to Ishbosheth. This is all we are told about Rizpah. (2 Sam. iii. 7, 1.)

ROCK. Palestine being a mountainous Country, had also many Rocks; which Rocks made Part of the Strength of the Country, for in Times of Danger they retired to them, where they found a Refuge against any sudden Irruptions of the Enemy. When the Benjamites were overcome and almost exterminated by the Israelites of the other Tribes, they secured themselves in the Rock of Rimmon. Samson kept Garison in the Rock Etam. When David was persecuted by Saul, he often concealed himself in Caverns made in a Rock; for Example, at Maon, at Adullam, at En-gedi, where there was a Cave of a vast Extent, in which David and his People hid themselves, and wherein Saul enter'd and continued for some Time, without discovering them. Joshua shut up five Kings of the Canaanites, whom he had subdued, in the Cave of Makkedah. During the Oppression that the Children of Israel suffer'd from the Midianites, they were forced to hide themselves in the Cavities of the Rocks. St. Jerome says, that the southern Parts of Judah are full of Caves under Ground, and of Caverns in the Mountains, to which the People retired in Time of Danger. The Kenites dwelt in the hollow Places of the Rocks. Even at this Day, the Villages of this Country are subterraneous, or in the Rocks. Josephus in several places speaks of hollow Rocks, where Thieves and Robbers had their Haunts; and Travellers still find a great Number of them in Palestine, and the Provinces adjoining to it. (Judg. xx. 47.) (Jud. xv. 8.) (2 Sam. xxiii. 25, 28. xxii. 1. 1 Sam. xxiv. 2, 4, 5.) (Josh. x. 16, 17, &c.) (Judg. vi. 2. Hieronym.) (Numb. xxiv. 21.) (Bellon. observat. l. 2. c. 61.)

The Name of Rock is also given to God, by way of Metaphor, because God is the Strength, the Refuge, and the Azylum of Israel; as the Rocks were of those Places, whither the People retired in case of an unforeseen Attack or Irruption of the Enemy. The Lord is my Rock, and my Fortress, and my Deliverer: My God, my Strength, in whom I will trust, my Buckler, (Ps. xviii. 2. יהוה צורי)

[a] From the Year of the World 2983, to 2986, before Christ 1014, before the vulgar Era 1018. Saul had been now dead 34 Years, having been kill'd in 2949.

Deut. xxxii. 15, 18, 30, 31. and my Fortress. Then he forsook God which made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his Salvation. Of the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast forgotten God that formed thee. How should one chase a Thousand, and two put ten Thousand to Flight, except their Rock had sold them, and the Lord had shut them up? For their Rock is not as our Rock, even our Enemies themselves being Judges. And so of others; for this way of speaking is very common in the Hebrew Text.

The Hebrews also give in general the Name of Rock to all Places of Retreat
Pf. lxi. 2, 3. and Security, to which they retire. Lead me to the Rock that is higher than I. For thou hast been a Shelter for me, and a Psal. xciv. 22. my Rock and my Fortress. But the Lord is my Defence, and my God is the Rock of my Refuge.

The Word Rock or Stone is also used to signify Knives; for they made use of Knives of Stone or Flint in Circumcision.
Ex. iv. 25. Zipporah took a sharp Stone, and cut off the Josh. v. 2, 3. Foreskin of her Son. At that Time the Lord said unto Joshua, make thee sharp Knives, (or Knives of Flint) and circumcise again the Children of Israel a second time. And Joshua made him sharp Knives, and circumcised the Children of Israel, at the Hill of the Fore-skins.

Deut. xxxii. 13. Moses says, that the Lord had settled his People in a high Country, and made him to suck Honey out of the Rock, and Oyl out of the flinty Rock. That is, he brought them out of Egypt, which was a flat Country, and subject to Inundations, and placed them in Palestine, which was a mountainous Country of great Fertility, the Hills of which were loaded with Vines and Olive-trees; and of which the very Rocks were fill'd with Swarms of Bees, whose Honey did not add a little to the Happiness of the Climate. He says in Deut. viii. 9. another Place, Palestine was a Land whose Stones were Iron, and out of whose Hills thou mayst dig Brass. That is, it abounded with good Mines of Iron and Brass.

Rock is also us'd for a Quarry, and in a figurative Sense, for the Patriarch of a Nation, or the first Father, who is, as it were, the Quarry from whom the Men of that Nation have proceeded. For Example, Isai. li. 1. Look unto the Rock whence ye are hewn, and to the Hole of the Pit whence ye are digged. Look unto Abraham your Father, and unto Sarah that bare you. And Moses, speaking to the Jews, says; Of the Rock Deut. xxxii. 18.
that begat thee thou art unmindful; that is, of the Quarry from whence thou wast taken.

Mention is made in Scripture of several Rocks. As, for Example,

The Rocks of Arnon: Probably these Numb. were Rocks upon the Banks of the River xxi. 14, 15.
or Brook Arnon, chiefly at the Place where the Israelites pass'd over it. They us'd to say, as it were by an antient Proverb, that the Lord had broke down or made plain the Rocks of Arnon, to make a Passage for his People. Scopuli torrentium inclinati sunt.

The Rocks Bozez and Seneh, 1 Sam. xiv. 4. They were between Michmash and Gibeah.

Sela-hammah-lekoth, or the Rock of Divisions. This was in the Desart of Maon, 1 Sam.
and had this Name given it, because Saul xxviii. 21.
was here obliged to quit his Pursuit after David, and to return to the Assistance of his Country, which was then invaded by the Philistines.

The Rock of Horeb. There are three Rocks by this Name, distinctly mark'd out in Scripture. The first is that from whence Moses caus'd the Waters to gush out, to supply the Necessities of the People, when they were encamped at Rephidim. The Ex. xvii. 6. second is that on the Top of Mount Horeb, where God manifested a Part of his Glory to Moses, and afterwards to Elijah. The Ex. xxxiii.
third is that where Oreb, the Prince of the 21, 22, 23. xxxiv. 6, 7.
Midianites, was put to Death. But this 1 Kings latter is rather written Oreb, whereas the xix. 10, 11, 12, &c.
other two are written Horeb. Judg. vii.

The Rock Adullam; it was in the Neigh- 25. Isa. x.
bourhood of the City of this Name, in the 26.
Tribe of Judah.

The Rock Etam; probably near the Judg. xv.
City of this Name, mark'd in the Greek. 8, 11, 13.
Josh. xv. 60. 1 Chron. iv. 32. 2 Chron. xi. 6. They were in the Tribe of Judah, to the South of Jerusalem. See ETAM.

The Rock Jektiel. This, according to several Interpreters, is the same as Petra, the capital City of Arabia Petrea. See PETRA and JEKTIEL.

The Rock or Stone of Zoheleth, 1 Kings i. 9. See ZOHELETH.

The Rock of the Waters of Meribah, or Strife. This is the Rock where the Faith of Moses fail'd, and where the Scripture reproaches him with having hesitated in his Heart, and did not honour God as he ought, before the Children of Israel. Num. xx. 10, 11. It had the Name of the Rock of Strife given to it, and to the Waters, the Waters of Strife, because of the Murmurings of the Children of Israel, and their Sedition against Moses.

If there are still any other considerable Rocks, they may be seen under their proper per Articles, or under the Articles of those Cities, in whose Neighbourhood they were situated.

ROD, Virga. This Word is us'd, sometimes for the Branches of a Tree:
Gen. xxx. 37. And Jacob took him Rods of green Poplar, and of the Hasel and Chesnut-tree. Some-
Ex. iv. 17, 20. times for a Staff or Wand: And thou shalt take this Rod in thine Hand, wherewith thou shalt do Signs. And Moses took the Rod of God in his Hand. Or for a Shep-

Psal. ii. 9. Rev. ii. 27. xii. 5. xix. 15. Thou shalt break them with a Rod of Iron. Elsewhere Virga is put for a young Sprout or Branch, and to point out the miraculous Birth of the Messiah, who was to proceed Numb. xxiv. 17. from a Virgin Mother. Consurget virga de Israel. There shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Scepter (or Rod) shall rise out of
Is. xi. Israel. And Isaiah says; There shall come forth a Rod out of the Stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his Roots. Lastly, Rod is sometimes put to signify a
Ps. lxxiv. 2. Jer. x. 16. Tribe, or a People; Remember thy Congregation which thou hast purchased of old, the Rod of thine Inheritance which thou hast redeemed. Israel is the Rod of his Inheritance. In Jeremiah, the watchful Rod (Virgam vigilantem ego video. Jerem. i. 11. Vulgat.) according to the Hebrew, stands for a Branch or Rod of an Almond-tree. This Tree flourishes before any other, and the Lord intended to mark out Nebuchadnezzar by it, who was just then ready to pour out all his Forces upon Judea.

The Rod of Moses, is that which God gave him, or rather, it was the Staff or Wand that Moses generally made use of for driving his Flock, and which God commanded him to take along with him, for the working of those Miracles he was to perform before Pharaoh, and before all Exod. iv. 2, 3, &c. his People. The Lord said unto him, What is that in thine Hand? And he said, A Rod. And he said, Cast it on the Ground, and it became a Serpent. And Moses fled from before it. And the Lord said unto Moses; Put forth thine Hand, and take it by the Tail. And he put forth his Hand and caught it; and it became a Rod in his Hand. This Rod Moses kept as long as he lived, and it became the Instrument of performing a great Number of Miracles, which he wrought through the Course of his Life. The Scripture does not inform us what became of it after his Death; it is probable that it devolved to Joshua, as Moses's Successor in the Government of the People: But of this there is no Proof. The Mussulmen say, that it was laid up in the Ark of the Covenant; but they confound it with that of Aaron.

The Rabbins relate many wonderful things of this famous Rod. They say, it was first created by God for the Use of Adam; that it came by Succession to Abraham, and thence to the Patriarch Joseph, who left it to the Kings of Egypt as a Pledge of his Acknowledgment. Jethro coming into Egypt, stole it away from thence, and carry'd it into his own Country. He there planted it in a Garden, where it took such Root, that no one could pluck it up. Jethro, who knew the whole Virtue of it, promis'd his Daughter in Marriage to whosoever could pull it up. Many young Men offered themselves, and attempted to pull it out of the Ground; but no one could perform it, till Moses undertook it, and plucked it up without any Difficulty. Zipporah was the Reward of his Success. The Name of God was written upon this Rod, and it was this that indued it with all its Virtue and Merit.

The Rod or Caduceus of Mercury, which is always represented to us as twisted about with two Serpents, and endued with prodigious Vertues, is an Imitation of what the sacred History tells us of the Rod of Moses changed into a Serpent, and of the Miracles that God wrought by its Means.

The Rod of Aaron, is the Staff that this High-priest commonly us'd. In the Conspiracy of Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, against Moses and Aaron, God gave Orders to Moses, to receive a Rod from every one Numb. xvii. 1, 2, 3. of the Heads of the Tribes, and to add that of Aaron to the Number, that the Lord might shew by a Miracle which was the Tribe that he chose, for the Exercise of the Priest's Office. They gathered therefore twelve Rods, according to the Number of the Tribes, and that of Aaron made the thirteenth. They wrote upon each of those Rods the Name of the Prince of the Tribe who offer'd it; they put them in the Tabernacle of the Congregation, where the Lord had used to manifest himself to Moses; and the Day following, when they took these Rods again, they observed, that in the Night-time the Rod of Aaron had put forth Buds, had blossom'd, and that the Blossoms were those of the Almond-tree.

There was no Room for any Suspicion, that the Rods had been changed. Every one had wrote his Name upon his own, and that of Aaron was very well known; and no human Industry could produce so great a Change. Thus the Priesthood, by this Prodigy, was confirm'd to Aaron and his Posterity. To preserve the Memory of so miraculous an Event, God commanded Moses to lay up this Rod in the Tabernacle of the Congregation, or of Testimony, that it might serve as a Monument of what had happen'd upon this Occasion.

Some think it preserved its Leaves and Fruit as long as it continued in this holy Place. And indeed it was necessary, that to answer the Design of God, it must preserve those Marks of the Miracle, for the Conviction of Posterity.

It is inquired, whether it was put within the Ark of the Covenant, or only by it. God commands Moses only to put it in the Tabernacle to be preserved there. But St. Paul says it was within the Ark, with the Urn full of Manna, and the Tables of the Law. Others affirm, it was not put within, but only at the Side of the Ark. They alledge for this Opinion, a Passage out of the first Book of the Kings, which intimates, that there was nothing in the Ark but the Tables of the Law; but others contend, that this Passage of St. Paul ought to be understood literally; that there could be no Hindrance to prevent the putting of Aaron's Rod into the Ark, since it was five Foot long, and its Capacity was much more than would be requir'd to hold it. This Rod was sanctified by the Miracle that was work'd upon it; and when the Scripture says, that there was nothing in the Ark, but the Tables of the Law, it may be understood with this Limitation, that nothing else was originally there, the Ark being only intended for this Use. But this need not hinder, but that afterwards other things might be put into it.

Numb. xvii 20. Heb. ix. 4.

1 Kings viii. 9.

Artapan in Eusebius [a] informs us, that the Rod of Moses, which Aaron made use of in performing so many Prodigies in Egypt before Pharaoh, became in after Ages the Object of Idolatrous Worship to the Egyptians, that they kept it in the Temple of Isis, and paid Adoration to it. 'Tis also said, that even at present it is shew'd at Rome in the Church of St. John Lateran, where it is honour'd as a very precious Relick.

Some Learned Men have thought, [b] that the Thyrsus, carry'd by Bacchus and the Bacchanals, and which is represented to us as a Lance or Dart, incircled with Vine-branches, is an Imitation of Aaron's Rod that flourish'd. Euripides relates, that one of the Priestesses of Bacchus struck one of the Rocks of Mount Cytheron with her Thyrsus, and that a Spring of Water immediately gush'd out; another Imitation of the Miracle that happen'd at Horeb, where Moses and Aaron brought forth Water out of a Rock, by means of this miraculous Wand.

The Rod of St. Joseph, the Husband of the Virgin Mary. We read in the false Gospel of the Nativity of the Holy Virgin, that when Mary was arrived at the Age of Matrimony, and that, according to Custom, they were about to send her to her Parents, that she might be marry'd; she answer'd, that she could not consent to be bestow'd in Marriage, because she had made a Vow of Virginity. This being a singular Case, the Highpriest consulted the Lord upon it, who answer'd by an intelligible Voice, that was heard by every one present, that they must provide a Person, to whom this Virgin was to be committed as the Guardian of her Virginity. That for this purpose all the unmarried Men of the House of David must present themselves before the Altar, each holding a Rod in his Hand; and that he whose Rod should bud and blossom, and upon whom the Spirit of the Lord should light in the Form of a Dove, should be the Person chosen by the Lord to be the Spouse and Guardian of the Virgin, according to those Words of Isaiah; And there shall come Isai. xi. 1, 2.
forth a Rod out of the Stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his Roots. And the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the Spirit of Wisdom and Understanding, the Spirit of Counsel and Might, the Spirit of Knowledge, and of the Fear of the Lord.

Those, therefore, that were mark'd out presented themselves in the Temple, each holding a Rod in his Hand. Joseph came thither also, but had brought no Rod with him. The Highpriest not finding upon any of the Rods the Token that God had promis'd, he consulted the Lord again, and it was answer'd him, that he that had brought no Rod was the only one whom God had chosen. He had no sooner then brought his Rod, but a Dove came down from Heaven, and rested upon it; by which Mark every body knew that he was appointed to be the Spouse of Mary.

The Protevangelium of St. James [c] relates the same thing, but with some Variety of Circumstances. It says, that when the Virgin had attain'd the tenth Year of her Age, the Priests told the Highpriest Zachariah, that he should think of marrying her, for fear the holy Place might be exposed to some Defilement. That Zachariah consulted the Lord thereupon, who told him by an Angel, that he must assemble all the single Men of Isreal; that he should command every one to bring his

Rod,

Rod, and that he upon whom a Miracle should be wrought was to be the Spouse of Mary. The Affair was publish'd through the whole Country by Sound of Trumpet; there came to the Temple a vast Number of Candidates; Joseph left his Carpenter's Shop and came with the rest.

The Highpriest took all their Rods, and went into the Temple, where, having pray'd, he return'd to each his Rod. When Joseph received his, a Dove flew out of it, and went to light upon his Head. Then the Highpriest declared to him, that it was the Will of God he should take Mary to Wife: Joseph excused himself, saying; I have Children, I am Old, she is Young, I am afraid of becoming the Sport of Israel. The Highpriest answer'd; Fear the Lord, remember what happen'd to Corah, Dathan, and Abiram. Oppose not the Will of God, which has been manifested by this Prodigy. Joseph consented and took Mary; but he left her in a House, and return'd to work at his Carpenter's Trade.

It is from these antient Gospels, and from the Tradition of the Orientals, that our Painters have a Custom of representing Joseph with a flourishing Rod; but as the Fountain from whence this is drawn, is of no Authority in the Church, as the Story itself is but ill put together, and as a Miracle is by no means necessary on this Occasion, all this may be reckon'd only as a Fable. See St. Jerome upon St. Matthew, l. 2.

ROMANS. St. Jerome seems to have thought, that Chittim was put for Italy, since he translates this Word by Italy.

Numb. xxiv. 24. Ezekiel xxvii. 6. Balaam says; And Ships shall come from the Coasts of Chittim, and shall afflict Ashur, and shall afflict Eber, and he also shall perish for ever. Here St. Jerome translates, Ships shall come from Italy. But this Passage ought rather to be understood of the Greeks, who under the Conduct of Alexander the Great, came to invade the Hebrews, that is, the Persians who reign'd beyond the Euphrates. They overthrew their Empire, but were afterwards overthrown themselves by the Romans. The same St. Jerome says in Ezekiel, [a] that the Workmen of Tyre made use of what came from the Isles of Italy, to make Lodgings (or Cabbins) for the Captains of the Tyrian Ships. Prætoriola de insulis Italiæ. Vulgat. But what Rarities could there be in these Islands of Italy, that were not to be found in Phenicia and the neighbouring Provinces?

The Hebrew may be translated two Ways. They have made thy Benches of Ivory trod under Foot, and brought from the Isles of Chittim; or from Macedonia. Ivory trod under Foot, is that which has been for a long Time hid under Ground, where the Elephants are used to conceal their Teeth when they shed them. Dentes deciduos casu aliquo, vel senectute, defodiunt. (Plin. l. 8. c. 3.) 'Tis known that Macedonia was a Country where Ivory was not common, any more than in Italy; wherefore Bochart and Glassius maintain, that the Hebrew ought to be translated thus; They have made thy Benches of Ivory, and of Box brought from Macedonia. (Bochart. de Animal. part. 1. l. 8. c. 3. Glass. Gram. l. 3. c. 1.) Now the Box of Macedonia was in great Reputation, as may be seen from Pliny: And we have shewn under the Article CHITTIM, that this Word stood for Macedonia. (Plin. l. 16. c. 16.)

The same St. Jerome also translates the Hebrew Word Tubal by Italy, in Isaiah lxvi. 19. which according to some signifies Spain, and according to others the Tibarenians. See the Article TUBAL.

Lastly, the same Father has render'd the Hebrew Word Chittim by Romans, which elsewhere [b] he has translated by Italy, and which, as far as we can judge, signifies Macedonia. See Gen. x. 4. and the Commentators upon Dan. xi. 30. True it is, that in this Place the Prophet speaks of the Romans; but it is because the Romans he mentions sailed from Delos in a Macedonian Fleet, which they found in the Harbour of the Isle of Delos. Bochart has display'd all his Learning to support the Opinion of the Rabbins, who by Chittim understand Rome and Italy. (Vid. Liv. l. 44. 45. Bochart. Phaleg. l. 3. c. 5.) He shews, that in this Country are found Cities by the Name of Cethim and Echetia, and a River call'd Cethus; but he also brings very good Proofs that Chittim is put for Macedonia.

The Jews generally call the Romans, Idumeans, and the Roman Empire, the cruel Empire of Edom. It is difficult to guess for what Reason they give this Denomination to Italy, and Rome, which are so far from Idumea, and have never had any Communication with the Idumeans. When the more knowing Rabbins are asked the Reason of this, they maintain with great Assurance and Obstinacy, that the Idumeans embraced Christianity, settled themselves in Italy, and there extended their Dominions.

Abravanel, who passes among them for a Man of Sense, pretends that the Romans, and all Christians in general, may be call'd Idumeans, in the same Sense as Isaiah call'd the wicked Jews of his Time by the Name of People of Sodom and Gomorrah, because they follow'd their Manner, and espoused their Sentiments. As Esau brought many Strangers into the Family of Jacob; ſo in the Roman Empire, and in the Chriſtian Church, are to be found a Confuſion of all Sorts of Nations that provoke God. Eſau hated Jacob, and endeavour'd to rob him of his Birth-right and other Privileges; the Chriſtians do the ſame thing by the People of Iſrael. The Cabaliſts maintain, that the Soul of Eſau paſſed into the Body of Jeſus Chriſt by Tranſmigration; whence it is that we find the Names of Jeſua and Eſau to be written in Hebrew with the ſame Letters, though not in the ſame Order. Eſau was born under the Conſtellation of Mars, from whence he became a great Hunter, and a Man of Blood. The Roman Heroes, who were deſcended from Kings, had the ſame Inclinations. Eſau was Red; the Roman Emperors wore Purple Robes, and the Cardinals wear them ſtill. Jeſus Chriſt was born under the ſame Planet Mars, he was a Man of Blood, for which Reaſon he was put to death, with a Part of his Diſciples. But what Impertinencies are theſe?

ישוע Jeſu. עשו Eſau.

Joſeph the Son of Gorion relates this Affair in a more Hiſtorical, or rather more Fabulous Manner. Tſepho the Grandſon of Eſau, being kept Priſoner by Joſeph in Egypt, made his Eſcape to Æneas then King of Carthage, who made him the Commander of his Forces. Æneas went from Africa into Italy, where he twice defeated Turnus King of Beneventum, and took Lavinia from him to make her his own Wife. Pablus the Nephew of Æneas was kill'd in the Battle, as alſo Turnus, and they had two Towers, or Mauſolea, erected to their Memory, which were ſtill to be ſeen between Alba and Rome, at the Time that this Hiſtorian wrote: One of which was call'd Copablus, and the other Cophurnus.

The Africans under the Command of Tſepho, often made Incurſions into Italy, and committed great Havock. 'Twas in one of theſe Expeditions, that loſing a young Heifer, he found it again in a Cave, where it was devour'd by a monſtrous Beaſt, half a Goat and half a Man, whom he then kill'd. The Inhabitants being delivered from this Monſter, honour'd Tſepho as an Hero, and made Offerings and Libations to him. They gave him the Name Janus, which was the Name of the Monſter ſlain by him, and alſo that of Saturn, which was the Name of a Star that was then worſhipped. Such therefore was Tſepho, the Grandſon of Eſau.

Latinus ſucceeded him, then Æneas the Trojan; and a long time after that reign'd Romulus, the Founder of Rome. At this Time David made War with the Idumeans; then Adarezer had his Grandſon Zir, Officers of King David, revolted from him, and fled into Italy, where they built old Alba. There they reign'd, and their Poſterity continued there down to the Times of Joſeph Son of Gorion, the Contriver of all theſe Whimſies. I paſs over a great many Circumſtances, that I may not treſpaſs too much upon the Patience of the Reader. And thus he makes out, how the Idumeans by the Means of Tſepho, and the Jews by means of Adarezer and Zir, ſettled themſelves in Italy. It is not amiſs now and then to ſhew ſomething of the Genius of the Jews, by the Traditions and Hiſtories of their own Invention. See Baſnages's Hiſtory of the Jews, t. 1. l. 2. c. 5.

But this Tradition is not peculiar to the Jews; for it has paſs'd from them to the Arabians, and we read it in almoſt all the Muſſulman Authors. That Eſau had a Son called Roum, from whom are deſcended all the Grecian and Roman Emperors. Laſtly, this Tradition is common to almoſt all the Nations of the Levant, who have any Knowledge of the Sacred Writings; that from the Time of Abdon, Judge of the Hebrews, a Colony of Idumeans paſs'd into Italy and ſettled there. That Latinus reigned among them, and that Romulus the Founder of Rome derived his Original from them. There is a great deal of Probability, that theſe Fables were firſt invented with no other Deſign, than to give a Pretence to the Jews among themſelves, to apply to the Chriſtians all thoſe Curſes that they find in their Holy Writings againſt Edom, and the Idumeans. And when theſe Stories once got footing, they became the common Belief of all the Jews and Orientals.

The Roman Empire is mark'd out in Daniel, by the Kingdom of Iron, which bruiſes and breaks in Pieces all the other Kingdoms. This is the Explication of almoſt all Interpreters. But we think it is rather the Empire of the Lagidæ in Egypt, and of the Seleucidæ in Syria. See our Commentary upon Dan. ii. 40. In the Books of the Old Teſtament written in Hebrew, I find no mention of the Names Rome, Romans, or Italy.

Dan. ii. 40.

But in the Books of the Maccabees, and in the New Teſtament, there is often mention made of them. For Example, it is ſaid, [a] That Judas had heard of the Fame of the Romans, that they were mighty and valiant Men, and ſuch as would lovingly accept all that joined themſelves unto them, and make a League of Amity with all that came unto them. And that they were Men of great Valour. It was told him alſo of their Wars and noble Acts, which they had done among the Galatians, and how they had conquered them, and brought them under Tribute. Judas had alſo been informed of the Conqueſts they had made in Spain; that they had brought under their Empire very diſtant Countries, and had overcome Kings that came to make War with them, from the Extremities of the World. Laſtly, that they had conquer'd Philip and Perſeus, Kings of Macedonia, or of the Chittims, and Antiochus the great King of Syria; that they had deprived him of a great Part of his Provinces; that they had alſo reduced the Greeks, who had attempted to make Head againſt them; and in a Word, that they confirm'd in their Kingdoms all thoſe they had a mind ſhould reign, and on the contrary deprived thoſe of their Crowns whom they did not intend ſhould enjoy them any longer: Yet nevertheleſs, that none of them would wear either the Diadem or the Purple, but that they had choſen a Senate from among themſelves, conſiſting of Three hundred and Twenty Senators, who conſulted every Day about the Affairs of the Republick; that they committed every Year the Sovereign Magiſtracy to one Perſon, who had the whole Command through all their Territories, and that thus all were obedient to one, without any Envy or Jealouſy among them.

This is what Fame had publiſhed in Judea concerning the Romans, and what inclined Judas Maccabeus to ſend two Ambaſſadors to Rome, to make Friendſhip and Alliance with them, and to deſire them to free them from the Yoke of the Syrians, who would oppreſs them in their Liberties, and overturn their Religion. Theſe Ambaſſadors were very well received by the Romans, and here is the Subſtance of the Reply they ſent back to Jeruſalem, which remained written at Rome upon Tables of Braſs: "May the Romans and the Nation "of the Jews, be repleniſh'd with all "Happineſs for ever, both by Sea and "Land, and may the Sword and the "Enemy be removed at a great Diſtance "from them. If any War ſhould happen "againſt the Romans or their Allies, thro' "the whole Extent of their Dominions, "the Jews ſhall aſſiſt them heartily in the "ſame, as far as the Circumſtances ſhall "allow them to do, nor ſhall the Romans "be obliged to provide any thing for ſuch "Troops as ſhall come to their Aſſiſtance. "And on the other Side, if any War "ſhould happen againſt the People of the "Jews, the Romans ſhall aſſiſt them "heartily in the ſame, as far as the Cir-"cumſtances ſhall allow them to do, nor "ſhall the Jews be obliged to provide "any thing for ſuch Troops as ſhall come "to their Aſſiſtance. That if in time to "come, either of the Parties ſhall think "fit to add any thing to, or to take any "thing from, what is here agreed to, it "ſhall be done by mutual Conſent, and "whatever ſhall be added or taken away, "ſhall be firm and ſtable. And as to the "Misfortunes that Demetrius Soter has "occaſion'd to the Jews, we have writ to "him in theſe Words; Why have you "laid ſuch a heavy Yoke upon the Jews, "who are our Friends and Allies? Know "therefore, that if they ſhall any more "make theſe Complaints to us, we ſhall "do them Juſtice, and ſhall invade your "Dominions by Sea and Land."

Such was the firſt Alliance that the Jews made with the Romans, in the Year of the World 3842, before Chriſt 158, before the vulgar Era 162. Some Years after this, in the Year of the World 3860, before Chriſt 140, before the vulgar Era 144, Jonathan, the Brother of Judas Maccabeus, finding the Opportunity to be favourable, ſent a Deputation to Rome, to renew their Alliance with the Senate; and the Senate gave them Letters directed to the Governors of the ſeveral Provinces, to have them reconducted ſafe to Judea. Laſtly, Simon Maccabeus, Brother to Judas and Jonathan, [a] ſent to Rome upon the ſame Errand, an Ambaſſador call'd Numenius, with a Preſent of a great golden Buckler. Numenius was very well received, the Senate granted what was deſired, and the Romans called the Jews their Friends, Brethren, and Allies. Demetrius Nicator being inform'd of this, conferr'd great Honours upon Simon the Highprieſt, confirm'd him in the Prieſthood, declared him his Friend, and rais'd him to a high Degree of Glory.

1 Macc. xii. 1, 2, 3, &c.

Before this happen'd, in the Year of the World 3841, before Chriſt 159, before the vulgar Era 163, Quintus Memmius and Titus Manilius, the Roman Legats, being ſent into Syria to ſettle ſome Affairs with King Antiochus Eupator, intereſted themſelves in promoting the Tranquility of the Jews, and wrote to them in this Manner. "We confirm to you the ſame Things that "Lyſias the King's Kinſman has granted to "you. And as to ſuch things which he "thinks ought to be laid before the King, "ſend ſomebody hither as ſoon as you "can, after you have well conſider'd "among your ſelves, that we may make "ſuch Determinations about them as may "be for your Advantage; for we are "going ſoon to Antioch. Wherefore "make haſte to write to us, that we may "be well inform'd of what you deſire."

The Romans took the City of Jeruſalem no leſs than three times: Firſt by the Arms of Pompey, in the Year of the World 3941, before Christ 59, before the vulgar Era 63. The second was by Sosius, in the Year of the World 3967, before Christ 33, before the vulgar Era 37. The third and last Time was under Titus, in the Year of the World 4070, in the Year of Christ 73, and of the vulgar Era 70; at which time both the City and the Temple were utterly destroy'd.

[a] 1 Macc. xiv. 24, &c. In the Year of the World 3855, before Chriſt 145, before the vulgar Era 149.

They reduced Judea into a Province; that is, they took from it the Privilege of being a Kingdom, and of having Kingly Government. First after the Banishment of King Archelaus, Son of Herod the Great, in the ninth Year of Jesus Christ, which was the sixteenth Year of the vulgar Era; and the Country continued in this State to the fortieth Year of Christ, which was the Thirty-seventh of the vulgar Era. Secondly, it was again reduced to a Province after the Death of King Agrippa, in the Year of Christ 47, which is the 43d of the vulgar Era; and it remained in this Condition till it was intirely overthrown, which happen'd in the Year of Christ 73, or the 70th Year of the vulgar Era.

Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans. This was placed before the other Epistles of St. Paul, not because it was first in order of Time, but either because of the Dignity of the Romish Church to which it is directed, or because of the Excellence of the Matter; or, lastly, because of the Magnificence and Sublimity of the Mysteries, which are here treated of and explain'd. It passes for the most exalted and the most difficult of all St. Paul's Epistles. St. Jerome was of Opinion, that not one Book only, but many Volumes were necessary, for a full Explanation of it. And some have thought, that St. Peter had chiefly this Epistle in his Eye, when he said, As our beloved Brother Paul also, according to the Wisdom given unto him, hath written unto you. As also in all his Epistles, speaking in them of these things; in which are some things hard to be understood, which they that are unlearned and unstable, wrest, as they do also the other Scriptures, unto their own Destruction. But it must also be observed, that others with good Reason think, these Words of St. Peter are rather to be referr'd to St. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews.

Hieron. Epist. 151. c. 8.

2 Pet. iii. 15, 16.

St. Paul's Design, in the Epistle to the Romans, is to put an End to certain domestick Disputes, which then prevailed among the Believers at Rome, and divided among themselves the converted Jews, and the Gentiles that were become Christians. The Jews were opinionated concerning their Birth-right, and the Promises made to their Fathers; and for this, pretended to a certain Priority or Preference before the converted Gentiles, whom they look'd upon as Foreigners and Interlopers, that out of pure Favour had been admitted into the Society of the Faithful, and to the Participation of the Prerogatives of Christianity. The Gentiles on the other hand, being irritated by these Reproaches of the Jews, stood up for the Merit of their own Sages and Philosophers, the Prudence of their Legislators, the Purity of their Morality, their Exactness in following the Rules of the Law of Nature. And at the same time they accused the Jews with Infidelity towards God, and with Violation of his Laws. They aggravated their Faults, and those of their Fathers, which had excluded the greatest Part of them from the Inheritance of the Saints, and from the Gift of Faith; whereas the Gentiles, being found less blameable than they in the Eyes of God, had deserved to be call'd to the Faith, when they were excluded.

To put an End to these Contentions, St. Paul applies himself to restrain the Presumption of the Jews, and of the converted Gentiles. He sets forth the Extravagancy of both Parties, and shews that neither of them could pretend to any Merits, nor had any Reason to glory or boast of their Vocation, which proceeded from the mere Grace and Mercy of God. He proves to 'em, that even though the Jews had observed the Law of Moses, and the Gentiles had kept the Law of Nature, this could not have merited for them the Grace of their Vocation, nor of Justification. That nothing but Faith in Jesus Christ, enlivened by Charity, and accompanied with good Works, is able to justify us; that without Faith, all the rest signifies nothing. He answers some Objections in his Way, by Arguments taken from the Principles he had laid down. As for Example, about the gratuitous Vocation, and absolute Reprobation, of both Jews and Gentiles; about the Insufficiency of the Works of the Law, without Faith; about the Superiority of the Jews above the Gentiles; about the Infallibility of the Promises of God. This leads him into a Discussion of the Mystery of Predestination and Reprobation, which though in some manner foreign to his first Design, yet, however, makes a principal Part of this Epistle, and contains some of the greatest Difficulties in it.

In Chapters xii. xiii. xiv. xv. he gives them excellent Rules of Morality, concerning the Harmony that ought to subsist among them, and concerning that mutual Forbearance and Condescention they ought to have for one another's Infirmities, for fear of scandalizing or offending one another, by any indiscreet Liberties. He marks out the false Apostles, and exhorts the Faithful to avoid them. Chap. xvi. contains contains only ſome Civilities and Recommendations, which he addreſſes to ſome particular Perſons whom he ſalutes. This Letter was writ in the 58th Year of the vulgar Era, in the City of Corinth, from whence St. Paul was immediately to depart, in order to carry to Jeruſalem ſome Collections that had been made for the Saints there. Phebe, a Deaconeſs of the Church of Cenchrea, which was near Corinth, was the Bearer of this Letter. No doubt has ever been made of its being Authentick, and though it was addreſs'd to the Romans, yet it was written in Greek.[a] Tertius was St. Paul's Secretary on this Occaſion.

The Marcionites made great Defalcations in the Epiſtles of St. Paul, eſpecially in this to the Romans, of which they ſuppreſs'd the two laſt Chapters intirely. There is ſome likelihood that St. Paul's firſt Deſign was to finiſh his Epiſtle to the Romans at the End of the fourteenth Chapter; but finding Leiſure afterwards, he added the two laſt Chapters to it. At the End of the fifteenth Chapter, we ſee this Concluſion. Now the God of Peace be with you all. Amen; which ſeems to ſhew that the Letter was then finiſhed. We ſee the ſame

ROME. The City of Rome was founded by Remus and Romulus, according to Uſher, in the Year 3966 of the Julian Period, in the Year of the World 3256, before Chriſt 744, before the vulgar Era 748, towards the End of the Reign of Hezekiah King of Judah. This City is ſo well known, that it is needleſs to give any Account of it here; nor I believe will any one expect it in a Dictionary of the Bible. The Sacred Authors of the Old Teſtament have never once mention'd it, as we know; but it is well known in the Books of the Maccabees, and of the New Teſtament. St. Peter in his firſt Epiſtle, v. 13. has mark'd it out by the figurative Name of Babylon.
Rev. xiv. 8. xvi. 19. xvii. 5. xviii. 2, 10, 21. The Church that is at Babylon elected together with you, ſaluteth you. St. John in his Revelation, points it out more than once by the ſame Name, and deſcribes it in ſuch a Manner, as can only agree to Rome; by its Command over all Nations, by its Cruelty towards the Saints, and by its Situation upon Seven Hills. Rev. xvii. 9.

The Rabbins commonly give to Rome the Name of Edom, and think that the Propheſies pronounced againſt Edom, ſhall have their Accompliſhment in the Deſtruction of this great City.

Some Proteſtants have deny'd, againſt the concurrent Teſtimony of all Antiquity, that St. Peter the Apoſtle ever was at Rome. They pretend that the City of Babylon, mentioned by him in his firſt Epiſtle, is the Babylon of Chaldea, or that of Egypt. They reject as ſo many Fables, all that has been publiſhed concerning the Voyages of St. Peter to Rome, his Oppoſition to Simon Magus, and his Martyrdom in this City. But ſurely if this Fact is not to be depended upon, I do not know any thing that can, in all Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. We have all Antiquity to atteſt it, which conſequently affirms it, nor has any one till now ever deny'd it. Laſtly, we have Monuments, Tombs, Statues, Paintings, publick Places, which give Teſtimony to the Impriſonment and Martyrdom of St. Peter at Rome. The Authors may be conſulted who have ſpoken of this Matter, and our Diſſertation upon this Subject, printed in the laſt Tome of our Commentary.

St. Paul came twice to Rome. Firſt, in the 61ſt Year of Jeſus Chriſt, when he appeal'd to Cæſar. And, ſecondly, in the Year 65, a Year before his Martyrdom, which happened in the Year 66 of the vulgar Era.

St. Peter was alſo at Rome more than once. 'Tis thought he went thither in the Year 42, and that then he fix'd his Epiſcopal Seat there. He might return thither again about the Years 45, 58, and 65, of the vulgar Era. He ſuffer'd Martyrdom there in the Year 66.

St. John the Evangeliſt was baniſhed from Epheſus, and ſent to Rome, during the Perſecution of Domitian, in the Year 95 of the vulgar Era. He was there plunged[b] into boiling Oil, without receiving any Hurt from it, but on the contrary, came out more Hale and Vigorous than he was before.

God resolved to destroy them; and would have done it, had not Moses his Servant stood in the Gap, or the Rupture, in his Presence; had he not presented himself between, to turn away the Wrath of God.

RUTH, a Moabitish Woman, who having marry'd Chilion the Son of Elimelech and Naomi, who had settled themselves in the Country of Moab, dwelt some time with him, without having any Children. Naomi having lost her Husband and two Sons, and being desirous to return to Bethlehem her own Country, her two Daughters-in-law being now Widows, would also go along with her. But she making known to them her Inability of providing for them there, Orpah was persuaded to continue in the Land of Moab, but Ruth would go along with Naomi to Bethlehem. (Ruth, ch. i.) This happen'd at the End of the Time of the Judges, and under the Government of Eli, if we may take Josephus's Word for it. (Joseph. Antiq. l. 5. c. 11.) The Rabbins pretend, that Boaz, who married Ruth, was the same as Ibzan the Judge of Israel, who govern'd them for seven Years, about the Year of the World 2823, between Jephthah and Elon. The great Chronology of the Hebrews places this History in the Time of Ehud, and of the Servitude of the Israelites. under Eglon King of Moab. Others place it under Barak and Deborah; others, under Gideon; others, under Abimelech. (Tostat. Lyran. Torniel. Genebr. &c.) Usher, whom we follow, places it under Shamgar, about sixscore Years after the Time of Joshua.

When Naomi came to Bethlehem, she found her self reduced to great Poverty, and Ruth went a Gleaning, to get something to support them. She came by chance into the Field of a rich Citizen of Bethlehem, named Boaz, who was akin to Elimelech her Father-in-law. When Boaz came to see his Harvesters, he found Ruth, and commended her Dutifulness to Naomi her Mother-in-law, bid her go and eat and drink with his People, and gave them Orders to leave something behind them, that she might have the better Gleaning. Ruth returned Home at Evening, told Naomi what had happen'd to her, and inform'd her of the Civilities of Boaz, who had also bid her to go no-where else to glean but in his Field. Naomi blessed God for it, that he had put such Sentiments of Humanity in Boaz's Heart, and acquainted Ruth that this was their Kinsman.

At the End of Harvest Naomi told Ruth, that she had a Design to provide for her, and to procure her a solid State of Repose. Go this Night, says she, and lie at the Feet of Boaz, who is to go this Evening to winnow his Corn; and you must do what he shall bid you. Ruth agreed to it; and having observed the Place where Boaz went to lie down, probably, under some Tree in his Field, Ruth went thither also in the Night, and lay down at his Feet. Boaz awaking, and seeing something near him, was afraid. But Ruth said, I am Ruth iii. 9.
Ruth thine Handmaid; spread therefore thy Skirt over thy thine Handmaid, for thou art a near Kinsman. Boaz acknowledg'd, that indeed he was a near Kinsman, but there was another nearer than he; and if this Man should refuse to marry her, he himself would take her to Wife. Then rising very early in the Morning, before it was Day-light, he filled Ruth's Lap with Corn, and sent her away to Naomi.

When it was Day, Boaz went to the Gate of Bethlehem, and having call'd together the Elders of the City, he cited him to appear who was the nearest Kinsman to Elimelech, that he might marry Ruth the Widow of Chilion his Son. This saying, that he could not do it; Boaz then insisted, that he should renounce his Right to it. This he willingly did; and then Boaz declared, that he intended to marry her himself. Thus Ruth became the Wife of Boaz, by whom she had a Son call'd Obed, who was Father to Jesse, and Grandfather to King David.

The Book of Ruth, which contains the History of which we have now given an Abstract, is placed, in our Bibles, between the Book of Judges and the Books of Samuel, as being the Sequel of the former, and an Introduction to the latter. Saint Jerom informs us, that the Jews added it to the Book of Judges, because the Transactions it treats of happen'd in the Time of the Judges of Israel: In diebus unius Judicis, quando Judices præerant. (Hieron. Prolog. Galeat.; Judg. i. 1.) And several of the ancient Fathers make but one Book of the Judges and of Ruth. But the modern Jews commonly place in their Bibles, after the Pentateuch, the five Megilloth, which are, first, The Song of Songs; secondly, Ruth; thirdly, the Lamentions of Jeremiah; fourthly, Ecclesiastes; and fifthly, Esther. Sometimes Ruth is plac'd the first of the five, sometimes the second, and sometimes the fifth.

The Scope of the Author of this Book, is to make known to us the Genealogy of David; and, in all Probability, he was the same Author as composed the First Book of Samuel; in which, because he could not conveniently place this Genealogy of David, he chose rather to give it by it self, than to perplex his Discourse. The Writer observes, at the Beginning of his Work,

Work, that the Hiſtory he was going to relate, happen'd at the Time that the Judges governed Iſrael; therefore they ceaſed to govern it at the Time he wrote. Beſides, he ſpeaks of David at the End of his Book; which ſhews, that, at ſooneſt, it muſt be written in the Time of David. Beſides, I have obſerved two ways of Speaking in it, or particular Phraſes, which are only found in the Books of Samuel and of the Kings: The firſt is, [a] The Lord do ſo to me, and more alſo: The ſecond, [b] I have diſcovered to your Ear; for I have told you.

The Canonicalneſs of this Book was never diſputed. We have obſerved before, that the Learned are not agreed about the Epocha of the Hiſtory it relates. Ruth the Moabiteſs is found in the Genealogy of our Saviour, Matth. i. 5.

SABACON King of Egypt. Herodotus gives an Account, that Sabacus, or Sabacon, King of Ethiopia, having made an Incurſion into Egypt, Anyſis, who reigned there at that time, being blind, made his Eſcape into the Marſhes, and abandon'd his Kingdom to Sabacon, who reigned there fifty Years. (Herodot. l. 2.) His Maxim was, Never to put any Perſon to Death, but to condemn all Offenders to work upon the Banks of the Nile, to prevent the Inundations of that River. At laſt he withdrew into his Kingdom of Ethiopia, having firſt had a Dream, which commanded him to put to Death all the Prieſts of Egypt, and to cut them in two in the Middle. He could not comply with this Command, and choſe rather to quit the Country; and this ſo much the rather, becauſe the Number of Years was compleated, which the Oracle had told him he ſhould reign in Egypt. After he was withdrawn, Anyſis came again out of his Retreat, and reſumed the Government of his Kingdom. He had Sethon for his Succeſſor, who lived under SENNECHARIB. See his Article.

Some Authors relate, that when Sabacon invaded Egypt, he laid hold of King Bocchoris, then reigning there, and cauſed him to be inhumanely burnt alive, and ſeized his Kingdom. (See Africanus in Syncellus, 8, 74. Euſeb. Chronic.) It is probable, that Sabacon is the ſame whom the Scripture calls So. (2 Kings xvii. 4.) After this Uſurper had in a ſhort time made himſelf very powerful, Hoſhea King of Iſrael made an Alliance with him; thinking, by his Aſſiſtance, to ſhake off the Yoke of the Aſſyrians. (2 Kings xviii. 9.) With this Hope, he refuſed to pay to the Aſſyrians the Tribute that was due to them. To revenge this, Shalmaneſar marched with an Army againſt him, ravaged all the plain Country, and beſieged Hoſhea in Samaria. He was forced to ſurrender, after he had ſuſtained a Siege of three Years, in the Year of the World 3283, before Chriſt 717, before the Vulgar Era 721.

SABACHTHANI, or Sabactani. We read this Word in the Goſpel: Jeſus Chriſt upon the Croſs, cry'd out, Eli, Eli, lama ſabachthani? My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? (Mat. xxvii. 46. Mark xv. 34.) This is a corrupt Reading of the Word Azabthani, or Gnazabthani; Thou haſt forſaken me. This is taken out of Pſal. xxii. 1. (Pſal. xxii. 2. למה עזבתני.)

SABAOTH, or rather Zabaoth, an Hebrew Word that ſignifies Hoſts or Armies. Jehovah Sabaoth, The Lord of Hoſts. (יהוה צבאות.) Whether, by this Expreſſion, we underſtand the Hoſt of Heaven, or the Angels and Miniſters of the Lord; (1 Kings xxii. 19.) or the Stars and Planets, which are as an Army ranged in Battle-array, and performing the Will of God; or, laſtly, whether it be explain'd by the People of the Lord, both of the Old and New Covenant, which is truly the Army of the Lord, of which God is the General and Commander. The Hebrew Word Zaba is often uſed alſo, to ſignify the Service that his Miniſters perform for him in the Temple; because they are there, as it were, Soldiers or Guards attending at the Court of their Prince. (Numb. iv. 3. 23. 30, &c.) This Word is alſo us'd, to expreſs the Duty of the Women who watched at the Door of the Tabernacle, and kept Guard there in the Night-time. (Exodus xxxviii. 8. במראות הצבאות.)

SABEANS. Iſai. xlv. 14. The Sabeans, Men of Stature. Theſe are probably the Sabeans of Arabia Fœlix, or thoſe of Aſia. They ſubmitted themſelves to Cyrus, and acknowledg'd his Government.

The Sabeans, a People of Arabia, were deſcended from Saba: But as there are ſeveral known by the Name of Saba, who were all Heads of a People, or of Tribes; we must also distinguish several Kinds of Sabeans. Those that took away the Flocks of Job, were, probably, a People of Arabia Deserta, who dwelt about Bozra; or, perhaps, they were a flying Troop of Sabeans that infested that Country. We shall hereafter mention Saba, or Sheba, the Son of Jockshan, who might be the Father of the Sabeans here spoken of. (Job i. 15.)

The Sabeans, Descendants from Sheba Son of Cush, are, probably, those of Arabia Fœlix, who are famous for their Spices; to whom the Poets give the Epithet of soft and effeminate, and who had Women to command them: (Gen. x. 7.)

Several are of Opinion, that it was from hence the Queen of Sheba came to hear the Wisdom of Solomon; and that it is of these Sabeans that the Psalmist speaks; Reges Arabum & Saba dona Domino Deo adducent. And in Jeremiah; Ut quid mihi thus de Saba affertis? And in Isaiah; Omnes de Saba venient, aurum & thus deferentes. (1 Kings x. 1, 2. Psal. lxxi. 10. Jer. vi. 20. Isai. lx. 6.)

The Sabeans, Sons of Shebah, Son of Rheumah, probably also dwelt in Arabia Fœlix. I imagine it to be these of whom Ezekiel speaks, who came with their Merchandises to the Fairs of Tyre: Venditores Saba, & Reema, ipsi negotiatores tui. And in Joel; I will deliver up your Children to the Tribe of Judah, who shall sell them to the Sabeans, a Nation at a great Distance: Venundabunt eos Sabæis, genti longinquæ. (Ezekiel xxvii. 22. Joel iii. 8.)

The Sabeans, Descendants from Joktan, may very well be those mention'd by Ezekiel; Saba, Assur, and Chelmud, Venditores tui. We believe they inhabited beyond the Euphrates; from whence it is that they are put with Assur and Chelmad. (Ezekiel xxvii. 23.)

The Sabeans are also placed in Africa, in the Isle of Meroe. Josephus brings the Queen of Sheba from thence, and pretends, that this Country had the Name of Shebah, or Saba, before it was call'd Meroe. (Joseph. Antiq. l. 2. c. 5.)

Sabeans, or Sabians, or Zabians, is the Name which is given to the ancient Idolaters, or Image-worshippers, in Persia. We shall speak of them at Length in the Article ZABIANS.

SABBATH. This Word, in Hebrew, signifies Rest. God having created the World in six Days, rested on the seventh; that is to say, he left off producing any new Beings, in the outward and visible Creation. He blessed this Day, and sanctified it, because he had rested upon it. From that time he set it apart, and appointed it in a peculiar Manner for his Worship. And the Hebrews, afterwards, in Consequence of this Designation, and to preserve the Memory of the Creation, sanctify'd, by his Order, the Sabbath-day, or the Seventh Day, by abstaining from all Work, Labour, and servile Employments, and by applying themselves to the Service of the Lord, to the Study of his Law, and to Prayer. (שבת, Sabbatum, Requies. Genes. ii. 2, 3.)

Sabbath (or Sabathum) is sometimes taken meerly for Rest; sometimes, for eternal Rest and Felicity in Heaven. See Hebrews iv. 4, &c.

The Days of Sabbath (Sabbatha) are taken, sometimes, for all the Jewish Festivals indifferently. Keep my Sabbaths, that is, my Feasts, as, the Passover, Pentecost, Feast of Tabernacles, and the rest. (Lev. xix. 3, 30.)

Sabbathum is also taken for the whole Week. Jejuno bis in Sabbatho, [a] I fast twice a Week. Una Sabbathi [b] the First Day of the Week.

Upon Occasion of the Sabbath, it is disputed, whether God created the whole World by one only Fiat, all at once, by a simultaneous Action, and by a simple Act; or if he perform'd it at six distinct Operations, and in six Days successively, so that the seventh Day was really and truly a Day of Rest to the Lord, at the End of his successive Creation. Authors are much divided upon this Question. Philo [c], Origen [d], St. Austin [e], Procopius [f], and some Moderns, maintain, that God not only created Matter all at once, and in an Instant, but that at the same time He disposed it in Order, and gave every thing its proper Form, without staying for a Term of six Days. That the Account Moses gives of it, and the Distribution of the Works of the Creator into six Days, is not a Succession of Time, but only a Succession of Order and Reason, propos'd only by way of Accommodation to the Comprehension of the People, and to give them a distinct Notion of the Material Creation, by distributing it into Parts, and into a certain Disposition or Order.

But the greatest Part of the Fathers and Commentators maintain a successive Creation, agreeably to the Account given by Moses. And indeed, there is no Necessity of departing from the literal Sense of Scripture in this Place. The reiterated Acts, and the different Operations mentioned by Moses, ought indeed to be explain'd in such a manner, as is consistent with the infinite Power and perfect Simplicity of the Acts of the Creator, and which may exclude any manner of Notion of his Weakness, Weariness, or Imperfection. But all this may be done, without receding from a successive Creation. God, by his infinite Power, drew forth, out of Nothing, all the Matter of the Universe, or the Chaos; and, by his Wisdom, he gave the Parts all the Motions necessary, that the Chaos might display it self; and that its Parts being disengaged from one another, and each united again with others of the same Nature, might form what we call the Universe in the Condition in which we find it. This Motion, conducted by the Spirit and Wisdom of God, might continue six Days; after which, God rested himself, or ceased to produce any outward Being; but He continued still to act by his Providence and Concurrence, and to preserve the Work he had made, in the State of Beauty and Perfection in which he had created it.

As to those particular Beings, that could not be produced by a Continuation of the general Laws of Motion, communicated by God to Matter, as for Example, Men, Plants, and Animals, it must necessarily be acknowledged, that God form'd them successively, as Moses acquaints us, by applying, forming, animating Matter, agreeably to the Designs of his Wisdom; by inspiring into Man a reasonable Soul; by giving other Animals their several Instincts, for their Preservation and Producing their Kind; by putting into the Plants those Qualities that distinguish them from each other, and their Seeds and Grains that are proper for their Renovation.

Another great Question that is moved about the Sabbath, is, Whether, from the Beginning of the World, God gave the Law of the Sabbath; and whether this Day was always observed, at least among the better sort of the first Men, as the Patriarchs, before the Promulgation of the Law. Whether this be the Sense of these Words, And God blessed the seventh Day, and sanctified it. (Gen. ii. 2.) Some Fathers [a] and some Jewish Doctors [c] have asserted the Affirmative; and Menasseh Ben-Israel [b] assures us, that, according to the Tradition of the Antients, Abraham and his Posterity having preserved the Memory of the Creation, observed the Sabbath also, in Consequence of the Natural Law that obliged them thereto. There are some also that believe, that the Religion of the Seventh Day is preserved among the Pagans, and that the Observation of this Day is as old as the World it self.

(Philo de Mundi Opificio.) In a Word, Philo says, that the Sabbath is not a Festival peculiar to any one People or Country, but is common to the whole World, and that it may be named the General and Publick Feast, and that of the Nativity of the World. Josephus advances, that there is no City, either of Greeks or Barbarians, or any other Nation, where the Religion of the Sabbath was not known. (Joseph. contr. Apion. l. 2.) Aristobulus, in Eusebius, quotes Homer and Hesiod, who speak of the Seventh Day as of a Day that is sacred and venerable. (Euseb. l. 13. c. 12. Præp.) Clemens Alexandrinus speaks of the Sabbath in the same Terms as Aristobulus, just now cited, and he adds some Passages from the Antients, which celebrate the Seventh Day. (Clem. Alex. Strom. l. 5.)

There are some that believe, that Job observed the Sabbath-day; because at the End of Seven Days he offered a Sacrifice to the Lord for his Children. (Abenezra apud Boulduc. in Job i. 2, 5.) Some Rabbins inform us, that Joseph also observed the Sabbath in Egypt. (Bechai ad Beresith. fol. 37.)

But the contrary Opinion is not without its Proofs also. The greatest part of the Fathers and Commentators hold, that the Benediction and Sanctification of the Sabbath, mention'd by Moses in the Beginning of Genesis, signifies only that Appointment then made of the Seventh Day, to be afterwards solemnized and sanctified by the Jews. It does not appear from any Passage of Scripture, that the ancient Patriarchs have observed the Sabbath, or that God had any Design to oblige them thereto, before the Law took Place. Philo says, that the Hebrews having forgot which was the Day of the Creation of the World, began again to be apprised of it, when God having caused it to rain Manna all the other Days of the Week, did not permit it to rain any on the Sabbath-day. (Philo Vit. Mos. l. 1.) The Seventh Day, which was honoured by some Pagans, and of which they have spoke as of an Holy Day, was either dedicated to the Honour of Apollo; or it was in Imitation of the Jewish Sabbath, which some Pagans had in Honour heretofore, either out of Superstition or Devotion.

Ezekiel says expressly, that the Sabbath, and the other Feasts of the Jews, are Signs that God has given to his People, to distinguish them from other Nations. (Ezek. xx. 12, 20.) I gave them my Sabbaths, to be a Sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the Lord that sanctify them. And again, Hallow my Sabbaths, and they shall be a Sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the Lord your God. And Moses in Deuteronomy v. 15. The Lord hath brought thee out of Egypt, therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath-day. Justin Martyr [d], Tertullian [e], Eusebius [f], St. Bernard [g], advance, as a Matter not to be doubted, that neither the Patriarchs before the Deluge, nor those which came afterwards, observed the Sabbath

God gave the Precept of the Sabbath to the Hebrews, when they came to Marah, one Month after their coming out of Egypt, on the 15th of the Month Abib, which anſwers to our March, in the Year of the World 2513, before Chriſt 1487, and before the vulgar Era 1491. Manna began to fall, according to ſeveral of the Fathers, [a] upon the Sunday, ſix Days before the Sabbath. According to others, it fell upon the very Eve of the Sabbath. However this be, 'twas probably upon the Occaſion of the Manna, that God commanded the Hebrews to obſerve the ſeventh Day, and not to go out to gather any on that Day, for none would fall then. The ſame Command of celebrating the Sabbath is found ſeveral times repeated in the Law. [b] "Remember to ſanctify "the Sabbath Day. You ſhall labour for "ſix Days, and ſhall do whatever you "have to do; but the ſeventh Day is the "Sabbath of the Lord your God. Upon "this Day you ſhall do no Work, neither "you, not your Son, nor your Daughter, "nor your Man-ſervant, nor your Maid-"ſervant, nor your labouring Beaſts, nor "the Stranger that ſhall reſide among you. "For the Lord in ſix Days made the Hea-"ven and the Earth, and whatever is con-"tain'd in them, and reſted upon the "ſeventh Day. Wherefore he bleſſed the "ſeventh Day, and hath conſecrated it to "his Service".

Ex. xxxi. 13. xxxv. 2. In another place it is ſaid, that God eſtabliſhed his Sabbath among the Children of Iſrael, as a Sign to make them call to mind, that he is the Lord that ſanctifies them. He adds, that whoſoever ſhall prophane the Sabbath ſhall be puniſh'd with Death; and we ſee the Execution of this Law upon the Man, who having gather'd Wood upon the Sabbath Day, was ſtoned

Ex. xii. 16. Fire, and to dreſs Victuals; but this was
Ex. xxxv. 2, 3. expreſly forbid on the Sabbath Day. The Rabbins confine this Prohibition to ſervile Works only; as to bake Bread, to dreſs Meat, to forge Metals, &c. They ſuppoſe that for ſuch ſort of Works it is forbid to light a Fire, but not for one to warm himſelf. On the Sabbath Days the Miniſters of the Temple enter'd upon their Week; and thoſe that had attended the foregoing Week went out on that Day. They put upon the golden Table new Loaves of Shew-bread, and took away the old ones. Alſo upon this Day were offer'd Lev. xxiv. 8. particular Sacrifices of two Lambs for a Burnt-offering, with the Wine and the Meal that always accompanied theſe Sacrifices. Laſtly, the Sabbath was celebrated, as alſo the other Feſtivals, from Evening to Evening. They began in the Evening, at which Time alſo they ended. A veſpera uſque ad veſperam celebrabitis Sabbatha veſtra. And this is the whole, or very near it, that is commanded in the Law, concerning the Obſervation of the Sabbath.

And now let us inquire what has been the Practice of the Jews, in Conſequence of this Inſtitution. The firſt Obligation of the Sabbath expreſs'd in the Law, is to ſanctify it. Remember to ſanctify the Sabbath Day. Numb. xxviii. 9, 10. But it is ſanctify'd by doing good Works upon it, by Prayer, by Praiſes and Thankſgivings, by publick and private Worſhip of God, by the Study of his Law, by Juſtice, Innocence, and Tranquillity of Mind. The ſecond Obligation is that of Reſt. Thou ſhalt do no Work upon the Sabbath. It was forbid to do any ſervile or laborious Works, that might fix the Mind, and interrupt that Attention which was to be given to God, and which is neceſſary when we pay any Worſhip to him worthy of his Majeſty. The Jews have often varied about the Manner, in which they think they ought to obſerve the Reſt of the Sabbath. In the Time of the Maccabees, they carry'd their Reſpect 1 Mac. ii. 32, 33, &c. for this Day ſo far, as that they durſt not ſo much as defend themſelves from any Invaſion of the Enemy on this Day, even in the moſt preſſing Neceſſity. Since this Time they have not ſcrupled to take Arms, and ſtand upon their neceſſary Defence. 1 Mac. ii. 41. But it may be ſeen by Joſephus, that they Antiq. l. xii. c. 3. xiii. c. 1. would not attack their Enemies, nor hinder them from advancing their Works; nor would they march with their Armies, even Antiq. l. xiii. c. 16. p. 450. in Time of War, or in the Enemies Country, upon the Sabbath Day.

In the Time of our Saviour, they would not water their Cattle, or take a Beaſt out of a Ditch that ſhould happen to fall in, on the Sabbath Day: But by a falſe Delicacy they could not bear with our Saviour's Healing the Sick on that Day. Since that Time they have determin'd, Mat. xii. 11, 12. that a Man might give Food to a Beaſt, that ſhould happen to fall into a Pit, but muſt not take him out on that Day. The ſame Jews complain'd of our Saviour's Mat. xii. 1, 2. Mark ii. 27. Diſciples, that paſſing through the Cornfields on the Sabbath Day, and being pressed with Hunger, they gather'd some Ears of Corn, and rubb'd them between their Hands, in order to eat the Grains of Wheat. This Action of his Apostles, our Saviour excused only from the Necessity of the thing, and because they had need of Nourishment; adding, that the Priests themselves in the Temple do some Work, which every where else would be esteem'd Violations of the Sabbath; and that the Son of Man was Lord of the Sabbath; and lastly, that the Sabbath was made for Man, and not Man for the Sabbath.

The Rabbins reckon up nine and thirty primary Prohibitions, which ought to be observed on the Sabbath Days, and several other secondary ones dependant on them, which are also obligatory. Their Number is so great, that it is almost impossible to keep them all; and the Rabbins make no Difficulty to own, that if the People of Israel could keep but two Sabbaths as they ought to be kept, they should soon see themselves deliver'd from the Evils under which they groan. Their Scrupulosity goes so far, as even to forbid to peel or to roast an Apple, to kill a Flea, a Fly, or any other Insect, if it is big enough, as that the Sex may be distinguish'd; to sing, or to play upon an Instrument, so as it may be loud enough to awaken a Child. Yet notwithstanding all this, the Samaritans [a] pretend that the Jews are not religious enough in the Observation of the Sabbath. As for them, they will not light a Fire on this Day, they abstain from the Use of the Marriage-bed, they don't stir from their Places, save only to go to the House of the Lord. They employ themselves wholly upon that Day in reading the Law, in praying to God, and in Thanksgivings.

Vid. Buxtorf. Syn. Jud. c. xi.

Of all the Festivals that God has enjoin'd them in his Law, there are none of which the Jews are so jealous, or of which they speak so magnificently, as of the Sabbath. They call it their Spouse, because God has given it to them alone, exclusive of all other Nations of the World [b]. Here is an Extract of what may be found concerning this Matter, in Leo of Modena, [c] who alone is equivalent to all the modern Jews. The Rabbins, says he, have reduced all that is forbid to be done on the Sabbath Day, to these thirty-nine Heads, each of which have their Circumstances and Dependences: These are, to till the Ground, to sow, to reap, to make Hay, to bind up Sheaves of Corn, to thrash, to winnow, to grind, to sift Meal, to knead the Dough, to bake, to shear, to whiten, to comb or card Wool, to spin, to twine or twist, to warp, to dye, to tye, to untye, to sew, to tear or pull in Pieces, to build, to pull down, to knock with a Hammer, to hunt or fish, to kill a Beast, to flay it, to dress it, to scrape the Skin, to tan it, to cut Leather, to write, to scratch out, to rule Paper for writing, to light a Fire, to extinguish it, to carry any thing from Place to Place, to expose any thing to Sale.

Besides these, there are other things forbid, as Consequences from these. For Instance, to file is comprehended under grinding, to curdle Milk under building, and so of others. They must neither light or put out a Fire or Lamp, and commonly they keep Christian Servants in their Houses, to do such Offices for them on the Sabbath Day. They not only forbear from carrying any Burdens, but upon this Day they will not put on their Cloaths, even what is necessary; and carry their Exactness so far, as to inspect the Ornaments and Cloaths of their Women, Children, and Servants. On this Day they speak of no Business or secular Affairs; they neither give or receive, neither sell or buy, or make any Bargain. They handle no Tool, nor any thing that is heavy; they touch no Money, go neither on Horse-back or in a Boat. They don't bathe themselves, nor use any chirurgical Operations, but in Cases of great Necessity. They may walk as much as they please within the City or Suburbs where they inhabit; but they must not go out of the City or Suburbs, above the Distance of two thousand Cubits, as we shall mention by and by.

They undertake no Work on the Friday, but such as may be easily finish'd before the Evening. About an Hour before Sun-set, they put into a warm Place what they have prepar'd to eat the Day following; and about half an Hour before Sun-set all Work is left off, and the Sabbath is suppos'd to be begun. Then the Women are obliged to light a Lamp in their Chambers, which Lamp commonly has six Wicks, or, at least, four, and it burns a great Part of the Night. They also set out a Table cover'd with a fair Table-cloth, whereon they put Bread, which they cover with another long, narrow Cloth. There are some of 'em, who, to begin the the Sabbath well, will put on clean Linen, and wash their Hands and Face. They all go to the Synagogue, where they rehearse certain Prayers set down in their Books, after which they return to their Houses, and salute one another by wishing a good Sabbath.

Being come Home, the Fathers bless their Children, and the Masters their Disciples; then sitting down to Table, the Master of the Family pronounces certain Bleſſings on the Bread and Wine, and makes mention of the Inſtitution of the Sabbath. He drinks a little of the Wine that he hath bleſs'd, and gives it round to all that are at Table. He does the ſame by the Bread, and then they entertain themſelves as well as they can. On the Sabbath Day in the Morning they riſe later than upon other Days; and being come to the Synagogue, they rehearſe ſeveral Pſalms and Prayers, in Commendation of the Sabbath, intermingled with Singing, and the ordinary Prayers. Then they bring out the Pentateuch, and ſeven Perſons read the Section that comes to be read in order. Then they read a Section out of the Prophets, which has ſome relation to what was read out of the Law. Laſtly, He that holds the Book in his Hands, lifts it on high, and gives his Bleſſing to all preſent. They pray afterwards for thoſe Princes under whoſe Juriſdiction and Protection they live; and they make a Sermon or Exhortation in the Morning or Afternoon, according to the Cuſtom of the Place.

Master

When Night comes, and they can diſcover in the Heaven three Stars of a moderate Magnitude, then the Sabbath is ended, and they may return to their ordinary Employments. Thoſe who go to the Synagogue, add to the common Evening Prayers, certain Leſſons and Benedictions, which have relation to the Sabbath; and as they think, that the Puniſhment of the Souls in Purgatory ceaſes on that Day, they prolong its Continuance as much as they can. When every one is return'd to his Home, they light a Taper or Lamp, which has, at leaſt, two Wicks, the Maſter of the Houſe takes Wine in a Cup, and ſweet-ſcented Spices, and after pronouncing ſome Benedictions, he bleſſes the Wine and the Spices; then he flavours the Spices, and throws the Wine upon the Ground, in Token of Chearfulneſs, and pronounces ſome Bleſſings. Thus the Ceremony of the Sabbath is ended. Thoſe that meet one another make their Compliments, by wiſhing each other a happy Week.

Some antient Fathers quote the Law which injoins the Reſt of the Sabbath, with this Exception; You ſhall do nothing upon this Day, except what is for the Health of the Soul, or the Preſervation of Life; or laſtly, except in ſuch things wherein Life is in Danger. Omne opus ſervile non facietis in eo, præterquam quod ad animam pertinet, as Tertullian reads it; or, as he ſays elſewhere, niſi quod fiat omnis animæ. Or laſtly, as St. Jerom reads it, Lege præceptum eſt, ne in Sabbatho opus ſervile faciamus —— ut illa tantum faciamus, quæ ad animæ ſalutem pertinent. A very antient Gloſs this, and authoriſed by the Practice of the Primitive Jews, who us'd to allow the taking of a Beaſt out of a Ditch, that ſhould happen to fall in on the Sabbath, and was in Danger of its Life. And much more did they think it allowable to do good Works, either Moral or Charitable.

Such prophane Authors as have ventured to ſpeak of the Original of the Sabbath, have only ſhew'd their Ignorance of the Jewiſh Affairs. Tacitus thought they obſerved the Sabbath in honour of Saturn, to whom Saturday was conſecrated in the Pagan Religion. But Plutarch aſſerts, it was kept in honour of Bacchus, who is call'd Sabbos; and becauſe in the Feſtivals of this falſe Deity they us'd to cry Saboi. Appion the Grammarian maintain'd, that the Jews celebrated the Sabbath in Memory of their being cured of a ſhameful Diſeaſe, which in the Egyptian Language was call'd Sabboſis. Alſo Pagan Authors ſpeak pretty frequently of the Faſt of the Sabbath, as if the Jews had ordinarily faſted on this Day. Recutitaque Sabbatha palles, ſays Perſius. And Petronius, Et non jejuna Sabbatha lege premet. They were not aware, that Faſting was utterly forbid the Jews on the Sabbath; but either very groſly miſunderſtood the Sabbath for the whole Week, in which ſome of the Jews faſted two Days; or they took it in too comprehenſive a Senſe, for all ſort of Feaſts; and becauſe they us'd to faſt on the Day of the ſolemn Expiation, they very improperly concluded that they faſted upon all Sabbath Days.

A Sabbath Day's Journey. We have already explain'd from Joſephus, under the Article of John Hircanus, that, in an Expedition he made beyond Euphrates, with the King of Syria, he was the Occaſion that the whole Army halted on a Sabbath Day; which proves that long Journeys were forbidden the Jews on that Day. We ſee the ſame thing in the ſecond Book of the Maccabees, viii. 26, 27. where Judas could not purſue the Victory he had obtain'd over Nicanor, becauſe of the Interpoſition of the Sabbath. Pray ye that your Flight be not in the Winter, neither on the Sabbath Day, ſays our Saviour in the Goſpel. And Ovid ſays, Fear not the Rain, and let not the Jewiſh Sabbath hinder you.

But, however, it is evident they were allow'd to go a certain Space on the Sabbath Day, ſince we know they went, at leaſt, to the Temple or Tabernacle, from the remote Parts of the City or Camp. And St. Luke informs us, that the Mount of of Olives was distant from Jerusalem the space of a Sabbath Day's Journey. Sabbathi habens iter. The Rabbins generally fix this space at two thousand Cubits. Josephus says, that the Mount of Olives was five Stadia from Jerusalem, which make six hundred and twenty-five Paces. Thus the Journey that might be made on a Sabbath Day, was about six or seven hundred Paces, or something more. For the same Josephus, in another Place, puts the Mount of Olives at six Stadia from Jerusalem. Origen, quoted by Oecumenius [a], says, that the Journey of a Sabbath Day is one Mile, or two thousand Cubits. The Jews [b] also have us'd to make a Mile consist of two thousand Cubits: So that their Cubit must be two Feet and an half, since their Mile contains a thousand Paces, or five thousand Feet, taking their Paces at five Feet apiece. Maimonides [c] will have it, that he that does not know exactly the Distance of a Place, may walk upon the Sabbath Day two thousand moderate Paces, which makes a thousand geometrical Paces of five Foot each. Epiphanius says, that the Jews believe it is not allow'd them to walk upon the Sabbath Day above six Stadia, or seven hundred and fifty Paces. The Syriack Translator of the Acts of the Apostles puts about seven Stadia for a Sabbath Day's Journey; which is according to what some Rabbins say [d], that a Mile is seven Stadia and an half. Epiph. hæref. 66.

Sabbathum secundo-primum. The second Sabbath after the first. Luke chap. vi. 1. This Expression has much divided the Commentators. Some [e] have taken it for the second, others [f] for the last Day of unleavened Bread; and some for the Day of Pentecost. The Passover was the first Sabbath, according to them, and Pentecost the second. Others have thought, that the first grand Sabbath was the first Sabbath of the Civil Year, in the Month Tizri; and that the second was the first of the Holy Year, or of the Month Nisan. But Joseph Scaliger, [g] who is follow'd in this by a great Number of able Writers [h], thinks that to have been the first Sabbath, which follow'd the second Day of unleavened Bread. The Jews thus reckon'd their Sabbaths from the Passover to Pentecost; the first was call'd secundo-primum, or second after the first; that is, the first after the second Day of unleavened Bread. The second was call'd secundo-secundum, or the second Day of the Sabbath after the second Day of unleavened Bread. The third was call'd secundo-tertium, or the third Day of the Sabbath after the second Day of unleavened Bread. And so of all the rest, as far as secundo-septimum, that is to say, the seventh Day of the Sabbath after the second Day of unleavened Bread. This seventh Sabbath immediately preceded Pentecost, which was celebrated the fiftieth Day after the second Day of unleavened Bread. See the Commentators upon St. Luke, chap. vi. ver. 1.

Parascuè Sabbati, or the Preparation for the Sabbath, is the Friday before; for as it was forbid to make a Fire, to bake Bread, or to dress Victuals on the Sabbath Day, they provided against this Day, and prepared on Friday every thing that was needful for their Sustenance on the Sabbath Day. See the Article PARASCUE before.

The Sabbath transferr'd to Sunday. The Obligation of giving a Portion of our Time to God to be employ'd in his Worship and Service, is founded upon natural Right. The Law of Moses had fix'd this to the seventh Day, or the Sabbath for the People of the Jews. The Apostles of Jesus Christ, to do Honour to the Day of his Resurrection, have also determin'd it to be every seventh Day, and have fix'd it on Sunday, or the first Day of the Week among the Hebrews, and on the Day dedicated to the Sun by the Pagans. This Day, among us Christians, is known by the Name of the Lord's-Day. See the Article SUNDAY.

Sabbatical Year was celebrated among the Jews from seven to seven Years, when the Land was to rest, and to be left without Culture. They set Slaves at Liberty, and every one re-enter'd into the Inheritance that had been alienated. Ex. xxiii. 10. Levit. xxv. 2, 3, &c.

God appointed the Observation of the Sabbatical Year, to preserve the Remembrance of the Creation of the World; to enforce the Acknowledgment of his sovereign Authority over all things, and particularly over the Land of Canaan, which he had given to the Hebrews, by delivering up the Fruits of their Fields to the Poor and the Stranger. It was a kind of Tribute which they paid to the Lord for it. Besides, he intended to inculcate Humanity to his People, by commanding that they should resign to the Slaves, to the Poor, to Strangers, and to Brutes, the Produce of their Fields, of their Vineyards, and of their Gardens. Levit. xxv. 2, 3, 4.

It has been much disputed, at what Season of the Year the Sabbatical Year began. Some have been of Opinion, that it began on the first Month of the sacred Year, that is, at Nisan, or in the Spring. Others think it began at the first Month of the civil Year, or at the Month Tizri, which answers nearly to our September. Moses does not explain himself upon this Matter very clearly. He says only, that the Land shall not be cultivated, and that there shall be no Harvest for that Year. In Palestine, the Time of Sowing both of Wheat and Barley was in Autumn; and Barley-harvest began at the Passover, and that of Wheat at Pentecost. Therefore, to enter into the Spirit of the Law, for observing the Rest of the Sabbatical Year, that the Land may not remain two Years without Cultivation, we must necessarily begin it at Autumn, after all the Crops were gather'd in: They did not till the Land in Autumn, and they had no Harvest after the Winter; but the Autumn following they began again to cultivate the Land, that they might reap their Harvests in the Spring and Summer following.

In the Sabbatical Year all Debts were Deut.xv.2. remitted, and the Slaves were set at Li-
Ex xxi. 2. berty. But were Debts absolutely forgiven, or was the Payment of them only Hebr. suspended? Several think, that this Re-
Drusius. Estius, alii. mission was absolute, and that all Debts were totally extinguish'd in the Sabbatical Year. The Caution of Rich Men, Deut.xv.9. taken Notice of by Moses, who would not lend to their Brethren at the Approach of the Sabbatical Year, seems to prove, that after this Year nothing was to be hoped for from their Debtors. For if the Payment of Debts was only suspended till this Year was over and past, it would not have been a sufficient Motive to hinder them from lending. As there was no lending for Interest in the Case, which was forbid to the Hebrews towards their Brethren, as it could be only a simple Loan, the Creditor might require it again either before or after the Sabbatical Year, upon the Supposition of those who think that the Remission was not absolute [a].

Rab. Grot. Others distinguish between Debts mortgaged upon Security, the Contracts of which included a Clause of perpetual Debts; and those that were not mortgaged, but made upon simple Contracts: These last were for ever acquitted on the Sabbatical Year, but the others not so. Menochius also thinks, that the Remission of Debts was general and absolute, but not of Loans or Deposits. All this regarded only the natural Hebrews, or such as were Proselytes to Judaism, but not Strangers.

'Tis also inquired, whether Debts were remitted, and Slaves set at Liberty, at the Beginning or only at the End of the Sabbatical Year. The Hebrew says literally, [b] At the End of every seven Years thou shalt make a Release. This has given Occasion to some to think, that Debts were not remitted, nor Slaves set at Liberty, till the End of the Sabbatical Year. But most are of a contrary Opinion, that it was the Beginning of the Sabbatical Year. The original Text explains it very naturally of the End of the Week of the Year, after which came the Sabbatical Year, with which it concludes.

Sabbatical River, or Sabbation. Josephus says, [c] That, when Titus went into Syria, as he pass'd between the Cities of Arces or Arques, which belong'd to the Kingdom of Agrippa, and the City of Raphanea in Syria; he saw the River call'd the Sabbatical River, which falls from the Libanus into the Mediterranean Sea. This River runs only upon the Sabbath Day, or rather, at the end of seven Days. All the intermediate Time its Channel is dry; but on the seventh Day it flows in abundance into the Sea, and even with an impetuous Stream. Hence it comes, that the Inhabitants of the Country have given it the Name of the Sabbatical River. 'Tis probable that Pliny means the same River, Plin. l. 31.
when he says, that there is a Brook in c. 2.
Judea, which continues dry every seventh Day. In Judæa Rivus omnibus Sabbathis siccatur. A little before he speaks of a Fountain in the Isle of Andros, that every seventh Day yields a Liquor of the Taste of Wine; but this Liquor takes again the Quality of Water, as soon as it is taken at any Distance from the Temple of Bacchus, which is in this Island.

The Greek Text of Josephus intimates, as we have already said, that this River runs only on the Saturday: But to reconcile this with Pliny, who affirms, on the contrary, that it is dry only on the Saturday; and with other Evidences of but little Certainty, which speak of a certain Sabbatical River, which continues dry every Sabbath: Casaubon, Fuller, and some others [d], make a Transposition in the Greek Text of Josephus, to make him say the direct contrary of what he said before. It should seem indeed, that the Sabbatical River would not well express the Rest of the Sabbath, if it runs only upon this Day: To express it significantly, it ought to cease running on this Day, in Imitation of the Repose and Rest of the Jews.

The

The Rabbins [a] mention another Sabbatical River, or Sambation, but very different from this now ſpoken of. They place it beyond the Euphrates, in a very diſtant Country, where they pretend that the ten Tribes are ſtill intire and ſubſiſting: There they poſſeſs very great Riches and Eſtates. The River of which they ſpeak, runs all the Week with a very rapid Stream, and makes ſo great a Noiſe, that it is heard in the Night-time at the Diſtance of a Day's Journey, and in the Day-time at half that Diſtance. It is ſo broad, ſo deep, and ſo rapid, that it is impoſſible to go over it; and on the Sabbath Day, on which it does not run at all, they place Guards on the River, that the Iſraelites may not go over it. Jonathan, the Son of Uziel, to whom is aſcribed a Chaldee Paraphraſe, has mention'd the River Sabbation. This Author, they ſay, is more antient than Joſephus. But it is believed, the Paraphraſe we have under his Name, was not his, and that Joſephus is the firſt and only Author of the Sabbatical River, which probably never exiſted; at leaſt nothing is known of it at this Day, nor is it mention'd by any Traveller or Geographer. For as to what Pliny ſays of it, 'tis very likely he took it from Joſephus.

'Tis true, Dominick Magri, in his Travels into Syria, at the Age of nineteen Years, aſſures us, that he came to the Banks of the Sabbatical River with his Caravan, upon a Friday, June the Twenty-firſt, in the Evening, where he ſaw the River dry about Sun-ſet on the Friday, and continue dry till the next Day; when, the Caravan going away, he had not the Opportunity to obſerve, whether the River began to run again on Saturday-Evening, after the Reſt of the Sabbath Day was over. This Traveller appeals to the Merchants in his Caravan, and the Country People that inhabit the Place, as Witneſſes of what he affirms; and he infers from thence, that Joſephus was miſtaken when he ſays, that this River runs only upon the Saturday, ſince, on the contrary, it runs all the Week excepting Saturday. But it were to be wiſh'd, that Magri had obſerved not one Night only, but one or ſeveral whole Weeks, in order to have been a competent Witneſs of ſo extraordinary a Fact as this is. There are many Cauſes that may dry up a Stream that falls from the Mountains; and it is very poſſible, that, on this Occaſion, Chance alone may have produced this Effect on the Friday Evening. See Bartolucci, Bibliotheca Rabbinica, t. 1. p. 117, 118.

SABEC. In Geneſis [b], inſtead of what we read in the Vulgate *. Abraham ſaw a Ram intangled by its Horns in a Ticket; Vidit arietem inter vepres hærentem cornibus. The Septuagint and Theodotion read, He ſaw a Ram caught by its Horns in the Buſh Sabec. Philo, Eucherius, Diodorus, as well as the Septuagint and Theodotion, have taken the Hebrew Word Sabec for a particular Species of Shrubs. Euſebius of Emeſa thinks, that Sabec ſignifies a Goat, becauſe of its upright Horns. But the beſt Interpreters tranſlate this Word by, Branches of Thorns and Briars entangled in one another.

SABINUS, Auguſtus's Procurator in Syria. After the Death of Herod the Great, and the Departure of Archelaus from Rome, he attempted to ſeize the Fortreſs of Jeruſalem, and the Treaſure that Herod left when he died: But he found ſuch a vigorous Reſiſtance from the People, that he could not at firſt compleat his Deſign. But after a great Struggle with the Jews, wherein they were much abuſed, he caus'd Fire to be put to the Doors of the Sacred Treaſure, and took away four hundred Talents of it for his own Share, permitting his Officers and Soldiers to diſtribute the reſt among them. This ſo provoked the People, that they beſieged Sabinus in the Royal Palace, and preſs'd ſo hard upon him, that if he had not ſpeedily ſent to require Succour from Varus, then Governor of Syria, either he or his Soldiers would hardly have eſcaped out of their Hands. Varus therefore ſet out with his Troops, and came to Jeruſalem; but Sabinus knowing himſelf guilty, durſt not appear in his Preſence, but thought beſt to retire towards the Sea-ſide, to avoid the Puniſhment he had deſerved. SACÆ. The Sacæ are a People of Aſia; and the Sacean Feaſts are known in Perſia. Herodotus ſays, that the Perſians gave the Name of Sacæ to all the Scythians. This People has no other relation to our Subject, than that we believe Sheſhach, mention'd by Jeremiah, xxv. 26. li. 41. ſtands for Babylon, and that the Sacean Feaſts were celebrated in Honour to the Moon. SACAR, or Sachar, Father of Ahiam. 1 Chron. xi. 35. Ahiam was one of the Heroes of David's Army.

SACK. Sack-cloth. This is a pure Hebrew Word, and has spread into almost all Languages. Besides the common Signification, which is very well known, it stands also for a Suit of Mourning, which was wore at the Death of a Friend or Relation. In great Calamities, in Penance, in Trouble, they wore Sack-cloth about their Bodies. Accingimini saccis & plangite ante exequias 2 Sam. iii. 31. Abner. Gird yourselves with Sack-cloth, and mourn for Abner. Let us gird ourselves with Sack-cloth, and let us go and implore the Clemency of the King of Israel. 1 Kings xx. 31. Ahab tore his Cloaths, put on a Shirt of Hair-cloth next to his Skin, fasted, and 1 Kings xxi. 27. lay upon Sack-cloth. Dormivit in Sacco.

When Mordecai was inform'd of the Misfortune that threaten'd his Nation, he put on Sack-cloth, and cover'd his Head Esth. iv. 1, 2, 3. with Ashes. Job says, that he has sew'd Job xvi. 16. a Sack upon his Flesh.

On the contrary, in the Time of Joy, and upon the hearing of any good News, those that were clad in Sack-cloth, tore it from their Bodies, and cast it from them. Concidisti saccum meum, & circumdedisti me Psal. xxix. 12. lætitia, says the Psalmist.

The Prophets were commonly cloathed in Sack-cloth. The Lord bids Isaiah to put off the Sack-cloth that was about his Isa. xx. 2. Zech. xiii. 4. Body, and to go naked. Zechariah says, that the false Prophets should no longer prophesy in Sack-cloth, to deceive the Sim- Rev. xi. 3. ple. St. John in the Revelations says, that the two Prophets that God should raise up at the End of the World, should prophesy a thousand, two hundred and sixty Years, cloathed in Sack-cloth. Baruch intimates, that this Habit of Sack-cloth, was that in which good People cloathed themselves Baruch iv. 20. when they went to Prayers. Exui me stola pacis, indui autem me sacco obsecrationis.

SACKBUT, Sambuca, a sort of antient Dan. iii. 5, 7. musical Instrument, which was in use in Chaldea, and which is thought to be a String-Instrument, of a shrill Sound, and which had generally but four Strings. Athæn. Dipnos. l. 14. c. 3. p. 633. Vitruv. l. 6. c. 1. Thus it is described by Athenæus, Vitruvius, and Festus. Athenæus gives us to understand, that this Instrument was pretty near the same as Magadis, Pectis, and Trigonos, String-Instruments, the Figure of which is not much known to us, but which cannot be very far from our modern Psaltery, except that they had not so many Strings. See our Dissertation upon the Instruments of Musick of the Hebrews, before the second Tome of the Commentary Isidor. origin. l. 3. upon the Psalms. Isidore of Sevil seems to have thought, that it was a kind of Flute or Haut-bois, since he says, that Sambuca takes its Name from the Elder-tree, call'd in Latin Sambucus, because at first this Instrument was made with a Pipe of Elder.

SACRAMENT, Sacramentum; in Greek, Mysterion. The Word Sacramentum, is taken, in the Scripture [of the Latin Vulgate], First, for a Secret: Sacramentum Regis abscondere bonum est; It is good to keep the King's Secret. And, Nescierunt sacra- Tob. xii. 7. menta Dei; The Wicked know not the Secrets of God. Secondly, for a Mystery, Wis. ii. 22. a Mysterious and hidden thing. For Example; Nebuchadnezzar's mysterious Dream, which he had forgot, was revealed to Daniel, with its Interpretation: Ut quæ- Dan. ii. 18, 19. rerent misericordiam Dei super sacramento isto. Tunc Danieli mysterium per visionem nocte revelatum est, &c. Thirdly and lastly, it is put for a Sacrament of the New Law, and for the Mysteries of our holy Religion. All this agrees well with the general Sense of Mystery and Secret. St. Paul calls Sacramentum, the Mystery of the Incarnation of Jesus Christ, the Vocation of the Gentiles, the Sacrament of Ephes. i. 9. iii. 3, 9. Col. i. 27. Marriage; lastly, the whole OEconomy of Man's Salvation, and of the New Cove- Eph. v. 32. nant. See 1 Tim. iii. 16. *

Sacraments of the Old Law. These are, all the Ceremonies, Sacrifices, Expiations, Unctions, Benedictions, Consecrations, that were practised under the Law of Moses. All these Things were mysterious and figurative. Circumcision represented Baptism; the Sabbath, the Rest Everlasting; the Paschal Lamb, the Death of Jesus Christ; the Shew-bread, the holy Eucharist; the Unction of the Priests, used in the Sacrament of Orders; the Expiations, Purifications, Lustrations, the Sacrament of Penance: The Sacrifices, Oblations, Libations, the Sacrifice of Jesus Christ, which is renewed every Day upon the Altar in an unbloody manner; the Tabernacle, the Ark of the Covenant, the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices, that of Incense, and the other Ceremonies that were practised in the Temple-ministry, represented the Body of the Christian Religion, and the Ceremonies that accompany the Administration of the Sacraments of the New Law; not to mention the other Relation that these may have with Heaven and the State of the Blessed, of which St. Paul has discover'd the Mystery, in his Epistle to the Hebrews, ch. ix. ver. 1, 2, 3, &c.

The Sacraments of the New Law. These have infinitely the Preference before those of the Old Law. St. Paul says, those of the Jews were weak and beggarly Elements, which of themselves had no Grace

* In all the Places here cited, our English Translation reads Mystery, and not Sacrament; agreeably to the Original Word Μυστήριον.

For the Law made nothing perfect; but the bringing in of a better Hope did, by the which we draw nigh unto God.* But those of the New Law are much fewer in Number, are much more excellent, and much easier to put in practice, than those of the Law of Moses. Aug. The Sacraments of the New Law, are visible Signs of an invisible Grace, instituted by Jesus Christ, for the Sanctification of our Souls. They are in Number Seven: 1. Baptism: 2. Confirmation: 3. Penance: 4. The Eucharist: 5. Extreme Unction: 6. Orders; 7. Marriage. *

Baptism makes us Christians, and Children of God: It was instituted by Jesus Christ, when he said to his Apostles, Matthew xxviii. 19. Go ye therefore, and teach all Nations, baptising them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. The natural Water, is the Matter of this Sacrament; its Form, are the Words now recited; its Effects, are the Remission of original and actual Sins, and the Christian Badge and Character which it communicates to those who receive it.

Confirmation makes us compleat Christians, and gives us an indelible Character. Its special Effect is, to give us the Spirit of God, and Ability to confess his Name, and to maintain the Truths of our Religion, even to the Peril of our Lives. Jesus Christ had promised to send his Holy Ghost to his Disciples; Luke xii. 12. and he actually did send him on the Day of Pentecost; John xiv. 17, 26. xv. 26, &c. and the Apostles communicated him, by the Imposition of Hands, to the Faithful who had received Baptism. Acts i. 5. Acts ii. 2, 4. Acts viii. 15. The Bishops, who are the Apostles Successors, are the only Ministers of this Sacrament; the Matter of which is, the Imposition of Hands, with the Unction of the holy Chrism; and the Form is, the Words pronounced by the Bishop in performing this Ceremony.

Penance is instituted by Jesus Christ, for the Remission of Sins committed after Baptism: Our Saviour instituted it, when he gave the Apostles the Power of Binding and Loosing. Mat. xvi. 19. & xviii. 18. The Sins to be remitted, are the Object of this Sacrament: The Acts of the Penitent, that is, Contrition, Confession, and Satisfaction, are its essential Parts; Absolution given by the Priest, is, as it were, the Completion of it.

The Eucharist, is the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, which are represented under the Appearances of Bread and Wine. Our Saviour instituted it at his Last Supper, which he eat with his Apostles the Evening before his Passion, when, taking Bread, he said, Mat. xxvi. 26, 27, 28. Luke xxii. 17, 18. Mark xiv. 22, 23, &c. Take and eat, this is my Body: And taking the Cup, he said, Take and drink, this is my Blood.

Extreme Unction, is a Sacrament instituted by God, for the Consolation of the Sick, both spiritual and corporal. It gives them Strength against the Temptations of the Devil, and against the Terrors of Death. It purges away the Remains of Sin, and even Sins themselves, if there still remain any to be expiated; and it restores Health to the Sick, if that be necessary for their Salvation. St. Mark says, that the Apostles being sent to preach the Gospel in the Cities of Judea, Mark vi. 13. anointed with Oil many that were sick, and healed them. And St. James says, James v. 13, 14, 15. Is any sick among you? let him call for the Elders of the Church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with Oil in the Name of the Lord: And the Prayer of Faith shall save the Sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he have committed Sins, they shall be forgiven him.

Orders, are a Sacrament established by Jesus Christ, to consecrate Ministers for the Use of his Church, and to give them the Power of administring the Sacraments, and to perform the other Duties of their Function. There are several Degrees of Orders, as there are several Functions in the Ministry of the Church; but there is but one only Sacrament of Orders, or Ordination, in which the Bishops, the Priests, the Deacons, the Subdeacons, and the inferior Orders partake, every one in his Manner. Besides the Sanctifying Grace that this Sacrament confers, it communicates a Character also, that for ever remains indelible. The ordinary Minister for Ordination, is the Bishop alone, who, by divine Right, is superior to the Priests. Jesus Christ instituted this Sacrament, when breathing upon his Apostles, he said to them, John xx. 21, 22. Receive ye the Holy Ghost. Whose-soever Sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose-soever Sins ye retain, they are retained.

* The Author speaks here, according to the Decisions of the Church of Rome; but the Reformed Churches admit of but two Sacraments.

Marriage, is a Sacrament instituted by Jesus Christ, to unite together a Man and his Wife by indissoluble Bands; that becoming but one Flesh, they may procreate and bring up Children in the Fear of the John ii. 1, 2. Lord. Jesus Christ sanctified Marriage, by his own Presence at the Wedding of Cana. He has established the Indissolubility of it, by revoking the Law of Di-Matth. v. 31, 32. vorce, and allowing it only in the single Case of Adultery; and besides, not permitting the Parties so separated to marry again. Lastly, The Apostle has taught us, That the Marriage of Christians was a great Sacrament, or a great Mystery, because it represents the Union of Jesus Ephes. v. 32. Christ with his Church: This is a great Mystery: But I speak concerning Christ and the Church.

The Reader may see what we have said upon each Sacrament, in their proper Articles. *

SACRIFICE, is an Offering made to God upon his Altars, by the Hand of a lawful Minister, to acknowledge his Power, and to pay him Homage. Sacrifice differs from a meer Oblation, in this, that in a Sacrifice there must be a real Change or Destruction of the Thing offered; whereas an Oblation is but a simple Offering of a Gift. As Men have always been under an Obligation of acknowledging the Supreme Dominion of God over them, and whatever belongs to them, and as there have always been found Persons that have conscientiously acquitted themselves of this Duty; we may affirm, that there have always been Sacrifices in the World.

Adam and his Sons, Noah and his Descendants, Abraham and his Posterity, Job and Melchisedech before the Law, have offered to God real Sacrifices. The Law did nothing more than ascertain the Quality, the Number, and other Circumstances of Sacrifices. Before that, all was Arbitrary. They offered the Fruits of the Earth, the Fat or the Milk of Animals, the Fleeces of Sheep, or the Blood and the Flesh of the Victims. Every one pursued his own Humour, his Acknowledgment, his Zeal, or his Devotion: But among the Jews, the Law appointed what they were to offer, and in what Quantities. Before the Law was given, every one was the Priest and Minister of his own Sacrifices; at least he was at liberty to chuse what Priest he pleas'd, to offer his Victims. Generally this Honour was conferr'd upon the most Antient, or Head of a Family, on Princes, or Men of the greatest Virtue and Integrity. But after Moses, this was wholly confined to the Family of Aaron.

'Tis disputed, whether, at first, there were any other Sacrifices than Burnt-offerings: No other appear in Scripture. The Talmudists assure us, that Abel offered only Holocausts, consuming the Flesh of the Victim by Fire; because it was not allow'd to eat any of it. Grotius is of Opinion, that this Patriarch did not offer any bloody Sacrifices. The Text of Moses informs us, [a] that he offered of the Firstlings of his Flock, and of the Fat thereof. But the Hebrew may be translated by, of the First-fruits, and the Milk. We are told, that the Antients offered to God only the Fruits of the Earth, Herbs, Flowers, Honey, Milk, Wheat, Wool:

Sponte suâ si quas terra ferebat.

We are told also, [b] that the Antients put no Fire to their Sacrifices, but obtain'd it by their Prayers; and most of the Fathers think, [c] it was thus that God declared the Sacrifices of Abel to be agreeable to him: He consumed them, as they say, by a Fire sent from Heaven; which was a Favour not vouchsafed to Cain's Sacrifices. In the same manner he set Fire to the Sacrifices offered at Aaron's Consecration, to those offered by Gideon, to those offered by Solomon at the Dedication of his Temple, to those of Elijah upon Mount Carmel, and to those offer'd by the Maccabees at restoring the Worship of the Temple, after it had been prophaned by Antiochus Epiphanes.

The Hebrews had properly but three sorts of Sacrifices, which are, the Burnt-offering, or Holocaust; the Sacrifice for Sin, or the Sacrifice of Expiation; and the Pacifick Sacrifice, or Sacrifice of Thanksgiving. Besides these, there were several Kinds of Offerings, of Corn, of Meal, of Cakes, of Wine, of Fruits; and one Manner of Sacrificing, which has no relation to any we have now mentioned, which is, the setting at Liberty one of the two Sparrows that Lev. xiv.
were offered for the Purification of leprous 4, 5, 6, 7, 51, 52, 53.

* The Protestant Reader is here to be advertized, That the Author here, and elsewhere, treats of the Sacraments, according to the Doctrine of his own Church, or that of the Church of Rome; which is very different from the received Doctrine of all the Reformed Churches, particularly of our own. For this is the Doctrine of our Church, as it is contain'd in the XXVth Article of Religion:

Sacraments ordained of Christ, be not only Badges or Tokens of Christian Mens Profession; but rather, they be certain sure Witnesses, and effectual Signs of Grace, and God's Good-will towards us, by the which he doth work invisibly in us; and doth not only quicken, but also strengthen and confirm our Faith in him.

There are two Sacraments ordained of Christ our Lord in the Gospel; that is to say, Baptism, and the Supper of the Lord.

Those five commonly call'd Sacraments, that is to say, Confirmation, Penance, Orders, Matrimony, and Extreme Unction, are not to be counted for Sacraments of the Gospel, being such as have grown, partly of the corrupt following of the Apostles, partly are States of Life allowed in the Scriptures, but yet have not like Nature of Sacraments with Baptism and the Lord's Supper, for that they have not any visible Sign or Ceremony ordained of God.

Persons;

Lev. xvi. 10, 26. Persons; and the Scape-goat, which was taken to a distant and steep Place, where it was left at Liberty: These Animals, thus left to themselves, were esteem'd as Victims of Expiation, which were loaded with the Sins of those that offered them.

The Holocaust was offered and burnt quite up, on the Altar of Burnt-offerings, without any Reserve to the Person that gave the Victim, or to the Priest that kill'd and sacrificed it; only the Priest had the Benefit of the Skin: For before the Sacrifices were offered to the Lord, their Skins were flay'd off, and their Feet and Intrails were wash'd. See HOLOCAUSTS, and Lev. chap. i. (Philo de Præmiis Sacerdot. & Levit. vii. 8.)

The Sacrifice for Sin, or for Expiation, or the Purification of a Man who had fallen into any Offence against the Law, was not entirely consumed upon the Fire of the Altar. Nothing of it return'd to him that had given it, but the sacrificing Priest had a Share in it; and these are the Particulars that were observed in this Case: If it were the High-priest who had offended through Ignorance, he offered a Calf without Blemish: He brought it to the Door of the Tabernacle, put his Hand upon the Head of the Sacrifice, confess'd his Sin, asked Pardon for it, kill'd and stuck the Calf, carry'd its Blood into the Tabernacle, with his Finger made seven Aspersions towards the Veil that separated the Holy Place from the Sanctuary, put a little of this Blood upon the Altar of Incense, and afterwards poured out all the rest at the Foot of the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices: After this, he took away the Fat that covered the Kidneys, the Liver, and the Bowels; he put the Whole upon the Fire of the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices; and as to the Skin, the Feet, the Bowels, and the Flesh of the Sacrifice, he caused them to be burnt out of the Camp, in a clean Place, where they used to put the Ashes that were taken away from the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices. (Levit. ch. iv, v.)

Secondly, If it were the whole People that had offended, they were to offer a Calf in like manner. The Elders shall bring it to the Altar of the Tabernacle, shall put their Hands upon its Head, and confess their Offence; after which, the Priest shall stick the Victim, shall carry its Blood into the Holy Place, shall make seven Aspersions towards the Veil, shall put some upon the Horns of the Altar of Incense, shall pour out the rest at the Foot of the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices, shall burn the Fat upon the said Altar; and the rest of the Body, the Feet, the Skin, and the Bowels, shall be burnt out of the Camp, as has been said of the Sin-offering of the High-priest.

Thirdly, If it be the Prince of the People that has offended, he shall offer a Goat, [a] shall bring it to the Door of the Tabernacle, shall put his Hands upon its Head, and shall confess his Sin. The Priest shall sacrifice it, shall put of the Blood of the Victim upon the Horns of the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices, shall pour out the rest of the Blood at the Foot of the same Altar, shall burn the Fat upon the Fire of the Altar, and the rest of the Sacrifice shall be for himself. He shall be obliged to eat it in the Tabernacle, and not dare to carry any of it without.

Fourthly, If it be only a private Person who has committed an Offence, he shall offer a Sheep, or a She-goat without Blemish, shall present it to the Priest at the Door of the Tabernacle, shall put his Hands upon the Head of the Sacrifice. The Priest shall sacrifice it, shall put some of the Blood upon the Horns of the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices, shall pour out the rest at the Foot of the same Altar, upon which he shall burn the Fat; and all the rest shall be his own. (Levit. ch. iv, v.)

But if he is not of Ability to offer a Sheep or a She-goat, he shall offer two Turtles, or two young Pigeons; one for his Sin, and the other for a Burnt Offering. That which is for the Burnt-offering, shall be entirely consumed upon the Fire of the Altar. That which shall be offered for his Sin, shall be presented to the Priest, who shall pull off its Head, as some say, or only violently twist it about towards the Wings, without pulling it off, shall make an Aspersion with the Blood of this Bird towards the Altar, shall spill the rest of the Blood at the Foot of the same Altar; and the Flesh shall be his own.

Lastly, If the Person was so poor, as that he could not afford to offer either a She-goat, or two Turtles, he might offer the tenth Part of an Ephah of Meal, that is, a little more than a Gallon of Meal, without Oil or Spice. He presented it to the Priest, who took a Handful of it, and threw it upon the Fire, and the rest was for himself. There are some other Circumstances belonging to this Matter, which may be seen in Leviticus, ch. v. 15, 16. and ch. vi. 1, 2, 3. concerning the Faults in which, besides the Sin-offering and Sacrifice of Expiation, there is a kind of Amends to be made, or Obligation of Restitution to the Lord, or to the Persons offended, according to the Nature of the Offence: For as to the rest, the Ceremonies were always the same.

[a] I believe, that tho' Moses orders a Goat, it is to be understood, that they might also offer a Ram. See Lev. vii. 1, 2, 3, 4. and compare Lev. v. 6, 7.

As

As to the Sacrifice for Sin, when a Ram was offered, his Rump or Tail was burnt also, which was very fat, along with the rest of the Fat. But if it was a Goat, the Fat only was burnt. Lev. vii. 2, 3.

The Peace-offering was offered, to return Thanks to God for his Benefits, or to ask Favours from him, or to satisfy any one's private Devotion, or, lastly, for the Honour of God only. The Israelites offered them when they pleas'd, and there was no Law that obliged them to it. It was free to 'em to present what Animals they would, provided they were such as it was allow'd them to sacrifice. In these Sacrifices no Distinction was observ'd, either of the Age or Sex of the Victim, as was required in the Burnt Sacrifices, and the Sacrifices for Sin. The Law only requir'd, that their Victims should be without Blemish. He that presented them came to the Door of the Tabernacle, put his Hand upon the Head of the Victim, and kill'd it. The Priest pour'd out the Blood about the Altar of Burnt Sacrifices; burnt upon the Fire of the Altar the Fat which is in the Lower Belly, that which covers the Kidneys, the Liver, and the Bowels. And if it were a Lamb, or a Ram, he added to it the Rump of the Animal, which, in that Country, is always very fat. Lev. iii.

Before these Things were set in Order upon the Fire of the Altar, the Priest put them into the Hands of the Person that provided the Victim, then made him lift them up on high, and wave them towards the four Quarters of the World, the Priest supporting and directing his Hands. The Breast and the Right Shoulder of the Sacrifice belong'd to the Priest that perform'd the Service; and it appears, that each of 'em were put into the Hands of him that offered them, tho' Moses mentions only the Breast of the Animal. After this, all the rest of the Sacrifice belong'd to him that presented it to the Priest, and he might eat it with his Family and Friends, as any other Meat. Lev. vii. 30, 31, &c.

The Sacrifices or Offerings of Meal, or Liquors, which were offered for Sin, were in favour of the poorer Sort, who could not afford Sacrifices of Oxen, of Goats, or of Sheep: They contented themselves with offering Meal or Flour, sprinkled with Oil, with Spice (or Frankincense) over it. And the Priest taking an Handful of this Flour, with all the Frankincense, sprinkled them upon the Fire of the Altar; and all the rest of the Flour was his own: He was to eat it without any Leaven in the Tabernacle, and none but the Priests were to taste of it. As to the other Offerings, where they presented Fruits, Wine, Meal, Wafers, or any thing else, the Priest always cast a Part of it upon the Altar, all the rest belong'd to him and the other Priests. These Offerings were always accompany'd with Salt and Wine, but without any Leaven. Levit. ii. 1, 2, 3, &c. Lev. vi. 14, 15, &c.

Those Sacrifices, in which they set at Liberty a Bird or a Goat, were not properly Sacrifices; because there was no shedding of Blood, and the Victim remain'd alive and sound. It was thus they set at Liberty the Sparrow that was offered for the Purification of a Leper, or of a House spotted with Leprosy. They presented to the Priest a Couple of Sparrows, or two clean Birds, with a Bundle made up of Cedar-wood and Hyssop, and tied with a scarlet String. The Priest kill'd one of the Birds over running Water, which was in a clean Vessel of fresh Earth; afterwards, tying the living Sparrow to the Bundle of Cedar and Hyssop, with the Tail turn'd towards the Handle of the Vessel, he plunged it in the Water drench'd with the Blood of the first Sparrow, sprinkled the Leper or the House with it; then set the living Sparrow at liberty, and let it go where it pleas'd. Lev. xiv. 4, 5, &c.

The other sort of Animal that was set at liberty was a Goat; and this is the Occasion upon which it was done: On the Day of solemn Expiation, the Multitude of the Children of Israel presented to the High-priest at the Door of the Tabernacle, two Goats for a Sin-offering. The High-priest then cast Lots upon the two Goats, which should be sacrificed to the Lord, and which should be set at liberty, or be the Scape-goat, the Azazel, as the Hebrews call it. He that was determined by Lot to be sacrificed, was put to death, and offered for the Sins of the People. He that, on the other hand, was to be set at liberty, was brought alive before the Lord. The High-priest said over him certain Prayers, laid his two Hands upon his Head, confess'd the Sins of the whole Congregation, charged therewith the Head of the Goat with Imprecations, then sent him into the Wilderness by a Man appointed to that Office. See the Articles AZAZEL and SCAPE-GOAT. Lev. xvi. 5, &c.

The Sacrifices of Birds, were offered on three Occasions. First, for Sin, when the Person offering was not rich enough to provide a four-footed Animal for a Victim. Secondly, for the Purification of a Woman after her Lying-in. When she could offer a Lamb and a young Pigeon, she gave them both; the Lamb for a Burnt-offering, and the Pigeon for a Sin-offering. But if she was not of Ability to offer a Lamb, she gave a Pair of Turtles, or a Pair of young Pigeons, to be offered, one for a Burnt-offering, and the other for a Sin-offering. Thirdly, they offered two Sparrows for those who were purified from the Lev. v. 7, 8, &c. Lev. xii. 6, 7.

Levit. xiv. 4, &c. 49. 50, 51. the Leprosy; one as a Burnt-offering, and the other was a Scape-sparrow, as we have said before.

For the Sacrifice of the Paschal Lamb, see PASSOVER.

The Perpetual Sacrifice, call'd by the Hebrews, Thamid: The Lord had appointed, that they should offer every Day [a] two Lambs upon the Altar of Burnt-offerings, one in the Morning, and another at Evening. They were burnt as Holocausts, but by a small Fire, that they might continue burning the longer. The Sheep of the Morning was offer'd about Sun-rising, after the Incense was burnt upon the golden Altar, and before any other Sacrifice. That in the Evening was offer'd between the two Vespers, that is to say, at the Decline of the Day, and before the Night began. With each of these Victims was offer'd half a Pint of Wine, as much of the purest Oil, and an Affaron, or about three Pints of the finest Flour.

And such were the Sacrifices of the Hebrews: Sacrifices indeed very imperfect, and altogether incapable of themselves to purify the Defilements of the Soul. St. Paul has comprehended the Sacrifices, and the other Ceremonies of the Law, under the Character of weak and beggarly Elements. Gal. iv. 9. They represented Grace and Purity, but they did not communicate it, says St. Austin: [b] Gratiam multiplicatio victimarum significabat, non efficiebat. They convinced the Sinner of the Necessity that was incumbent on him, to purify himself, and make Satisfaction to God; but they did not impart Innocence to him. [c] Convincebantur peccatores potius quam mundabantur. Lastly, all these Sacrifices were no other than Prophecies and Figures of the true Sacrifice which is offer'd in the Christian Church, and which eminently includes all the Virtues and Qualities of the other Sacrifices; [d] being at the same Time an Holocaust, a Sacrifice for Sin, and a Sacrifice of Thanksgiving; but with this Difference, that it contains the whole Substance and Efficacy, of which the antient Sacrifices were only the Shadow and Representation.

The Sacrifice of the Christian Church is only one. It consists in the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, offer'd and sacrificed by the Ministry of the Priests upon the Altar, under the Species of Bread and Wine. 'Twas this Sacrifice that was represented by all those of the Jews, and which was the Object of the Confidence of all the Saints, and of all the Prophets of the Old Testament, who had in View this one Oblation, in all those bloody Sacrifices that they offer'd to the Lord. The Paschal Lamb, the Burnt-offerings of every Day, the Offerings of Flour and Wine, and all the other Oblations, of whatever nature they were, promis'd and represented the Death of Jesus Christ; of which the Sacrifice of the Altar is the Renewal and real Representation. 'Twas this Sacrifice that was foretold in an express Manner by Malachi, in these Words: I have no Pleasure Mal. i. 10, 11. in you, saith the Lord of Hosts, neither will I accept an Offering from your Hand. For from the rising of the Sun, even unto the going down of the same, my Name shall be great among the Gentiles, and in every Place Incense shall be offered to my Name, and a pure Offering: For my Name shall be great among the Heathen, saith the Lord of Hosts. In this Prophecy may be seen two essential Points of our Religion admirably well established. First, the Abolition of the Sacrifices, and the Ceremonies of the old Law; and secondly, a new Sacrifice offer'd in the Name of the Lord, in every Place, and in the midst of the Nations. See before the Article MASS.

The Sacrifice of an humble and contrite Heart, is that Sacrifice, that, on our Part, constitutes the whole Merit of all the other Sacrifices that we can offer to God. 'The Psal. li. 17. Sacrifices of God are a broken Spirit; a broken and a contrite Heart, O God, thou wilt not despise. The Jews, without these Dispositions, could not offer to God any Offering that was agreeable to him; and even the Sacrifice of our Altars, as divine and excellent as it is in itself, becomes of no use, but even dangerous, to those that offer it, or that partake of it, with Inclinations and Dispositions contrary to those; or, at least, who do not desire them, and endeavour to acquire them. God often explains himself upon this Matter in the Prophets. Sacrifice and Offering thou didst not Psal. xl. 6. Isai. i. 11, 12, 13, 14. desire, mine Ears hast thou opened: Burnt-offering and Sin-offering hast thou not required. To what purpose is the Multitude of your Sacrifices unto me? saith the Lord. I am full of the Burnt-offerings of Rams, and the Fat of fed Beasts, and I delight not in the Blood of Bullocks, or of Lambs, or of He-goats. When ye come to appear before me, who hath required this at your Hands to tread my Courts? Bring no more vain Oblations; Incense is an Abomination unto me, the New-Moons and Sabbaths, the calling of Assemblies, I cannot away with, it is Iniquity, even the solemn Meeting. Your New-Moons and your appointed Feasts my Soul hateth, they are a Trouble unto me; I am weary to bear them. See Jerem. xxxv. 15. Amos v. 21, 22. Hos. xiv. 2, 3, 4. Joel xi. 12, 13, &c. Psal. xlix. 2.

offer to God whatever we have that is most valued by us, has prevail'd on several so far, as to offer Human Sacrifices. It is not agreed, who was the first that introduc'd this Custom. Some [a] ascribe it to Ilus, call'd otherwise Saturn, who, they say, brought it into Practice among the Phenicians. He offer'd up to the Gods his own Son Jehid, whom he had by the Nymph Anobroth. Philo the Jew insinuates, [b] that the Custom of offering such Sacrifices was known in the Land of Canaan before Abraham; and some learned Men think [c], that the Example of these People, took off much of that Horror that Abraham would otherwise have had, at the Intention of sacrificing his own Son, when he had received that Command from God.

But it is much more probable, that Abraham was the first who attempted to sacrifice his own Son; and that it was his Example ill apply'd, that gave a Rise to this Custom. Sanchoniathon, who is quoted for the Sacrifice of Jehid, made by Ilus, is an Author without any Authority. Philo does not deny indeed, but that the Custom of offering Human Sacrifices might obtain in Palestine before Abraham's Time; but he maintains, that this Patriarch, in the Sacrifice he was going to make, had no Intention to imitate these People, whose Manners and Idolatry he abhorr'd. What Motive could he have to this Action? Was it Fear, Hope, Vanity, Ostentation, the Desire of Praise, or of Riches? Isaac was every thing to him; yet the express Command of God would not allow him to hesitate upon a Matter so contrary to his Inclinations, and so opposite to his Interest.

As to the Human Sacrifices customary in Palestine, in Africa, in Gaul, and almost all the World over, it must be own'd they were very antient, and that they did really sacrifice Men to their false Gods. I know, that some learned Men [d] have thought, that among the Canaanites and Moabites, they contented themselves with making the Children to pass through the Flames, or between two Fires, which they call'd, Lustrare per ignem; and I doubt not, but sometimes they did so. But for the most part they really consumed them in the Flames, which is easily proved.

Lev. xviii. 21. Moses in Leviticus forbids them to make their Children pass through the Fire in Honour of Moloch. De semine tuo non dabis ut consecretur Idolo Moloch. The Hebrew says, you shall not give your Children to make them pass to Moloch. And this some understand of a Lustration only, like what is mention'd in prophane Authors. Ovid. Fast. l. 4.

Moxq; per ardentes stipulæ crepitantis acervos,
Trajicias coleri strenua membra pede;

Besides, the Scripture makes mention of a Son of King Ahaz, [e] who had been offer'd to Moloch, and yet reigned after his Father.

But there are so many other Evidences, that they burn'd their Children in Honour of false Gods, that it cannot reasonably be call'd in question. Thus the Scripture speaks of this Crime, Levit. xx. 1, 2, 3. Whosoever he be of the Children of Israel, or of the Strangers that sojourn in Israel, that giveth any of his Seed to Moloch; he shall surely be put to Death, the People of the Land shall stone him with Stones. And I will set my Face against that Man, and will cut him off from among his People: because he hath given of his Seed unto Moloch, to defile my Sanctuary, and to prophane my Holy Name. And if the People of the Land do any ways hide their Eyes from the Man, when he giveth of his Seed unto Moloch, and kill him not; then I will set my Face against that Man, and against his Family, and will cut him off, and all that go a whoring after him, to commit Whoredom with Moloch, from among their People. Moses again repeats these Prohibitions, Deut. xviii. 10. And it appears from Amos, that notwithstanding these Prohibitions, the People did not forbear even in the Desart, to carry with them a Tent consecrated to the God Moloch. Amos v. 26.

The Passage that speaks of the Consecration that King Ahaz made, of one of his Sons to the God Moloch, does indeed only mention, that he made him pass thro' the Fire. Consecravit transferens per ignem. But the Scripture adds, that in this he imitated the Abominations of the People of Canaan, whom the Lord had exterminated, and driven out before the Children of Israel. But it is beyond all doubt, that the Canaanites put their Children to Death in Honour of their Gods. Et immolaverunt filios & filias suas Dæmoniis, & effuderunt sanguinem innocentem, sanguinem filiorum suorum, & filiarum suarum quas sacrificaverunt sculptilibus Chanaan. Jeremiah says, They have built also the high Places of Baal, to burn their Sons with Fire, for Burnt-offerings unto Baal. See also the same Prophet, xxxii. 35. It is certain, that, for these Crimes chiefly, God drove out the Canaanites. See Deut. xviii. 10, 11. And Wisdom, xii. 5. Odibilia opera tibi faciebant, per medicamina & sacrificia injusta, & filiorum suorum peccatores sine misericordia. 2 Kings xvi. 3. Ps. cv. 37. Jer. xix. 5.

The Phenicians, who were a Remnant of the Canaanites, continued this barbarous Cuſtom in their Country, which they juſtify'd by the Example of Ilus or Saturn, as we have ſhewn above: They carry'd this Cuſtom along with their Colonies into Africa, where it continued for a very long Time. When Gelo, King of Sicily, conquer'd the Carthaginians, by the Treaty he made with them, he obliged them to renounce this Cuſtom of Sacrificing their Children to Saturn. Juſtin aſſures us, that Darius impoſed the ſame Commands upon them by an Embaſſy, to leave off their Human Sacrifices. But notwithſtanding all this, they continued theſe Practices till the Proconſulate of Tiberias, who caus'd the Prieſts of Saturn to be hanged upon Trees that were near their Temples. Diodorus Siculus [a] alſo gives us a Deſcription of Saturn, as adored by the Carthaginians: 'Twas a Figure of Copper, the Hands of which were turn'd backwards, and bending towards the Ground; ſo that when they put upon his Arms a Child to be conſecrated to him, he immediately fell into a Pan of burniug Coals beneath, and died miſerably at the Feet of the Deity.

'Twould be to little Purpoſe to heap up here a great Number of Examples of the ſacrificing of human Victims. Porphyrius aſſures us, that the Book of Sanchoniathon was full of them. Theſe Sacrifices were frequent, not only in Phenicia, in Paleſtine, in the Countries of Ammon and Moab, in Idumea, in Arabia, and in Egypt, [b] but alſo in Gaul, among the Scythians, the Thracians, in the Iſles of Rhodes, Chios and Cyprus, and even among the Athenians, and finally alſo in America.

2 Kings iii. 24.

As to what is affirm'd, that Ahaz had the ſame Son for his Succeſſor, whom he had made to paſs through the Fire in Honour to Moloch, no Proof can be given of this. 'Tis true, his Succeſſor was Hezekiah; but he might have had ſeveral other Sons. We know another of his Sons, whoſe Name was Maaſiah, who was put to Death at the Command of the King of Iſrael.

2 Chron. xxviii. 7.

SACRILEGE, Sacrilegium. The Action of one that prophanes holy Things, or that commits any Outrage againſt Perſons conſecrated to God. The Theſt, the Abuſe, the Prophanation of ſacred Things is Sacrilege. The Scripture gives the Name of Sacrilege to Idolatry, and to other Crimes that more directly inſult the Deity. And he is call'd Sacrilegious, Sacrilegus, that commits a Sacrilege, an Impiety, a Prophanation of holy Things; who uſurps the Prieſthood, who approaches the Sacraments unworthily, who plunders or pillages Things that are dedicated to God.

SADAI, Shadai, or Saddai [c]. This is one of the Names of God among the Hebrews, which the Septuagint and St. Jerom generally tranſlate by Almighty. It is moſt commonly put alone. For Example, Which ſaw the Viſion of the Almighty, or Shadai. Numbers xxiv. 4, 16.
The Almighty (or Shadai) hath afflicted me. Ruth i. 21.
The Arrows of the Almighty (or Shadai) Job vi. 4.
are within me. Job makes more frequent Uſe of this Word, than any other of the ſacred Writers. It is not at all found in the Books of Solomon. Sometimes it is join'd with the Word El, which is another Name of God, El-Shadai, God-Almighty. It ſhould ſeem that the Word Sadai is derived from the Hebrew Sadad, or Shadad, which ſignifies to ravage, to ruin, to pillage; as much as to ſay, God the Deſtroyer, the God of Devaſtation. Or, according to another Derivation, it may be render'd, the God of the Fields, or the God of Nipples.

I. SADOC, Son of Azor, and Father of Achim, of the Number of the Anceſtors of Jeſus Chriſt. Matth. i. 14.

II. SADOC, Founder of the Sect of the Saducees. This is what almoſt all have ſaid, who have treated of this Sect; but they inform us but very little concerning his Perſon. 'Tis ſaid, [d] that Sadoc ſucceeded one Antigonus Socchæus, as a Diſciple ſucceeds his Maſter, in the Tradition of his Doctrine; which Antigonus had in the ſame manner ſucceeded Simon the Juſt, the High-prieſt of the Jews. But Simon the Juſt died in the Year of the World 3711, before the vulgar Era 293. So that Sadoc may have lived about the Year of the World 3740.

Antigonus, Maſter to Sadoc, was, as it is thought, the Head of a particular Sect, who, out of an Exceſs of Spirituality, taught, that we muſt give to the Lord a pure and diſintereſted Worſhip. Be not like Slaves, ſaid Antigonus to his Scholars; do not obey your God only on a Proſpect of a Recompence, but obey him without any Views of Self-intereſt, and without hoping for any Recompence for your Labours: Let the Fear of the Lord be upon you. His Diſciple Sadoc being not able to conform himſelf to ſo diſintereſted a Morality, and yet not being willing to abandon his Maſter, for whom he had a Reſpect, gave this Maxim of his a quite contrary turn to what he himſelf had intended. For he drew this Concluſion from it, that there was no Recompence to be hoped for, nor any Puniſhment to be fear'd, after this Life; and that Good was to be done, and Evil to be avoided, without any View either to Hope or Fear.

Evil

Some Rabbins make Sadoc a Disciple of Dositheus, [a] and pretend that he withdrew to Samaria; that he made a Schism from the other Jews, and worshipp'd upon Mount Gerizim. But this Sentiment cannot be supported, since Dositheus the Samaritan lived a long Time after Sadoc, and a little while after the Death of Jesus Christ. [b] Others will have it, [c] that Alexander the Great having permitted the Samaritans to build a Temple upon Mount Gerizim, Sadoc, Boetus, and several other prevaricating Jews, went to worship upon Gerizim, and thus separated themselves from Simon the Just and Antigonus Socchæus, who continued always stedfast to the Temple at Jerusalem. Lastly, there are some, [d] who, without recurring to Sadoc at all, pretend that the Word Saducees comes from the Hebrew Sedec, which signifies Justice; and that they took this Name to distinguish themselves from others; being desirous to pass for great Lovers of Justice. Josephus observes, [e] that they were very severe in punishing for Faults.

SADUCEES, Disciples of Sadoc now mention'd. They constituted one of the four principal Sects of the Jews. What chiefly distinguish'd them from the other Jews, was the Opinion they maintain'd concerning the Existence of Angels, and the Immortality of the Soul. They did not deny but that we had reasonable Souls; but they maintain'd this Soul was mortal; [f] and, by a necessary Consequence, they deny'd the Rewards and Punishments of another Life. Joseph. ibidem. They pretended also, that what is said of the Existence of Angels, and of a future Resurrection, are nothing but Illusions. [g] St. Epiphaneus, [h] and after him St. Austin, [i] have advanced, that the Saducees deny'd the Holy Ghost. But neither Josephus, nor the Evangelists accuse them of any Error like this. It has been also imputed to them, that they thought Arnob. l. 3. p. 100. God to be corporeal; and that they received none of the Prophecies.

It is pretty difficult to apprehend how they could deny the being of Angels, and yet receive the Books of Moses, where such frequent mention is made of Angels, and of their Appearances. It is very likely they look'd upon Angels, not as particular Beings, and subsisting of themselves, but as Powers, Emanations, or Qualities inseparable from the Deity, [k] much as the Sun-beams are inseparable from the Sun. Or perhaps they held Angels not to be spiritual, but mortal; just as they thought that Substance to be, which animates us and thinks in us. The Antients do not acquaint us how they solved this Difficulty, that might be urged against 'em from so many Passages of the Pentateuch, where mention is made of Angels.

As the Saducees acknowledg'd neither Punishments nor Recompences in another Life, so they were inexorable in their chastising of the Wicked. [l] They observed the Law themselves, and caus'd it to be observed by others, with the utmost Rigour. They admitted of none of the Traditions, Explications, or Modifications of the Pharisees; they kept only to the Text of the Law; and maintain'd, that only what was written was to be observed [m].

The Saducees are accused of rejecting all the Books of Scripture, except those of Moses; [n] and to support this Opinion it is observed, that our Saviour makes use of no Scripture against them, but Passages taken out of the Pentateuch. But Scaliger [o] produces good Proofs to vindicate them from this Reproach. He observes, that they did not appear in Israel till after the Number of the holy Books were fix'd, and that if they had been to choose out of the Canonical Scriptures, the Pentateuch was less favourable to them than any other Book, since it is often makes mention of Angels and their Apparition. Besides the Saducees were present in the Temple, and at other religious Assemblies, where the Books of the Prophets were read indifferently, as well as those of Moses. They were in the chief Employs of the Nation, many of them were even Priests. Would the Jews have suffer'd in these Employments Persons that rejected the greatest Part of their Scriptures? Menasse ben-Israel says expressly, [p] that indeed they did not reject the Prophets, but that they explain'd them in a Sense very different from that of the other Jews.

Josephus assures us [q], that they deny'd Destiny or Fate, alledging, that these were only Sounds void of Sense, and that all the Good or Evil that happens to us, is in Consequence of the good or evil Side we have taken, by the free Choice of our Will. They said also, [r] that God was far removed from doing or knowing Evil, and that Man was the absolute Master of his own Actions. This was roundly to deny a Providence, and upon this Footing I know not what could be the Religion of the Sa- ducees; or what Influence they could aſcribe to God in things here below. However, it is certain they were not only tolerated among the Jews, but that they were admitted to the High-prieſthood itſelf. This ſhews what muſt be then the State of the Religion of the Jews.

John Hyrcanus, Highprieſt of the Nation, ſeparated himſelf in a ſignal Manner from the Sect of the Phariſees, and went over to that of Sadoc. [a] 'Tis ſaid alſo, he gave ſtrict Command to all the Jews, on pain of Death, to receive the Maxims of this Sect. [b] Ariſtobulus and Alexander Jannæus, Son of Hyrcanus, continued to favour the Sadducees; and Maimonides aſſures us [c], that under the Reign of Alexander Jannæus, they had in Poſſeſſion all the Offices of the Sanhedrim, and that there only remain'd of the Party of the Phariſees, Simon the Son of Secra. Caiaphas, who condemned Jeſus Chriſt to Death, was a Saducee; as alſo Ananus the younger [d], who put to Death St. James the Brother of our Lord. At this Day the Jews hold as Hereticks, that ſmall Number of Saducees that are to be found among them. See upon this Matter Serrar. Tribæreſ. Menaſſe ben-Iſrael, l. 1. de Reſurrectione mortuorum; Baſnage's Hiſtory of the Jews, l. 3. c. 5, 14, &c. and our Diſſertation upon the Sects of the Jews, n. 13. before the Commentary upon St. Mark.

Acts v. 17. iv. 1.

The Sect of the Saducees is not extinguiſh'd; it was much reduced by the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and by the Diſperſion of the Jews; but it revived afterwards. At the Beginning of the third Century it was ſo formidable in Egypt, that Ammonim, [e] Origen's Maſter, when he ſaw them propagate their Opinions in that Country, thought himſelf obliged to write againſt them, or rather againſt the Jews who tolerated the Saducees, though they deny'd the fundamental Points of their Religion. The Emperor Juſtinian mentions the Saducees in one of his Novels, baniſhes them out of all the Places of his Dominions, and condemns them to the ſevereſt Puniſhments, as People that maintain'd atheiſtical and impious Tenets; denying the Reſurrection and the laſt Judgment.

Annus, or Ananus, a Diſciple of Juda, Son of Nachman, a famous Rabbin of the eighth Century, declared himſelf, as it is ſaid, in favour of the Saducees, and ſtrenuouſly protected them againſt their Adverſaries. They had alſo a celebrated Defender in the twelfth Age, in the Perſon of Alpharag, a Spaniſh Rabbin. This Doctor wrote againſt the Phariſees, the declared Enemies of the Saducees; and maintain'd by his publick Writings, that the Purity of Judaiſm was only to be found among the Saducees: That the Traditions avow'd by the Phariſees were uſeleſs, and that the Ceremonies which they had multiplied without end, were an inſupportable Yoke. The Rabbi Abraham-ben-David Italleri reply'd to Alpharag, and ſupported the Sect of the Phariſees by two great Arguments, that of their Univerſality, and that of their Antiquity. He proved their Antiquity by a continued Succeſſion from Adam down to the Year 1167; and their Univerſality, becauſe the Phariſees are ſpread all the World over, and are found in all the Synagogues.

There are ſtill ſeen of the Saducees in Africa, and in ſeveral other Places. They deny the Immortality of the Soul, and the Reſurrection of the Body; but they are rarely found, at leaſt, there are but few, who declare themſelves for theſe Opinions. Among the Mahometans alſo there is known a Sect of Hereticks call'd Zendik; [f] who believe neither a Reſurrection, nor a Life to come. But others maintain, that this Word properly ſignifies a Magian, a Diſciple of Zoroaſter, and a Worſhipper of Fire. Certain it is, that among the Arabians, and other Mahometans, Zendik ſignifies in general an impious Perſon, who is neither Jew, nor Chriſtian, nor Mahometan; or one that makes a Pretence of belonging to one of theſe three Religions, and yet does not believe the Principles, nor conforms himſelf to the Practice of it. There have been thoſe that confound the Saducees with ſuch as hold the Metempſychoſis, and with the Defenders of the two Principles, that is, the Manichees; but it is very certain theſe Sects are different from the Saducees.

SAFRON, Crocus; in Hebrew call'd Carcos or Corcos [g]; a well known Flower. Its Flower is of a blue Colour, in the midſt of which are ſmall Threds of a yellow Colour, of a very agreeable Smell. Solomon in his Song of Songs joins it with other Aromaticks: Nardus, & Crocus, & Fiſtula, &c. Jeremiah ſpeaks of Cloths of a Safron Colour. Qui nutriebantur in Croceis. [h] But the Hebrew of Jeremiah rather ſignifies Purple or Crimſon.

SAGAN. [i] The Hebrews thus call the Vicar or Deputy of the High-prieſt, who ſupply'd his Office, and who perform'd the Functions of it in the Abſence of the High-prieſt, or when any Accident happen'd to him, that put him out of a Condition to officiate in Perſon; of which we have ſome Examples in the Hiſtory of Joſephus. Jews think the Office of this Sagan to be very antient among them. They hold that Moses was Sagan to Aaron. I do not find the Word Sagan in this Sense in Scripture, but it is frequent in the Rabbins [a].

Sagan is also put for Princes, or the chief Officers of a Kingdom; and this Word is often met with in this Sense, in the Books of Ezra, Nehemiah, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel. Sagan is rather Chaldean than Hebrew, and it is very likely that the Hebrews learn'd it from the Chaldees, to express Princes and great Courtiers, Magistrates and Men in Power, not only among the Babylonians, but also among the Hebrews. St. Jerom generally translates this Word by Magistrates, and the Septuagint by Satraps, Princes, Nobles, Governors.

SAGE, or the Wise-man. This Appellation is generally given to Solomon by way of Eminence. Also the Name of Sage is put for a pious, prudent, knowing, and enlightned Man, one that fears God, is vertuous, &c. See the Article WISDOM.

SAGUM. St. Jerom translates some-
Ex. xxvi. 7. times by saga cilicina, or saga de pilis ca-
יריעות עזים prarum, the Hebrew Words jerioth hezim,
Ex. xxv. 4. which signify the Veils or Curtains of Goat's-hair that cover'd the Sanctum and the Sanctuary. See Exod. xxvi. 7, 8, &c. for the Description of these Curtains. Sagam is also put for a Cassock, an antient military Garment, and it is found in this Sense in the Book of Judges, iii. 16. [b] where it is said, That Ehud made him a Dagger, which had two Edges, of a Cubit length; and he did gird it under his Raiment, upon his right Thigh. The Vulgate reads here, Accinctus est eo subter Sagum in dextro femore. But the Hebrew says only, under his Cloaths.

SAINT, Sanctity, to sanctify, &c. These Words are used in different Senses in the Scripture. First, Saint signifies pure, free from all Sorts of Defilements and Sins, which may make a Man unfit to approach to holy Things; and to sanctify signifies to purify, and to put one's self in a Condition to appear before the Lord, and to partake
Ex. xix. 22. of holy Things. And let the Priests also which come near to the Lord, sanctify themselves, lest the Lord break forth upon them.
Exod. xix. 10, 11. And again; And the Lord said unto Moses, Go unto the People, and sanctify them to Day and to Morrow, and let them wash their Cloaths. And be ready against the third Day, Job i. 5. to receive the Law. Job sent and sanctified his Children.

Secondly, To sanctify, is put for appoint-Gen. ii. 3. ing to any holy Use. God sanctified the Ex. xiii. 2. seventh Day. He sanctified all the First- Exod. xix. 23. born. Set Bounds about the Mount, and
Ex. xxviii. 41. sanctify it. Sanctify them, that they may minister unto me in the Priest's Office. There were in the Temple at Jerusalem many rich Spoils that David and his Successors had sanctify'd to the Lord.

Thirdly, to sanctify, is sometimes put for Preparation for any Action, that does not require any extraordinary Holiness.
Sanctify yourselves against to Morrow, and Numb. xi. 18.
ye shall eat Flesh. And Joshua said unto Josh. iii. 5.
the People, Sanctify yourselves, for to Morrow the Lord will do Wonders among you.
Blow the Trumpet in Sion, sanctify a Fast, Joel ii. 15, 16.
call a solemn Assembly, gather the People, sanctify the Congregation. That is, prepare it, or publish a Fast, a Congregation.

Fourthly, Saint, Sanctity, Sanctification. These Epithets in a sovereign manner are ascribed to God, the Author of all Sanctity and Holiness. So the Cherubims and Se- raphims cry to him without ceasing, Holy, Isai. vi. 3.
Holy, Holy. He is named by way of Excellence, The Saint, the Holy One of Israel [c]. All our Holiness before him is nothing but Pollution, his Name is Holy, or, his Name is the Saint, or rather Sanctity itself. We sanctify and hallow his Name, and we pray that his Name be hallow'd, when we praise him, when we acknowledge his Majesty, when we worship him, and when we endeavour to make him known, adored, praised, and beloved by all those that are capable of it.

Fifthly, the Saint, the Sanctum, the holy Place, stands for that particular Part of the Temple, which was between the Porch and the Sanctuary, and in which were placed the golden Candlestick, the Altar of Incense, and that of the Shew-bread.

Sixthly, the Sanctum, or Sancta, is taken for the whole Temple, or even for Heaven. He will hear him from his holy Hea- Psal. xx. 6.
ven. For he hath looked down from the Ps. cii. 19.
Height of his Sanctuary; from Heaven did the Lord behold the Earth. Praise God in Psal. cl. 1.
his Sanctuary, praise him in the Firmament of his Power.

Seventhly, the Holy of Holies, Sanctum Sanctorum, or the Sanctuary, signifies the most inward and sacred Part of the Temple, where was placed the Ark of the Covenant, and where Nobody was to enter but only the Highpriest, and that but once a Year, upon the Day of solemn Expiation.

Eighthly, the Saints, is sometimes put for the People of Israel, or sometimes for Christians. The Israelites of the Faction of Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, said to Moses and Aaron; Ye take too much upon Numbers xvi. 3.
you, seeing all the Congregation are Holy (or Saints) every one of them, and the Lord is among them. And in more Places of Scripture than one, the Hebrews are call'd a holy Nation. [a] Ye shall be unto me a Kingdom of Priests, and an holy Nation. Nothing is more frequent in St. Paul, than the Name of Saints given to the first Christians. See Rom. i. 1. viii. 27, 28. xiii. 13. xv. 25, 26. xvi. 2, &c.

Ninthly, the Saints stand for the Priests of the Lord. Even to Morrow the Lord will shew who are his, and who is Holy; and will cause him to come near unto him, even him whom he hath chosen, will he cause to come near unto him. Aaron is call'd in Deuteronomy, the holy One, or the Saint of God. Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy One. And in the Psalms; They envied Moses also in the Camp, and Aaron the Saint of the Lord. (Numbers xvi. 5, 7. — Deuter. xxxiii. 8. — Ps. cvi. 16.)

Tenthly, also the Saints signify in particular good Men, and the Servants of God. As for Example, The Knowledge of the Holy (or Saints) is Understanding. And again, I neither learned Wisdom, nor have the Knowledge of the Holy, or Saints. O fear the Lord, ye his Saints, for there is no want to them that fear him. And elsewhere, My Goodness extendeth not to thee, but to the Saints that are in the Earth, and to the excellent, in whom is all my Delight. (Prov. ix. 10. — Prov. xxx. 3. — Ps. xxxiv. 9. — Psal. xvi. 2, 3.)

Eleventhly, the Saints, are often put also for the Angels. To which of the Saints wilt thou turn? And elsewhere, Behold he putteth no Trust in his Saints, yea the Heavens are not clean in his Sight. Which is a parallel Place to that other Passage in the same Book. Shall mortal Man be more just than God? Shall a Man be more pure than his Maker? Behold, he put no Trust in his Servants, and his Angels he charged with Folly. Daniel says, An holy One (or Saint) came down from Heaven. And Moses, the Lord shined forth from Mount Paran, and came with ten thousands of Saints. (Job v. 1. — Job iv. 17, 18. — Dan. iv. 13, 23. — Deuter. xxxiii. 2, 3.)

Twelfthly, Saints and Saintesses. The Hebrews give these Names, by way of Antiphrasis, to Men and Woman that prostituted themselves in Honour (as they thought) of some prophane Deity, according to the blind and polluted Notions of their false Religion. The Hebrew, for example, gives this Name to Tamar, [b] who was taken for an Harlot or Prostitute. Moses says, [c] There shall be no Whore of the Daughters of Israel, nor a Sodomite of the Sons of Israel. Or literally thus, there shall be no Saintess or Saint, &c. See also 1 Kings xiv. 24. xv. 12. xxii. 47. and 2 Kings xxiii. 7. Job xxxvi. 14. Hosea iv. 14. where the like Expressions are to be found.

SALAH, or Sale, Son of Cainan, and Grandson of Arphaxad; or rather, by leaving out Cainan, who is not to be found in the Hebrew Copies; Salah was born in the thirty-fifth Year of his Father Arphaxad, and in the Year of the World 1693. He begat Eber at thirty Years old, in the Year of the World 1723. He died at the Age of 433 Years, in the Year of the World 2126, before Christ 1874, before the vulgar Era 1878. (Gen. xi. 12, 14, 15.)

The Orientals [d] have preserved to us several Traditions concerning the Person of Salah, which it will not be amiss to insert here, though we do not esteem them as indubitable. They pretend, that the Patriarch Salah was fill'd with the Spirit of Prophecy, and that God sent him to the People of the Tribe of Themud, who dwelt in that Part of Arabia call'd Hagr, or Arabia petræa; but he was very ill treated in this Country. He proved his Mission by a surprizing Miracle, when he open'd a Rock with a Word of his Mouth, and caus'd a female Camel to come out, which was immediately deliver'd of her Young. Instead of being converted at this Prodigy, the Themudists put the Camel to Death, which by her Presence reproached them with Incredulity.

After this they began to insult the Prophet Salah, and to deride all his Menaces. But Salah address'd himself to God, who sent the Arch-angel Gabriel against them. He had no sooner appear'd among them, but he put them all to Death, excepting a small Number who had believed the Prophet, and who follow'd him into the Territory of Mecca, whither he retired and ended his Days. Some say, God was so provoked with the Hardness and Incredulity of the Themudists, that he sent such a violent Earthquake among them, that they were all thrown down dead in their Houses, with their Faces to the Ground.

We read in some Arabian Authors, that the Prophet Salah, the Apostle of the Themudists, was more modern than Salah the Son of Arphaxad; and thus they reckon his Genealogy. Salah was Son of Asaph, Son of Casrehh, Son of Hauver, Son of Chaber or Heber, Son of Themud, Son of Aram, Son of Shem, Son of Noah.

SALAMIM, or Zalamim. They speak of a City by the Name of Salamin in the Books of the Hebrews, (Misn. Cod. Kilaim, c. 4. Misn. 9. & Jeramoth, c. 16. Misn. 6.) Malala Chronic. n. 296. says, that Augustus gave the Name of Diospolis to Salamim a City of Palestine.

SALAMIS, a City of the Isle of Cyprus. St. Paul came thither along with St. Barnabas, in the forty-fourth Year of the vulgar Era, and there converted Sergius Paulus. Salamis is now call'd Famagousta. In the Year of Christ 488, the Body of St. Barnabas was there found. He was a Native (Acts xiii. 5.)

SALAMPSO, Daughter of Herod the Great, and of Mariamne the Asmonean. Salampso was first contracted to Pheroras; afterwards she marry'd Phazael her Cousin-german, the Son of Phazael, her Uncle by the Father's Side, by whom she had three Sons and two Daughters, Antipater, Herod, and Alexander; Alexandra and Cypros.

I. SALATHIEL, or Shealtiel, Son of Jeconiah, and Father of Zerubbabel. He died at Babylon during the Captivity. The same Salathiel was also Son of Neri, according to St. Luke. He descended from Solomon by Rehoboam, according to St. Matthew; and from the same Solomon by Nathan, according to St. Luke. In Salathiel were united the two Branches of this illustrious Genealogy; so that Salathiel was Son to Jeconiah, according to the Flesh, as it appears from the Chronicles, which tell us, that Jeconiah had two Sons, Assir and Salathiel, while he was at Babylon. And he might be Son of Neri by Adoption, or having marry'd the Heiress of Neri's Family; or even as proceeding from the Widow of Neri, being dead without Children. For in any one of these Cases he would pass for the Son of Neri according to the Law. St. Luke does not tell us in what Sense he was Son to Neri.

(1 Chron. iii. 17. — Luke iii. 27. — Mat. i. 12. — 1 Chron. iii. 17.)

The Jews pretend, that Salathiel was the Titular Prince of the Jews, during their Captivity, exercising a small Matter of Authority over them, in Subordination to that of the Kings of Chaldea. They pretend also, that he had Successors of the House of David, known by the Title of Princes of the Captivity, who were appointed by the Kings of the Country. They give us an uninterrupted Succession of them for several Ages; and there are even some Jewish Authors that maintain [a], that the Heads of the Captivity are still in Being beyond the Euphrates. All this is in View to answer the Objection we make to them, when we urge the Prophecy of Jacob, that intimates, That a Law-giver should not depart from between the Feet of Judah, till the coming of the Messiah. To which they answer, That the Scepter and the Law-giver are still in Being among them, in the Persons of these Princes of the Captivity.

(Gen. xlix. 10.)

SALCHAN, Salecha, or Selcha, a City of the Kingdom of Og, in the Country of Bashan, beyond Jordan, towards the Northern Extremity of the Portion of Manasseh [b].

I. SALEM. The Name of Salem is given to Jerusalem, Psal. lxxvi. 2. In Salem also is his Tabernacle, and his dwelling Place in Zion. The Vulgate reads, Factus est in pace locus ejus. But the Hebrew requires, Factus est in Salem locus ejus. The common Opinion is, that Melchisedech, King of Salem, was King of Jerusalem. Gen. xiv. 18. Hebr. vii. 1, 2.

II. SALEM, or Shalem, a City of the Shechemites, where Jacob arrived at his Return from Mesopotamia. Eusebius and St. Jerome, take Notice of this City; but some Commentators translate the Hebrew thus, Jacob came safe and sound to a City of Shechem. Shalem, in Hebrew, may signify safe, in Health, &c. Gen. xxxiii. 18.

III. SALEM. St. Jerome says, that there was a Place near Jerusalem call'd Salem,, to the West of it. Hieron. in Salem.

IV. SALEM, otherwise Salumias, in the Country of Scythopolis, eight Miles from this City. Hieron. ibid.

V. SALEM, or Salim, the Place where John the Baptist baptized upon the Jordan. The Manuscripts are very indifferent as to Salem or Salim. John iii. 23.

VI. SALEM, the City where Melchisedech reigned. St. Jerome, [c] the Author of the Chronicon Paschale, and [d] M. Reland, [e] think this City was different from Jerusalem. St. Jerome places it in the Territory of Scythopolis, where the Ruins of it were still to be seen in his Time, which were said to have been the Palace of Melchisedech. We are of Opinion with Josephus, and the Generality of the Fathers and Interpreters, that Melchisedech reigned at Jerusalem. See the Article of JERUSALEM before.

VII. SALEM. The Septuagint have sometimes call'd the City of Shilo by this Name. See Jerem. xli. 5. xlviii. 5.

SALIS, or Sallis, a Village of Idumea, whither the Jews retired who had been beaten by the Romans in the Plains of Askalon [f].

SALISSA, Salisa, Baal-salisa, or Shalisha. Mention is made of Shalisha, 1 Sam. xi. 4. and of Baal-shalisha, 2 Kings iv. 42. It was fifteen Miles from Diospolis, in the Canton of Thamnitica, to the North of Jerusalem [g].

SALIUNCULA, is the Diminutive of Saliunca. But Saliunca signifies Lavender, or Orci tunica, or the Spikenard of the Mountains. This is a very odoriferous Plant, and is us'd to be put among Linen, to preserve it from Moths, and to give it an agreeable Scent. The Hebrew Word Naatzutz [h] is differently understood by the Interpreters. Some take it for a Thorn [i] or Bush: Aquila and Theodotion translate it by Conyse Plin. l. 21. c. 7.

SALLU, or Salo, the Son of Meſhullam, of the Tribe of Benjamin. 1 Chr. ix. 7.

SALMON, Salmona, or Salma, Son of Nahſhon; he married Rahab, by whom he had Boaz [a]. He is named the Father of Beth-lehem; which is as much as to ſay, that his Deſcendants peopled Beth-lehem.

SALMONE, or Salmona, a City and Sea-port in the Iſland of Crete. St. Paul paſs'd near this City, in his Way to Rome, in the Year of Chriſt 60. Act. xxvii. 7.

I. SALOME, Daughter of Antipater, and Siſter of Herod the Great; ſhe was one of the wickedeſt Women that have been known. She firſt married Joſeph, whom ſhe accuſed of too great Familiarities with Mariamne the Wife of Herod. This ſuſpicious Prince put Joſeph to Death, without ſo much as hearing his Defence; having found, by the Confeſſion of Mariamne herſelf, that Joſeph had diſcover'd a Secret to her, which no one knew but himſelf and Herod. Salome afterwards marry'd Coſtobarus; but being afterwards diſguſted with him, ſhe put him away, by an Example 'till then unheard-of among the Jews, whoſe Law (ſays Joſephus) allows Men to put away their Wives, but does not allow the Women the ſame Liberty. After this, ſhe accuſed him of Treaſon againſt Herod, who put him to Death. Joſ. Antiq. l. 15. c.4.p.517. Joſ. Antiq. l. 15. c.9.p.532.

She caus'd much Diviſion and Trouble in Herod's Family, by her Calumnies and miſchievous Informations; and ſhe may be look'd upon as the chief Author of the Death of the Princes Alexander and Ariſtobulus, and of their Mother Mariamne. Salome conceived a violent Paſſion for an Arabian Prince call'd Sillæus, whom ſhe would have marry'd, againſt her Brother Herod's Conſent. She us'd to ſee him with ſo little Caution, that every Body was offended at it. And when Herod made her marry one call'd Alexas, ſhe ſtill continued her Inclination for Sillæus. Salome ſurvived Herod, who, by his Will, left her the Cities of Jamnia, Azoth, and Phaſaelis, with fifty-thouſand Pieces of Money. She favour'd Antipas againſt Archelaus, and died in the 12th Year of Jeſus Chriſt, and the 9th of the Vulgar Era, a little time after Archelaus had been baniſh'd to Vienne in Dauphine. A few Days before Herod died, he gave Orders to his Siſter Salome, and his Brother-in-law Alexas, that, as ſoon as he ſhould be dead, they ſhould put to Death all the chief Men of Judea, whom, a little before, he had brought together to Jericho, where he lay ſick. But Alexas and Salome could not perpetrate ſo barbarous an Action, but ſent all the Men away, as ſoon as Herod had given up the Ghoſt. Salome had five Children by Alexas; Berenice, Antipater, Calleas, and one Son and Daughter more, whoſe Names we do not find mentioned. II. SALOME, a Daughter of Herod the Great and Elpide. She marry'd one of the Sons of Pheroras. Joſ. Antiq. l. 17. c. 1.

III. SALOME the Dancer, the Daughter of Herodias, and of Herod-Philip the Tetrarch. She firſt marry'd Philip the Tetrarch her Uncle, and afterwards Ariſtobulus the Son of Herod King of Chalcis, by whom ſhe had three Sons, Herod, Agrippa, and Ariſtobulus. When Herodias left Philip the Tetrarch, her Daughter Salome went with her: And as John the Baptiſt did not forbear to cry out continually againſt this Inceſtuous Marriage of Herodias and Antipas, one Day, when this Prince was celebrating his Birth-day, or the Day of his Inauguration, Salome came into the Banqueting Room, and danced before the King and the Nobles that ſate with him. Antipas was ſo taken with Salome's Performance, that he promiſed to give her whatever ſhe ſhould aſk, even to the half of his Kingdom. She preſently went to tell her Mother what had been promis'd her, and deſired her Advice what ſhe ſhould aſk for. Herodias bid her aſk for the Head of John the Baptiſt. Salome came in again to the King, bringing a Diſh with her, and ſaid to him, Give me in this Diſh the Head of John the Baptiſt. The King was a little ſorry at this Demand; but becauſe he had given his Word, he would not go back from it: So he ſent immediately and had the Head of John the Baptiſt cut off, and given to Salome. Joſ. Antiq. l. 18. c.7.p.628. Mark vi. 17.18,19. Luke iii. 19.

Nicephorus and Metaphraſtes relate, that Salome accompanied her Mother Herodias, and her Father-in-law Herod, in their Baniſhment to Vienne in Dauphine; and that the Emperor having obliged them to go into Spain, as ſhe paſſed over a River that was frozen up, the Ice broke under her Feet, and ſhe ſunk in up to her Neck: Then the Ice uniting again, ſhe remain'd thus ſuſpended by it, and ſuffered the ſame Puniſhment ſhe had made John the Baptiſt undergo. But none of the Antients mention this Particular; and it is contrary to Joſephus, who tells us, that ſhe was firſt marry'd to Philip the Tetrarch, Son of Herod the Great and Cleopatra, who died about the 33d or 34th Year Nicephor. l. 1. c. 20.

of the Common Era; and that afterwards she married Aristobulus, Son of Herod King of Chalcis, her Cousin-german, by whom she had several Children. Thus she lived above thirty Years after the Exile of her Father-in-law Herod.

IV. SALOME, Mother of the seven Brethren Maccabees. The Book call'd The Government of Reason, ascribed to Josephus, gives her no particular Name. The Greeks, in their Calendar, call her Salome. The Son of Gorion calls her Anne; others name her Maccabæa. Erasmus, in his Paraphrase upon the Book of the Empire of Reason, calls her Salome.

V. SALOME. The Apocryphal Books [a] give this Name to a Woman, who desired to prove the Virginity of Mary after she had brought-forth.

VI. SALOME, Wife of Zebedæus, and Mother of St. James Major, and St. John the Evangelist. She was one of those holy Mat.xxvii. 56. Women who used to attend upon our Saviour in his Journies, and to minister to him. 'Twas she that requested of Jesus Christ, that her two Sons, James and John, might sit on his Right and Left Hand, when he should come into his Kingdom [b]. But the Son of God answer'd her, and her two Sons that were with her, [c] Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the Cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the Baptism that I am baptized with? They say unto him, We are able. And he saith unto them, Ye shall drink indeed of my Cup, and be baptized with the Baptism that I am baptized with; but to sit on my Right Hand, and on my Left, is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.

St. Salome gave a great Proof of her Faith, when she follow'd Jesus Christ to Mark xv. 40. Calvary, and did not forsake him even at Mat.xxvii. 55, 56. the Cross. She was also of the Number, of those holy Women who brought Per-
Mark xvi. 1, 2. fumes to embalm him, and who came, for this Purpose, to the Sepulchre on Sunday Morning early. As they went along, they said to one another, Who shall take away the Stone from the Mouth of the Sepulchre? for the Stone was a very great one. But when they came thither, they found it already removed; and entring into the Tomb, they there saw an Angel, who inform'd them, that Jesus Christ was risen. And as they were returning to Jerusalem, Matthew xxviii. 10. Jesus appear'd to them on the Way, and said to them, Be not afraid; go tell my Brethren, that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me. This is what the Scripture informs us of Salome the Mother of the Sons of Zebedee.

Some give her the Name of Mary Salome; Ita Martyrol. Rom. & alii.
but there is no good Proof of her being call'd Mary: And what some frivolous Histories relate of the three Maries, Mary the Mother of Jesus, Mary the Mother of James, and Mary Salome, deserves no Consideration. Others [d] make her the Daughter of St. Joseph. The Latin Martyrologies make the Feast of St. Salome on the 22d of October. The Roman Martyrology fixes her Death at Jerusalem: Others will have it, that she died in Provence, and that her Body is still there.

VII. SALOME, according to some, was the third Husband of St. Anne. John Gerson Chancellor of Paris quotes some Verses, which make him Father to the Salome just now mention'd, who was Mother to the two Apostles, St. James Major, and St. John the Evangelist.

> Anna tribus nupsit, Joachim, Cleophæ, Salomæque, Joan.Gers. serm. de Nativit. B.M.V.
> Ex quibus ipsa viris peperit tres Anna Marias, > Quas duxêre Joseph, Alphæus, Zebedæusque.
> Prima Jesum; Jacobum, Joseph, cum Simone Judam
> Altera dat; Jacobum dat tertia, datque Johannem.

But as this System of Genealogy has no Foundation in Antiquity, we can have but little Regard to it.

SALT, Sal; in Greek, Hals; in Hebrew, Melach. God appointed that Salt מלח, Melach; Ἅλς, Sal. should be used in all the Sacrifices that were offered to him: And every Oblation Lev.ii. 13.
of thy Meat-offering shalt thou season with Salt; neither shalt thou suffer the Salt of the Covenant of thy God to be lacking from thy Meat-offering: With all thine Offerings thou shalt offer Salt. Jesus Christ makes an Allusion to this, when, speaking of the Sufferings of the Damned, he says, For every one shall be salted with Fire, and Mark ix. 48.
every Sacrifice shall be salted with Salt. See also Deut. xxix. 23. The whole Land thereof is Brimstone, and Salt, and Burning.

that they did this, to dry up the Humidity that abounds in Children; and to close up the Pores, which are then too open. Galen Galen. de Sanit. l. 1. c. 7. says, that Salt hardens the Skins of Children, and makes them more firm. Avicenna acquaints us, that they bathed Children with Water in which Salt has been dissolved, to close up the Navel, and to harden the Skin. Others think, it was to hinder any Corruptions that might proceed from cutting off the Navel-string.

They follow'd his Orders: He threw this Salt into the Spring, and said; Thus saith the Lord, I have healed these Waters; and for the future they shall not be the Occasion either of Death or Barrenness. And in Reality, the Waters became good for Drinking, and lost all their former bad Qualities. Naturally the Salt must only have served to increase the Brackishness or Bitterness of this Fountain; but the Prophet purposely made use of a Remedy that seem'd contrary to the Effect he would produce, that the Miracle might become the more evident.

Ecclus. xxxix. 31. The Wiseman reckons up Salt in the Number of those Things that are most necessary for Life; as Water, Fire, Iron, Milk, Honey, Grapes, Oil, and Cloaths. Job asks if any one could eat that which is not salted: Aut poterit comedi in fulsum, quod non est sale conditum? Job vi. 6.

The Valley of Salt was situate in Idumea. See VALLEY.

II. The Salt of the Earth, is, probably, Marl, with which they manure their Land in some Countries, instead of Dung. See our Commentary upon Matth. v. 13.

III. Mineral Salt, or Salt that is dug out of Mines, in Form of a hard Stone. 'Tis thought that Lot's Wife was changed into a Statue of such Mineral Salt, that she became as a Rock or Stone of Salt. Gen. xix. 26.

IV. Salt is the Symbol of Wisdom: Let your Speech be always with Grace, seasoned with Salt, says St. Paul. And our Saviour says, Have Salt in your selves, and have Peace one with another. Col. iv. 6. Mark ix. 50.

V. Salt is the Symbol of Perpetuity and Incorruption. Thus they said of a Covenant, It is a Covenant of Salt for ever, before the Lord. And elsewhere, The Lord God of Israel gave the Kingdom over Israel to David for ever, even to him and to his Sons, by a Covenant of Salt. Numbers xviii. 19. 2 Chron. xiii. 5.

VI. Salt is the Symbol also of Barrenness and Sterility. When Abimelech took the City of Shechem, he destroy'd it, and sow'd the Place with Salt, that it might always remain desart and unfruitful. Judg. ix. 45. Zephaniah threatens the Ammonites and Moabites, from the Lord; Moab shall be as Sodom, and the Children of Ammon as Gomorrha, even the breeding of Nettles, and Salt-pits, and a perpetual Desolation. See also Job xxxiv. 6. Psal. cvi. 34. Jer. xvii. 6. Zeph. ii. 9.

VII. Salt is likewise the Symbol of Hospitality, and of that Fidelity that is due from Servants, Friends, Guests, and Domesticks, to those that entertain them and receive them at their Tables. The Governors of the Provinces beyond the Euphrates, writing to King Artaxerxes, tell him, Because we have Maintenance from the King's Palace, &c. which, in the Chaldee, is, Because we are salted with the Salt of the Palace. Ezr. iv. 14.

The Salt-sea: This is the Dead-sea, or the Lake Asphaltites. The Scripture and profane Writers sometimes give the Name of Salt to Asphaltus or Bitumen; whence it is that Moses, speaking of a burning or parching Salt, Salis ardore consumentur, means Asphaltus, Bitumen, or Pitch. Herodotus also makes mention of certain Lamps that were lighted up in Egypt, in which were put Salt, that is, Bitumen, or such-like combustible Matter. Gen. xiv. 3. Numb. xxxiv. 12. Deut. xxix. 23. Vulg.

The Valley of Salt. Interpreters generally place it to the South of Mare Mortuum, towards Idumea; because it is said in Scripture, that Abishai kill'd there eighteen thousand Idumeans; that Joab kill'd there twelve thousand of them; and that a long while after this, Amaziah King of Judah kill'd ten thousand Idumeans. Galen informs us, [a] that they made use of the Salt of the Lake Asphaltites to season their Meat; and that it was a stronger Caustic, and digested much more, than the other Salts; because (says he) it is more boiled. We see also by the Maccabees, that the Kings of Syria had Brine-pits in Judea. Ezekiel, ch. xlvii. 11. says, that the Shores and Marshes on the Dead-sea should be assigned for the Making of Salt. Mr. Halifax, in his Account of Palmyra, speaks of a great Plain all cover'd with Salt, from whence the whole Country round about is supply'd. This Plain is about a League from Palmyra, and extends it self towards the Eastern Parts of Idumea, the capital City of which was Bozra. David beat the Idumeans in the Valley of Salt, as he return'd from Syria of Zobah. It is very probable, that this Plain of Salt, is the Valley of Salt mention'd in Scripture. 2 Samuel viii. 13. 1 Chron. xviii. 12. Psal. lx. Tit. 2 Kings xiv. 7. 2 Chron. xxv. 11. 1 Macc. xi. 35. & x. 29.

SALTUS. This Word signifies a Forest. We read in the Books of Samuel and the Chronicles, of the Name Adeodatus filius Saltûs Polymitarius Beth-lehemites; but the Hebrew is, Elhanan the Son of Jaare-Oregim a Beth-lehemite *. This Elhanan is probably the same mention'd in 2 Sam. xxiii. 24. Elhanan the Son of Dodo of Bethlehem †. This Elhanan was one of the valiant Men of David's Army. 2 Sam. xxi. 19. 1 Chron. xx. 5. Vulgat.

The Hebrews but rarely make use of concrete Terms, as they are call'd, but often of abstracted. Thus, instead of saying, that God saves them, and protects them; they say, that God is their Salvation. Thus, Vox salutis, gaudium salutis, rupes salutis, scutum salutis, sagitta salutis, veritas salutis, cornu salutis, verbum salutis, arx salutis, &c. is as much as to say, a Voice declaring Deliverance; the Joy that attends the escaping a great Danger; a Rock where any one takes Refuge, and where he may be in Safety from his Enemy; a Buckler that secures them from the Arms of the Enemy; an Arrow that procures Safety and Liberty to a whole People; a Truth that saves us; a Horn or Ray of Glory, of Happiness, and Salvation; the Glory that attends those who have escaped out of some great Danger, &c.

SAMAEL. This is the Name that the Rabboth. in Deuter. cap. ult. fol. 302. Rabbins, in their myftical Commentaries upon the Pentateuch, give to the Prince of the Devils, who expected, with great Impatience, the Hour of Mofes's Departure, that he might feize him, and carry him to the Place where the Dead are detained. But St. Michael reproved him, and faid to him; O Wretch! fhouldft thou be joyful, while I fhed Tears? He quotes to him Mic. vii. 8. that Paffage of Micah; Rejoyce not againft me, O mine Enemy: When I fall, I fhall arife; when I fit in Darknefs, the Lord fhall be a Light unto me. He added; I fell when Mofes died; but I rofe again when Jofhua fucceeded him, and led the Hebrews into the Land of Promife. See SAMMAEL.

SAMARIA, the capital City of the Kingdom of Samaria, or of the Ten Tribes. It was built by Omri King of Ifrael, who began to reign in the Year of the World 1 Kings xvi. 24. 3079, and died in 3086. He bought the Hill Samaria of Shemer, or Shomeron, for two Talents of Silver, or for the Sum of Six hundred eighty four Pounds, feven Shillngs and fix Pence. It took the Name of Samaria, from Shemer the Owner of the Hill; tho' fome think there were already fome Beginnings of a City, becaufe before the Reign of Omri there is mention made of Samaria [a]. But others take this for a Prolepfis, or an Anticipation, in the Difcourfe of the Man of God, who fpeaks of Samaria under the Reign of Jeroboam.

However this be, it is certain that Samaria was no confiderable Place, and did not become the capital City of the Kingdom of Ifrael 'till after the Reign of Omri. Before him, the Kings of Ifrael dwelt at Shechem, or at Tirzah. Samaria was fituated Eufeb. in Dothaim. Merro, & Atharo. upon an agreeable and fruitful Hill, had an advantageous Situation, and was twelve Miles from Dothaim, twelve from Merrom, and four from Atharoth. Jofephus Jof. Antiq. l. 15. c. 11. fays, it was a Day's Journey from Jerufalem. Befides, tho' it was built upon an Eminence, yet it muft have Water in abundance; fince we find Medals ftruck in this City, whereon is reprefented the Goddefs Aftarta, treading a River under Foot; which proves it to have been well Jof. Antiq. l. 13. c. 18. watered. And Jofephus obferves, that when it was taken by John Hyrcanus the Prince of the Jews, he entirely demolifh'd it, and caufed even the Brook to flow over its Ruins, to obliterate all the Footfteps of it.

The Kings of Samaria omitted nothing to make this City the ftrongeft, the fineft, and the richeft that was poffible. Ahab built there a Palace of Ivory, that is, in 1 Kings xxii. 39. which there were many Ornaments of Ivory. Amos defcribes Samaria, under Jeroboam II. as a City funk into all Exceffes of Luxury and Effeminacy: I will Amos iii. 15. & iv. 1, 2. fmite (fays he) the Winter-houfe with the Summer-houfe, and the Houfes of Ivory fhall perifh, and the great Houfes fhall have an end, fays the Lord. Hear this Word, ye Kine of Bafhan, that are in the Mountain of Samaria, which opprefs the Poor, which crufh the Needy; which fay to their Mafters, Bring, and let us drink, &c.

Ben-hadad King of Syria built Publick Places or Streets in Samaria, probably, for 1 Kings xx. 34. Traffick, where his People dwelt, to promote Trade. His Son Ben-hadad befieged this Place, under the Reign of Ahab, in 1 Kings xx. 1, 2, 3. &c. the Year of the World 3103, before Chrift 897, before the Vulgar Era 901.

He came at the Head of thirty-two Kings, with a numerous Army, to lay 1 Kings xx. 1, 2, 3, &c. Siege to Samaria. Firft of all, Ben-hadad fent Ambaffadors to the King of Ifrael, to demand his Treafures, his Wives and Children, and whatever was deareft to him. Ahab finding himfelf too weak to oppofe him, confented to all that was propofed to him. But the Ambaffadors returning, infifted upon having whatever they fhould find, that they liked, in the Houfes of his Subjects alfo. Then Ahab call'd all the Elders of his People together, and acquainted them, That the King of Syria laid Snares for them; That he had furrender'd whatever belong'd to himfelf; but, not content with that, he demanded all that belong'd to them likewife. All the Elders reply'd, That they exhorted him, not to hearken to thefe Propofals, nor to fubmit to fuch unjuft Demands. Ahab then fent back the Meffengers, and told them; I will deliver up to you all that belongs to me, to buy a Peace, but I cannot give up the Goods that belong to my Subjects. Ben-hadad being provoked at this Anfwer of the King of Ifrael, fent Meffengers to threaten him, and gave Orders forthwith to befiege the City.

Then there came a Prophet to Ahab, and encourag'd him from the Lord, faying, Thus faith the Lord, Haft thou feen 1 Kings xx. 13, &c. all this great Multitude? Behold, I will deliver it into thine Hand this Day, and thou fhalt know that I am the Lord. And Ahab faid, By whom? And he faid, Thus faith the Lord, Even by the young Men of the Princes of the Provinces. Then he said, Who shall order the Battle? And he answered, Thou.

The King of Israel then made a Review of those young Men of the Princes, and found their Number to be Two hundred and thirty-two. Then he made a Review of all his People, and of the whole Army of the Children of Israel, and found them to the Number of Seven thousand. They made a Sally about Noon, while Ben-hadad was diverting himself in his Tent, eating and drinking with the thirty-two Kings that attended him in this Expedition. The young Men of the Princes marched at the Head of the Army of Israel. When Ben-hadad was informed, that some People were coming out of Samaria, he gave Orders, That whether they came to Fight, or to ask for Terms of Peace, they should be taken alive. The little Army of Israel came on, and every one began to kill all that came in their way. When the Syrians found themselves without any Leader at their Head, they presently gave ground, and began to fly. The Army of Israel pursued them briskly, and Ben-hadad was forced to take to his Horse, to save himself, and the other Kings also that were with him.

Observations upon the Investiture of Samaria, by Ben-hadad, and upon the Routing of his Army by the young Men of the Princes of Israel. 1 Kings xx.

☞ I thought I ought rather to make use of the Term Investing, than that of Siege, in this Attempt of Ben-hadad King of Syria, upon the City of Samaria. This Prince marched thither, in the Company of thirty-two Kings, or petty Princes, with an Intention of laying Siege to it, with a vast Preparation of Machines of War, and a very numerous Army; which made him speak very big, and conceive a great Assurance of Success. He encamped before the Place, and sent to summons Ahab King of Israel to surrender. The Conditions that Ben-hadad offered him by his Ambassadors, were such as were commonly granted to Cities taken by Storm, or upon the Point of being so. As if he had imagin'd, that a People secured within strong Walls, with their Arms in their Hands, their King at their Head, their Religion and Liberty to maintain, would be so cowardly as to surrender, upon such hard Conditions. This is what the King of Syria sends them Word by his Ambassadors; Thy Silver and thy Gold is mine, thy Wives also and thy Children, even the goodliest, are mine. We find, that Ahab paid an extraordinary Submission to these haughty Commands; and never any Vassal shewed a greater. He does not look upon himself as his Vassal and Tributary only; but, in his Answer to the Messengers of Ben-hadad, he seems to acknowledge, that himself and his whole People are of the Number of his Slaves. Without doubt, he must be terrify'd at the immense Number of the Syrian Troops; and he must think himself but little secure in the Place he was in, tho' he had near eight thousand Men of disciplin'd Troops. What does Ahab answer then to these Proposals? My Lord, O King, according to thy Saying, I am thine, and all that I have. Probably, he must mean, all that he had of his own, and what he could properly dispose of, and not what belong'd to his People, which he could not pretend to give away. No doubt but that Ben-hadad intended that this should be included also, and therefore he sent his Ambassadors back again, to acquaint him, Yet I will send my Servants unto thee to-morrow about this time, and they shall search thine House, and the Houses of thy Servants; and it shall be, that whatsoever is pleasant in thine Eyes, they shall put it in their Hand, and take it away. There is a great Difference, as the learned Commentator observes, between what was intended by Ahab, and what was claim'd by the King of Syria. The latter pretended absolutely to dispose of all the Goods, the Persons, and the Subjects belonging to the King of Israel, who only submitted, in Hopes to obtain moderate Terms, and that he might only be obliged to pay a Tribute, or to purchase Peace, and to ransom the Pillaging of the City. But when he saw that Ben-hadad's Designs were not only upon the Possessions, but the Liberty also of his People, he call'd his Elders together, and asked their Opinions. They all unanimously answered, Hearken not unto him, nor consent. Wherefore the King return'd this Answer to the Ambassadors; I consented to your first Proposals; but as to your last, tell the King my Lord, that I cannot comply with them: Hanc autem rem facere non possum.

At this Refusal of the King of Israel, the Ambassadors withdrew, and made their Report to Ben-hadad, who sent them back with bitter Menaces, to intimidate Ahab and his Subjects; and to raise in them an high Idea of his Power and Strength. This is what he makes them say; The Gods do so unto me, and more also, if the Dust of Samaria shall suffice for Handfuls for all the People that follow me. (1 Kings xx. 10.) This Hyperbole may surprize the Reader; yet I should not wonder, if the term pulvis Samariæ expresses the Force of the Original. But F. Calmet is of Opinion, that the Chaldee has much greater Force. All the Soil of the Country will not suffice for my People, if every one of 'em only takes away so much of it as will stick to his Shoes. This exceeds the most extravagant Gasconnade. Ahab's Answer is very good, and retrenches much of that unmeasurable Pride. Let not him that girdeth on his Harness boast himself, as he that putteth it off.

Ben-hadad received this Anſwer as he was drinking in the Shade, probably under an Arbor, with the other Kings. He immediately gave Orders to his People, that they ſhould ſurround the City, which they did. Ahab's Anſwer had ſo nettled him, that he reſolved to carry on the Siege in Form; for which Purpoſe he inveſted the City on all Sides, and even drew a Line of Circumvallation, to hinder any from going in, or coming out.

At the ſame time there came a Prophet to encourage the King of Iſrael, who brings this Meſſage from the Lord: I will confound the Pride of Benhadad, and of all the Kings that are with him. Haſt thou ſeen all this great Multitude? Behold, I will deliver it into thine Hand this Day, and thou ſhalt know that I am the Lord. Even by the young Men of the Princes of the Provinces, ſhall this formidable Army be put to Confuſion, that thou may'ſt know that I am the Lord. It is probable, as Father Calmet ſays, that theſe young Men of the Princes of the Provinces were Pages or young Gentlemen, bred up at the King's Court, who made a Review of them, and found them to be two hundred and thirty-two. And then reviewing the People, he found them to be ſeven thouſand of the Children of Iſrael.

They went out of the City about Noon; while Ben-hadad was drinking in his Tent, and perhaps drunk, with the thirty-two Kings that were come to his Aſſiſtance. What can be expected from a General, and a King that is drunk, and from thirty-two others that were guilty of the ſame Exceſs? One may eaſily conceive what thirty-three Drunkards could do on ſuch an Occaſion, who were fitter to lie down and ſleep, than to ſet themſelves at the Head of an Army.

The young Men of the Princes of the Provinces march'd forth at the Head of the Army; and Ben-hadad ſending out to know who they were, he was told, that they were People coming forth from Samaria. He then gave Orders, that whether they came to ſue for Peace, or to try the Event of War, they ſhould all be ſecured alive. It was not eaſy to ſeize a whole Embaſſy of ſeven thouſand, two hundred and thirty-two Men, who came againſt an Army without Generals, divided into ſeveral Bodies round the City, and of which there were hardly one perhaps in his right Senſes and Judgment; for, in Imitation of their Commanders, they might probably have been tippling too. In the mean time the young Men of the Princes advanced, and the reſt of the Army after them. That is to ſay, the ſmall Body compos'd of thoſe young Men, form'd, as it were, an Avant-guard, and firſt attack'd the Syrian Troops, who preſented themſelves in order to ſeize them; but they were repulſed, and driven back into their Camp. The main Body of the Iſraelitiſh Army follow'd cloſe after, and attack'd and cut in Pieces all they met in their March, ſpread Terror and Confuſion into the Army of Ben-hadad, who had but juſt Time enough to take to his Horſe, and to fly with the other Kings that accompany'd him.

I marſhal the Army of Iſrael in two Bodies, the Foot in the Center, and the Horſe in the Wings. For in the Battle of Aphek, which is mention'd preſently after, the ſacred Author ſays, The Children of Iſrael pitched before them, like two little Flocks of Kids; but the Syrians fill'd the Country; that is to ſay, they were divided into two Bodies, and made, as it were, two little Armies. Joab, the General of David's Army, thus divided his Forces into two Bodies in that Battle wherein he defeated the Syrians and the Ammonites. As to the Cavalry, I preſume they had ſome, becauſe they purſued the Syrians, who abounded in Forces of this Kind.

1 Kings xx. 27.

2 Sam. x. 9, 10.

What is very remarkable, and yet very common, is, that the King of Syria's Flatterers would aſcribe the Shame of their Defeat, not to the Pride and Drunkenneſs of their King, and of the other Kings; but to the Interpoſition of the Gods of the Jews: Their Gods are Gods of the Hills, ſay they, therefore they were ſtronger than we; but let us fight againſt them in the Plain, and ſurely we ſhall be ſtronger than they. This is the Manner in which the Defects of great Men are palliated, when they commit any Blunders; 'tis not their want of Conduct that is blamed, but their evil Fortune, which deprived them of Victory. Therefore theſe Flatterers adviſe Ben-hadad to ſend away all his Kings, and to put good Officers in their Place, to reinforce all his Army with the ſame Number of Soldiers, Horſes, and Chariots which he had loſt. But they did not adviſe him to diſmiſs that Pride that ſwell'd his Heart, that Inclination to Drunkenneſs, and all his other Vices. Wherefore the Lord deliver'd up his Army into the Hands of the Children of Iſrael, who cut them to Pieces, and by that gave them to underſtand, that he was the Almighty Lord, the God of the Plains, as well as of the Hills.

The following Year Ben-hadad brought an Army into the Field, probably, with a Deſign to march againſt Samaria; but his Army was again cut in Pieces. Some Years after this, [a] Ben-hadad came again, and lay down before Samaria, and reduced it to such Necessities by Famine, that a Mother was there forced to eat her own Child; but the City was relieved by a sensible Effect of the Protection of God. Lastly, it was besieged by Shalmaneser, 2 Kings xvii. 6, 7, &c. King of Assyria, in the ninth Year of Hoshea King of Israel, which was the fourth of Hezekiah, King of Judah, and the 3280th of the World. It was taken three Years after, in the Year of the World 3283, before Christ 720, before the vulgar Era 724. The Prophet Hosea speaks

Hos. x. 4, 8, 9. xiv. 1. of the Cruelties exercised by Shalmaneser
Mic. i. 6. against the Besieged; and Micah says, that this City was reduced to a Heap of Stones. The Cuthites that were sent by Esar-hadon to inhabit the Country of Samaria, did not think it worth their while to repair the Ruins of this City; they dwelt at Shechem, which they made the capital City of their State [a]. They were still upon this footing, when Alexander the Great came into Phenicia and Judea [b].

However, the Cuthites had rebuilt some of the Houses of Samaria, even from the Time of the Return from the Captivity, Ezr. iv. 17. Nehem. iv. 2. since Ezra then speaks of the Inhabitants of Samaria; and that the Samaritans being jealous of the Favours that Alexander the Great had conferr'd on the Jews, revolted from him while this Prince was in Egypt, and burnt Andromachus alive, whom this
Q. Curt. l. 4. c. 21. Prince had left Governor of Syria. Alexander marches against them, took Samaria, and put in Macedonians to inhabit it [c], giving the Country round about it to the Jews, and to encourage them to cultivate it, he granted them an Exemption from Tribute. [d] The Kings of Egypt and Syria, who succeeded Alexander, deprived them of the Property of this Country.

But Alexander Balas King of Syria, restored to Jonathan Maccabæus the Cities of Lydda, Ephrem, and Ramatha, which he cut off from the Country of Samaria [e]. Lastly, the Jews re-enter'd into the full Possession of this whole Country under Johannes Hyrcanus the Asmonean, who took Samaria, and ruin'd it in such a manner, according to Josephus [f], that he made the River run through its Ruins. It continued in this Condition to the Year of the World 3947, when Aulus Gabinius, the Proconsul of Syria, rebuilt it, and gave it the Name of Gabiniana. [g] But it was yet but very inconsiderable, till Herod the Great restor'd it to its antient Lustre, and gave it the Greek Name of Sebaste, which in Latin is Augusta, in Honour of the Emperor Augustus, who had given him the Propriety of this Place [h].

The sacred Authors of the New Testament speak but little of Samaria; and when they do mention it, 'tis rather in respect of the Country about it, than of the City itself. For Example, when it is said, He Luk. xvii. 11. John iv. 4.
passed through the midst of Samaria; the Meaning is, he pass'd through the midst of the Country about Samaria. And again, Then cometh he to a City of Samaria which John iv. 5.
is called Sychar. 'Twas there where he had the Conversation with the Woman of Samaria, that is, with a Samaritan Woman of the City of Sychar. After the Death of St. Stephen, when the Disciples were dispersed through the Cities of Judea and Acts viii. 1, 2, 3.
Samaria, St. Philip the Deacon withdrew into the City of Samaria, where he made several Converts. When the Apostles heard that this City had received the Word of God, they sent Peter and John thither, to communicate the Holy Ghost to such as had been baptized. 'Twas there they found Simon Magus, who offer'd Money to the Apostles, being in hopes to buy this Power of communicating the Holy Ghost. Samaria is never call'd Sabaste in the Books of the New Testament, tho' Strangers hardly knew it but by this Name. St. Jerome says, [i] that it was thought Obadiah was buried at Samaria. They also shew'd there the Tombs of Elisha and of St. John the Baptist [k]. There are found many antient Medals that were struck at Sabaste or Samaria, and some Bishops of this City have subscribed to the antient Councils.

SAMARITANS. We have already spoken of the Samaritans, under the Title Cuthites. The Samaritans are the People of the City of Samaria, and the Inhabitants of the Province, of which Samaria was the capital City. In this Sense it should seem, that we might give the Name of Samaritans to the Israelites of the ten Tribes, who lived in the City and Territory of Samaria. However, the sacred Authors commonly give the Name of Samaritans only to those strange People, whom the Kings of Assyria sent from beyond the Euphrates, to inhabit the Kingdom of Samaria, when they took away Captive the Israelites that were there before. Thus we may fix the Epoch of the Samaritans at the taking of Samaria by Shalmaneser, in the Year of the World 3283. This Prince carry'd away Captive the Israelites that he found in the Country, and assign'd them Dwellings beyond the Euphrates, and in Assyria. He sent other Inhabitants in their stead, of which the 2 Kings xvii. 24.

most considerable were the Cuthites, a People descended from Cush, and who are probably of the Number of those, whom the Antients knew by the Name of Scythians.

After Shalmaneser, his Successor Esar-haddon being inform'd, that the People which had been sent to Samaria, were infested by Lyons that devoured them; [a] this he imputed to the Ignorance of the People in the Manner of worshipping the God of the Country. Wherefore Esar-haddon sent a Priest of the God of Israel, that he might teach them the Religion of the Hebrews. But they thought they might blend this Religion with that they profess'd before; so they continued to worship their Idols as before, in Conjunction with the God of Israel, not perceiving how absurd and incompatible these two Religions were.

'Tis not known how long they continued in this State; but at the Return from the Captivity of Babylon, it appears they had intirely quitted the Worship of their Idols; and when they ask'd Permission of the Israelites, that they might labour with them at the rebuilding of the Temple of Jerusalem, [b] they affirm'd, that from the Time that Esar-haddon had brought them into this Country, they had always
Esr. iv. 1, 2, 3. worshipp'd the Lord. And indeed after the Return from the Captivity, the Scripture does not any where reproach them with idolatrous Worship, tho' it does not dissemble either their Jealousy against the Jews, nor the ill Offices they had done them at the Court of Persia, by their Slanders and Calumnies, or the Stratagems they contrived to hinder the repairing of the Walls of Jerusalem [c].

It does not appear there was any Temple in Samaria, in common to all these People who came thither from beyond the Euphrates, before the coming of Alexander the Great into Judea. Before that Time every one was left to his own Discretion, and worshipp'd the Lord where he thought fit. But they presently comprehended, from the Books of Moses which they had in their Hands, and from the Example of the Jews their Neighbours, that God was to be worshipp'd in that Place only which he had chosen. So that since they could not go to the Temple of Jerusalem, which the Jews would not allow of, they bethought themselves of building a Temple of their own upon Mount Gerizim, near the City of Shechem, which was then their Capital. Therefore Sanballat the Governor of the Samaritans, apply'd himself to Alexander, [d] and told him he had a Son-in-law, call'd Manasses, Son to Jaddus the High-priest of the Jews, who had retired to Samaria with a great Number of other Persons of his own Nation; that he desir'd to build a Temple in his Province, where he might exercise the High-priesthood; that this Undertaking would be to the Advantage of the King's Affairs, because in building a Temple in the Province of Samaria, the Nation of the Jews would be divided, who are a turbulent and seditious People, and by such a Division would be made weaker, and less in a Condition to undertake new Enterprizes.

Alexander readily consented to what Sanballat desir'd, and the Samaritans presently began their building of the Temple of Gerizim, which from that Time they have always frequented, and still frequent to this Day, as the Place where the Lord intended to receive the Adoration of his People. 'Tis of this Mountain, and of this Temple, that the Samaritan Woman of Sychar said to our Saviour; Our Fathers John iv. 20.
worshipped in this Mountain, and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the Place where Men ought to worship. See the Article GERIZIM before, where we have mention'd the several Changes of Fortune that have happen'd to this Temple.

The Samaritans did not long continue under the Obedience of Alexander. They revolted from him the very next Year [e], and Alexander drove them out of Samaria, put Macedonians in their room, and gave the Province of Samaria to the Jews. This Preference that Alexander gave to the Israelites, contributed not a little to increase that Hatred and Animosity that had already obtain'd between these two People. When any Israelite had deserved Punishment, for the Violation of some important Point of the Law, he presently took Refuge in Samaria or Shechem, and embraced the way of Worship according to the Temple of Gerizim. [f] When the Jews were in a prosperous Condition, and Affairs were favourable to 'em, the Samaritans did not fail to call themselves Hebrews, and pretended to be of the Race of Abraham. But no sooner were the Jews fallen into Discredit or Persecution, but the Samaritans immediately disown'd them, would have nothing in common with them, acknowledg'd themselves to be Phenicians originally, [g] or that they were descended from Joseph and Manasseh his Son. This us'd to be their Practice in the Time of Antiochus Epiphanes [h].

When this Prince would have compell'd the Jews to renounce their Religion, and to conform to that of the Gentiles, they withstood him with great Resolution, and underwent the last Extremities, rather than abandon the God of their Fore-fathers. But the Samaritans wrote in another Strain to Antiochus; that being originally Sidonians or Phenicians, and being now settled at Shechem, they found themselves under a Necessity, by reason of many Misfortunes that had happen'd to 'em, to conform to certain Customs and Usages of the Jews, as the Observation of the Sabbath; that they had built a Temple upon Mount Gerizim, which had not been dedicated to any particular Deity; [a] that since he had thought fit to shew the Jews the Effects of his Indignation, to chastise them for their Wickedness, they besought him not to confound them with this People; since they were ready to obey his Commands, and to consecrate their Temple to the Grecian Jupiter. Antiochus admitted their Plea, and wrote to the Governors of Samaria, to give the Samaritans no Disturbance upon the Account of their Religion.

Alexander the Great carry'd with him into Egypt six thousand Samaritans, [b] which Sanballat had sent him from Tyre, as auxiliary Troops. He appointed them Lands in Thebais, and trusted them with the Security of that Province. In this Country, and throughout all Egypt, these Samaritans retain'd their antient Antipathy against the Jews, maintaining that Mount Gerizim was the true Place where God was to be worshipp'd; and the Jews, on the contrary, that it was only the Temple of Jerusalem. This Dispute was managed with such Warmth between them, that it grew into a kind of Sedition, and King Philometor himself would take Cognizance of the Affair. [c] It was therefore argued in his Presence, and it was agreed between the contending Parties, that no Proofs should be admitted but what should be taken out of the Books of the Law, and that the Advocates that lost their Cause should be put to Death. One call'd Sabæus and Theodorus defended the Samaritans; and Andronicus, the Son of Messalami was Advocate for the Jews. These latter gain'd their Suit, and the King condemned to Death the Advocates of the Samaritans.

We do not warrant the Truth of this Fact, tho' it is affirm'd by Josephus in a very circumstantial manner. [d] But we give still less Credit to what the Samaritans relate themselves to their own Advantage in their Chronicon, [e] which was compos'd since Constantine's Time, and under the Christian Emperors. They imagine that Joshua, the General of the People of God, caus'd a Temple to be built upon Gerizim, and there appointed Rus, one of the House of Aaron, to perform divine Service. They produce a Succession of Highpriests, who they pretend have officiated here, quite from the Time of Joshua, down to the present Age, without any Interruption. They will not admit that Jeroboam the Son of Nebat, was the first Author of their Schism; nor own the Transplantation of the Israelites by Tiglath-pileser and Shalmaneser. They tell us, that the Kings of Syria in Confederacy with the King of Jerusalem, made an Insurrection against Bachtnezer King of the Persians. (For so they call Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon.) This Prince brought an Army into the Field, took Jerusalem, pass'd from thence to Shechem, gave the Inhabitants but seven Days to quit the Country, and threatned those with the severest Punishment that should dare to continue in it beyond this Time.

At the same Time he sent other People into Samaria and Judea, to inhabit the Cities thus forsaken. But these new Inhabitants could not live there, because the Fruits, which otherwise appear'd fair, contain'd a Poison in them that was mortal to all that eat of them. When Bachtnezer was inform'd of this, he consulted the former Inhabitants upon this Matter. They declared to him that this Evil would not be remedied, till the Hebrews were sent back, who had been unjustly driven away. They were allow'd then to return into their own Country again. They obtain'd an Edict that they should all assemble together to one Place, and all depart together. There arose a Dispute among the Samaritans, Sons of Joseph and Aaron, and the Jews, whether they should return to Jerusalem, and rebuild the Temple of Mount Sion; or whether they should go to Shechem, to rebuild that of Mount Gerizim. Zerubbabel, who espoused the Part of the Jews, maintain'd, that Jerusalem was the Place mark'd out by the Writings of the Prophets. Sanballat, who stood up for Gerizim, alledged, that the Writings appeal'd to had been corrupted. The Determination of this Difference was referr'd to the Fire. The Copy of Zerubbabel was consumed in an Instant; whereas that of Sanballat resisted the Fire in three Tryals. For this Reason the King honour'd Sanballat, made him Presents, and sent him back at the Head of the ten Tribes, who went to take Possession of Mount Gerizim and Samaria.

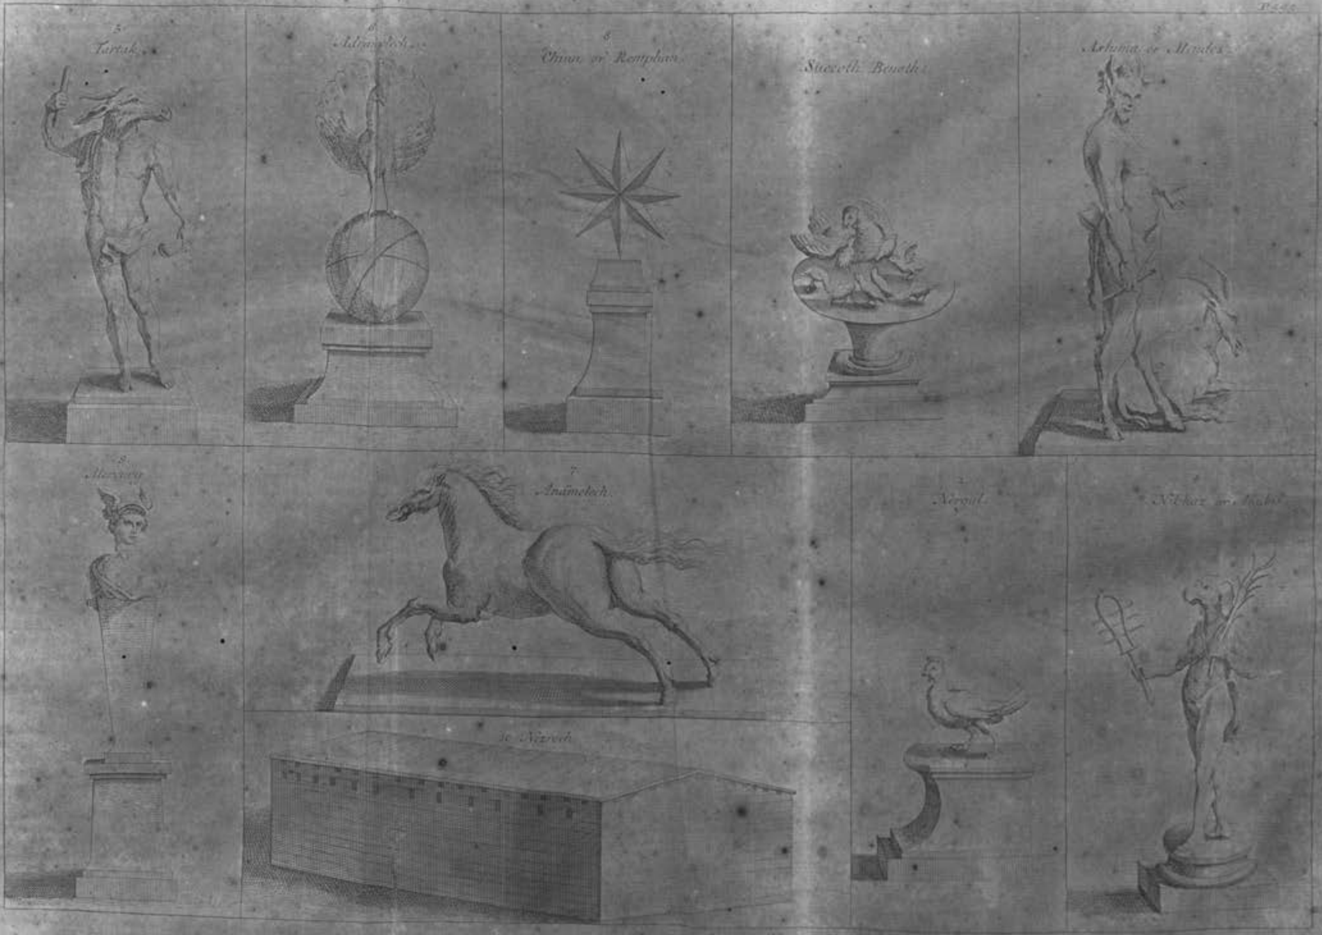
We



SEVERAL FALSE GODS WORSHIPPED BY THE SAMARITANS.

We need not give our selves any Trouble to refute this History, which is inconsistent with it self. We have the sacred Histories of the Kings, the Chronicles, the Books of Ezra and Nehemiah, and the Writings of the Prophets, which inform us of the Time, the Cause, the Circumstances of the coming of the Cuthites into the Country of Samaria; the Cause and the Manner in which they embraced the Law of the Jews. And Josephus has acquainted us with the History and Original of the Temple of Gerizim. The Monuments produced by the Samaritans are too modern, they have too much the Appearance of a Fiction, and are contradicted by Accounts of too undoubted Authority, to deserve the least Credit. The Rabbins have added to the History of Nehemiah, some Circumstances much to the Disadvantage of the Samaritans. They tell us that these People, to the Number of one hundred and fourscore thousand Men, going to beset Jerusalem; Ezra and Nehemiah got together three hundred Priests, who excommunicated them according to the greater Excommunication. These Priests were attended by three hundred young Boys, carrying a Copy of the Law in one Hand, and a Trumpet in the other. They sounded the Trumpet at the same Time that the Cuthites were excommunicated by the Priests. They cursed whoever should eat Bread with them, with as heavy a Curse as if they should eat Pork. They asked of God, that they might have no Part in the future Resurrection, and that they might never be allow'd to become Proselytes. This terrify'd the Cuthites in such a manner, that they all betook themselves to Flight.

The Samaritans having received the Pentateuch, or the five Books of Moses, from the Priest that was sent by Esar-haddon, have preserved it to this Day, in the same Language and Character it was then, that is, in the old Hebrew or Phenician Character, which we now call the Samaritan, to distinguish it from the modern Hebrew Character, which we now find in the Books of the Jews. They after their Captivity changed their old Characters, and took up those of the Chaldees, which they had been us'd to at Babylon, and which they continue still to use. 'Tis wrong to give this the Name of the Hebrew Character, for that can be said properly only of the Samaritan Text. The Criticks have taken notice of some Variations between the Pentateuch of the Jews and that of the Samaritans; but these Varieties of reading chiefly regard the Word Gerizim, which the Samaritans seem to have purposely introduced, to favour their Pretensions, that Mount Gerizim was the Place in which the Lord was to be adored. The other various Readings are of small Importance.

The Religion of this People was at first the Pagan. Every one worshipped the Deity they had been us'd to in their own Country. The Babylonians worshipp'd Succoth-benoth; the Cuthites, Nergal; the Hamathites, Ashima; the Avites, Nibhaz & Tartak; the Sepharvites, Adrammelech and Anammelech. (2 Kings xvii. 25.) If we would enumerate all the Names of false Gods, to whom the Samaritans have paid a sacrilegious Worship, we should have enough to do. This Matter is sufficiently perplex'd, by reason of the different Names by which they were adored by different Nations, insomuch that it would be almost impossible to clear up this Affair. We shall content our selves to relate those only, of which mention is made in Scripture, and of which we find something in antient Monuments. (2 Kings xvii. 30, 31. & alibi.) The Reader may see them represented in the Plate we have caused to be here exhibited.

1. Succoth-benoth signifies the Tents of the young Women. 'Tis believed, [a] that the Scripture would here mark out these infamous Places, where the Babylonish Women were us'd to prostitute themselves once in their Lives, to the Honour of Mylitta, and for the Benefit of her Temple. Selden [b] will have it, that the Name of Venus is derived from Benoth. 'Tis perhaps Venus propagatrix, or Venus with her Harlots, represented under the Similitude of a Hen with her Chickens.

2. Nergal. She was a Goddess that was worshipped under the Form of a wooden Hen, according to the Rabbins, and several Interpreters. (Grot. Mun. alii.) Others think it to be the perpetual Fire, which in Persia was worshipp'd in Honour of the Sun. The Hebrew Word Nergal [c], may literally signify Light, or the Fire that flames, that sparkles, that rouls.

3. Ashima, or Mendez. The Rabbins describe this Deity to us, some under the Shape of a Goat without Hair [d]; others [e] as a Satyr, or as the Poets describe the God Pan. But all this to me seems very uncertain.

4. Nibhaz, or Anubis, was represented under the Form of a Dog, according to the Jews. The only Proof they give of it is, that in Hebrew, Nabuch signifies to bark. (Latrare.) We know that the Egyptians worshipp'd Dogs, and that Anubis, one of their Deities, had the Head of a Dog.

Omnigenûmq; Deûm monstra, & latrator Anubis. (Virg. Æneid. viii. v. 698.)

5. Tartak,

Tartak, תרתק

5. Tartak had the Head of an Aſs, as the Jews affirm. It is no Hebrew Word. Perhaps it may be the ſame as Sar-ſak. Sar in the Hebrew ſignifies a Prince. Sak was a Prince, or a Babyloniſh God, that was very famous. The Feaſts called Sacæa are mentioned by profane Authors[a]. Thus Tartak, according to the Chaldean Pronunciation, may ſignify the God Sak.

שר Shar, princeps. שכ or שק Saca.

6. Adrammelech may be Juno, repreſented under the Form of a Peacock, or a kind of Pheaſant.

7. Anammelech is under the Figure of a Horſe. The Agreement that may be obſerved between the Victims offered to theſe Deities, and to Moloch the God of the Ammonites, and to Saturn the Deity of the Phenicians, has made many imagine, that they were only the ſame Idol under different Names.

8. Chiun, or Remphan, is commonly explained by Saturn, one of the ſeven Plants, repreſented by a great Star. Interpreters have been at great Pains to diſcover who this Deity was. The Reader may conſult what we have ſaid in the Diſſertation concerning the Idolatry of the Iſraelites in the Deſart, before our Commentary upon the twelve leſſer Prophets.

9. Mercury. This Divinity is ſufficiently known. He was the God of Eloquence, the Meſſenger and Interpreter of the Gods; for which Reaſon the Greeks called him Hermes. In the Acts St. Paul was taken for Mercury, becauſe of his Eloquence, and the Vehemence of his Diſcourſe.

Acts xiv. 11.

2 Kings xix. 37.

10. Niſroch. The Scripture ſays, that Sennecharib was aſſaſſinated by his two Sons, Adrammelech and Sharezer, as he was worſhipping his God Niſroch, in his Temple at Nineveh. We do not exactly know who this God was. M. Baſnage believes[b], that it is Janus repreſented by Noah's Ark, perhaps becauſe Noah had ſeen both Worlds, having lived both before and after the Deluge; for, as 'tis known, Janus had two Faces, one before, and the other behind, becauſe he comprehended both the Time paſt and preſent, as being the God of Time. They have included all the Gods worſhipped by the Samaritans, in theſe four Verſes,

Numina, quæ Samaria colat, vis ſcire? tuere,
Semi-hominemq; aſinum, ſemi-hominemq; canem.
En Capriceps, Gallina, Pavo, ſaxumq; Trigonum,
Et ſidus cœli: Numinis illa loco.

2 Kings xvii. 29, 30, 31, 32.

Afterwards, to this prophane Worſhip the Samaritans added that of the Lord, the God of Iſrael. They gave a Proof of their little Regard to this Worſhip of the True God, when under Antiochus Epiphanes, they conſecrated their Temple at Gerizim to Jupiter Argivus. In the Time of Alexander the Great, they celebrated the Sabbatical Year, and conſequently the Year of Jubilee alſo. We do not know whether they did it exactly at the ſame time as the Jews, or whether they obſerved any other Epoch; and 'tis to little Purpoſe that ſome Criticks have attempted to aſcertain the firſt Beginning of it. Under the Kings of Syria they followed the Epoch of the Greeks, or that of the Seleucidæ, as other People did that were under the Government of the Seleucidæ. After that Herod had re-eſtabliſhed Samaria, and had given it the Name of Sebaſte, the Inhabitants of this City, in their Medals, and all publick Acts, took the Date of this new Eſtabliſhment. But theſe Inhabitants of Samaria, of which the greater Part were Pagans or Jews, were no Rule to the other Samaritans, who probably reckoned their Years according to the Reigns of the Emperors they were ſubject to, till the Time they fell under the Juriſdiction of the Mahometans, under which they live at this Day; and they reckon their Year by the Hegira, or, as they ſpeak, according to the Reign of Iſhmael, or the Iſhmaelites.

Some of the Antients, as Epiphanius and St. Auſtin, have placed the Samaritans upon the Foot of Hereticks; but they were rather Schiſmaticks in reſpect to the Jews. They have no more relation to the Chriſtian Religion than the Jews have, ſince they do not acknowledge Jeſus Chriſt as the Meſſiah, and are in Expectation of another. As to their Belief, 'tis objected to them as an Error, that they receive only the Pentateuch, and reject all the other Books of Scripture, chiefly the Prophets, who have more expreſly declared the Coming of the Meſſiah. However, they ſay, in their Letter to M. Ludolph, that they admit the Book of Joſhua; but probably, by this Name they mean no other than their own Chronicon. They have alſo been accuſed of believing God to be Corporeal, of denying the Holy Ghoſt, and the Reſurrection of the Dead[c]. Jeſus Chriſt reproaches them with worſhipping what they know not. John iv. 22. Epiphanius ſays, they worſhipped the Teraphims that Rachel brought away from Laban, and which Jacob hid under Ground. Laſtly, 'tis ſaid, they paid a ſuperſtitious Worſhip to a Pigeon, or to the Repreſentation of one[d], and that they even gave Circumciſion in the Name of a Pigeon. M. Reland, in his Letter to M. Baſnage, maintains, that they deny the Exiſtence of Angels; and Leontius among the Antients, had already aſſerted, that they denied Angels, and the Immortality of the Soul.

Joh. iv. 22. Jesus Christ seems to exclude them from Salvation, when he says, that Salvation is of the Jews. True it is, that these Words might only signify, that the Messiah was to proceed from the Jews; but the Crime of Schism alone, and a Separation from the True Church, was sufficient to exclude them from Salvation. The Samaritan Woman is sufficient Testimony that the Samaritans (Joh. iv. 25.) expected a Messiah, who they hoped would clear up all their Doubts. Several of the Inhabitants of Shechem believed at the preaching of Jesus Christ, and several of Samaria believed at that of St. Philip; but it is said, they soon fell back to their former Errors, being perverted by Simon Magus. (Vide Lightfoot in Mat. x. 5.) Josephus informs us [a], that a certain Impostor having persuaded the Samaritans, that he would make a Discovery of some sacred Vessels that Moses [b] had hid in a hollow Place of the Mountain; the credulous People followed him, and took Possession of a pretty large Town called Tirataba, where they staid for the rest of the Nation, who were to be Spectators of this Sight. But Pilate being jealous of some intended Insurrection, sent some Troops against the Multitude, who were easily dispersed, and the Ringleaders of this Assembly were punished with Death.

As to the present Samaritans, we may see by their Letters written to their pretended Brethren of England, and to Scaliger, that they believe in God, in his Servant Moses, the holy Law, the Mountain Gerizim, the House of God, the Day of Vengeance and of Peace; that they value themselves upon observing the Law of Moses, in many Points, more rigidly than the Jews themselves. They keep the Sabbath with the utmost Strictness required by the Law, without stirring from the Place they are in, but only to the Synagogue. They go not out of the City, and abstain from Marriage on that Day. They never delay Circumcision beyond the eighth Day. They still sacrifice to this Day in the Temple on Mount Gerizim, and give to the Priest what is injoin'd by the Law. They do not marry their own Nieces, as the Jews do, nor do they allow themselves a Plurality of Wives.

Their Hatred for the Jews may be seen through all the History of Josephus, and in several Places of the New Testament. The Jewish Historian informs us [c], that under the Government of Coponius, one Passover-Night, when they opened the Gates of the Temple, some Samaritans had scattered the Bones of dead Men there, to insult the Jews, and to interrupt the Devotion of the Festival. The Evangelists shew us, that the Jews (Joh. iv. 9.) and Samaritans hold no Correspondence together. The Jews have no Dealings with the Samaritans. And the Samaritan Woman of Sychar was much surprized, that Jesus talked with her, and asked Drink of her, being a Samaritan. When our Saviour sent his Apostles to preach in Judea, he forbad them to enter into the Samaritan (Mat. x. 5.) Cities, because he looked upon them as Schismaticks, and as Strangers to the Covenant of Israel. One Day when he sent his Disciples to provide him a Lodging in one of the Cities of the Samaritans, they would not entertain him, because they perceived (Luke ix. 52, 53.) he was going to Jerusalem. Because his Face was as though he would go to Jerusalem. And when the Jews were provoked at the Reproaches of Jesus Christ, they told him he was a Samaritan, thinking they could say nothing more severe against him. (John viii. 48.) Josephus relates [d], that some Samaritans having killed several Jews as they were going to the Feast at Jerusalem, this occasioned a kind of a War between them. The Samaritans continued their Fealty to the Romans, when the Jews revolted from them; yet they did not escape however from being involved in some of the Calamities of their Neighbours. See Josephus de bello, l. 3. c. 22.

(Lib. Josue apud Hotting. p. 116.) The Chronicon Samaritanum says, that the Emperor Adrian having raz'd Jerusalem, passed on to Naplouse, otherwise Shechem, and took all their Books from them, not leaving so much as their Genealogies and Histories. They were forbid to circumcise their Children, but they sent them, as fast as they were born, into the Caverns of the Earth, where they received the Sacrament of the Covenant, and they did not return till they were cured. The Romans mingled Hog's-Flesh in the Feasts of the Samaritans, who were forced to use their Industry to avoid the eating of it. They placed a Pigeon upon Mount Gerizim, to hinder them from going thither to worship; and they posted Troops at the Foot of the Mountain, to stop those that would go up notwithstanding the Prohibition. Some of 'em were bold enough to attempt going up, and cunning enough to escape the Watch; but the Bird discovered them, and cried out, To the Hebrew. The Guards at this awoke, and slew those that were coming up.

This Calamity continued till Babar-raba sent one of his Nephews, called Levi, to go through a Course of Study at Constantinople. This young Man made so great a Progress in Learning, that he was made Patriarch, and obtained of the Emperor the Liberty of returning to Gerizim. His Design was to free his Nation from the Yoke of the Romans, and to restore it to its former Liberty. We are not told what became of him afterwards, for there ends the Chronicon of the Samaritans. And what it says of the City of Constantinople, is a sufficient Proof that this Chronicon can't be antient. Justin Martyr assures us, that when the Emperor Antoninus Pius granted the Jews the Liberty of circumcising their Children, he excepted the Samaritans. This holy Man being himself of Shechem, might be well informed of this Fact. Symmachus, the famous Translator of the holy Scriptures out of the Hebrew into Greek, was a Samaritan. He left his Country, and became a Jew, and for this received a second Circumcision.

Just. Mart.

Under the Empire of Zeno, the Samaritans made themselves a King in the City of Naplouse, and kill'd a great Number of Christians. But Zeno punished them severely for it, and put their King to Death. They revolted again under the Empire of Justinian, burnt the Churches of the Holy Land, and massacred many Christians; and among others the Bishop of Naplouse. Their Rage proceeded so far, that the Emperor Justinian was forced to send some regular Troops against them, who destroyed most of the Rebels.

The Chronicon of the Samaritans, called Tarik Samari, intimates, that the Samaritans separated from the antient Jews after the Death of Samson, under the Pontificate of the High-Priest Eli; because, they say, it was then that the Presence and Favour of the Lord, which they call Redhat, and Redhonan, departed from them, and that then Darkness expelled the Light, and involved all those that were in Palestine, except those that then withdrew upon Mount Gerizim, where they have always had Priests since that time, and afterwards Kings of their own to govern them. They also affirm, that the Prophet Samuel was a Magician, and that all his Successors were Apostates from true Judaism.

D'Herbelot, Bibl. Orient. p. 753.

There are still at this Day [a] some Samaritans at Shechem, othewise called Naplouse. They have Priests there, who say they, are of the Family of Aaron. They have a High-Priest, who resides at Shechem, or at Gerizim, who offers Sacrifices there, and who declares the Feast of the Passover, and all the other Feasts, to all the dispersed Samaritans. Some of 'em are to be found at Gaza, some at Damascus, and some at Grand-Cairo. Scaliger received a Letter from the Samaritans of Shechem, printed in 1676. They have also writ since that to their pretended Brethren in England, and M. Ludolf printed a Letter in 1688, which he received from them.

Epiph. de ponder. & mentur.

Those that would be more particularly informed of the History, the Creed, the Ceremonies of the Samaritans, may consult the Letters we have now mentioned, Hottinger, Cellarius, the Horæ Hebraicæ of Lightfoot, and the Continuation of the History of Josephus by M. Basnage, through the whole eighth Book, where he gives an Account of the Samaritan Chronicon, and of the Works that have been composed on their Occasion.

Samaritan in the Books of the Jews, is a Term of Injury and Reproach. Say we not well that thou art a Samaritan, and hast a Devil? said the Jews to Jesus Christ, in their Indignation. Our Saviour (as has been already said) would not suffer his Disciples to preach in the Cities of the Samaritans; In Civitates Samaritanorum ne intraveritis. To prove that there are no Persons whatever, but what are our Neighbours, even those from whom we are the most estranged, our Saviour in his Parable of the Jew that was wounded, on his Journey between Jerusalem and Jericho, says it was a Samaritan that had Compassion upon him. The Samaritan Woman (as has been observed) was not a little surprized, to find that Jesus Christ conversed with her, and asked Drink from her who was a Samaritan; for, as the Evangelist adds, the Samaritans and Jews have no Correspondence with each other. Non enim co-utuntur Judæi Samaritanis. The Author of Ecclesiasticus places the Samaritans among those People for whom he has the greatest Abhorrence. There be two manner of Nations which my Heart abhorreth, and the third is no Nation. They that sit upon the Mountain of Samaria *, and they that dwell amongst the Philistines, and that foolish People that dwell in Sichem. These last are the Samaritans, the most odious of all.

The Samaritan Woman converted by Jesus Christ. See the Article PHOTINA The Martyrologies put her Feast upon the Twentieth of March; and this is an Abstract of what the Greeks inform us about her. When Photina was converted by Jesus Christ, or even by St. Peter, for these Acts mention St. Peter also, she instructed her whole Family, composed of two Sons, Joseph and Victor, with Anatolina, Photo, Photis, Parascue, and Cyriaca, who were her Sisters. Photina went into Africa, where she converted the whole City of Carthage to Christianity, under the Empire of Nero. Victor, Son to Photina, was one of the Emperor's Generals, and the Greeks say he commanded his Armies against the People call'd Avari. But the Spaniards say he was sent against the Rebels of Braga in Spain, and that he was Governor of the City Italica in Andalusia.

Victor received Orders from Nero to put to Death all the Christians in his Government. The General of the Troops knowing that Victor had been baptized by St. Peter, made great Remonstrances to him on this Head, but could gain nothing upon the Mind of Victor. God struck this General, and took from him the Use of his Speech. At the End of three Days he was enlightned of God, recovered his Speech, and cried out; That there was but one only God, which was the God of the Christians. He was then forthwith instructed and baptized by Victor.

Nero being informed of what had passed in Africa, by the Preaching of Photina, and what had happened in Spain by the Constancy of her Son Victor, ordered that the whole Family should be brought to Rome. Jesus Christ appeared to them on the Way, and encouraged them. Photina presented to the Emperor her two Sisters Photo and Photis. Nero caused them to be tortured, and then sent his own Daughter Arethusa to them, with a large Quantity of Pearls and precious Stones, thinking to corrupt them. Photina seeing her coming, cried out to her, Spouse of the Lord, you are welcome. To which the Princess replied, Madam, my Mistress, the Brightness of Jesus Christ, the Lord be with you. The Princess became a Convert, and an hundred young Women that attended on her, and they were immediately baptized by Photina. Nero was so provoked, that he would have 'em all poisoned; but Lampadius the Magician, who prepared the Poison, became a Convert also, as soon as he perceived that his Poison had no Effect upon them. No Cruelties were spared to shake their Resolution; but when it was found that all was ineffectual, they were flay'd alive. One need but read this Story, in order to be convinced of its being fabulous. So that it is quite needless to stand to confute it.

Samaritan-Pentateuch. This is the Collection of the five Books of Moses written in Samaritan Characters, or the antient Hebrew Characters, which were in Use before the Captivity of Babylon. I have already spoken of it under the Articles PENTATEUCH and SAMARITAN. Here are still some farther Remarks upon this Subject. The Copies of the Samaritan Pentateuch were unknown in Europe till the sixteenth Century. The famous James Usher was the first, or at least one of the first, who procured it out of the Eastern Countries. This learned Man having observed, that Eusebius of Cæsarea, Diodorus of Tharsus, St. Jerome, Cyril of Alexandria, Procopius of Gaza, Georgius Syncellus, and some others, had quoted the Samaritan Pentateuch; he could not be at rest till he had procured five or six Copies out of Syria or Palestine. And by examining these Copies carefully, he thought he could discover that they had been corrupted by one Dositheus, of whom Origen makes mention in his first Book against Celsus: An Opinion in which the Learned do not agree with him.

Usher Ep. ad Lud. Capell.

Pietro della Valle bought a very neat Copy at Damascus, in the Year 1616, for M. de Sansi, then Ambassador of France to Constantinople, and afterwards Bishop of St. Malos. This Book was presented to the Fathers of the Oratory, Rue St. Honoré, where it is preserved to this Day. And it was from this Copy that Father Morinus printed the Samaritan Pentateuch in 1632, which is found in M. le Jay's Polyglot, which is the first Copy that has been printed in this Language. It has been reprinted more correctly in Walton's Polyglot, from three Samaritan Manuscripts that belonged to Usher. See Father le Long's Bibliotheca Sacra, t. 1. p. 124, &c.

The Criticks are much divided about the Samaritan Pentateuch. Father Simon [a] in his Critical History of the Old Testament, is of Opinion, that the Priest who was sent by King Assaradon, or Esar-haddon, to the Cuthites, did not carry with him the Books of the Law of Moses, which would have been useless to a People that did not understand Hebrew, and to himself also, since without this Book, he could not put in Practice the Ceremonies of the Law, in which he had been inured from his Infancy. Therefore it was a long time after this, viz. when Manasseh undertook to build a Temple upon Mount Gerizim, that they carried thither the Copy of the Law, as it was made or reformed by Esdras, and which the Jews read in their Temple at Jerusalem.

M. Vandale maintains [b], that we must distinguish between the Law and the Pentateuch. The Volume of the Law, contained only such Ordinances, the Observation of which was necessary for securing the People from the Anger of God; but the Pentateuch comprehended the History of the Creation of the World, of their Bondage in Egypt, of their Deliverance, of their Wanderings in the Wilderness, and the Body of Laws compiled by Moses. The Priest sent by Esar-haddon, brought to the Samaritans only that Law that was necessary for the Observation of all the Rites of the Hebrews; but the Pentateuch that was lost or buried under the Ruins of Jerusalem, was restored and reformed by Esdras, and could not be communicated to the Samaritans till a long time afterwards. This is the System of this Critick.

Another Critick [c] thinks, that he has discovered in the Pentateuch of the Jews and the Samaritans, some Footsteps of an Author that had lived beyond the Euphrates, who was acquainted with that Country, and who mentions some Particulars of it, which Moses could not have any Knowledge of. He therefore imagines, that the Pentateuch was compos'd by the Prieſt who was ſent to the Cuthites or Samaritans. This Man, who came from Chaldea to inſtruct thoſe Idolaters, thought proper to write them a Hiſtory of the Creation of the World, and of the Affairs of the Hebrews, 'till the Delivery of the Law to them, that he might ſhew them there was but one God. As he wrote this exactly in the eighteenth Year of Joſiah, in which the Copy of the Law was found in the Temple, he inſerted this Piece into his own Work, as being very eſſential to it. He wrote the Whole in Hebrew, becauſe he had not had Time enough to learn the Chaldee Tongue. The Jews made no Difficulty of receiving this Work; becauſe the Author was not ſuſpected by them, and becauſe the Book contain'd only their Hiſtory and their Law. This Author pretends, (who is thought to be M. le Clerc) that this Hypotheſis avoids all the Difficulties that are rais'd about the Pentateuch compos'd by Moſes, and about the Variations that are found between that of the Jews and that of the Samaritans.

The Generality of Divines believe, that the Samaritan Pentateuch, and that of the Jews, are but one and the ſame Work, written in the ſame Language, but in different Characters; and, that the Differences that are found between theſe two Texts, only proceed from the Inadvertency and Inaccuracy of Copiers, or from the Affectation of the Samaritans, who have foiſted Things into it, to promote their own Intereſts and Pretenſions; That the Additions were inſerted afterwards; and that, originally, theſe two Copies were exactly the ſame. According to this Opinion, it muſt be allow'd, that the Pentateuch of the Jews is preferable to that of the Samaritans, as being exempt from thoſe Alterations which have been made in the latter. But, on the contrary, others give the Preference to the Samaritan Pentateuch as an Original, which has been preſerved in the ſame Character and the ſame Condition in which Moſes compos'd it.

Dr. Prideaux, who eſpouſes M. Simon's Syſtem, before explain'd, maintains, That the Pentateuch of the Samaritans, is only a Copy, taken in other Characters, from the Copy compos'd or reform'd by Eſdras; That even this Copy has been altered by Variations, Tranſpoſitions, and remarkable Additions. To prove, that the Samaritan Code is only a Copy, he ſays; Firſt, That it has all the Interpretations of the Edition of Eſdras; which it would not have, if it were more ancient. Secondly, There are ſeveral Variations in the Samaritan Pentateuch, which evidently proceed from taking one Hebrew Letter for another that is like it; though, in the Samaritan Alphabet, thoſe two Letters have no Reſemblance; and conſequently, the Samaritan is only a Copy from the Hebrew Pentateuch of the Jews. This inconteſtably proves, ſays he, that it was Manaſſeh the Son-in-law of Sanballat, who brought the Pentateuch with him, when he took Refuge among the Samaritans. And as the Samaritans were then accuſtomed to the Phenician Letters, the Pentateuch was written in thoſe Characters, for their Uſe.

He acknowledges, that Eſar-haddon ſent a Prieſt to his new Colony at Samaria, to inſtruct them in the Manner in which the Iſraelites, who were the ancient Inhabitants of that Country, had worſhipped the God of their Fathers: But it does not appear that this Prieſt executed this Commiſſion, by introducing the Law of Moſes among them. For, had they received this at the Beginning, would they have continu'd in their Idolatry, as it is notorious they did? And would they have made a Medley of the Worſhip of the True God, and of their Idols, which is expreſsly forbidden by the Law? It is therefore very probable, that they were inſtructed in the worſhipping of God only by Uſe and Tradition.

As to the Variations, the Additions, and Tranſpoſitions which are found in the Samaritan Pentateuch, when compared with the Hebrew, they are all carefully collected, with the utmoſt Exactneſs, in the Book written by Hottinger againſt Father Morinus, and in the confronting of the two Texts, which is inſerted in the laſt Volume of the Engliſh Polyglot. Of theſe Interpolations, ſome are for the better underſtanding of the Text; other are a kind of Paraphraſe, expreſſing at length, what was only hinted at in the Original: Others are ſuch Changes as the Samaritans have purpoſely made, to favour their Pretenſions againſt the Jews; as when, for Example, they put Gerizim inſtead of Ebal. Other Varieties are only ſuch as are pure Lapſes of the Tranſcribers.

Beſides the Hebrew Pentateuch in Phenician Characters, of which we have been now ſpeaking, the Samaritans have alſo another, in the Language which they ſpoke at the Time that Manaſſeh took Shelter among them. This Language is a Mixture of the Chaldee, the Syrian, and the Hebrew, or Phenician. And, juſt as the Jews were obliged, in Favour of thoſe People who did not underſtand the pure Hebrew, to make Verſions or Paraphraſes in Chaldee; ſo the Samaritans had their Pentateuch in the Vulgar Samaritan Tongue. This is call'd the Samaritan Verſion, which differs from the Jewiſh Paraphraſes, there being Gloſſes and Explications; whereas the Samaritan Verſion is literal, and expreſſes presses the Text Word for Word: It is printed with the Samaritan Text in the Polyglot of Paris, and also in that of London; and because of its great Conformity with the Text, they have only given one Latin Version for both of 'em.

SAMEAS, or Sameias, or Shammai, a famous Rabbin, of whom the Jews say many things. They tell us, he was Head of their Schools, and Master of a great Number of Learned Men; among others, of the famous Hillel, who afterwards separated from his Master, and was Head of another School or College, which taught Principles very different from those of Shammai. (Hieron. in Isai. viii.) Some think this Division of Hillel and Sameas produced the Sect of the Pharisees: But this Opinion can by no means be supported; because the Pharisees were a numerous and powerful Sect a long time before Sameas, who lived but under Herod the Great.

(Jos. Antiq. l. 15. c. 1.) Josephus says, that Sameas was the Disciple of Pollio the Pharisee. I have often thought, that this Pollio might be Hillel: For Josephus never mentions Hillel, yet speaks of Pollio more than once. But the Rabbins make Hillel the Disciple of Sameas, and Josephus makes Pollio his Master. It is certain there were two Hillels, and both of 'em very famous Men; one of 'em lived before Christ, and the other afterwards: The last of 'em was Prince of the Captivity in the West, and lived, according to the Jews, about the Year 240. (Hieron. in Isai. viii.) St. Jerom says, that a little time before the Birth of Jesus Christ, two famous Rabbins, Sameas and Hillel, Heads of two celebrated Schools, made two Parties among the Jews, and became Masters, one of the Scribes, and the other of the Pharisees. The Jews, in the Time of this holy Father, ascribed their Misna and their Deuteroses to Shammai and Hillel, or, as he says elsewhere, to Simeon and Helles [a].

This is what Josephus [b] tells us of Sameas: "Herod being yet but Governor of "Galilea, was summoned before the Grand "Council of Hyrcanus Prince of the Jews, "for having committed several Violences "in the Province of which he had the "Government. Herod made his Appear-"ance, but not as a Suppliant; he was "cloathed in Purple; his Hair comb'd and "perfum'd, and accompany'd by a Troop "of armed Men. All that were there as-"sembled to decide his Cause, were so "astonish'd at his Presence, that none of "'em durst open his Mouth against him. "There was only Sameas, who spoke with "a great deal of Freedom, and who fore-"told to the Judges, that this young Man, "whom they durst not condemn, should "one Day be their King, and should put "them all to Death, and Hyrcanus him-"self, who then, as Prince of the Jews, "presided in the Assembly."

The Event did but too-much verify these Predictions: For when Herod came to the Kingdom, he put to Death all these Judges, except Sameas himself, for whom he always testify'd a great Esteem. When Herod was declared King by the Romans, and came with Socius to besiege Jerusalem, [c] Sameas was always of Opinion, that the Gates should be set open to him, and that he should be received into the City; for he said, their Sins were such, that they could no longer hope God would preserve them from his Government. For this Reason, Herod always favoured Sameas, and those of his Party. The Rabbins say, by way of Proverb, Be humble as Hillel, and stedfast as Sameas.

SAMEGA, a City of Judea, that was taken by Hyrcanus. Joseph. Antiq. l. 13. c. 17. He calls it Samæa, l. 1. c. 2. de Bello. Perhaps it is the same as Shema. (Josh. xv. 26. שמע Shemash.)

SAMLAH, or Semla, King of Masrekah in Idumea. Gen. xxxvi. 36.

SAMMAEL, an evil Angel, of which the Rabbins relate many things: They say, he deceived Eve, mounted upon the old Serpent; That he is the Angel of the Dead, the Prince of the Air, the Chief of the Demons. (Buxtorf. Lexicon. Rabinic. in Samael.) Other Rabbins look upon him as the Prince of the Angels, and believe he is to preside at the Last Judgment; for which Reason, they make him Offerings on the Day of solemn Expiation, to appease his Anger.

SAMOCHON, a Lake in Galilee. See Semechon.

SAMOS, a famous Island of the Archipelago, upon the Coast of Asia Minor. The Romans writ to the Governor of Samos in Favour of the Jews, in the Time of Simon Maccabæus, in the Year of the World 3865, before Christ 135, before the Vulgar Era 139. (1 Macc. xv. 23.) St. Paul went ashore in the same Island, as he went to Jerusalem, in the 58th Year of the Vulgar Era. (Acts xx. 15.) Isaiah speaks of the Vessels of Clay of Samos; [d] Væ qui contradicit fictori suo, testa de Samiis terræ; Woe to the Man who disputes against him that has form'd him; Man, who is but a Potsherd of an Earthen Vessel of Samos. But the Hebrew reads only, A Vessel of Clay in the midst of Vessels of Clay.

SAMOTHRACIA, an Island of the Ægean Sea. (Acts xvi. 11.) St. Paul, departing from Troas, to go to Macedonia, arrived first at Samothracia, then landed in Macedonia; thence he went to Neapoli, and then to Philippi.

Judg. xiii. 2, 3, 4, &c. SAMSON, Son of Manoah, of the Tribe of Dan, and of a Mother whose Name we no-where find in Scripture. This Woman was barren; and the Angel of the Lord appeared to her, [a] telling her she should become the Mother of a Son; but she must take care, not to drink any Wine, nor any other intoxicating Liquor, nor must she eat any impure Thing: That when God should make her a Mother, she must take the same Care, with regard to her Son: That she must consecrate him to God from his Infancy: That she must make him observe the Rules of the Nazarites, and not let a Razor come upon his Head; for, says the Angel, He shall begin to deliver Israel from the Hands of the Philistines. This Woman went presently to her Husband, and acquainted him with all that had been told her. Manoah begg'd of the Lord to condescend to send his Angel a second time, that he might be inform'd himself of what was to be done to his Son that was to be born. The Lord heard him. The Angel appear'd again to the Woman, and she ran presently to acquaint Manoah with it. He came and spake to the Angel, who repeated to him, what he had before told the Woman. See MANOAH.

Samson was born the Year following; [b] and the Spirit of God began to appear visibly in him, by the extraordinary Strength of his Body. He dwelt in a Place call'd the Camp of Dan, between Zorah and Eshtaol. One Day, as Samson went to Timnath a City of the Philistines, [c] he there saw a young Woman whom he had a mind to marry: He desired his Father and Mother to obtain her for him. They ask'd him, Is there never a Woman among the Daughters of thy Brethren, or among all my People, that thou goest to take a Wife of the uncircumcised Philistines? But Samson still insisted, saying, Get her for me, for she pleaseth me well. His Parents knew not that this was appointed of God, and that this was the Means he thought fit to use, for the Destruction of the Philistines, who then domineered over Israel. He went therefore with his Parents to Timnath; they made a Demand of the young Woman, who was agreed to be given in Marriage to Samson.

As they were going thither, Samson turn'd a little out of the Road, and all of a sudden he saw a young Lion, who was going to seize him. But Samson took hold of him, and tore him in Pieces, as if it had been a young Kid, tho' he had then nothing in his Hand. Afterwards he return'd again to his Father and Mother, but told them nothing of what he had done. Some time after, returning to Timnath, to celebrate his Marriage there, he pass'd by the same Place, to see the Carcase of the Lion. But he found it dry'd up, and a Swarm of Bees had lodg'd themselves in his Throat, and had there form'd an Honey-comb. He took some of it and eat it, and carry'd some to his Father and Mother, who eat of it also. But he told them nothing of his first Exploit, nor of what had happen'd after. Being come to Timnath, the Ceremony of the Marriage was perform'd, and the Wedding-feast was kept, and the Inhabitants of the Place provided thirty young Men for Samson, to do him Honour at his Wedding.

Then Samson said to these young Men at the Entertainment, I will propose a Riddle to you; and if you can explain it to me before the seven Days of the Feast are at an end, I will give you thirty Changes of Raiment: But if you cannot explain it to me, you shall give me thirty Changes of Raiment, or thirty Coats and thirty Clokes, or thirty compleat Suits of Cloaths, [d] which consisted of a Coat or a Gown, and a Cloak. They bid him propose his Riddle, that they might know what it was. Samson told them, That out of the Eater came forth Meat, and out of the Strong came forth Sweetness. They continued as far as the seventh Day, endeavouring to find out the Meaning of this Riddle, but all to no Purpose. Then they apply'd themselves to the young Woman whom Samson had marry'd, and sometimes by Threats, sometimes by Entreaties, they urged her to get the Secret out of her Husband, and to tell it them. She being therefore very importunate with Samson, at last he told her the Meaning of his Riddle; which she had no sooner heard, but she told it again to her own People. Before Sun-set they came to Samson, and asked him, What is sweeter than Honey, and what is stronger than a Lion? He presently told them, That if they had not plough'd with his Heifer, [e] they could never have expounded his Riddle.

At the ſame Time the Spirit of God moved him. He went to Aſkalon, a City of the Philiſtines, and having there killed thirty Men, he gave their Cloaths to thoſe that had explained this Riddle. Hereupon he left his Wife, and returned again to his Father. Some time after this, the Woman married one of the young Men who had accompanied Samſon at his Wedding: And Samſon's Anger being now over, he return'd to ſee his Wife, bringing her a young Kid along with him. [a] But when he came to enter her Chamber, the Father of the young Woman would not let him go in, ſaying to him; I thought you had hated her, and therefore I have given her to another: But ſhe has a Siſter who is younger and handſomer than ſhe; you ſhall have her for a Wife inſtead of the other. Samſon made no other Anſwer but this; Hereafter the Philiſtines will have no Reaſon to complain of me, if I return them the Evils they have done to me. He then went and caught three hundred Foxes, which he ty'd together in Pairs, Tail to Tail, and every Pair had a Fire-brand between. He ſets fire to the Fire-brands, and turns the Foxes into the Corn-fields of the Philiſtines, who preſently ſet the ripe Corn on fire, and made a great Havock, the Flame not ſparing even the Vines and the Olive-Trees. When the Philiſtines knew it was Samſon that had done this, to revenge the Affront he had received from his Father-in-law at Timnath; they took him and his Daughter, and burn'd them both in the Fire. But Samſon was not ſatisfied with this; he told them he would ſtill carry his Vengeance further, before he would have done.

Upon this he flew a great Number of them, [b] and then retired into the Cave of Etam, in the Tribe of Judah. When the Philiſtines knew this, they came in great Numbers into the Land of Judah, to lay waſte the Country; and the People of Judah coming to ask the reaſon of this Outrage, the Philiſtines told them; We are come to bind Samſon, and to repay him the Injuries he has done to us. Then three thouſand Men of the Tribe of Judah came to the Cave of Etam, and told Samſon they were come to bind him, in order to deliver him up to the Philiſtines. He asked them, Will you promiſe me with an Oath that you will not kill me? When they had ſworn to him, he ſuffered them to bind him with two new ſtrong Cords, and to bring him to the Philiſtines. No ſooner did they ſee him in this Condition, but they ſet up loud Shouts, and were going to fall upon him. Then the Spirit of the Lord ſeizing Samſon all at once, he ſnapt in Pieces the Cords he was bound with, and happening to find at his Feet the Jaw-bone of an Aſs, he took it up, and with this Weapon he flew a thouſand of the Philiſtines. Then he ſung that Song, With the Jaw-bone of an Aſs, Heaps upon Heaps, with the Jaw of an Aſs have I ſlain a thouſand Men. And throwing away the Jaw-bone, he gave that Place the Name of Ramath-lehi, which is as much as to ſay, the Lifting up of the Jaw-bone. He was afterwards overcome with a great Thirſt; and crying to the Lord, the Lord open'd a Rock that was in that Place, and which was call'd Makteſh, that is, the Jaw-tooth, from whence Water guſhed out to aſſuage his Thirſt. Here is ſome Difficulty in this Place, [c] which we have already inquired into, under the Article LEHI, and under MAKTESH. See alſo the Commentators upon Judg. xv. 19.

After this Samſon went to Gaza, a City of the Philiſtines, and having there ſeen a Harlot, or a Woman that kept a publick Houſe, he went in to lodge with her. [d] The Philiſtines being inform'd of it, ſet a Guard about the Houſe, and at the Gates of the City, to kill him as he went out in the Morning. But Samſon riſing at Midnight, went and took away the two Gates of the City, and the Gate-Poſts, Bar and Chain, and carried them up the Hill which is near Hebron.

Some time after he fell in Love with a Woman call'd Delilah, [e] who dwelt in the Valley of Sorek. Many of the Antients have thought, [f] that Samſon had taken her as his lawful Wife; but moſt of 'em maintain, that Delilah was a publick Woman, and was never marry'd to Samſon. The Philiſtines therefore came to this Woman, and promis'd her a good Sum of Money, if ſhe would diſcover to 'em in what this extraordinary Strength of Samſon conſiſted, and wherein it lay: This ſhe undertook to do, and omitted nothing to get out this Secret from Samſon. He amuſed her for a conſiderable Time, and made her believe that his Strength conſiſted ſometimes in one thing, and ſometimes in another; and when the Philiſtines were ready to fall upon him, he burſt his Bonds aſunder, and defeated his Enemies. He ſuffer'd himſelf to be bound while he ſlept, ſometimes with Bands made of green Withs; ſometimes with Ropes that had never been us'd; at another time the Locks of his Hair were woven into Treſſes, and faſtened down to the Floor with a Pin: But all this ſignify'd nothing. At laſt Delilah teized him ſo much, that he told her his Strength lay in his Hair, which had never been ſhorn, for he was a Nazarite from his Mother's Womb; and that if his Hair was cut off, he ſhould be no ſtronger than another Man. Delilah then cut off his Hair as he lay ſleeping in her Lap; and the Philiſtines fell upon him, bound him, and put out his Eyes. Then they took him to Gaza, ſhut him up in Priſon, and made him grind at the Mill, as a baſe and contemptible Slave [a].

'Tis here inquired, whether Samſon's Hair was the natural and phyſical Cauſe of his Strength; or whether it was only the moral Cauſe, and, as it were, the Pledge of the Aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit, who thought fit to endue him with this prodigious Strength, as a permanent Quality, ſo long as he ſhould obſerve the Laws of Nazariteſhip, and ſhould keep his Hair untouch'd, which was the viſible Token of it. The greateſt Part of the Fathers and Interpreters [b] maintain this laſt Opinion, which indeed ſeems to be the moſt probable. For tho' a ſtrong and thick Head of Hair, and of a conſiderable Length, may be a Token of natural Strength, yet that Strength will not be the leſs after the Hair is cut off. But it was not ſo with Samſon. Therefore his Hair was neither the Cauſe nor the Sign of his great Strength; this Strength was ſupernatural and miraculous, and God had thought fit to connect it with Samſon's Hair; or with his due Obſervance of that Nazariteſhip that had been injoin'd him.

Samſon continued in Priſon at Gaza for about a Year [c]. Then his Hair being grown out again, [d] God reſtored him his firſt Strength; and the Princes of the Philiſtines met in a general Aſſembly, in the Temple of their God Dagon, to return him Thanks for having deliver'd them out of the Hand of this their formidable Enemy. After they had ended their Feaſt of rejoycing, they order'd Samſon to be ſent for, that they might make Sport with him, and be diverted by him: He was therefore fetch'd out of Priſon, and after they had inſulted him as long as they thought fit, by making themſelves Paſtime with the abſurd Behaviour of a blind Man; he deſir'd him that led him, to let him lean againſt the Pillars that ſupported the Temple, that he might reſt himſelf a little. The Temple was then full of People, both above and below the Galleries. We imagine the Temple to have been round, and perhaps encompaſs'd with a double Row of Pillars [e]. Then Samſon calling upon the Name of the Lord, ſaid; O Lord, my God, remember me: Reſtore me now my firſt Strength, that I may once revenge myſelf of my Enemies, that have deprived me of my Sight. And laying hold of the two Pillars, by which the Temple was ſupported, taking one in his Right-hand, and the other in his Left, he ſaid; Let me alſo dye with the Philiſtines. Then violently ſhaking the Pillars, the Temple fell down upon the Princes and People that were therein, to the Number of about three thouſand Perſons; and ſo he kill'd more at his Death, than he had done before in his Life-time. He lived in the whole about thirty-eight Years; and was Judge of Iſrael about twenty Years. Judges xvi. 20. from the Year of the World 2867 to 2887.

Some Difficulties are ſtarted about the State of the Salvation of Samſon. Ought he to have put himſelf to Death? And when he was wiſhing to dye, ſhould he have ſought Revenge for the Loſs of his Eyes? St. Bernard maintains [f], that if he had not a particular Inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt to move him to this, he could not without Sin be the Author of his own Death. St. Auſtin [g] alſo does not excuſe him, but only upon the Suppoſition, that he was urged by the inward Motions of Him, who is Maſter of our Life and Death. Others maintain [h], that without having recourſe to this ſupernatural Motive, this Action of Samſon might be vindicated from his Office, as being the Judge and Defender of Iſrael; and therefore, without conſidering the Danger he expos'd himſelf to, might have nothing in View but the Death of his Enemies, and the Deliverance of his People. But finally, in whatever manner this Action is excus'd, it muſt be own'd, that he is in the Number of the Saints, ſince St. Paul himſelf places him among thoſe whoſe Faith was commended and recompenſed. Zophim,

Zophim, or the City of Ramatha, inhabited by the Levites of the Family of Zophai or Zuph, one of the Descendants of Kohath. Samuel dwelt there himself for the greatest Part of his Time. Ramatha or Ramath was in the Mountains of Ephraim, between Bethel and Gibeah. See RAMATH. 'Tis disputed whether Samuel was a Priest or no. Some of the Antients believed, that he was of the Race of Aaron, [a] and that he exercised the Function of High-

We find no one of the Family of the High-priest Eli, after the Death of Hophni and Phinehas, that could exercise the High-priest's Office. It is therefore very probable, that Samuel perform'd the Duties of this Office, till such time as the Grandsons of Eli were of an Age to take it upon themselves.

But it is reply'd, that Samuel not being of the Race of Aaron, there is no likelihood that he should ever have been High-priest. If he had wore an Ephod, and anointed Kings, and even sacrificed in extraordinary Cases, that will not prove that he was a Priest. David wore the Ephod;

Judg. vi. 18. 1 Kings xix. 15, 16. 2 Kings xi. 1, 2, 6, 12, &c. Gideon and Saul had sacrificed; some of the Prophets consecrated Kings; Samuel is put in the Number of those who call upon the Lord, that is, the Levites. And if we will have him put in the Rank of Priests, we must take the Word Priest in its greatest Latitude and generical Sense, for all those that are imploy'd in the Service of the Lord, and who perform the Office of Mediators between God and the People. Lastly, in this Question, as well as in many others, we may oppose Authority against Authority; and both Antients and Moderns may be cited, who expressly deny that Samuel was a Priest [c]. As to the Age of the Children of Hophni and Phinehas, we have nothing certain upon that Matter; and if any one was to be employ'd to perform the Functions of the High-priest, they chose rather to take a Priest than a mere Levite.

But now let us come to the Life of Samuel. Elkanah his Father had two Wives, one of which was call'd Peninnah, and the other Hannah. Peninnah had Children; but Hannah was barren. Elkanah loved Hannah very tenderly, and was much concern'd that she had no Children. One Day when he went with all his Family to Shiloh, where the Ark of the Lord was deposited, [d] he there offer'd Peace-offerings, and made an Entertainment for his Wives and Children. Hannah seeing herself alone, while Peninnah was surrounded with a Troop of Children, began to bewail herself; and rising from Table, she went to the Tabernacle, where she pour'd out her Heart before the Lord. Eli the High-priest being near, and hearing her speak pretty loud, thought she had been overcome with Wine; but Hannah soon discover'd to him the Occasion of her Affliction; and made a Vow, that if God would give her a Son, she would dedicate him to his Service all the Days of his Life; that she would cause him to profess the Order of a Nazarite, and suffer no Razor ever to come upon his Head. Eli blessed her, and begg'd of God to grant her her Petition.

Hannah, being return'd to Ramatha, conceived and brought forth a Son, to whom she gave the Name of Samuel [e], saying; Because I have asked him of the Lord [f]. Some Years after, when the Child was weaned, she brought him to Shiloh, into the House of the Lord, with an Offering of three Calves, of three Measures of Flour, and of three Baths of Wine. She made her Offering to God, and told the High-priest she was the same Woman, for whom he had pray'd some few Years ago. See the Article HANNAH. with a linen Ephod, and his Mother made him a little Coat of Linen, which she brought to him on the solemn Days, when she and her Husband came to offer their Sacrifices to the Lord.

But Eli was now become very old, and his Eye-sight was grown so dim, that he could hardly see at all. He heard of the Irregularities of his two Sons Hophni and Phinehas, but had not Courage to restrain them, nor the Power to make them remove that Scandal they caus'd to all the People of Israel. One Day as Samuel was in Bed in Eli's Chamber, near the Tabernacle of the Lord, [g] he heard a Voice calling him by his Name very early in the Morning, before they had extinguish'd the Lamps of the golden Candlestick, which burnt in the Holy Place over-against the Door of the Sanctuary. Samuel thinking it to be the Voice of Eli, ran haſtily to him, and ſaid; Here am I, for you call'd me. Eli bid him return, and lie down to ſleep, for he did not call him. Samuel did ſo, and the ſame thing happen'd to him three times. The third time Eli, judging there muſt be ſomething extraordinary in the Matter, ſent Samuel back, and ſaid to him; Go and ſleep, and if you are call'd any more, ſay; Speak, Lord, for thy Servant heareth.

He return'd, and the Lord calling him again, Samuel anſwer'd; Speak, Lord, for thy Servant heareth. Then the Lord ſaid to him; I am going to do a thing in Iſrael, that ſhall make the Ears tingle of all thoſe that ſhall hear of it. I ſhall accompliſh all that I have reſolved againſt Eli, and againſt his Houſe, becauſe knowing the Iniquity of his Children, he has not reſtrain'd them. Wherefore I have ſworn that the Iniquity of this Houſe ſhall never be expiated, neither by Sacrifices nor Offerings. When Day was come, Eli call'd Samuel to him, and obliged him to diſcover what the Lord had ſaid to him. Samuel told him the whole, and conceal'd nothing from him; to which Eli anſwer'd, It is the Lord, let him do what is pleaſing in his own Eyes. Then it was known to all Iſrael, that Samuel was the choſen Prophet of the Lord; and whatever he declared, whether to Eli or the People, had always its due Effect.

We have elſewhere related [a] the Manner in which the Ark of the Lord was taken by the Philiſtines; the Death of the High-prieſt Eli, and that of his two Sons Hophni and Phinehas; the manner in which the Ark of the Lord was ſent back to Beth-ſhemeſh, and from thence placed at Kirjath-jearim. This may be ſeen related at length in the firſt Book of Samuel, iv, v, vi.

After the Death of Eli the High-prieſt, [b] Samuel was acknowledg'd as Judge by all Iſrael, and as Governor of the People. Probably this was done by that Aſſembly that met together, on the Occaſion of removing the Ark from Beth-ſhemeſh to Kirjath-jearim. Samuel then made this Declaration to the People; If you return to the Lord with all your Hearts, take away the ſtrange Gods from among you, and prepare your Hearts to ſerve only the Lord, and he will deliver you from all your Enemies. Then the Children of Iſrael renounced all their ſtrange Gods, and apply'd themſelves wholly to the Service of the God of their Fathers. Afterwards Samuel convened another Aſſembly at Mizpeh, where all the People met in Arms. Samuel pray'd for them; they faſted and pray'd, they pour'd out Water before the Lord; [c] they confeſs'd their Sins, and Samuel judged them in the ſame Place. The Philiſtines hearing that Iſrael was aſſembled at Mizpeh, took the Alarm, and came into the Field againſt them. Samuel call'd upon the Lord, and offered a ſucking Lamb for a Sacrifice. No ſooner was the Fight begun, but a dreadful Peal of Thunder was heard, that ſtruck Terror and Conſternation among the Philiſtines. They betook themſelves to Flight, and Iſrael purſued them as far as Beth-car. This Defeat was ſo ſignal, that for a long Time they durſt not any more appear upon the Frontiers of Iſrael; for the Hand of the Lord was over them as long as Samuel governed the People, and the Philiſtines were obliged to reſtore ſuch Cities as they had taken from the Iſraelites.

Samuel was about forty Years of Age when he began to judge Iſrael. He judged them the whole Time of his Life; for 1 Sam. vii. 15.
under the Reign of Saul he preſerved a great deal of Authority, as well in reſpect of Saul himſelf, as the whole People. He went every Year to Bethel, thence to Gilgal, then to Mizpeh; afterwards he return'd to his Houſe at Ramah, and ſo diſtributed Juſtice to all Iſrael. He alſo built an Altar at Ramah, as well for the Uſe of his own private Devotion, as to keep up the Religion of the People, who flock'd to him from all Parts, to conſult him, and to have their Cauſes decided. When he grew old himſelf, [d] he appointed his Sons as Judges over Iſrael, and they diſcharged this Office in Beer-ſhebah, a City lying upon the ſouthern Limits of the Land of Canaan. But they, inſtead of walking in the Steps of their Father, were venal and mercenary Judges, and ſuffer'd themſelves to be corrupted by Bribery and Avarice.

Then all the Elders of Iſrael came to Samuel, and ſaid to him; [e] You ſee that you are grown old, and that your Children do not purſue your Steps; ſet a King over us, as all other Nations have, that he may judge us. This Propoſal was not agreeable to Samuel, and he addreſs'd himſelf to God by Prayer. The Lord ſaid to him; Hear the Voice of the People, and give them what they aſk for, for it is not you, but me, they have rejected, that I may not reign over them. But declare to them what are the Prerogatives of a King, and what are the Rights he will inſiſt on. Samuel gave Anſwer to thoſe that had made this Requeſt to him, That the Lord was not averse to their having a King, but they ought well to consider what would be the Consequences of kingly Power: That this King would take their Children from them, to make them serve in his Wars, and in his House: That he would force them to do his Drudgery and Labour, both in City and Country: That he would take their Daughters to make them serve as his Perfumers, Cooks, and Bakers, and in other menial Offices: That he would make them pay the tenth Part of the Profit of their Corn, Vines, and Flocks. That then they would cry unto the Lord, and the Lord would not hear them. But the Israelites were not moved with these Remonstrances; they persisted in desiring a King, and God told Samuel he would appoint them one.

A little while after [a] Saul the Son of Kish, of the Tribe of Benjamin, being sent by his Father to seek some Asses that were stray'd, came to advise with Samuel about the Asses; but the Prophet told him, that God had appointed him King over his People, and gave him the royal Unction, as we shall more amply relate hereafter, under the Article of SAUL. After which Samuel held an Assembly of the People at Mizpeh, that they might proceed to the Election of a King. The Lot was cast for all the Tribes separately, and fell upon the Tribe of Benjamin. Then it was cast for all the Families of this Tribe, and fell upon that of Matri. Lastly, it fell upon Saul, the Son of Kish. He was sought for immediately, but was not to be found. They ran therefore to the Place where the Baggage was deposited, where he had hid himself, and brought him forth among the People. Samuel then said to 'em; You see who it is the Lord hath chosen, and that there is none like him among all the People. After this he writ down the Laws and Constitutions of this new Kingdom, and publish'd them to the People, and then dismiss'd them.

A Month was scarcely pass'd after Saul's Election, but a War broke out between the Ammonites and the City of Jabesh, in the Country of Gilead. [b] Saul, at the Head of all Israel, marched against the Ammonites, and set Jabesh at Liberty. See SAUL and JABESH. At their Return from this Expedition, Samuel said to the People; Let us go to Gilgal, and there let us confirm the Election of the King. They did so, and acknowledged Saul as King. They offer'd Peace-offerings, and made great Rejoycings. Then Samuel address'd himself to the People, and asked them, Whether they had had any Reason to find fault with his Conduct? (1 Sam. xii. 1, 2, &c.) The People answer'd, that he had given them no Reason of Complaint. Samuel proceeded, and said to 'em, The Lord is therefore my Witness to Day, and so is also the King he has appointed, that you have nothing to reproach me with. To which the People answer'd; They are Witnesses. Samuel then told them, That God having granted them a King according to their Request, they ought to remain faithful and obedient to the Lord: That if they did so, God would shower down Blessings upon them and their King: That if, on the contrary, they forsook the Lord, the Hand of the Lord would be upon them, as it was upon their Fathers. To which he added, Is it not now Wheat-harvest? A Season in which it is very rare in Palestine to see Rain. Yet I shall call upon the Lord, and he will send out his Thunder, and shower down his Rain, that you may know how great an Evil it is in the Eyes of the Lord, that you have presumed to ask for a King.

At the same Time he cry'd to the Lord, and the Lord sent Thunder and Rain in great abundance. This put the People into such a Consternation, that they asked Pardon of God for the Fault they had committed, in asking him for a King. Samuel exhorted them to continue faithful to the Lord; and promised them, that he would not cease to intercede for them, and to instruct them in the right way. After which every one return'd to his House; and this was what pass'd in the first Year of the Reign of Saul.

In the second Year after his Election [c], he made choice of three thousand Men that were good Soldiers, [d] of which he kept two thousand about his own Person, to drive out the Garisons of the Philistines that were at Michmash and Bethel; and the other thousand Men were with Jonathan his Son, wherewith to drive out the Philistines that were posted at Gibeah. This Jonathan effected, and Saul being desirous to pursue this Advantage, call'd all the People together at Gilgal. The Philistines on the other Side took Arms, and assembled at Michmash, to the Number of thirty thousand Chariots, six thousand Horse, and an innumerable Multitude of Foot. These Preparations so terrified the Israelites that were got together with Saul at Gilgal, that they fled to hide themselves, every one where he best could. Saul staid at Gilgal six Days expecting Sa- muel, and ſeeing he did not come, on the ſeventh Day, he had the Victims brought to him, and offer'd a Burnt-ſacrifice.

He had hardly compleated his Sacrifice but Samuel came. Saul went out to meet
1 Sam. xiii. 8, 9, 10, &c. him, and ſaluted him; Samuel ſays to him, What have you been doing? Saul replies, That ſeeing himſelf preſs'd hard by the Philiſtines, and almoſt intirely abandoned by his own Soldiers, he had offer'd a Burnt-offering. Samuel told him again, That he had committed a piece of Folly. If, ſays he, you had obey'd the Commandment of the Lord, the Lord would have confirmed your Kingdom over Iſrael for ever; but now your Reign will not long continue. The Lord has found a Man after his own Heart, to place at the Head of his People. From thence Samuel went to Gibeah, and Saul follow'd him thither with his little Army, which was hardly above ſix hundred Men: Yet it was with this Handful of Men that Saul fought the Philiſtines, and beat them, as has been already obſerved under the Article of JONATHAN, and may be ſeen under SAUL; or may be read in the xiii and xiv Chapters of the Firſt Book of Samuel.

After this Samuel came to Saul [a], by an Appointment from God, to bid him make War with the Amalekites. Cut them in Pieces, ſays he, ſpare none, but deſtroy all; they are all devoted to the Curſe of Extirpation, both Man, Woman and Child, even thoſe that ſuck the Breaſt; even their Oxen, Camels, Sheep, and Aſſes. Saul therefore marched out againſt Amalek, cut them in Pieces, took and ravaged the whole Country; but, however, he thought fit to preſerve ſuch a Part of their Goods and Cattle as he thought deſerved it beſt. Then God ſaid to Samuel; I repent that I have made Saul King, becauſe he has forſaken me, and done contrary to my Orders. Samuel was much afflicted at this, and cry'd to the Lord all Night. The Day following he came to Saul to Gilgal, where he was offering a Sacrifice of the Firſtlings of the Flocks, that he had taken from Amalek. Saul ſaluted him, and told him; He had perform'd the Commands of the Lord. Whence then, ſays Samuel, is this Lowing of Oxen, and Bleating of Sheep in my Ears? Saul anſwer'd him, The People brought away what they thought beſt, to offer in Sacrifice to the Lord their God. Samuel upbraided him very vehemently with his want of Obedience; and Saul, to excuſe himſelf, threw all the Blame upon the People; but Samuel reply'd to him, Is it Burnt-offerings and Sacrifices that the Lord requires? Obedience is more acceptable to him than any Sacrifice. To diſobey him is equal to the Crime of Witchcraft, and to withſtand him is as the Sin of Idolatry. As therefore you have rejected the Word of the Lord, ſo alſo the Lord has rejected you, and will not have you any longer for a King over his People.

Then ſays Saul to Samuel, I have ſinned in having too great Complaiſance for the People; but bear with my Iniquity, and come with me, that we may worſhip the Lord. Samuel anſwer'd him, I will not go with you, and at the ſame time turn'd haſtily away from him to be gone. Saul having then hold of Samuel's Garment, it tore in his Hands. On which Occaſion Samuel ſaid to him; Thus has the Lord tore the Kingdom out of your Hands, to give it to another, who is better than you. Saul reply'd, I confeſs I have ſinn'd, but however do me the Credit of appearing with me before the Elders of the People, and before all Iſrael: Return with me, and let us worſhip the Lord. Samuel was then prevail'd with to follow him, and they return'd to the Camp at Gilgal. There Samuel caus'd Agag, King of the Amalekites to be brought out before him, whoſe Life had been ſaved, and who had been brought to Gilgal with the reſt of the Booty. Samuel hew'd him to Pieces, and told him, That as his Sword had made ſo many Mothers childleſs, ſo likewiſe ſhould his Mother be made childleſs among Women. Then Samuel return'd to Ramah, and Saul went to his Houſe at Gibeah. From this Time Samuel ſaw Saul no more; but, however, he continually bewail'd him, becauſe the Lord had rejected him, and repented that he had made Saul King of his People Iſrael. 1 Sam. xv. 35.

Some Years after this, [b] the Lord ſaid to Samuel; How long will you mourn for 1 Sam. xvi. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c.
Saul? Ariſe and go to Bethlehem, and give the Royal Unction to one of the Sons of Jeſſe, whom I have choſen to be the King of my People. Samuel made Anſwer; How ſhall I go? Saul will be inform'd of it, and will put me to Death. The Lord ſaid to him; Go thither as if it were to ſacrifice, and you ſhall invite Jeſſe to partake of the Sacrifice, and there I will ſhew you him you are to anoint. Samuel went therefore to Bethlehem, and all the Elders of the Place came to ſhew their Reſpect to him, whom he invited to the Solemnity of the Sacrifice. When he went into Jeſſe's Houſe, all the Sons of this venerable old Man came to ſalute him. And when they were before him, Samuel ſeeing Eliab the eldeſt, ſaid within himſelf; Surely this is he the Lord has choſen for his Anointed. But the Lord anſwer'd him; Have no Regard to a good Appearance, or an advantageous Stature; for this is not he whom I have chosen: I judge not of Men by the outside, but by what is within the Heart. Then Jesse caused his seven Sons to come one after another; but Samuel told him, God has not chosen any of these. Jesse said, he had still a younger Son, but he was keeping the Sheep. Send for him, says Samuel, for we will not sit down to Table till he comes. This eighth Son of Jesse was David, who was fetch'd out of the Field; and as soon as he came in, the Lord said to Samuel, Anoint him quickly, for this is he. Samuel poured upon his Head the Oil he had brought with him; and from that very time the Spirit of the Lord rested upon David, and departed from Saul.

Samuel return'd to Ramah, and dwelt there all the rest of his Life among the Prophets, who lived under his Conduct in a kind of Community. Several Years after, [a] when David was in Disgrace with Saul, and had very hardly escaped out of his Hands, he came to take Refuge with Samuel at Ramah. He acquainted him with 1 Sam. xix. 18, 19, 20. the manner of Saul's Behaviour towards him, and they went together to Naioth, where they continued for some Time. Saul had Intelligence of this, who presently sent forth a Party to surprize David. But the Messengers finding Samuel, who was then prophesying in the midst of the Prophets, they were also seized by the Spirit, and began to prophesy among them; that is to say, they were surprized with certain irregular Motions and Agitations, and pronounced certain Words, as the Prophets were us'd to do in their Fits of Enthusiasm. When this was told Saul, he sent a second and a third Company of Messengers, who all were seized in like manner. Lastly, he went himself, and was seized with the Spirit of God, and prophesy'd among the rest. This gave David an Opportunity to escape, and to withdraw himself elsewhere.

Samuel died at the Age of ninety-eight, about two Years before the Death of Saul [b]. All Israel gathered together to mourn for him, and he was buried at his own House
1 Sam. xxv. 1. at Ramah. Jesus the Son of Sirach, Author of Ecclesiasticus, has consecrated this Eulogy
Ecclus. xlvi. 13, 17, 20. to his Memory: Samuel the Prophet of the Lord, beloved of his Lord, established a Kingdom, and anointed Princes over his People. By the Law of the Lord he judged the Congregation, and the Lord had Respect unto Jacob. By his Faithfulness he was found a true Prophet, and by his Word he was known to be faithful in Vision. He called upon the mighty Lord, when his Enemies pressed upon him on every Side, when he offered the sucking Lamb. And the Lord thundered from Heaven, and with a great Noise made his Voice to be heard. And he destroyed the Rulers of the Tyrians [c], and all the Princes of the Philistines. And before his long Sleep, he made Protestations in the Sight of the Lord and his Anointed; I have not taken any Man's Goods, so much as a Shoe: And no Man did accuse him. And after his Death he prophesied, and shewed the King his End, and lift up his Voice from the Earth in Prophecy, to blot out the Wickedness of the People.

What the Author of Ecclesiasticus here alludes to, happened about two Years after the Death of Samuel [d]. This is what we read of it in the first Book of Samuel: The 1 Sam. xxviii. 1, 3, &c.
Philistines, having invaded the Territories of Israel with a powerful Army, encamped at Shunem, in the Vale of Esdrelon, and Saul with his Troops took Possession of the Eminencies of Gilboa. This Prince being in great Consternation at the Multitude of his Enemies, and being not able to obtain any Answer, either by Dreams, or by the Priests, or by the Prophets, resolved at last to consult some Witch or Sorceress, to know what would be the Event of this War. It was told him, there was an Enchantress at En-dor, a Place at about two or three Leagues from Mount Gilboa. He disguised himself, and came hither with a small Attendance, that the Witch might not know him; for some Years before he had drove all those of her Profession out of the Country.

Coming then to this Woman, he desired her to raise the Ghost of Samuel to him. She had recourse to her Charms and Spells, and when she saw Samuel really to appear, she set forth a great Cry, and said to Saul; Why have you deceived me, for you are Saul? Saul gave her some Assurances to encourage her, and asked her what she saw? I see, said she, the Gods coming forth out of the Earth [e]. Saul asked her what Sort of a Man it was? She said, an old Man covered with a Mantle. Saul knew it to be Samuel, and bowed himself to the Earth. Samuel said to him, Why have you disturbed my Rest, and caused me to be raised up? Saul answered him, That being in great Straights, and not knowing to whom he should address himself, because God had not given him any Answer, he found himself necessitated to have Recourse to him by the Art of Magick. Samuel told him, that the Lord would deal with him as he had already told him, that the Kingdom should be taken from him, and given to David his Son-in-Law; that God would deliver Israel into the Hands of their Enemies the Philistines. To which he added, To-morrow you ſhall be with me, you and your Sons, and the Lord ſhall abandon the Camp of Iſrael to the Philiſtines.

Upon this Hiſtory, a very important Queſtion has been moved, that has divided both Antients and Moderns, that is, Whether the Ghoſt of Samuel did really appear to Saul, or whether all that is here related of this Matter is only a Trick of the Sorcereſs, who herſelf ſpoke to Saul, and feigned the Voice of Samuel. 'Tis asked alſo, whether this was done by the Power of the Devil, and by Art Magick; or, whether God permitted that Samuel ſhould appear, by the miraculous Effect of his Power, and not by any Effect of Magick. Juſtin Martyr, Origen [a], Anaſtaſius of Antioch believed the Demons had ſome Power over the Souls of the Saints, before Jeſus Chriſt deſcended into Hell, and delivered them out of the Hands of this Prince of Darkneſs. St. Auſtin [b] finds no greater Inconvenience in ſaying, that the Devil cauſed the Soul of Samuel to appear, than in ſuppoſing him to preſent himſelf before the Lord among the Children of God, or in ſuppoſing him to place our Saviour upon a Pinacle of the Temple.

Juſtin Dial. cum Tryphon. Anaſt. Antioch. in Odego. qu. 12.

The Rabbin Manaſſeh-ben-Iſrael [c], according to the Principles of the Book Zohar, believes, there are Demons which have ſo much Power over the Souls of the Dead, for the firſt Year after their Death, that they do with them almoſt whatever they pleaſe, and oblige them to take whatever Bodies they think fit. We cannot agree that this happened the ſame Year as the Death of Samuel, but think it was about two Years after the Death of this Prophet: And beſides, the Principles of this Rabbin are by no means ſupportable. But on the other hand, it is hard to oppoſe a poſitive Aſſertion of the Scripture, which expreſly affirms, that Samuel appeared, that he ſpoke, that he foretold the Death of Saul, the Defeat of the Iſraelites, and the Victory of the Philiſtines.

Thoſe that maintain that Samuel did not really appear to Saul, are divided among themſelves. Some [d] think that the Devil aſſumed the Form of Samuel, and ſpoke thus to Saul. Others affirm [e], that the Witch ſaw nothing, but pretended to ſee the true Samuel, and ſpoke in his Name, and ſo impoſed upon Saul and his Attendants. Laſtly, others [f] maintain, that the Devil did not appear, nor took the Form of Samuel; but that God, of his own Will and Power, and independantly of the Art of Magick, took occaſion from this Invocation of the Enchantreſs, to make the Figure of Samuel to appear to the Eyes of Saul, to pronounce to this Prince the Sentence of his Death, and his intire Deſtruction. The Rabbi Levi-ben-Gerſon will have it, that all this paſſed only in the Imagination of Saul. He ſays, that this Prince being ſtruck with the Apprehenſion of his preſent Danger, and with the Conſideration of the Threats that God had made to him, believed he ſaw Samuel appear to repeat theſe Threats, and to foretel his approaching Deſtruction.

Of all theſe Opinions, that which ſeems to us the moſt probable, and the beſt founded, is, that Samuel really appeared to Saul. We are far from imagining that this could be effected by the magical Charms of the Sorcereſs, or by the Power of the Devil; it could only be by the Almighty Power of God, who, to puniſh Saul for his criminal Curioſity, might permit the real Samuel to appear to him, on the Occaſion of the Witch's Incantations, and diſcover to him his laſt and greateſt Calamity. Upon this the Reader may conſult Allatius, in his Notes upon the Treatiſe of Euſtathius, called De Engaſtrimytho, as alſo the Commentators upon 1 Sam. xxviii. and our Diſſertation upon this Subject, printed before the Firſt Book of Samuel.

To Samuel are aſcribed the Book of Judges, that of Ruth, and the firſt Book of Samuel. There is, indeed, great Probability that he compoſed the twenty-four firſt Chapters of the firſt of Samuel, ſince they contain nothing but what he might have written, and in which he had not a great Share. However, in theſe twenty-four Chapters there are ſome ſmall Additions, which ſeem to have been inſerted after his Death. We read in the Chronicles, that he aſſiſted in regulating the Diſtribution of the Levites made by David for the Service of the Temple. This may be explained by ſaying, that David purſued the Order already ſettled by Samuel, during the Time he was Judge of Iſrael, after the Death of the High-Prieſt Eli. We read alſo in the ſame Book, that Samuel enriched the Tabernacle of the Lord, by magnificent Preſents, and by rich Spoils, which had been taken from the Enemies of Iſrael during the Time of his Judicature. Laſtly, it is there read, that he wrote the Hiſtory of David in Conjunction with the Prophets Nathan and Gad. Probably he might write the Beginning of this Hiſtory, and the two other Prophets might write the Continuation and Concluſion of it; for Samuel was dead before David came to the Throne. The two first Books of Kings bear the Name of the Books of Samuel; but it must be allowed that he could not be the Author of the Second of these Books, which contains Transactions that happened a long time after his Death. Neither could he write the latter End of the First, since his Death is mentioned in the Beginning of Chap. xxv. of this same Book.

It is said, Chap. x. 25. of the first Book of Samuel, that this Prophet wrote in a Book, the Manner of the Kingdom, which was nothing else but the Rights, Prerogatives, and Revenues of the King, and the Limits of his Power and Authority over the People. In a Word, it was a Repetition of what he had proposed, vivâ voce, a little before to the People. The Rabbin Levi-ben-Gerson affirms, that when he had finished it, he put it into the Ark; and Bodin assures us, upon the Credit of the Rabbins, that the Kings destroyed and suppressed this Book, that they might reign afterwards with less restraint, in what manner they pleased.

Samuel began the Chain of the Prophets, which was never broke or discontinued, from his Time, to that of Zechariah and Malachi. See Acts iii. 24. All the Prophets from Samuel, and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these Days. The Body of Samuel was transported from Palestine to Constantinople, in the Time of the Emperor Arcadius. St. Jerome says, they carried the Ashes of this Prophet in a Golden Vessel, lapped up in Silk: That the Bishops and People every-where received them in Multitudes with a Joy not to be expressed, and with Honours almost infinite. The Roman Martyrology sets down his Festival on the Twentieth of August.

Besides the true History of Samuel, which we have given above, there are several Traditions subsisting concerning this Prophet, most of which are very uncertain. The Orientals relate, for Example, that Samuel having made his Report to God, that the Hebrews were resolved to have a King; God gave him two Things, one of which was, a Vessel or Horn full of Oyl, and the other was a Staff. He then revealed to him, that the Man in whose Presence the Oyl should boil in the Vessel, and whose Stature should be equal to that Staff, was the Person appointed by God for their King. No sooner was this Determination published among the People, but all the Chiefs of the Tribes came with great Eagerness to measure themselves by the Staff, and to try if the Oyl would boil in their Presence. But neither was any of them of the same measure as the Staff, nor would the Oyl boil before them.

D'Herbel. Bib.Orient p. 735. & 1021.

Saul also, otherwise called Sharek, and surnamed Thalout, that is, the Tall, who was no more than a Carrier of Water, or Dresser of Leather, came also to the Prophet among the rest, and immediately the Water began to boil in the Vessel, and he was found to be just of the Heighth of the miraculous Staff. Upon these Tokens Samuel declared him to be King; but the Heads of the Tribes, especially that of Judah, to whom the Royal Dignity had been promised, expostulated with the Prophet, saying; How can this Man be our King, who has no Estate? How can he support the Expence and Dignity of the Royal State? But Samuel replied, 'Tis the Lord who has chose him, and 'tis he who disposes of Kingdoms without Controul, to whomsoever he pleases.

The Israelites would not yet submit, but insisted upon having a Sign from Samuel, that they might be assured from God, that this was his Will. Samuel answered them, This is the Miracle that God gives you to confirm this Choice, The Ark of the Lord, which was taken away by the Philistines, shall be brought back to you by Angels.

This Ark, according to the Description that the Musselmen give of it, was a Chest made of several Metals, round about which the Pictures of all the Patriarchs were engraven, and upon which the Shekinah, or the Majesty of God, rested. This Shekinah, or Sckinah, was the Cherubims, whose Eyes were like two Lamps, and whose dazzling Splendor cast Terror into the Hearts of all those that beheld it. He had the Shape of a Leopard, and in the Time of War he raised himself up, and put forth such a dismal Cry, as put all the Enemies of Israel to Confusion. Others imagine him to have the Figure of a Man, and say; That when the Ark was carried into the Army, he stood up upon his Feet, and came forth like a vehement Wind, that poured upon the Enemies of the People of God, and intirely defeated them.

In this Ark was kept, as they say, the Tables of the Law, the Bason in which the Angels washed the Hearts of the Prophets, the Rod of Moses, the High-Priest's Mitre, the Pontifical Robes of Aaron, the Vessel full of Manna, and a Piece of the Wood Aluab, which sweetned the Waters of Marah.

When therefore the Election of Saul was proclaimed, the Philistines being resolved to conceal the Ark of the Lord, which had caused them so many Misfortunes by its Presence, they hid it in a Dunghil. But they were smote with a shameful Disease in their secret Parts, which made them resolve to send it back to the Confines of the Land of Israel. It was no sooner arrived at this Place, but the Angels of the Lord took it up, and carried it to the Tabernacle at Shiloh; and this Miracle secured Saul in his Kingdom. It is convenient sometimes even to know such Things that deserve neither Esteem nor Credit, if it were only by that, to obtain a Right of contemning them.

II. SAMUEL, whom they make to be Son to the Prophet Urijah. Jeremiah xxvi. 23. speaks of the Prophet Urijah, but says nothing of this Samuel. The Scripture no where mentions him, and what the Spaniards say of him deserves no Consideration. They pretend he came into Spain, where he died, and that Six hundred Years after St. James Minor brought him to Life again, baptized him, called him Peter, and made him Bishop of Brague, where he ended his Life again by Martyrdom.

SANBALLAT, the Chief or Governor of the Cuthites or Samaritans, and was always a great Enemy to the Jews. He was a Native of Horon, or Horonaim, a City beyond Jordan, in the Country of the Moabites. When Nehemiah came from Shushan to Jerusalem [a], and began to build the Walls of Jerusalem, Sanballat, Tobiah, and Geshem made themselves Sport with him, and sent to know upon what Authority he undertook this Enterprize, and whether this was not a Revolt against the King. But Nehemiah answered them, 'Tis the God of Heaven that assists us, and we are his Servants: As for you Cuthites, you have no Part or Right in Jerusalem, and your Names shall be forgot there. But Nehemiah proceeding with Vigour in his Undertaking, Sanballat was extremely provoked, and said before the Samaritans; (Nehem. iv. 1, 7.) What are these poor Jews a-doing? Will the People let them go on? Will they finish their Work, and dedicate it one Day? Will they build with these Stones that the Fire has destroyed and reduced to Dust? All these Objections did not make Nehemiah desist, or abate his Courage and Zeal, but he proceeded with so much Diligence and Perseverance, that at last the Walls of Jerusalem were intirely compleated.

Then Sanballat, Tobiah, and Geshem [b], sent to Nehemiah, to desire him to come along with them into the Field, that there they might enter into an Alliance together, and swear inviolable Friendship to each other: But Nehemiah perceived this was only a Stratagem to surprize him, and to do him some Violence. He therefore sent Word, that he was engaged in a great Work that required his constant Attendance, and which he could not intermit upon any Account. They made him the same Invitation four times together, and he as often returned the same Answer. At last Sanballat writ to him in such Terms as these, "There is a Report spread among the People, and Geshem confidently affirms it, that you and the Jews intend a Revolt: That your Design in Rebuilding the Walls of Jerusalem, is to declare yourself King of the Jews; that with this View you have suborned Prophets to suggest to the People, that you ought to be King of the whole Country. Now as all these Things are to be represented to the King, it will be convenient for you to give us a Meeting, that we may confer together about 'em." But instead of going himself, Nehemiah only sent a Messenger to tell him, that these Things were all of his own Invention, and had nothing of Truth in them. Sanballat also had gained over to his Interest a certain false Prophet called Shemaiah, who would have intimidated Nehemiah, advising (Nehem. vi. 10.) him to shut himself up in the Temple, to prevent any Attempt upon his Life. But Nehemiah, by his great Prudence, avoided falling into this Snare.

Nehemiah being obliged to return to King Artaxerxes to Shushan [c], in this Interim, the High-Priest Eliashib married his Grandson Manasseh, the Son of Joiada, to a Daughter of Sanballat, and he allowed one called Tobiah, a Kinsman of Sanballat's, to have an Apartment in the Temple. But Nehemiah at his Return to Jerusalem [d], drove Tobiah out of the Temple, and would not suffer Manasseh, the High-Priest's Grandson, to continue in the City, nor to perform the Functions of the Priesthood. Manasseh being thus expelled, retired to his Father-in-Law Sanballat, who provided him the Means of exercising his Priestly Office upon Mount Gerizim, upon the following Occasion.

When Alexander the Great came into Phenicia [e], and lay down before the City of Tyre, Sanballat quitted the Interests of Darius King of Persia, and went at the Head of Eight thousand Men, to offer his Service to Alexander. This Prince readily entertained him, and being much sollicited by him, gave him Leave to erect a Temple upon Mount Gerizim, where he constituted his Son-in-Law Manasseh the High-Priest. Sanballat must at this time be very old, for One hundred and twenty Years before, that is, in the Year of the World 3550, he was then Governor of the Samaritans. Indeed, some have been of Opinion *, that the Sanballat who lived in the Time of Alexander, was different from that Sanballat who so eagerly opposed Nehemiah; but we see no absolute Necessity of admitting this.

In the Year of the World 3672, before Christ 328. before the Vulgar Era 322. * Dr. Prideaux in his Connexion of the Histories of the Old and New Testament, rejects the Solution of this Difficulty, by supposing two Sanballats, and endeavours to reconcile it to Truth and Probability, by shewing it to be a Mistake of Josephus. This Author makes Sanballat to flourish in the Time of Darius Codomannus, and to build his Temple upon Mount Gerizim by Licence from Alexander the Great; whereas it was performed by Leave from Darius Nothus, in the fifteenth Year of his Reign. This takes away the Difficulty arising from the great Age of Sanballat, and brings him to be Cotemporary with Nehemiah, as the Scripture History requires.

However, Josephus makes Sanballat a Cuthite originally, and makes no mention of him that withstood Nehemiah. The Wife of Manasseh he calls by the Name of Nicaso, and says, that Sanballat died nine Months after he had submitted himself to Alexander.

SANCHONIATHON. It is said that this Name in Phenician signifies the Zeal of the Law. Porphyry, as quoted by Eusebius, says, that Sanchoniathon of Berythus, who lived before the Trojan War, being desirous to make a compleat History of what related to the Phenicians, gathered together out of publick Archives, and from particular Cities, all that might contribute to his Design. That to this he joined the Study of the Jewish History, which was supplied him out of the Memoirs of Jerombal Priest of the God Jevo. This Work of Sanchoniathon was first written in Phenician, and afterwards translated into Greek by Philo of Biblos. Porphyry makes large Extracts out of it, which Eusebius has copied, and has inserted into his Books of the Evangelical Preparation. Some Learned Men have thought [a], that Jerombal Priest of the God Jevo, was no other than Gideon, to whom the Scripture gives also the Name of Jerubbaal, and who might have been taken for a Priest of the God Jevo, because he sacrificed to the God Jehovah, and had an Ephod or Sacerdotal Vestment in his Possession. But other learned Men in great Numbers [b], make a Doubt of all that is said of Sanchoniathon; and some of them proceed so far, as to doubt whether such an Author really existed or no, and think that Porphyry, who only has quoted him, was the first Contriver of him.

Euseb. Præpar. l. 1. c. 9.

Judg. vi. 32.

Judg. vi. 20, 26, 27. viii. 27, 29.

These are the chief Reasons that gave room to believe, that this Author never had any Being, and that this Work is fictitious, intending to weaken the Authority of the Sacred Books of the Jews, by shewing that their Theology is taken from that of the Phenicians, and at the same time to subvert the Christian Religion, which is founded upon the Old Testament. The first Argument that is advanced against its being authentick, is the Silence of the Antients. What Probability is there that the Grecians, who made so many Conquests in the East, and who were so inquisitive into antient Books, should neglect or forget this? 'Tis said, that Philo of Biblos did not translate it but in the Time of Adrian. This was still soon enough for its being known and quoted by the antient Greek Fathers, as Justin Martyr, Tatian, Origen, who lived in Egypt, or Palestine, who yet make no mention of it. Eusebius, who quotes it, had not seen it intire, he only knew some Fragments of it that were cited by Porphyry.

The second Argument is taken from the Book itself, or from the Fragments of the pretended Sanchoniathon. We may see through his whole Story that he would copy from Moses, and adjust him to the Fables of the Greeks. But in this he succeeds so lamely, that he betrays himself in every Line. He was acquainted with the Chaos of Moses, the Spirit that moved upon the Waters, the Formation of Reasonable Creatures, and of those that are devoid of Reason. He represents the Almighty Fiat of the Creator under the Notion of Thunder, which awakens these Animals, and gives them Life; and under the Name of the Wind Kolpia, or the Word of the Mouth of God. The First-born that he speaks of is Adam, who worships Baal Samin, or the God of Heaven. Nemrum is the same as Nimrod. The Hunter and the Fisher are probably the Founders of Sidon; Zeida in Hebrew signifying Fishing and Hunting. The Husbandman is Noah. Misor is Mizraim the Founder or Father of the Egyptians. Berith is the Wife of Elion. Elion in Hebrew signifies the Most-High; Berith is Covenant. Baal Berith is known in the Book of Judges. Hitherto it is tolerable.

But what does he mean when he says, that the God Dagon is derived from Wheat, and is the same as Jupiter the Siton; that Saturn was surnamed Israel by the Phenicians; that the same Saturn sacrificed his Son Jehud; that they gave the Name of Elohim to the Allies of Ilus or Israel? He had some Knowledge of the History of Abraham and Isaac, but it was so superficial, that he confounds the former with his Grandson Jacob or Israel. The Hebrews sometimes give to God the Name Shadai, that is to say, Self-sufficient. The pretended Sanchoniathon derives it from another Root which signifies the Fields. He has taken many Things from the Fables of the Greeks, which he shuffles into the Theology of the Phenicians and Hebrews. What he says of Leon, and of the First-born, seems to be taken from the Mistake of the Valentinians.

'Tis affirmed, that he has fallen into a gross Error in speaking of the City of Tyre, which must have been unknown to him, supposing that he lived in the Time of Gideon, and before the Trojan War; because it is believed that Tyre was not built till about Two hundred and forty Years before the Temple of Solomon. But this last Fact is attended with Difficulties upon two Accounts; The first is, because Gideon lived Two hundred and forty Years before Solomon; and the second, because old Tyre,

SANCTIFY. To ſanctify is often put inſtead of to prepare. Thus Joſhua ſays to

In Iſaiah, the Lord calls the Medes his ſanctified. Ego mandavi ſanctificatis meis. I have appointed, and, as it were, conſecrated them to be the Executioners of my Vengeance againſt Babylon. See alſo Numb. xi. 18. Sanctify yourſelves againſt To-morrow, and ye ſhall eat Fleſh. And Joſhua vii. 13. Up, ſanctify the People, and ſay, ſanctify yourſelves againſt To-morrow, for thus ſays the Lord God of Iſrael, There is an accurſed Thing in the Midſt of thee, O Iſrael. And xii. 3. Pull them out like Sheep for the Slaughter, and prepare them for the Day of Slaughter. The Hebrew ſays, ſanctify them. And li. 27, 28. Aſſemble the Troops againſt Jeruſalem, prepare the Nations againſt her, or ſanctify them. And Joel i. 14. Sanctify ye a Faſt, ordain a ſolemn Faſt. Mich. iii. 5. The falſe Prophets ſanctify (or prepare) War againſt thoſe who will not give them ſomething: They declare War, or denounce Evils againſt them. Zeph. i. 7. The Lord hath prapared his Victims for the Day of Vengeance, he hath bid his Gueſts: The Hebrew ſays, ſanctified them.

We deſire of God, that his Name may be ſanctified or hallowed; that is to ſay, honoured, praiſed, and glorified through the whole World, and eſpecially by thoſe who have the Happineſs of knowing him. Let them ſanctify it by their good Lives, their Fidelity, their Submiſſion to his Orders. And they that know him not, that they may come to the Knowledge of him, may hear his Word, may become tractable to the Inſtructions of his Preachers. We may apprehend yet better what is meant by ſanctifying the Name of God, by what is oppoſite to it; that is, profaning the Name of God, by vain ſwearing, baſpheming, and aſcribing his Name to Idols; by furniſhing wicked Men and Infidels with an Occaſion of blaſpheming it by our bad Lives, and ſcandalous Converſation.

Levit. x. 3. It is ſaid, I will be ſanctified in them that come nigh me; in his Prieſts, when by the terrible and exemplary Puniſhment of Nadab and Abihu, the Lord ſhewed what Purity he required in his Servants, what punctual Exactneſs he expected in his Service. The Lord complains in another Place, that Moſes and Aaron did not ſanctify him before the People of Iſrael. Becauſe ye believed me not, to ſanctify me in the Eyes of the Children of Iſrael, therefore ye ſhall not bring this Congregation into the Land which I have given them. And how did they not ſanctify him? Thoſe that approach to holy Things are ſanctified; for Example, 'tis allowed to the Ex. xxix.

If any one of the Laity ſhould approach thereto, he would have contracted an Uncleanneſs which muſt have been expiated. So that to ſanctify often ſtands for to defile, or to contract an Impurity, which would require to be purified by Sacrifices, or at leaſt by bathing and waſhing of the Cloaths. See alſo Exod. xxx. 29. Qui tetigerit ea ſanctificabitur. Levit. vi. 18, 27. Compare Levit. xxii. 15, 16. when God expreſly forbids that the Laity ſhould eat of the ſanctified Things.

SANCTUARY. They called by this Name that part of the Temple of Jeruſalem, which was the moſt ſecret and moſt retired of all the reſt, in which was the Ark of the Covenant, and wherein none but the High-Prieſt might enter, and he but once in a Year, which was upon the Day of ſolemn Expiation. The ſame Name was alſo given to the moſt ſacred Part of the Tabernacle, which was ſet up in the Wilderneſs, and which remained ſtill ſome time after the Building of the Temple. Each of theſe were called Sanctuarium, or Sancta Sanctorum. The Reader may ſee the Sanctuary deſcribed, with all its Dimenſions, in the Article TABERNACLE, and in that of TEMPLE.

Sometimes the Word Sanctuary is uſed in general for the Temple, or for the holy Place, for the Place appointed for the publick Worſhip of the Lord. It ſhould ſeem alſo, that Moſes makes uſe of it inſtead of the Holy Land. Thou ſhalt bring them in, Ex. xv. 17.

(Deuter. xxvi. 15.) Respice de Sanctuaria tuo, & de excelso cœlorum habitaculo. The Hebrew fays, Look from the Dwelling of thy Sanctuary, from the high Heaven.

SAND. A Similitude taken from the Sand of the Sea is often made ufe of, to exprefs a very great Multitude, or a very great Weight, or fomething very mean and of little Confequence. God promifes (Gen. xxii. 17. xxxii. 12.) Abraham and Jacob to multiply their Pofterity as the Stars of Heaven, and as the Sand of the Sea. (Job vi. 3.) Job compares the Weight of his Misfortunes to that of the Sand of the Sea. And Solomon fays, (Proverbs xxvii. 3.) That tho' Sand and Gravel are very heavy things, yet the Anger of a Fool is much heavier. And the Author of Ecclefiafticus fays, (Ecclus. xxii. 18.) That a Fool is more infupportable than the Weight of Sand, Lead, or Iron.

We have already taken notice, under the Article GLASS, that the Sand of Paleftine was much ufed for the making of Glafs. See Deut. xxxiii. 19.

We have alfo obferved, under the Word PHÆNIX, that the Paffage of Job tranflated by ficut palma, or ficut Phœnix multiplicabo dies, fignifies according to the Hebrew, I will multiply his Days as the Sand. Job xxix. 18.

(Jer. v. 22.) The Prophets magnify the Omnipotence of God, who has fix'd the Sand of the Shore for the Boundaries of the Sea, and has faid to it; Hitherto thou fhalt come, and here thou fhalt break thy foaming Waves, and fhalt pafs no further.

(Matth. vii. 26.) Our Saviour tells us, that the Fool lays the Foundations of his Houfe upon the Sand; whereas the Wife-man founds it upon a Rock.

(Ecclus. xviii. 8.) The Author of Ecclefiafticus fays, That the Years of the longeft Life of Man are but as a Drop of Water, or as a Grain of Sand. And the Author of the Book of (Wif. vii. 9.) Wifdom fays, That all the Gold in the World, compared to Wifdom, are but as the fmalleft Grain of Sand.

SANDALS. We find the Name of Sandals in three Paffages of Scripture. When Judith went to the Camp of Holofernes, (Judith x. 4.) fhe put Sandals on her Feet. And Holofernes was captivated at the Sight of thefe Sandals. (Judith xvi. 9.) Her Sandals ravifhed his Eyes. They were a magnificent Kind of Stockens or Buskins, of an extraordinary Beauty, and were proper only to Ladies of Condition, and fuch as drefs'd themfelves out to be admired. They had generally Slaves to carry their Sandals, which were fometimes of Gold, or other precious Matter; and they had often Cafes or Boxes to put them in. Thefe Cafes in Menander are called Sandalothecæ; and the Slaves that carry'd the Sandals are call'd Pueri fandali-geruli, or Puellæ fandali-gerulæ. (Plaut. in Trinum. Act. 2. fcen. 1.) John the Baptift fays of himfelf, that he was not worthy to be fandali-gerulus to our Saviour. (Mat. iii. 11.) Whofe Shoes I am not worthy to bear. The prophane Writers fay, That when Hercules became Slave to Omphale, fhe often us'd to give him Correction with her Sandal [a].

But there were Sandals alfo belonging to Men, and which were by no means of any Value. Jefus Chrift allows the Ufe of 'em to his Difciples; (Mar. vi. 9.) and whole Nations wore them, as the Nabatheans. (Strabo Geograph. l. 16.) At firft Sandals were only Soles tyed to the Feet with Strings or Thongs; afterwards they were cover'd, and at laft they call'd even Shoes Sandals. In Authors that fpeak of Ecclefiaftical Rites and Ornaments, we find the Word Sandals to fignify a valuable Kind of Shoes, worn by the Prelates at Solemnities. The Reader may confult Benedictus Baudouinus, in his Treatife de Calceo antiquo. M. Du Cange, Gloffar. Sandalia, Saumaife upon Tertullian, De Pallio, &c.

SANHEDRIM, or Sanhedria, a corrupted Word, and form'd from the Greek Word Synedrion, which fignifies an Affembly, as thofe of Parliaments and Sovereign Courts, where many Judges and Counfellors meet together, to confult on and determine great Affairs. The Jews call Sanhedrim or Beth-din, the Houfe of Judgment, a Council of Seventy Senators, who affembled in an Apartment of the Temple of Jerufalem, and there determin'd the moft important Affairs of the Nation. The Chief of this Affembly was called Nafi or Prince; (נשי Nafhi. Princeps.) his Deputy was called Ab-beth-din [b], Father of the Houfe of Judgment, and the Sub-Deputy was call'd Chacam, that is, the Wife. (חכם Chacham, Sapiens.) The reft were called Elders or Senators. (זקנים Senes, Senatores.) The Room they met in was a Rotunda, half of which was built without the Temple, and half within; that is to fay, there was one Semicircle of the Room within the Compafs of the Temple, and as it was never allowed to fit down in the Temple, they tell us this Part was for thofe that ftood up; the other Half or Semicircle extended itfelf without the Holy Place, and 'twas here the Judges fat.

The Nafi or Prince fat upon a Throne at the End of the Hall, having his Deputy at his Right-hand, and Sub-Deputy at his Left. The other Senators were ranged in order on each Side. This Hall was call'd Lifhcath-Haggazith, [c] or the Hall paved with Stones; and fome think it to be the fame call'd in St. John [d] Lithoftrotos, or paved with Stones. [a] They ſuppoſe what to me is very improbable, that when the Jews accuſed Jeſus Chriſt before Pilate, they would not enter into the Prætorium, that they might not be defiled, but prevailed with Pilate to come into the Sanhedrim, there to hear their Accuſations againſt our Saviour.

The Rabbins pretend, that the Sanhedrim has always ſubſiſted in their Nation from the Time of Moſes, down to the Deſtruction of the Temple by the Romans. They date the Eſtabliſhment of it from what happen'd in the Wilderneſs, ſome time after the People departed from Sinai [b]. Moſes being diſcouraged by the continual Murmurings of the Iſraelites, addreſſed himſelf to God, and deſired to be relieved at leaſt from ſome Part of the Burden of Government. Then the Lord ſaid to him; Gather unto me ſeventy Men of the Elders of Iſrael, whom thou knoweſt to be the Elders of the People, and Officers over them; and bring them unto the Tabernacle of the Congregation, that they may ſtand there with thee. And I will come down and talk with thee there; and I will take of the Spirit which is upon thee, and will put it upon them; and they ſhall bear the Burden of the People with thee, that thou bear it not thy ſelf alone. The Lord therefore poured out his Spirit upon theſe Men, who began from that Time to propheſy, and have not ceaſed from that Time. The Sanhedrim was compoſed of ſeventy Counſellors, ſix out of each Tribe, and Moſes, as Preſident, made up the Number ſeventy-one *. To prove the uninterrupted Succeſſion of the Judges of the Sanhedrim, there is nothing unattempted by the Partiſans of this Opinion. They find a Proof where others cannot ſo much as perceive any Appearance or Shadow of it. Grotius may be ſeen in many Places of his Commentaries, upon Scripture, and in his Firſt Book De jure belli & pacis, c. 3. art. 20. and Selden in his large Work divided into three Tomes, where he treats de Synedriis veterum Hebræorum. Laſtly, our Diſſertation may be conſulted, concerning the Polity of the antient Hebrews, printed before our Comment upon the Book of Numbers.

As to the perſonal Qualifications of the Judges of this Bench; their Birth was to be untainted. They were often taken of the Race of the Prieſts or Levites, or out of the Number of the inferior Judges, or from the leſſer Sanhedrim, which conſiſted only of Twenty-three Judges. See the Article JUDGES. They were to be skilful in the Law, as well Traditional as Written. They were obliged to ſtudy Magick, Divination, Fortune-telling, Phyſick, Aſtrology, Arithmetick, and Languages. The Jews ſay, they were to know to the Number of ſeventy Tongues, that is, they were to know all the Tongues, for the Hebrews acknowledged but Seventy in all, and perhaps this is too great a Number. Eunuchs were excluded from the Sanhedrim, becauſe of their Cruelty, Uſurers, decrepid Perſons, Players at Games of Chance, thoſe that had any bodily Deformities, thoſe that had brought up Pigeons to decoy others to their Pigeon-Houſes, and thoſe that made a Gain of their Fruits in the Sabbatical Year. Some alſo exclude the High-prieſt and the King, becauſe of their too great Power; but others will have it, that the Kings always preſided in the Sanhedrim, while there were any Kings in Iſrael. Laſtly, it was required, that the Members of the Sanhedrim ſhould be of mature Age, rich, of handſom Countenance and Body. We ſpeak now according to the Notions of the Rabbins, without pretending to warrant their Opinions. We have ſufficiently explained our ſelves in this Matter, in the Diſſertation referr'd to above.

The Authority of the great Sanhedrim was vaſtly extenſive. This Council decided ſuch Cauſes as were brought before it by way of Appeal from the inferior Courts. The King, the High-prieſt, the Prophets, were under its Juriſdiction. If the King offended againſt the Law, for example, if he married above eighteen Wives, if he kept too many Horſes, if he hoarded up too much Gold and Silver, the Sanhedrim had him ſtripp'd and whipp'd in their Preſence. But Whipping, they ſay, among the Hebrews was not at all ignominious; and the King bore this Correction by way of Penance, and himſelf made Choice of the Perſon that was to exerciſe this Diſcipline over him. Alſo the general Affairs of the Nation were brought before the Sanhedrim. The Right of Judging in Capital Caſes belong'd to this Court, and this Sentence could not be pronounced in any other Place, but in the Hall called Laſchat-haggazith; from whence it came to paſs that the Jews were forced to quit this Hall, when the Power of Life and Death was taken out of their Hands, forty Years before the Deſtruction of their Temple, and three Years before the Death of Jeſus Chriſt.

In the Time of Moſes this Council was held at the Door of the Tabernacle of the Teſtimony. As ſoon as the People were in Poſſeſſion of the Land of Promiſe, the Sanhedrim followed the Tabernacle. It was kept ſucceſſively at Gilgal, at Shiloh, at Kirjath-jearim, at Nob, at Gibeon in the Houſe of Obed-edom; and laſtly, it was ſettled at Jeruſalem, till the Babyloniſh Captivity. During the Captivity it was kept up at Babylon. After the Return from Babylon, it continued at Jeruſalem to the Time of the Sicarii or Aſſaſſins. Then finding that theſe profligate Wretches, whoſe Number increaſed every Day, ſometimes eſcaped Puniſhment by the Favour of the Preſident or Judges, it was removed to Hanoth, which were certain Abodes ſituated, as the Rabbins tell us, upon the Mountain of the Temple. From thence they came down into the City of Jeruſalem, withdrawing themſelves by degrees from the Temple. Afterwards they removed to Jamnia, thence to Jericho, to Uzzah, to Shepharvaim, to Bethſanim, to Sephoris, laſt of all to Tiberias, where they continued to the Time of their utter Extinction. And this is the Account the Jews themſelves give us of the Sanhedrim.

Petav. de Doctrin. temp. l. 2. c. 26. — But the Learned do not agree with them in all this. Father Petau fixes the Beginning of the Sanhedrim not till Gabinius was Governor of Judea, who erected Tribunals in the five principal Cities of Judea [a]; at Jeruſalem, at Gadara, at Amathus, at Jericho, at Sephora or Sephoris, a City of Galilee. Grot. ad 1 Par. xxi. 4. — Grotius places the Beginning under Moſes, as the Rabbins do, but he makes it determine at the Beginning of Herod's Reign. Mr. Baſnage, [b] in his Hiſtory of the Jews, at firſt thought that the Sanhedrim began under Gabinius; but afterwards he places it under Judas Maccabæus, or under his Brother Jonathan. 1 Macc. xii. 6. — We ſee indeed, under Jonathan Maccabæus, in the Year 3860, that the Senate with the High-prieſt ſent an Embaſſy to the Romans. The Rabbins ſay, that Alexander Janneus, King of the Jews, of the Race of the Aſmoneans, appear'd before the Sanhedrim, and claim'd a Right of ſitting there, whether the Senators would or no. Joſephus informs us, that when Herod was but yet Governor of Galilee, he was ſummon'd before the Senate, where he appear'd. It muſt be therefore acknowledg'd, that the Sanhedrim was in Being before the Reign of Herod. It was in Being afterwards, as we find from the Goſpel, and from the Acts. Jeſus Chriſt in Mat. v. 22. — St. Matthew diſtinguiſhes two Tribunals. Whoſoever is angry with hs Brother without a Cauſe, ſhall be in Danger of the Judgment. This, they ſay, is the Tribunal of the twenty-three Judges. And whoſoever ſhall ſay to his Brother, Raca, ſhall be in Danger of the Council: That is, of the great Sanhedrim, which had the Right of Life and Death, at leaſt generally, and before this Right was taken away by the Romans. Some think that the Juriſdiction of the Council of twenty-three extended to Life and Death alſo; but it is certain that the Sanhedrim was ſuperior to this Council. See alſo Mark xiii. 9. xiv. 55. xv. 1. Luke xxii. 52, 66. John xi. 47. Acts iv. 15. v. 21. where mention is made of the Synedrion.

From all this it may be concluded, that the Origen of the Sanhedrim is by no means to be depended upon; for the Council of the ſeventy Elders eſtabliſhed by Moſes, was not what the Hebrews underſtand by the Name of Sanhedrim. Beſides, we cannot perceive that this Eſtabliſhment ſubſiſted either under Joſhua, the Judges, or the Kings. We find nothing of it after the Captivity, till the Time of Jonathan Maccabæus. The Tribunals erected by Gabinius were ſtill very different from the Sanhedrim. This was the only one of its Kind, and fix'd at Jeruſalem; whereas Gabinius eſtabliſh'd five at five different Cities, which Tribunals do not appear to be ſubordinate one to another. Laſtly, it is certain, that this Senate was in Being in the Time of Jeſus Chriſt, and when St. Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John writ their Goſpels; ſince they are mention'd in their Writings: But the Jews inform us themſelves, that they had no longer then the Power of Life and Death. — John xviii. 31. He ſucceeded Eſarhaddon in the Year of the World 3336, before Chriſt 664, before the vulgar Era 668. He reigned twenty Years, and died in the Year of the World 3356, before Chriſt 644, before the vulgar Era 642. His Succeſſor was Chinaladan, or Saracus. It is needleſs to repeat here what we have already ſaid of this Prince, under the Articles NEBUCHADNEZZAR I. and HOLOFERNES.

SARAC, or Saracus, otherwise call'd Chinaladan, succeeded Saosduchin in the Kingdom of Assyria, in the Year of the World 3356, before Christ 644, before the Vulgar Era 648: He reigned two and twenty Years, and died in the Year of the World 3378, before Christ 622, before the Vulgar Era 626. His Reign is famous in History, because it was in his time that Nabopolassar and Astyages, (the first being a Babylonian, and General of Sarac's Army, and the latter being Son of Cyaxares King of the Medes) conspired together against him, besieged Nineveh, took it, deprived Sarac of the Kingdom, and divided his Dominions between them. Astyages reigned in Media, and Nabopolassar in Assyria. This Event is a famous Epocha among the Chronologers. We place it, with Usher, in the Year of the World 3378, before Christ 622, before the Vulgar Era 626.

I. SARAH, or Sarai, or Sara, the Wife of Abraham, Daughter of Terah, but born of a Mother different from Abraham's; since Abraham himself assures us, [b] that she was really his Sister, the Daughter of his Father, but not the Daughter of his Mother. Terah might have had several Wives at once, according to the Custom of the Country where he lived; or might have marry'd again, after the Death of Abraham's Mother, by which last Wife he might have had Sarai. However this be, this Opinion seems to us much better founded, than the Opinion of those who make Sarah the same as Iscah the Daughter of Haran the Niece of Abraham, and Grand-daughter of Terah. However, this is the Opinion of Josephus [c], of St. Jerom [d], of St. Austin [e], of Tostat, of Genebrard, and of a great Number of Commentators. Ita Eutyc. Alex. in Chronic. Gen. xi. 29.

Sarai was born in the Year of the World 2018, before Christ 1982, before the Vulgar Era 1986. ſite Beauty, he was afraid ſhe ſhould be taken away from him, and that he might be put to Death on her Account. When the Famine prevail'd in the Land of Canaan, which was the Year after Abraham came into this Country, he was obliged to withdraw into Egypt, where the Famine did not reach [a]. He then ſaid to Sarah; I conjure you to ſay that you are my Siſter, that the Egyptians may uſe me well for your ſake, and not take away my Life. When Abraham came into the Country, Sarah was taken away from him, and carry'd to Pharaoh's Palace. But the Lord viſited this Prince and all his Family with great Plagues, becauſe of Sarah. And Pharaoh then knowing that ſhe was Abraham's Wife, he reproved him very ſharply, for ſaying ſhe was his Siſter, by which means he might have taken her to Wife, if God had not prevented him. He therefore reſtored her to Abraham, and had them conducted out of Egypt, for fear any Injury or Outrage might be done them.

This Conduct of Abraham and Sarah has given Occaſion to many Speculations among the Learned. Abraham ſeem'd to expoſe Sarah to the Danger of committing Adultery; and ſhe ſeem'd too eaſily to conſent to it, by pretending ſhe was only the Siſter of Abraham, and not his Wife. There is ſome Difficulty in vindicating ſuch a Management on both Sides. In Abraham, there ſeems to have been Lying, Diſguiſe, and too great Eaſineſs, in tempting his Wife's Chaſtity; and in her, too great Forwardneſs to conſent to it. Origen, ſpeaking of what happened to Abraham, in reſpect of Abimelech King of Gerar, where he was in the ſame Circumſtances as theſe now mention'd, ſays, that this Patriarch not only told a Lye, but even betray'd and expos'd his Wife's Chaſtity. Fauſtus the Manichean [b] calls Abraham an infamous Barterer of his Wife's Modeſty, which he ſold to two Kings, to gratify his own Avarice and Gluttony. St. Chryſoſtom [c], who ſeriouſly endeavours to excuſe Abraham and Sarah, acknowledges, however, that this Patriarch expoſed Sarah to the Danger of committing Adultery; and that Sarah conſented to be expoſed to this Danger, to ſave the Life of her Huſband. Laſtly, Some Moderns [d] have very loudly declared, that in this Matter, they could not approve the Conduct of Abraham and Sarah.

Origen. homil. 6. in Geneſ. Gen. xx. 12.

St. Auſtin [e] makes an Apology for Abraham, ſaying, 1*ſt*, That he did not tell a Lye, by affirming Sarah to be his Siſter, as indeed ſhe was: He conceal'd a Truth which he was not obliged to diſcover, by not telling that ſhe was his Wife. 2*dly*, That being expoſed at the ſame time to two Dangers, one of loſing his Life, and the other of having his Wife taken from him, or diſhonoured, and not being able to avoid either of them, by owning her for his Wife, but thinking it at leaſt probable that he ſhould eſcape Death, if he only own'd her for his Siſter; he took this laſt Reſolution, and of two Evils, he choſe what ſeem'd to him the leaſt, leaving to Providence the Care of his Wife's Chaſtity, and knowing beſides her virtuous Diſpoſition, that whatever Injury her Body might ſuffer, her Will would have no Share in it; ſo that the Adultery (if it ſhould happen) being involuntary on both Sides, it would be without either Guilt or Infamy. St. Chryſoſtom may be read upon this Paſſage, and the Commentators upon Gen. xii. 12, 13, &c.

But let us return to the Hiſtory of Sarah. Knowing, on the one hand, that God had promiſed a numerous Poſterity to Abraham, and, on the other, finding her ſelf to be barren, ſhe thought that poſſibly the Promiſes of God were to be performed by Means of ſome other Woman that her Huſband might take; ſhe therefore deſired Abraham to take her Servant Hagar, [f] that at leaſt, by her Means, ſhe might ſee ſome Iſſue from Abraham. He complied with his Wife's Requeſt, and took Hagar as a Wife of the ſecond Order, according to the Cuſtom of thoſe Ages. But when Hagar found her ſelf with Child, ſhe began to uſe her Miſtreſs with Contempt. Sarah complain'd of it to Abraham; who told her, that Hagar was ſtill her Slave, and ſhe might diſpoſe of her at her Pleaſure. Upon this ſhe began to uſe her ill, and Hagar fled away from her; but ſhe return'd ſome time after, and ſubmitted her ſelf to her Miſtreſs.

Some Years after, God appeared to Abraham, [g] made a Covenant with him, inſtituted Circumciſion; changed his Name of Abram, or Exalted Father, into that of Abraham, or Father of a great Multitude; and changed the Name of Sarai, or My Princeſs, into that of Sarah, or Princeſs; and promis'd Abraham that he ſhould have a Son by Sarah. The ſame Year he entertain'd in his Tent three Angels in the Form of Men, who repeated to him the Promiſe made by God, of the Birth of a Son, and aſſured him, that the preſent Year ſhould not expire, before he ſaw the Completion of this Promiſe. Sarah was behind the Door of her Tent, and hearing this, began to laugh within her ſelf, ſaying, After I am now become old, and my Lord is old alſo, ſhall I receive Pleaſure? Then the Lord ſaid to Abraham, Why did Sarah laugh? Is there any thing impoſſible to God? Sarah ſhall indeed have a Son within a Year's time. Sarah deny'd that ſhe had laugh'd; but the Lord ſaid to her, It is not ſo, for you ſurely did laugh.

A little while after, [a] Abraham went to dwell at Gerar a City of the Philiſtines; and Abimelech King of this City took away Sarah, who, tho' now fourſcore and ten Years old, and then with Child of Iſaac, was ſtill a very handſome Woman. But the Lord appeared to Abimelech in a Dream, and threatned to puniſh him with Death, if he did not reſtore her to her Husband. The Day after, early in the Morning, this Prince came to Abraham, and brought his Wife to him, reproaching him very much with his Diſſimulation, in pretending ſhe was his Siſter. Abraham excuſed himſelf, by ſaying, that ſhe was indeed his Siſter, being born from the ſame Father, tho' not from the ſame Mother. Abimelech made great Preſents to Abraham, and offer'd a thouſand Pieces of Silver to Sarah, that ſhe might purchaſe a Veil to cover her Face, and be no more expos'd to the ſame Danger.

The Year following ſhe brought forth a Son, [b] to whom ſhe gave the Name of Iſaac, that is Laughter, as by way of Alluſion to her Laughing, when God promis'd her a Son, and to ſhew the great Joy that this Birth produced in her: She ſuckled the Child her ſelf; and when it was to be weaned, that is, about three Years after, as the moſt probable Opinion is, Abraham made a great Feaſt for his Friends. Some time after this, [c] when Sarah ſaw Iſhmael at play with Iſaac, or,
Gal. iv. 29. according to St. Paul, Iſhmael then perſecuted or teized Iſaac, ſhe ſaid to Abraham, Caſt out this Servant, with her Son, for Iſhmael ſhall not inherit with Iſaac. Abraham made ſome Difficulty at complying with this Requeſt, but God ordered him to do what Sarah deſired; ſo that he ſent away Hagar and Iſhmael, in the Manner we have mention'd under their Articles.

Gen. 23. 1, 19. The Scripture tells us no more of Sarah 'till her Death, which happen'd ſome Years after the famous Trial that God made of Abraham's Faith, [d] by commanding him to ſacrifice Iſaac. Sarah was an hundred and twenty-ſeven Years old when ſhe died: She was then in the Valley of Hebron, and Abraham came to Beer-ſheba to mourn for her. We know not the Occaſion of this Abſence of Abraham; but the Scripture ſays expreſly, he went into this Valley to mourn for her; and that after he had paid this his laſt Duty to her, he came into the City, and bought a Field of Ephron the Ammonite, in which there was a Cave hewn into the Rock, where there were new Tombs. The Text of the Vulgate calls this Cave by the Name of Double; but the Hebrew Text calls it Machpelah, מכפלה Duplex. which perhaps might be the Name of the See Machpelah. Field where this Cave was.

Some have thought, that Sarah knew nothing of Abraham's Intention of ſacrificing his Son, and that ſhe was not acquainted with it 'till after they were return'd from Moriah. Others have maintain'd, that ſhe died with Grief, when ſhe was told, that Rab. quidam apud Abraham had really ſacrificed Iſaac. 'Twas Toſtat. in a falſe Report made to terrify her. Joſephus ſays, ſhe died ſoon after this Event: Gen. xxiii. But, according to his Calculation, ſhe muſt have liv'd twelve Years after that; ſince, according to him, Iſaac was five-and-twenty Years old when his Father would have ſacrificed him, and Sarah was ninety Years old when ſhe bore Iſaac, and one hundred and twenty-ſeven when ſhe died. Uſher alſo puts eleven or twelve Years between Abraham's Trial, and the Death of Sarah. The Talmudiſts and St. Epiphanius put Sarah in the Catalogue of Propheteſſes of the Old Teſtament.

Sarah, Abraham's Wife, according to the Orientals, was Daughter of Nahor, and Grand-daughter of Terah, and, conſequently, Mother to this Patriarch. Sarah's Mother was another Sarah, Daughter of Terah and Tahouiah his ſecond Wife; for D'Herbelot. Bibl. his firſt Wife, whoſe Name was Jounah, Orient. was Mother to Abraham. p. 759.

'Twas ſaid, that an Evil Spirit call'd Aſmodæus hindred them from coming near her. One Day, when Sarah was reproving one of her Maids for ſome Fault ſhe had committed, ſhe upbraided Sarah, ſaying, Let us never ſee either Son or Daughter from you, you that have murder'd your Husbands: Would you alſo kill me, as you have already kill'd your ſeven Husbands? Words, Sarah went up into a Chamber that was at the Top of the House, and there continued in Prayer for three Days and three Nights, without either eating or drinking. The third Day she thus finish'd her Prayer to God; "May thy Name be "blessed, O God of our Fathers! Deliver "me, O Lord, from this Reproach, or "take me away from the Face of the "Earth. Thou knowest that I have never "desired an Husband, and that I have "preserved my Soul pure from all evil "Desires, and that I have never sought "for the Company of such as are light "and vain. If I have consented to take "an Husband, I have done it in thy Fear, "and not to gratify any Inclinations of "my own: Either I was unworthy of "those that were given me, or perhaps "they were not worthy of me, and be- "cause thou hast reserved me for some "other Spouse. O God of Israel, may "thy Name be blessed in all Ages!"

This Prayer of Sarah was offer'd up to the Lord at the same time as that of Tobit, whom God had afflicted with the Loss of his Sight; and the Lord sent the Angel Raphael to relieve them both. The History of TOBIT may be seen under his Article. Young Tobias being upon his Journey to Rages, under the Conduct of Raphael, who had assumed a human Shape, they came to the City of Ecbatana [a]. Tobias asked Raphael where they should lodge. The Angel told him, There is here a Man call'd Raguel, who is of your Tribe, and one of your Relations; he has a Daughter call'd Sarah, who is his only Child; all his Estate ought to come to you; and you being his nearest Kinsman, according to the Law, ought to marry his Daughter: Ask her therefore of her Father, and he will give her you in Marriage. Tobias told him, He was afraid that the same thing might happen to him, as had already happen'd to Sarah's seven former Husbands. But Raphael encouraging him, and having inform'd him in what Manner good People
Tob. vii. 1,2,3,&c. should undertake Matrimony, they went together to Raguel. Tobias demanded Sarah in Marriage, and obtain'd her without Difficulty; especially when the Angel acquainted Raguel, that he had nothing to apprehend on this Account; that the young Man feared God; that his Daughter was reserved for him, and that it was upon his Account that no other could have her for Wife. Raguel having put his Daughter's Hand into that of Tobias, he bless'd their Marriage, wrote the Contract, and made them a great Feast.

Tob. viii. 1,2,3,&c. When the Evening was come, Tobias was introduced into the Chamber of Sarah; then taking out of his Pocket a Part of the Liver of a Fish that he had taken in the Tigris, he put it upon burning Coals. The Demon Asmodæus being not able to endure this Fume, retired from thence; and the Angel Raphael seized him, and chained him down in the Upper Egypt. This was perform'd in an invisible manner, and no one was sensible of the Departure of the Evil Angel, but by the Safety of young Tobias. It is not easy to apprehend, according to the Notion that we now have of Good and Evil Angels, how Fumes and ill Scents are able to drive them away, nor how they can be pleased with good Smells and Perfumes. The Antients did not judge of these Things as we do. But abstracting from their Prejudices and our own in this Matter, we may believe that this Fume was only the moral or occasional Cause of the Flight of the Demon, and that it was Raphael, by God's Appointment, that really drove him away. The good or ill Smell of the Liver of this Fish, might also make some Impression on the Senses of the married Couple; and might suppress in them the Motions of Concupiscence, and dispose them to pass this Night and the two following in Prayer and Continence. And this was, besides, a very effectual Method to drive from them the Demon of Impurity.

As to the rest, the Scripture often speaks of chaining the Devil [b]. Even profane Authors sometimes make use of this way of Speaking, to express the Action of a superior Force, or that of a more powerful Demon commanding an inferior, and not suffering him to act; and this, when they speak, for Example, of the Effects produced by Magick and Inchantment, or whether the Demon is overpower'd by Herbs, dead Bones, &c. But in Scripture and the Church, we acknowledge only the Force of the Name of Jesus Christ, the Prayers of the Saints, Exorcisms, and other spiritual Arms, that can really produce this Effect over Demons. Thus, when it is said, that the Angel Raphael chain'd down the Devil in the Desarts of the Upper Egypt; we ought to understand it, of the Power of God, in the Name and by the Orders of whom Raphael acted in all this. Our Dissertation may be consulted concerning the Demon Asmodæus, before the Book of Tobit.

To return to Sarah: Tobias having taken her to Wife, brought her back with him to Nineveh, where his Father Tobit dwelt: She was there the Mother of a numerous Posterity; and after the Death of old Tobit, Tobias took her back to her Parents at Ecbatana, with all their Children and Grandchildren. And this, becauſe his Father Tobit, before his Death, had told them, that the Deſtruction of Nineveh was at hand, and that they ought to leave it as ſoon as poſſible, that they might not be involved in its approaching Calamity. The Year of Sarah's Death is unknown; but ſhe lived after the Year 3363, before Chriſt 637, before the Vulgar Era 641.

SARAIAS. See SERAIAH.

1 Macc. xiv. 28. SARAMEL, or Aſamarel. We think it to be the Place Millo, mention'd 2 Sam. v. 9. Aſhar-millo ſignifies the Court of Millo. Others, as Vatablus and Tirinus, have imagin'd, that Saramel was put for Jeruſalem. Serrarius tranſlates this Word by The Prince of the Lord, or, The Prince of the People of the Lord; and he explains it by the High-Prieſt Simon, who then govern'd.

SARASINS, or Saracens. This Name is not found in the Bible; but we often meet with the Arabians there, the Hagarens, and the Iſhmaelites, who are confounded with the Saraſins. Theſe were not begun to be talk'd of 'till about the fifth Century. The Criticks are not agreed about Sozom. & alii nonnulli. the Etymology of their Name. Some derive it from Sarah the Wife of Abraham; as if theſe People, who were deſcended from Hagar and Iſhmael, had been aſhamed of their Original, and had taken the Name of Saraſins, or Children of Sarah, inſtead of Hagarens, or Children of Hagar. But what overthrows this Etymology, is this, that the Antients call'd them Sara-kenoi, and not Saraenoi, or ſimply Saraſenoi, as they muſt have been call'd, if their Name had been derived from Sarah.

שארק ſharak, furari, prædari. Scaliger derives the Name Sarakeni from the Arabic Word Sarack, which ſignifies to ſteal, or plunder. Others fetch their Name from the City Sharakah, or Sharakiah, in Arabia. However this Matter be, as to the Etymology of their Name, 'tis known that they embraced Chriſtianity in the ſeventh Century; a Prince of theirs, call'd Terebon, having been miraculouſly cured of a Diſtemper, by the Name of Jeſus Chriſt. But they ſoon forſook the true Religion, to follow Mahomet, and they were the firſt that follow'd him. Their Habitation was in Arabia Fœlix, on the Borders of Arabia Petrea: Satrippa, now Medina, was their Capital. At preſent there is no Nation known by the Name of Saraſins; they are not diſtinguiſh'd from the Turks and Arabs.

He reigned twenty Years at Nineveh, according to Euſebius and Julius Africanus. Being ſhut up with his Women in the midſt of his Palace, he hardly ever appear'd in Publick, and en- Vid. Juſtin. l. 1. Diodor. Sicul. l. 2. Creſiam, Athenæum, l. 12.
tirely neglected the Affairs of his Kingdom. Two of his Nobles, Arbaſes and Beleſus, aſhamed of his Weakneſs, and weary of obeying ſo degenerate a Prince, revolted againſt him in the Year of the World 3254, before Chriſt 746, before the Vulgar Era 750. They ſet upon him with an Army of four hundred-thouſand Men, compos'd of Medes and Perſians, Babylonians and Arabians.

This Army was beaten in the three firſt Engagements; but in the fourth the Bactrian Troops coming over to their Side, it became victorious, and drove the Enemy out of the Field, having attack'd them by Night. Sardanapalus had left the Command of his Army to a Brother-in-law of his call'd Salæmen, and he himſelf retired to Nineveh. Salæmen was defeated in two Battles, and loſt almoſt his whole Army. Then the Confederates prepared themſelves to beſiege Sardanapalus in Nineveh. This Prince, not caring to truſt to the Event of a War, ſent his three Sons and two Daughters into Paphlagonia, to Cotta the Governor of this Province, that they might be there in Security. visions in Nineveh, to be ready there to hold out a long Siege. The City was besieged for three Years, and might have held out much longer, if the Tigris had not overflow'd its Banks, being swell'd by an extraordinary Fall of Rain, which overthrew the City Wall for twenty Stadia, or three thousand five hundred Paces.

Then Sardanapalus, finding he could hold out no longer, made himself a funeral Pile in the midst of his Palace, wherein he gather'd together all his immense Riches, and wherein he burnt himself, with his Concubines and Eunuchs, by putting Fire to his Palace. As soon as the Waters were asswaged, the Conspirators easily entred into Nineveh. Thus ended the Assyrian Empire, [a] after it had subsisted five hundred and twenty Years, as Herodotus affirms, l. 1. c. 95. Arbaces was proclaimed King of the Medes; and Belesus, or Nabonassar, or Baladan, was made King of Babylon. But this did not hinder the Assyrians from setting up a new King, who governed Assyria properly so called, and reduced to its ancient Bounds. This King, by profane Writers, is call'd Ninus Junior, and by the sacred Authors, Tiglath-pilneser. See 2 Kings xv. 29. and xvi. 7, 10. 1 Chron. v. 6, 26. 2 Chron. xxviii. 20.

SARDIS, a City of Asia Minor, formerly the Capital of Crœsus King of the Lydians. St John, in his Revelations, writing in behalf of Jesus Christ, to the Angel or
Rev. iii. 1,2,3,&c. Bishop of Sardis, says thus: These things saith he that hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven Stars; I know thy Works, that thou hast a Name that thou livest, and art dead. Be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die: for I have not found thy Works perfect before God. Remember therefore how thou hast received, and heard, and hold fast, and repent. If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a Thief, and thou shalt not know what Hour I will come upon thee. Thou hast a few Names even in Sardis, which have not defiled their Garments; and they shall walk with me in White: for they are worthy. He that overcometh, the same shall be cloathed in white Raiment; and I will not blot out his Name out of the Book of Life, but I will confess his Name before my Father, and before his Angels.

We know not the Name of the Bishop
Vid. Halloix. in Melitone, p. 819, 820, 838, 839. that was then at Sardis. Some Moderns have thought that it was St. Melito, a famous Bishop of this City, and Apologist for our Religion, who wrote in the Time of Marcus Aurelius, about the Year 170, or 175, of Jesus Christ. If this were so, we must allow him to have been Bishop above seventy-five Years; which is not easy to believe: For none of the Antients have said that he was a Disciple of the Apostles, or that he lived a very long Time. We ought not therefore to impute this Antiquity to him without any Proof; which besides is not very honourable to him, since St. John speaks of the Angel of Sardis in Terms not at all advantageous to him.

SARDIUS, or Ruby: Sardius Lapis; [b] in Hebrew, Odem. This Word signifies אדם Odem.
Redness; wherefore some translate it by Ruby, or by Pyropus. The Sardius is reddish, approaching to white, as a Man's Nail.

SARDONYX; as if it were, a Sardius united to an Onyx. The Onyx is a Precious-stone, commonly call'd Cornelian. The Basis of the Cornelian is white, as the Nail growing under the Flesh. The Hebrew Word Shohem, has been translated by Sardonichus lapis, which rather signifies an שהם Shohem.

SARERA. Epiphanius says, that Ezekiel was of the Country of Sarera.

SARGON King of Assyria. We believe him to have been the same as Assaradon, or Esar-haddon. Isai. xx. 1. See ESAR-HADDON.

SARID, a City of Zebulun. Josh. xix. 10, 12. We read of Saridim, Joel ii. 32. and Theodotion has taken it for a proper Name. But St. Jerom translates it by Reliquiæ, a Remnant. He owns, however, that the Jews take it for the Name of a Place.

SARON. See SHARON.

SARSECHIM, one of the Chiefs of the Babylonian Army [c]. This is a Name of Dignity, and signifies, The Chief of the Cup-bearers.

SARTHAN, or Sarthana, a City that some place to the East of Jordan, but it was rather to the West. The Waters retired as far as Sarthan, or Zaretan, when Josh. iii. 16.
the Israelites passed over Jordan. Between Succoth and Zarthan King Solomon had the great Brazen Vessels cast, which were 1 Kings vii. 46.
for the Use of the Temple. Sarthan is the same as Zeredathah, 2 Chron. iv. 17. and perhaps also the same as Zereda, 1 Kings xi. 26. which was the Country of Jeroboam the Son of Nebat.

SATAN, or Sathan, or Sathanas: This is a meer Hebrew Word, and signifies an Adversary, an Enemy, an Accuser. It שטן Adversarius. is often translated by Adversary, in the Septuagint, and in the Vulgate. For Example; 1 Samuel xxix. 4.
the Princes of the Philistines say to Achish, Send back David, lest in the Battle he be an Adversary to us, and turn his Arms against against us. And again, The Lord stirred 1 Kings xi. 14, 23, 24. up Adversaries to Solomon, in the Persons of Hadad and Rezon.

Sometimes St. Jerom has preserved the Word Satan in the Sense of an Adversary; 1 Kings v. 4. for Example, Non est Sathan, neque occursus malus. I have neither Enemy nor Mis- 2 Sam. xix. 22. fortune. Cur efficiamini mihi hodie in Sathan? Ye Children of Zeruiah, why are ye become my Enemies? At other times Satan Job i. 6, 7, 11, &c. is put for the Devil; for Example, in Job Satan presented himself among the Sons of God. And the Lord said unto Satan, Pſ. cix. 6. Whence comest thou? And in the Psalms, Let Satan stand at his Right Hand. And in Zech. iii. 1, 2. Zechariah, Satan standing at his Right Hand. And the Lord said unto Satan, The Lord rebuke thee, O Satan.

In the Books of the New Testament, the Word Satan is taken, both in the Sense of an Adversary, and also for the Devil; for Matt. xvi. 23. Mark viii. 33. Example, Jesus Christ says to Peter, Get thee behind me, Satan, thou art an Offence unto me; that is to say, Begone, O my Adversary, you that withstand what I most desire. But most commonly Satan is taken Matth. xii. 26. Mark iii. 23. for the Devil. If Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself. And in the Rev. xx. 2 Revelation, He laid hold on the Dragon, that old Serpent, which is the Devil and Satan, and bound him a thousand Years.

The Word Satan in Scripture, is often put for an Accuser, a Plaintiff in a Suit, and I think this to be the most literal Signification of the Word. Zechariah says [a], And he shewed me Joshua the High-Priest standing before the Angel of the Lord, and Satan standing at his Right-Hand to resist him. The Septuagint have translated this Word by Diabolus, which also signifies an Adversary, a Slanderer, an Accuser. Satan, or the Accuser, is at the Right-Hand of Joshua, as also in Psal. cviii. 6. Constitue super eum peccatorem, & Diabolus stet à dextris ejus. The Hebrew says, Sathan stet à dextris ejus. Zechariah goes on; And the Lord said unto Satan, The Lord rebuke thee, O Satan. Let him despise thy Accusations, let him contemn thy Malice.

To this Passage is referred what is said in Jude 9. St. Jude. Yet Michael the Arch-angel, when contending with the Devil, he disputed about the Body of Moses (which the Devil would have discovered to the Children of Israel, in order to seduce them to pay it a superstitious Worship) durst not bring against him a railing Accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee. Diabolus in this Passage is the same as Satan in Zechariah.

Angel of Satan. See ANGEL before.

Kingdom of Satan. In the Gospel [b], Jesus Christ represents Satan to us as a Monarch, who has other subordinate Devils obedient to him. Beelzebub is, as it were, their King. If Beelzebub, says he, drives out Devils, his Kingdom is divided against itself, he labours for his own Ruin, which is by no means credible; it is therefore false that I drive out Devils in the Name of Beelzebub. St. Paul acknowledges in the Acts xxvi. 18. Acts, that all those which are not in the Religion of Jesus Christ, are under the Empire and Power of Satan. St. John in the Revelations says, that after a thousand Years Rev. xx. 7. Satan should be unbound, should come forth from Hell, and seduce the Nations.

The Synagogue of Satan, of which the Rev. ii. 9, 13. same Evangelist makes mention, are probably the unbelieving Jews, the false Zealots for the Law of Moses, who at the Beginning were the most eager Persecutors of the Christians. They were very numerous at Smyrna, where St. Polycarp was Bishop, to whom St. John speaks in this Passage.

The Heights or Depths of Satan. S. John writes to the Christians of the Church of Thyatira, and says to them, You know not Rev. ii. 24. the Heights or the Depths of Satan, which τὰ βάθεα have not known the Depths of Satan; τοῦ σατανᾶ. that is to say, the Mysteries of the Nicolaitans, and of the Simonians, who concealed their Errors under a mysterious Abstruseness; they spoke of certain Intelligences that had created the World, and that were in Opposition to the Creator. They taught a profound Knowledge concerning the Nature of the Angels, and their different Degrees. They had secret Books written in an abstruse and mysterious Manner; and these are what St. John calls the Depths of Satan.

To be delivered up to Satan, is to be excommunicated and surrendered to the Devil for a Season, who visibly possessed this Sort of People, that had deserved this Punishment for their Crimes or Errors. St. Paul delivered up to Satan, Hymeneus and Alexander, that they might learn not to blaspheme. 1 Tim. i. 20. He also surrendered up to him the incestuous Person of Corinth, for the Destruction of the 1 Cor. v. 5. Flesh, that the Spirit may be saved in the Day of the Lord Jesus.

When Jesus Christ sent forth his Disciples Luke x. 17, 18. to preach in the Cities and Villages of Judea, they returned back with great Joy, and told him, saying, Lord, even the Devils are subject unto us through thy Name. Jesus tells them, I beheld Satan as Lightning fall from Heaven. He seems to allude to that Passage of Isaiah; How art thou fallen from Heaven, O Iſ. xiv. 12. Lucifer, Son of the Morning! By which he insinuated, that the Kingdom of the Devil was coming to a Period. Elsewhere he says to Peter, Simon, Simon, behold Satan hath Luke xxii. 31. desired to have you, that he may sift you as Wheat, but I have prayed for thee, that thy Faith fail not, shewing thereby what vain Efforts the Devil would make to destroy the Infant Church.

We have obferved elfewhere, that the Hebrews afcribed to the Operation of Satan, the greateft Part of Bodily Diftempers. Thus, Ought not this Woman, being a Daughter of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo thefe eighteen Years, be loofed from this Bond on the Sabbath-Day? Luke xiii.

By collecting all the Paffages where Satan or the Devil is mentioned, it may be obferved, that he fell from Heaven, with all his Company; that God caft him down from thence for the Punifhment of his Pride; that by his Envy and Malice, Death, and all other Evils came into the World; that by the Permiffion of God he exercifes a Sort of Government in the World, over his Subordinates, over Apoftate Angels like himfelf; that God makes ufe of him to prove good Men, and chaftife bad ones; that he is a lying Spirit in the Mouth of falfe Prophets, Seducers, and Hereticks; that it is he, or fome of his, that torment, obfefs, or poffefs Men, that infpire them with evil Defigns, as he did David when he fuggefted to him to number his People, and to Judas to betray Jefus Chrift, and to Ananias and Sapphira to conceal the Price of their Field. That he roves about full of Rage, like a roaring Lion, to tempt, to betray, to deftroy us, and to involve us in Guilt and Wickednefs.

That his Power and Malice are reftrained within certain Limits, and controuled by the Will of God; that he fometimes appears to Men to feduce them; that he can transform himfelf into an Angel of Light; that he fometimes affumes the Form of a Spectre, as he appeared to the Egyptians while they were involved in Darknefs in the Days of Mofes; that he creates feveral Difeafes to Men; that he chiefly prefides over Death, and bears away the Souls of the Wicked to Hell; that at prefent he is confined to Hell, as in a Prifon, but that he will be unbound and fet at Liberty at the End of the World, in the Time of Anti-Chrift; that Hell-fire is prepared for him and his; that he is to be judged at the Laft Day. But I cannot perceive very clearly from Scripture, that he torments the Souls of the Wicked in Hell, as we generally believe.

SATRAPAS, or Satrapa. This is a Perfian Word, which in its Original properly fignifies an Admiral, or Commander of a Naval Armament, but afterwards it was generally given to Governors of Provinces, and to the principal Minifters of the Kings of Perfia. We even find them a long time before the Kings of Perfia, in the Satrapys of the Philiftines, which were in being in the Times of Jofhua and the Judges. 'Tis true, that the Satrapys of the Philiftines are called in Hebrew, Seranim; from whence comes the Word Surenæ, which was alfo a Name of Dignity among the Perfians. The General of the Army of the Parthians that killed Craffus, was called Surena. As for the Word Satrapas, with which we are now concerned, I find it in the Chaldee of Daniel [a], in Ezra, and in Efther, under the Name of Achafhdarpana, from whence the Greeks have formed Satrapa, by the Elifion of fome Letters both from the Beginning and End of the Word. This Term, in its Etymology, fignifies a great Perfon that fees the Face of the King, or the Supporters of Majefty. See the Authors of the Hebrew and Chaldee Dictionaries, and the Commentators upon Dan. iii. 2. We find alfo in Jeremiah and in Nahum the Word Tapfar, which the Interpreters tranflate by Satrapas.

Judg. iii. 3. סרנים Seranim, Satrapæ. Plutarch. in Craffo. Jer. li. 27. טפסר Taphfar.

The Satrapæ, or Lords of the Philiftines, were as fo many petty Kings, who governed the five Satrapys with abfolute Authority, that is, the five principal Cities of the Philiftines. Thefe People had fometimes Kings alfo in other Cities. Abimelech King of Gerar, for Example, and Achifh King of Gath, were Philiftines, but different from the Surenæ or Satrapæ of the five Satrapys, of which there is frequent mention made in the Book of Judges, and in the firft Book of Kings. But the Perfian Satrapæ were mere Governors of a Province, fent by the King, or Officers in his Armies. St. Jerome fometimes tranflates by Satrapæ [b] the Hebrew Word Pachat, which fignifies a General of an Army, or Governor of a Province; whence comes the Word Bacha, or Pacha, which is ftill a Word in ufe among the Turks to this Day. But the true Name of Satrapa is difguifed under the Word Achafhdarpana, which is read in Daniel, Ezra, and Efther, which are Books that were written during the Captivity, or foon afterwards.

SATUM, in Hebrew, Seah [c], a fort of Meafure of Capacity among the Hebrews. It contained about two Gallons and an half liquid Meafure, or fomething above a Peck dry Meafure.

SATURN, a Pagan Deity, whom they make Father to Jupiter. The Scripture no where mentions this falfe God, but feveral Interpreters think he is infinuated under the Name of Remphan, Acts vii. 43. where St. Stephen quotes Amos v. 26. See before the Article REMPHAN.

The Mythologifts, and Fable-Writers, make Saturn to be the Son of Cœlus and Vefta, or Heaven and Earth. He made his Father an Eunuch, that he might have no more Children. He married Cybele, or Rhea, by whom he had feveral Children; and knowing that one of 'em was to deprive him of the Government, he devoured them all as soon as they were born. Rhea being desirous of preserving her Son Jupiter, that was newly born, instead of the Child, gave to Saturn a Stone wrapt up in a Cloth, which he swallowed. When Jupiter grew up, he made War with his Father, overcame him, loaded him with Irons, and threw him into Hell, with all the rest that had assisted him in that War.

Saturn had three Sons by Rhea; Jupiter, Neptune, and Pluto; and a Daughter called Juno, a Twin-Sister, and the Wife of Jupiter. Some add to these Ceres and Vesta. 'Tis said that Saturn governed in Italy after Janus, that there he set up a Community of Goods, and Equality of Conditions. Hence it was, that at the Feasts called Saturnalia, which were kept in the Month of December, Servants were used to sit at Table with their Masters, or even the Masters waited at the Table of their Servants. 'Twas this Reign of Saturn which was called the Golden Age. Saturn was painted heretofore as a crooked old Man, having a Scythe in his Hand. The Dominion over the Times and Seasons was imputed to him, and in Greek they gave him the Name of Chronos, which signifies Time.

The Name of this false Deity has no Right to be admitted into a Dictionary of the Bible, which naturally should receive no other Names, but such as are consecrated to us by being mentioned in Holy Writ: But as Saturn has several Strokes of Resemblance with the Patriarch Noah; and as several false Gods, mentioned in Scripture, are the same as Saturn, according to the Opinion of several learned Men, the Reader will not think much to find this particular Account of him. It has been thought, that Baal, that Moloch, that Remphan, were the same as Saturn; that the Custom of sacrificing human Victims was derived from Saturn; that he was confounded with Abraham, or with Israel. The Antients speak of Saturn the Phenician, of Saturn the African or Carthaginian, of Saturn the Egyptian. See what has been said of BAAL, MOLOCH, and of the sacrificing of human Victims.

As to those Marks of Resemblance between Noah and Saturn, they are very evident. He is represented with a Scythe, as the Inventor of Agriculture. Noah in
Gen. ix. 20. Scripture is called Vir Agricola, and it is said he began first to Till the Ground. The Saturnalia that were celebrated with Wine and Licentiousness, and wherein Masters became equal to their Servants, shew the Drunkenness of Noah, and the Curse that made Canaan subject to his Brethren, tho' he was their Equal by Birth. Saturn is said to have devoured all his Children, except only Jupiter, Neptune, and Pluto. Noah saw the Waters of the Deluge destroy all the Men of his Time, many of which were his Relations, and younger than himself. In the Style of Scripture a Man is often said to do a Thing which he does not hinder to be done, or even what he foretells shall be done.

Jupiter, they say, made his Father an Eunuch, because Ham saw Noah's Nakedness, and did not cover him. Shem, Ham, and Japheth, the Sons of Noah, are very plainly Typhon, or Pluto, Jupiter, and Neptune. Ham or Jupiter had Africa for his Portion; Japheth or Neptune had the Sea, or the Islands; Shem, or Pluto, had Asia. Shem had the greatest Privileges of all his Brethren, in respect of the True Religion. He was firm to the Lord, and always faithful to him; he dwelt with his Father. This Attachment made him odious to his Brethren, and their Posterity. Such great Prerogatives provoked their Hatred and Jealousy; for this Reason they feigned that he was God of Hell.

SAVARAN, or Saura. This is the Surname of Eleazar the Brother of Judas Maccabæus. Some think that Saura, or 1 Mac. vi.
Savaran, was the Surname of Mattathias 43. Ἐλεάζαρ Father of Eleazar, because the Vulgate ὁ Σαυαράν reads, Eleazar filius Saura. But the Greek has it, Eleazar surnamed Savaran; and the Syriack, surnamed Horam. 'Tis not known whence he had the Surname of Saura. In 1 Macc. xi. 5. he is surnamed Avaran, Avaron, or Abaron.

SAVIOUR, Salvator, Soter. This Name is appropriated to our Lord Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the World, who was prefigured by all those to whom the Scripture of the Old Testament gives the Name of Saviour, as Joshua, the Judges of Israel, the Kings David, Solomon, Josiah, and the Great Men raised up in an extraordinary manner, to deliver the People of God, as Mattathias, Judas Maccabæus, and the rest. The Prophets had marked out Jesus Christ under the Name of Saviour; thus, for
of the Wells of Salvation, or of the Saviour. Isai. xix.
The Lord shall send them a Saviour, and a 20.
Great One, and he shall deliver them. I, Isai. xliii.
even I am the Lord, and beside me there is no 11.
Saviour. Lastly, the Apostles and sacred Writers of the New Testament, generally give to Jesus Christ the Name of Saviour by way of Eminence. When the Angel proclaimed his Birth, he said he should be called Jesus, that is, a Saviour; for he shall save his People from their Sins. Matth. i. 21. See also John iv. 42. Acts xiii. 23. Philipp. iii. 20. and elsewhere in many Places.

Saviour, to save, Salvation. We have already examined the several Acceptations of the Word Salvation under its proper Article. The Name Saviour is given to to the Patriarch Joseph. Pharaoh changed his Name, when he took him into his Service, and call'd him in the Egyptian Tongue, the Saviour of the World [a]. The Hebrew reads only, he call'd him Zaphnath-phaneah; and these Words are rather Hebrew than Egyptian. St. Jerome himself acknowledges, in his Hebrew Questions upon Genesis, that they signify in Hebrew, he that discovers Secrets. But in Egyptian they may have another Signification. And those who were consulted by St. Jerome upon this Point, might probably tell him, that they signified the Saviour of the World. Nevertheless Philo, Josephus, and others, who thought them also Egyptian, maintain, that in this Language Zaphnath-phaneah signifies one that discovers Secrets, or that interprets Dreams. The Syriack and Chaldee Paraphrasts, and two or three antient Greek Interpreters, are quoted for this, who explain it in the same Sense.

God often takes to himself the Name of 1 Sam. iv. 39. Saviour of Israel. Vivit Dominus Salvator Israel. David also calls him his Strength 2 Sam. xxii. 3. and his Saviour. Robur meum & Salvator meus. There is no Saviour besides me, says Hos. xiii. 4. the Lord in the Prophet Hosea. And Isai. xvii. 10. Isaiah; Thou hast forgotten the God of thy Salvation, or thy Saviour. And in truth, God is the Saviour of Saviours, the God of Gods; without him there is neither Salvation, nor Deliverance, nor Succour to be hoped for. 'Tis he that raises up Saviours to his People. For Example, he raised them a Saviour in the Person of Othniel, the Son of Kenez, against the King of Judg. iii. 9. Mesopotamia, who oppressed them. He raised them up another in Ehud, Son of Judg. iii. 15. Gerah, against Eglon King of the Moabites. Obad. 21. Obadiah promises, that the Lord will send Saviours upon the Mountain of Sion, to judge the Mountain of Esau. Probably he means the Maccabees, who subdued the Idumeans.

To save is commonly taken for defending any one in Danger. 'Tis also taken for flying. Save yourself (or escape) upon this Mountain. I cannot save myself (or Gen. xix. 17, 19. escape) upon the Mountain. To save is also put for preserving; for Example, those who have escaped any Danger, who have fled from a Rout or Defeat, those who have escaped the Sword of the Con- Judg. vi. 3. queror. Salvatæ sunt reliquiæ populi, says Deborah in her Song. God has preserved his People, and defended it from the Hand 2 Sam. xix. 10, 12, 18. of King Jabin. David fled and was saved. David fugit & salvatus est.

He saved* Mat. xxvii. 40, 42. others, himself he cannot save. Thus said the Jews to Jesus Christ. Let him deliver himself out of this Danger; let him deliver himself from Death, as he has deliver'd others.

I. SAUL, King of Idumea, Gen. xxxvi. 37. This Saul was of Rehoboth, and succeeded Samlah of Masrekah.

II. SAUL, the Son of Kish, of the Tribe of Benjamin, the first King of the 1 Sam. ix. 1, 2, 3, &c. Israelites. One Day when Kish had lost his She-asses, he sent his Son Saul to seek after them [b]. After he had in vain travell'd over a good Part of the adjacent Country, and was upon the Point of returning to Gibeah to his Father, one of his Servants, that went with him, made this Proposal to him; Here is a very famous Prophet hard by, let us go and consult him; perhaps he may give us some Light into the Matter we were sent about. They went therefore to Ramah, where they were told that Samuel was just come into the City, and was going to offer a solemn Sacrifice with the Chief of the People. Saul therefore advanced towards him, and as soon as Samuel perceived him, he knew by Revelation, that this was he that was to reign over Israel. Saul asked him, where the Seer or the Prophet lived? and Samuel said to him; " 'Tis I that am the Seer. Come " along with me, you shall eat with the " Chief of the People whom I have in- " vited, and to Morrow I will send you " away, and will tell you all that you " desire to know. As to the Asses you " have lost, you need not be in any Con- " cern for them, for they are already " found. Who should have of the best " of all Israel but you, and the House of " your Father? " Saul answered him; " Am I not of the Tribe of Benjamin, " which is the smallest in Israel? And is " not my Family the least in the whole " Tribe? Why therefore do you speak " to me in this manner? " Samuel made Saul and his Servant enter into the Room where the Feast was kept, and placed them at the Head of the Table, and, by way of Distinction, served up to Saul a whole Shoulder of a Sacrifice. After Supper Samuel conducted Saul to his Lodging, which was upon the Platform of the House, and on the Morrow Morning he brought him down again, and came with him below the City of Ramah.

As they were going down the Hill, Samuel said to Saul; Make your Servant go before, and stay with me a little, that I may let you know what the Lord has said to me concerning you. At the same time Samuel took a little Phial of Oil, which he poured upon the Head of 1 Sam. x. 1, 2, 3, &c. Saul, kissed him, and told him; "By this "Unction the Lord consecrates you this "Day to be the Prince of his Inheritance; "and you shall deliver his People from "their Enemies. And this is the Token "that you shall have, that the Lord has "chosen you for King: As soon as you "shall have left me, you shall meet two "Men coming from towards the Grave of "Rachel, who will tell you that your "Father's Asses are found again. From "thence, when you come to the Oak of "Tabor, you shall meet three Men who "come to worship the Lord at Bethel; "they shall present you with three Loaves, "which you shall receive from their "Hands. Lastly, when you shall come "to the Hill of God, where is the Station "of the Philistines, you shall find a Company of Prophets coming down from the "high Place, with all Sorts of Instruments "of Musick. At the same Time the "Spirit of the Lord shall seize you, you "shall prophesy along with them, and "you shall be changed into another Man. "After all these Signs shall have been "given you, act as Occasion shall require, "and the Lord shall be with you." All that Samuel had foretold him was fulfilled that same Day, and God changed him into another Man. When he came to the Company of the Prophets, he began to prophesy along with them; and all those that saw him, said with wonder; What is it that has happened to the Son of Kish? Is Saul also among the Prophets? And this afterwards became a kind of Proverb among them.

Some time after this, [a] Samuel assembled all the People at Mizpeh, to give them a King as they had desired. He cast Lots upon all the Tribes of Israel, and the Lot fell upon the Tribe of Benjamin. Then he cast them upon all the Families of this Tribe, and it fell upon the Family of Matri. Lastly, he cast them upon the Family of Kish, and the Lot fell upon the Person of Saul. He was immediately sought for, but could not be found. They then consulted the Lord, and he gave Answer; That he was then concealed in his own House. They ran thither, and brought him forth; and when he was in the midst of the People, he appeared taller than the rest by the whole Head. Then Samuel said to the People; You see who it is that the Lord hath chosen. And all the People shouted and cry'd, God save the King. After this Samuel declared before all the People, what were the Laws and Conditions of the new Kingdom, and then dismiss'd the Assembly. Saul returned to Gibeah, accompanied by a Part of the Army, consisting of such whose Hearts the Lord had inclined to the Interests of Saul. Others despised Saul, and said; How shall this Man save us? But Saul regarded them not, and pretended not to hear them.

About a Month afterwards, Nahash King of the Ammonites, laid Siege to the City of Jabesh-Gilead; and the Men of Jabesh agreed to surrender themselves to him, if in seven Days none should appear in Israel to bring them Relief. To this Nahash consented, and Messengers were sent from Jabesh to Gibeah, to acquaint the People, that the King of the Ammonites had lain down before the City, and threatened to put out every Man's right Eye, and to make them all a Reproach to Israel. Saul then happened to return out of the Field with his Oxen, and seeing the People weep, he asked the Reason of it. When he was told it, he fell into a great Passion, took his Oxen and cut them to Pieces, and sent the Pieces into all the Coasts of Israel, saying; Thus shall it be done to the Oxen of all those that shall not follow Saul and Samuel. All the People therefore repaired to Bezek, where Saul reviewed them, and found the Number of the Men of Israel to be three hundred thousand, and those of Judah thirty thousand. The Army then began to march, pass'd over Jordan, and the Day following by Break of Day arrived near the Camp of the Ammonites. Saul attack'd them in three Places at once, put them to the Rout, and kill'd a great Number of them; and so dispersed them, that hardly two could be found together. After this all the People return'd to Gilgal, where they solemnly renewed the Election and Inauguration of King Saul. This is what happened in the first Year of the Reign of Saul [b].

Two years afterwards [c] Saul chose three thousand Men out of all Israel, of which he gave a thousand to Jonathan, and kept two thousand about his own Person, that he might make head against the Philistines, who had taken Possession of strong Posts at Mickmash, Bethel, and Gibeah. Jona- than defeated the Garison that was at Gibeah, upon the News of which the People took Courage, and thought that this was the Time for shaking off the Yoke of the Philistines. They assembled therefore in great Numbers, and appear'd in Arms before Saul in Gilgal. On the other side, the Philistines having Intelligence of this, came with a prodigious Army, and encamped at Michmash, to the East of Bethel. When the Israelites saw themselves thus inclosed, they began to withdraw themselves, some one way and some another. Saul continued seven Days at Gilgal, expecting the Arrival of the Prophet Samuel. At last, seeing he did not come, tho' he had promised to be with him within seven Days, he began to offer Sacrifices to God. But he had no sooner finished than Samuel arrived, and told him he had done ill to offer Sacrifices, without staying for an Order from the Lord. If he had done this, God would have confirmed his Kingdom for ever over Israel. But now, added he, your Reign will not continue long; the Lord has found out a Man according to his Heart's Desire, whom he has appointed to be the Head of his People, because you have not obey'd what he had directed by my Mouth, and have not staid for my Arrival for seven Days.

1 Sam. xiv. 1, 2, 3, &c. Samuel and Saul, with the six hundred Men that had continued with them, went from Gilgal to Gibeah; and the Philistines that were at Michmash came also and encamped at Gibeah. One Day as Jonathan and his Armour-bearer went towards the Camp of the Philistines, and entering therein in such manner as is mentioned before under the Article JONATHAN; all on a sudden the Camp of the Enemy was in Confusion, and the Centinels of the Camp of Saul saw the Ground all covered with dead Bodies. They began to examine then who was gone out of the Camp, and it was found to be Jonathan. Saul then consulted the Lord by the High-priest; but before the Ceremony was over, a great Noise was heard, 'twas perceived that the Philistines had slain one another, and had made a great Havock in their Camp. Saul with his People then began to pursue the Enemy; and the Israelites rallying that had fled away before, they kill'd a great Number of the Philistines, and pursued them on one Hand as far as Bethel, called afterwards Beth-aven, because of the golden Calves that were set up there; and on the other Hand as far as Aijalon.

But upon this Occasion there happened a thing that gave some Disturbance in Israel. Saul on this Day had denounced a Malediction, and said; 'Cursed be he that shall eat any thing till the Even. Now Jonathan not knowing what had passed, as he went through a Wood he found some Honey, and taking some upon the End of his Staff, he just tasted it. In the Evening, when the People were gathered together after the Victory, Saul said to 'em; This Night let us make an Assault upon the Camp of the Philistines, and let not one remain till to morrow Morning. The People answered him; Do what you please. The High-priest proposed to them to consult the Lord, but the Lord answered not. Then Saul judging that God was provoked by some Crime that had been committed among them, he ordered the Lot to be cast upon all the Tribes, and all the Families of Israel; and the Lot fell upon Jonathan. Saul told him, that on Necessity he must dye for his Inadvertence; but all the People opposed it, and delivered him from this Danger. When Saul had strengthned himself in the Kingdom of Israel, he carried his Arms abroad, among all the Enemies of his Nation; against Moab, Ammon, Edom, against the Kings of Zobah in Syria, and against the Philistines; [a] and which way soever he turn'd himself, he always remained victorious. The Times and Circumstances of these Wars are unknown.

After this Samuel brought him Orders from the Lord, that he should make War against the Amalekites, and utterly exterminate this People; that he should spare no body, neither Man nor Beast, nor any valuable Things whatever that should fall into their Hands. Saul therefore took the Field against the Amalekites, set upon them and defeated them; but he saved the Life of the King, and of the best of the Cattle, and preserved some of the best Things of the Booty. Afterwards he returned to Gilgal; but as he passed by Mount Carmel, which is to the South of the Portion of Judah, and very different from that Carmel that lies upon the Mediterranean, he there erected a Triumphal Arch; or, as the Hebrew speaks, [b] He set him up a Hand, * or Monument. Samuel also coming to Gilgal, Saul went to meet him, and said to him; I have fulfilled the Word of the Lord. To which Samuel replied; Whence then is this lowing of Oxen, and bleating of Sheep, that sounds in my Ears? Saul answered him; The People have brought of the best of the Flocks of Amalek, to offer Sacrifices to the Lord. Then Samuel said to him; When you were little in your own Eyes, the Lord made you the Head of his People, and he sent you utterly to root out Amalek; but you, on the contrary, have preserved what you thought fit of the Plunder of this People. Saul endeavoured to excuse himself, and would have thrown the Fault upon the People, who were obstinately bent to preserve these Things for a Sacrifice to the Lord. But Samuel told him; It is not Sacrifice that the Lord requires, but an implicit Submission to his Commands: That Obedience was better than Burnt-offerings, and that God regards the Sin of Disobedience with the same Detestation as Witchcraft or Idolatry. As you have rejected the Word of the Lord, so has the Lord rejected you, and will not have you any longer as a King over his People.

Saul then replied to Samuel; I have sinn'd in disobeying the Commands of the Lord; but pray to God that he will forgive me this Fault, and come along with me to worship the Lord. Samuel said he would not go, and at the same time turn'd away from him. But Saul laying hold of his Garment, it tore in his Hands. Then Samuel said to him; Thus has the Lord torn away the Kingdom from you, and has given it to another that is better than you. [a] The Strength (or Victory) of Israel will not lye nor repent; for he is not a Man that he should repent. Some apply these Words to Saul; as if Samuel, by a bitter Irony, should say, that a Prince like him that could erect triumphal Arches, was not a Man to repent: But it seems most eligible to refer them to God, who would not revoke the Sentence he had pronounced against Saul. However Samuel did not persist in refusing to follow Saul, but return'd with him to the Camp at Gilgal. Then he made Agag King of the Amalekites be brought before him, and cut him in Pieces with his own Hand.

Some Years afterwards [b] Samuel went by Order from the Lord, to give the Royal Unction to David; from which Time the Spirit of the Lord withdrew from Saul, and God suffered that he should be actuated by an evil Spirit, who taking Occasion from the evil Disposition of the Humours of this Prince, and his melancholy Temper, moved and agitated him, or possessed him. Then his Courtiers caus'd David to attend him, to sooth his Distemper by the Sound of musical Instruments, upon which David could play very skilfully. Saul took an Affection for David, made him his Esquire or Armour-bearer, and always had him near his Person. About eight Years afterwards, [c] when the Philistines came and encamped between Shochoh and Azekah, Saul with the Army of Israel took their Station in the Vale of Elah. But in the Army of the Philistines there was a Giant, by Name Goliath, who came daily to insult the Army of Israel, challenging any one to come forth and fight him. Saul had promis'd to give his Daughter in Marriage to any one that should fight with him and overcome him, but no one was found hardy enough to encounter him. David, who now for a long Time had retired from Court, and lived with his Father at Bethlehem, was sent by him into the Camp about this Time; and being offended at these daily Insults of Goliath, undertook to fight with him, which he did, and beat him, as we have elsewhere observed under the Articles GOLIATH and DAVID. Saul had now so far lost all Remembrance of David, that he knew him not when he presented himself before him. But after this Victory over Goliath, he kept him always about him, and made him one of his Commanders.

Ita Rab. & Interpret. plures.

But he took a Grudge against him, because at his Return from an Expedition against the Philistines, the Women that sung and danced before the victorious Army, cry'd out, that Saul had kill'd his thousands, and David his ten thousands. One Day therefore, as he was in his House under the Influence of the evil Spirit, and David was playing upon an Instrument before him, he attempted to pierce him through with a Lance that he held in his Hand: But David turned aside, and avoided the Blow. He afterwards gave him the Command of a thousand Men, and promis'd him Merab his eldest Daughter, tho' at the same Time he had no Intention to let him have her. He only sought for an Occasion of putting him to Death by the Hand of the Philistines, by often exposing him to imminent Dangers. He afterwards marry'd his Daughter Merab to another, and promis'd him his second Daughter Michal; then he acquainted David, that he required no other Dowry for his Daughter than an hundred Foreskins of the Philistines. David soon perform'd this Condition, and married Michal.

1 Sam. xviii. 1, 2, 3, &c.

Saul seeing that David by his Valour acquired new Reputation every Day, resolved to put him to Death [d]. Jonathan for a time diverted him from his Purpose; but afterwards, when Saul relapsed into his usual Melancholy, and being moved by the evil Spirit, he attempted once more to pierce David with the Lance he held in his Hand. David escaped this Blow also, and immediately retired to his own House, which Saul order'd to be beset. In the Night-time Michal let him down out of a Window, by which means he escaped.

He

He then withdrew to Samuel at Naioth in Ramah. Saul sent some Messengers thither to apprehend him, but those he sent, for three times together, were no sooner come to Naioth, but were seized there by a prophetick Spirit, and began to prophesy among the Prophets, in the midst of whom was David. When Saul at last came thither himself, he began to prophesy as well as the rest. (1 Sam. xix. 1, 2, 3, &c.) In the mean Time David withdrew to Gibeah, where he had a Conference with Jonathan Saul's Son. There they renew'd their Friendship, and Jonathan promis'd David to let him know two Days after, all that he could discover of Saul's Intentions concerning him. The Day following he spoke to his Father, and easily perceived by the Answer he received, that David's Destruction was resolved upon. He gave him Information of it, and then they parted. See the Articles DAVID and JONATHAN.

David then came to Nob, [a] and having received a Sword and some Refreshments from the High-priest Abimelech, Saul was inform'd of it some time after by Doeg the Idumean, who happened to be at Nob when David came thither. (1 Sam. xxii. 6, 7, 8, &c.) Saul immediately sent to Nob, to fetch all the Priests to him that were there; and no sooner did they come before him, but he severely reproached them with having supported his Enemy; and not having Patience to hear their Excuses, he had them all butcher'd before his Face, to the Number of four-score and five Persons. He went himself afterwards to Nob, and put all the Inhabitants to the Sword, Man, Woman, and Child; not so much as sparing the sucking Infants, nor the Cattle that came in his way.

Some time after, [b] Saul being informed that David was in the City of Keilah, he said to himself; Now has God delivered him into my Hands, since he is shut up in a walled City. But David quitted this City, and retired into the Wilderness of Ziph, so that Saul's Expectation was disappointed. Once when this Prince was advertised, that David concealed himself in the Desart of Maon, he pursued him thither with an Army; but when he was very near taking him, he had Intelligence that the Philistines were just coming to make an Irruption into the Country; upon which he quitted his Pursuit, and went to the Succour of his own People.

Then David retired into the Wilderness of En-gedi, [c] and Saul went after him with his Troops; but finding himself constrain'd by the Necessity of Nature, he enter'd into a Cave, where David and his People were hid. David coming softly behind him, cut off the Lappet of his Coat, he not perceiving any thing of the Matter. When he went out, and was at a good Distance, David went after him, and shew'd him the Lappet of his Coat that he had cut off, and told him, that it was in his Power to have killed him, but that he would never lift up his Hand against the Lord's Anointed. Saul was moved with the Generosity of David, and could not forbear shedding Tears; acknowledging himself to be unjust, in thus pursuing the Life of a Man that intended him no Harm. After this he went back into his own House, and David retired into the Wilderness of Ziph [d]. When the Ziphites knew it, they went presently and gave Saul Notice of it, who came with his Army upon the Hill of Hachilah. While he was encamped in this Place, David went by Night into his Camp, and penetrated even into the King's Tent, where having found every body asleep, he took the King's Lance and Cup, and then went again out of the Camp.

When he was on the other Side of the Mountain, he cry'd out to the Camp of Saul, that some one should come to fetch the King's Cup and Lance that he had taken; and at the same Time made Remonstrances of his Innocence to Saul, and of his Injustice in persecuting him thus, tho' he had never done him any Injury. Saul acknowledged both, and returned again to own House. But David being apprehensive that he might at last fall into the Hands of this Prince, he took Refuge with the King of Gath; which when Saul (1 Sam. xxvii. 1, 2, 3, &c.) knew, he thought no longer of seeking after him. Some Years after this the Philistines invaded the Land of Israel with a powerful Army, [e] and encamped at Shunem in the Valley of Jezreel. Saul and his Troops took the Field also, and encamped upon the Mountains of Gilboa. But when Saul saw the Army of the Philistines, which was very formidable, his Heart began to fail. He consulted the Lord by his Priests and Prophets, but the Lord returned him no Answer; so that not knowing who to address himself to, he found out a Witch or Enchantress, who had a Spirit of Prophecy, or a familiar Spirit, and who was then famous for raising the Ghosts of the Dead.

Some time before, Saul had banish'd all Wizards and Magicians out of his Dominions; and that he might not be known by the Witch, he disguised himself, and went with a ſmall Retinue. He deſired her to raiſe up Samuel to him, who had been now dead for ſome time. As ſoon as ſhe ſaw the Prophet come up, ſhe put forth a great Cry, and ſaid to Saul; Why have you deceived me, for you are Saul? Saul bid her fear nothing, and asked her who ſhe ſaw. She anſwer'd, I ſee the 1 Sam. xxviii. 13. אלהים ראית Gods, or a great Man, a Prince, a Judge of Iſrael. The Hebrew makes uſe of Elohim, which is a Name given to Princes and great Men. What is he like? ſays Saul. She anſwer'd; He is an old Man covered with a Mantle. Saul knowing it to be Samuel, fell down at his Feet; and Samuel ſaid to him; Why have you diſturbed my Reſt, by raiſing me up? The Lord is withdrawn from you, and will perform all that he has promis'd in favour of your Competitor. To Morrow you ſhall be with me, you and your Sons, and the Lord will deliver the Camp of Iſrael into the Hands of the Philiſtines. Saul fell down immediately, and remain'd extended upon the Earth; for he had eat nothing all that Day.

The Witch intreated him to take a little Nouriſhment, and not to ſuffer himſelf to be overcome by his Trouble. He refuſed it at firſt, but being much importuned by the Woman, and by his own People, he eat ſomething of what was at hand; after which he went away, and marched all Night, that he might come ſoon enough to his Camp. The next Day the Battle was 1 Sam. xxix. 1, 2, 3, &c. fought, in which the Iſraelites were put to Flight before the Philiſtines; and the Sons of Saul, Jonathan, Abinadab, and Malchiſhua, were ſlain in the Battle. Saul himſelf was preſſed very hard, the Archers ſhooting at him, and wounding him dangerouſly. Seeing his Caſe was deſperate, he ſaid to his Armour-bearer; Draw your Sword and kill me, that theſe Uncircumciſed may not ſtill inſult me, and take away my Life; but his Armour-bearer was ſtartled at this Propoſal, and refuſed to do it. Saul then took his Sword and fell upon it; and his Armour-bearer finding him to be dead, follow'd his Example, and ſlew himſelf alſo. Thus died Saul the firſt King of Iſrael, after a Reign of forty Years. An Amalekite, who by chance 2 Sam. i. 1, 2, 3, &c. was near, took off his Crown and Bracelet, and brought them to David. He told David that he himſelf had ſlain Saul, becauſe the Sword of Saul could not pierce through his Armour; but we think he diſguiſed the Truth to David, and falſly boaſted that he had ſlain the King of Iſrael. He hoped, no doubt, that David would have given him ſome great Reward for this Service; but inſtead of that he had him put to Death, for preſuming to lay Hands upon the Lord's Anointed. David bewail'd the Fate of Saul and Jonathan, and compoſed a mournful Elegy upon this Occaſion, in which he celebrated the Valour and great Actions of thoſe two Princes.

The Day after the Battle, when the 1 Sam. xxxi. 8, 9. Philiſtines came to take the Spoils of the Dead, they found Saul and his three Sons extended upon the Plain. They cut off Saul's Head, and took away his Armour, which was carried to the Temple of Aſhtaroth; and they hung up his Body againſt the Walls of Beth-ſhan, which probably were oppoſite to the chief Street, becauſe it is ſaid in the Second Book of Samuel, 2 Sam. xxi. 12. that his Body was hung up in the Street of this City. As to his Head, we read in the Chronicles, that it was faſtened up in 1 Chron. x. 10. the Temple of Dagon. Some time after, when the Inhabitants of Jabeſh-gilead were 1 Sam. xxxi. 11, 12, 13. inform'd of the Indignities that were offer'd by the Philiſtines to the Bodies of Saul and his Sons, whom they had hung up againſt the Walls of Beth-ſhan; they went by Night and took them down, and brought them into their City beyond Jordan, where they burnt the Remains of the Fleſh of the Bodies, and buried the Bones in the Grove that was near their City. They faſted and mourned for the King for ſeven Days, in Commemoration of that Service he had done their City at the Beginning of his Reign, when he delivered them from the Cruelty of the King of the Ammonites. Several Years afterwards David had theſe Bones removed from the Grove at Jabeſh, and put into the Sepulchre of Kiſh the Father of Saul, at Gibeah. 2 Sam. xxi. 12, 13, 14. Iſh-boſheth, the fourth Son of Saul, ſucceeded him in the Kingdom, and reigned at Mahanaim beyond Jordan, over the eleven Tribes; for David then began to reign over the Tribe of Judah.

It has been Matter of Inquiry, whether Saul upon this Occaſion could put himſelf to Death, without being guilty of a Crime? And what may be thought of his Salvation? The Rabbins [a] commend Saul for his Submiſſion to the Orders of God, and exalt the Obedience of this Prince, who notwithſtanding the terrible Denunciations of Samuel, and the Certainty of his own and his Sons Death in the Battle, yet did not endeavour to avoid it. They add, that what induced him to put himſelf to Death was, the Fear he had that the Name of God ſhould be blaſphemed and affronted by the Philiſtines, if the King of his People ſhould come alive into their Hands. But theſe Reaſons have but little Solidity in them. In the laſt Actions of Saul, no more than in the firſt, there does not appear any Mark of a certain and ſolid

Repentance.

AT SAUL'S REQUEST THE WITCH OF ENDOR RAISES UP SAMUEL.

Repentance. We do not see that he had Recourse to God, or that he had any View to his Glory, when he put himself to Death. And tho', by an erroneous Conscience, he might persuade himself that by this means he should hinder the Philistines from blaspheming the Name of God; it would not follow that his Action would be lawful or praise-worthy. St. Paul tells us, that we must not do Evil that Good may come of it. (Rom. iii. 8.) But Self-murder is certainly a very great Evil. Besides Saul by his Death could not prevent the blaspheming of the Philistines, since they would equally blaspheme the Name of the Lord, whether Saul fell into their Hands dead or alive. Lastly, the Scripture will not allow us to doubt of the final Perdition of Saul, when it says; (1 Chron. x. 13, 14.) So Saul died for his Transgression which he committed against the Lord, even against the Word of the Lord, which he kept not, and also for asking Counsel of one that had a familiar Spirit, to enquire of it: And enquired not of the Lord. Therefore he slew him, and turned the Kingdom unto David the Son of Jesse.

As to Saul's Action of consulting the Witch, it is needless to examine it according to the Rules of Morality, since it is so manifestly contrary to the Laws of God. Under the Article SAMUEL, we have already seen the several Opinions that have been advanced concerning the Appearance of this Prophet to Saul.

III. SAUL. Saulus, surnamed Paul. See PAUL.

SAW. The Punishment of the Saw was not unknown among the Hebrews. It is mentioned in Daniel, and in the Epistle to the Hebrews. I imagine this Punishment came originally from the Persians or the Chaldeans. I am assured that it is still in Use among the Switzers, and that they put it in Practice not many Years ago, upon one of their Countrymen guilty of a great Crime, in the Plain of Grenelles near Paris. They put him in a Kind of Coffin, and saw'd him at Length, beginning at his Head, as a Piece of Wood is sawn. Parisalis, King of Persia, caused Roxana to be sawn in two alive. (Ctesias in Persic.) Valerius Maximus says, [a] that the Thracians sometimes made living Men to undergo this Torture: Vivos homines medios secare. The Laws of the twelve Tables, which the Romans had borrowed from the Greeks, condemned certain Crimes to the Punishment of the Saw. But the Execution of them was so rare, as Aulus Gellius says, that none remembred to have seen it practised. (Aul. Gell. Noct. Att. l. 12. c. 2.) Herodotus relates, that Sabacus, King of Egypt, received an Order in a Dream, to cut in two all the Priests of Egypt. (Herodot. l. 6.) Caius Caligula the Emperor, often condemn'd People of Condition to be sawn in two through the Middle; aut medios serrâ dissecuit. (Sueton. in Caio.)

This Matter is not less frequent in Scripture. St. Paul in his Epistle to the Hebrews [b], speaking of the Calamities suffered by the Prophets and Saints of the Old Testament, says, there were some who had undergone the Torture of the Saw. Serrâ secti sunt. Origen [c], Justin Martyr [d], St. Jerome [e], the Author of the Poem against Marcion, printed under the Name of Tertullian [f], and several others of the Antients, have explain'd this Passage concerning the Death of Isaiah, who is said to have been put to Death by King Manasses, with a wooden Saw. This Circumstance of a Saw of Wood is perplexing; for no Saws are made of Wood; and besides, a Man could not be cut in two with such a Saw. We have elsewhere proposed our Conjecture upon this Matter, by supposing this Saw of Wood was perhaps nothing else but a Sledge loaded with Stones and Iron Spikes, with which they smooth'd the Ears of Corn, to get out the Grain. Or might it not be understood more simply of a Wood-Saw, that is, a Saw fit for sawing Wood? For there are Saws of several Kinds, for Stone, for Marble, for Iron, for Bones, for Trees, for the Use of Gardeners, for Wheelwrights, for Joiners.

Daniel also speaks of the Punishment of the Saw. Even now the Angel of God hath received the Sentence of God, to cut thee in two. (Susan. 55.) St. Matthew says, that the wicked Servant shall be cut in two, and thrust among the Hypocrites. (Mat. xxiv. 51.) The Hebrew Text of the Old Testament often makes Allusion to this Custom, when it uses the Word, to cut in two, to divide, for putting to Death. See 1 Sam. xvi. 31, 33. Exod. xix. 14. and 2 Sam. vi. 8.

SCANDAL, Scandalum. This Word in antient Greek Authors, according to Pollux, signifies that Part of a Mouse-trap, that is suspended by the Noose; or the bended Piece of Wood that supports what they call the Hammer, according to the Scholiast of Aristophanes. In general, according to Hesychius, Scandalum signifies a Snare, an Incumbrance. In Scripture and in Ecclesiastical Authors, Scandal is put for any thing that a Man finds in his Way, that may occasion him to fall. Thus Moses forbids to put a Stumbling-block (or Scandal) before the Blind; that is, neither Wood, Stone, nor any thing else, that may make him stumble or fall. (Levit. xix. 14. apud 70.) Elsewhere he forbids the Israelites to make a Covenant with the Canaanites, for fear they should be per- (Ex. xxiii. 33.)

Matt. xvi. 23. against his Passion; Get thee behind me, Satan, thou art an Offence unto me. Lastly, Matt. xi. 6. he says of himself; Blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended (or scandalized) in me; or for whom I shall not be an Occasion of Scandal; to whom my Life, my Poverty, my Birth, my Death, my Cross, shall not give or administer Scandal.

The Greek Word Scandal [a] answers to the Hebrew Mashcul, which comes from the Root Shacal, to fall, to tumble; and in the Conjugation Hiphil signifies, to make to fall, to overthrow, to lay Snares, &c. In a moral Sense, there is an active and a passive Scandal. The first is that which we afford others by our Words or Actions; and the second is that which we receive from others, by seeing their evil Actions, or by hearing their pernicious Discourses. Jesus
Matt. xviii. 7. Christ in his Gospel affirms, It must needs be that Offences come, or Scandals must of necessity arise. But he adds, Woe to that Man by whom the Offence cometh. If your Hand or Foot are a Cause of Scandal to you, cut them off, and cast them from you; you had better enter into the Kingdom of God without Hand or Foot, than be cast into outward Darkness with all your Limbs intire.
Mark ix. 41. He says moreover, Have a Care of offending (or scandalizing) one of these little ones that believe in me; it were better for him that gives the Scandal that a Mill-Stone were hung about his Neck, and he were cast into the Sea, than that he should administer an Occasion of Scandal. Jesus Christ, in respect of the Jews, was a Scandal and Rock of Offence, against which they struck, and upon which
Rom. ix. 33. 1 Pet. ii. 8. they have fallen, and are broken.

In the Latin Vulgate, the Word Scandalum is often used in different Senses, which it may be convenient to explain here.
Exod. x. 7. Usquequò patiemur hoc Scandalum? How long shall Moses be a Snare to us? How long shall he pursue us, as a Fowler pursues his Game? Or else, How long shall we suffer the Israelites to continue among us, who are a stumbling Block to us? Or, more plainly, How long shall we suffer these Misfortunes that thus overwhelm us? Pax multa expose yourself to the Fury of a passionate Man, for fear it should be as much as your Life is worth. The Humiliation of Jesus Christ, his Cross and Sufferings, are, as it were, for a Stone of Stumbling, and for a Rock of Offence to both the Houses of Israel, for a Gin and for a Snare to the Inhabitants of Jerusalem [b], because they could not be convinced, that such humble Qualifications could belong to the Messiah they expected.

The Author of Ecclesiasticus generally takes the Verb to scandalize, in the Sense of exposing one's self to Danger. Ne fueris hypocrita, & non scandalizeris in labiis tuis [c]. Forbear to use Hypocrisy and Dissimulation, and let not your Lips expose you to the Danger of passing for a double Heart. The Greek says, Form not yourself upon the Words of Men, and give no Attention to their Discourse. Reckon not upon every Thing that Men may say of you, nor upon what they may say to you. Their Discourse ought not to be the Rule of your Conduct. And elsewhere, Doctrinam oris audite, filii, Eccl. xxiii. 7.
qui custodierit illam - - - - non scandalisabitur in operibus pessimi. He that will hear my Instructions, shall not fall into criminal Actions: Or rather, shall not be overturned, as a Man that hits against a Stone, and he shall not be seen to commit criminal Actions. And again, Qui insidiose agit scandalisabitur in Eccl. xxxii. 19.
ea (sapientia). He that seeks not Wisdom sincerely, instead of finding it, shall fall into a Snare, and be overthrown.

The Mountain of Scandal, Mons offensionis, was the Mountain of Olives, upon which Solomon built Temples, and erected Altars to his false Gods, to please the strange Wives he had taken. See 1 Kings xi. 4. 2 Kings xxiii. 13.

SCENOPEGIA, a Greek Word [d], which properly signifies the rearing of Tents, and which is used for the Feast of Tabernacles, in which the Hebrews dwelt under green Tents for eight Days, in Commemoration of the Pilgrimage of their Fathers in the Wilderness, where they lodged under Tents for forty Years. Levit. xxiii. 34, 35, &c. See TABERNACLE and FEAST OF TABERNACLES.

Governors

Governors of a Province, of the Chief of a People. Gen. xlix. 10. לא יסור שבט מיהודה. Jacob foretold to Judah, that the Sceptre should not depart from Judah, nor a Lawgiver from between his Feet, until Shiloh come, and unto him shall the gathering of the People be. And Balaam also foretelling the Coming of the Messiah, says, Numb. xxiv. 17. A Sceptre shall rise out of Israel. Baruch Bar. vi. 14. speaks of the Sceptre that the Babylonians put into the Hands of their Gods. Sceptrum habet ut homo, sicut Judex regionis. They are given also to Scribes, to Commissaries, Judges v. 14. who keep a List of the Troops. Also the Prophets often speak of the Sceptre of Dominion; Isai. xiv. 5. xix. 11, 14. and Amos represents the sovereign Power by him that holds the Sceptre. Amos i. 5, 8. Ahasuerus carried in his Hand a Golden Sceptre, &c. Esther viii. 4.

II. The Sceptre is put for the Rod of Correction, for the sovereign Authority that punishes and humbles. Psal. Thou shalt break them with a Rod of Iron, or with an Iron Sceptre. The wise Man often uses the Hebrew Word Shebet, to express the Rod with which the disobedient Son, and the intractable Servant are disciplined.

III. The Sceptre is very often taken for a Tribe; probably, because the Princes of each Tribe carried a Sceptre or a Wand of Command, to shew their Dignity. The Seventy, and St. Jerom, generally translate this Hebrew Word by Tribe; but sometimes also they preserve the Word Sceptre. For the Seventy, see 1 Sam. ix. 21. x. 19, 20, 21. xv. 17. 1 Kings viii. 16. xi. 13, 32, 35. xii. 20, 21. And for the Vulgate, see Numb. xviii. 2. Jerem. li. 19.

IV. The Sceptre, or the Hebrew Word Shebet, signifies a Shepherd's Wand, Lev. xxvii. 32. 2 Sam. xxiii. 21. 1 Kings xviii. 14. Isai. xxviii. 27. the Truncheon of a Warrior, or any common Staff; the Dart, Javelin, or Lance of a Soldier, the Rod or Flail with which they thrash the smaller Grains.

SCEVA, chief of the Priests; Acts xix. 14, 15, 16. that is to say, either Chief of the Synagogue at Ephesus, according to some, or rather, Chief of one of the Twenty-four Sacerdotal Families, 1 Chron. xxiv. 7, 8, &c. who waited each in their Turn in the Temple at Jerusalem. Lastly, they gave the Name of Chief of the Priests to the High-Priests that were deposed, and were no longer in Office. Josephus speaks of the High-Priest Jesus the Son of Siah, Joseph. Antiq. l. 17. c. 15. who lived nine or ten Years after the Birth of Jesus Christ. The same Author speaks also in another Place [a], of another Priest called Jesus the Son of Sapha, or Saphia, who had a great Share in the Affairs of the Jews, during their last War against the Romans. This might be the Son of the one or the other of these Priests, who went from City to City, as several other Jews did, to exorcise those that were possessed. These Exorcists being at Ephesus, pretended to invoke the Name of Jesus over those that were possessed; saying, We conjure thee by Jesus whom Paul preaches. But the evil Spirit answered them; Jesus I know, and Paul I know, but who are ye? And at the same time, he that was possessed, threw himself upon two of these Exorcists, and handled them so rudely, that they were forced to run out of the House naked and wounded.

SCHAMIR; see SAMIR. This is a very hard Stone, which the Lapidaries make use of to polish precious Stones.

SCHINUS, or Schinum, a Lentisk or Mastick-Tree. This Word is found in Susanna, ver. 54. Daniel asked one of Susanna's Accusers, under what Tree he had observed Susanna in the Company of her Lover? He answered, under a Mastick-Tree, Sub Schino. Daniel alluding to this Word, replied, The Angel of God hath received the Sentence of God, to cut thee in two: Schisai se. As this Allusion can take place only in the Greek, it gives reason to doubt, whether this Story of Susanna, in which it is read, was ever writ in Hebrew. See PRINUS before.

SCHISM, a Word formed from the Greek Word Schisma, which signifies Rupture, or Division. St. Paul exhorts the Corinthians 1 Cor. i. 10. to live in Union together, that there may be no Schisms among them: That there be no Divisions among you. St. John says, that Joh. ix. 16. the Jews were divided among themselves concerning Jesus Christ, some affirming, that he was a true Prophet, and others, that he was a Deceiver. And there was a Division (or Schism) among them. When Jeroboam revolted against Rehoboam, and was acknowledged as King of the Ten Tribes, he made a Schism, and separated from the Religion of the Lord, forsook the Communion of the Tribe of Judah, and no longer frequented the Temple, which was the chosen and appointed Place, to offer to the Lord the Worship that was due to him. The Cuthites, otherwise called Samaritans, who came from beyond the Euphrates, to settle in the Cities of the Ten Tribes, continued also in Schism, 'till the Establishment of the Christian Religion. The Jews at this Day look upon the Caraites as Schismaticks, because they do not receive their Traditions.

We have seen several Seditions in the Christian Church, from its Original to this Day. The Difference they make between Schism and Heresy, is this, that Heresy is founded upon Capital Errors, which the Heretick maintains obstinately, and in Contempt of the Censures and Thunders of the Church. Schism, on the contrary, is not merely founded upon the Errors of him that separates from the Church, but upon his Obstinacy in not acknowledging its true Head, or in continuing separate from its Communion. Thus we have often seen Schisms in the Churches of the West, because some obeyed one Pope, and some another, when there were several Competitors that claimed the Popedom. The Greeks, and the greatest part of the Christians of the East, are still Schismaticks to this Day, because they acknowledge not the Authority of the Pope, and do not communicate with the Latin Churches.

SCHOOLS, or Academies of the Jews. The Hebrews were always very diligent to teach and study the Laws that they had received from Moses. The Father of the Family studied and taught them in his own Family. The Rabbin taught them in the Temple, in the Synagogues, and in the Academies. They pretend that even before the Deluge [a] there were Schools for Knowledge and Piety, of which the Patriarchs had the Direction. They place Adam at their Head, then Enoch, and lastly Noah. Melchizedek, as they say, kept a School in the City of Kariath-zepher, otherwise Hebron, in Palestine. Abraham, who had been instructed by Heber, taught in Chaldea and in Egypt. From him the Egyptians learned Astronomy and Arithmetick. Jacob succeeded Abraham in the Office of teaching. The Scripture says, he was a plain Man dwelling in Tents; which according to the Chaldee Paraphrast, is, that he was a perfect Man, and Minister of the House of Doctrine.

Jos. Antiq. l. 1. c. 8. Gen. xxv. 27.

All this indeed, must needs be very precarious and uncertain. It cannot be doubted, but that Moses, Aaron, and the Elders of Israel, instructed the People in the Wilderness; and that many good Israelites were very industrious to instruct their Families in the Fear of God. But all this does not prove to us that there were any such Schools we are now inquiring after. Under Joshua we see a kind of Academy of the Prophets, where the Children of the Prophets, that is, their Disciples, lived in the Exercise of a retired and austere Life, in Study, in the Meditation and Reading of the Law of God. There were Schools of the Prophets at Naioth in Ramah; David and Samuel withdrew thither. Saul sent Messengers thither to apprehend David, but no sooner had they come near the Company of the Prophets, who had Samuel at their Head, but they also prophesied themselves. The second and third Troop of Officers that this Prince sent for the same Purpose, did in like manner. And when he himself went at last, he was seized with the Spirit of God, and began to prophesy as well as others.

1 Sam. xix. 19, 20, &c.

We find more also under the Prophets Elijah and Elisha at Bethel [b], and in the Plain of Jericho. There was also a great Number of them in the Kingdom of Israel [c]. Some have thought [d], that Elijah had also a Society of them upon Mount Carmel. These Prophets were consulted upon Affairs of Importance: People went to hear their Lessons, as appears from the Hostess of Elisha. Her Husband asks her, Why she went to see the Prophet, seeing that Day was neither the Sabbath nor the New-Moon? These Schools continued down to the Captivity of Babylon; and it should seem, that even the Captives went still to hear the Prophets, when there were any in the Places where they resided. Ezekiel relates several Conversations that he had with the Elders of Israel, who came to see him, and to consult him several times. The People also assembled about him, as it were to hear him, and be instructed by him; but they were not very careful to put his Instructions in practice.

Lightfoot, Centur. p. 661. 2 Kings iv. 23.

Ezek. xx. 1, 2, 3, &c. xiv. 1, 2. xxv. 31.

These Schools or Societies of the Prophets were succeeded by the Synagogues. 'Tis doubted whether there were any before the Captivity of Babylon. Yet we read in the Psalms, that Nebuchadnezzar burnt all the Synagogues of the Country. The Elders of Israel passed the Night in Prayer in the Place of Assembly. Per totam noctem intra Ecclesiam oraverunt, asking the Assistance of the Lord against Holofernes. The Greek of Esther, iv. 16. insinuates, that there were also Synagogues at Susa in the Time of Esther and Mordecai. We are assured, that they were become so numerous in Judea, after the Return from the Captivity, that in the City of Jerusalem only, there were upwards of Four hundred, according to some, or Three hundred, fourscore and fourteen, according to others. Every tradeing Company had their own, and the Strangers had several also [e].

Judith vi. 21, 22.

'Twas only after the Return from the Captivity that there was found in Israel that Distinction of Sects, of Pharisees, Sadducees, Essenians. We also find that of the Herodians mentioned in the Gospel. Each Sect had their particular Schools. See their several Articles.

The Method of teaching in the Synagogues and in the Schools, is plainly observable in the Gospels and in the Acts. When Jesus Christ was of the Age of twelve Years, he was found in the Temple in the Midst of the Doctors, hearing them and asking them Questions. Entring one Day into the Synagogue of Nazareth, his own Country, they presented to him the Volume of the Prophet Isaiah. He unfolded and opened it, and having read a Passage out of the Prophet, he rolled it up again, and sat down to speak. He read it therefore standing, ing, just as we now read the Gospel. St. Paul says, that he had studied at the Feet of Gamaliel. Philo relates, that in the Assembly of the Essenians, the Children sit at the Feet of their Masters, who interpret the Law to them, and explain the figurative and allegorical Sense of it, after the manner of the antient Philosophers. The Author published under the Name of St. Ambrose, upon the Epistles of St. Paul, says, that among the Hebrews the Rabbins sat upon Chairs that were raised aloft, the Scholars, that were the greatest Proficients, were upon Benches just below their Masters, and the younger Sort sat upon the Ground on Hassocks. But the Authors of the Thalmud teach us, that antiently the Masters sat down and the Scholars stood up. But this Custom was changed even before the Destruction of the Temple by the Romans; and from that Time, the Master sat in the first Place, and the Scholars sat round about him in Chairs, or upon the Ground. The Master taught either by himself, or by an Interpreter. If he made use of an Interpreter, he spoke Hebrew to him, and the Interpreter explained it in the vulgar Tongue. If the Scholars had a mind to propose any Question to their Master, they addressed themselves to the Interpreter, who proposed it to the Rabbin, and reported his Answer to the Scholars.

Acts xxii. 3. Philo lib. quod omnis probus liber. Ambrosiast. in Cor. xiv. Thalmud. tit. Megillah.

St. Jerome says, that a little before the Birth of Jesus Christ, two famous Rabbins, Shammai and Hillel, the Heads of two celebrated Schools, formed two Parties among the Jews, and were Masters of the Scribes and Pharisees. Akiba succeeded them, and was Master of the famous Aquila, the Translator of the Scriptures of the Old Testament. Akiba had Meir for his Successor, after whom appeared Johanan Son of Zachai, then Eliezer, afterwards Delphon, Joseph the Galilean, and lastly Joshua, who presided over this School at the taking of Jerusalem. 'Twas thus that the Jews made out the Succession of their Doctors in the Time of St. Jerome.

Hieronym. in Isai. c. 8. l. 3.

The Rabbins affirm, that after the Destruction of Jerusalem, they set up a School at Japhne in Galilee, called afterwards Iveline, and another at Lydda, or Diospolis. Akiba first professed at Diospolis, then at Japhne. Gamaliel succeeded him at Diospolis, and he succeeded Gamaliel at Japhne. But the most famous Academy of all this Country, was that of Tiberias upon the Sea of Galilee. There Juda the Holy, a Disciple of Meir, Chinina, and Johanan, were Professors successively. After some time Juda withdrew from Tiberias, and opened a School at Sephoris, and there professed for seventeen Years. But it is proper to observe, that all this Succession of Masters and Schools is very uncertain. See F. Morin in his Exercitationes Biblicæ, l. 2. Exer. 2. c. 1, 3.

After the Fall of the Schools in Palestine, which is fixed to be about the Middle of the third Century, the Jews are constrained to seek the Succession of their Doctors beyond the Euphrates, at Sora, at Pundebita, at Nabardea, and at Perutzshibbur; Places but little known, and of which the very Situation is doubtful. They think it was the Doctors Rab and Samuel, Disciples of Juda the Holy, who founded them about the Year 220. They subsisted, as they say, for Eight hundred Years, till about the Year of Jesus Christ 1030, when they were destroyed by the Saracens.

Upon the Ruins of these Schools were formed those of Egypt and Europe. Their Doctors chiefly made their Appearance in Spain. Moses Son of Maimon, or Maimonides, was born at Cordua, he was a Disciple of Averroes, he withdrew into Egypt, and there died about the Year of Christ 1205. Rabbi Nathan, Chief of the School of Rome, died in 1106. Abenezra, another famous Rabbi, died at Rhodes in 1174. Rabbi Solomon, otherwise called Raschi or Jarchi, a Native of Lunel in Provence, or of Troyes in Champaign, died at Treves in 1180. Kimchi was born at Narbonne, he flourished from the Year 1200, till towards the Year 1250. These are the principal Rabbins, and the Times in which they lived. By what has been said, one may form a Notion of their Schools, and of the Succession of their Doctors. We have treated of this more at large in a Dissertation concerning the Schools of the Jews.

SCINIPHES, or Ciniphes; the third Plague wherewith God punished the Egyptians, was that of the Sciniphes, or Flies, which some have taken for what we call Gnats. Origen says, that the Sciniphe is so small a Flie, that it is hardly perceptible to the Eye, but when it fixes to the Body, it causes a very quick Pain, and a sharp stinging. Philo reports, that these little Insects penetrate into the very Eyes, the Nose, and the Ears, where they make the Points of their Stings to be felt. The Hebrew Word Kinnim [a], which the Septuagint have rendered by Sniphes, signifies Lice according to the Syriack, and several good Interpreters. SCOPAS, an Etolian, General of the Armies of Ptolomy Epiphanes, King of Egypt [b]; he was sent by the King his Master into Judea, and into Cele-syria [c], to recover the Cities and Provinces that Antiochus the Great had conquered from him. Scopas had first all the Advantage on his Side, probably because his Expedition was in the Winter; but the Summer following he was beaten by Antiochus near Paneas, about the Sources of Jordan. St. Jerom, upon chap. xi. of Daniel, says, that Scopas retiring into the City of Sidon, was there besieged by Antiochus; that Ptolemy Epiphanes attempted to deliver him from thence, and sent three very experienced Captains, Æropus, Menocles, and Damoxenus; but they not being able to raise the Siege, Scopas was forced to surrender, happy enough in having his Life saved, with the Remainder of his Troops. He return'd into Egypt, but did not long remain quiet; for two Years afterwards [a] he took it in his Head to be made King of Egypt, with the Assistance of the Etolians whom he commanded; but his Irresolution ruin'd him. Aristomenes and Polycrates accused him of High Treason; and he was become so stupefy'd, that not knowing what Defence to make, he was unanimously condemn'd to die, by all that were present. The following Night Aristomenes put him to Death in Prison, by making him swallow some Poison he had provided for him.

SCORIA, the Scum or Dross of Metals. Argentum tuum versum est in scoriam, says Isaiah; Thy Silver is become Dross. But the Hebrew Text rather signifies, a Metal debased by the Mixture of Lead or Copper. See Ezek. xxii. 18, 19.

SCORPION. The Scorpion is a small Animal that has a Bladder full of a dangerous Poison: It may be distinguish'd into three Parts; the Head, the Breast, and the Belly. The Head appears to be join'd and continu'd to the Breast: It has two Eyes in the Middle of its Head, and two towards its Extremity, between which come out, as it were, two Arms, which are divided into two, like the Claws of a Lobster. It has eight Legs proceeding from its Breast, every one of which is divided into six Parts, cover'd with Hair, at the End of which are six Talons or Claws. The Belly is divided into seven Rings, from the last of which the Tail proceeds, which is divided into seven little Beads, of which the last is arm'd with a Sting. In some are observed six Eyes, and in others eight may be visibly perceived. The Tail is long, and made after the manner of a String of Beads ty'd End to End, one to another, the last bigger than the others, and something longer, at the End of which are sometimes two Stings, which are hollow, and fill'd with a cold Poison, which it squirts into the Part which it stings.

The Scorpion is of a blackish Colour, like Soot; it waddles as it goes, and fixes violently with its Snout, and by its Feet, on such Persons as it seizes upon, so that it cannot be pluck'd off but with Difficulty. There are some that have Wings, like those of Locusts, which fly from one Region to another; and are something like Bats, as is affirmed by Pliny and Strabo. There are also of several Colours: The Antients mention the black ones, yellow, ash-coloured, red, green, white, wine-colour'd, of the Colour of Soot. They say, the Dam brings forth eleven young ones, which are small round Worms, hardly bigger than a Louse: The Mother sits upon them; and we are told, that when they are hatch'd, they kill the Mother that gave them Life. They are more mischievous to Women than Men, and more to Girls than Women. Those which have seven Knots in their Tails are more dangerous than those that have but six.

They tell us, that in cold Countries the Scorpions are not venomous, no more than those that are of a whitish Colour. The best and the surest Remedy against the Bite of a Scorpion, is, to squeeze it to Pieces upon the Wound. Moses tells us, [b] that the Hebrews passed through great and terrible Wildernesses, where were Scorpions, and the Serpent call'd Dipsas. Tertullian, at the Beginning of his Book call'd Scorpiacum, has well described the Scorpion. The Hebrew reads Hakarab, or Akrab; from whence is Acrabatene, a Name given to a Canton of Palestine, and the Ascent of Akrabbim, or Scorpions.

In Scripture, Scorpions are used in a figurative Sense, for wicked Men; Thou dost dwell among Scorpions; Thou livest with wicked and rebellious People, says the Lord to Ezekiel. He that hath hold of her, (an evil Wife) is as though he had held a Scorpion, says the Author of Ecclesiasticus: He runs a Hazard of being infected by her Poison. The same Author places Scorpions among the Instruments of God's Vengeance. St. John, in his Revelations, very well describes the Qualities of the Scorpion, and the Pain that proceeds from its Biting: And there came out of the Smoke Locusts upon the Earth, and unto them was given the Power, as the Scorpions of the Earth have Power. And to them it was given that they should not kill them, but that they should be tormented five Months. And their Torment was as the Torment of a Scorpion, when he striketh a Man.

Scorpions were also a kind of Whip armed with Points. When the Israelites complained to Rehoboam, of the Weight of the Yoke wherewith Solomon had loaded them, he returned them this Answer; [c] My Father hath chastised you with Whips,

As for Acrabatene, lying in the Country of Samaria, and which also took its Name from the Scorpions, or from the Place call'd Akrabbim, see this Word, and ACRABATENE.

1 Macc. vi. 51. Scorpions were also Machines of War, with which Arrows were thrown. The Name of Scorpion was also given to the Arrows themselves. This Machine is thus described by Tertullian, at the Beginning of his Book call'd Scorpiacum: Bellicam machinam, & retractu tela vegetantem, de Scorpio nominant. Id spiculum & fistula est, patula tenuitate in vulnus & virus, quâ figit, effundit. And Vegecius, l. 4. c. 22. Scorpiones dicebantur quos nunc manubalistas vocant: ideò sic nuncupati, quod parvis subtilibusque spiculis, inferant mortem. See Justus Lipsius, l. 3. Poliorcetic. Dialog. 4.

Deut. xxv. 1, 2, 3. SCOURGE, or Whip. This Punishment was very common among the Jews. Moses ordains, That if there be a Controversy between Men, and they come unto Judgment, that the Judges may judge them; then they shall justify the Righteous, and condemn the Wicked. And it shall be, if the wicked Man be worthy to be beaten, that the Judge shall cause him to lie down, and to be beaten before his Face, according to his Fault, by a certain Number. Forty Stripes he may give him, and not exceed; lest if he should exceed, and beat him above these with many Stripes, then thy Brother should seem vile unto thee. There were two ways of giving the Lash; one, with Thongs or Whips, made of Ropes-ends, or Straps of Leather; the other, with Rods, Twigs, or Branches of some Tree.

The Rabbins think, that ordinary Faults committed against the Law, and submitted to the Penalty of the Scourge, were punish'd, not with Blows with a Rod, but with a Whip. They reckon up as far as One hundred and sixty-eight Faults liable to this Penalty [a]; and they hold, that all punishable Faults, to which the Law has not annex'd the Penalty of Death, are to be punish'd by the Scourge. The Offender was stript from his Shoulders to his Middle, and he was tied by his Arms to a pretty low Pillar, that he might lean forward, and the Executioner might the more easily come at his Back. There are some that maintain, that they never gave more or less than thirty-nine Strokes, but that in greater Faults they struck with greater Violence. But others think, that when the Fault and Circumstances required it, they might add to this Number of Blows. St. Paul informs us, that at five different times he received nine and thirty Blows from the Jews; which should insinuate, that this was a fix'd Number, and that they never went beyond it. 2 Cor. xi. 24.

The same Apostle clearly shews in the same Place, that the Correction with Rods, was different from that with a Whip; Ter virgis cæsus sum. And when he was seized by the Jews in the Temple, the Tribune of the Roman Soldiers ran and took him out of the Hands of the Jews; and desiring to know the Reason of the Tumult that happen'd upon this Occasion, he order'd him to be tied and stretch'd upon the Ground, to put him to the Question, and to have him beat with Rods; for so, commonly, the Romans put the Question. Acts xxii. 24, 25. The Bastinado, that was sometime given upon the Back, and which at this Day, among the Eastern People, is given upon the Soles of the Feet raised aloft, while the Patient lies down upon his Belly; this Punishment is different from that of the Scourge or Whip.

The Rabbins teach us, that the Penalty of the Scourge was not at all ignominious among them, and that it could not be objected as a Disgrace to those that had suffer'd it. They pretend, that no Israelite, not so much as the King, or High-priest, was exempted from this Law, when he had committed any Fault that deserved this Punishment. But this must be understood of the Punishment of Whipping that that was inflicted in their Synagogues, and which was rather a legal and particular Penalty, than a publick and shameful Correction. Philo, speaking of the Manner with which Flaccus treated the Jews of Alexandria, says, he made them suffer the Punishment of the Whip, which (says he) is not less insupportable to a Free-man, than Death it self. Philo in Flacc. & de Specialibus legib. Our Saviour, speaking of the Pains and Ignominy of his Passion, commonly puts his Scourging in the first Place. Mat. xx. 19. Mark x. 34. Luk. xviii. 32.

SCRIBE, Scriba; in Hebrew, Sopher [b]; in Greek, Grammateus. The Word Scribe is very common in Scripture, and has several Significations.

I. A Clerk, Writer, or Secretary. This was a very considerable Employment in the Court of the Kings of Judah, in which the Scripture often mentions the Secretaries, as the first Officers of the Crown. Seraiah was Scribe or Secretary to King David. 2 Samuel viii. 17. Shevah and Shemaiah exercised the same Office under the same Prince. 2 Samuel xx. 25. 1 Chron. xxiv. 6. In Solomon's time we find Elihoreph and Ahiah 1 Kings iv. 3.

Secretaries

2 Kings xix. 2. 2 Kings xxxii. 8, 9, 10. Secretaries to the King: Shebna under Hezekiah; and Shaphan under Josiah. As there were but few in those Times that could write well, the Employment of a Scribe or Writer was very considerable.

II. A Scribe, is put for a Commissary or Muster-master of an Army, who makes the Review of the Troops, keeps the List or Roll, and calls them over. It is said, for Example, that in the War of Judg. v. 14. Barak against Sisera, Out of Machir came down Governors, and out of Zebulun they that handle the Pen of the Writer. Under the Reign of Uzziah King of Judah there 2 Chron. xxvi. 11. is found Jeil the Scribe, who had under his Hand the King's Armies. Jeremiah speaks of a Scribe that was Prince or Chief of the Soldiers, and who made the new-listed Soldiers perform their Exercise: Jer. lii. 25. 2 Kings xxv. 19. Scribam principem militum, qui probabat tirones. The Hebrew has it, The Scribe, Prince of the Army, who made the People of the Country go to War. In the Books of Maccabees, Judas gives Orders to the 1 Macc. v. 42. Scribes, to stand upon the Banks of the Brook that the Army was to pass over, and bids them let no one remain beyond the Water, but cause them all to pass over to the War.

III. Scribe, is put for an able and skilful Man, a Doctor of the Law, a Man of Learning, that understands Affairs. Jonathan, David's Uncle by the Father's side, 1 Chron. xxvii. 32. was a Counsellor, a Wise-man, and a Scribe. Baruch the Disciple and Secretary of Jeremiah, is also call'd a Scribe; so is Gemariah Jer. xxxvi. 10, 12, 20, 26. the Son of Shaphan; and Jonathan, who lived under the Reign of Josiah. Jesus the Son of Sirach says, Ecclus. x. 5. In the Hand of God is the Prosperity of Man, and upon the Person of the Scribe shall he lay his Honour. 'Tis known what Commendation the Scripture gives to Ezra, who is celebrated as a skilful Scribe in Ezra vii. 6. the Law of his God; He was a ready Scribe in the Law of Moses. The Scribes of the People, which are frequently mention'd in the Gospel, were publick Writers, and profess'd Doctors of the Law, which they read and explain'd to the People.

Vid. Casaubon. Exercit. in Baron. exercit. 1. n. 8. Judg. v. 14. 1 Chron. xxiv, xxvi. Some place the Original of Scribes under Moses; but their Name does not appear 'till under the Judges. Others think that David first instituted them, when he established the several Classes of the Priests and Levites. Epiphanius places their Original at the Time when the Sect of the Sadducees began. Mention is made in the Acts, Acts xxiii. 9. of Scribes that were of the Party of the Pharisees; which has made some believe, that all the Scribes were of the Sect of the Pharisees. But they did not espouse any particular Sect, but there were some of all Sects.

Scribes, and Doctors of the Law, in Scripture-phrase, mean the same thing. And he that in St. Matthew xxii. 35. is call'd a Doctor of the Law, in St. Mark xii. 28. is named a Scribe, or one of the Scribes. And as the whole Knowledge of the Jews, at that time, chiefly consisted in Pharisaical Traditions, and in the Use that was made of 'em to explain the Scriptures; the greatest Number of the Doctors of the Law, or of the Scribes, were Pharisees; and we almost always find them join'd together in Scripture. Each of 'em valu'd themselves upon their Knowledge of the Law, upon their studying and teaching it: They had the Key of Know- Mat. xxii. 52.
ledge, and sat in Moses's Chair. Epipha- Mat. xxiii. 2.
nius, and the Author of the Recognitions, imputed to St. Clement, reckon the Scribes among the Sects of the Jews; but it is certain, they made no Sect by themselves; they were only distinguish'd by their Study of the Law.

SCRIPTURE, or Writing. There is great Dispute concerning the first Inventer of Letters and Writing. Some maintain, that there was Writing before the Deluge, and that Adam was the Inventer of Letters. Others think, that Moses is the first Author of whom we have any Writings, and that before him there were no written Monuments. Thro' the whole Lives of the Patriarchs, we see no Footsteps of any Writing. Moses does not quote any Writing that was extant before his own; for the Book of the Wars of the Lord, mention'd Numb. xxi. 14. is a Passage added to the Text of Moses, or was a Writing compos'd in his Time. It is true, they talk of a Book compos'd by Adam, and another by Enoch, and that certain other Writings are ascribed to the First Man, and to Enoch. Josephus speaks of certain Pillars with In- Joseph. Antiq. l. 1.
scriptions made before the Deluge; they mention also certain Writings that were said to have been compos'd by Abraham: but all this is look'd upon as fabulous and apocryphal, in the Judgment of the most judicious Criticks.

It is agreed by all, that there is nothing extant this Day in the World, either more ancient, or more authentick, than the Books of Moses; but it will not follow from thence, that there was no Writing before him. It appears, on the contrary, by his own Account, that Writing was common enough at that time, both in Egypt, from whence the Hebrews were just come forth, and also among the Hebrews. This People seemed already prepared and accustomed to express their Thoughts and Sentiments after this manner. The Chief of the Nation, without doubt, read the Tables of the Law. Moses had been instructed in all the Knowledge of the Egyptians, and, doubtless, had learned their Manner of Writing [a]. See the Article LETTERS.

The Word Scripture taken abſolutely, generally ſtands for the ſacred Books of the Old and New Teſtament. *Did ye never read in the Scripture? How then ſhall the Scriptures be fulfilled? Canonical Scriptures. See the Article CANON OF SCRIPTURES. They generally aſcribe the forming of the Canon of Scriptures, or the Collection of the ſacred Books of the Old Teſtament, to Eſdras, who ranged them in a convenient Order. Firſt, the Law: Secondly, the Prophets: Thirdly, the Kelubim, or Hagiographa, that is to ſay, ſacred Writings. Our Saviour ſeems to have had regard to this old Manner of dividing the Bible, when he ſays; All things muſt be fulfilled which were written in the Law of Moſes, and in the Prophets, and in the Pſalms, concerning me. The Pſalms are at the Head of the Hagiographa. Joſephus, againſt Appion, acknowledges the ſame Diſtribution. We have, ſays he, two and twenty Books that are of divine Authority, of which five are of Moſes; the Prophets that ſucceeded Moſes compos'd thirteen of them; the other four are Hymns to the Honour of God, and Rules for the Conduct ef Life. We muſt however obſerve, that the Jews have varied in the Diviſion of their holy Books; and at this Day, inſtead of twenty-two they reckon twenty-four. But this is a Difference only in Name; and when it is ſaid, that the Canon was fix'd by Eſdras we muſt underſtand it with ſome Reſtriction; for he could not inſert Malachi into it, nor Eſther, nor even Nehemiah, where there is mention of the High-prieſt Jaddus, and of Darius Codomannus, King of Perſia, who lived all after Eſdras.

SCYTHOPOLIS, otherwiſe Beth-ſhan, a City on the weſtern Side of Jordan, at ſome Diſtance from the Place where this River comes out of the Lake of Genezareth. See the Article BETH-SHAN.

SEA, in Latin, Mare; in Hebrew, Jam; in Greek, Thalaſſe. The Hebrews give the Name of Sea to all great Collections of Water, to great Lakes or Pools. Thus the Sea of Galilee, or of Tiberias, or of Cinereth, is no other than the Lake of Tiberias or Genezareth in Galilee. The Dead Sea, the Sea of the Wilderneſs, the Sea of the Eaſt, the Sea of Sodom, the Sea of Salt, or the Salt-ſea, the Sea Aſphaltites or of Bitumen, is no other than the Lake Aſphaltites, or the Lake of Sodom. The Sea of Semechon is the Lake of the ſame Name. The Sea of Jazer is the Lake that was near the City Jazer, beyond Jordan. The Sea of Suph or Zuph is the Red-ſea. The weſtern Sea, or the great Sea, or the hindermoſt Sea, is the Mediterranean. They gave alſo the Name of Sea to a very great brazen Baſin, that Solomon caus'd to be made for the Temple, for the Conveniency of the Prieſts, who there waſh'd the Feet and Bowels of the Sacrifices, and the Inſtruments they made Uſe of for ſacrificing.

Hieron. Tradit. Hebr. in Geneſ. i, &c. Jerem. xvi. 32. 1 Kings vii. 23.

The Arabians, and Orientals in general, ſometimes alſo give the Name of Sea to great Rivers, as the Nile, the Euphrates, the Tigris, and others, which by their Magnitude, and by the Extent of their Overflowings, ſeem as little Seas or great Lakes. It is neceſſary to give ſome Proofs of this, becauſe there are ſeveral Paſſages in Scripture, the Explication of which would be almoſt impoſſible without this Conſideration. Iſaiah ſays, The Lord ſhall utterly deſtroy the Tongue of the Egyptian Sea, and with his mighty Wind ſhall he ſhake his Hand over the River, and ſhall ſmite it in the ſeven Streams, and make Men go over dry-ſhod. All this can be underſtood only of the Delta, which is, as it were, the Tongue of the Nile, here call'd the Egyptian Sea. 'Tis known that upon the Coaſts of the Mediterranean, where it waſhes the Shores of Egypt, there is neither Tongue of Land or of Sea; and beſides the whole Deſcription of the Prophet marks out the Nile, and its ſeven Arms. Septemplicis oſtia Nili.

Herbelot. Bib. Orien. p. 672. Iſai. xi. 15.

The ſame Prophet again denotes the Nile by the Name of Sea in this Paſſage. Woe to the Land ſhadowing with Wings, which is beyond the Rivers of Ethiopia. (He calls here the Red-ſea by the Name of the Rivers of Ethiopia, or of Cuth, becauſe the People of Cuth inhabited upon the Eaſtern Shore of this Sea.) That ſendeth Ambaſſadors by the Sea, even in Veſſels of Bulruſhes upon the Waters. Here he inſinuates the Nile by the Word Sea. Theſe Veſſels of Bulruſhes were peculiar to Egypt, as Pliny obſerves. Ex ipſo papyro navigia texunt, & ex libro vela. The Prophet Iſaiah goes on to addreſs his Words to thoſe Ambaſſadors, who ſailed upon the Nile in Veſſels of Bulruſhes. Go, ye ſwift Meſſengers to a Nation ſcattered and peeled, to a People terrible from their Beginning hitherto; a Nation meted out and trodden down, whoſe Land the Rivers have ſpoiled. This Deſcription could only agree to Egypt, which was then torn in Pieces by domeſtick Diviſions. Egypt is known and waſted by the Inundations of the Nile; 'tis a Country meted out and trodden down, becauſe the Mud being often ſpread over the Land, and ſo concealing the Bounds and Limits, they are often obliged to meaſure it out again, &c.

Iſai. xviii. 1, 2. Plin. l. 6. c. 22.

The Country of Babylon, which was water'd by the Euphrates, is call'd by the ſame Prophet, the Deſart of the Sea: Whether it was becauſe of that Solitude and and Devastation to which it was to be reduced; or by way of Irony or Antiphrasis, because Babylon was then a much frequented and populous City. This City situate upon great Waters, upon the Sea, and which is the Habitation of such a Multitude of People. Jeremiah speaks of it in the same manner. The Sea is come up upon Babylon, she is covered with the Multitude of the Waves thereof. And a little before; I will dry up her Sea, and make her Springs dry. And Isaiah, speaking of the King of Babylon, calls him Leviathan, or the Dragon that is in the Sea. Ezekiel gives the same Name to the King of Egypt; Thou art as a Whale in the Seas, because his Habitation was upon the Banks of the Nile.

Jerem. li. 36, 42. Isai. xxvii. 1. Eze. xxxii. 2.

Daniel, speaking of Antiochus, who carry'd his Army beyond the Euphrates, and who encamped in the Plains of Mesopotamia, says, that he encamped at Padan, between the Seas, that is, between Tigris and Euphrates. Hosea calls the Babylonians and Egyptians, Children of the Sea. Formidabunt filii maris, & avolabunt quasi avis ex Ægypto, & quasi columba de terra Assyriorum; and the Jews that were Captives in Babylonia, and in Egypt, shall return into their own Country. Nahum, speaking of the City of No, or No-ammon, which many think to be the same as Thebes, or Diospolis, says, that the Sea is its Treasure, and that the Waters serve it for a Rampart. This Sea, and these Waters, certainly can mean nothing else but the Nile.

Dan. xi. 45. Hos. xi. 10. Vulgat. Nahum iii. 8.

The great Sea, the western Sea, the hindermost Sea, the Sea of the Philistines, generally express the Mediterranean, which was to the West of the Land of Promise, and which was consider'd as behind a Man who should look towards the Sun-rising, having his Left-hand to the North, and his Right-hand to the South. For 'tis thus the Hebrews mark out the Situation of Places, which are to the right or left, before or behind. The Sea is often put for the West, as the Right is put for the South. 'Twas upon the Mediterranean that Jonah embark'd himself; and it was upon this Sea that they floated the Timber that was cut down from Mount Libanus, and which was brought to Joppa, for the building of the Temple.

Gen. xii. 8. xiii. 14. & passim.

The Sea of Suph or Zuph; that is to say, the Sea of Rushes, is what we call now the Red-sea. It is call'd the Sea of Suph, because of the great Quantity of Rushes or Sea-wrack which is found at its Bottom, and on its Shores. It is still, at this Day, call'd Bahrsuf, and the Weed that grows there is call'd Sufo. Diodorus Siculus says, that it appears all over green, because of the Weeds that grow under its Waters. Those that have sailed upon this Sea tell us, that it appears red in some Places, because of a red Sand at the Bottom. In other Places the Water seems to be white, because of the white Sand that is found there. Lastly, it appears green where the Sea-wrack is found. But this is only observed in such Places where the Water is low; and the Colour of the Sand or Weeds appears through the Water, only because it is very clear and transparent. Don John de Castro, Viceroy of the Indies for the King of Portugal, believes, that the Name of the Red-sea had its Original from hence, because there is a great Quantity of Coral found in this Sea. Certain it is, that the Books of the Old Testament never Name this the Red-sea, but the Sea of Zuph. Pliny says, [a] that it obtain'd the Name of the Red-sea, in Greek Erythrea, because of a certain King call'd Erythros, who reign'd in Arabia, and whose Tomb was to be seen in the Island Tyrine or Agyris.

Several learned Men believe, that this King Erythros is no other than Esau or Edom. Edom, in Hebrew, signifies red or ruddy, just as Erythros does in Greek. But I cannot be persuaded that Edom ever dwelt, either upon the Shores of the Red-sea, or the Persian Gulph, which is sometimes also call'd by the Name of the Red-sea. His Dwelling was to the East of the Land of Canaan, towards Bozra. Those that have observed the reddish Parts of this Sea tell us, that there were none at the Place where the Israelites passed over, nor a great deal lower. That is to say, there were none from Tor, over-against Mount Sinai, as far as Suez, to the northern Extremity of this Sea. So that I am inclined to believe, that the Name of the Red-sea was not given to it, till after the Idumeans descended from Edom had spread themselves from East to West, as far as the Red-sea. Then it might have the Name of the Sea of Edom given to it, which the Greeks render'd by the Red-sea, or Thalassa Erythrea. In the Books of the Kings and Chronicles, I find the Sea of Suph in the Land of Edom, which may be brought as a Confirmation of this Conjecture.

1 Kings ix. 26. 2 Chron. viii. 17.

This is the Description of the Sea of Kolsum, or of the Red-sea, according to Abulfeda [b]. It takes its Name from the City of Kolsum, lying at the Extremity of its northern Coast, under the forty-fourth Degree and a Quarter; others say the forty-sixth Degree and a Half of Longitude, and under the twenty-third Degree and one-third of Latitude. From Kolſum this Sea runs on to the South, bending a little towards the Eaſt, as far as Kaſir, which is a Harbour of Kous, whoſe Longitude is forty-nine Degrees, and Latitude twenty-ſix. From thence it runs on ſtill to the South, verging a little towards the Weſt, about Aidad, whoſe Longitude is forty-eight Degrees, and Latitude twenty-one. From Aidad it goes on in a right line towards the South, as far as Sawakam, a little City of Ethiopia, which is alſo under the forty-eighth Degree of Longitude, and the ſeventeenth of Latitude. Thence, going on towards the South, it wheels about the Iſland of Dahlac, which is at a ſmall Diſtance from the weſtern Coaſt, and whoſe Longitude is one and ſixty Degrees, and Latitude fourteen. From this Iſland the Sea ſtretches ſtill on towards the South, and waſhes the Shores of Ethiopia, as far as Cape Almandab; and there is the end, or rather beginning of the Red-ſea, toward the South, near the Strait or Mouth, by which the great Indian Sea pours in, or the Eaſtern Ocean. The Mountain of Almandab, and the Deſarts of Aden, are very near to each other, and are only ſeparated by ſo narrow a Strait, that one Man may ſee another from the oppoſite Shore. This Strait is call'd Bab-al-mandab; and Travellers have aſſured me, that Bab-al-mandab is below Aden, and is as far diſtant from Aden towards the North-weſt, as a Ship may ſail in a Day and a Night. The Mountains of Almandab are ſituate in the Country of the Abyſſines, and they may be ſeen from the Mountains of Aden, tho' they are at a great Diſtance. In this Place the Mouth of the Sea of Kolſum is entirely ſhut up and ſtraitened in the manner we have already deſcribed. Aden in, reſpect of Bab-al-mandab, lies between the Eaſt and the South; and this is all we find obſervable upon the weſtern Coaſt of the Red-ſea, from Kolſum to Mandab.

Degree

Now let us proceed to the Shore which ſtretches out from the other Side of the Mountain of Mandab, and which is the Land of Aden. Here we may take notice, that from Aden the Red-ſea runs toward the North. The Longitude of this City is ſixty-ſix Degrees, and its Latitude eleven. Then this Sea turns about the Coaſts of Yemen, till it arrives at the Extremity of the Coaſt bearing this Name, where the Longitude is ſixty-ſeven Degrees, and the Latitude nineteen all but ten Minutes. From thence it ſtretches ſtill towards the South, as far as Gioddah, whoſe Longitude is ſixty-ſix Degrees, and Latitude twenty-one. From Gioddah it runs North-weſt, as far as Algiahaſah, a Station of the Egyptians, under the ſixty-fifth Degree of Longitude, and the twenty-ſecond Degree of Latitude. Afterwards it goes on towards the North, verging a little weſtwardly, as far as the Shore of Yambaak, whoſe Longitude is ſixty-four Degrees, and Latitude twenty-ſix. From thence it runs wholly between the Weſt and the North, till having left Madian, it arrives at Ailah, which is under the fifty-fifth Degree of Longitude, and the twenty-ninth Degree of Latitude. Almoſhtarec ſays in the Kanum, that the Longitude of Ailah is fifty-ſix Degrees, and forty Minutes, and its Latitude is twenty-eight Degrees fifty Minutes. From Ailah this Sea bends about towards the South, as far as Altour, which is the Mountain of Sinai, which by a very high Promontory ſtretching out into this Sea, divides it into two Arms. Thence turning about towards the North, it arrives again at Kolſum, whoſe Poſition we have already determin'd. Kolſum and Ailah are ſituated at the two Ends of this Sea; Ailah at the Extremity of the eaſtern Arm, and Kolſum towards the Extremity of the weſtern Arm. Mount Altour or Sinai is ſituated between theſe two Cities, upon a Kind of Peninſula, ſurrounded by the Sea towards the Eaſt, Weſt, and South, and joined to the Land only towards the North.

Every one knows the famous Miracle of the Paſſage over the Red-ſea, when the Lord open'd this Sea, dry'd it up, and made the Iſraelites paſs through it dry-ſhod, to the Number of ſix hundred thouſand Men, without reckoning the old Men, Women, or Children. The Rabbins and many of the antient Fathers, [a] relying upon theſe Words of Pſalm cxxxvi. 13. To him which divided the Red-ſea into Parts. Qui diviſit mare rubrum in diviſiones, have maintain'd, that the Red-ſea was ſo divided, as to make twelve Paſſages; ſo that each of the twelve Tribes paſs'd through a different Paſſage. But other Authors [b] have advanced, that Moſes having lived a long time near the Red-ſea, in the Country of Midian, had obſerved that it kept its regular Ebbing and Flowing like the Ocean; ſo that taking the Advantage of the Time of the Ebb, he led the Hebrews over; but the Egyptians not knowing the Nature of the Sea, and raſhly entering it juſt before the Return of the Tide, were all ſwallowed up and drowned, as Moſes relates it. 'Twas thus that the Prieſts of Memphis explain'd it, according to the Report of Artapanus; which Opinion has been adopted by a great Number of the Moderns.

Joſephus

Joseph. Antiq. l. 2. c. ult. Josephus having related the History of the Passage through the Red-sea, as it is told by Moses, adds, that this ought not to be look'd on as impossible, since God might as well have open'd a Passage for the Israelites thro' the Waters, as a long time afterwards he open'd one for Alexander and his Macedonians, when they pass'd thro' the Sea of Pamphilia. But the Historians, [a] that have mention'd this Passage of the Macedonians, assure us, that they enter'd into the Sea, and coasted the Shore where it was not deep; so that the Soldiers marched all Day in the Water, which was not above their Middle. Arrian says, that this is unpassable when the South Winds blow; but the Wind having changed on a sudden, gave the Soldiers an Opportunity of passing without Danger. 'Twas perhaps this Reflection of Josephus that gave Occasion to some of the Antients to think, [b] that the Israelites did not pass thro' the Red-sea from Shore to Shore, but only coasted it, and during the Time of the Flux ascended a little from the Place they were in towards the Shore upon the higher Ground; so that they made a Kind of Semicircle in the Sea. This Opinion is also Thom. in 1 Cor. x. espoused by Thomas Aquinas, Tostat, Paul de Burgos, Grotius, Genebrard, Vatablus, and some Rabbins.

But not to enter into a nice Discussion of all these Opinions, not to undertake to refute them particularly, and not to deny that the Red-sea may have its Ebbing and Flowing; we need only alledge the Text of Moses and other sacred Authors, who have mention'd this miraculous Passage: We may see plainly that no other Account is supportable, but that which supposes the Hebrews to pass through the Sea from Shore to Shore, in a vast space of dry Ground, which was left void by the Wa-Exod. xiv. 16, 17, &c. ters at their retiring. Lift thou up thy Rod, and stretch out thine Hand over the Sea, and divide it; and the Children of Israel shall go on dry Ground through the midst of the Sea. And Moses stretched out his Hand over the Sea, and the Lord caused the Sea to go back by a strong East-wind all that Night, and made the Sea dry Land, and the Waters were divided. And the Children of Israel went into the midst of the Sea upon the dry Ground, and the Waters were a Wall unto them on their right Hand and on their left. When the Egyptians likewise were enter'd into the Sea, the Lord said unto Moses; Stretch out thine Hand over the Sea, that the Waters may come again upon the Egyptians, upon their Chariots, and upon their Horsemen. And Moses stretched forth his Hand over the Sea, and the Sea returned to his Strength when the Morning appeared, and the Egyptians fled against it, and the Lord overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the Sea. But the Children of Israel walked upon dry Land in the midst of the Sea, and the Waters were a Wall unto them on the right Hand and on the left.

And in the Canticle that Moses sung at their coming out of the Red-sea, he says; With the Blast of thy Nostrils (or, with the Wind of thy Fury) the Waters were gathered together; the Flood stood upright as an Heap, and the Depths were congealed in the Heart of the Sea. And the Psalmist says; He divided the Sea, and caused them to pass through, and he made the Waters to stand as on a Heap. He says elsewhere, that the Sea fled at the Sight of God; that the Lord made himself a Path in the Sea; that he walked in the midst of the Waters. Isaiah says, that the Lord divided the Waves before his People, that he conducted them through the Bottom of the Abyss, as a Horse is led through the midst of a Field. Habakkuk says, that the Lord made himself a Road to drive his Chariot and Horses cross the Sea, across the mud of great Waters. Lastly, the Author of the Book of Wisdom says, that the dry Land appear'd all on a sudden in a Place where Water was before; that a free Passage was open'd in a Moment through the midst of the Red-sea; and that a green Field was seen in the midst of the Abyss, &c. See the Commentators upon Exod. xiv, M. le Clerc's Dissertation upon the Passage over the Red-sea, and that which we have compos'd upon the same Subject, prefix'd to our Commentary upon Exodus. 'Tis thought the Place where the Hebrews pass'd the Red-sea, is two or three Leagues below its northern Point, at the Place call'd Kolsum, or Chysma, where some of the Antients [c] have testify'd, that in their Time might still be seen the Ruins of the Wheels of Pharaoh's Chariots, and evident Marks of those Chariots.

The Dead-sea, Salt-sea, Eastern-sea, Sea of Sodom, Sea of the Wilderness, or of the Plain. This is the Lake Asphaltites, to which Josephus allows five hundred and fourscore Furlongs in Length, and one hundred and fifty Furlongs in breadth, that is to say, about twenty-five Leagues long, and five or six broad. The Jordan empties itself into the Dead-sea, and we are assured, that the Salt and Bitumen, with which the Waters are impregnated, make them so pungent and briny, that no Fish can live there. This Sea has taken Possession of that Part of the Country that was formerly occupy'd by the Cities of Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim, and their Territory, which was heretofore as the Paradise or Garden of the Lord. This Sea is properly no more than a Lake, having no sensible Communication with any other Sea. See what we have observed under the Article ASPHALTITES. The Name of Dead-sea is not read in the Text of Scripture; it is probable this Name was given it, because nothing can long continue in it alive. The Name of Salt-sea, or Sea of Salt, is of the same Signification as the Sea of Asphaltites; for under the Word SALT the Hebrews comprehend Asphaltus, Bitumen, and Nitre. The Name of the Eastern-sea is given it, because of its Situation, being opposite to the Western-sea, or the Mediterranean. Lastly, the Name of the Sea of the Wilderness, or of the Plain, in Hebrew, Arabah, comes from Araboth, desart Plains which are beyond Jordan, to the West and North of the Sea we are now speaking of.

The Sea of Semechon; it is not mention'd in the Text of Scripture, but only in the Writings of the Rabbins. See the Article SEMECHON.

The Sea of Jazar; this is only a Lake or Pool that lay near this City. See JAZER.

The brazen or molten Sea that Solomon made for the Temple; it had ten Cubits in Diameter from Side to Side, and therefore about thirty Cubits in Circumference. Taking the Hebrew Cubit at twenty Inches and an half, the ten Cubits make seventeen Foot and an Inch; and the thirty Cubits make one and fifty Foot and three Inches. (1 Kings vii. 23, 26, &c.) This Vessel was round, and of the depth of five Cubits. The Brim was adorn'd with an Edging, and embellish'd with Lilies, and Knobs and Oxe's Heads in Demi-relief. It contain'd three thousand Baths, (The Bath contains about 7 Gall. 4 Pints.) as is said 2 Chron. iv. 5. or two thousand Baths, as mention'd 1 Kings vii. 26. This may be reconciled by saying, that the Cup or Bowl contain'd two thousand Baths, and the Foot, which was hollow, contain'd a thousand more. Thus this great Vessel was but of one Capacity within, tho' it seem'd without to be double. This Sea was supported by its Foot now mention'd, which was as a thick hollow Column; besides which it was supported by twelve Oxen of Brass, disposed into four Groups, by three in a Group, and leaving four Passages between, by which they went to draw Water by three Cocks fix'd to the Foot of this Vessel. See 1 Kings vii. 23, &c. 2 Chron. iv. 2, 3, 4, 5, &c.

The Sea of Egypt, mention'd in Isaiah xi. 15. means that Part of the Mediterranean that waters the Coasts of Egypt.

The Tongue of the Sea. The Hebrews and Arabians call that a Tongue of the Sea which runs into the Land; as we call that a Tongue or Neck of Land, that advances into the Sea. See Joshua xv. 5. xviii. 19. Isai. xi. 15.

SEAH, Satum; [a] a Kind of hollow Measure among the Hebrews. Its Capacity was of about two Gallons and a half, liquid Measure; or about a Peck, dry Measure. See the Table of Measures.

SEAL, sigillum, signum, signaculum. The antient Hebrews wore their Seals or Signets in Rings on their Fingers, or in Bracelets on their Arms. Haman seal'd the Decree of King Ahasuerus against the Jews with the King's Seal. (Esth. ii. 12.) The Priests of Bel desired the King to seal up the Door of the Temple of this God with his own Seal, to convince him that they did not go in there by Night. (Bell. ii.) The Spouse in the Canticles wishes, that his Spouse would wear him as a Signet upon her Arm: (Cant. viii. 6.) Pone me ut signaculum super brachium tuum.

Pliny observes, that the Use of Seals or Signets was yet rare at the Time of the Trojan War, (Plin. l. 33. c. 1.) and that they were put to the Shift of shutting up their Letters with several Knots: But among the Hebrews they are much more antient. Judah the Son of Jacob left his Seal, his Bracelet, and his Staff, as a Pledge with Tamar, whom he did not know. (Genesis xxxviii. 25.) Moses says in Deuteronomy, that God keeps seal'd up in his Treasuries, under his own Seal, the Instruments of his Vengeance. (Deuter. xxxii. 34.) Job says, that he keeps the Stars as under his Seal; (Job ix. 7.) that he is Master of them, and allows them to appear when he thinks proper. And elsewhere; My Transgression is seal'd up in a Bag. (Job xiv. 17.)

When they intended to seal up a Letter, or a Book, they wrapp'd it up with Flax or Thread, and then apply'd the Wax to it, and afterwards the Seal. The Lord commanded Isaiah to tie up or wrap up the Book wherein his Prophecies were written, and to seal them up till the Time he should bid him to publish them. (Isai. viii. 16, 17.) Liga testimonium, & signa legem in discipulis meis.

He gives the same Command to Daniel. Tu autem Daniel, signa sermones, & claude librum usque ad tempus. (Dan. xii. 4.) The Book that was shewn to St. John the Evangelist in the Revelations, was seal'd with seven Seals, and written within and without. (Rev. v. 1. vi. 1, 2, &c.) No one durst open it, or explain it to him, but the Lamb that was slain from the Beginning of the World. It was a rare thing to put such a Number of Seals; but that insinuated the great Importance and Secrecy of the Matter.

In civil Contracts they generally made two Originals, one continued open, and was kept by him for whose Interest the

[a] סאה Seah. LXX. Σάτον, Satum, or Μέτρον, Mensura, or Οἰφί. Ephi.

Contract was made: The other was seal'd up, and deposited in some publick Office. It was seal'd up to prevent any Fraud or Falsification. Jeremiah bought a Field in his Country of Anathoth, of one call'd Hanameel; he himself wrote the Contract, call'd Witnesses, and seal'd it up: He put it into the Hands of his Disciple Baruch, and said to him; Take these Evidences, this Evidence of the Purchase, both which is sealed, and this Evidence which is open, and put them in an earthen Vessel, that they may continue many Days. The Grecians did in the same manner with their Writings: They preserved the Originals of their Contracts, and other Instruments of any Consequence, in Vessels of Brass or Earth. See the Scholiasts upon Aristophanes, in vespis, upon the Word ECHINOS.

Jerem. xxxii. 10, 11, 14.

SEAT. The Seat of Moses, upon which the Scribes and Pharisees sat, is to express the Authority of the Doctors of the Law, and the Office of Teaching which was granted to them, or which they took upon themselves. Our Lord commanded that they should be heard and respected, but he forbid that their Actions should be made Precedents and Examples.

The Seat of the Scorners, of the Pestilent, of which there is mention in the first Psalm, stands for scandalous Discourse, the licentious Manners of Libertines, who corrupt as much by their scandalous Example and Conduct, as by their loose Principles, all those that hear them and keep them Company. Instead of Pestilent, the Hebrew says Scorners, Revilers, those pretended Free-thinkers, that deride the Credulity and Simplicity of plain and honest Minds. Solomon often speaks of them in his Proverbs [a], and takes great Care to secure his Pupil against the Strokes of their dangerous Tongues.

Psal. i. 1. במושב לצים

The Seat of Honours, mention'd by Ecclesiasticus, the chief Places in the Synagogues, which the Pharisees assum'd to themselves; the Seat that was prepar'd for Job in the Assemblies, the Seat or Throne of the King, and of God, are clear enough of themselves. The Throne belongs to God, and to the King, the Seat of Honour to the Friends of the King, and to great Men. The Seat of the Doctors belongs to such as make it their Profession to teach and instruct.

SECT. This Latin Word has the same Signification as the Greek Word Hæresis, tho' the Sound be not so odious. Among the Jews were known four several Sects, which were distinguish'd by the Singularity of their Practices and Opinions, and yet continued united in Communion with each other, and with the Body of their Nation. These Sects are those of the Pharisees, the Saducees, the Essenians, and the Herodians, of which we have already spoke under their several Articles. At the Beginning of Christianity they would have had the Religion of Jesus Christ to pass as a new Sect of Judaism. Tertullus the Advocate for the Jews, accusing St. Paul before Fœlix, says, that he was Chief of the seditious Sect of the Nazarenes; and the Jews of Rome said to St. Paul, when he arrived in this City, that as to this Sect, it was every where spoke against. St. Peter in his second Epistle, foretels to the Faithful, that false Teachers should arise among them, who privily shall bring in damnable Heresies (or Sects) even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift Destruction. He adds, that these People being great Lovers of themselves, blaspheme sound Doctrine, and are not afraid to introduce new Sects; but here the Word Sect is taken in the same Sense as Heresy.

Act. xxiv. 5. Act. xxviii. 22. 2 Pet. ii. 1—10.

What probably gave Birth to the different Sects among the Jews, was what they observed to obtain among the Greeks, whose Philosophers were divided into different Sects. For Example, the Academicks, the Stoicks, the Peripateticks, the Cynicks, the Epicureans, &c. The Jews, in Imitation of the Greeks, began to divide themselves into several Sects, about the Time of the Maccabees. It seems as if the Corinthians had a mind to introduce something like this into Christianity, when they boasted, I am a Disciple of Peter, I of Paul, I of Apollos. Which Abuse St. Paul with great Vehemence corrects in his first Epistle to the Corinthians. Even at this Day, in the Christian and Catholick Church, we labour under a kind of Sects in Philosophy, and even in Divinity, in respect of some Questions that the Church has not decided, and which it leaves to the Liberty of the Schools. Thus we see in Philosophy Peripateticks, Scotists, Nominals, Cartesians, Gassendists, &c. and in

SECUNDUS, a Disciple of St. Paul, Acts xx. 4. We know none of the Particulars of his Life. He was of Thessalonica, and follow'd St. Paul out of Greece into Asia, in the 58th Year of Jesus Christ. The Spaniards acknowledge a St. Secundus, who they pretend was sent into their Country by the Apostles St. Peter and St. Paul. (Bolland. 15 Mai. p. 442. a.)

SECURUS, and Incendens. 1 Chron. iv. 22. These are two Men, call'd in Hebrew, one Joash, and the other Saraph, whose Names St. Jerom thus translates into Latin.

SEEING, to See. This is said, not only of the Sense of Vision, by which we perceive external Objects, but also of inward Perception, of the Knowledge of spiritual Things, and even of that supernatural Sight of hidden Things, of Prophecy, of Visions, of Ecstasies. Whence it is that formerly they were call'd Seers, who afterwards were call'd Nabi, or Prophets: And that Prophecies were call'd Visions; Visio Amos, Visio Abdiæ, &c.

Moreover, the Verb to See, is used to express all kind of Sensations. It is said in Exodus, that the Israelites saw Voices, Thunder, Lightning, the Sound of the Trumpet, and the whole Mountain of Sinai cover'd with Clouds, or Smoke. (Exod. xx. 18.) And Saint Austin observes, that the Verb to See, is imputed to all the five natural Senses; to see, to hear, to smell, to taste, to touch: He says, Non enim tantum dicimus, vide quid luceat, sed etiam, vide quid sonet, vide quid oleat, vide quid sapiat, vide quid caleat. (Aug. ep. 167. nov. edit. c. 1. p. 476.)

To see Good, or Goods, is, to enjoy them: Credo videre bona Domini in terra viventium; (Psal. xxvi. 13.) I hope that God will bring me back into my own Country, into the Land of Judea, and that I shall live there in Peace and Prosperity. Job says, Non revertetur oculus meus, ut videat bona; (Job vii. 7.) I shall die, and see no more; I shall no longer enjoy the good Things of this World. And the Psalmist says, There be many that say, Who will shew us any Good? (Psal. iv. 6.) Can we hope still to enjoy any Happiness in this Life?

To see the Face of the King, to be of his Houshold, to approach near him. The Kings of Persia, under the Pretence of maintaining that Respect and Majesty that was due to them, seldom permitted their Subjects to see them, and hardly ever shew'd themselves in Publick: None but their most intimate Friends, or their familiar Domesticks, had the Advantage of beholding their Faces. Erant primi & proximi qui videbant faciem Regis, says Esther. (Esth. i. 10, 14.) Frequent Allusion is made to this Custom in Scripture, when mention is made of the seven principal Angels that have the Honour of seeing the Face of the Lord, and of appearing in his Presence. See Tobit xii. 15. Ego sum Raphael Angelus, unus de septem qui astamus apte Dominum. See Rev. i. 4.

I. SEGUB, Son of Hezron, and of a Daughter of Machir; he was Father of Jair. See 1 Chron. ii. 21, 22.

II. SEGUB. Hiel of Bethel having undertaken to rebuild Jericho, God punish'd him for it, by the Death of Abiram his first-born Son, who died as he was laying the Foundations of it; and also, by the Death of Segub his younger Son, who had the same Fate when he hung up the Gates of the City. (1 Kings xvi. 34.) And this was in pursuance of the Imprecation that Joshua made, [a] about five hundred and thirty-three Years before, against him that should rebuild it; Cursed be the Man before the Lord, that riseth up and buildeth this City Jericho. He shall lay the Foundation thereof in his First-born, and in his youngest Son shall he set up the Gates of it.

SEILA: This is the Name given by some to Jephtha's Daughter. But as the Scripture does not inform us of her Name, 'tis in vain to seek after it. All that can be said on such Occasions will always be uncertain.

I. SEIR, or Sehir, the Horite, whose Dwelling was to the East and South of the Dead-sea, in the Mountains of Seir, (Gen. xiv. 6. & xxxvi. 20.) where at first reign'd the Descendants of Seir the Horite, (Deut. ii. 12.) of whom Moses gives us the List in Gen. xxxvi. 20, 21, — 30. See also 1 Chron. 38, 39, &c. The Posterity of Esau afterwards were in Possession of the Mountains of Seir, and Esau himself dwelt there when Jacob return'd from Mesopotamia. (Gen. xxxii. 3. & xxxiii. 14. & xxxvi. 8, 9.) Moses acquaints us, that Esau made War with the Horites, and utterly destroyed them; (Deut. ii. 12.) but we know none of the Particulars of these Wars. As to Seir the Father of the Horites, he must needs be very ancient, since the Horites or Chorites his Children were already a powerful and numerous People in the Time of Abraham, before the Birth of Isaac, when Chedorlaomer and his Confederates came to make War with the Kings of Pentapolis [b]. (Gen. xiv. 6.) 'Tis without good Reason, what some have advanced, that Esau himself had born the Name of Seir, or the Hairy [c]; for he was never known by this Name, tho' his Country is often call'd the Country of Seir, because of the first Inhabitants that dwelt there.

II. SEIR, or, the Mountains of Seir: They were to the East and South of the Dead-sea.

Deut. i. 2. Dead-sea. Moses tells us, there were eleven Days Journey between Horeb and Kadesh-barnea, by the Way of Seir; or rather, going round the Mountains of Seir, Deut. i. 1, 4, 5, 8. Deborah, in her Canticle, says, that the Lord is come forth from Seir, Judges v. 4. Moses affirms, that the Lord appeared to his People at Seir, at Sinai, and at Paran, Deut. xxxiii. 2. This proves, that the Mountains of Seir were to the South of the Dead-sea, inclining towards Elath and Esiongeber upon the Red-sea.

Gen. xxxii. 3. & xxxiii. 16. Jacob, at his Return from his Journey to Mesopotamia, fearing that Esau should come and set upon his Company, sent to him at Seir; and Esau soon after came to meet him, between Peniel and Jordan, and returned the same Day to Seir. Therefore he must live not far off, in the Mountains which are to the East of the Dead-sea. Joshua seems to say, that they stretched out still farther towards the North, since Josh. xi. 17. & xii. 7. he gives an Account, that he made a Conquest of all the Country, from Seir, as far as Baal-gad, at the Foot of Libanus, and of Mount Hermon, and that he distributed all this Country among the Children of Israel. But it is known, that the Israelites had no Possessions beyond the Country of Moab to the East, nor to the South. Lastly, 2 Chron. xx. 10, 22, 23. Ezek. xxv. 8. Moab and Mount Seir are frequently mention'd together; but Moab inhabited to the East of the Dead-sea. See Idumea.

III. SEIR, a Mountain upon the Frontiers of the Tribes of Judah and Dan. See Josh. xv. 10.

SEIRATH. After that Ehud had kill'd Eglon King of Moab, who oppress'd the Judg. iii. 26. Israelites, he went to Seirath, which probably was towards Bethel or Gilgal, near to a Place where there were Images or בסילים Pesilim, Sculpturæ. Idols: Pertransivit locum Idolorum, undè reversus fuerat, venitque in Seirath *. There is some likelihood, that these Engravings or Inscriptions that were at Seirath, are those that Josephus would insinuate, when Jos. Antiq. l. 1. c. 2. he says, that in Syria there were Pillars full of Inscriptions, which had been there from before the Time of the Deluge, and which had been made by the Children of Seth. This Conjecture is proposed and admitted by several learned Men, as Vossius, Huet, Valois. See our Commentary upon Genesis vi. 13.

This is what Josephus relates, concerning Jos. Antiq. l. 1. c. 3. the Pillars set up in this Place; "The Posterity of Seth, having heard that Adam "had foretold, that the World should one "time be destroyed by a Deluge of Water, "and at another time by Fire; they resolved to preserve the Discoveries they "had made in Astronomy, and in the "Knowledge of heavenly Things: Therefore they erected two Columns, one of "Stone, and the other of Brick, that if "the Deluge should destroy that of Brick, "at least that of Stone might remain, to "inform Mankind of what they should "transmit to Posterity. And it is said, says "Josephus, that the Column of Stone "which they erected is still in Being in "Seirath, or Syrias."

This Relation of Josephus is confirm'd by Manetho, [a] who says, that the second Mercury King of Egypt, surnamed Trismegistus, translated, or rather transcribed into the ordinary Letters, what the first Mercury, or Thoth, had formerly caused to be engraven in Hieroglyphick Characters, upon Columns that he had caused to be set up in Syriad. If Josephus took what he related from Manetho, he has plainly corrupted it, since both the Thoths, or Mercuries, are much later than the Deluge; but he might have had this Tradition by some other Canal. Mons. de Valois, in his Notes Ammian. l. 23. upon Ammianus Marcellinus, conjectures, that instead of Syriadike ge, as it is read in Manetho, it ought to be read Syringice, the same as in Ammianus Marcellinus, who says, that the Antients, foreseeing the Deluge that was about to come, and fearing that the Knowledge of their Ceremonies would then be lost, dug subterraneous Places which they call'd Syringas, with a vast deal of Labour, and in different Places, and upon the Rocks of these Cavities they engraved several Figures of Animals, which they call'd hieroglyphical Letters. Pausanias says, that there were Syringes, or Pausan. l. 1. p. 78. subterraneous Caverns, at Thebes in Egypt, on the other Side of the Nile, not far from that Statue at Memnon, which render'd an harmonious Sound at Sun-rising.

From all these Passages thus set together, and compared one with another, it is a very hard Matter to get a distinct Knowledge, either of these ancient hieroglyphick Inscriptions, mention'd by Ammianus Marcellinus and Manetho, and which one of 'em places in Syrias, and the other in the Syringes in Thebais. The Invention of Letters, and particularly of the Hieroglyphicks in Egypt, is doubtless more modern than the Deluge; the two Thoths also lived after this famous Event; but what Josephus tells us, must have happen'd before the Deluge. And if it is true, that the Stone Pillars he mentions were in Palestine and at Seyrath, they must be different from those of Manetho: So that nothing certain can be collected from all this.

[a] Manethon. apud Euseb. & Syncell. ἐν Συριαδικῇ γῇ.

Septuagint read it ſtill oftener, ſince they have put Diapſalma in ſome Places where we don't find Selah in the Hebrew. Thoſe Interpreters, [a] Symmachus and Theodotion, generally tranſlate Selah by Diapſalma, which ſignifies a Reſt or Pauſe in Singing. Diapſalma interpoſitum in canendo ſilentium, ſays St. Auſtin: Or a Change of Tone, according to Theodoret [b] and Suidas. Others will have it, that it marks the Beginning of a new Senſe, or a new Meaſure of Verſes: (Hieron. ad Marcellam.) Quidam Diaſpalma dixerunt eſſe commutationem metri, alii pauſationem ſpiritûs, nonnulli alterius ſenſûs exordium, ſunt qui rythmi diſtinctionem, ſays St. Jerom. He adds, that Selah joins that which follows to that which goes before, and ſhews, that what has been ſaid, deſerves to be always remember'd: Ex quo animadvertimus hoc verbum ſuperiora pariter & inferiora connectere, aut certè dicere ſempiterna eſſe quæ dicta ſunt. He follows Aquila, in the fifth and ſixth Edition, in tranſlating Selah by for ever.

Some Antients have thought, [c] that Selah ſhew'd the Intermiſſion or Ceſſation of the actual Inſpiration of the Pſalmiſt, or of the internal Motions of his Devotion [d]. Saint Hilary and Caſſiodorus think, [e] that Diapſalma points out a Change of the Voice, or of the Perſon, or of the Tune, in the Pſalms. Some Moderns pretend, [f] that Selah has no Signification, and that it is only a Note of the ancient Muſick, whoſe Uſe is no longer known. And indeed, Selah may be taken away from all the Places where it is found, without interrupting the Senſe of the Pſalm: It only perplexes the Text, inſtead of making it any thing clearer. Others ſay, [g] it was a Note which ſhew'd the Elevation of the Voice; and that in theſe Places the Reader ſhould cry out, and make an Exclamation. Abenezra teaches, that it is as the Concluſion of a Prayer, and anſwers nearly in Signification to Amen, or, So be it. At the End of their Epitaphs and Books the Jews generally put Selah, Finis, So be it.

We make no doubt but that Selah intimates the End, or a Pauſe, and that this is its proper Signification: But as we do not always find it at the End of the Senſe, nor at the End of a Canticle, we gueſs that the ancient Muſicians ſometimes put Selah in the Margin of their Pſalters, to ſhew where the Pauſe was to be made, and where the Tune ended. Juſt as in the old Books of the Goſpels, [h] which were read ſolemnly in the Church, they writ upon the Margin, either at Length, or with a Contraction, the Greek Word Telos, or the Latin Word Finis, to ſhew the Place where the Deacon was to make an End of the Leſſon: For at that time the Text was read in Books which contain'd the four Evangeliſts at Length. Or elſe the ancient Hebrews ſung pretty nearly as the Arabians do at this Day, [i] with great Pauſes, ending all at once, and alſo beginning again all at once. For this Reaſon, it was neceſſary, in publick Ceremonies, to mark in the Margin of the Pſalm the Place of the Pauſe, and of the End, that the whole Choir might reſt at once, and begin again at the ſame time.

III. SELEUCIA, a City of Syria, ſituate upon the Mediterranean, near the Place where the Orontes diſcharges it ſelf into this Sea. St. Paul and St. Barnabas arrived (Acts xiii. 4.) at Seleucia, where they imbarked to go to Cyprus. This is the ſame City of Seleucia which is mention'd in the Firſt Book of (1 Macc. xi. 8.) the Maccabees, where it is ſaid, that Ptolemy Philometor made himſelf Maſter of all the maritime Cities as far as Seleucia, which is upon the Sea.

I. SELEUCUS, King of Syria, furnamed Nicanor, Chief of the Race of the Seleucidæ. He began to reign in the Year of the World 3682, one Year after the Death of Alexander the Great, and reign'd for forty-two Years, dying in the Year 3724, before Chriſt 276, before the Vulgar Era 280. We do not ſee that his Hiſtory has any Relation to that of the Jews; ſince in his Time Judea was under the Juriſdiction of Ptolemy the Son of Lagus King of Egypt. Yet Joſephus ſays, that he ſhew'd great (Joſ. Antiq. l. 12. c. 3.) Favour to the Jews in his Territory, and granted them the Right of Freedom in ſuch Cities as he built, and particularly in Antioch the capital City of Syria.

II. SELEUCUS, ſurnamed Callinicus, or Pogon: He reigned twenty Years, from the Year of the World 3759, to 3779.

III. SELEUCUS, ſurnamed Ceraunos, or Thunder: He reigned three Years, from the Year of the World 3779, to 3781. As no mention is made in Scripture of either of theſe two laſt Princes, we give only their Names, and the Date of ther Reigns.

3816, to the Year 3828, before Christ 172, before the Vulgar Era 176. 'Twas he that sent Heliodorus to Jerusalem, to take away the Treasures of the Temple [a]. This History may be seen under the Title HELIODORUS, and in the Second Book of the Maccabees, chap. iii. 3, &c. where it is said, that under the Reign of this Prince Judea enjoy'd a profound Peace, insomuch that Seleucus himself furnish'd the Sacrifices of the Temple at his own Cost and Charge.

V. SELEUCUS, Son of Demetrius Nicanor: He reign'd one Year, which was the Year of the World 3880. His Successor was Antiochus Gryphus.

VI. SELEUCUS, Son of Antiochus Gryphus: He made War with his Uncle Antiochus Cyzicenus, overcame him, took him in Battle, and put him to Death [b]. Some time after, Antiochus surnamed Pius, Son of Antiochus Cyzicenus, came to Arade, took the Diadem, made War with Seleucus, defeated him, and drove him out of Syria. Seleucus retired in Cilicia, where endeavouring to raise large Tributes from the People of this Province, they would not submit to it; and revolting against him, they burn'd him and all his Friends in his Palace [c].

SELLING. The Hebrews might sell their own Liberty; Fathers had a Power of selling the Liberty of their Children: Lev. xxv. 39. Si paupertate compulsus vendiderit se tibi frater tuus, non eum opprimes servitute famulorum; If your Brother sells himself to you because of his Poverty, you shall not oppress him, nor sell him again as a Slave: He shall abide with you only as a Workman for Hire. Maimonides says, that an Hebrew could not sell his Liberty, but in Exod. xxi. 7. case of extreme Necessity. If a Man sell his Daughter to be a Maid-servant, she shall not go out as the Men-servants do. Her Master shall not dismiss her, as another Slave is dismiss'd at the Sabbatical Year. He shall take her as his Wife, or shall marry her to his Son. If he cares to do neither of these, he shall set her at Liberty.

Mat. xviii. 25. 2 Kings iv. 1. They sold also insolvent Debtors, and even their Children, as we find by the Gospel, and by the Books of the Kings. Sometimes they sold Free-men for Slaves, as Joseph was sold by his Brethren. This Crime was call'd Plagium, and the Law Exod. xxi. 16. Deut. xxiv. 7. punish'd it with Death: Qui furatus fuerit hominem, & vendiderit eum, convictus noxæ, morte morietur. The Jews confine this to the Theft of a Man of their own Nation. Esau sold his Birthright; and for this, it Hebr. xii. 16. is thought, that St. Paul calls him profane.

It is said in the Prophets, that the Lord Isai. l. 1. & lii. 3. Joel iii. 8. Baruch. vi. 6. had sold his People to their Enemies; as a Master parts with a vicious Slave, to punish him for his Infidelity.

Thou hast sold thy self to work Evil in 1 Kings xxi. 20, 25. the Sight of the Lord, said the Prophet Elijah to Ahab; Qui venundatus est, ut faceret malum in conspectu Domini. And the wicked Israelites mention'd in the Maccabees; Venundati ut facerent malum: They Macc. i. 16. sold themselves as Slaves to Sin, being Subjects to all their bad Inclinations, as Slaves are to their Masters. These Expressions were very familiar to the Hebrews. See Judith vii. 13.

St. Paul, speaking of himself in like manner, Rom. vii. 45. or rather speaking of all Mankind in his own Person, makes no scruple to say, Ego autem carnalis sum, venundatus sub peccato; I am altogether carnal; and sold under Sin; the Slave of Concupiscence and of Sin by Nature, but set at Liberty from Sin by Baptism, and fortify'd against Concupiscence by the Grace of Jesus Christ.

SEMACHIAH, or Samachias, Son of Shemaiah a Levite, and a Porter belonging to the Temple. 1 Chron. xxvi. 7.

SEMECHON, or Samechon, a Lake through which the Jordan passes; it is Joseph. de Bello, l. 4. c. 1. sixty Furlongs long, and thirty broad; that is, about seven thousand five hundred Serrar. Bonfrer. Reland. alii. Paces long, and three thousand seven hundred and fifty broad. Some think this is the same Lake that, in Joshua, is call'd Josh. xi. 5, 7. Judg. v. 18. the Waters of Merom, or, the Upper Waters; and in Judges, the Canton of Merome *. But we think Merom to be near Dothaim, and far enough from Semechon. See EUSEBIUS, and our Commentary upon Josh. xi. 5. 'Tis not known whence the Name Semechon was taken: Some derive it from Samach, which in Arabick signifies a Fish; others, from the Chaldee Word samak, which signifies red, as if the Waters were reddish and turbid. Certain it is, Joseph. de Bello, l. 3. c. 18. that there was marshy Ground about this Lake: The City of Hazor, where Jabin a King of the Canaanites reign'd, was upon Joseph. Antiq. l. 5. c. 6. the Side of the Lake Semechon; and afterwards the City of Seleucia was there.

The Lake Semechon must be pretty near the City of Dan, and the Fountains of Jordan, and at one hundred and twenty Furlongs from the Lake of Tiberias, towards the South. Josephus says, that the Joseph. de Bello, l. 4. c. 1. Marshes of this Lake extended even as far as Daphne. But there is great Probability, that, instead of Daphne, it should be read Dane; for he says in the same Place, that the Waters of Jordan fall into this Pool, below the Temple of the Golden Calf.

Now it is known, that the Temple of the Golden Calf was at Dan. It is pretty extraordinary, that this Lake should never be took Notice of, or mention'd in any Passage of the Scripture, as we know of. 'Tis thought that Pliny intended to speak of this Lake, when he says, that there is a Lake at one hundred and fifty Furlongs from the Mediterranean, not far from Libanus, where the sweet-scented Reed grows.

SEMIRAMIS Daughter of Dercetis, or of the Syrian Venus, a famous Queen of Assyria, the Wife of Ninus, who for a long time govern'd the Empire of Assyria, during the Minority of her Son Ninias. She undertook several Wars, which succeeded very fortunately, and executed many great Works at Babylon, and elsewhere. Herodotus speaks of several Ramparts and Moles that she had thrown up near Babylon. Diodorus Siculus, Trogus, Strabo, and many others, ascribe to her the Honour of building the Walls of Babylon; but the more exact Chronologers believe, that Semiramis did nothing at Babylon; and it is very probable, that her other Actions have been extravagantly enlarged upon. However this be, as this Princess is no-where named in Scripture, we shall content our selves with observing, that she began to reign at Nineveh in the Year of the World 2789, before Christ 1211, before the Vulgar Era 1215, about the Beginning of the Highpriest Eli's Administration; and that she died after two and forty Years Reign, in the sixty-second Year of her Age, in the Year of the World 2831, before Christ 1169, before the Vulgar Era 1173. Ninias her Son kill'd her, out of Horror at the Proposal she made him, of Lying with her. Justin. l. 1. SENECA: Lucius Anneus Seneca, a Native of Corduba, a Disciple of Sotio the Stoick, Preceptor to Nero, and famous for his Writings, would have no Place in this Dictionary, but on Account of certain Letters, that are extant, which bear the Title of St. Paul to Seneca, and of Seneca to St. Paul. St. Jerom makes mention of them, and this determined him to place Seneca among the Ecclesiastical Writers. St. Austin also mentions these Epistles, and several modern Authors after him. They are found printed in many Places; and James le Fevre of Estaples thought them genuine, publish'd them with those of St. Paul, and wrote a Comment upon them. Sixtus Sinensis, in his Bibliotheca Sacra, has wrote in Defence of them, as also Antonius Possevinus, Alphonsus Salmeron, Franciscus Bivarius, Jacobus Pamelius, Margarin de la Biggue. Others [a] have suspected, that perhaps heretofore there might have been true Epistles of St. Paul to Seneca, and of Seneca to St. Paul, which were known to St. Jerom and St. Austin; but being since lost, some Impostor has compos'd others in their Place, which are those we now have. But as no Proof is given of this Conjecture, we readily acknowledge our selves to be of the Number of those, who admit that the Epistles we now have, are the same that were known to the Antients, and which, however, are not the better for that, nor do they deserve any Consideration. The Reader may consult such as have written Ecclesiastical Bibliotheca's, particularly Mons. Fabricius in his Apocryphal Works of the New Testament, tom. 1. p. 880, &c. where he exhibits the Judgment of several learned Men concerning these Letters, before the Edition that he has made of them.

SENNACHERIB, King of Assyria, Son and Successor of Shalmaneser; he began to reign in the Year of the World 3290, before Christ 710, before the vulgar Era 714. He reign'd but four Years, having been kill'd by his own Sons in the Year of the World 3294, as we shall see afterwards. Hezekiah, King of Judah, having shook off the Yoke of the Assyrians, which King Ahaz, his Father, had suffer'd to be put on by Tiglath-pilneser King of Assyria; Sennacherib had Notice of the Revolt of this Prince, marched an Army against him, [b] and took all the strong Cities of Judah. Hezekiah seeing that he had nothing left but Jerusalem, and which, perhaps, he found Difficulty enough to secure, sent Ambassadors to Sennacherib, who was then engaged at the Siege of Lachish, and told him; "I have "committed a Fault; but withdraw your "Army out of my Territories, and I will "bear whatever you shall impose upon "me." Sennacherib demanded of him three hundred Talents of Silver, and thirty Talents of Gold; which Hezekiah remitted to him soon after. But yet the King of Assyria would not leave him for all this.

He ſent from Lachiſh to Jeruſalem three of his chief Officers, Tartan, Rab-ſaris, and Rab-ſhakeh, to ſummon Hezekiah to ſurrender himſelf. Rab-ſhakeh, among his other Diſcourſe, utter'd many Blaſphemies againſt God, and many Inſults againſt Hezekiah. For this may be ſeen the Articles of RAB-SHAKEH and HEZEKIAH. In the mean Time Sennacherib quitted the Siege of Lachiſh, and apply'd himſelf to 2 Kings xix. 8. that of Libnah. Rab-ſhakeh having given him an Account of what he had ſaid to Hezekiah, and having told him that this Prince return'd him no Anſwer, Sennacherib wrote a Letter to him, in which he urged him to return to his Duty, and to follow the Example of ſo many other Nations that had ſubmitted to his Empire. At the ſame Time he went away with all his Army, to meet Tirhakah, King of Ethiopia, or of Cuſh, who was marching towards him to give him Battle. But the Lord ſent a deſtroying Angel againſt the Army of Sennacherib, who put to Death in one Night an hundred and eighty-five
2 Kings xix. 35. thouſand Men. Sennacherib riſing next Morning, and finding himſelf almoſt alone, was forced to return with all ſpeed to Niniveh. But he did not live long there in Peace; for while he was paying his Adorations to his God Niſroch in his Temple, his two Sons Adrammelech and Sharezer ſlew him with their Swords, and then fled into Armenia. Eſar-haddon his Son reign'd in his ſtead, in the Year of the World 3294, before Chriſt 706, befor the vulgar Era 710.

Tob. i. 21. Tobit acquaints us, that when Sennacherib return'd to Niniveh, he began to perſecute the captive Iſraelites whom he look'd upon as the Cauſe of his Diſgrace. But five and forty Days were hardly over, according to the Latin Text, or five and fifty according to the Greek, but this Prince was put to Death by his own Sons, as has been now related. The Rabbins think, [a] that what determin'd Sennacherib's Sons to uſe him thus, was a Reſolution he had made, as they were inform'd, of ſacrificing them to his Idol. Wherefore they thought it beſt to prevent him.

As to the Defeat of his Army by the deſtroying Angel, our Diſſertation may be conſulted upon this Subject, prefix'd to the Commentary upon Iſaiah. The Rabbins believe, [b] that Fire fell upon them from Heaven, and reduced their Bodies to Aſhes, without doing any Harm to their Cloaths, which fell to the Poſſeſſion of the Iſraelites, as they pretend. They found this Tradition upon a Paſſage of Iſaiah.
Iſai. x. 16. Therefore ſhall the Lord, the Lord of Hoſts, ſend among his fat ones Leanneſs, and under his Glory he ſhall kindle a burning, like the burning of a Fire. By Glory, they ſay, is meant their magnificent Habits. Other Hebrews [c] had told St. Jerome, that the Angel Gabriel was ſent forth among the Aſſyrians, to deſtroy them. Some fanſy [d] it was the Plague, or ſome internal Diſtemper, that kill'd them all in one Night. Others will have it, that this vaſt Army was diſturb'd by a Tempeſt, and that being ſeized by a panick Fear, and miſtaking each other for Enemies, they turn'd their Arms againſt themſelves, and kill'd one another.

Herodotus ſpeaking of Sennacherib, relates his Diſaſter in a very different Man- Herodot. l. 2. c. 141.
ner from what we have here ſeen. He quotes the Authority of the Egyptian Prieſts, who had told it him in this Manner. Sethon King of Egypt, and Prieſt of Vulcan, having been attacked by Sennacherib King of the Arabians and the Aſſyrians, and ſeeing himſelf deſerted by his own Soldiers, addreſs'd himſelf to Vulcan, and begg'd of him ſome ſpeedy Aſſiſtance. Vulcan appear'd to him the Night following, and promis'd to help him. Sethon therefore began to march with the few Troops he had remaining, and advanced as far as Peluſium. The ſame Night a Body of Field-Rats came pouring upon the Camp of the Aſſyrians, and gnaw'd the Thongs of their Bucklers, and the Strings of their Bows; ſo that the next Morning, when they found themſelves in no Condition to make uſe of their Arms, they were forc'd to betake themſelves to Flight.

The greateſt Part of Commentators are of Opinion, that the Army of Sennacherib was deſtroyed before Jeruſalem, as they were preparing for the Siege of this City. But it appears plainly from Iſaiah, that Iſai. x. 24, 25, 26.
Sennacherib did not actually form the Siege of this Place, and that it was in his March againſt Tirhakah, that this Calamity fell upon him. Beroſus tells us, that Sennacherib had carry'd the War into Egypt, Beroſ. apud Joſeph. Antiq. l. x. c. 1. and had ſubdued all Aſia. Joſephus relates, that this Prince having ſpent a long Joſeph. Antiq. l. x. c. 1.
Time in the Siege of Peluſium, when his Works were now far advanced, and he was upon the Point of becoming Maſter of the Place, he was obliged to raiſe the Seige, for fear the King of Ethiopia ſhould ſurprize him in his Camp, who was now advancing with a vaſt Army, to the Aſſiſtance of the Egyptians. Laſtly, the Rabbins pretend, that the Angel that de- Author. Tradit. in Lib. Reg. & Paral.
ſtroyed the hundred and eighty-five thouſand Aſſyrians in one Night, cut off the Hair and Beard of Sennacherib himſelf, and ſent him home into his own Country thus loaded with Ignominy and Diſgrace.

They found this Tradition upon these Words of Isaiah : In the same Day shall the Lord shave with a Razor that is hired, namely, by them beyond the River, by the King of Assyria, the Head and the Hair of the Feet, and it shall also consume the Beard. (Isa. vii. 20.)

The Babylonian Thalmud will have it, that the Army of Sennacherib was destroy'd by Thunder. The Targums, or Chaldee Paraphrases, are quoted, which affirm the same thing. Others believe, that they perish'd by means of a hot Wind, that God caus'd to blow against them, a Wind very common in those Parts, [a] and which makes great Ravages there, stifling thousands of Persons in a Moment, as it often happens to those great Caravans of Mahometans, that go yearly on Pilgrimage to Mecca. Jeremiah calls this Wind a destroying Wind. The Threatning made by Isaiah to Sennacherib ; Behold I will send a Blast upon him, and he shall hear a Rumour, seems also to insinuate this great Wind. (Prideaux's Connect. t. 1. l. 1. p. 43.) (Jer. li. 1.) (Isa. xxxvii. 7.)

Khondemir relates, that in the 18th Year of the Hegira, or 640 of Jesus Christ, under the Kaliphship of Omer, while the Mussulmen were making their Conquests in Syria, and at a Time that the Pestilence raged; they found in a Sepulchre under Ground in Mount Libanus, the Body of Sennacherib, in a Chair of Gold inscribed with Syrian or Chaldee Characters, which were to this Effect ; " The greatest Evil " that can happen to Men, is the Forgetfulness of Death, and of the Account that " they must give to God of their Actions; " although the Sepulchres of their Friends " and Relations, with which they are surrounded, give them notice of these " two Things. " But I doubt very much whether this Tomb was that of Sennacherib King of Niniveh. They add, that this Sennacherib we now speak of, was of the Race of Esau, and that he had suffer'd great Calamities in his Life-time. This also is not compatible with that Sennacherib mention'd in Scripture. (D'Herbel. Bib. Orien p. 804.)

SENSE of the Scripture. These five different Senses may be distinguish'd in the Scripture. I. The Grammatical Sense. II. The Historical or Literal Sense. III. The Allegorical or Figurative Sense. IV. The Anagogical Sense. V. The Tropological or Moral Sense.

I. The Grammatical Sense is that which the Words of the Text present to the Mind, according to the proper and usual Signification of those Words. Thus when it is said that God repents, that he is in Anger, that he ascends or descends, that he has Eyes open, or Ears attentive, &c. the Grammatical Sense of all these Expressions might induce one to think, that God is corporeal, and subject to the same Weaknesses as ourselves. But as Reason and sound Faith will assure us, that he has none of our Infirmities and Imperfections; upon such Occasions we are not to abide by, or confine ourselves to, the Grammatical Sense.

II. The Literal and Historical Sense is that which belongs to the History or Fact, to the Sense which the Rehearsal and Terms of the Scripture immediately present to the Mind. Thus when it is said, that Abraham marry'd Hagar, that he afterwards sent her away, that Isaac was born of Sarah, that he received Circumcision : All these Facts, taken in the Historical and Literal Sense, mean nothing else than what is express'd in the History; that is, the Marriage of Abraham with Hagar, the Birth of Isaac, &c.

III. The Allegorical and Figurative Sense, is that which examines what may be conceal'd under the Terms, or under the Event mention'd in the History. Thus the Marriage of Abraham with Hagar, who was afterwards repudiated and driven away because of her Insolence, and that of her Son; is a Figure or Representation of the Synagogue, which was only a Slave, and which was divorced and rejected because of its Infidelity and Ingratitude. Sarah is the Figure of the Christian Church, and Isaac of the People chosen of God.

IV. The Anagogical Sense, or Sense of Analogy and Agreement, is that which refers some Expressions of Scripture to eternal Life and Happiness; because of some Conformity or Similitude between the Terms that are brought to express something happening in this World, and what shall happen hereafter in Heaven. For Example, on Occasion of the Sabbath, or of the Seventh-Days Rest that was enjoyn'd the People of God, a Transition may be made to that Repose or Rest that the Saints enjoy in Heaven. On Occasion of the Israelites entering into the Land of Promise, we naturally pass to treat of the entering of the Elect into the Land of the Living, &c.

V. The Moral or Tropological Sense, is that which deduces Moral Reflections for the Conduct of Life, and for the Reformation of Manners, from what is related historically and literally in Scripture. For Example, on Occasion of those Words of Deuteronomy, Thou shalt not muzzle the Ox, when he treadeth out the Corn, St. Paul says, that the Preachers, and those that instruct us, ought to be supply'd with the Necessaries of Life. (Deut. xxv. 4.) (1 Cor. ix. 10.)

The Object of the Literal Sense are Facts and History; of the Allegorical, what we believe, or the Mysteries of our Faith; of the Anagogical, eternal Happinefs, and what has relation thereto; of the Moral or Tropological, the Regulation of our Manners; all which is comprehended in this Diftick.

Litera gefta docet, quid credas Allegoria,
Moralis quid agas, quò tendas Anagogia.

Thefe five Senfes now mention'd may be obferved in this one Word Jerufalem. According to the Grammatical Senfe, it fignifies the Vifion of Peace; according to the Literal and Hiftorical, the capital City of Judea; according to the Allegorical, the Church Militant; according to the Anagogical, the Church Triumphant; according to the Moral, a faithful Soul, of which Jerufalem is a Kind of Figure.

SEORIM. The Family of Seorim was the fourth in Order of the twenty-four Sacerdotal Families. 1 Chron. xxiv. 8.

SEPHAR, a Mountain of the Eaft, probably about Armenia. The Sons of Joktan had their Dwelling from Mefha, as Gen. x. 29. thou goeft unto Sephar a Mount of the Eaft. We believe thefe Mountains to have been the Dwelling of the Sepharvaim, of which mention is made in Scripture; and of the Safpires, of whom the Geographers fpeak. See the Article SEPHARVAIM.

Obad. 20. SEPHARAD. This Hebrew Word is found in Obadiah. Here is the whole Paffage of this Prophet. Tranfmigratio exercitûs hujus filiorum Ifrael, omnia loca Chananæorum ufque ad Sareptam, & tranfmigratio Jerufalem, quæ in Bofphoro eft, poffidebit civitates Auftri. Inftead of Sa- עד צרפת Ufque ad Zarphath. repta here, the Hebrew Text reads Zarphath; and inftead of Bofphorus, it reads אשר בספרד Qua in Sepharad. Sepharad. By the Name of Canaanites, the Jews underftand Germany; by Zarphath, France; and by Sepharad, Spain. The Jew that taught St. Jerome the Hebrew Hieron. in Abdiam. Tongue, did affure him, that Sepharad ftood for the Bofphorus, which is (faid he) the Place whither the Emperor Adrian tranfported the Jews. The modern Hebrews by the Name Sepharad underftand Spain. But there is a much greater Probability that this Word fignifies one of thofe Cities beyond the Euphrates, whither the Jews had been tranfplanted; and perhaps it may be Sippara, or Sipparat in Mefopotamia, a little above the Divifion of the Euphrates. By this Name the Septua- LXX Ἐν Εὐφραθᾷ alias Ἐφραθᾷ. gint feem to have underftood the Euphrates, or the City of Ephrata, which is Bethlehem. But Ephrata makes no Senfe in this Place. The Jews of Jerufalem were certainly carry'd away beyond the Euphrates by Nebuchadnezzar. Cyrus fent them back into their own Country, and there they inhabited the fouthern Cities, Idumea, and Arabia Petræa.

The Jewifh Hiftorians [a] tell us, that Nebuchadnezzar befieged Jerufalem, affifted by a great Number of Allies, who lent him their Troops. One of the chief of them, as they fay, was Hifpanus, who gave his Name to Spain. He was prefent at this Siege along with his Son-in-law Pyrrhus King of the Grecians. When the City was taken, it was eafy for them to divide the Spoil and the Prifoners, becaufe the City was feparated by three Enclofures of Walls. Nebuchadnezzar took for his Share all the Artifans and Handicraft Men, who were in the firft Enclofure, and gave to Pyrrhus all that were within the fecond. That was the Dwelling of the Houfe of David, and of the Priefts. Pyrrhus took his Prifoners along with him into Andalufia, and from thence to Toledo. The Defcendants of David pafs'd on to Seville, and into the Kingdom of Granada. Thus, fay they, we fee the Completion of the Prophecy of Obadiah. But as all this is but meer Fable, we fhall not give ourfelves the Trouble to refute it. The fame is to be underftood of fuch other Monuments, which, they fay, have been found in Spain, by which they pretend to prove, that King Solomon extended his Empire into that Country. Thefe are Infcriptions invented at Pleafure, to eftablifh a chimerical Empire.

SEPHARVAIM. When Shalmanefer, King of Affyria, carry'd away the Ifraelites from the Kingdom of Samaria to Places beyond the Euphrates, he brought other People in their ftead into Paleftine, among whom were the Sepharvaim. [b] It is not exactly known where the Place was of their former Habitation. Some pretend Jun. Malvend. Grot. ad 4 Reg. they inhabited the City of Siphera, or the City of the Siphareniars, upon the Euphrates. We think their Dwelling to have Ptolem. l. 5. c. 18. Abyden. been in the Mountains of Sephar, of which mention is made Gen. x. 29. and that the Safpires, who, according to Herodotus, Herodot. l. 1. c. 103. l. 3. c. 94. l. 7. c. 79. were the only People that inhabited between the Colchians and the Medes, are the fame as the Sepharvaim of the Scriptures. Strabo, l. 10. places the Sarapares in Armenia. In the Book of Ezra, this Tranf- Ezr. iv. 10 portation of the Nations from beyond the Euphrates into the Country of Samaria, is imputed to the great and noble Afnappar, who is probably King Efarhaddon. But in the Enumeration that is there made, of all thofe Nations, we do not find the Sepharvaim, or Sepharvaites; except they are exprefs'd by the Name of the Tarpelites, which may be put for the Tapyres, or Safpires, according to the Pronunciation of the Chaldeans.

The Scripture fpeaks of the King of Ifa. xxxvii. 13. 2 King. xix. 13. the City of Sepharvaim, which probably

2 Kings xvii. 31. Lastly, it is said, The Sepharvites burnt their Children in the Fire to Adrammelech and Anammelech the Gods of Sepharvaim. There is therefore great Probability that Hena and Ivah are the same as Anammelech and Adrammelech, the Gods of the Sepharvites. But Anammelech apparently stands for the Moon, and Adrammelech for the Sun. The first Word signifies merciful King, and the second magnificent King. The Orientals gave to the Moon the Name of God and King.

Tob. i. 1. Vulgat. SEPHET. Tobit was of the City of Naphthali, situate in the Upper Galilee, having on its Left-hand the City of Sephet. This is the only Place in the Vulgate where we find any mention of Sephet; but Judg. i. 17. we read in the Septuagint of Sephaat, or Zephaat, or Horma. But Sephet of Galilee was at a great Distance from Sephaat, which was to the South of Judah, or of Simeon. Some Moderns have pretended, that Sephet of Galilee was Bethulia, but without any Proof. They say it is between Ptolemais to the West, and Naashon to the East, twelve Miles from Carmel, and six from Cana of Galilee. Others place it nine Miles from Bethsaida, in the Upper Galilee. I cannot reconcile this with Tobit, who places Sephet on the Left-hand, or to the North of the City of Naphthali, which apparently is Cedes. However this be, Sephet or Sapheta is built upon a Mountain with three Eminencies, and very difficult Stockhove's Voyage to the Levant, p. 342. of Access. The Jews live there in great Numbers, and have a famous Academy there, where Youth is sent to study the Hebrew Tongue, and the Law of Moses. And for some Ages the Academy of Sapheta is for the Jews, what Tiberias was heretofore, whose Place it has taken. 'Tis likely this Academy was not erected so soon as the Time of Benjamin of Tudela, at the End of the twelfth Century, since he makes no mention of it; but it must be soon after.

SEPHIROTH. This Hebrew Word signifies Brightnesses; and the Cabalists give the Name of Sephiroth to the most secret Parts of their Science. The Knowledge of the Sephiroth is not acquired but with much Study and Labour; and is the highest Step of the Contemplative Theology. They reckon up ten Sephiroths, which are sometimes represented by ten different Circles included in each other: And sometimes by the Figure of a Tree, pretty much like what, in the Schools, they call Porphyry's Tree, to shew the different Categories of Ens, or Being. The ten Sephoriths are, first, the Crown; secondly, Wisdom; thirdly, the Understanding; fourthly, Strength (or Severity); fifthly, Mercy (or Magnificence); sixthly, Beauty; seventhly, Victory (or Eternity); eighthly, Glory; ninthly, the Foundation; tenthly, the Kingdom. These are the Perfections and Attributes of the Divine Essence, which are inseparably united together, and on the Connection of which depends the Creation, the Preservation, and the Management of the Universe.

They have imagin'd Canals, by which the Influences of one Brightness or Splendor are communicated to another. The World, said Simon Jochaid, [a] the first of all the Cabalists, could not be managed by Mercy alone, and by the Column of Grace; so that God was obliged to add to it the Column of Strength, Force, or Severity, which makes the Judgment. It was moreover necessary, to reconcile these two Columns, and to put all things in Proportion, and in a natural Order. Wherefore, the Column of Beauty is put in the Middle, which adapts Mercy to Justice, and introduces Order, without which it is impossible that the Universe should subsist. From Mercy, which forgives Sins, proceeds a Canal extending to Victory, or to Eternity. Lastly, The Canals that proceed from Mercy and Strength, and reach to Beauty, are replete with a great Number of Angels; there are five and thirty in the Canal of Mercy which reward the Saints, and a like Number in that of Strength to punish Sinners.

The Rabbin Shabte compares the Sephiroth, or Splendors, to a Tree, in which are distingish'd the Root, the Trunk, and the Branches: These three Things compose the Tree; and the only Difference to be observed therein, is, that the Root is conceal'd, while the Trunk and the Branches appear. The Trunk communicates its Virtue to the Branches, which bring forth Fruit: But at the Bottom, the Trunk and the Branches belong to the Root, and form together one and the same Tree. The same thing is to be said of the Brightnesses: The Crown is the Secret and inaccessible Root; the three Spirits, or Sephiroth, are the Trunk of the Tree; and the seven other are the Branches united to the Stock, without a Possibility of being separated: For he that would separate them, does as a Man that would Schabte in Jezirah.

tear off the Branches of a Tree, would cut off the Trunk, and offer it Nourishment, after he had separated it from its Root. The Crown is the Root which unites all the Brightnesses which propagates its Influences to them; they are comprehended in its Bosom, and in its Virtue.

We must also observe the Connexion that is found among these Brightnesses, and that which they have with the Creatures that compose the Universe. To each Sephiroth they annex a Name of God, one of the principal Angels, one of the Planets, one Member of the human Body, one of the Commandments of the Law; and on this depends the Harmony of the Universe. Besides, one of these Things makes one think of the other, and serves as a Step to arrive at a higher Degree of Knowledge in the speculative Theology. Lastly, by this one learns the Influence that the Brightnesses have upon the Angels, the Planets and the Stars, and upon all the Parts of a human Body.

Mori epist. in Cabalam, t. 2. p. 53. A learned Man, who had much studied the Mysteries of the Cabala, thinks that the Sephiroths are only Numbers, which have a Relation to the ten Fingers of the Hand. Others think [a], that in it they discover the Mystery of the Trinity. But it is needless to seek for more Mysteries therein, than what the Cabalists find themselves. They will always disown what is not according to their Taste, and of their own Invention. The best way is to leave their mysterious Secrets to themselves, and not to lose one's time in endeavouring to penetrate into 'em. See M. Basnage's History of the Jews, tom. 4. l. 6. c. 5. n. 7, 8. and tom. 6. l. 9. c. 11.

SEPHORIS, a famous City of the Tribe of Zebulun, and Capital of Galilee. Afterwards it had the Name of Diocæsarea. The Jews place it at eighteen Miles from Tiberias, though others put it but at ten Miles from this City. (Rabb. in Echa Rabbati, fol. 75. 2.) It was not far from Tabor, and the great Plain. I do not find it in Joshua, nor in any other of the sacred Authors; but Josephus often speaks of it. He says, that Gabinius placed there one of the five Tribunals, which he set up in Judea for deciding of Controversies; (Jos. Antiq l. 14. c. 10) that Sephoris was in the Midst of Judea, that it was the largest and best City in this Country, and that it became the Capital of it, (Joseph. de bello, c. 3. c. 1.) after Nero had given Galilee to the younger Agrippa; (Joseph. de vitâ suâ, p. 1025.) that Mount Asamon is pretty near Sephoris, which is as it were the Center of Galilee. The first City of Galilee that one came to from Ptolemais, was Sephoris. (Joseph. de bello, l. 2. c. 23.)

SEPTUAGINT, or Seventy Interpreters. By this Name are generally understood the Seventy, or rather Seventy-two Interpreters, who, according to the prevailing Opinion, translated from Hebrew into Greek the Books of the Old Testament, or at least the Pentateuch, if we will believe St. Jerome, and several other Criticks. (Hieronym. in Ezechiel. v. & in Mich. ii.) Here is the History of this Translation, as Aristæus relates it. Demetrius Phalareus, Librarian to King Ptolemy Philadelphus, having used his utmost Industry to collect a vast Number of Books in the Library at Alexandria; King Philadelphus asked him one Day, how many Books he had already? Demetrius answered, that he had Two hundred thousand, and hoped in a short time to have Five hundred thousand; For, says he, I have been informed, that the Laws of the Jews deserve well to have a Place here, but they ought to be first translated out of Hebrew into Greek. The King replied, he would write to the High-Priest of the Jews about it.

Then Aristæus, Author of this Narration, who was then present, and who had the Honour of being of the Life-Guard to this Prince, thought of a Matter that he had had a good while in his Mind, and which he had communicated to Sosibius of Tarentum, and to Andreas, two of his Friends, that were chief Officers in the King's Guards; which Matter was, to procure the Liberty of a great Number of Jews, whom King Ptolemy, Son of Lagus, and Father of Ptolemy Philadelphus, had formerly brought Captive into Egypt, when he made War in Syria and Phenicia. Aristæus, Sosibius, and Andreas took therefore this Opportunity to tell the King, that since he desired to have a Translation of the sacred Books of the Jews, it would become his Liberality and Magnificence, to free from Servitude a great Number of Jews that were in his Territories, that the whole Nation being obliged by this Favour, might the more readily send him the Books that he desired.

The King then asking, how many these Captives might be, it was answered, about One hundred thousand. This large Number did not discourage Philadelphus, and he promised to set them at Liberty. At the same time he gave Orders, that twenty Drachma's a Head should be distributed to all those that had Jewish Slaves, who were forthwith to be made Free. And he published an Edict in their Favour, in which he restored to Liberty, not only all the Jews that his Father or himself had brought into Egypt, but likewise all others that might happen to be in Servitude there, upon any Account whatever. The King's Expence on this Occasion was above Six hundred Talents, which in our Money is 136,875 l. Sterling, taking the Talent to be the Egyptian, Attick, or Eubœan Talent of Silver, of 228 $\frac{1}{8}$ Pound.

After this Philadelphus wrote to the High-Priest Eleazar, to desire him to send him the the Books of the Law, together with Translators capable to render them out of Hebrew into Greek. This Letter was carried by Ambassadors, who had rich Presents with them; and Andreas and Aristæas were of the Number of those whom the King sent to Jerusalem on this Occasion. Eleazar complied with the King's Request without any Hesitation, and sent him the Book of the Law, together with Seventy-two Jews, who were skilful in the Greek and Hebrew Tongues, that they might translate those sacred Books. At the same time he wrote to the King, to give him Thanks for his rich Presents, to commend his Piety towards God, and the Generosity he had shewed to the Jews that were in his Dominions.

Philadelphus received Eleazar's Commissioners with great Humanity, expressed a great Respect for the holy Books they had brought, worshipped them, and bowed himself before them for seven times together, admired the Beauty of the Vellum, and the writing in golden Letters, as also the Variety of the Colours and Embellishments of the Leaves. He assured these Deputies, that he should always look upon the Day of their Arrival as a Festival Day. And as this Day fell upon the same on which this Prince had overcome Antigonus in a Sea-fight, he did them the Honour of making them eat with him. At Dinner he put several Questions to them, to which they returned Answers intirely to his Satisfaction. And the King was so pleased with their Conversation, that he treated them for seven Days together, that he might hear them all one after another.

Three Days after this, Demetrius Phalereus took these Seventy-two Hebrews, and conducted them into the Isle of Pharos, by a Causey seven Furlongs long; and having brought them over the Bridge, he led them into a very fine House, built at the Northern Part of the Island, upon the Sea-shore, and at a Distance from any Noise, that they might with the greater Tranquillity apply themselves to the Translation of the Holy Books. They began therefore to go about their Work, and discussing among themselves whatever Difficulties they might meet with, when they had fixed upon any thing, and brought it to a Condition of being enter'd fair, they reported it to Demetrius, who had it fairly writ down by his Copyers. They laboured thus from Morning to the ninth Hour, that is, till three Hours before Sun-set; then they returned into the City, where they were plentifully furnished with whatever Necessaries they wanted. The next Day early in the Morning they returned into the Isle of Pharos, to their Work; which they applied themselves to, as soon as they had washed their Hands, and said their Prayers. This they continued to do for Seventy, or rather Seventy-two Days together [a].

When the Work was finished, they put it into the Hands of Demetrius, who read it in an Assembly of the Jews at Alexandria, that they might be Judges of its Agreement with the Original. They were much pleased with it, and greatly extoll'd, as well Demetrius who had procured them this Version, as the Interpreters that had made it. After which they pronounced an Anathema against any one that should make any Alteration in the Text of this Version, in any manner whatever. The King being informed of what had passed, expressed much Satisfaction at it. He had the Law of Moses read to him, and greatly admired the Wisdom of it. He asked Demetrius, why no Historian or Poet had made any mention of so divine a Work? Demetrius replied, it was out of that Respect which had always been paid to this Divine Book, that Authors had been deterred from it: That Theopompus having inserted something of it in his History, had been struck with a Disease that had deprived him of his Understanding; and that Theodotus, a Tragick Poet, endeavouring to put something of it in his Poems, had been struck with Blindness: But that each of 'em had been miraculously cured, after having acknowledged and confessed their Fault.

Philadelphus therefore received the Work of the Interpreters with great Tokens of Veneration, and caused it to be laid up in his Library, where he ordered it to be kept with great Care. He greatly caressed the seventy Translators, invited them to come often to see him, and sent them back into Judea with ample Rewards, and rich Presents for Eleazar. This is the Substance of the History of Aristæas, which this Author addresses to his Brother Philocrates, to whom he gives an account of all this as an Eye-witness, and as one that was perfectly well informed of every Thing that passed. The same Story we read in Josephus, who has taken it out of Aristæas. Philo also speaks of the Version of the Septuagint, as having been performed by inspired Writers; but he makes no mention either of Aristæas or Demetrius Phalereus. (Jos. Antiq. l. 12. c. 2. Philo de vit. Mosi. l. 2. p. 659.)

Justin Martyr's Account is very different from this of Aristæas. He says, that Ptolemy King of Egypt being informed, that the Jews had antient Histories written in Hebrew, he sent for seventy Men from Jerusalem, to translate these Works out of Hebrew into Greek. He had these Men put into the Isle of Pharos, into seventy different Cells, that they might study without Interruption, and without communicating with each other; so that he might be the more (Just. Mart. Exhort. ad Græcos.)

secure of the Faithfulness of the Translation. God himself order'd it so, that they should translate in so uniform a manner, that they did not only use the same Words, but also in the same Number. This caused in the King so great an Admiration, that he gave them great Rewards, and sent them back with Honour into their own Country. Justin adds to this, that when he was at Alexandria, they shewed him, in the Isle of Pharos, the Ruins of those Cells in which these Interpreters had been shut up.

The same Justin in his second Apology relates the Thing in another manner; he says, that Ptolemy having a Design to collect a very ample Library, wrote to Herod King of the Jews, to send him the Books of the Prophets which were in his Country. Herod sent them to him, but as these Books were written in Hebrew, Ptolemy sent again to Herod, to desire him to send some Men to him, that were able to translate them into Greek. This being done, the Books were put into the King of Egypt's Library, where they are at present, says St. Justin, in the Hands of all the Jews. St. Irenæus, St. Cyril of Jerusalem, St. Chrysostom, and St. Austin, speak also of the Seventy-two Cells of the Seventy-two Interpreters; but Epiphanius allows but Thirty-six. Thus he relates the Story;

Iren. l. 3. contr. adv. hæres. c. 25. seu 21. nov. edit. Cyrill. Jerosol. Catech. 4. p. 36, 37. Epiph. de ponderibus & mensuris, n. 9, 10, 11.

He says, that Aristæas, in his History of the seventy Interpreters, informs us, that Ptolemy Philadelphus erected a Library at Alexandria, in the Place called Bruchium, and committed the Care of it to Demetrius Phalereus. One Day as the King was asking Demetrius how many Books he had, Demetrius answered, there were about Fifty-four thousand and Eight hundred, but that there might easily be a much greater Number, if Translations were made of such Books as were among the Ethiopians, the Indians, the Persians, the Elamites, the Babylonians, the Assyrians, the Chaldeans, the Romans, the Phenicians, the Syrians, and those that inhabited in Greece, says he, formerly called Latins, and not Romans. In all appearance he meant the Greeks of Italy, or of great Greece. He added, that in Judea, and at Jerusalem, there were several Divine Books written by Prophets, which might be obtained if they were desired of the Jews.

The King wrote therefore a Letter to the Jews, which is to be seen in Epiphanius, by which he desires them to send him these Books. The Jews sent him the Two and twenty Books of the Old Testament, written in Golden Letters; as also Seventy-two Apocryphal Books. But these Works being in Hebrew, the King wrote to them again, desiring them to send him Interpreters, to render them into Greek. They sent him Seventy-two chosen Men, six out of each Tribe; and in order that the Translation might be as exact as possible, and that the Interpreters might have no Communication with each other, the King caused to be built, in the Isle of Pharos, Thirty-six Cells, in each of which he shut up two Translators, that they might study together: And he allowed them Servants to attend them, and Transcribers to write down in Notes or Short-Hand, what should be dictated to 'em. These Cells had no Windows, that no body might look within; but they had each a Sky-light. Every two Interpreters had a Book given them, and when they had translated it, it passed through the Hands of those in the next Cell, and so on, till all the Books were translated six and thirty times.

They laboured thus shut up from Morning to Evening, and at Night they were fetched away in six and thirty Boats, and brought to the Palace, where they eat with the King. Then they were put into six and thirty Chambers, where they lay by two in a Chamber. The Day following early in the Morning they were carried back in the like manner to their Cells. When the whole Work was finished, the King sate upon his Throne, and had the Work read to him. Thirty-six Readers held the Thirty-six Copies of the Translation, and a Thirty-seventh held the Hebrew Original. In confronting all these Versions, it was found, they were so perfectly alike, that what one had added or retrenched, had also been added or retrenched by every one; and that what was retrenched was really useless and superfluous. This convinced all the Assembly that the Interpreters had been inspired by the Holy Ghost. The King laid up the Translation in the Library called Bruchium, which was as the Mother of the second Library called Serapæum.

The Talmuds of Jerusalem and Babylon say, that King Ptolemy having made the Seventy-two Elders come to him, without letting them know what he desired of them, he shut them up in Seventy-two Cells. Then he told them he would have them translate the Holy Books out of Hebrew into Greek. They complied with the King's Desire, and with such Success, and God so happily directed them, that they all translated in the same manner. The Samaritans have also laid Claim to the Honour of this Translation; and they relate, that the King of Egypt having caused the High-Priest of the Samaritans to come to him, and also that of the Jews, with other Assistants on both Sides to translate the Holy Scriptures into Greek; the Translation of the Samaritans was preferred before that of the Jews, and laid up in the Library of Alexandria.

Philo relates, that the Jews of Egypt were so transported upon making this Translation of the Law into Greek, that they appointed an annual Feast to perpetuate the Memory of it. They went every Year into the Isle of Pharos, accompanied by several Strangers, Philo de vit. Mos. l. 2. p. 659.

Strangers, who came thither out of Devotion as well as themſelves; and after this they refreſhed themſelves with Entertainments of Piety, ſome under Tents, others upon the Shore, and upon the Sand, being filled with Reſpect for a Place which had been ſanctified by the Preſence of the ſeventy Interpreters. The Hebraizing Jews, on the contrary, conceived ſo much Contempt and Abhorrence for this Verſion, that they made a Faſt on the eighth Day of Thebet [a], which anſwers to the Month of December, to ſhew how much they diſapprove of the Liberty the Helleniſtical Jews had taken in tranſlating the Laws into a foreign and impure Language. They ſay, that the Day on which this Tranſlation was made, was as fatal to Iſrael, as that on which Jeroboam the Son of Nebat made the the golden Calves; and that then the Heavens were covered with Darkneſs for three Days together.

In Maſſechet Sopherim.

Many of the antient Fathers of the Church [b] have had ſo great a Reſpect for this Verſion of the Septuagint, that they have looked upon it as infallible, and as inſpired by the Holy Ghoſt; and St. Auſtin has carried this Point ſo far, that he thinks in thoſe Paſſages where the Septuagint differs from the Hebrew, which often happens, we ought to believe that the Holy Ghoſt, who inſpired them as well as he inſpired the firſt Authors, conducted their Pen by a particular Providence; ſo that each of 'em tell us nothing but what is abſolutely certain, though ſometimes they appear contrary and different from each other. Thus this holy Doctor preſerves the Authority of the Septuagint, without derogating from that of the original Text. St. Hilary will have it, that in ſuch Places where different Interpreters vary from each other, upon any Paſſage of the Old Teſtament, we ought to adhere to the Septuagint, as the moſt antient Verſion, and which has been moſt authorized by the Uſe of the Church.

Hilar. in Pſa. cxxxi. n. 24.

This Sentiment of the Fathers concerning the Inſpiration of the Septuagint, was founded upon that ſurprizing Agreement which was found among the ſeveral Copies of thoſe Interpreters, though they had no Communication with each other, having been ſhut up ſeparately in Thirty-ſix, or in Seventy-two different Cells. But as this Fact itſelf is very doubtful, it could not ſerve as a Foundation for an Article of this Conſequence. Therefore the Church has never made any Deciſion about the Inſpiration of theſe Interpreters; and St. Jerome [c] very much inveighs againſt the firſt Author that invented the Fable of the ſeventy Cells. He maintains, that theſe Interpreters conferred together, and aſſiſted each other in their Tranſlations. In a Word, that they were nothing elſe but mere Tranſlators, and no Prophets. In una Baſilica congregatos contuliſſe, non prophetaſſe; aliud eſt enim eſſe Vatem, aliud Interpretem. He ſhews there are many Faults in their Tranſlation, and he thinks that they did not tranſlate the whole Scripture, but only the five Books of Moſes. He ſays, that Joſephus and Philo, and the whole School of the Hebrews affirm the ſame; and Ariſtæas, who is the firſt Author of the Verſion of the Seventy, ſays only, that they read to the King the Books of the Law.

Hieron. in Ezech. v. & in Mich. ii.

The greateſt Part of modern Criticks undertake to ſhew the Falſity of what has been ſaid, concerning the Manner by which the Verſion of the Septuagint was made; and it muſt be own'd, that their Reaſons have the Appearance of Truth. They ſhew, Firſt, The Diverſity of Opinions that have been ſtarted in this Matter. Secondly, Ariſtæas, who is ſaid to be the Author of the oldeſt Account we have of this Matter, does but ill ſupport the Part he acts. He would paſs for a Pagan, and yet ſpeaks and acts as if he were a zealous Jew. Thirdly, He ſpeaks of Ptolemy Philadelphus, as of a wiſe and religious Prince, full of Reſpect for the True God, for his Temple, and for his Scriptures; and yet it is known from Hiſtory, that he was a very corrupt and wicked Prince. Fourthly, He tells us, that Demetrius Phalereus was Friend and Library-keeper to King Philadelphus; whereas it is known, [d] that Demetrius having adviſed Ptolemy the Son of Lagus to exclude his Son Ptolemy Philadelphus from the Kingdom, he was ſo provoked at it, that when he came to the Throne, he ſent Demetrius into Exile, 'till he ſhould determine ſomething farther about him. But Demetrius not being able to bear the Tireſomeneſs of this Baniſhment, put himſelf to Death by the Bite of an Aſp. Fifthly, They obſerve the ſame Stile, and that a Stile full of Hebraiſms, in the whole Hiſtory of the pretended Ariſtæas, in the Letters of Philadelphus to the High-prieſt Eleazar, and in thoſe of Eleazar to the King, and in the Petition of Demetrius to the ſame Philadelphus. Several other Remarks are made upon the Hiſtory of Ariſtæas, which make it much to be ſuſpected, and give reaſon to judge, that it is the Work of ſome Jew, who has borrow'd the Name of Ariſtæas, the better to diſguiſe his Forgery *.

But what then are we to think of the ancient Greek Verſion of the Bible, that we have at this Day in our Hands, and which goes under the Name of the Septuagint? 'Tis agreed, that this must be an ancient Version, and might well have been made in the Time of Ptolemy Philadelphus; at least, the five Books of Moses, the Translation of which is more faithful and exact than that of the other Books; but we cannot know precisely, either the Time, or the Authors of it. The Translations of the other Books seem to have been done by other Hands, which are as much unknown as the former, and the Authors might live at different Times; for there is no Proof that they were by the same Pen. The Diversity of Stile, and of the Manner in which the same Word is translated, give reason to judge, they were done by several Hands. Neither can it be known, whether it proceeds from the Translators or Copiers, that so many Variations are found in the Greek Text of Scripture, from the Hebrew Original; and the Alterations that have been made in Genesis, concerning the Ages of the Patriarchs that lived before and after the Flood, as far as the Building of Babel. These Changes and Additions could not be the Effect of Chance, they are so very numerous; especially in Job, in the Proverbs, in the Great Prophets, and in the Books of Samuel and the Kings.

Those that would see more at large what are the Opinions of learned Men concerning the Septuagint, may consult the Criticks who have expresly handled this Matter; as Scaliger, Usher, Walton, Frassen, M. du Pin, Vandal, Hoddy, the new Edition of Origen's Hexapla, and several others. *

SEPULCHRE, or Grave. The Hebrews have always taken great Care about the Burial of their Dead. The greatest Part of their Sepulchres were hollow Places dug into Rocks; as for Example, that
Gen. xxiii. 4, 6. bought by Abraham for the burying of Sarah; those of the Kings of Judah and Israel, and that wherein our Saviour was laid in Mount Calvary. Sometimes also their Graves were dug in the Ground, and commonly without their Towns, in Burying-places set apart on Purpose. Generally they used to put some hewn Stone, or other thing, over the Grave, to shew it was a Burying-place, that the Passengers might be warned not to come near it, that they might not be polluted.

Mat. xxiii. 27. Jesus Christ, in the Gospel, says, that the Pharisees were like whited Sepulchres, which appeared fine without, but inwardly were full of Rottenness and Corruption. Lightfoot shews, that every Year, on the 15th of February, they took care to whiten them anew. In another Place, our Saviour compares the Pharisees to Graves which Luke xi. 44.
appear not, and the Men that walk over them are not aware of them, or know not that the Places are unclean, so that they contract an unknown and involuntary Impurity. We have spoke of the Sepulchres of the Jews, in our Dissertation concerning their Funerals. Sepulchre of Sarah. Abraham not being Master of a Foot of Land in Canaan, apply'd himself to the Children of Heth, who dwelt at Hebron, desiring them to sell him the Sepulchre which was in the Field of Ephron the Son of Zohar, Gen. xxiii. This he bought for four hundred Shekels of good Money, and buried Sarah there. The Vulgate calls the Place where she was buried, Speluncam Duplicem, a Double Cave; whether because it might contain two Cavities dug in the Rock, or because there were two Tombs in the same Cavern. The Hebrew Text calls it the Cave of Makpelah. See MAKPELAH.

Sepulchre of Moses. After the Death of this famous Law-giver, the Arch-angel Michael had a Dispute with the Devil Jude 9.
about his Body. But what was the Subject of this Dispute, has been much contested for a long Time. Some have thought, [a] that the Devil withstood the Burial of Moses, maintaining, that he had not deserved this Honour, having unjustly kill'd an Egyptian in Egypt. Others have maintain'd, [b] that Moses was buried by the Hands of Angels, without letting the Hebrews have any Knowledge of it, for fear they should be tempted to pay him divine Honours after his Death.

Lastly, Others pretend, that the Devil Ambrosiast. in Gal. iii.
would have had him be buried with publick Solemnity, that the People might thence take Occasion of frequenting his Tomb, and worshipping him as a God. There are those that think [c] he did not die like other Men, but that he was translated out of this World into the Earthly Paradise. Clemens Alexandrinus [d], and Evod. Epist. ad Aug. ep. 259. inter Augustin. Evodius in St. Austin, say, that after the Death of Moses, there were found two Bodies of this Law-giver, one to be buried in his Tomb, and the other which was to remain with the Angel that was his Guide.

Cedren. Hist. l. 1. Cedrenus relates, that Moses's Tomb is always cover'd with a bright Cloud, which conceals it from the Eyes of Men, and hinders them from approaching to it. The Deuteron. xxxiv. 6. Text of Deuteronomy says expresly, that no one knows the Place of his Burial to Vid. Horn. hist. Eccles. sæcul. 17. art. 31. this Day. Yet, for all this, it is told, that in 1655, in the Month of October, as some Marionite Shepherds were feeding their Goats in the Mountains of Nebo and Abutim, they observed that, from time to time, some of their Goats would straggle from the Flock for two or three Days Journey, and, at their return, they appear'd as it were embalmed with Perfumes of a most excellent Scent. To find out the Reason of such an extraordinary Event, they follow'd their Goats, and arrived at Precipices of a prodigious Depth, in the midst of which they perceived a small Valley, but extremely agreeable, at which they could not come but over a Number of broken Rocks, which had probably been tore up from the neighbouring Mountains by Earthquakes.

They got thither with a great deal of Trouble, where they found a Cave dug into a living Rock, wherein was a short Inscription which they could not understand. The whole Cavern was fill'd with a most delicious Perfume; and the Shepherds went back with their Cloaths scented strongly with this Perfume. This Affair was presently related by them to Mataxat Patriarch of the Marionites, who dwelt upon Mount Libanus, in the Monastery of Canobeaa Kadischa Mariam. The Smell of their Cloaths, was a sufficient Proof of the Truth of what they related.

The Patriarch sent thither two of his Priests, Men of approved Knowledge and Wisdom, particularly Aben-Useph, who had recommended himself by his great Learning and Capacity. They found the Monument which had been described to them, and read the Inscription upon it, which was, Moses, the Servant of God. The Patriarch was transported with Joy, and went to wait on Morat the Basha of Damascus, to ask of him the Keeping of the Tomb. The Greeks, the Armenians, the Jews, the Franciscans were inform'd of this Affair, made great Interest, and disbursed a great deal of Money, to obtain the Care of this precious Tomb, exclusive of others: The Jews especially bestirr'd themselves much in this Matter, to have it determin'd in their Favour: They remonstrated, that it belong'd to them preferably to all others, because Moses was their Founder and Law-giver. The Ottoman's were already flatter'd with the Glory of being the Depositaries of the Sepulchres of Jesus Christ at Jerusalem, of Moses upon Mount Nebo, and of Mahomet at Mecca.

Hornius adds, that to elude the Hopes and frustrate the Pretensions of all these Competitors, the Jesuits obtain'd from the Turks, that the Tomb and all the Avenues to it should be shut up, and that, upon Pain of Death, all Persons should be prohibited from going thither. So that the Basha Morat sent Orders to the Saniac of Jerusalem and of Saphet, to have the Tomb and the Cave stopt up. But this was not the View of those who had procured this Order: They did it with this Design, that they themselves might remove the Body out of the Tomb, and carry it into Europe; for which Purpose they took with them the Druses of Mount Libanus, and went privately to open the Sepulchre; but they found nothing in it: Yet however, they resolved to bring along with them at least some of the Stones of this Tomb. But the Saniac of Jerusalem being inform'd of this Enterprize, sent People after them, who dispersed them, and disappointed their Expectations.

This Accident made a great Noise at the Court of Constantinople, and the Learned were divided in their Sentiments about this Discovery. A learned Jew named Jechonias, Son of Gad, who dwelt at Saphet, composed a Book to prove, that this was not the Sepulchre of Moses the Law-giver of the Hebrews, but of another Moses who was his Junior by many Ages. Thus that Hope vanish'd, with which they had fed themselves upon this Occasion. This is what Hornius acquaints us with. But Bartolocci [a], who has nicely enquir'd into this whole History, shews the Falshood of it, or at least makes it to be very suspicious, by these three Observations. The First is, That the Jew Jechonias Son of Gad is unknown, and seems to be an imaginary Person. Secondly, The Patriarch of the Marionites, who lived in 1655, was not call'd Mataxat, but John, whose Successor was George Beshebel. Thirdly, The Basha of Damascus at that time was call'd Beschis, and not Morat.

The Sepulchre of Elisha, is known to us by a very remarkable Circumstance: In the very Year of the Death and Burial of this Prophet, some Parties of Moabites 2 Kings xiii. 20, 21. coming to make an Inroad upon the Territories of Israel; it happen'd that some Israelites going to bury a Man, threw him hastily into the Tomb of this Prophet, that they might fly away with more Expedition. But the Corpse had no sooner touch'd the dead Body of Elisha, but the Man revived and stood upon his Feet. They are not agreed as to the Place where the Tomb of this Prophet was: St. Jerom [a], and several others after him, have told us, that it was at Samaria, or thereabouts; and they found themselves upon this, that probably he died at Samaria, and therefore may be presum'd to be buried there too. Others will have him to have been buried at Abel-meula his own Country; others, on Mount Carmel. See the Article ELISHA.

Sepulchre of David. We have already spoke of it under the Article DAVID, as also of the Riches that were pretended to be there conceal'd. Here is the Description that curious Travellers give us of this Sepulchre: [b] 'Tis a magnificent Edifice, which now is without the Walls of Jerusalem, but probably was then included within the Walls of the City. You first enter into a large Court, about six and twenty Foot square, cut out and smooth'd within the Rock, which is of Marble. On the Left-hand is a Gallery, cut out of the Rock likewise, as also the Pillars that support it. At the End of the Gallery there is a little Opening, thro' which you pass by, creeping upon the Ground, to go into a large Chamber of about four and twenty Foot square, round about which there are other smaller Chambers, which communicate one with the other, by Doors of Stone. The Ceiling, the Doors, as well as the rest, their Hinges, their Posts, their Frames, &c. are all out of the same Rock, which is justly look'd upon as a Wonder; for the Doors were never out of their present Places, nor brought from elsewhere; they were work'd before the Chambers, and they still adhere to the same Rock, out of which they were wrought. In the Sides of the small Chambers now mention'd are several Niches, within which the Bodies of the Kings are deposited in Stone Coffins. This Work is perhaps the only real one that now remains of Ancient Jerusalem. See the Figure.

Sepulchre or Tomb of our Lord Jesus Christ. This was upon Mount Calvary, to the North-west of Jerusalem, and was hewn out of a Rock, as the Gospel informs us. (John xix. 41.) 'Tis a kind of small Chamber, almost square within; its Height from Bottom to Top eight Feet and an Inch, its Length six Feet and an Inch, and its Breadth fifteen Feet and ten Inches. The Entrance, which looks towards the East, is but four Feet high, and two Feet four Inches wide: This Door was shut up by a Stone out of the same Rock: 'Twas to this Stone that the Chief Priests affix'd their Seal, and which the holy Women doubted they had not Strength to remove: Who shall roll us away the Stone from the Door of the Sepulchre? (Mark 16. 3.) Lastly, 'Twas upon this same Stone that the Angel sate down, after Jesus Christ was come out of the Tomb. (Matthew xxviii. 2.) The Place where the Body of our Saviour was laid takes up a whole Side of this Cave; 'tis a Stone rais'd from the Ground to the Height of two Feet and four Inches; its Length is five Feet eleven Inches, and its Breadth two Feet and eight Inches, placed lengthwise from East to West. It remains even to this Day, but all incrusted with a white Marble. See the Voyage of Paul Lucas in Asia Minor, t. 2. p. 12, &c. He has several times visited this holy Place, and gives an exact Description of it, as it is to be seen at this Day.

Sepulchre of the Holy Virgin. There are two Traditions concerning the Burial of the Holy Virgin, as there are two concerning the Place of her Death. Those who affirm, that she follow'd St. John the Evangelist to Ephesus, and that she died there, pretend, that her Tomb was still to be seen in the Year 431, when the Council of Ephesus was held: And this Opinion is expresly taken Notice of, in a Letter of this Council's. (Concil. t. 3. p. 561, 574.) According to another Opinion, she died at Jerusalem, where her Tomb is to be seen; which Opinion is as much follow'd as the other. Juvenal Bishop of Jerusalem, who could not be ignorant of what had pass'd at the Council of Ephesus, since he himself was present at it, wrote to the Empress Pulcheria, and to the Emperor Marcian, who sent to him for Relicks of the Virgin Mary, That her Tomb was shewn at Gethsemani near to Jerusalem, but that it was empty. (Niceph. Hist. l. 2. c. 32. & l. 15. c. 14.) 'Tis added, that when the Emperor was inform'd of this, he caus'd this Tomb to be brought to Constantinople, with an Handkerchief that was put therein, and which he caus'd to be set up about the Year 455, in the new Church consecrated to our Lady of Blaquern.

Yet since that time they have not left off to shew the Tomb of the Virgin at Jerusalem. Adamnan says, that it was to be seen in the Valley of Jehoshaphat near to this City. (Adamnan. de locis sanctis, c. 9.) Bede testifies, that it might be seen at Jerusalem in his Time, but empty. (Beda, l. 3. lib. de loc. SS. c. 3.) It was put into the Basilicon that the Empress Helena caused to be built there. Travellers assure us, [b] that it may still be seen in the Vale of Jehoshaphat, wherein the Brook Kedron runs, but on the other Side of this Brook, over-against Gethsameni and the Mount of Olives; that the Part of the Monument which appears above-ground is very little raised; that they descend into the Sepulchre by fifty Steps; that it is made in the Form of a Cell, or small Grotto, where is seen something like an Altar of Stone, upon which the Coffin or the Body might have been placed; that both the Cell and the Altar are hewn out of the Rock. This is what they say of it; but this is not Authority enough to convince us, that this is the real Sepulchre of the Holy Virgin.

SEPULTURE, or Burial. The Hebrews, as is said, were always very careful about the Burial of their Dead. To be deprived of Burial, according to them, was one of the greatest Misfortunes that could happen to a Man. They did not refuse to pay this Duty to any one, not even to their Enemies. But it was not perform'd to such as had laid violent Hands upon themselves, [a] till after the Sun was set; and they believed that their Souls were plunged into Hell. This great Care about Sepulture proceeded from their full Persuasion of the Immortality of the Soul. (Tacit. Annal. c. 5.) The Scripture threatens the Wicked, that they should be deprived of Sepulture, as one of the greatest Calamities that can be inflicted on them. Altho' a Man should live a long Time, and should have an hundred Children; yet when he dies, if he should be deprived of the Honour of Burial, I maintain, says the Wiseman, (Eccles. vi. 3.) that he would be no better than an Abortion. (Jer. viii. 2.) Jeremiah threatens the Kings, Priests, and false Prophets, who have worshipp'd Idols, that their Bones should be cast out of their Graves as the Dung of the Earth. The same Prophet foretells, (Jer. xxii. 18, 19.) that Jehoiakim, King of Judah, who built up his House in Iniquity, who deliver'd up himself to all sorts of criminal Actions, to Avarice and Violence; he tells him, he should be buried with the Burial of Asses; Sepulturâ asini sepelietur; That he should be cast out of the Gates of Jerusalem to the Fowls of the Air. It is observable, (2 Macc. v. 10.) that Jason, who had hindred many Jews of the Honour of Sepulture, was himself treated after the same manner. He dy'd in a strange Country, and was thrown out like Carrion into the Fields, without so much as being put into a strange Grave. Sepulturâ neque peregrinâ usus. Good Men made it a Part of their Piety and Devotion to bury the Dead, as may be seen by the Example of Tobit.

See SEPULCHRE, and our Dissertation upon the Funerals of the Hebrews, printed before the Book of Ecclesiasticus; and the Book of John Nicolai, De Sepulchris Hebræorum, and what we have already said upon the Article of the DEAD.

III. SERAIAH, Son of Asiel, and Father of Joshibah. 1 Chron. iv. 35.

IV. SERAIAH, High-priest of the Jews, Successor of Azariah, and Father of Jehozadak. He was the last High-priest before the Captivity of Babylon. Being taken by Nebuzar-adan, he was carried to Nebuchadnezzar then at Riblah, where he was put to Death, with seventy others of the chief Men of Jerusalem, in the Year of the World 3416, before Christ 584, before the vulgar Era 588. (Jerem. lii. 24—27. 2 Kings xxv. 18, 21.) Jehozadak, Son to Seraiah, was carry'd Captive to Babylon.

VII. SERAIAH, Son of Neriah, and Brother of Baruch, the Companion and Secretary of Jeremiah. (Baruch i. 1. Jerem. xxxii. 12.) Seraiah was sent to Nebuchadnezzar at Babylon, in the fourth Year of the Reign of Zedekiah, and of the World 3409, before Christ 591, before the vulgar Era 595. (Jerem. li. 59, 60. שר המנוחה) Seraiah was Head of the Prophecy. Princeps Prophetiæ, or Chief of the Embassy, appointed to carry the Word, or the Denunciations against Babylon. The Hebrew reads, he was Prince of Menucha; which may be translated by Prince of Menucha, a City or Canton of the Tribe of Benjamin; (see 1 Chron. ii. 52, 54. viii. 6.) or Prince of Rest, Guard of the King's Chamber or Bed; or Prince of the Presents, Distributer of the King's Liberalities, his Almoner, or Intendant of the Offerings the King made to the Temple; or rather, in this Deputation Seraiah was charged with the Tributes or Presents that Zedekiah sent to Nebuchadnezzar; and this Acceptation of the Words returns to that of the Vulgate, Princeps Prophetiæ, Head of the Embassy or Deputation.

When therefore Seraiah was sent to Babylon by King Zedekiah, [b] Jeremiah sent a Letter by him, which was to be read to the Captives there. This Letter contain'd a Prophecy of the Fall of Babylon; and after it was read, Seraiah was order'd to tie it to a Stone, and to throw it into the SERAPHIM, or Zeraphim. This Word comes from the Hebrew Word Zaraph, which ſignifies to burn, to melt Metal, to purify. צרפים Zeraphim. Aurifices, Conflatores. Numbers xxi. 6. Zeraphim is us'd to ſignify Goldſmiths or Founders. Alſo the Name Seraphim or Saraphim is given to thoſe winged fiery Serpents, that deſtroy'd the Iſraelites in the Deſart, and which we have ſpoke of under the Article SARAPH, and ſhall mention again under the Title SERPENTS. Laſtly, Iſai. vi. 2. שרפים Sheraphim. Seraphim, in Iſaiah, is put for a Kind of Angels, which were over the Throne of the Lord, and had ſix Wings; with two of which they cover'd their Face, with two they cover'd their Feet, and flew with the two others. They cry'd to one another and ſaid; Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of Hoſts, the whole Earth is full of his Glory. The Word Seraphim taken in this Senſe, is found only in this one Place of the Old or New Teſtament. Their Name is writ with ש Shin or Schin; but the Signification is ſtill the ſame as if it had been writ with צ Tzade. In the Diſtinction of the nine Choirs of Angels, the Seraphims are put in the firſt Rank, and above the Cherubims.

SERAPIS, a God of the Egyptians. His Name is not to be found in the Text of Scripture; but we can hardly be excuſed from bringing it in here, becauſe it has been pretended, that the Egyptians adored the Patriarch Joſeph under the Name of Serapis. This Opinion is found Jul. Firm. de Errore prophan. Religion. Rufin. hiſt. l. 2. c. 23. in ſome antient Authors, as Julius Firmicus and Rufinus, and has been embraced by ſome learned Moderns, as Voſſius, Onzelius, Spencer, and ſome others. They found their Opinion upon ſeveral ſeeming Coincidences, between Joſeph and Serapis. 'Tis ſaid that Serapis had merited divine Honours in Egypt, for having deliver'd the Country from a grievous Famine; he is painted with a Basket, and Ears of Corn upon his Head.

They pretend that Serapis is the ſame as Apis, and that there is no more Difference between them, than between an Ox alive, and an Ox dead and put into a Coffin. While the Bull Apis was alive, he was worſhipp'd by the Name of Apis; but he was no ſooner dead, than they gave him the Name of Serapis, which is as much as to ſay in Greek, Apis en ſoro, Apis in his Coffin, or Soros Apidos, the Coffin of Apis [a]. Serapis was alſo confounded with Pluto, with Jupiter, with Oſiris, with the Sun, with Eſculapius. Beſides, they gave him an Hebrew Etymology, which is ſtill more conformable to the Character of Joſeph. Sar, [b] in Hebrew, ſignifies a Prince; Apis, the Bull Apis; or Sar-abir, the powerful Prince. And as between Joſeph and Apis or Oſiris, there are ſtill found other Strokes of Reſemblance, they are perſuaded, that the Egyptians intended to honour Joſeph under the Names of theſe Deities.

But to all this a Reaſon is oppos'd, which ſubverts this whole Hypotheſis. The Hiſtorians teach us, that Serapis is but an upſtart Deity in Egypt. Tacitus [c] relates the Hiſtory of his Tranſlation from Sinope, a City of Pontus, to Alexandria, by the Care of Ptolemy, the firſt King of Egypt. Origen, ſpeaking of this God, Origen. l. 5. contra Celſ. p. 237. ſays, that he was but a new Comer into Egypt; that his Story was long, and of little Credit, and that he was not in Vogue till King Ptolemy brought him in, who attempted to introduce his Worſhip into his Kingdom. Upon this Account it cannot be affirm'd, that Serapis is the ſame as Joſeph; or that the Egyptians intended to pay Adoration to this Patriarch under the Name of Serapis, ſince Joſeph was ſo many Ages more antient than Serapis in this Country. As for the Etymologies of the Word Serapis, taken from the Greek Language, they deſerve no Conſideration, ſince the Greek Tongue was not known in Egypt till after the Time of the Ptolemy's; and beſides, theſe Etymologies prove nothing at all for that Opinion, that makes him the ſame as Joſeph.

'Tis true, ſome have thought, [d] that there were two Serapis's acknowledged in Egypt, one more ancient, known long before him, who was brought from Sinope, ſince he is the ſame as Apis and Oſiris; the other more modern, of whom we have ſpoke before. Tacitus clearly diſtinguiſhes these two Deities, when he ſays, that King Ptolemy caus'd a magnificent Temple to be built to Serapis, at Rachotis, a Place where formerly was a Chapel conſecrated to Serapis and Iſis. Tacit. hiſt. l. 4. c. 84. Fuerat illic ſacellum Serapidi atque Iſidi antiquitus ſacratum. But how came this pretended antient Serapis to eſcape the Diligence of Herodotus, and other Antients, who have treated of the Religion of the Egyptians? Therefore Tacitus has certainly put Serapis and Iſis inſtead of Oſiris and Iſis.

SERGIUS PAULUS, Proconsul or Governor of the Island of Cyprus, who was converted by St. Paul, in the Year of Christ 44 or 45. This Proconsul, who was otherwise a Man of Prudence, had a Magician about him, whom he took for a Man enlightened and favoured of God. Having heard of the Arrival of Paul and Barnabas in the Isle of Cyprus, he sent for them, and desired to hear the Word of God. But Elymas did what he could to hinder him from it. Then Paul, fill'd with the Holy Ghost, said to him; O full of all Subtilty and all Mischief, thou Child of the Devil, thou Enemy of all Righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right Ways of the Lord? And now behold, the Hand of the Lord is upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the Sun for a Season. And he immediately became blind. When Sergius Paulus beheld this, he embraced the Christian Faith, and admired the Doctrine of the Lord. Some believe [a] Sergius Paulus to be the same whom the Church at Narbonne honours as its first Bishop; but the more knowing think, that this Bishop must be later than Sergius Paulus by above two Centuries. Others think [b], St. Paul did not bear this Name till after the Conversion of Sergius Paulus, and that he took it up as a Trophy of the Victory he had obtain'd upon this Occasion, over the Prince of Darkness. But this Opinion is not universally follow'd, tho' St. Luke does not give him the Name of Paul till after this Event.

Acts xiii. 7.

SERON, General of the Army of Antiochus Epiphanes. He having heard of the Defeat of Apollonius, and that Judas Maccabæus had gather'd together an Army of Jews zealous for the Law of their Fathers; fancied with himself, that he had an Opportunity of acquiring great Glory and Reputation, by fighting with Judas and those that adhered to him, who contemned the Orders of the King. He came therefore with a powerful Army, and advanced as far as Bethoron. Judas took the Field against him with his little Army; and his People seeing the Multitude of their Enemies, said to him; How shall we be able to fight with so great an Army, especially being weakened with Fasting, as we are this Day? But he encouraged them, saying; It is equally easy to God, either to give the Victory to the many or the few. And at the same Time he charged the Army of Seron, put it to flight, and pursued it as far as Bethoron and the Plain. He kill'd eight hundred of them, and the rest took Refuge in the Land of the Philistines. No farther mention is made of Seron in History after this Battle, which happen'd in the Year of the World 3838, before Christ 162, before the vulgar Era 166.

SERPENT; in Latin, Serpens; in Greek, Ophis; in Hebrew, Nachash. Interpreters have much speculated concerning the Nature of the first Serpent, that tempted Eve. Some have thought, that then the Serpent had two, or four, or many Feet. But there is no Probability that this Animal was otherwise than what it is now. And it cannot be doubted, but that under the Name of the Serpent we are to understand the Devil, who made use of a real Serpent to seduce the first Woman. In the Curse that God gave the Serpent, he told him, that the Seed of the Woman should bruise the Serpent's Head; because in reality, the Serpent having his Heart under his Throat, and very near his Head, the readiest way to kill him is to squeeze or cut off his Head. Many have suppos'd that his chief Subtilty, or Wisdom, as the Gospel calls it, [c] consists in this, that he chuses to expose his whole Body to Danger, that he may save his Head.

נחש Ὄφις Serpens. Gen. iii. 15.

Jesus, the Son of Sirach, says, There is no Head above the Head of a Serpent; but by the Word Head in this Place, we should understand the Venom: For the Hebrew Word Rosh, which signifies the Head, signifies also the Venom of a Serpent, which some place in its Gall, others in its Tongue, and others in its Teeth. The Scripture in different Passages expresses itself, sometimes as supposing the Gall of the Serpent to be its Venom, Job xx. 14. His Meat in his Bowels is turned; it is the Gall of Asps within him. David seems to place it in the Tongue. They have sharpened their Tongues like a Serpent. And Solomon in the Teeth. At the last it biteth like a Serpent, and stingeth like an Adder.

Eccles. xxv. 15. See Deut. xxxii. 33. Psal. cxl. 3. Proverbs xxiii. 32.

Another Curse that God gave the Serpent was, that it should feed upon Dust. Dust shalt thou eat all the Days of thy Life. Isaiah says also, that Dust is the Food of the Serpent. Dust shall be the Serpent's Meat. And Micah; They shall lick the Dust like a Serpent. 'Tis true, however, that they eat Flesh, Birds, Frogs, Fish, Fruits, Grass, &c. But as they continually creep upon the Earth, it is impossible but that their Food must be often defiled with Dust and Dirt. Some of 'em may really eat Earth out of Necessity, or at least Earth-worms, which [d] they cannot swallow without a good deal of Dirt with them.

Gen. iii. 14. Isa. lxv. 25. Mic. vii. 17.

The Craft, the Wisdom, the Subtilty of the Serpent, are things insisted on in Scripture, as Qualities that distinguish them from other Animals. Moses intending

Mat. x. 16. Wisdom of the Serpent. They bring several Proofs of this Subtilty of the Serpent. They tell us, that the Cerastes hides himself in the Sand, in order to bite the Horse's Foot, that he might throw his Rider. Jacob makes an Allusion to this
Gen. xlix. 17. in the Blessing he gave to Dan. Dan shall be a Serpent by the Way, an Adder in the Path, that biteth the Horse-heels, so that Epiphan. Physiolog. his Rider shall fall backward. Epiphanius brings four Proofs of the Wisdom of the Serpent. First, When he is old, he has the Secret of growing young again, and of stripping off his old Skin or Slough, by squeezing himself between two Rocks. Secondly, He assaults a Man if he sees him naked, but flees if he finds him cloathed. But it is probable there is a Fault in this Passage of Epiphanius, and that he intends to say the contrary of this. For it is generally affirm'd, [a] that the Serpent is afraid of a naked Man, but attacks him if he has his Cloaths on. Thirdly, When he is assaulted, his chief Care is to secure his Head. This is attested by a great Number of Writers. Lastly, When he goes to drink at a Fountain, he first vomits up all his Poison, for fear of poisoning himself as he is drinking. This Observation is not assented to by every Body, tho' it has a great many Defenders.

They relate still other Instances of the Serpent's Subtilty; as, for Example, it stops up its Ears that it may not hear the Voice of the Charmer or Inchanter. The Psalmist takes notice of this piece of Sub-Ps. lviii. 4. tilty of the Adder. Like the deaf Adder that stoppeth her Ear, which will not hearken to the Voice of the Charmers, charming never so wisely. 'Tis said it applies one of its Ears hard to the Ground, and stops up the other with the End of its Tail. We have written a Dissertation upon this, which is put before our second Tome upon the Psalms. See also Bochart, De Animal. sacr. par. 2. l. 3. c. 6. and the Commentators upon Psalm lviii. 4. Others say, the Subtilty of the Serpent consists it its Agility and Suppleness; or in a Secret it has in recovering its Sight by the Juice of Fennil. Lastly, every one proposes his own Conjectures in this matter.

We have particularly spoken of the Serpents mentioned in Scripture, under their proper Articles. There were eleven Kind of Serpents known among the Hebrews; [b] 1. Ephe, the Viper. 2. Chephir, a sort of Aspick, or a Lion. 3. Acshub, the Aspick. 4. Pethen, the Aspick. 5. Tzeboa, a speckled Serpent, call'd Hyena by the Greeks and Egyptians. 6. Tzimmaon, according to St. Jerome. This is the Serpent call'd Dipsas, because of the Thirst that its Biting produces. But Bochart maintains, that it does not signify a Serpent, but a dry and burnt-up Place. 7. Tzepha, or Tziphoni, a Basilisk: Not the fabulous Serpent or Cockatrice, of which they tell so many foolish Stories, but the true Regulus or Basilisk, which is a Serpent made like others, but more dangerous, and whose Poison is more subtil. See BASILISK, and Bochart de Animal. sacr. p. 2. l. 3. c. 9, 10. 8. The Kippos, which the Septuagint, St. Jerome, and the Chaldee understand of the Urchin or Hedge-hog; but the same Bochart thinks it to be the Serpent call'd by the Greeks Acontias, that is to say, the Dart, so call'd, because it darts itself very far and very high after its Prey. See Bochart, de Animal. sacr. par. 2. l. 3. c. 11, and the Authors he refers to. 9. The Shephiphon, which St. Jerome has translated by Cerastes, Gen. xlix. 17. This Serpent is of the Colour of Sand, in which it hides itself, and where it watches its Prey. The Name of Cerastes is given it, because it has a sort of fleshy Horns, or two Bunches in the Shape of Grains of Barley. Bochart, de Animal. sacr. p. 2. l. 3. c. 12. 10. The tenth sort of Serpents is call'd in Hebrew, Shacal, and is mention'd in Psalm xci. 13. Thou shalt tread upon the Lion and Adder; the young Lion and the Dragon shalt thou trample under Feet. The Septuagint, the Syriack, and the Arabick understand it here; Bochart supports their Opinion, [c] and shews, that the Name of Black, for that's the Signification of Shacal, agrees to several Serpents, and particularly to the Aspick, the Dipsas, the Hydra, &c. but the greatest Part of the more knowing Interpreters are of Opinion, that the Word Shacal, in this place, signifies a Lion, and not a Serpent. And this Sentiment seems to us much more probable. It is certain that this Hebrew Word generally signifies a black Lion, as this Author proves himself. 11. Lastly, the Saraph is a flying Bochart.

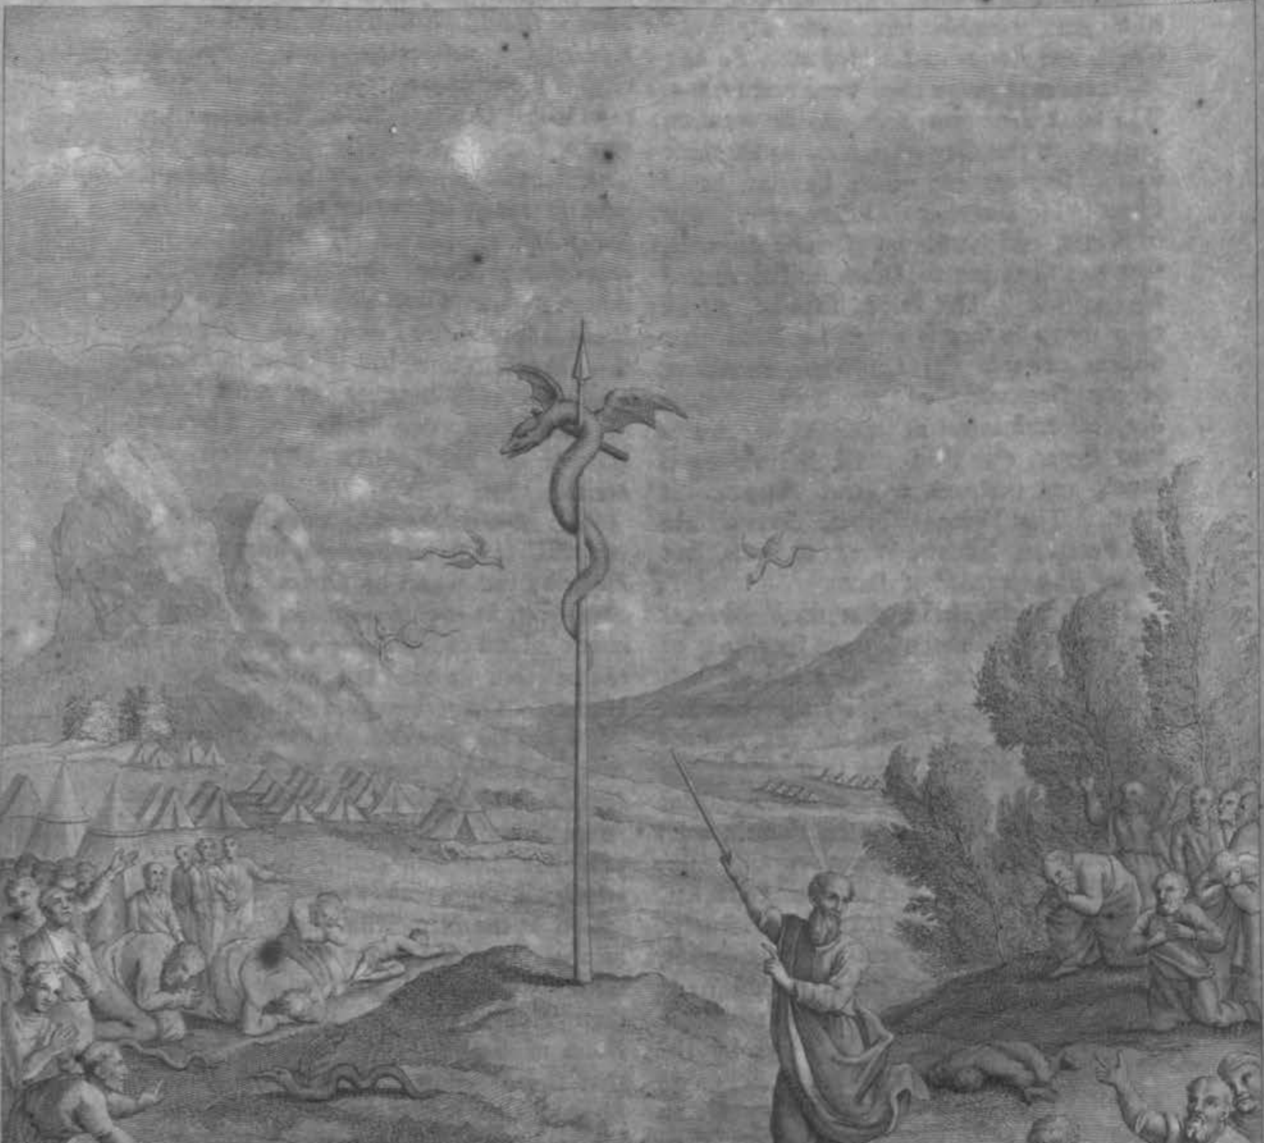
Thirst



THE BRASEN SERPENT SET UP BY MOSES IN THE WILDERNESS. Num. XXI. v. 6.

Herodot. l. 2. c. 75, 76. Thirst it creates by its Biting. Herodotus, who had seen of these Serpents, says, they had great resemblance to those which the Greeks and Latins call'd Hydræ. Bochart endeavours to prove they were real Hydræ. The same Herodotus tells us, he went on purpose to the City of Butus, to see those flying Serpents of which he had heard speak. He saw near this City great Heaps of Bones, and the Spines of those Animals, that had been put to Death and devoured by the Ibis. The Place, says he, where they are to be seen is a narrow Neck that widens towards Egypt. When therefore, at the Beginning of the Spring, these Serpents endeavour to come out of Arabia into Egypt, the Bird call'd Ibis sets upon them, and destroys a great Number of them. The Wings of these Serpents are not Feathers, like the Wings of Birds, but rather like to those of Batts.

Idem. l. 3. c. 107, 108, 109, 110. He says elsewhere, that these Serpents are not large; that they are speckled, or of several Colours; that they are in such great Quantities in Arabia, that the Inhabitants could not subsist for 'em, if Providence had allow'd them to multiply according to the usual Laws of Nature. But the Arabians affirm, that the Female puts the Male to Death when they engender, and that the young ones at their Birth kill their Mother. They love sweet Smells, and frequent such Trees as bear Spices, and the Marshes where the aromatick Reed (or Casia) grows. The Arabians drive them away from about the Trees by the Smoke of Styrax; and when they go to gather the Reed (or Casia) they cloath themselves with Skins, and cover their Heads, all but their Eyes; then they go into these Marshes, from whence they drive away the winged Serpents, whose Flight has something terrible, and whose Biting is very dangerous.

Numbers xxi. 9. Isa. vi. 2. xiv. 29. xxx. 6. We have a little enlarged upon these Serpents, call'd Saraph in Scripture, because it was these Serpents that made so great a Destruction among the Israelites, and were the Death of so many People in the Desart. 'Twas one of these Saraphs that Moses caus'd to be put up in the Wilderness, at the Sight of which the Israelites were made whole. On this Subject may be read Bochart de Animal. sacr. p. 2. l. 3. c. 13, and Cicero, l. 1. de Natura Deorum; Mela, l. 3. c. 9. Lucan, l. 6. Solinus, c. 32. Ammianus Marcellinus, c. 22. Ælian, l. 2. c. 38, and other of the Moderns, quoted by the same Bochart, who speak of these flying Serpents.

Brazen Serpent. This was a Figure of the Serpent Saraph, of which we have now spoke, which Moses caus'd to be put on the Top of a Pike, promising the Hebrews, that all those that should be bit by Serpents, and who should look upon this Image, should be presently healed. The Event was answerable to this Promise. Our Saviour in the Gospel of St. John informs us, that this Serpent thus rais'd up, was a Representation of his Passion and Crucifixion. As Moses lifted up the Serpent in the Wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up. This Brazen Serpent was preserved among the Israelites down to the Time of Hezekiah, who being inform'd the People paid a superstitious Worship to it, had it broke in Pieces, and by way of Contempt gave it the Name of Nehushtan, that is to say, a brazen Bawble or Trifle. See HEZEKIAH and NEHUSHTAN.

Numbers xxi. 9. — John iii. 14. — 2 Kings xviii. 4.

The Arrow Serpent, call'd in Greek, Acousias, is a flying Serpent, known to the Turks by the Name of Ocilan. They are often seen in the Archipelago, and chiefly in the Island of Metelin; they fight with one another in the Air, but do Men no Harm. 'Twas this kind of Serpent that set upon the Israelites in the Wilderness. A learned English-man pretends [a], that the Activity and Splendor accompanying these Animals, may serve for an Emblem to express the Zeal and Purity of the Angels which in Scripture are call'd Seraphim, which is the Name that the Hebrews gave to the Serpents we are speaking of. He thinks that the Angels, when they made their Appearances to Men, assum'd the Form of Seraphs, or of flying Serpents; that the Devil spoke to Eve in the same Shape; that it was this that deceived her, and made her fall into the Snare, imagining him to be a Seraphim or Angel. He adds, that it was this that gave occasion to that odd Thought of some antient Hereticks, [b] who pretended, that the Serpent who tempted Eve was the Son of God, or the Christ, very different from Jesus, and that she believed him as such. But to leave these Whimsies;

Bib. Orien. p. 684.

I think we may put into the same Class another Opinion of a learned Man, who imagin'd that the Brazen Serpent was a kind of Talisman, that is to say, one of those Pieces of Metal which are cast and engraven under certain Constellations, from whence they derive an extraordinary Vertue to procure Love, to cure Distempers, and such like. Some impute their Effects to the Devil; others to the Nature of the Metal, and to the Influence of the Constellation. This Author, therefore, would make us believe, that the Brazen Serpent set up by Moses cured the Hebrews when bit by Serpents, just as the Talismans cure certain Distempers by the Sympathy there is between the Metals of which they are made, or the Influence of the Stars under which they are form'd, and the Diſeaſe they are to cure. Buxtorf, on the contrary, thinks, [a] that the Sight of the Brazen Serpent, ought naturally to increaſe the Diſtemper of the Wounded, inſtead of healing it; and that God ſhew'd a double Efficacy of his Power, by healing with Means which ought to have had a quite contrary Effect. But it is to little purpoſe to multiply Miracles here; that which God wrought by the Brazen Serpent is here very manifeſt.

In the Church of St. Ambroſe at Milan they pretend to keep a Brazen Serpent, which they ſhew for that of Moſes; but every one may believe of this as he pleaſes. The Serpent that is always repreſented with Eſculapius, and with the Goddeſs Salus, and often with the Egyptian Deities, is a Symbol of Healing or Health, which perhaps is derived from the Brazen Serpent of Moſes.

The Worſhip of the Serpent is obſerved through all the Pagan Antiquity. The Devil who tempted the firſt Woman under the Shape of a Serpent, takes a Pleaſure to deify this Animal, as a Trophy of his Victory over Mankind. The Babylonians in Daniel's Time worſhipp'd a Dragon, which was demoliſh'd by this Prophet. (Bell and Dragon.) 'Tis well known what Worſhip was paid to the Serpent at Epidaurus, and the Manner in which it was pretended he was brought to Rome. The Egyptians ſometimes repreſented their Gods with the Bodies of Serpents; and they paid an Idolatrous Worſhip to theſe ſo odious and dangerous Animals. They call'd them their good Genius's, and look'd upon them as the Symbol of Medicine, of the Sun, of Apollo. They were put into the Charge of Ceres and Proſerpine. (Herodot. l. 2. c. 74.) Herodotus ſays, that in his time, near Thebes, were to be ſeen tame Serpents conſecrated to Jupiter. They did nobody any harm, and after their Death they were buried in Jupiter's Temple. They were of the Ceraſtes, had two Horns, and were but ſmall.

(Ælian. de anim. l. xi. c. 22.) Elian ſpeaks of a ſacred Dragon, that was kept in Phrygia, in a Wood dedicated to Diana. He alſo ſpeaks of domeſtick Serpents, which were in the Houſes of the Egyptians, were there fed, and look'd upon as Houſhold-Gods; and of another (Idem. l. xi. c. 17.) Serpent worſhipp'd in a Tower at Melitus in Egypt. He had a Prieſt and Officers to attend him. He was ſerved every Day upon a Table or Altar with Meal kneaded up with Honey, which the next Day was found to be eaten up. At this Day Serpents are honour'd in Calecut; the Kings and the Bramins look upon them as ſacred Animals, created by God to afflict Men, and to puniſh them for their Sins.

The Ophites took their Name from Ophis, which, in Greek, ſignifies a Serpent. Theſe antient Hereticks [b] worſhipp'd the Serpent that betray'd Eve, and aſcribed all ſorts of Knowledge to this Animal, of which they thought them to be Maſters and Inventors. In a word, they believed the Serpent that tempted Eve was the Chriſt, which afterwards came down and was incarnate in the Perſon of Jeſus. That it was Jeſus, but not the Chriſt, that ſuffer'd. For which reaſon they made all Proſelytes to their Sect to renounce Jeſus. When their Prieſts celebrated their Myſteries, they made one of theſe Creatures to come out of his Hole, and after he had roul'd himſelf upon the things that were to be offer'd in Sacrifice, they ſaid that Jeſus Chriſt had ſanctified them, and then gave them to the People to worſhip them.

Serpent croſſing like a Bar; Serpens vectis, Vulgate. This Serpent is found in two Paſſages of Scripture: Firſt in Iſaiah, In die illa viſitabit Dominus in gladio ſuo —— ſuper Leviathan ſerpentem vectem, * & ſuper Leviathan ſerpentem tortuoſum. (Iſa. xxv. 1. נחש ברח) The Hebrew ſays, Nachaſh beriach, and Nachaſh aktalon. Job [c] ſpeaks of the ſame Serpent; but St. Jerome has tranſlated the Hebrew by ſerpentem tortuoſum. Some render the Hebrew, Nachaſh beriach, by flying Serpent, or ſhutting Serpent, as a Bar that ſhuts a Door. Bochart [d] thinks, that this Serpens vectis is no other than the Baratell, a Fiſh known in Oppian, Elian, Galen, Suidas, under the Name of Zygæna. Its Head is neither round, nor high, nor flat, nor pointed, but ſwelling on the two Sides, one ſtretching tranſverſly like a Bar. 'Tis known that the Hebrews reckon'd Fiſhes in the Tribe of Reptiles and Serpents, and that the Crocodile or Leviathan is alſo of this Number.

Serpent is alſo taken for the Devil. The inviſible Serpent that tempted Eve by the Organs of the ſenſible Serpent, was the Devil, as the Scripture and the Commentators allow. Some alſo explain of the Devil what Job ſays of the crooked Serpent, (Job xxvi. 13.) and what Iſaiah ſays of the Serpent like a Bar. (Iſ. xxvii. 1.) See the foregoing Article. St. John (Rev. xii. 9, 14.) in his Revelation obſerves plainly, that the Old Serpent is the Devil and Satan. And the great Dragon was caſt out, that Old Serpent call'd the Devil and Satan, which deceiveth the whole Word. The Jews alſo call the Devil, the Old Serpent.

SERUG, or Sarug, Son of Reu, and Father of Nahor. (Gen. xi. 20, 21, 22. 1 Chron. i. 26.)

'Tis pretended that it was Serug, who was the first after the Deluge, that began to worship the Creatures. In his Time Men form'd a Multitude of Idols, by which the Devil perform'd many Prodigies. He thought he might adore the Images of Men, who had distinguish'd themselves by their Vertues, and by the good Deeds they had perform'd for Mankind. This introduced the Worship of the Dead, and by natural Consequence, all sorts of of Idolatry and Polytheism. Clem. Alex. Euseb. Epiphan. Theodor.

I. SERVANT. This Word generally signifies a Slave. For formerly among the Hebrews, and the neighbouring Nations, the greatest Part of Servants were Slaves, that is to say, they belong'd absolutely to their Masters, who had a Right to dispose of their Persons, their Bodies, Goods, and even of their Lives in some Cases.

II. SERVANT. The Hebrews had two sorts of Servants or Slaves. Some were Strangers, either bought, or taken in the Wars, and their Masters kept them, exchanged them, or sold them; in a Word, dispos'd of them as their own Goods. The others were Hebrew Slaves, who being poor, sold themselves, or were sold to pay their Debts; or were deliver'd up for Slaves by their Parents, in Cases of Necessity. This sort of Hebrew Slaves continued in Slavery but to the Year of Jubilee; then they might return to Liberty again, and their Masters could not retain them against their Wills. If they would continue voluntarily with their Masters, they were brought before the Judges; there they made a Declaration, that for this Time they disclaim'd the Privilege of the Law, had their Ears bored with an Awl, by applying them to the Door-posts of their Master; and after that they had no longer any Power of recovering their Liberty, except at the next Year of Jubilee, which was at the end of nine and forty Years. Levit. xxv. 44, 45, &c. Exod. xxi. 2, 5, 6, 7, &c.

III. SERVANT, is also taken for a Man that dedicates himself to the Service of another, by the choice of his own Will and Inclination. Thus Joshua was the Servant of Moses, Elisha of Elijah, Gehazi of Elisha, St. Peter, St. Andrew, St. Philip, and the rest, were Servants of Jesus Christ.

IV. SERVANT, is also put for the Subjects of a Prince. The Servants of Pharaoh, the Servants of Saul, and those of David, are their Subjects in general, and their Domesticks in particular. In like manner also the Philistines, the Syrians, and several other Nations, were Servants of David; they obey'd him, they were his Subjects, they paid him Tribute.

V. The SERVANTS of God, the Servants of the Lord, are the Priests, the Prophets, those that make Profession of a particular Piety. The Name of the Man of God, and the Servant of God, is often given to Moses by way of Eminence; and St. Paul often takes the same Character. He gives very excellent Rules of Morality to Christian Slaves. See 1 Cor. vii. 21, 22, &c. Ephes. vi. 5, 6, 7. Colos. iii. 22. 2 Tim. ii. 9.

VI. SERVANTS, or Slaves, as oppos'd to those that are free, and to the Children of the Promises, represent the Jews in Contradistinction to the Christians. The Jews were the Slaves, represented by Hagar and by Ishmael; the Christians are the Children of Liberty, represented by Sarah and by Isaac. St. Paul confirms this Truth through all his Epistles, and especially in that to the Galatians.

SESOSTRIS, a King of Egypt. We should not have mention'd this Prince here, since his Name is not to be found in Scripture; but that several have pretended that he is the same as Shishak, or Sesac, who came to invade Rehoboam, Son of Solomon King of Judah; wherefore it is proper to speak a Word or two of him in this Place. This is what Herodotus informs us of him. This Author says, that from Maris till Sesostris, there was no King whose Actions deserved any Notice. When this Prince had reduced the People which were beyond the Gulph of Arabia, or the Red-sea, he turn'd his Arms against those Nations that dwelt upon the Continent, and brought them under his Obedience. But those whom he found to be warlike, and valiantly to fight for their Liberties, he distinguish'd from others by honourable Inscriptions, which he set up in their Countries, that made mention of their Valour and brave Resistance. But those, on the contrary, who did not gallantly defend themselves, he set a Mark of Infamy upon, by erecting Monuments in their Country, which shew'd they had behaved themselves like Women. And this was expressed upon the Monuments after a manner that was equally shameful and ignominious, not only by Letters, but also by Figures engraven thereon. Herodot. l. 2.

He was not satisfied with subduing the Nations of Asia, but he passed into Europe, and conquer'd the Thracians and Scythians; and what made it believed that he went no farther, was, that none of Sesostris's Monuments are found beyond these Countries. Herodotus thinks, that from thence they pass'd into the Country of the Colchians, of which he has no certain Proofs, except that the Colchians, as well as the Egyptians, received Circumcision; that their Tongue is the same, and that they make Linen after the same manner. Herodotus assures us, that in Palestine he had seen these Inscriptions and Monuments of Sesostris, with disgraceful Figures, shewing the the ſmall Reſiſtance, and little Generoſity he had found among thoſe People. The Inſcriptions bore theſe Words; I have won this Country by my Shoulders.

While he was abſent, his Brother uſurped the Government of Egypt; and when Seſoſtris return'd, he was invited by his Brother to enter into a Houſe, where he was immediately ſurrounded by Flames, which proceeded from Wood placed round about. On this Occaſion Seſoſtris follow'd the Counſel of his Wife, who had kept him Company in all his Expeditions. He caſt two of his ſix Sons upon the lighted Wood, and thus making himſelf a Paſſage through the Flames, he ſtep'd over their Bodies with his other Sons, and ſo eſcaped the Danger. He ſeverely puniſh'd his Brother for what he had done againſt him, and employ'd a Multitude of Captives, which he had brought along with him, to perform ſeveral great Works in Egypt. His Succeſſor was Pheron. This is the Subſtance of what Herodotus informs us concerning Seſoſtris, wherein he mentions but one Word about the Conqueſts of this Prince in Paleſtine; yet this is all the Foundation that they have, who make Shiſhak to be the ſame as Seſoſtris.

SESTERTIUS, a Roman Money. Its Name is not found in Scripture. Its value was about three Half-pence; * ten Seſtertii made one Shilling and five Pence; one hundred Seſtertii made fourteen Shillings and three Pence; and a thouſand Seſtertii made ſeven Pounds, two Shillings, ſix Pence three Farthings, and three Quarters of a Farthing, Sterling.

Gen. v. 3, 6, 10, 11. SETH, Son of Adam and of Eve, was born in the Year of the World 130. Seth at the Age of one hundred and five Years begat Enos, in the Year of the World 235. He lived after this eight hundred and ſeven Years; in all nine hundred and twelve Years, and died in the Year of the World 1042, before Chriſt 2958, before the vulgar Era 2962. Seth was the Chief of the Race of the Saints, and of the Children of God, as the Scripture (Gen. vi. 2.) calls them, who preſerved the true Religion and Piety in the World, when as the Deſcendants of Cain gave themſelves up to all Sorts of Wickedneſs.

(Syncell. Chronic. p. 10. ex parva Geneſi.) The Apocryphal Book call'd the leſſer Geneſis, pretends, that when Seth was forty Years of Age, he was rapt, up into Heaven by the Angels, and was there told of the Crime that the Watchers or Angels ſhould commit; the Deluge that ſhould drown the World, and the coming of our Saviour into the World: Of which Events he inform'd his Parents Adam and Eve. 'Tis there read alſo, that the Poſterity of Seth continued for a thouſand Years after the Creation of the World in the Country, juſt above Eden, where they lived in profound Peace and Quiet; but the Devil being envious of their Happineſs and Innocence, ſeduced them by the Charms and Beauty of the Daughters of Men. Or as Moſes ſays, The Sons of God ſaw the Daughters of Men, that they were Fair; and they took them Wives of all which they choſe. Laſtly, the ſame Book tells us, that Seth at the Age of one hundred and ninety one Years, took to Wife his own Siſter call'd Azura. Epiphanius [a] calls her Orea; and Irenæus, or rather the Gnoſticks in Irenæus, call her Norea. (Irenæ. l. 1. c. 34. ex Gnoſt.)

The Hereticks call'd Sethians believed, that Seth was the Chriſt, and that Jeſus Chriſt was no other than this Patriarch, (Epiphan. hæreſ. 39. c. 1.) who after having been tranſported out of the World, did at laſt return into it again in a miraculous Manner, and was named Jeſus. They did not acknowledge his Birth of the Virgin Mary, but pretended he appear'd again in the World after a Manner that was altogether miraculous. They ſaid he had the Name of God given him before the Deluge; [b] for it was of his Sons that it was ſaid, The Sons of God ſaw the Daughters of Men. And this was either becauſe of his eminent Piety, or becauſe he invented the Uſe of Letters and Writing, and the Names of the Stars and Planets. An antient Chronicle ſays [c], that this Patriarch being ſnatch'd up into Heaven, as we have ſaid before, his Face ever afterwards appear'd luminous, like Moſes's Face after he had converſed with the Lord upon Mount Sinai. (Ex. xxxiv. 29, 30.) Several impertinent Books have been aſcribed to Seth. 'Tis known what Joſephus ſays of the two Columns erected before the Deluge by the Children of Seth. (Joſeph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 2.) One was of Brick, to withſtand the Fire; and the other was of Stone, to withſtand the Water, upon which they inſcribed their Diſcoveries in Aſtronomy. Lambecius cites a Manuſcript in the Emperor's Library, call'd, The Aſtronomy delivered by an Angel to the Patriarch Seth. (Lamb. l. 7. p. 261.) The Author of the imperfect Work upon St. Matthew, ſpeaks of a certain Book that bore the Name of Seth, which mention'd the Star that appear'd to the Magi, and the Preſents they made to our Saviour. (Aut. Oper. imperf. in Matth. homil. 2.) Epiphanius ſays, [d] that the Gnoſticks and Sethians had ſeveral Books that bore the Name of Seth. The Mahometans aſſure us, [e] that God ſent Seth not leſs than fifty Volumes, which were

* The Roman Seſtertius, according to Dr. Arbuthnot, was in Value ſomething more than is determin'd by our Author. brought him from Heaven. The Arabians, the Ethiopians, and the Samaritans, pretend also to have the Books of this antient Patriarch. See Fabricius, Apocrypha V. T. Art. SETH.

The Mussulmen hold by a fabulous Tradition, that those who are call'd in Scripture, the Children of God, were of a peculiar Species, between Men and Angels. They made a continual War with the Dives or Giants, which were the Children of Cain. The Patriarch Seth had made a Law, which was contain'd in a Book call'd, the Book of Seth, wherein were the pretended Revelations he had received to confirm his Mission. And his Descendants usually swore, by the true Law of the Prophet Seth. The same Mussulmen believe, that when this Patriarch had visited the Sepulchre of Adam, which was in the midst of the Earth, in the Place where afterwards was built Jerusalem, and the Temple; he came into Arabia fœlix, and there built the City Medinath Al-Scheith, the City of Seth, and Medinoth Al-Jemen, the Capital City of Jemen, which still bear those Names.

SETHIANS, or Sethites, certain Hereticks which took their Name from the Patriarch Seth. See the Article SETH.

SETHON, King of Egypt, reign'd in this Country, at the Time that Sennacherib invaded Hezekiah King of Judah. Herodotus l. 2. thus speaks of this King Sethon: "He succeeded King Amasis, "who was Blind. Sethon committed a "great Fault in Government, by neglecting warlike Men, as useless, disgracing "them on all Occasions, and taking from "them those Estates that had been given "them by the Kings his Predecessors. "This was the Reason that in the War, "which was declared against him by Sennacherib King of Assyria and Arabia, "they refused to obey him. In this Perplexity Sethon address'd himself to his "God, and with Tears laid before him "the Danger he was in. After Prayer he "fell asleep, and while he slept his God "commanded him in a Dream, to march "out boldly to meet his Enemy, and he "would supply him with auxiliary Troops. "He therefore took with him what Soldiers he had, and went to encamp at "Pelusium, which is, as it were, the Key "of Egypt. His little Army was compos'd only of Citizens and Merchants, "Men without Experience in Affairs of "War; for those that had made War "their Profession would not follow him. "The same Night that he arrived at Pelusium, a Multitude of Field Rats set "upon the Camp of the Enemy, gnaw'd "their Bows and Quivers, and the Thongs "of their Bucklers; so that the Day following, finding themselves unable for "War, they betook themselves to Flight, "after losing many of their Men. To "preserve the Memory of this Event, "they represented Sethon in the Temple "of Vulcan, in a Statue of Stone, holding a Rat in his Hand, with this Inscription; Those that look upon me, let them remember to be pious. This Figure was still to be seen in Herodotus's "Time."

'Twas thus the Egyptian Priests related the Defeat of Sennacherib; but the Hebrews tell it in another Manner, as may be seen under the Article of this Prince.

SEVEN. The Number Seven is consecrated in the holy Books, and in the Religion of the Jews, by a great Number of Events and mysterious Circumstances. God created the World in the Space of seven Days, and consecrated the seventh Day to Repose. This Rest of the seventh Day, according to St. Paul, intimates eternal Rest. And not only the seventh Day is honour'd among the Jews, by the Repose of the Sabbath, but every seventh Year is also consecrated to the Rest of the Earth, by the Name of a Sabbatical Year; as also the seven times seventh Year, or forty-nine Years, is the Year of Jubilee. In the Prophetick Style, a Week often stands for seven Years. Jacob served his Father-in-law Laban seven Years for each of his Daughters. Pharaoh's mysterious Dream represented to his Imagination seven fat Oxen, and seven lean ones; seven full Ears of Corn, and as many that were empty and shrivell'd. These stood for seven Years of Plenty, and seven of Scarcity. The Number of seven Days is observed in the Octaves of the great Solemnities of the Passover, of Tabernacles, of the Dedication of the Tabernacle and the Temple, the seven Branches of the golden Candlestick, the Number of seven Sacrifices appointed on several Occasions: Seven Trumpets, seven Priests that sounded them, seven Days to surround the Walls of Jericho. In the Revelations, are the seven Churches, seven Candlesticks, seven Spirits, seven Stars, seven Lamps, seven Seals, seven Angels, seven Phials, seven Plagues, &c. In a word, we may say we find the Number seven in every Page of Scripture.

Heb. iv. 4. Dan. ix. 24, 25, 26. Numbers xxvii. 11. xxix. 17, 21, &c. Josh. vi. 4, 6, 8.

In certain Passages the Number Seven is put for a great Number. Isaiah says, that seven Women should lay hold on one Man, to ask him to marry them. Hannah the Mother of Samuel says, that she who was barren should have seven Children: Or, according to the Vulgate, hath had several Children: Peperit plurimos. Jeremiah makes use of the same Expression. God threatens his People, to smite them seven times for their Transgressions; that is to say, several times. The Psalmist, speak-speaking of very pure Silver, says it is purify'd seven times. And elsewhere; Render unto our Neighbours sevenfold into their Bosom. Punish them severely, and as often as they deserve it. The Slayer of Cain was to be punish'd seven times; but of Lamech seventy times seven times. The Wiseman says; Sow not upon the Furrows of Unrighteousness, and thou shalt not reap them sevenfold; that is, many times. The slothful Man thinks himself wiser than seven Men, that set forth Proverbs. He thinks himself of more Worth than seven wise Men. St. Peter asks our Saviour, How many times shall I forgive my Neighbour? Till seven times? And Christ answers him, I say not only seven times, but seventy times seven times. Amos often repeats, Super tribus sceleribus, & super quartam non parcam. I will not pardon the seven Sins of Damascus, of Edom, of Gaza, of Tyre, of Ammon, &c. but I will punish them with the utmost Rigour.

The seventy Weeks of Daniel. We have spoke of them sufficiently under the Article WEEK. Dr. Prideaux, in the new History of the Jews lately publish'd, begins them from the seventh Year of King Artaxerxes Longimanus, the Year of the Decree, which he made in favour of Esdras, for his returning to Jerusalem. He treats of this Matter very amply.

SEVENTY Interpreters. See SEPTUAGINT.

SEVENTY Disciples. This is the Name that is given to those seventy-two Disciples that were chosen by Jesus Christ, and sent to preach before him, in all the Places where he was to come himself. Luke x. 1, 17. See the Article DISCIPLE.

SEXTARIUS, a Roman Measure for Liquids. It contain'd two Heminæ, or ten Roman Ounces, according to Fannius.

Budeus, l. 5. de Asse, thinks the Sextarius was nearly the same as the Pint of Paris. St. Jerome upon Ezekiel says, that a Man might be supported, by only drinking two Sextarii a Day.

SHAALABBIN, Shaalbin, Salebim, or Selebin. A City of Palestine, in the Tribe of Dan, Josh. xix. 42. It joins to Ajalon, and to Heres, Judg. i. 35, and to the Cities of Makaz and Bethshemesh. All which Circumstances pretty nearly shew its Situation. The present Hebrew Text reads it Shaalabim. Eusebius calls it Salaba, and places it in the Canton of Samaria. St. Jerom calls it Salebi, and joins it to Ajalon and to Emmaus. The Septuagint call it Salamin, or Talamin.

SHAALBON, or Salabon, the Name of a Place in Judea. We read of Eliahba of Shaalbon, one of the Heroes of David's Army, 2 Sam. xxiii. 32. and 1 Chron. xi. 32. Shaalbon is doubtless the same as Selbon beyond Jordan. This must be a considerable Place, since Josephus takes Notice of it, as giving Name to the Canton Selbenite, which limits Perea towards the East, with Philadelphia and Gerar.

SHAARAIM, or Saarim, a City of the Tribe of Simeon, 1 Chron. iv. 31. apparently the same as Sharaim, or Saraim, of the Tribe of Judah, Josh. xv. 36. Several of the Cities of Judah were afterwards yielded up to the Tribe of Simeon.

SHADRACH, or Sidrach: This is the Chaldean Name that was given to Ananias the Companion of Daniel, at the Court of King Nebuchadnezzar. See ANANIAS. Dan. i. 7.

SHAGE, or Sage, Father of Jonathan: This Jonathan was one of the Heroes of David's Army, 1 Chron. xi. 34. Jonathan the Son of Shage the Hararite. But 2 Sam. xxiii. 33. reads Jonathan, Shammah, the Hararite.

SHAHARAIM, or Saharaim, Son of Uzzah, and Father of Jobab, Zibia, Mesha, &c. He was of the Tribe of Benjamin, 1 Chron. viii. 8.

SHALIM, or Salim. See SALEM, and 1 Sam. ix. 4. where Shalem may stand very well for Jerusalem.

SHALISHA, or Salissa, or Baal-salisa. Mention is made of Shalisha, 1 Sam. ix. 4. and of Baal-shalisha, 2 Kings iv. 42. Shalisha was fifteen Miles from Diospolis, in the Canton Thamnitica, to the North of Jerusalem [a].

I. SHALLUM, Shillem, Salom, Sellem, or Sellum, Son of Naphtali, Chief of the large Family of the Shallumites, Numb. xxvi. 49.

II. SHALLUM Son of Jabesh, or perhaps a Native of Jabesh. He treacherously kill'd Zechariah King of Israel, and usurp'd his Kingdom, but kept it but one Month. Menahem the Son of Gadi kill'd him in Samaria [b]. The Scripture says, that Shallum was the Executioner of the Threatnings of the Lord, against the House of Jehu.

III. SHALLUM, Son of Tikvah, or Tikvath, or Native of Tikvah: He was the Husband of the Prophetess Huldah, who lived under Josiah King of Judah. 2 Kings xxii. 14.

IV. SHALLUM Son of Sisamai, and Father of Jekamiah, 1 Chron. ii. 40. He was of the Tribe of Judah.

V. SHALLUM Son of one call'd Shaul, and Father of Mibſam, of the Tribe of Simeon, 1 Chron. iv. 25.

VI. SHALLUM the fourth Son of Joſiah King of Judah, 1 Chron. iii. 15. and Jer. xxii. 11. He is the ſame as Jehoahaz, who was made King after the Death of Joſiah, and whom the King of Egypt took
2 Kings xxiii. 30, 31, 34. Priſoner, and carry'd into Egypt. See his Hiſtory before, under the Title JEHOAHAZ.

VII. SHALLUM Son of the High-prieſt
1 Chron. vi. 12, 13. Zadok, and Father of Hilkiah the High-prieſt. Shellum is call'd Meſhullam, 1 Chron. ix. 11. He lived in the Time of Hezekiah, or of Ahaz, and was the immediate Father of Azariah, and only Uncle to Hilkiah. See our Diſſertation upon the Succeſſion of the High-prieſts of the Jews. It ſeems to be him that is call'd Salom in Baruch i. 7.

VIII. SHALLUM Son of Kore, 1 Chron. ix. 19, 31. He was ſpared in the Deſart, when the Earth opened and ſwallowed up his Father, Numb. xxxi. 11. The Deſcendants of Shallum had an Office in the Temple, which was to take Care of the Cakes that were fried there.

IX. SHALLUM Son of Colhoſeh, Chief of the Town of Mizpah; he rebuilt at his

SHALMANESER, or Salmanaſar, King of Aſſyria; he ſucceeded Tiglath-pileſer, and had Sennacherib for his Succeſſor: He began to reign in the Year of the World 3276, reigned fourteen Years, and died in 3290. It is very probable 'tis he who is
2 Kings xvii. 3. Tob. i. 2. Hoſ. x. 14. call'd Enemeſſar in the Greek of Tobit, and Shalman in Hoſea: Here is what the Scripture tells us of Shalmaneſer. This Prince came into Paleſtine, ſubdued the Kingdom of Samaria, and obliged Hoſhea the Son of Elah to pay him Tribute. Hoſhea continued in Subjection to Shalmaneſer for three Years [a]; but in the third Year, being weary of paying Tribute, he took ſecret Meaſures with So King of Egypt, to deliver himſelf out of this Subjection. When Shalmaneſer knew this, he brought an Army againſt him, ravaged the whole Country of Samaria, beſieged Hoſhea in his capital City; and notwithſtanding his long Reſiſtance, (for he held out three Years [b]) he took the City, put Hoſhea into Bonds, carry'd away the People beyond the Euphrates; and thus he ruin'd the City and Kingdom of Samaria, which had ſubſiſted for two hundred and fifty-four Years, from the Year of the World 3030, to the Year 3283, before Chriſt 717, and before the Vulgar
Tob. i. 14. Era 721. Tobit was of the Number of thoſe Captives that were carry'd away by Shalmaneſer, but afterwards got into the good Graces of this Prince, who gave him Liberty to do what he pleas'd, and to live where he would: He even made him his Purveyor, according to the Greek, which was an Officer to furniſh Proviſions to the King's Houſhold. This is all we know of Shalmaneſer. His Succeſſor was Sennacherib, whom we have ſpoken of already.

But beſides what we know from the Scripture concerning Shalmaneſer, profane Authors tell us, [c] that this Prince made War alſo with the Tyrians. Eluleus King of Tyre, ſeeing the Philiſtines were much weaken'd by the War which they had with Hezekiah King of Judah, took this Opportunity of reducing to his Obedience again the City of Gath, which had revolted from him ſome time before. The Gittites, fearing the Power of the King of Tyre, had recourſe to Shalmaneſer, who marched with all his Forces againſt the Tyrians. At his Approach the City of Sidon, otherwiſe Ace, afterwards Ptolemais, and now Acre, and the other maritime Cities of Phenicia, which 'till then were ſubject to the Phenicians, ſhook off this Yoke, and ſubmitted themſelves to Shalmaneſer.

But the Tyrians, with only twelve Ships, having in a Sea-fight defeated the united Fleet of the Aſſyrians and Phenicians, acquired by this Victory ſo great a Reputation at Sea, and became ſo formidable, that Shalmaneſer durſt no more engage with them by Sea: He withdrew therefore into his own Dominions, but left a great Part of his Army to form the Siege of Tyre. But when the Beſiegers made but a ſlow Progreſs, by reaſon of the brave Reſiſtance of the Beſieged, the Troops of Shalmaneſer ſtopt up the Aqueducts, and cut the Pipes that brought the Water into the City, which brought the Tyrians to the laſt Extremity. To remedy this Scarcity of Water, the Tyrians began to dig Wells in their City, and, by means of this Aſſiſtance, they held out well enough for five Years longer; and in the mean time, Shalmaneſer happening to die, they were then deliver'd of their Siege. Uſher places this Siege of Tyre in the Year of the World 3287, before Jeſus Chriſt 713, before the Vulgar Era 717.

SHAMA, or Samma, Son of Hothan the Aroerite, 1 Chron. xi. 44. He is call'd Shammah the Harodite in 2 Sam. xxiii. 25. and Shammoth the Harorite, 1 Chron. xi. 27.

SHAMAI, a famous Rabbin. We have already ſpoke of him, under the Word SAMEAS.

SHAME, Ignominia. To uncover the Shame, Ignominy, or Nakedneſs of a Perſon, are ſynonymous Terms. Iſaiah threatens the Egyptians, that they ſhould be led away Captive ſtark naked, without any thing to Lev. xviii. 15, 17, &c. Iſai. xx. 4.

SHAMGAR, or Samgar, Son of Anath,
Judg. iii. 31. who was the third Judge of Iſrael, after Ehud, and before Barak. The Scripture informs us of none of the Particulars of his Adminiſtration, except that he defended Iſrael, and kill'd ſix hundred Philiſtines with an Ox-goad. From the Peace obtain'd by Ehud in the Year of the World 2679, to whom Shamgar ſucceeded, 'till the Servitude under the Canaanites, which happen'd in 2699, are twenty Years.

I. SHAMIR, or Samir, Son of Micah, a Levite, 1 Chron. xxiv. 24.

II. SHAMIR, a City of the Tribe of Judah, Joſh. xv. 48. Some Copies of the Septuagint read Saphir inſtead of Shamir.

III. SHAMIR, a City of the Tribe of Ephraim, in the Mountains belonging to this Tribe, where dwelt Tola the Judge of Iſrael, Judg x. 1.

IV. SHAMIR [a]: This Word is found in ſeveral Places of the Hebrew Text of the Old Teſtament, and ſignifies ſometimes Thorns, Briars [b], or the Place where they grow; and ſometimes a Stone [c], or an Inſtrument of extraordinary Hardneſs, proper to poliſh Precious-ſtones; from whence it is ſometimes tranſlated by Diamond. The Rabbins have much amuſed themſelves about the Shamir; they pretend it was a Worm, and that it was one of the ten Things that God created on the Saturday Vid. Pirke Aboth.
Evening: They think that Moſes made uſe of it to poliſh and engrave the Precious-ſtones of the Breaſt-plate; that Solomon uſed it alſo to poliſh and cut the Stones that were uſed in the building the Temple, where the Scripture ſays, there was neither 1 Kings vi. 7.
Hammer, nor Axe, nor any Iron Tool to be heard; becauſe, according to the Rabbins, Solomon without any Noiſe, by means of the Shamir, cut all the Stones as they were brought out of the Quarry. Some Hebrews pretend, that the Devil Aſmodeus, having been taken and chain'd by this Prince, was forc'd to give him this marvellous Worm. Others tell us, that Solomon having incloſed the Young-ones of a Lapwing in a Glaſs Veſſel; in order to deliver her Young-ones out of Priſon, the Lapwing went and fetch'd the Worm Shamir, by means of which ſhe eaſily broke the Glaſs. This Experiment let Solomon into the Knowledge of the Virtue of this little Animal. Vincent of Beavais, in his Vincent. Bellov.

nor a Diamond, but a Stone that is ſo hard, that the Lapidaries commonly make uſe of it to poliſh their Precious-ſtones. This Author ſhews, againſt the Opinion of Cardan, that the Antients knew it, and apply'd it to this Uſe. [d] Heſychius ſays, it was a kind of Sand; but this is, becauſe it is reduced to Powder, which Powder is uſed in poliſhing Gems.

II. SHAMMUA, or Shimea, Son of David and Bathsheba, 1 Chron. iii. 5.

I. SHAPHAM, Shaphan, or Saphan, Son of Azaliah, Secretary of the Temple in the Time of King Josiah [a]. It was Shaphan who inform'd this Prince, that the Book of the Law of the Lord was found in the Temple. We find several Sons of Shaphan, viz. Ahikam, Elasa, Gamariah, and Jezoniah; but I cannot say they are all Sons of the same Shaphan.

שפן Shaphan. II. SHAPHAN, an Animal often mention'd in Scripture, and which is sometimes (Lev. xi. 5. Vulgat.) render'd by Chœrogrillus, at other times (Prov. xxx. 26.) by Lepusculus, and lastly by Herinacium. (Psal. ciii. 8.) Moses declares it to be unclean, tho' it is (Deut. xiv. 7.) a ruminating Animal, because it does not divide the Hoof *. (Prov. xxx. 26.) Solomon, in his Proverbs, says, that the Shaphan keeps it self among the Rocks; and he insinuates, that they keep together in Troops. Bochart thinks it to be a kind of great Rat common in Arabia, and good to eat, call'd Aliarbubo. It is not so large as a Squirrel, of a greyish Colour, with the Fore-feet and Tail of a Rat: The End of its Tail, the Eyes, and the Head, are like those of a Rabbit: Its Hind-legs are longer than those before: It chews the Cud, loves to be among the Rocks, and they herd together in Flocks. These are the Qualities agreeing with the Shaphan.

III. SHAPHAN, Son of Gad, who dwelt in the Country of Basan, 1 Chron. v. 12.

IV. SHAPHAN Son of Machir, 1 Chron. vii. 15.

I. SHAPHAT, or Saphat, Son of Hori, of the Tribe of Simeon, and one of the twelve that were deputed to view the Land of Canaan, Numb. xiii. 5.

II. SHAPHAT, of the City of Abelmeholah: He was Father to the Prophet Elisha, 1 Kings xix. 16, 19. 2 Kings iii. 11.

III. SHAPHAT Son of Shemaiah, 1 Chr. iii. 22. He was of the Royal Family of David by Jeconiah.

IV. SHAPHAT Son of Adlai, who had the chief Care of the Herds of Cattle that King David had in Basan, 1 Chron. xxvii. 29.

SHAPHER, or Sephir, Numb. xxxiii. 23. Mount Shapher was one of the Encampments of the Israelites in the Desart, between Kehelathah and Haradah.

SHARAI, or Sarai: He was one of those who, after the Captivity of Babylon, dismiss'd their strange Wives, Ezra x. 40.

SHARAIM, or Saraim, a City of the Tribe of Judah [b]. See Zorah.

SHARESER, or Serefer, or Sar-ezer, one of the Lieutenants or Officers of Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. xxxix. 3. His Name signifies the Prince of the Treasure, because probably he had the Care of the King's Treasures.

I. SHAREZER, or Sarasar, second Son of King Sennacherib: He assassinated his Father while he was paying his Devotions to his God Nisroch, 2 Kings xix. 37. Tob. i. 21.

II. SHAREZER, and Regem-melech, Jews of Babylon, who consulted the Prophet Zechariah concerning the Fast of the fifth Month. See Regem-melech. (Zech. vii. 2.)

SHARON, or Saron, or Sarona. There are three Cantons of Palestine known by the Name of Sharon. This Name was almost become a Proverb, to express a Place of extraordinary Beauty and Fruitfulness. See Isai. xxxiii. 9. and xxxv. 2.

I. SHARON, a Canton between Mount Tabor and the Sea of Tiberias. (Euseb. & Hieron. in Saron.)

II. SHARON, a Canton between the City of Cæsarea of Palestine and Joppa [c].

III. SHARON, a Canton beyond Jordan, in the Country of Basan, and in the Division of the Tribe of Gad. (1 Chron. v. 16.) Mr. Reland maintains, that there was no Sharon beyond Jordan; and that those of the Tribe of Gad came to feed their Flocks as far as the Canton that lies about Joppa, Cæsarea, and Lydda [d]: which to us seems incredible, because of the Distance of the Places: Besides the Country of Basan it self was very fine and fruitful.

IV. SHARON. Modern Travellers give this Name also to the Plain that lies between Ecdippe and Ptolemais.

V. SHARON, or Lasharon, a City whose King was taken and slain by Joshua, Josh. xii. 18. St. Luke, in the Acts, seems to take notice of a City by the Name of Sharon or Saron; (Acts ix. 35.) and in the Chronicles we find one call'd Shitrai the Shoronite: (1 Chron. xxvii. 29.) But these Passages may well enough be suppos'd to stand for a Country or Canton, and not a City by the Name of Sharon.

SHARUHEN, or Sarohen, a City of the Tribe of Simeon, Josh. xix. 6. probably the same as Saharem.

SHASHAK, or Sesac, one of the Posterity of Benjamin, who dwelt at Jerusalem with his Children, probably at the Return from the Captivity of Babylon, 1 Chron. viii. 25.

SHAVEH, or Save, the Valley of Shaveh, otherwise call'd the Valley of the King. (Gen. xiv. 17.) It was probably pretty near Jerusalem; because Melchisedech King of this City, and the King of Gomorrha, came to meet Abraham at his Return from the Defeat of the five Kings, as far as the Valley of Shaveh.

SHAVEH-KIRIATHAIM. The Emims, Gen.xiv.5. an ancient People beyond Jordan, dwelt at Kiriathaim. Chedorlaomer and his Confederates defeated them the same Year that they attack'd the five Kings of Pentapolis [a]. Deut. ii. 10. Afterwards the Moabites drove out the Emims, and destroy'd them. Shaveh-kiriathaim is probably a Plain near the City of Kiriathaim: But this City was beyond Jordan, ten Miles from Medaba towards the Euseb. in locis. West, as Eusebius says. It was given to Numbers xxxii. 37. Josh. xiii. 19. the Tribe of Reuben; but afterwards it was possess'd by the Moabites. See Ezek. xxv. 9.

SHAVING. The Use of Shaving the Beard and Hair, and sometimes the whole Body, was common among the Hebrews. Numbers viii. 7. Lev. xiv. 8, 9. Deut. xxi. 12. The Levites on the Day of their Consecration, the Lepers at their Purification, shaved all the Hair of their Bodies. A Woman taken Prisoner in War, when she married a Jew, shaved the Hair of her Head. The Hebrews, and Nations bordering upon Palestine, shaved themselves when they mourn'd, as also in Times of great Calamity, whether publick or private [b]. God Lev. xxi. 5. Numb. vi. 9, 18. commanded the Priests to cut neither their Hair nor Beards in their Mournings. The Nazarites also meddled not with their Hair for the whole Time of their Nazariteship: But if it should happen that, during this time, any Man should die in their Presence, they were to shave their Hair, and begin the Exercises of their Nazariteship anew. The Strength of Samson, was in the Hair that he wore without cutting it, in the manner of a Nazarite; for no sooner was he shaved, but he became as feeble as another Man.

To shave the whole Beard and all the Hair, or but half the Beard and Hair, was 2 Sam. x. 4. 1 Chron. xix. 4. an Insult, and a Piece of Mockery. Hanun King of the Amorites having thus treated David's Ambassadors, this Prince took his Revenge by a War, which was fatal to the Ammonites: God said, he would make use of a borrow'd Razor, to shave off all the Hair from the Body of his People: Isai.vii.20. Radet Dominus in novacula conducta, caput, & pilos pedum, & barbam universam; that is to say, he would take Vengeance against his People, by the Sword of the People inhabiting beyond the Euphrates. In Mourning, sometimes, they suffer'd their 2 Sam. xix. 24. Beards to grow long. Mephibosheth did not shave his Beard for the whole time that King David was driven away from Jerusalem by Absalom. Jer. xi. 26. Jeremiah describes the Arabians bordering upon Judea, by their manner of shaving their Heads: His qui attonsi sunt in comam. They cut their Hair in a Circle, in Honour of a profane Deity. God prohibits the Israelites to imitate them, Levit. xix. 27. Neque in rotundinem attondebitis comam. See SISOE.

SHAUL, or Saul, Son of Simeon, and Grandson of Jacob, Numb. xxvi. 13.

SHAVSHA, or Susa, one of David's Secretaries, 1 Chron. xviii. 16.

SHEAF. The Day after the Feast of Lev. xxiii. 10, 11, 12. the Passover they brought a Sheaf into the Temple, as the First-fruits of the Barley-harvest; and these are the Ceremonies that were then perform'd: On the fifteenth of the Month Nisan, in the Evening, when the Feast of the first Day of the Passover was ended, [c] and the second Day was begun, which was a Working-day; the House of Judgment deputed three Men to go in Solemnity and gather the Sheaf of Barley. The Inhabitants of the neighbouring Cities came together, to be present at the Ceremony. The Barley was gather'd in the Territory of Jerusalem. The Deputies demanded, three times together, if the Sun was set; and were as often answer'd, that it was. Afterwards they demanded three times, if they might have Leave to cut the Sheaf; and Leave was as often granted. They reap'd it out of three different Fields with three different Sicles, and put the Ears into three Boxes, to carry them to the Temple.

When the Sheaf, or rather the three Sheaves, were in the Temple, they were thresh'd in the Court; and of the Grain that came out, they took a full Omer, that is, about three Pints: After it had been well winnow'd, parch'd, and bruised, they sprinkled over it a Log of Oil, that is, near a Pint.

They added to it an Handful of Incense; and the Priest that receiv'd this Offering shook it before the Lord, towards the four Quarters of the World cross-wise; he cast part of it upon the Altar, and the rest was his own. After this, every one might begin their Harvest.

SHEAL, or Saal, Son of Bani: He was one of those that quitted their Wives, which they had married contrary to the Appointment of the Law, Ezra x. 29.

SHEALTIEL. See SALATHIEL.

I. SHEBA, Son of Raamah. 'Tis thought Gen. x. 7. שבא Sheba. he inhabited Arabia Fœlix, where his Father Raamah had his Dwelling.

II. SHEBA, Son of Joktan. Bochart Gen.x. 26. שבא Sheba. places him in Arabia Fœlix; but we rather think he should be placed in Persia or Armenia. There are found Footsteps of his Name; and his Father Joktan, with his other Children, had their Settlements about these Countries.

Gen. xxv. 3. III. SHEBA Son of Jokshan. Probably he dwelt in Arabia Deserta, or thereabouts. We think, with Bochart, that they were Job i. 15. the Descendants of this Sheba, who took away Job's Cattle.

IV. SHEBA, the Queen of Sheba, of whom mention is made in the Book of Kings [a], and who in the Gospel is call'd [b] Queen of the South, was, according to some [c], a Queen of Arabia; according to others [d] a Queen of Ethiopia. Josephus says, that Sheba was the ancient Name of the City of Meroe, before Cambyses gave it that of his Sister; and that it was from thence the Queen came, of whom we are speaking. This Opinion has much prevail'd. The Ethiopians at this Day maintain, that this Princess was of their Country, and that her Posterity reign'd there for a long time [e]. They preserve the Catalogue of them, their Names, and Successions. The Eunuch of Queen Candace, Acts viii. 27. who was converted and baptized by Saint Philip, was an Officer belonging to a Princess of the same Country. The Antients acknowledge, that Women are us'd to govern in this Country [f]. The Isle of Meroe is sometimes comprehended in Ethiopia; and this Country, as well as Egypt, is to the South of Palestine.

Those who would have this Princess to come from Arabia, rely, First, upon the general Consent of all the World, that there are Sabeans and Cushims, or Ethiopians, in Arabia. This Princess was Queen of Sheba, or of Cush, and Ethiopia. Secondly, Arabia is to the South from Judea. Thirdly, This Country, I mean Arabia Fxlix, may very well be said to be at the uttermost Parts of the World; as it is said, Matth. xii. 42. that the Queen of Sheba came from the uttermost Parts of the Earth, to hear the Wisdom of Solomon; because Arabia the Happy borders upon the Ocean to the South, and formerly they knew no Land beyond Tacit. l. 5. hist. it: Terra, finesque, quæ ad orientem vergunt, Arabiâ terminantur, says Tacitus. Fourthly, Arabia abounds in Gold, Silver, Spices, and Precious-stones, which are the Presents that this Princess made to Solomon; which cannot be conveniently said of the Island of Meroe. Lastly, several understand these Verses of Claudian, of the Sabeans in Arabia Fœlix, where, he says, the Women are us'd to govern:

Claudian. in Eutrop. l. 11. v. 321.

> Medis, levibusque Sabæis
> Imperat hic sexus, Reginarumque sub armis
> Barbariæ pars magna jacet.

And if popular Traditions may be any thing rely'd on, that of the Arabians may be produced, who think that Queen Balkis came out of the City of Sheba, otherwise call'd Marib or Mareb, situated in Yemen, to visit Solomon.

The Reader may see what has been said in the Article of Candaule, which is the Name that Josephus and several others give to the Queen of Sheba: She came to see Solomon about the Year of the World 3012, before Christ 988, before the Vulgar Era 992.

V. SHEBA, a City of the Tribe of Simeon, Josh. xix. 2.

VI. SHEBA, Josh. xix. 2. the same City as Beer-sheba, or perhaps the same as Shema, Josh. xv. 26.

VII. SHEBA, Son of Abihail, of the Tribe of Gad, who dwelt in the Country of Bashan, 1 Chron. v. 13.

VIII. SHEBA, Son of Bichri, of the Tribe of Benjamin, a very turbulent Fellow, who was very near engaging the Israelites in a Civil War. After the Defeat of Absalom, when the Tribe of Judah, without waiting for the other Tribes, came to King David, and brought him over the River Jordan on his Way to Jerusalem; the other Tribes resented the little Notice that was taken of them, and said [g], Why have you taken our King away, and brought him over Jordan without us? Those of Judah answer'd, Because we are most concerned in the King. There was other provoking Language given on both Sides, insomuch that Sheba the Son of Bichri sounded a Trumpet, put himself at the Head of the Mal-contents of Israel, and proclaim'd; We have no Share in 2 Sam. xx. 1, 2, 3, &c. David, nor any thing to do with the Son of Jesse: O Israel, return every Man to his own House. Thus all Israel forsook David, and followed Sheba.

When David came to Jerusalem, he sent Abishai, with what Troops were at hand, in pursuit of this Traytor. Joab also took the Soldiers under his Command, and crossing over the Country which is to the North of Jerusalem, he arrived at Abel-Beth-maacha a City lying at the Entrance of the Pass that is between Libanus and Antilibanus, whither Sheba was retired, with the Choice of his Army. Joab besieged the Place, and began to demolish the Walls, when a Woman of the City, who was wiser than the rest, spoke to him from the Wall, and asked, If he was come to destroy Abela? Joab answer'd, That he had to do with none but with Sheba the Son of Bichri, who was a Rebel. She told him, That Sheba's Head should be thrown to him over the Wall. She then persuaded the People to cut off Sheba's Head, and to

III. SHEBANIAH, one of the principal Jews, Nehem. ix. 4.

SHEBARIM, or Sabarim, a Place about Ai and Bethel. The Inhabitants of Ai pursu'd the Israelites from the Gate of their City as far as Shebarim [a]. Some [b] take Shebarim in an Appellative Sense. They pursu'd them 'till they had intirely routed them.

SHEBAT, Sebat, Sebet, or Shebet, the fifth Month of the Civil Year of the Hebrews, and the eleventh of the Ecclesiastical Year. It answers to our Moon of January. The Jews began by Shebet, to number the Years of the Trees they planted, the Fruits of which were esteem'd profane and impure 'till the fourth Year.

The Tenth of Shebet was a Fast for the Death of the Elders, who succeeded Joshua in the Government of the People, Judg. ii. 7, 10.

The Twenty-third of Shebet was made a Fast in Memory of the Resolution that was taken by the Israelites, to make War with Benjamin, to revenge the Outrage that was done to the Wife of the Levite, Judg. xix, xx.

On the Thirteenth of the same Month Simon Maccabæus was assassinated by Ptolemy Son of Abubus his Son-in-law, 1 Mac. xvi. 14, 15, 16. in the Year of the World 3869, before Christ 131, before the Vulgar Era 135.

SHEBER, or Saber, Son of Caleb and of Maacah his Concubine, 1 Chron. ii. 48.

SHEBNAH, or Sebna: He exercised the Office of Secretary under King Hezechiah, 2 Kings xviii. 18. This Prince sent Shebnah, Joah, and Asaph, to hear what Rab-shakeh had to propose from King Sennacherib. Some have pretended, that Shebna had been High-priest; but the Scripture
Isai. xxii. 15. only gives him the Title of Treasurer, or Præpositus Templi, which is very different from the Dignity of High-priest. See the Prophecy that Isaiah pronounced against him: Go, says the Lord, get thee unto this Treasurer (Sochen), even unto Shebna, which is over the House, or the Temple. The Word Sochen, signifies one that has the Oversight of the King's Magazines, a Treasurer. אל הסכן ad hunc Sochen.

What he is to say to him there, follows; What hast thou here; and whom hast thou here; that thou hast hewed thee out a Sepulchre here, as he that heweth him out a Sepulchre on high, and that graveth an Habitation for himself in a Rock? Behold, the Lord will carry thee away with a mighty Captivity (as a Cock with the Feet tied together, says St. Jerom) and will surely cover thee [c]: Or, He will fall upon you, as a Bird of Prey falls upon his Game. He will surely violently turn and toss thee, like a Ball, into a large Country; there shalt thou die, and there the Chariots of thy Glory shall be the Shame of thy Lord's House: And I will drive thee from thy Station, and from thy State shall he pull thee down. And it shall come to pass in that Day, that I will call my Servant Eliakim the Son of Hilkiah. 'Tis thought that all this happen'd to Shebna, under the Reign of Manasseh, and that he was taken Captive with this Prince to Babylon, in the Year of the World 3328, before Christ 672, before the Vulgar Era 676.

SHEBUEL, or Subael, eldest Son of Gershom Son of Moses, 1 Chron. xxiii. 16. He had the Care of the the Treasures of the Temple, 1 Chron. xxvi. 24. He that is mention'd in 1 Chron. xxvi. 24. must be only a Descendant from Shebuel the Grandson of Moses.

I. SHECANIAH, or Sechenias. There are several Persons by this Name: There was one very well known under Nehemiah. See Nehem. vi. 18.

II. SHECANIAH, Son of Obadiah, and Father of Shemaiah, of the Race Royal of Judah, 1 Chron. iii. 21.

III. SHECANIAH, a Priest, Head of the tenth Family of the Priests, 1 Chron. xxiv. 11. Ezra viii. 3, 5.

I. SHECHEM, Sechem, or Sichem, Son of Gilead, and Chief of the Family of the Shechemites, Numb. xxvi. 31.

II. SHECHEM, Son of Hamor, Prince of the Shechemites: He took away Dinah the Daughter of Jacob, as she went to see one of the Festivals of the Shechemites [d], and dishonoured her: Then asking her in Marriage, he obtain'd her, on this Condition, That he, and all the Men of Shechem, should be circumcised. This was agreed to; but on the third Day after, when the Wound of the Circumcision was at the sorest, Simeon and Levi, the two Brothers of Dinah by the same Mother, took their Swords and enter'd the City of Shechem, and slew all the Males they could meet with. After which, the other Sons of Jacob, and their Domesticks plunder'd the City.

III. SHECHEM, [a] a City of Samaria, call'd otherwise Sichar, Neapolis, or Naplouse. Josephus says, that the People of the Country call'd it Mabartha; perhaps because of the Vale of Moreh that was Josh. xvii. 7. xx. 7. hard by. Joshua appoints this City to the Tribe of Benjamin; it was in the Mountains belonging to this Tribe. We have elsewhere spoke of Mount Gerizim, situate
Gen. xlviii. 22. near Shechem. Jacob bought a Field in the Neighbourhood of this City, which by way of Overplus he gave to his Son Josh. xxiv. 32. Joseph, who was buried there. Near the same City was to be seen Jacob's Well or John iv. 5. Fountain, near which Jesus Christ enter'd into Discourse with the Woman of Samaria. After the Ruin of Samaria by Shalmaneser, Schechem was the Capital of the Samaritans; and Josephus says, [b] it was still so in the Time of Alexander the Great. It was ten Miles from Shiloh, [c] forty from Jerusalem, and fifty-two from Jericho [d]. St. Jerome says, [e] that St. Paula visited the Church that was built upon Jacob's Fountain. Antoninus Martyr, Adamnanus, and Villibaldus, who wrote in the eighth Century, speak then of this Church. Phocas who wrote in the twelfth Century makes no mention of it.

SHEDEI, or Sedei, Father of Zedekiah. Baruch i. 1.

SHEDEUR, or Sedeur, Father of Elizur, of the Tribe of Reuben. Numb. i. 5.

SHEEP. The Sheep or Lamb was a very common Sacrifice of the old Law. When Moses speaks of this kind of Victims, he never omits to appoint, [f] that the Rump must be laid whole upon the Fire of the Altar. This was the most delicate and valuable Part of this Animal. In the East there are seen Sheep, whose Tails or Rumps are all over fat, and weigh sometimes five and twenty Pounds or more. Those of Tartary, according to the Testimony of John Kinson, are so large, that they weigh sometimes eighty Pounds. Those of Indostan have also their Tails large and heavy, and their Wool very short and fine. The Tails alone of the Sheep of Madagascar weigh fifteen or six-Herodot. l. 3. c. 113. teen Pounds. Herodotus says, that in Arabia are seen two sorts of Sheep of a singular Kind. Some have their Tails so long, that they reach even three Cubits, and if they are suffer'd to draw them along the Ground, they are much bruised, and become ulcerous. Therefore the Shepherds of that Country are forced to make little Carriages, upon which they lay the Tails of these Sheep, and draw them about with them where-ever they go. The other Sheep are not less extraordinary; they have their Tails two Cubits long, or about three Feet. Busbequius tells us in his Voyage, that some of this sort are found in Asia Minor. Busbeg. Ep. 3.

When Jacob was employ'd in Mesopotamia, in feeding the Sheep of his Father-in-law Laban, the Angel of the Lord appear'd to him, and said: Lift up now thine Eyes and see, all the Rams which leap upon the Cattle are ring-streaked, speckled, and grisled. Gen. xxxi. 12, 13, 14.
At the same Time he discover'd to him a Secret, to make all the Sheep be produced of different Colours, by means of Branches of Trees, half peeled and half with the Bark on; which were to be placed near the Troughs at which the Sheep drank. The Matter is related at full length in the thirtieth Chapter of Genesis; as also how Laban alter'd and changed Jacob's Wages several times. We shall not dwell upon that, but shall content ourselves to examine three things. First, whether the Artifice here made use of by Jacob were natural or miraculous. Secondly, in what Jacob's Request consisted, for the Text does not clearly explain it. And thirdly, whether this Artifice of Jacob may be look'd upon as lawful, fair, and allowable.

As to the first Question, it is agreed, that the Females of all Animals, have received from Nature a very great Power of communicating to their Offspring certain Inclinations, Antipathies, Figures, Marks, and Colours. We have so many Evidences of this from every Day's Experience and Observation, that it cannot by any means be doubted. Women have experience of this every Day; and we see it especially in domestick Animals, which are more exposed than others to receive Impressions from the several Objects that are presented to their View. Horses, Dogs, Cats, Pigeons, Fowls, tame Rabbits, are often of different Colours, and their Young generally take the Colour of what strikes the Imagination of the Dam the most forcibly at the Time of Conception. This is what is observed by both antient and modern Philosophers; [g] and this is what St. Jerome, [h] and St. Austin [i], and the greatest Part of the Commentators acknowledge after them, upon the present Question. Therefore there was nothing miraculous in what Jacob did in this Matter; but the Miracle consisted in the Appearance of the Angel, who discovered to him in a Dream a natural Method of propagating Sheep of different Colours.

As to the second Difficulty, we think that Jacob requir'd of Laban, 1*st*, Every thing that should be born spotted and of several Colours, both of the Sheep and Goats. 2*dly*, What should be produced quite black, or with some white Spots. He left to Laban whatever should be quite white, both among the Sheep and the Goats. After this Laban and he separated from the rest whatever was wholly white, both among the Goats and Sheep, and Laban left all these Animals to the Care of Jacob, thinking that Sheep or Goats would be produced from them only of one Colour. This was to make Jacob's Condition the least favourable to him that was possible, and would certainly have been so, had he not prevented it by a Stratagem. The party-colour'd Branches of Trees laid at the Watering-places, had the same Effect upon the Imaginations of the Sheep and Goats, as party-colour'd Sheep and Goats themselves would have had. As to Laban, he took under his own immediate Care all the Animals of different Colours, that might naturally be presum'd to produce young ones of different Colours.

A second Artifice of Jacob was, not to expose the party-colour'd Branches at all times, nor to all sorts of Sheep or Goats; but only to expose them in the Spring, that he might have his Young in Autumn; and, on the contrary, to let Nature proceed in her ordinary Course in Autumn, that Laban might have the Lambs conceived in Autumn, and yean'd in the Spring. Or according to others, he expos'd his Branches only to the best and strongest Ewes in the Flock, letting the others take the natural Course. Besides, it is thought, that when the Number of Lambs and Kids of several Colours was sufficient, instead of the striped Branches he expos'd these Lambs and Kids, which would produce the same Effect. (Boch. de animal. sacris.)

As to the third Difficulty, it is objected, that Jacob made use of a kind of Trick to out-wit Laban. No doubt but Laban understood the Bargain made between him and Jacob in the most obvious and natural Sense, in which Jacob was to yield up to him all such Lambs and Kids as should be produced white, and reserve to himself only the black ones, or party-colour'd; and instead of honestly pursuing this Intention, he has Recourse to an Artifice unknown to Laban, and of which he had no Suspicion, to make the greatest Part of the Kids and Lambs fall to his own Share. This appears to be directly contrary to all the Rules of common Honesty and fair proceeding. It signifies nothing to say, that Jacob had a Right to do himself Justice against the Incroachments and Iniquity of Laban, who for so many Years had made him no Recompence for all the Service he had done him; for according to the Rules of true Morality, No-body is to make himself a Judge in his own Cause, nor to take it upon himself to do himself Justice. Besides, in Strictness, what did Laban owe to Jacob? Had he not obliged himself to serve Laban fourteen Years for his two Daughters? After this Term was ended, Jacob had nothing else to do but to withdraw. But the best Argument for Jacob's Vindication is this, that God himself approved of his Conduct, and suggested this Method to him by the Mediation of an Angel. This Judge, infinitely Just, saw Laban's Injustice, and intimated to Jacob a sure Method how he might grow rich at Laban's Expence, without giving Laban any just Cause of Complaint, if he consider'd the Matter in Strictness and Rigour. Is it not allow'd every one to make Use of his own Industry, and to advance his Interests by Art and Stratagem, especially when he has to deal with Persons of Laban's Character? (Gen. xxxi. 11, 12.)

By the Name of Sheep, the Scripture often understands the People; We are thy People, and the Sheep of thy Pasture. (Ps. lxxviii. 3.) And elsewhere, O Shepherd of Israel, thou that leadest Joseph like a Flock. (Ps. lxxx. 1.) Jesus Christ says, that he was sent only to the lost Sheep of Israel. (Matth. xv. 24.) The Righteous are often compared to Sheep, exposed to the Violence of the Wicked, to the Fury of Wolves, to the Slaughter. Psal. lxiii. 22. Æstimati sumus sicut oves occisionis. At the last Judgment, the Just, being represented by Sheep, shall be at the Right-hand of the Sovereign Judge, and put in Possession of the Kingdom of Heaven. Our Saviour says, that Deceivers are Wolves that are cloathed in Sheep's Cloathing. Matth. vii. 15.

SHEKEL, Siclus; an Hebrew Weight and Money. It is derived from the Verb Shacal, which signifies to weigh. (שקל Shekel, siclus.) The Name of Shekel is used to denote the Weight of any thing, as Iron, Hair, Spices, and all other things. (Exod. xxx. 23, 24. 2 Sam. xiv. 26.) Among the different Opinions that have been proposed, concerning the Weight and Value of the Shekel, we shall adhere to the Sentiments of M. Le Pellitier of Rohan, who says it is of the Weight of half an Ounce, or four Roman Drachmæ, or nine Peny-weight and three Grains; and that the Shekel of Silver is worth two Shillings three pence Farthing and half a Farthing of our Money. Moses and Ezekiel say, it was worth twenty Oboli, or twenty Gerah. Numb. xviii. 16. Ezek. xlv. 12. See the Table of Weights and Measures.

The Shekel of Gold was of half the Weight as the Shekel of Silver, and was worth eighteen Shillings and three Pence of English Money.

The Shekel of the Sanctuary, according to several Interpreters, was double to the common Shekel; but this Opinion wants good Proof. We think it to be the same as the common Shekel, and the Words of the Sanctuary are added, to express a just and exact Weight, according to the Standards that were kept in the Temple or Tabernacle.

שכינה Shekinah. SHEKINAH. Nothing is more frequent in the Writings of the Jews, than the Shekinah, by which they understand the Presence of the Holy Spirit. In the Targums, or Chaldee Paraphrases, we find the Names Jehovah, or God; Memar, or the Word; and Shekinah, or the Holy Ghost. [a] They suppose the Holy Spirit, as speaking and communicating itself to Men by Revelation, first, in the Prophets; secondly, in the Urim and Thummim, which were in the Highpriest's Breast-plate; and thirdly, the Shekinah resides in what the Hebrews call Bath-col, or the Daughter of the Voice. The Shekinah was given them only since the Ruin of the first Temple, and when Prophecy and the Oracle of Urim was taken away from them. The Bath-col is Tradition, which supplies the Place of Revelation, and explains the Law. The Shekinah is the Presence of the Holy Ghost, which resided in the Temple of Jerusalem, and which, as the Rabbins say, drove away from thence the Princes of the Air, and communicated a particular Sanctity to it.

They say also, that it rests upon the Mild and the Humble, but that it flies from the fierce and passionate Man. It resides with him, whose House is open to the Stranger, and is found in the midst of two or three Persons that meet to study the Law. Lastly, they say, that the Shekinah has ten times changed its Dwelling; (Echa Rab. fol. 59. 1.) and lastly, going upon the Mount of Olives, it continued there three Years and an half, crying out to the Israelites; Return to me, my Children, and I will return to you. But seeing they would not be converted, it retired to its own Place. This last Circumstance seems to denote our Saviour's Preaching among the Jews, and his Ascension that happen'd to be from the Mount of Olives.

The Shekinah was the most sensible Mark of the Presence of God, which was to be observed among the Hebrews, and which rested over the Propitiatory, or over the golden Cherubims, which adhered to the Propitiatory, or the Covering of the Ark. There the Shekinah abode in the Shape of a Cloud. 'Twas from thence that God gave forth his Oracles with an articulate Voice, when he was consulted by the Highpriest in Favour of his People. Thence it is that it is often said in Scripture, that God sits upon the Cherubims, or between the Cherubims; that is to say, that he gives the most evident Tokens of his divine Presence, by answering from hence the Israelites that consulted him. The Rabbins tell us, that the Shekinah first resided in the Tabernacle prepared by Moses in the Wilderness, and that it descended therein on the Day of its Consecration in the Figure of a Cloud. It passed from thence into the Sanctuary of Solomon's Temple, on the Day of its Dedication by this Prince; where it continu'd to the Destruction of Jerusalem and of the Temple by the Chaldeans, and was not afterwards to be seen there.

See in the Article SAMUEL, what we have related from the Orientals concerning the Shekinah.

SHELAH, or Sela, Son of Judah. (Genesis xxxviii. 11.) Judah having successively given his two Sons Onan and Er to Tamar, and God having put them to Death because of their Wickedness; Judah bid Tamar continue a Widow, till his third Son Shelah should grow up. But Judah having no mind to give him to Tamar for a Husband, for fear the same should happen to him as to his Brothers; wherefore she went in to Judah, as may be seen under the Articles TAMAR or JUDAH. Shelah was Chief of the Family of the Shelanites. Numb. xxvi. 20.

I. SHELEMIAH, Selemia, or Salmiau. He was one of those that put away their Wives, which they had taken contrary to the Law, at their Return from the Captivity of Babylon. Ezr. x. 39.

II. SHELEMIAH, of the Race of the Priests. Nehem. xiii. 13. He was appointed by Nehemiah to have the Inspection of the First-fruits and Tenths that belong'd to the Temple.

SHELEPH, or Saleph, second Son of Joktan. Gen. x. 26.

SHELESH, or Selles, Son of Helem, of the Tribe of Asher. 1 Chron. vii. 35.

SHELOMI, or Salomi, Father of Ahihud, of the Tribe of Asher. This Ahihud was one of the Commissioners for dividing the Land of Promise. Numb. xxxiv. 27.

I. SHELOMITH, Salomith, or Salumith, Daughter of Dibri, of the Tribe of Dan, and Mother of that Blasphemer, who having blasphemed the Name of the Lord (Lev. xxiv 10, 11.)

in the Camp, was condemned to be ſtoned. The Scripture tells us, that Shelomith had this Blaſphemer by an Egyptian, which ſhould be naturally underſtood of an Egyptian that had marry'd her: But the Rabbins explain it otherwiſe. They ſay that Shelomith was a very handſome and virtuous Woman, who having been much tempted by an Egyptian to criminal Converſation with him, one who was an Overſeer of the Hebrews Labours, without complying with him in the leaſt; he at laſt found an Opportunity by Night, of ſlipping into the Houſe and Bed of Shelomith, in the Abſence of her Husband, and ſo abuſed her Simplicity.

The Day following, when this Woman had diſcover'd the Injury that had been done her, ſhe bitterly complain'd of it to her Husband, as ſoon as he return'd. He at firſt thought of putting her away from him, but he ſtill kept her for ſome time, to ſee if ſhe ſhould prove with Child by the Egyptian. After ſome Months her Pregnancy was evident, he ſent her away, and with Words he aſſaulted the Officer, who had done this Outrage to him. But the Egyptian abuſed him ſtill further, both by Words and Blows; ſo that Moſes coming thither by Chance, and hearing of the Injury that the Egyptian had done to the Iſraelite, he took up his Defence, kill'd the other, and buried him in the Sand.

The Brethren of Shelomith ſeeing their Siſter to be put away like an Adultereſs, from the Houſe of her Husband, pretended to call him to Account for it, and to oblige him to take her again. He refus'd it, and the Quarrel grew ſo high, that at laſt they came to Blows. Moſes happening to be there again, had a mind to reconcile them; but the Husband of Shelomith ask'd him, What he had to do in the Matter? Who had made him a Judge over them? and, Whether he had a mind to kill him alſo, as Yeſterday he kill'd the Egyptian? Moſes hearing this, was afraid, and withdrew out of Egypt, into the Country of Midian.

Lev. xxiv. 10, 11. The Blaſphemer that was ſton'd in the Wilderneſs was, as the Jews ſay, the Son of Shelomith and the Egyptian. The Officer who had the Overſight of the Hebrews Labour, is he that Moſes ſpeaks of Exod. ii. 11, 12. and the Husband of Shelomith is intimated in the ſame Place, Exod. ii. 13, 14. 'Tis thus the Jews ſometimes corrupt the Scriptures, by ſupplying the Text, and refining upon its Narrations.

II. SHELOMITH, Daughter of Zerubbabel, Prince of Judah. 1 Chron. iii. 19.

III. SHELOMITH, Son of Shimei, a Levite of the Family of Gerſhom. 1 Chron. xxiii. 9.

IV. SHELOMITH, Son of Izhar, a Levite of the Family of Gerſhom, the Son of Moſes. 1 Chron. xxiii. 18.

V. SHELOMITH, Daughter of Rehoboam King of Judah; and of Maachah, the Daughter of Abſalom. 2 Chron. xi. 20.

VI. SHELOMITH, Son of Zichri, a Deſcendant of Eliazar the Son of Moſes, Keeper of the Treaſures of the Temple. 1 Chron. xxvi. 26.

SHELOMOTH, or Salemoth, Son of Izhari, and Father of Jahath. 1 Chron. xxiv. 22. perhaps the ſame as Shelomith IV.

SHELUMIEL, or Salamiel, Son of Zuriſhaddai, Prince of the Tribe of Simeon. Numb. i. 22. vii. 36, 37. x. 19. He came out of Egypt at the Head of fifty-nine thouſand, three hundred Men, that carried Arms, and made his Offering to the Tabernacle in his Order, as Head of his Tribe.

SHEM, or Sem, Son of Noah. He Gen. vi. 10. was born in the Year of the World 1558, before the Deluge 98 Years, before Chriſt 2442, before the vulgar Era 2446. We think he was younger than Japheth, and older than Ham [a]. He enter'd into the Ark with Noah his Father; and when the good old Man was overtaken with Wine, and was found lying naked in his Tent, [b] Shem and Japheth cover'd him, nor would ſee any thing in him that was indecent. When Noah awoke, he conferr'd his Bleſſings upon Shem, ſaying; Let the Lord God of Shem be bleſſed, and let Canaan be the Slave of Shem. The greateſt Prerogative of Shem was, that from his Race the Meſſiah was to proceed, and the Worſhip of the true God was to be preſerved among his Poſterity. Being an hundred Years of Age he begat Arphaxad, and died at the Age of ſix hundred Years, in the Year of the World 2158, before Chriſt 1842, before the vulgar Era 1846. The Poſterity of Shem obtain'd for their Portion the beſt Provinces of Aſia.

The Jews aſcribe to Shem the Theological Tradition of the Things that Noah had learn'd from the firſt Men. Shem communicated them to his Children, and by this means the true Religion was preſerved in the World. The Rabbins think alſo, that Shem ſet up an Academy or School of Religion upon Mount Tabor. They ſay that Shem is the ſame as Melchizedek, and that he himſelf had been at the School of Methuſelah before the Deluge for ſeventy-eight Years; that he gave Abraham the whole Tradition, the Ceremonies of the Sacrifices of Religion, according to which this Patriarch afterwards offer'd his Sacrifices. Lastly, the Hebrews think, that he taught Men the Law of Justice, and the manner of reckoning Months and Years, and the Intercalations of the Months. They pretend God gave him the Spirit of Prophecy an hundred Years after the Deluge, and that he prophesy'd for four hundred Years, tho' with little Succefs, because Men were become so corrupted. Methodius says, that he dwelt in the Island of the Sun, that he invented Astronomy, and that he was the first King that govern'd upon the Earth. They impute to him the Foundation of Septa, a Maritime City of Africa, of Salernum in Italy, and of Salem in Judea. Those that confound him with Melchizedek, ascribe to him Psalm cx. The Lord said unto my Lord, &c. and a Book of Physick which is found in an Hebrew Manuscript in the Library of the Elector of Bavaria. See P. Scipio Sgambat, Archiv. vet. Testament. l. 1. p. 165.

Shem had five Sons, Elam, Asher, Arphaxad, Lud, and Aran, who peopled the finest Provinces of the East. See their several Articles. The principal Design of Moses being to give the History and the Laws of the Jews; he has carry'd the Genealogy of Shem farther than that of the other Sons of Noah, which did not directly belong to his Subject. 'Tis pretended that Noah committed to Shem the Care of the Body of Adam, which he sent and buried upon Calvary. 'Tis said also, he deposited his Will with him, by which he distributed the whole Earth among his three Sons. There is reason to conjecture, that the Heathen have confounded him with Typhon a famous Giant, or hurtful Deity. Ham is Jupiter, Japheth is Neptune, and Shem is Pluto. III. SHEMAIAH, a Prophet of the Lord. He was sent to Rehoboam King of Judah, [a] with this Message from God; Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your Brethren the Children of Israel; return every Man to his House, for this thing is from me. They hearkened therefore to the Word of the Lord, and returned to depart, according to the Word of the Lord.

Some Years after this, [b] Shishak King of Egypt came into Judea, made War against Rehoboam, and took the best Places of his Kingdom. Then the Prophet Shemaiah told Rehoboam and the Princes of Judah, who had retired into Jerusalem, that they had forsaken the Lord, and now he in his Turn would forsake them, and deliver them into the Hands of Shishak King of Egypt. The King and the Princes being in a Consternation, answer'd; The Lord is Just. God seeing their Humiliation, sent his Word to Shemaiah, saying; Since they have humbled themselves under my Hand, I will not entirely destroy them, I will give them some Succour, and my Wrath shall not be poured out upon Jerusalem; but I will bring them into Subjection to this foreign Prince, that they may know the Difference between my Government, and that of the Kings of the Earth. Shishak enter'd into Jerusalem, and contented himself with taking away what was most valuable in the Treasuries of the Temple, and the King's Treasury, and so return'd into Egypt. The same Prophet Shemaiah wrote the History of King Rehoboam. 2 Chron. xii. 15.

XVI. SHEMAIAH, the Nehelamite, a falſe Prophet that lived at Babylon while Jeremiah was in Judea, and at Jeruſalem. Jeremiah having ſent ſome Prophecies to the captive Jews at Babylon, Shemaiah the Nehelamite wrote back to the People of Jeruſalem, to decry this Prophet; and to Zephaniah Prince of the Prieſts, and to the reſt of the Prieſts, to reproach them for not ſeizing Jeremiah, and not putting him in Priſon, as one poſſeſſed with a Spirit of falſe Prophecy. Jeremiah in his Turn wrote back to all the People who were in Captivity at Babylon, in ſuch Terms as theſe. Since Shemaiah the Nehelamite has ſpoke to you in my Name, tho' he had no Commiſſion from me; and ſince he has given you falſe Hopes; this is what the Lord ſays againſt Shemaiah the Nehelamite, and againſt his Poſterity; None of his Race ſhall ever ſit in the midſt of the People, and he ſhall have no Share in the Happineſs that I ſhall ſhower down upon my People. SHEMEBER, or Semeber, King of Zeboïm; he was one of the five Kings that were defeated by Chedorlaomer and his Allies, Gen. xiv. 2, &c. In the Year of the World 2092, before Chriſt 1908, before the vulgar Era 1912.

SHEMER, Semer, or Somer. This is the Name of him that ſold the Mount of Somer to Omri King of Iſrael, upon which he built the City of Samaria. [a] The Name of Semer or Somer is alſo given to the Mountain itſelf. See SAMARIA.

Shemer, or Shomeron, was a very agreeable and fruitful Mountain, and of an advantageous Situation, about twelve Miles from Dothaim, twelve from Merrom, and four from Atharoth, [b] upon which King Omri built the City of Samaria. Before that Time this Mountain was famous for the Battle between Abijah King of Judah, and Jeroboam King of Iſrael. Abijah at the Head of four hundred thouſand Men, encamped upon the Mountain of Shemer; Jeroboam was as ſtrong again, having an Army of eight hundred thouſand Men, all ſtout and choſen Soldiers. The King of Judah had a mind to harangue Jeroboam and his People, who were encamped in the Plain, to endeavour to bring them to their Duty, by repreſenting to them the Guilt and Injuſtice of the Cauſe they were engaged in. While he was thus ſpeaking, Jeroboam, having the ſuperior Army, caus'd his Troops to file off, in order to ſurprize Abijah, and to hem him in behind. But he perceiving this, cry'd out to the Lord, and the Prieſts ſounded the Trumpets. At the ſame Time the whole Army of Judah put forth loud Cries, and the Lord ſpread a Pannick Terror into the whole Army of Iſrael, who betook themſelves to Flight. The Children of Judah then falling upon them, kill'd ſo great a Number of them, that they counted five hundred thouſand of thoſe that were routed. Abijah purſu'd his Victory, and took ſeveral Cities from the Enemy; and after this time Jeroboam was no longer in a Condition to make any Enterprizes upon Judah. (2 Chron. xiii.)

☞ Here is a famous Battle between two Armies, whoſe Numbers would be almoſt incredible, did we not find Armies ſtill more numerous in Scripture. (Obſervations upon the Defeat of Jeroboam by Abijah, at the Foot of Mount Shemer. 2 Chron. xiii. 3, &c.)

Here are all the Subjects of two Kings, that were able to bear Arms, aſſembled together to decide the Fate of two Kingdoms, and to finiſh a War at one Stroke. The Jews were all Soldiers; for their perpetual Wars, either with neighbouring Nations, or among one another, had extreamly inured them to War. Therefore the Scriptures tell us, that they were all brave and valiant. However, if we are to believe Abijah in his Harangue, the Army of his Enemy was compoſed of a Multitude of worthleſs, wicked, and ſcoundrel People.

It is a Hardſhip upon the Subjects of two neighbouring Kingdoms, that they muſt be obliged to expoſe their Lives, to forſake their Wives, Children, and Eſtates, to engage in an uncertain Enterprize, only to decide the Quarrel of two wicked and paſſionate Princes. It is a ſad thing to have ſuch Governors, and that a People muſt hazard all that is near and dear to 'em, to gratify the Ambition of ſuch a King as Jeroboam was; who to his Wickedneſs and Impiety, had join'd Cowardice and want of Experience. For it is the Completion of Misfortune, and a certain Loſs of an Army, when it is commanded by a General who has neither Courage, Honour, Conduct, nor any other Quality that makes him fit to command. Neither the Superiority nor the Valour of his Troops are of any Effect; that they know him, and deſpiſe him is enough to make them deſpair of a Victory.

Abijah was not the ſtronger; for he had but four hundred thouſand Men againſt Jeroboam, who had an Army of eight hundred thouſand. So that being no very expert Warrior, he had need of all his Rhetorick to encourage his Army. He did not fail to make uſe of the Topick of Religion; for that was the ſureſt Means of raiſing the Courage of a People, who were full of Zeal for the Worſhip of the Lord, and who had not yet forgot the Miracles that had been done in their Favour, tho' they were always ungrateful and unworthy of them, as may be obſerved here; eſpecially in the Caſe of Jeroboam and his Subjects, who were plunged in Wickedneſs and Idolatry.

When two Generals have taken a Reſolution to fight, they are not long without finding an Occaſion. Tho' Abijah was inferior to his Enemy, yet he did not intend to decline Battle; for he knew very well what kind of Perſon he had to do with. He encamped upon Mount Shemer, or Zemaraim, which is in Mount Ephraim. There theſe two Armies faced one another, and Abijah made an Oration to them. It is a very good one, and full of Craft. I call it crafty, becauſe he pretends to be very devout, and delivers it like an Apoſtle, tho' he was not much better than Jeroboam as to Matter of Religion. It was no hard thing to impoſe upon the Jews, who were generally ſimple and ignorant People; but to awaken them and provoke their Courage, it is enough that Religion be the Theme; they were immediately fired with Zeal for the Lord, and ſo he gave them the Victory. Their King had hardly any Share in it, if it is of him that the ſacred Author ſpeaks, when he ſays; And the Lord ſtruck him, and he died. (2 Chron. xiii. 20.)

When Abijah thus turn'd Preacher, and ſeem'd as if he were inſpired, the Audience muſt have been very attentive to hear him. For while he was ſpeaking, Jeroboam endeavour'd to ſurprize him with an Ambuſh behind him, which encompaſs'd him before he was aware. Jeroboam had cauſed ſome Troops to file off behind the Hills, in order to ſurround him with the Multitude of his Army, and afterwards to attack him in Front and in Rear, and to cut off all Retreat from him. That he might have Time for ſuch a Motion as this, Abijah's Speech muſt have been longer than what is deliver'd in Holy Writ. However this be, the Troops of Jeroboam ſet themſelves in Array, and began to extend themſelves, and to get behind the Army of Abijah.

There is Nobody but will imagine, when they read this Piece of Management of Jeroboam's, that I am not very conſiſtent with my ſelf, when I deſcribe him as a meer Ignoramus in the Art of War, and that this Stratagem of his, confutes my Opinion of him; ſince Abijah turns Haranguer, while his Enemy lays a Snare for him, into which he was very like to have fall'n. I cannot accuſe Abijah of Imprudence in this, tho' I do not think he was very skilful in martial Affairs. But I find here a Piece of Cunning, which was not however the Reſult of any deep Reaſoning. Perhaps he might not be the Author of this Management himſelf, but God thought fit to bring it about, in order to give the Victory to that ſmaller Number of his People who were faithful to him; and intended that the Stratagem of Jeroboam ſhould be the Occaſion of his Defeat, and of the Loſs of his reprobate Army.

That this may be the better apprehended, it muſt be explain'd as clearly as poſſible, and in a few Words. Does it appear, at firſt Sight, that this Ambuſh of Jeroboam was a ſubtle, crafty, and profound Artifice? Not at all. For by thus dividing his Forces, to ſurround and encompaſs ſo large an Army on all Sides, he makes half of his Troops uſeleſs, by making a Motion that could not be done in a ſmall Time. What he has left to oppoſe his Enemy in Front, is no more than what his Enemy has to oppoſe him. And ſuch a Motion of a ſtronger Army, which is intended to encompaſs a weaker, ſerves only to make them deſperate, that is, they are reduced to a Neceſſity either to conquer or to die.

And when Judah looked back, behold, the Battle was before and behind. When Abijah perceived that he was almoſt incloſed, and that his Enemy requir'd more Time to compleat his Stratagem, than was neceſſary for him to fall on with equal Force, he takes the Advantage of ſo favourable an Opportunity. And they cried unto the Lord, and the Prieſts ſounded with the Trumpets. Then the Men of Judah gave a Shout; and as the Men of Judah ſhouted, it came to paſs that God ſmote Jeroboam and all Iſrael before Abijah and Judah; that is to ſay, Judah made a vigorous Aſſault, and pierced through every every thing that durst oppose them. The Slaughter must be very dreadful, since there fell down slain of Israel, five hundred thousand chosen Men. Thus was this Kingdom almost depopulated by the Sword, in the Cause of a Prince who had neither Courage, Experience, nor Religion.

SHEM-HAMPHORASH, or Schemhamphorasch, [a] that is, the Name manifested, or the Name distinguished; the Name Jehovah, the incommunicable Name, which the Jews never pronounce, and do not so much as know the true Pronunciation of it. See the Article Jehovah.

SHEMIDA, or Semida, Son of Gilead, of the Tribe of Manasseh. He was Head of the Family of the Shemidaites. Numb. xxvi. 32. 1 Chron. vii. 19.

SHEMINITH, or Seminith; [b] this Hebrew Word is found before some of the Psalms, and is generally translated by Octava. But it signifies either an Instrument of eight Strings, or the eighth Band of the Musicians of the Temple.

SHEMIRAMOTH, or Semiramoth, a Levite, a Porter of the Temple. 1 Chron. xv. 18.

שן Shen, dens.

SHEN, or Sen; this Hebrew Word signifies a Tooth; 'tis also given to a sharp Rock, naked as a Tooth. See 1 Sam. viii. 12. Samuel erected a Stone between Mishpat and Sen, to serve as a Monument of the Victory that the Hebrews had obtain'd over the Philistines, and to this Stone he gave the Name of the Stone of Assistance.

SHENAZAR, or Senneser, Son of Jeconiah King of Judah. 1 Chron. iii. 18.

שני Shene, Dentes, Scopuli.

SHENE, or Sene; this Word is plural, and signifies Teeth or Rocks, Jonathan and his 'Squire penetrated into the Camp of the Philistines, by passing between two Rocks, one of which was call'd Bozez, and the other Seneh. 1 Sam. xiv. 4.

SHEPHAM, or Sephama, a City of Syria, which was the Eastern Limit of the Land of Promise. Numb. xxxiv. 10, 11. This might be the same as Apamea.

I. SHEPHATIAH, Saphatia, or Sephatia, Son of David and Abital. 2 Sam. iii. 4. 1 Chron. iii. 3.

II. SHEPHATIAH, Son of Reuel, and Father of Meshullam. 1 Chron. ix. 8.

III. SHEPHATIAH, one of the Men of Might that came over to David at Ziklag. 1 Chron. xii. 5.

IV. SHEPHATIAH, Son of Maachah. He was Chief of the Tribe of Simeon, in the Time of King David. 1 Chron. xxvii. 16.

V. SHEPHATIAH, one of the Sons of King Jehoshaphat. 2 Chron. xxi. 2.

VI. SHEPHATIAH, Son of Hattil. His Posterity returned into Judea, after the Captivity of Babylon. Ezr. ii. 57. They were to the Number of three hundred and seventy-two. See Nehem. vii. 9.

VII. SHEPHATIAH, Son of Mahalaleel, of the Race of Pharez.

VIII. SHEPHATIAH, Son of Mattan; he was one of those that accused Jeremiah of intimidating the People by his doleful Predictions. Jerem. xxxviii. 1.

SHEPHELAH, or Sephela; [c] this Hebrew Word signifies an open Field, or a Plain. The Greek and Latin Interpreters generally translate it by a Plain; but the Seventy have sometimes preserved the Word Sephela [d]. Eusebius and St. Jerome inform us, [e] that even in their Time, the whole flat Country, which is to the North and West about Eleutheropolis, was call'd Sephela. Simon Maccabæus fortify'd the City of Adida in Sephela, or in the Plain of which we are speaking.

SHEPHERDS, or Pastors. When the Patriarch Joseph invited his Father and Brethren to settle in Egypt, he bid them tell Pharaoh, that they were Shepherds or Breeders of Sheep, that they might have the Land of Goshen assign'd to 'em for an Habitation; Because, says Joseph, the Egyptians have an Abomination to Shepherds. Quia detestantur Ægyptii omnes Pastores ovium. Now it is inquir'd, whence it is that the Egyptians had such an Abhorrence to Shepherds? There are two Reasons generally assign'd for this. First, because the Hebrews who bred Sheep, made no Difficulty to kill and eat them, or to sacrifice them to their Gods. Whereas the Egyptians worshipped Sheep and Goats, and all Creatures of that Kind, and would have thought it a great Crime to kill or sacrifice them. Diodorus Siculus says, that Sheep are in very great Veneration throughout all Egypt. And Strabo assures us, that they sacrificed them only in the Nome or Province of Nitria, or in that of Mendese, according to Herodotus.

(Gen. xlvi. 31, 32, 33, 34.) (Diodor. Sicul. l. 1.) (Strab. l. 17.) (Herodot. l. 2. c. 42.)

Tacitus observes, that the Israelites sacrificed Sheep and Lambs, as if it were to insult Jupiter Ammon, a Deity of the Egyptians; and that they kill'd Oxen without any Scruple, to affront the Ox Apis. Cæso ariete velut in contumeliam Ammonis; Bos quoque immolatur, quem Ægyptii Apim colunt. But all this does not prove, that the Employment of Oxkeepers or Neatherds was of itself odious to the Egyptians, as the Scripture insinuates it was: On the contrary, this Office would have recommended them to the Esteem of the People, if they had not kill'd these Animals; as in the Nome of Mendese, the Keepers of Goats were honour'd, because the Goat was the favourite Deity of that Canton.

Keepers

We must therefore seek for another Cause of the Aversion which the Egyptians Joseph. cont. App. l.1.p.1042. express'd towards Shepherds. Manetho relates, that an Army of Strangers from the Coasts of Arabia, or from the East, made an Irruption into Egypt, and finding it without Defence, they subdued it, and had a Succession of Kings in Lower Egypt for about five hundred and eleven Years. After which the Kings of Thebais, and of the rest of Egypt, maintain'd a long War against them, and at last drove them out of the Country. The Race of these Princes was call'd Hic-sos, that is to say, Kings of Shepherds. Some, says Manetho, affirm, they were Arabians; but we find in other Books, that they were not Kings, but Captives. For in Egyptian, the Word Hic, when pronounced as Hoc, signifies a Captive. This Reason of the Hatred of the Egyptians against Shepherds appears to be more plausible. But whatever the Motive was, the Fact itself is beyond Controversy. See before the Article EXODUS.

Abel was a Keeper of Sheep, according Gen. iv. 2. to Moses, and the greatest Number of the antient Patriarchs follow'd the same Profession. When Men began to multiply, and to be distinguish'd from one another by following different Employments, Jabal, Son of Lamech bigamus, and his Gen.iv.20. Wife Adah, was acknowledg'd as Father and Founder of Shepherds and Nomades, whose Dwelling was in Tents: He was the Father of such as dwell in Tents, and of such as have Cattle. God sometimes Isa. xl. 11. takes the Name of the Shepherd of Israel; in the same manner as Kings, both in Scripture and antient Writers, are distinguish'd by the Title of Shepherds of the Eze.xxxiv. 23. People. And the People forsaken, are com-Numbers xxvii. 17. pared to a Flock without a Shepherd. Isaiah says, that the Messiah shall feed his 1 Kings xxii. 17. Flock. God calls Cyrus his Shepherd. Judith xi. 15. The Prophets often inveigh against the Isa. xl. 11. Shepherds of Israel, against the Kings, Isa.xliv.28. who feed themselves, and neglect their Flocks; who distress them, treat them ill, seduce them, and lead them astray. See to this purpose Ezekiel xxxiv.

The Lord says, that he brought through the Red-sea his People with their *Shep-*Isa.lxiii.11. herds; that is, having Moses, Aaron, and the Chief of the People at their Head. Mic. v. 5. Micah says, that the Lord shall raise up seven Shepherds over his People, and an eighth to govern the Land of Assyria, and to bring from thence the People of Israel. We take these seven or eight Shepherds to be the seven Princes confederate with Darius Son of Hystaspis, who killed Smerdis the Magian, who had possessed himself of the Empire of the Persians, after the Death of Cambyses.

Zechariah makes mention of three Shep- Zech.xi.8. herds that the Lord had cut off in one Month. These three Shepherds were Aaron, Moses, and Miriam, who died in the Wilderness; not indeed within the Space of one Month, but who all had the Sentence of Death passed upon them in a Month, and died at a little Distance of Time from one another. This is the Explication of the Rabbins. Others think that these three Shepherds were David, Adonijah, and Joab, who did indeed die all in the Space of one Month. Others are of Opinion, they were the three Brethren Maccabees, Judas, Jonathan, and Simeon, who died within a Month of Years, that is to say, within thirty Years. We think it may be understood of the three Roman Emperors who succeeded Nero, that is, Galba, Otho, and Vitellius, who were put to Death by their own Subjects within the Space of a Year and some Days. Afterwards the Prophet makes God speak in this manner; And I took my Staff, even Zec.xi.10. Beauty, and cut it asunder. This Rupture happen'd when the Jews revolted against the Romans; and when these attack'd them, took Jerusalem, destroy'd the Temple, and dispersed the Nation of the Jews.

The same Zechary received Order from the Lord, saying, Take unto thee yet the Zech. xi. 14, 15. Instruments of a foolish Shepherd; for, says the Lord, I will raise up a Shepherd in the Land, which shall not visit those that be cut off, &c. The Shepherds having forsaken Jesus Christ, who was their lawful Shepherd, were deliver'd up to foolish Shepherds, who misused them, and plunged them into Calamities. These Shepherds are the Roman Emperors, Successors of Tiberius, under whom Jesus Christ was crucified. Caligula succeeded Tiberius, Claudius, Caligula; and Nero succeeded Claudius. Every one knows the Characters of those Princes; that they were truly foolish Shepherds, mad, wicked, and cruel.

The Messiah is often represented under the Name of a Shepherd. I will set up Jer. xxiii. 4, 5. Shepherds over them, which shall feed them. I will raise unto David a righteous Branch. Isaiah speaks in the same manner. He Isa. xl. 11. shall feed his Flock like a Shepherd, he shall gather the Lambs with his Arm, and carry them in his Bosom, and shall gently lead those that are with young. And Zechariah says, Awake, O Sword, against my Shepherd, Zec. xiii. 7. and against the Man that is my Fellow, saith the Lord of Hosts. Smite the Shepherd, and the Sheep shall be scattered, and I will turn mine Hand upon the little ones. Jesus Christ makes the Application of this Matth. xxvi. 31. Passage to what should happen at his Passion. He takes upon himself the Title of of a good Shepherd, who gives his Life for his Sheep. St. Paul calls him the great Shepherd of the Sheep; and St. Peter gives him the Appellation of Prince of Shepherds.

John x. 11, 14, 15. Heb. xiii. 20. 1 Pet. v. 4.

God gives up to his Ministers the Tythe of Oxen, of Sheep, and of Goats, which pass under the Crook of the Shepherd, or are under his Care. Or he makes an Allusion to what is done when the Tythe was given to the Priest: The Shepherd stands with his Hook at the Entrance of the Sheep-fold, and as the young Kids or Lambs go out of the Fold, he counts them, and retains the Tenth for the Priest or the Levite.

Lev. xvii. 32.

Amos says, that the Beauty of Shepherds is in Mourning during a dry Season. Luxerunt speciosa pastorum. The Hebrew says according to the Letter, the Huts or Abodes of the Shepherds are in Mourning. These are what are elsewhere call'd Cameræ Pastorum, or Habitacula Pastorum. St. Jerome, speaking of the City and Desart of Tekoah, says, that one cannot so much as see there the Hovel of the Shepherds, being like subterraneous Ovens, which the Africans call by the Name of Mapalia.

Amos i. 1. 2 Kings x. 12. Jerom. præf. in Amos.

In the Description that our Saviour gives us of a good Shepherd, he says, that he lays down his Life for his Sheep; that he knows them, and they know him; that they hear his Voice, and follow him; that he goes before them; that no one shall force them out of his Hands; that he calls them by their Name; that the Hireling, or the bad Shepherd, forsakes the Sheep, and the Thief enters not by the Door of the Sheep-fold, but climbs over by another Way.

SHEPHI, Sephi, or Shepho, Son of Shobal, of the Race of Seir. 1 Chron. i. 38. Gen. xxxvi. 23. one of the antient Kings of Idumea.

SHEPHUPHAN, or Sephuphan, or Shupham, Son of Bela, and Grandson of Benjamin. 1 Chron. viii. 5.

SHERESH, or Sares, Son of Peresh, and of Machir. 1 Chron. vii. 16.

SHEREZER, or Sarasar. See SHAREZER.

SHESH. This is a pure Hebrew Word. It is generally translated by Flax.

שש Shesh, Linum.

SHESHACH, or Sesach; by this Name Jeremy hints at Babylon. Jeremiah was to cause all Nations to drink of the Cup of the Fury of the Lord, and the King of Sheshach shall drink after them. And elsewhere, How is Sheshach taken, and how is the Praise of the whole Earth surprized! How is Babylon become an Astonishment among the Nations! But how comes it that he gives this Name to Babylon? St. Jerome [a] thinks he does it out of Caution, that he might not provoke Nebuchadnezzar, who then was laying Siege to Jerusalem. We take Sheshach to be a Pagan Deity, who was chiefly worshipped at Babylon. He gives this City the Name of its tutelar Deity, as he says elsewhere, Babylon is taken, Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in Pieces. Bel and Merodach were the Gods of the Country. Sheshach was probably the Moon. At Babylon [b] they celebrated Feasts call'd Sacæa, which had a great Resemblance to the Saturnalia of the Romans. The Servants then acted the Part of Masters. Strabo says, they were celebrated in Honour of Anais, which is the same as Diana, or the Moon. See our Commentary upon Jeremiah xxv. 26. and Gerard John Vossius, de origine & progressu Idololat. l. 2. c. 22.

SHESHEAI, Sesai, or Sasai, a Giant, a Son or Descendant of Anak, who was drove away from Hebron with his Brethren Ahiman and Talmai, by Caleb the Son of Jephunneh. Josh. xv. 14.

SHESHBAZZAR, or Sassabasar. When King Cyrus restor'd to the Jews the sacred Vessels of the Temple of Jerusalem, which had been carried away to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar; he had an Account taken of them, and committed them to Sheshbazzar Prince of Judah. The greatest Part of Interpreters think, that Sheshbazzar is the same as Zerubbabel, and that he bore the Name of Sheshbazzar among the Babylonians, as Daniel had that of Belshazzar. The Scripture says, that Zerubbabel laid the Foundation of the Temple, and it says the same of Sheshbazzar. Others will have Sheshbazzar to be a Persian Officer, sent to govern the Jews. It is not very certain that Zerubbabel had this Government conferr'd upon him. The Grecians give to Sheshbazzar, or (as they call him) Sammanaser, the Quality of Governor of Judea [c]. See the Commentators upon Ezr. i. 8.

SHEVA, or Siva, Secretary to King David, 2 Sam. xx. 25.

SHEW-BREAD. The Hebrew [d] signifies literally, Bread of Faces, or, of the Face. They thus call'd the Loaves of the Bread, that the Priest of the Week put every Sabbath-day upon the Golden Table which was in the Sanctum before the Lord. These Loaves were ſquare, and had four Faces, as the Rabbins ſay: They were cover'd with Leaves of Gold: They were twelve in number, and repreſented the twelve Tribes of Iſrael. Every Loaf muſt be of a conſiderable Bigneſs, ſince they us'd two Tenth-deals of Flour for each, which are about ſix Pints. (Lev. xxiv. 5, 6, 7.) They ſerved them up hot on the Sabbath-day in the Preſence of the Lord, and at the ſame time took away the ſtale ones, which had been expos'd for the whole Week, and which could not be eaten but by the Prieſts alone. If, in an extraordinary Caſe, David thought he might eat of them, nothing but urgent Neceſſity could exempt him from Sin. (Mat. xii. 4. 1 Sam. xxi. 4.) This Offering was accompany'd with Frankincenſe and Salt. (Lev. xxiv. 7. Lev. xxiv. 7. Lev. ii. 13.) Some Commentators think, [a] that Wine was added to it alſo. The Frankincenſe was burnt upon the Golden Table every Saturday, when they ſet on freſh Loaves.

They are not agreed as to the Manner in which the Loaves of Shew-bread were ranged upon the Altar of the Sanctum. Some think there were three Piles of them, of four in each. Others will have them to be in two Piles of ſix in each; and it is hard to conceive it could be otherwiſe, or that a Table of two Cubits in Length, and one in Breadth, could allow Room enough for twelve Loaves, in each of which were ſix Pints of Flour. The Rabbins ſay, that between every two Loaves there were two Golden Pipes, ſupported by Forks of the ſame Metal, whoſe Ends reſted upon the Ground, to convey Air to the Loaves, and to hinder them from growing mouldy.

(Lev. xxiv. 8.) Moſes ſeems to ſay, that the Iſraelites furniſhed the Loaves that were preſented before the Lord; but this ought to be underſtood only, as it was the People that paid the Firſt-fruits and Tenths to the Prieſts, which was the chief of their Income. And of theſe Tenths and Firſt-fruits they took wherewith to make the Shew-bread, and whatever elſe belong'd to 'em to furniſh, in the Service of the Temple. In the Time of David, [b] the Levites of the Family of Kahath had the Care of the Shew-bread, or, as it is call'd in the Chronicles, the Bread of Ordering. Probably it was the Levites that baked and prepared them; but it was the Prieſts that offer'd them before the Lord, as it is ſaid in another Place, Sacerdotes autem ſuper panes propoſitionis. (1 Chron. xxiii. 28. Vulg. Hieron. in Mal. i.) However, St. Jerom ſays, from a Tradition of the Jews, that the Prieſts ſowed, reaped, ground, kneaded, and baked the Shew-bread: Panes propoſitionis, quos juxta traditiones Hebraicas, ipſi ſerere, ipſi demetere, ipſi molere, ipſi coquere debeatis. See the Commentary upon 1 Chron. ix. 33. & xxiii. 28.

There are ſtill ſeveral Rabbinical Remarks about theſe Loaves, which the Commentators take care to glean: They were placed ſix in a Pile one upon another, upon a Salver of Gold; and above they were cover'd with another Golden Salver, upon which ſtood a Golden Cup full of the pureſt Incenſe. They were made without Leven, and kneaded with Oil. Toſtat ſays, that they were baked on a Baking-pan of Gold. Others maintain, they were baked in an ordinary Oven, but one that was kept for this Uſe only; and that the Wood uſed on this Occaſion was choſen on purpoſe, the ſoundeſt and cloſeſt that could be got. Beſide theſe Loaves was a Veſſel full of excellent Wine; this Veſſel was cloſe ſtopt, that the Wine might not grow ſour, and it held the fourth-part of an Hin; that is, ſomething above two Pints.

When the Loaves were changed, the Wine was poured out as a Libation before the Lord. The Veſſel or Cup that was fill'd with Salt near theſe Loaves was of Gold, and cover'd, as well as the Veſſel of Incenſe, that no Duſt or any other thing ſhould defile it. Theſe Loaves were eaten in the Temple by the Prieſts of the Week; and it was not allow'd to take them out of the Temple, to eat them at Home.

SHIBBOLETH, or Sibboleth, an Hebrew Word which ſignifies an Ear of Corn, Spica. (שבלת Shibboleth, Spica.) After Jephtha had beat the Ammonites, the Men of Ephraim were jealous of this Advantage obtain'd by the Tribes beyond Jordan, [c] and came in Arms into the Country, complaining heavily that they had not been call'd to have a Share in this Expedition. Jephtha anſwer'd them with much Moderation; which yet did not reſtrain the Ephraimites from uſing Words of Contempt towards the Men of Gilead, telling them, they were only Fugitives from Ephraim and Manaſſeh, a kind of Baſtards that belong'd to neither of the two Tribes; in a Word, that they were only By-blows of Joſeph. But this Reproach was very falſe, ſince Machir the Father of Gilead was Manaſſeh's own Son, Numb. xxvi. 29. It may be doubted, whether theſe Invectives happen'd before or after the Combat, but to Blows they went, wherein the Men of Gilead had the Advantage, and kill'd a great Number of the Children of Ephraim. After which, they ſet Guards at all the Paſſes of Jordan; and when any Ephraimite that had eſcaped out of the Battle came to the Water-ſide, and deſired to paſs over, they asked him if he was not an Ephraimite? If he ſaid, No; they bid

SHIELD. In Scripture, God is often
Gen. xv. 1. call'd the Shield of his People: I am thy Shield, says God to Abraham. The Psalmist Psal. v. 12. says, Thou, Lord, wilt bless the Righteous; with Favour wilt thou compass him, as with a Shield. Princes and Great Men are also 2 Sam. i. 21. call'd the Shield of the People. Saul is
Ps. xlvii. 9. call'd the Shield of Israel. The Shields of the Earth belong unto God, or are in his Dependance. The Septuagint have it; The strong Gods of the Earth have greatly exalted themselves.

They hung their Shields upon Towers for Ornaments, and to make use of upon Occasion. The Tower of David was adorn'd with a thousand Shields, which hung round about it. There were to be found Arms
Cant. iv. 4. of all kinds: Mille clypei pendent ex ea, omnis armatura fortium. The Maccabees adorn'd the Front of the Temple with 1 Macc. iv. 57. Shields which they hung thereon: Ornaverunt faciem templi coronis aureis & scutulis. They took them down from thence when there was Occasion to march against Isai. xxii. 6. the Enemy: Parietem nudavit clypeus. Ezekiel says, that the Persians, the Lydians, and the Lybians had hung up their Shields
Ezekiel xxvii. 10. in Tyre, for an Ornament to that City: Clypeum & galeam suspenderunt in te, pro ornatu tuo.

The common Materials of a Shield were Wood: It was cover'd with Leather, with Plates of Gold, or Brass. Sometimes they were made all of Gold, or Brass. Those that Solomon made were of massy Gold. Shishak King of Egypt took these away,
1 Sam. xvii. 45. and Rehoboam made others of Brass to serve
Nahum ii. 3. in their stead. Goliah's Shield was of Brass. Nahum describes the Shields of the Chaldeans as all bright and sparkling. The Psalmist says, that God shall cause Peace to reign among his People, and that they shall throw their Shields into the Fire: Et scuta comburet igni, Psal. xlv. 10. These Shields therefore were of Wood.

SHIGGAION, Shigionoth, or Sigaion [c]. This Word is found in the Hebrews, in the Title of Psalm vii. and in Habakkuk iii. 1. The Septuagint have translated it by Psalm, or Canticle; but Aquila and Symmachus have render'd it by Ignorance, or Sins of Ignorance. Theodotion, in Habakkuk, has it, for voluntary Sins [d]; but there is reason to doubt whether his Text be very intire. However it be, some think Shiggaion is an Instrument of Musick; others, that it is a certain Air or Tune, to which this Psalm was sung. Others translate it, The Error of David; others, The Secret of David; others, The Delight of David; and others again, The Disquiet of David. We think it ought to be translated, A Song of Trouble, or, A Song of Consolation of David. The Arabick Word Schaga, signifies to be in Trouble; and the Hebrew Word Schagah, or Shagah, to rejoyce, to be comforted. See our Preface to Psalm vii.

SHION, or Seon, a City of the Tribe of Issachar, Josh. xix. 19. The Hebrew [e] reads it, Shion, or Sion. Eusebius says, [f] that even in his Time there was a Place call'd Seon, at the Foot of Mount Tabor.

SHILLEM, or Sallem, or Sellem, or Gen. xlvi. 24.
Shallum, the fourth Son of Naphtali, Head of the great Family of the Shallumites, Numb. xxvi. 49.

I. SHILOH. This Term is famous among Interpreters and Commentators upon Scripture. It is found Gen. xlix. 10. to denote the Messiah. The Patriarch Jacob foretells his Coming, in these Words; The Sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a Law-giver from between his Feet, until Shiloh come, and unto him shall the Gathering of the People be. The Hebrew Text Gen. xlix. 10. עד כי יבא שלה reads, Donec veniat Shilo. All Christian Commentators agree, that this Word ought to be understood of the Messiah, of Jesus Christ: But all are not agreed about its literal and grammatical Signification. Saint Jerom, who translates it by Qui mittendus est, manifestly read Shiloach, Sent, instead of Shilo. The Septuagint translate, [g] Until the coming of him to whom it is reserved; or, Till we see arrive that which is reserved for him.

† It

It must be own'd, that the Signification of the Hebrew Word Shiloh is not well known. Some translate, The Sceptre shall not depart from Judah, 'till he comes to whom it belongs [a]. Others, 'Till the Coming of the Peace-maker [b], or, the Pacifick, or, of Prosperity. Shalah signifies, to be in Peace, to be in Prosperity. Others, 'Till the Birth of him who shall be born of a Woman, who shall conceive without the Knowledge of a Man [c]. Otherwise, The Sceptre shall not depart from Judah, 'till its End, its Ruine; 'till the Downfall of the Kingdom of the Jews. Some Rabbins have taken the Name Silo, or Shilo, as if it signify'd the City of this Name in Palestine. The Sceptre shall not be taken away from Judah, 'till it comes to Shiloh [d]; 'till it shall be taken from him, to be given to Saul at Shiloh. But in what Part of Scripture is it said, that Saul was acknowledg'd as King, or consecrated, at Shiloh? If we would understand it of Jeroboam the Son of Nebat, the Matter is still as uncertain. The Scripture mentions no Assembly at Shiloh, that admitted him as King. A more modern Author [e] derives Shiloh from Shalah, which sometimes signifies to be weary, to suffer; 'till his Labours, his Sufferings, his Passion shall happen.

But not to amuse our selves about seeking out the grammatical Signification of Shiloh, it is sufficient for us to shew, that the ancient Jews are in this Matter agreed with the Christians: They acknowledge, that this Word stands for the Messiah the King. 'Tis thus that the Paraphrasts Onkelos and Jonathan, that the ancient Hebrew Commentaries upon Genesis, and that the Talmudists themselves explain it. If Jesus Christ and his Apostles did not make use of this Passage, to prove the Coming of the Messiah, 'twas because then the Completion of this Prophecy was not sufficiently manifest. The Sceptre still continu'd among the Jews; they had still Kings of their own Nation, in the Persons of the Herods; but soon after the Sceptre was intirely taken away from them, and has never been restored to them since.

The conceited Jews seek in vain to put forced Meanings upon this Prophecy of Jacob; saying, for example, that the Sceptre intimates the Dominion of Strangers, to which they have been in Subjection, or the Hope of seeing, one Day, the Sceptre, or supreme Power, settled again among themselves. It is easy to perceive, that all this is contrived, to deliver themselves out of Perplexity. In vain likewise they take Refuge in certain Princes of the Captivity, whom they pretend to have subsisted beyond the Euphrates, exercising an Authority over their Nation little differing from Absolute, and being of the Race of David. This pretended Succession of Princes is perfectly chimerical; and tho' at certain Times they could shew a Succession, it continu'd but a short Time, and their Authority was too obscure, and too much limited, to be the Object of a Prophecy so remarkable as this was. This Affair is treated on in its due length in the Commentaries upon Genesis, and in such Authors as have expresly discoursed upon it. See our BIBLIOTHECA SACRA annex'd to this DICTIONARY.

II. SHILOH, or Silo, a famous City of Josh. xviii, four Leagues Distance from Shechem, according to Eusebius; or ten Miles, according to St. Jerom. It was in Acrabatena, according to both of 'em. In St. Jerom's time Shiloh was intirely ruin'd [f], and nothing remarkable was found there, but the Foundation of the Altar of Burnt-offerings, which was there when the Tabernacle was set up there. It was at Shiloh that Joshua assembled the People, [g] to make the second Distribution of the Land of Promise. 'Twas in the same Place that the Tabernacle of the Lord was set up, when the People were settled in the Country, Josh. xix. 51. The Ark and the Tabernacle of the Lord continu'd at Shiloh, from the Year of the World 2560, when it was set up by Joshua, to the Year of the World 2888; before Christ 1112, before the Vulgar Era 1116, at which time it was taken by the Philistines, under the Administration of the High-priest Eli. Upon the Medals of Shechem, or Neapolis, we see Silenus represented; which should make us think, that it was rather at Shechem than at Shiloh, that they might expect to find the Tomb of this Demi-god.

III. SHIMEA, Son of Uzza, and Father of Haggia, a Levite, 1 Chron. vi. 30. There were others of this Name, of whom nothing particular is known.

IV. SHIMEA, Brother of David, and Father of Jonathan and Jonadab. This Jonadab is he that advised Ammon the Son
2 Sam. xiii. 3. of David to pretend himself sick, that his Sister Tamar might be sent to him, with whom he was desperately in love. Jonathan was one of the Heroes of King David's Army, 2 Sam. xxi. 21.

I. SHIMEI, or Semei, and Rei, 1 Kings i. 8. See REI.

II. SHIMEI, Son of Gog, Father of Micah, of the Tribe of Reuben, 1 Chron. v. 4.

III. SHIMEI, Son of Zachur, of the Tribe of Simeon, 1 Chron. iv. 27. He had sixteen Sons, and six Daughters.

IV. SHIMEI, Son of Libni, a Descendant of Kobath, 1 Chron. vi. 29.

V. SHIMEI, Son of Gera, a Kinsman of Saul's. When David was obliged to retire from Jerusalem, [a] because of the Rebellion of his Son Absalom, Shimei met him at Bahurim, began to curse him, and to throw Stones at him, saying, Come out, come out, thou bloody Man, and thou Man of Belial: The Lord hath returned upon thee all the Blood of the House of Saul, in whose stead thou hast reigned, and the Lord hath delivered the Kingdom into the Hand of Absalom thy Son; and behold, thou art taken in thy Mischief, because thou art a bloody Man. Then Abishai the Son of Zeruiah says to the King, Why should this dead Dog curse my Lord the King? Let me go over, I pray thee, and take off his Head. David reply'd to him, What have I to do with you, ye Sons of Zeruiah? So let him curse, because the Lord hath said unto him, Curse David. Who shall then say, Wherefore hast thou done so? Thus Shimei continued to persecute him, walking along the Side of the Hill, throwing Stones, and raising the Dust as the King passed along.

2 Sam. xix. 16, 17. In the Year of the World 2981. But when David return'd to Jerusalem, after the Defeat and Death of Absalom, Shimei made haste to come with the Men of Judah, and accompany'd with a thousand Men of Benjamin, he went before David. And when this Prince had passed over Jordan, he came and threw himself at his Feet, desiring him to forgive and forget the Fault he had committed, when he loaded him with his Curses. Then Abishai the Son of Zeruiah expostulated in an angry manner; Shall not Shimei be put to Death for this, because he cursed the Lord's Anointed? But David disapproved of Abishai's Zeal, and promised Shimei, with an Oath, that he should not be put to Death. And in truth, he suffer'd him to live in Peace as long as he liv'd himself; but as it was an Example of dangerous Consequence, to let such Crimes go away with Impunity, and as he ought to give an Example of Justice to his People; before his Death, he recommended to Solomon, [b] not to let Shimei go unpunish'd, but to take Revenge for it, according as his Discretion should furnish him with an Occasion.

When Solomon therefore ascended the Throne, [c] he caus'd Shimei to come to him, and said to him, Build thee an House in Jerusalem, and dwell there, and go not forth thence any whither: For it shall be, that on the Day thou goest out, and passest over the Brook Kidron, thou shalt know for certain, that thou shalt surely die: Thy Blood shall be upon thine own Head. Shimei obey'd the King, and came and dwelt at Jerusalem. But it happen'd three Years after, [d] that some of his Slaves run away from him, and took Sanctuary with Achish King of Gath. Shimei having Notice of it, went after them, and brought them back to Jerusalem. The King being inform'd of this Journey, caus'd Shimei to come before him, and said to him; Did not I command you not to go out of Jerusalem? and did not I assure you, that the Day you went out, you should be put to Death? At the same time he gave Orders to Benaiah the Son of Jehoiada to fall upon him, and kill him. Thus the Vengeance of the Lord at last found out this wicked Man.

VI. SHIMEI, of Romathi. He had the Superintendance of King David's Winecellars. 1 Chron. xxvii. 27.

I. SHIMRON, Simeron, Semeron, or Semram; a City of Zebulun, Josh. xix. 15. See SIMONIAS. This Name is also given to the Mountain Somer, upon which the City of Samaria was built.

II. SHIMRON, Son of Issachar. Numb. xxvi. 24. He was Father of the Family of the Shimronites. 1 Chron. vii. 1. Gen. xlvi. 13.

SHIMSHAI, or Samsai, a Secretary or Scribe, who with Rehum the Chancellor wrote to King Artaxerxes against the Jews, that were lately returned from their Captivity, (Ezr. iv. 8.) in the Year of the World 3470, before Christ 530, before the vulgar Era 534. This Artaxerxes to whom they wrote, was no other than the Magian, who usurped the Empire after the Death of Cambyses. He is call'd Oropastes by Trogus, and Smerdis by Herodotus.

SHINAB, or Sennaab, King of the City of Admah, one of the four Cities that were burned by Fire from Heaven, because of the Crimes of its Inhabitants [a]. Shinab, with the other Kings of Pentapolis, were overcome by Amraphel, and his Allies [b].

SHINAR, or Sennaar, a Province of Babylonia, where the Tower of Babel was undertaken to be built. (Gen xi. 2.) Calneh was built in the same Country. (Gen. x. 10.) Amraphel, King of Shinar, was a potent Prince in the Time of Abraham. (Gen. xiv. 1.) Daniel says, that Nebuchadnezzar carried away the sacred Vessels of the Temple of Jerusalem, and put them in the Temple of his God, in the Land of Shinar. (Dan. i. 2.) There is great Probability that the Mountains of Singares, or Zagras, as well as the City and River of Singare, take their Name from Shinar, Sennaar, or Sengar. (שנער Sinnaar or Singar.)

SHIPHRAH, or Sephora, one of the Midwives of Egypt, who preserved the Hebrew Children. (Exod. i. 15.) Some think she was an Egyptian Women, but 'tis more likely she was an Israelite. See PUAH.

SHIPTAN, or Sephtam, Father of Kemuel, of the Tribe of Ephraim. Numb. xxxiv. 24.

SHISHA, or Sisa, Father of Ahiah. This Ahiah was Secretary to King Solomon. 1 Kings iv. 3.

SHISHAK, or Sesac, King of Egypt *; he declared War against Rehoboam King of Judah, in the fifth Year of the Reign of this Prince. [c] The King of Egypt had twelve thousand Chariots of War, and sixty thousand Horse, with an innumerable Multitude of People that follow'd him out of Egypt, the Country of Lubim of Sachim, and of Cush. He enter'd into Judea, and made himself Master of the strongest Places of the Country, advancing to Jerusalem. Then the Prophet Shemaiah came to Rehoboam and the Princes of Judah, who had shut themselves up in Jerusalem, and said to them; Thus saith the Lord, As you have forsaken me, so have I delivered you up into the Hands of King Shishak. The King of Judah and the Princes with him were in great Consternation, and only reply'd, The Lord is just. God seeing their Humiliation, said to Shemaiah; Since they have humbled themselves under my Hand, I will not destroy them, and will not let all my Fury fall upon Jerusalem by the Arms of Shishak; but they shall be subject to him, that they may know what Difference there is between being under my Discipline, and that of the Kings of the Earth.

Shishak therefore enter'd into Jerusalem, but withdrew soon after, taking with him the Treasures of the Lord's House, and those of the King's Palace. He carry'd away with him so much as the golden Bucklers that Solomon had made. The Rabbins are of Opinion, that the chief Motive that prevail'd with this Prince to declare War against Rehoboam, was because he had a great mind to the Ivory Throne that Solomon had made, and with which he was charm'd. This is the same Shishak [d] to whom Jeroboam fled, towards the End of Solomon's Reign; and when this King of Egypt came into Judea, he did no Harm to Jeroboam's Territories. Perhaps Jeroboam might have persuaded him to invade Rehoboam's Country. Till the Time of Shishak the Scripture always mentions the Kings of Egypt by the general Name of Pharaoh, which signifies King. Shishak is the first whose proper Name is mention'd. Chronologists are not agreed as to the Order that Shishak should obtain among the Egyptian Dynasties. Some will have him to be the same as Sesonchis; others [e] Sesostris, or Sethosis. Usher thinks him to be Sesonchis, and places the Beginning of his Reign to be in the Year of the World 3026, be-

In the Year of the World 2092, before Christ 1918, before the vulgar Era 1922. * This Shishak or Sesac, according to Sir Isaac Newton, in his Chronology of antient Kingdoms amended, was the greatest Conqueror, and the most celebrated Hero of all Antiquity, being the Son of Ammon, or the Egyptian Jupiter, and known to the Greeks by the Name of Bacchus, Osiris, and Hercules; was the Belus of the Chaldeans, the Mars or Mavors of the Thracians, &c. He made great Conquests in India, Assyria, Media, Scythia, Phœnicia, Syria, Judea, &c. His Army was at last routed in Greece by Perseus; which Disgrace, together with the Attempts of his Brother Danaus, to usurp his Kingdom in his Absence, obliged him to return into Egypt, in the ninth Year of his Expedition. From hence he drove his Brother Danaus, who took Refuge in Greece, and was there celebrated by the Name of Neptune, Japetus, Typhon, Python, &c. SHITRAI, or Setrai, the Sharonite, the Superintendant of King David's Shepherds and Flocks, who fed them in Sharon. 1 Chron. xxvii. 29.

SHITTIM, or Sethim, [a] sort of precious Wood, of which Moses made the greatest Part of the Tables, Altars, and Planks belonging to the Tabernacle. St. Jerome generally keeps the Hebrew Word Shittim in his Translation. The Septuagint have render'd it by incorruptible Wood. The same St. Jerome says, [b] that the Shittim Wood grows in the Desarts of Arabia, that it is like White-thorn as to its Colour and Leaves, but not as to its Bigness; for the Tree is so large, that it affords very long Planks. The Wood is hard, tough, smooth, without Knots, and extreamly beautiful; so that the Rich and Curious make Screws of it for their Presses. This Kind of Wood does not grow in cultivated Places, nor in any other Place of the Roman Empire, but only in the Solitudes of Arabia. He says likewise in another Place, [c] that the Shittim Wood resembles White-thorn, and that it is of an admirable Beauty, Solidity, Strength, and Smoothness. 'Tis thought he means the black Acacia, which is (they say) the only Tree that is found in the Desarts of Arabia. [d] It is so hard and solid, as to become almost incorruptible. It is of the Colour of a Lote-tree when it is cut, and Planks are taken from it of twelve Cubits long. Its Branches don't rise up in height; its Leaves are round and large, like those of a Pear-tree, of the Colour of Soot underneath, and green above.

Prosper Alpinus says, [e] that the Acacia is call'd Sant by the Egyptians; that it is found in Egypt, in Places at a Distance from the Sea; that it is very common about Mount Sinai, upon the Mountains which border upon the Red-sea; that it grows about as tall as a Mulberry-tree; that its Trunk is of the Thickness of a Plum-tree; that its Bark is black, rough, and cover'd with very sharp Thorns. Its Leaves are oblong, small, and cut very short. It bears a pale, yellowish, or white Flower. The Male bears no Fruit, but is all close set with Thorns. The Female bears Fruit twice a Year, and has much fewer Thorns. This, they say, is the true Description of the Acacia of Arabia. Thevenot, [f] speaking of the Acacia of Arabia, says, that it is not thicker or higher than our common Willows, but its Leaves are very fine, and it is very thorny, and a Gum is taken from it, which the Arabians call Akakia. But it is plain from St. Jerome's Description of the Shittim Wood, that it cannot be this Acacia of Prosper Alpinus and Thevenot. Yet very credible Authors affirm, that no other Trees grow in the Desarts of Arabia. See our Commentary upon Exodus xxv. 5.

SHOBAB, or Sobab, Son of David and Bath-sheba. 2 Sam. v. 14.

SHOBACH, or Sobach, General of the Army of Hadarezer, King of Syria, who commanded the Troops that his Master had brought from beyond the Euphrates. But David gave him Battle at Helam, obtain'd a compleat Victory over him, [g] and mortally wounded him.

SHOBAI, or Sobai, of the Race of the Priests. He return'd from Babylon with Zerubbabel. Ezr. ii. 42.

SHOBI, or Sobi, Son of Nahash, of the City of Rabbah, otherwise call'd Philadelphia. He came with Barzillai to meet David when he fled from Absalom, and brought him Refreshments [h].

SHOES. We have already spoke of 'em under the Article HOSING of the Hebrews; and the Title SANDALS may also be consulted. Pythagoras would have his Disciples wear Shoes of the Barks of Trees; probably that they might not wear such as were made of the Skins of Animals; for they refrain'd from the Use of every thing that had Life. The Antients had Shoes which wholly cover'd their Feet, like ours; and others that only defended the Soals of their Feet, with Leather Bands above, that left a Part of the Foot uncover'd. The first Sort was call'd Calceus, Mulleus, Pero, Phæcasium; the latter Caliga, Solea, Crepida, Baxea, Sandaleum. Antiently among the Romans their Shoes were generally of crude or untann'd Leather. None but those that had discharged the Office of Edile, were to wear the Mulleus, which was of Leather dress'd with Allum, and of a red Colour. 'Tis said that the Roman Senators also wore Shoes of dress'd Leather, but of a black Colour. The Roman Women wore their Shoes pretty much as the Men. Juvenal speaks of the Moon, or Lunula, which was wore upon black Shoes. Ælian. var. hist. l. 7. c. 11. Juven. Sat. 7.

And in the Deſcription of the Arms of Goliah, we 1 Sam. xvii. 6. find he had Boots of Braſs. Ocreas æreas habebat in cruribus. Homer likewiſe gives them to his Heroes; ſome had Boots of Braſs, others of Copper, and thoſe of Hercules were Tinſel. Vegetius ſays, that the Romans wore Iron ones. The Roman Soldiers alſo put many Nails under their Shoes, they were very ſharp, and in great Iſidor. origin. l. 19. cap. ult. Numbers. Feſtus calls them clavata calceamenta. Joſephus ſpeaks of a Roman Joſeph. de bello. l. 7. c. 3. Soldier of ſuch extraordinary Boldneſs, that he would let himſelf fall along the Walls of the Temple, becauſe the Nails he had under his Shoes, which the reſt of his Comrades had alſo, would make him ſlide down. In the Army of Antiochus the Great, Luxury was grown to ſuch a pitch, that moſt of the Soldiers themſelves Valer. Maxim. Bellon. obſerv.l. 3. c. 44. had golden Nails under their Shoes. We are aſſured that in the Eaſt, at this Day, all the People, both Rich and Poor, even the Wives of the Great Turk himſelf, and of his Baſhas, wear Iron Plates at the Heels and Toes of their Pumps.

SHOPHAN, or Sophan, Zaphon, or Zaphan, a City of the Tribe of Gad. Numb. xxxii. 35. Joſh. xiii. 27. The Jews ſay, that it was afterwards call'd Amath.

SHOSHANNIM, or Soſanim; [a] This Title is read before Pſal. lxix. and lxxx. The Seventy tranſlate it by thoſe that ſhall be changed: St. Jerome and Aquila by the Lilies: Symmachus by the Flowers. We think Shoſhannim to ſignify an Inſtrument of ſix Strings, or a Song of Rejoycing. See our Preface to the Title of Pſalm xlv. Eructavit cor meum verbum meum.

SHOULDER. To give or lend his Shoulder, for bearing of a Burden, ſignifies Gen. xlix. 15. to ſubmit to Servitude. Iſſachar bowed his Shoulder to bear, and became a Servant unto Tribute. The Preacher adviſes his Pupil, to ſubmit his Shoulder to the Yoke Ecclus. vi. 26. of Wiſdom. The Meſſiah has deliver'd his People from the Rod, or from the Iſa. ix. 4. Yoke to which they were ſubject: Virgam Bar. ii. 21. humeri ejus ſuperaſti. Baruch adviſes the Captive Jews at Babylon to ſubmit their Shoulders to King Nebuchadnezzar, that they might live at Eaſe under his Government. In a contrary Senſe, the Scripture calls that a rebellious Shoulder, humerum Nehem. ix. 29. recedentem, that will not ſubmit to the Yoke; and thoſe that bear it together with joint Conſent, ſervientes humero uno. Zephan. iii. 9.

Heretofore they wore the Marks of Honour and Command upon their Shoulders. Job deſires of God to decide his Cauſe; Job xxxi. 36. Surely I would take it upon my Shoulder, and bind it as a Crown to me. Iſaiah ſays, Iſa. ix. 6. that the Meſſiah ſhall bear the Mark of his Government upon his Shoulder. Factus eſt principatus ejus ſuper humerum ejus. God promiſes Eliakim the Son of Hilkiah, to give him the Key of the Houſe of David, and to lay it upon his Shoulder; ſo he ſhall open, and none ſhall ſhut, and he ſhall ſhut, and none ſhall open.

To be born upon Shoulders, ſometimes ſtands for a kind of Honour and Diſtinction. God ſays, that when he ſhall bring back his People from the Captivity of Babylon, he will give a Signal to the People, and they ſhall bring thy Sons in their Iſai. xlix. 22. Arms, and thy Daughters ſhall be carried upon their Shoulders.

Sometimes, on the contrary, this denotes great Weakneſs, ſome great Diſgrace. God commanded Ezekiel to make a Breach in the Wall, and carry out thereby on his Shoulder, in the Night time, to repreſent Ezek. xii. 6, 7. the taking of Jeruſalem, and the Captivity of the King and his People. Iſaiah and Iſa. xiv. 25. Baruch, to ſhew the Impotence of Idols, Bar. vi. 3. ſay, that Men are obliged to carry them on their Shoulders.

I. SHUAH, Sua or Sue: Brother of Caleb. 1 Chron. iv. 11. His Son was Mehir.

II. SHUAH, of the Tribe of Aſher. She was Daughter to one call'd Heber. 1 Chron. vii. 32.

III. SHUAH, the ſixth Son of Abraham and Keturah. Gen. xxv. 2.

IV. SHUAH, the Daughter of Hirah the Adullamite, and Wife to the Patriarch Judah. She was Mother of Er, Onan, and Shelah. The Jews have a Tradition, Geneſis xxxviii. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c. that Shuah inſpired into her Sons the deteſtable Reſolution, of preventing Tamar to become a Mother by them. See the Articles TAMAR and ER.* The Teſtament of the twelve Patriarchs calls this Woman Bathſhuah, Daughter of Barſhan, King of Adullam. She could not endure Tamar, becauſe ſhe was an Aramean, and not a Canaanite as ſhe was. When Judah knew that Shuah had prevailed with her Son Shelah to marry a Canaanitiſh Woman, he gave her his Curſe, and ſhe fell down dead, as a Puniſhment for the Wickedneſs in which ſhe had involved her three Sons.

SHUAL, or Saal, a Country in the Land of Israel, where the Philistines made an Invasion in the Time of Saul. (1 Sam. xiii. 17.) The Situation of this Canton of Shual, or the Fox, is not known.

SHUBAEL, or Subael, Son of Amram, and Father of Jehdeiah. 1 Chron. xxiv. 20. Shubael, with his twelve Sons, possess'd the thirteenth Order among the four and twenty Families of the Levites. 1 Chron. xxv. 20.

SHUHAM, or Suham, Son of Hushim, and Grandson of Dan. (Gen. xlvi. 23.) Shuham was Head of the Family of the Shuhamites. Numb. xxvi. 42.

SHUHITE, or Suite. Bildad the Shuhite, (Job ii. 11.) the Friend of Job, was probably a Descendant from Shua, Son of Abraham and Keturah, mention'd above. The Hebrew reads Shuchite, or Son of Shuach, which is the same as Shuah, according to our way of reading.

SHULAMITE, or Sulamite. This is the Name that is given to the Spouse in the Canticles, as by way of Allusion to the Name of Solomon; Salomon, Salomith, Sulamite, or Shulamite, the Spouse of Solomon. (Can. vi. 13.) The Hebrew Text, and the best Latin Editions, read Sulamitis; but the greatest Part of the old Books have Sunamitis, as it were a Native of Sunam, or Shunem.

SHUMATHITES, or Sematheans, one of the six Families or Colonies, that came out of Kirjath-jearim. (1 Chron. ii. 53.) The Shumathites are probably the Inhabitants of Shema, a City of the Tribe of Judah. Josh. xv. 26.

SHUNAMMITE, or Sunamite, a Daughter or Woman born at Shunem. This Surname was given to Abishag the Spouse of David, whom he marry'd in his old Age, to keep him warm. (1 Kings i. 2, 15. ii. 17, 21, 22.) It was given also to the Hostess of Elisha, who was used to entertain this Prophet when he came to Shunem. (2 Kingsiv. 12, 25, 36.) Lastly, it is given to the Spouse in the Canticles, because of a corrupt Reading, which has Sunamitis instead of Sulamitis. (Can. vi. 13. vii. 1.) See SHULAMITE.

SHUNEM, or Sunam, a City belonging to the Tribe of Issachar. Josh. xix. 18. The Philistines encamped at Shunem, in the great Field or Plain; and King Saul encamped at Gilboa. (1 Sam. xxviii. 4.) Eusebius places Shunem, or Sulem, five Miles from Tabor, towards the South. Elsewhere he says, that there is a Place call'd Sanim, in Acrabatene, in the Neighbourhood of Sebaste, or Samaria.

SHUNI, or Suni, the third Son of Gad, Head of the Family of the Sunites. Gen. xlvi. 16. Numb. xxvi. 15.

SHUPHAM, or Sephupham, Son of Bela, and Grandson of Benjamin. 1 Chron. viii. 5.

SHUR, or Sur, a City in Arabia Petræa, which has given its Name to the Desart of Shur in the same Country. Gen. xvi. 7. Exod. xv. 22. 1 Sam. xv. 7. xxvii. 8. Ptolemy speaks of the City of Suratte in Arabia Petræa.

I. SHUSHAN, or Susan: This Hebrew Word signifies a Lilly. (על שושן Hal Shushan.) It is read before the Psalm, O God, thou hast cast us off, &c. Which is the sixtieth in the Hebrew, and the fifty-ninth in the Latin Psalter. We think Shushan to be the Name of a musical Instrument of six Strings. The Vulgate reads, Pro his qui immutabuntur.

II. SHUSHAN, Susan, or Suses, the Capital City of Susiana, or of the Country of Elam, that is of Persia. (Dan. viii. 2.) Daniel always gives it the Name of the Palace: I was at Shushan in the Palace; because the Kings of Chaldea had there a Royal Palace. From the Time of Cyrus, the Kings of Persia took up the Custom of passing the Winter here, and the Summer at Ecbatana [a]. The Winter was very moderate at Shushan, but the Heat of the Summer was so great, that the very Lizards and Serpents that were surpriz'd by it in the Streets, were even burnt up by the Heat of the Sun. (Strab. l. 15.) The Hebrew Word Shushan [b] signifies a Lilly. This City stands upon the River Ulai. 'Twas in this City, and upon this River, that Daniel had the Vision of the Ram with two Horns, and the Goat with one Horn, &c. in the third Year of the Reign of Belshazzar [c].

'Twas also in this City of Shushan, or Suses, that the History of Esther happen'd. 'Twas here that Ahasuerus, or Darius the Son of Hystaspes, generally resided and reign'd. [d] Pliny says, he rebuilt Shushan, that is, that he enlarg'd and adorn'd it, l. 6. c. 27. Nehemiah was also at Shushan, when he obtain'd from King Artaxerxes Permission to return into Judea, and to repair the Walls of Jerusalem. [e] Benjamin of Tudela, and Abulfarage, place the Tomb of Daniel at Chuzestan, which is the antient City of Shushan, the Capital of the Province of Elam.

This City at this Day among the Persians goes by the Name of Tousther or Schousther, and is the Capital of Kusistan. King Sapor caus'd a Digue of a prodigious Height to be rais'd there, to make the River Choaspes to ascend. [f] The Tarikmontekeb says, that the Tomb of the Prophet Daniel was still to be seen there in his Time. Some Persian Historians ascribe the Foundation of this City to Huschenk, Son SHUTHELA, or Suthala, Son of Ephraim, and Father of Bared. He was Head of the Family of the Shuthalhites.

SIBBECHAI, or Sobachai, of the City of Hushathi, one of the Heroes of David's Army. He kill'd the Giant Saph in the Battle fought at Gob, otherwise Gazer. 2 Sam. xxi. 18. 1 Chro. xx. 4.

SIBONITE, or Silbonite, or Sinomite, a Country beyond Jordan, whose Situation is not well known. It might be a Canton, whose Capital was Silbon; but Silbon itself is unknown. Joseph. de Bello, l. 3. c. 2.

SIBRAIM, or Sabarim; a Place which terminated the Land of Promise towards the North. Ezekiel says, that this City was between the Confines of Hamath and those of Damascus. I imagine it to be that which Ismael Abulfeda calls Hovvarin, which he says is a Village of the Country of Ems or Hamath, to the South-East of the City. Ezek. xlvii. 16.

SIBYLS. The Scripture no where mentions the Sibyls; and all that is said of 'em is of so little Certainty, that we think we ought not to spend much Time in treating of them. The Word Sibyl is Greek,[a] according to most Etymologists, and signifies the Counsel of God. The Sibyls among the Pagans were, as they say, what the Prophets and Prophetesses were among the Hebrews. They foretold future Events, and reveal'd important Truths to the People. There are generally reckon'd ten of them: The Cumæan, the Cumanian, the Persian, the Hellespontiacan, the Lybian, the Samian, the Delphian, the Phrygian, the Tiburtine, and the Erythrean.

Clemens Alexandrinus quotes these Words as from St. Paul; Take the Greek Books in your Hands, read the Sibyls, and see what they say of the Unity of God, and how they foretel what is to come, and you will there clearly find the Son of God. Several of the antient Fathers have cited the Verses ascribed to the Sibyls, and have drawn Arguments from them in favour of the Christian Religion. But the wiser and more skilful Criticks of our Days are persuaded, that these Verses were composed afterwards, and were never known to the Sibyls. See in this Matter Blondel on the Sibyls, Casaubon against Baron. Exercit. 1. sec. 10. c. 11. Erasm. Schmith. Dissert. de Sibyllis. M. du Pin. Proleg. to the Bible. Servat. Gallæus, Sibyllina Oracula. Amstelod. 1689. Item Dissertationes in Sibyllis of the same Amstelod. 1688. Cle. Alex. Strom. l. 6.

Plato, Aristotle, Varro, Dionysius Halycarnassæus, Cicero, Livy, all speak of the Sibyls with Honour. Virgil without doubt took out of the Sibylline Verses, what he says concerning the Birth of the Messiah; for one can hardly apply to any other these Verses of his fourth Eclogue. Plato in Phædro. Aristol. de admirandis.

Ultima Cumæi venit jam carminis ætas,
Magnus ab integro sæclorum nascitur ordo,
Jam redit & Virgo, redeunt Saturnia regna,
Jam nova progenies cœlo dimittitur alto, &c.

'Twas from the same Source that Suetonius derived what he says, "That in the "Time of Vespasian there was a constant "and general Opinion propagated through "the whole East, that Fate had decreed, "that about that Time should come forth "out of Judæa, those who should obtain "the Empire of the World". Josephus the Historian, who is known to have lived in the Time of Vespasian, quotes in his History a Passage from the Sibyls, that mention'd the Deluge. Clemens Alexandrinus assures us, that St. Paul in his Preaching sometimes cited the Sibylline Books, and referr'd the Gentiles to them. The antient Fathers of the Church, such as Justin Martyr, Athenagoras, Theophilus of Antioch, Tertullian, Lactantius, Eusebius, St. Jerome, St. Austin, and others, made good Use of them against the Pagans; and the frequent Use they made of them, occasion'd the Name of Sibyllists to be applied to them. Sueton. in Vespasiano. Joseph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 5. Cle. Alex. Stron. l. 6. Vide Orig. l. 7. contra Celsum.

Here is more than enough to justify us, for producing here this short Account of these famous and antient Prophetesses. Their Lives, and the Times in which they lived, are Circumstances not very well known. She that was the most famous of them all, was that to whom the Greeks gave the Name of Erythrea, because she was born at Erythra in Ionia; and because she left her Country, and came to settle at Cumæ in Italy, the Latins gave her the Name of Cumana. Justin Martyr says, "that it was pretended she was by "Extraction of Babylonia, and Daughter "to Berosus the Chaldean Historian; who "coming, 'tis not known how, into Campania, there she gave forth her Oracles, "at a City call'd Cumæ, about six Miles "from Baiæ. I have seen the Place (adds "he) which is a large Oratory cut out of "a Rock, which must have cost much "Labour to make; for it is very well "work'd, and very capacious. There "this Sibyl gave out her Responses, as I "was inform'd by the Inhabitants of the Justin. Martyr, cohortatio ad Græcos.

[a] Σιβύλλα, quasi Σιὸς βύλη; Jovis consilium, Σιὸς pro Διός, Laconicè.

"Place, who preserve the Tradition from "Father to Son. In the middle of the "Grotto they shew'd me three hollow "Places, which were also cut out of the "Rock, where they said she us'd to bathe "herself when fill'd with Water. After "she had dress'd herself, she withdrew "into the most remote Apartment of the "Grotto, which was a kind of Cell cut "also out of the Rock, and there placing "herself upon an elevated Seat, which "jutted out into the middle of the Cell, "she there pronounced her Oracles."

This is what Justin Martyr says of the Sibyl's Cave at Cumæ. We are assured [a], that it was seen in the same Condition till the Year 1539, at which Time there was a great Earthquake that shaked the whole Country of Campania, and at Puteoli threw out from the bottom of the Sea great Mountains of Sand, Gravel, and bituminous Matter, which quite overwhelmed this Cave of the Sibyl. If this of whom we are speaking was Daughter to Berosus the Babylonian, she must have lived after the Reign of Alexander the Great. Virgil places her at the Time of the Siege of Troy, since he makes Æneas to consult her at his coming into Italy. Others place her in the Reign of Tarquinius Superbus, the last King of Rome.

Dionysius Halycarnassensis, Aulus Gellius, Lactantius, [b] and some others relate, that under the Reign of this last Prince, there came a strange Woman to Rome, who offer'd to the King nine Volumes of the Sibylline Oracles, for which she asked three hundred Pieces of Gold. Tarquin refused to give her this Sum, upon which she presently burnt three of the nine Volumes, and for the remaining six she asked the same Sum. Tarquin continuing to refuse her with great Derision, she burnt three more of 'em in his Presence, and still insisted upon having the three hundred Pieces of Gold for the three Volumes that remain'd. A Proceeding so extraordinary as this made Tarquin suspect, that there must be some Mystery in it. He therefore sent to inquire of the Augurs, to know their Opinion about it. They answer'd him, that they found by certain Signs, that what he had so despised was a Present sent him by the Gods; that it was great pity he had not bought the whole nine Volumes, and urged him to give the Woman what she asked for the remaining three. He did so, the Woman deliver'd him the Books, and advised that they might be carefully preserved, as containing the future Destiny of Rome.

After these Words she withdrew, and it was not known what became of her. Tarquin caus'd these three Books to be shut up in a kind of Stone Chest, and to be put into a subterraneous Vault in the Temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, and committed the Care of it to two Persons of the first Quality in Rome; with a Charge to let no body read them, or to take a Copy of them, without express Orders from the King. After the Abolition of kingly Government at Rome, they continued to have the same Regard for these Books as before, and the Romans made of 'em one of their greatest Secrets of Policy, making the People believe, that whatever they judg'd proper to do, was taken out of these Books, which were never consulted or opened but by an express Order of the Senate.

While the Civil War raged between Marius and Sylla, [c] the Fire by chance took hold of the Capitol, and the Sibylline Books were consumed by the Flames. After some Years, when the Capitol was rebuilt, Scribonius Curio, the Consul, proposed to the Senate to restore the Verses of the Sibyls. They were informed that there were some Verses of the Erythrean Sibyl remaining in the City of Erythra, the Place of her Nativity. Three Senators were deputed to go thither, who there made a Collection of about a thousand Greek Verses, which pass'd for the Prophecies of this Sibyl. They brought them to Rome, and at the same Time made several other Collections from several other Places [d]. The whole was laid up in the Capitol instead of those which the Fire had consumed.

But there being several Copies of these Verses to be found, and as every private Person made such Additions to his own Copy as he thought fit; to preserve the Credit of these Books, the Romans forbid all private Persons, upon pain of Death, to keep any Copies of them at all. These Orders were but ill observed, and Augustus, at the Commencement of his Office of Pontifex maximus [e] renew'd the former Prohibitions, and having made a diligent Search after those Copies, and examin'd them strictly, he caus'd all those to be burnt which appeared to have been corrupted, and deposited the others in the Capitol, with those that were there before. Afterwards Tiberius [f] made a new Review of them, and condemned several Volumes to the Flames. And these Sibylline Oracles were still in Vogue till about the Year 399, when they were intirely destroyed.

This is what gave occasion to this Event. Some time before this a Prophecy was handed about in Rome, [a] taken, as they pretended, out of the Books of the Sibyls, in which it was foretold, that the Christian Religion being founded on the magical Sorceries of Peter, should not continue above three hundred and sixty-five Years, after which Time it should sink intirely. This Period fell upon the Year 398, which is the 368 Year from the Ascension of Jesus Christ. Yet the Christian Religion continued then to be as prosperous as ever. The Emperor Honorius therefore, taking Occasion from this Piece of Pagan Malice, gave Orders to Stilico the Year following, to cause all the Books of the Sibyls to be burnt, which was executed in 399. And they pull'd down the Temple of Apollo to its very Foundations, wherein these pretended Prophecies were us'd to be kept.

Yet this has not prevented the appearing of a Collection of Greek Verses in eight Books, which is now to be seen under the Title of the Oracles of the Sibyls. But this is neither the old Book of the Sibyls, known at Rome from the Time of Tarquin, nor the Collection made a little after the Civil Wars of Marius and Sylla, nor that reform'd and purify'd by Augustus. That which we have at present, includes a Part of the Sibylline Oracles, as in the Time of Augustus and afterwards; but the rest is a Rhapsody put together by some Christian, who had a mind to impose upon the Publick by the Name of the antient Sibyls. But he has perform'd it with so little Wit and Discretion, that the Imposture stares one in the Face every Moment. He makes the Sibyl say, for Example, that she was Wife to one of the three Sons of Noah, and that she had lived with him in the Ark during the whole Time of the Deluge. The Author declares himself to be a Christian, in a Passage which begins with these Words; Nos igitur Christi de stirpe creati. He speaks of the Incarnation, of the Birth, of the Circumcision, of the Resurrection, of the Ascension of Jesus Christ, with as much Accuracy as the Evangelists. He describes the Reign of Jesus Christ upon Earth, according to the Notions of the Millinaries. He gives a Succession of the Roman Emperors, according to their Order, from Julius Cæsar down to Antoninus Pius, and to the Adoption of Marcus Aurelius and Lucius Verus. All which prove, that these Books, in the State in which we now have them, were composed about the Middle of the second Age of the Church.

SICARII; thus named from the Latin Word Sica, a Dagger. These were certain Robbers or Assassins, that appeared in Judea some time before the War of the Jews against the Romans. Josephus says, that these Wretches carry'd their Daggers secretly about them, so as not to be perceiv'd, and mixing themselves with the Multitude of People that came to the great Feasts at Jerusalem, they stabb'd whom they thought fit, and then were commonly the first to cry out Murder.

SICERA. They call by this Name any inebriating Liquor; Vinum & Siceram non bibet. The Author of the Vulgate sometimes preserves the Word Sicera; at other times he translates it by Omne quod inebriare potest. St. Chrysostom [b], Theodoret [c], and Theophilus of Antioch [d], who were Syrians, and who therefore ought to know the Signification and Nature of Sicera, assure us, that it properly signifies Palm-wine. Pliny acknowledges, that the Wine of the Palm-tree was very well known through all the East, and that it was made, by taking a Bushel of the Dates of the Palm-tree, and throwing them into three Gallons of Water; then squeezing out the Juice, it would intoxicate like Wine.

The Wine of the Palm-tree is white: When it is drank new, it has the Taste of the Cocoa, and is sweet as Honey: When it is kept much longer, it is strong, and intoxicates like Wine. After long keeping, it becomes Vinegar. See Renaudot's Notes upon the Voyage to China, p. 12.

SICHAR, or Shechem, now call'd Naplouse, a City of the Province of Samaria. See SHECHEM.

The Hebrews give the Name of Sichar to the City of Shechem, by way of Mockery. Sichar, in Hebrew, signifies Drunkenness; and Isaiah, chap. xxviii. 1. calls the Israelites of Ephraim, Sicchorim, or Drunkards: Væ coronæ superbiæ, ebriis Ephraim. This was what gave Occasion to the Jews to change the Name of Shechem into Sichar.

Water

Water and Blood: This Soldier is generally call'd Longinus, and they make a Saint of him. See LONGINUS. St. John does not acquaint us which of his two Sides were pierced. The Arabic and Ethiopic Versions, and the Gospel of the Infancy of Jesus Christ, translated from the Arabic, and some of the Antients, [a] read the right Side; but others think, [b] that he was pierced on his left Side. The Poet Prudentius says, that he was pierced from Side to Side; Per utrumque Latus.

SIDE, a City of Pamphilia. The Senate of Rome wrote to the Inhabitants of Side, in favour of the Jews, desiring them to consider them as Friends and Allies, 1 Mac. xv. 23. In the Year of the World 3865, before Christ 135, before the Vulgar Era 139.

Gen. x. 15. I. SIDON, or Tzidon, the eldest Son of Canaan, and Founder of the very ancient City of Sidon, the Capital of Phenicia.

II. SIDON, or Zidon, a very ancient and famous City, founded by Sidon the eldest Son of Canaan. Strabo places Sidon four hundred Stadia from Berytus, and two hundred from Tyre. (Strabo, l. 16.)

The Name Sidon is commonly deriv'd from the Hebrew or Syrian Word Zada, which signifies to fish. Joshua calls it Sidon the Great, by way of Eminence. From whence some [c] have taken Occasion to say, that in his Time there were two Sidons, a Greater and a Lesser. But no Geographer has made mention of any other Sidon, distinguished from Sidon the Great. Joshua assign'd Sidon to the Tribe of Asher; but this Tribe could never get Possession of it. It is situate upon the Mediterranean, in a fine Country, one Day's Journey from Paneas, or from [d] the Fountains of Jordan: It has a fine Harbour. Abulfeda places it sixty-six Miles, or twenty-two Leagues, from Damascus. This City has been always famous for its great Trade and Navigation. At present it is call'd Zaide. There are extant some ancient Medals of Sidon, whereon are seen ancient Phenician Characters, which are the same as the Hebrew Characters which the Jews made use of before the Captivity of Babylon. The principal Deities of the Sidonians were Baal and Astarte, or the Sun and Moon: They also worshipp'd Hercules. The Hebrews have often fall'n into the Idolatry of the Phenicians, especially after Ahab King of Israel marry'd Jezebel the Daughter of Eshbaal King of the Zidonians. There is often mention made of this City in the Scriptures.

(צדה, Piscari. Josh. xi. 8. — Josh. xix. 28. Judg. i. 31. — 1 Kings xvii. 31.)

Mearab of the SIDONIANS, Maarah Sidoniorum, Josh. xiii. 4. a City probably very near Sidon. Others think it to be a Cavern; for Mearab, in Hebrew, may signify a Cavern. (מערה, Mearah, Caverna.)

SIENE. The Arabian Geographers give the Name of Assuan to the City of Siene, and place it in the Country which they call Al-vahat, where are still to be seen many fine Ruins, which prove that this Province was heretofore very rich and populous. Siene is very small in Compass, but well-peopled, both with its own Inhabitants and Strangers, who carry on a Trade there, on Occasion of the Mines of Gold and Silver, which are not far from thence. 'Tis also said, that the only Mine of Oriental Emeralds, which is known in the World, is to be found in its Territory, which besides abounds in all Sorts of Fruits, altho' it lies under the Tropic. The Mountains of Alaki, and of Giannadel, where are the great Cataracts of the Nile, inclose its whole Territory. The first of these Mountains is to the East of it, and the other to the West. They reckon five small Days Journies from this City to that of Cous, which is more Northerly, and in the Longitude of 61 Degrees, 30 Minutes, and in the Latitude of 24 Degrees, 10 Minutes. They are both in the second Climate. (D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 141.)

SIGIONOTH. See SHIGGAION.

I. SIGN. This Word is taken for any thing that serves to express or represent another thing; as, when the Lord gave to Noah the Rainbow, as a Sign of his Covenant; and when he appointed Abraham the Use of Circumcision, as the Seal of the Covenant he made with him and his Posterity. The Sun and the Moon are appointed by God for Signs and Seasons. (Gen. ix. 12, 13. Gen. xvii. 11. Gen. i. 14.)

II. SIGN is put for a Miracle: Thou shalt do these Signs and Wonders in the midst of Egypt, says the Lord to Moses; and if the Egyptians do not believe the first Sign, they will believe the second, &c. The Word Sign is very frequent in this Sense in Scripture. (Exod. iv. 7, 8, 9. &c.)

III. Signum, a SIGN or Token, is often put for the Proof or Evidence of a Thing: For Example; This shall be a Token (or Sign) unto thee, that I have sent thee. Shew me a Sign, that thou talkest with me, that is, a Proof. What shall be the Sign (or Evidence) that the Lord will heal me? This Acceptation agrees with the first abovemention'd; as also what is said in Gen. iv. 15. And the Lord set a Mark (a Sign) upon Cain; he put a Token upon him, that he might be known. (Exod. iii. 12. Judg. vi. 17. 2 Kings xx. 8.)

IV. The SIGNS of Heaven; the SIGNS of the Magicians; are the Phænomena of the Heavens, the Impostures of Magicians, which they make use of to deceive the Weak: The Lord frustrateth the Tokens (or Signs) of the Liars, and maketh Diviners mad. And elsewhere; Be not dismayed at the Signs of Heaven, for the Heathen are dismayed at them. (Isai. xliv. 25. Jer. x. ii.)

Joseph. de Bello, l. 2. c. 25. SIGO, or Sigoph. Josephus speaks of a City in Galilee by this Name.

SIHON, or Sehon, King of the Amorites, refusing Passage to the Hebrews, and coming to attack them, was himself slain, and his Army routed [a]. Heshbon his capital City was taken, and all the rest of his Dominions were distributed among the Israelites. This War happen'd in the last Year of Moses's Lfe, and some Months before the Israelites enter'd into the Land of Promise; in the Year of the World 2553, before Christ 1447, before the Vulgar Era 1451. Moses observes, that Sihon had made a Conquest from the Moabites of the best Part of the Country he then possess'd, and that he had settled himself in their Place. And 'tis upon this Judg. xi. 12, 13, 14. Account, that in the Time of Jephtha, the Ammonites and Moabites demanded the Country that the Israelites had formerly conquer'd from Sihon, pretending it belong'd to them. But Jephtha return'd Answer, That Moses and the Hebrews having taken it from Sihon, who was then in peaceable Possession of it, and having conquer'd it in a fair War, it belong'd to Israel, and that neither Moab nor Ammon had any Right to it.

Numbers xxi. 21, &c. Deut. ii. 26, &c. Sihon King of Heshbon commanded the Amorites on the other Side Jordan. Moses being desirous that the Israelites should pass through the Country of Sihon, sent Deputies to him, to say to him; "Give us "Leave to pass through your Territories; "we will only go by the High-ways, "without turning aside into the Fields or "Vineyards; we will pay for all our Pro-"visions; we will even buy the Water "we shall drink: Allow us then to cross "over your Country, (as we have been "suffer'd to do by the Children of Edom "that inhabit in Seir, and by the Moabites "that dwell at Ar upon the Arnon) 'till "we arrive at the Banks of Jordan, where "we shall come to the Land which the "Lord has promis'd to put us in Posses-"sion of." But Sihon refus'd them this Passage, and brought together a powerful Army, because the Lord had hardened his Heart. Then the Lord said to Moses; I shall now begin to perform my Promises which I made to my People, by delivering up Sihon to them, with all his Army. This King then, at the Head of his Army, advanced as far as Jahaz, and gave Battle to the Israelites, who cut the whole Army in Pieces, and became Masters of his Territory, from the Brook Arnon, as far as Jabbok, putting all the Inhabitants to the Edge of the Sword, and settling themselves there, as in a conquer'd Country, which the Lord had deliver'd into their Hands.

☞ When a skilful General has a great Design in Agitation, which cannot be executed without passing through a neutral Country, he does not at first send to ask Leave; because too much Civility would make him lie under the Suspicion of Fear. He ought to enter into it first, shew all the Diligence possible, and then send to the Sovereign, to desire his Permission, that he may march his Troops through his Country. This is a Piece of good Policy: But Moses acted otherwise; he first sent Ambassadors to the King of the Amorites, with this peaceable Message, saying; Let me pass through thy Land; we will not turn into the Fields, or into the Vineyards; we will not drink of the Waters of the Well: but we will go along by the King's Highway, until we be past thy Borders: Thou shalt sell me Meat for Money, that I may eat; and give me Water for Money, that I may drink; only I will pass through on my Feet. (Observations upon the Defeat of Sihon by the Israelites, Num. xxi. 23. Deut. ii. 31, &c.)

After so just Proposals as these, if Sihon would not let the Children of Israel pass through his Country, he ought at least to have contented himself with refusing them Passage. It does not appear, that these had either attempted or threaten'd to force their Passage against his Will, and, as the Greeks us'd to say, stooping their Pikes. If therefore he had had no other Design but to hinder them from entring his Country, he ought only to have encamped upon his Frontier, and kept himself upon the Defensive, in case they would have forced him: But thinking himself to be the Braver, and the Stronger, probably because he was at Home, he sets himself at the Head of his Army, and marches out to fight. This War was very unjust on his Side, and even contrary to the Law of Nations; and Sihon was soon punish'd, for his Injustice and Temerity, with the Loss of his Life.

The sacred Authors give us no Particulars of this important Day, which decided the Fate of the Kingdom of Sihon; and Josephus tells us but little more of it: He even seems to palliate the Injustice of Sihon, by saying, that the Israelites took (Jos. Antiq. l. 4. c. 4, 5.)

[a] Numb. xxi. 21, 22. Deut. i. 4, 11, 24, 26, 30. Psal. cxxxv. 11. & cxxxvi. 19.

Arms with Joy, ſet themſelves in Battle-array, and marched againſt their Enemies. Yet the Scripture ſays poſitively, that Sihon gathered all his People together, and went out againſt Iſrael into the Wilderneſs; and he came to Jahaz, and fought againſt Iſrael. (Numbers xxi. 23.) We cannot tell what Strength Sihon might have, nor what was the Number of his Troops; nor are we better inſtructed as to thoſe of the Iſraelites, unleſs we adhere to that Enumeration made of them in the Book of Numbers, (Numbers xxvi.) and which amounted to above ſix hundred and twenty-four thouſand Men. Then it will appear almoſt impoſſible that Sihon ſhould have an Army ſufficient to dare to attack ſuch a formidable Power; and therefore I can only advance ſome Conjectures concerning the Diſpoſition of the Troops of both Armies. We know the Tacticks of the People of Aſia: The Jews who came out of Egypt marſhalled themſelves in Phalanx. In vain ſhould we ſeek for the Original of this manner of Fighting, it lying too far back in the firſt Ages; but it is certain, that the Phalanx of the Jews was diſtinguiſh'd by large Bodies with a very great Depth, each Body being larger or ſmaller, according to the Strength and Ability of the Tribes, becauſe each furniſh'd its Contingent.

The Phalanx of the Greeks, when Philip carry'd it to its higheſt Degree of Perfection, was of ſixteen thouſand Infantry with heavy Arms. This Number compos'd an Army, not including the Cavalry. Philip divided this Phalanx into four Corps, each of four thouſand Men, and each Corps was call'd a Phalanx. (Arrian. de Bello Alex. Mag.) This Diviſion is not obſerv'd to have obtain'd among the People of Aſia, and their military Diſcipline was nothing near ſo perfect as that of the Greeks; they ſet themſelves in Array like theſe, but they left ſeveral ſmall Intervals between, to give a Paſſage for ſuch as brought Orders from the General, and to give Room for the Wounded to retire during the Fight.

The Army of Sihon was therefore ranged in Phalanx, according to the ordinary Cuſtom of thoſe Times. As to the Horſe, ſince the Scripture does not mention them, we only ſupply them by Conjecture. The Jews never had many of theſe, and it was but late that they were admitted at all; for I can obſerve none at the Beginning of the Conqueſt of the Land of Promiſe.

I. SIHOR, or Sichor: This is the Name of the Nile [a]. Sihor, or Shicor, in Hebrew, ſignifies Trouble. The Water of the Nile is generally troubled or turbid. See NILE.

II. SIHOR: This is thought to be a City in the Weſtern Part of the Tribe of Aſher. This Place cannot be far from Carmel. M. Reland imagines, [b] that this may be the City, or the River, of Crocodiles, which Pliny [c] and Strabo place in this Country. Strabo ſays, it is between Ptolemais and the Tower of Straton, or Cæſarea of Paleſtine. The Hebrew reads Shihor-libnath [d]; and we think Libnath to be the white Promontory between Ecdippe and Tyre [e], and that Sihor is a Rivulet of this Canton. Shihor ſignifies Trouble.

SILAS, or Sylvanus, was, according to St. Luke, one of the chief Men among the Brethren; (Acts xv. 22.) which gives Room to judge, that he was of the Number of the Seventy Diſciples. When a Diſpute was rais'd at Antioch, about the Obſervation of the Legal Ceremonies, they choſe Paul, Barnabas, Judas, and Silas, to go to Jeruſalem, to adviſe with the Apoſtles concerning this Queſtion. 'Tis believ'd to be the ſame Silas, who is mention'd by the Name of Sylvanus, in the Title of the two Epiſtles of St. Paul to the Theſſalonians. (Hieron. Grot. Fromond.) St. Peter ſent his firſt Epiſtle by him from Rome, wherein he ſtiles him a faithful Brother. Silas join'd himſelf to St. Paul; and after that Paul and Barnabas parted, on Account of John Mark, Silas follow'd St. Paul, (Acts xv. 37—41. In the Year of Chriſt 51.) and went with him to viſit the Churches of Syria and Cilicia. Thence they paſſed into Lycaonia, into Phrygia, and Galatia; and laſtly, they croſs'd the Sea, and came into Macedonia. The Reader may ſee the Article of St. Paul, who had the chief Part in all theſe Tranſactions.

Being at Philippi, they found a Woman (Acts xvi. 11, 12, &c.) who was poſſeſs'd with a Spirit of Python, from which St. Paul diſpoſſeſs'd her. Upon which, the Maſters of the young Woman were much provoked, for they got great Gains by the Predictions and Oracles the Devil pronounced, by making uſe of her Organs; wherefore they ſeized upon Paul and Silas, dragg'd them before the Magiſtrates, and accuſed them of introducing Cuſtoms among them, that were contrary to thoſe of the Romans. The People flock'd together in a tumultuous manner, and the Magiſtrates gave Orders that Paul and Silas ſhould be publickly whipp'd, and then put into Priſon. In the Night there was a great Earthquake, the Doors of the Priſon open'd, and the Fetters of the Priſoners fell off on their own accord. The Jailor thinking the Priſoners had made their Eſcape, was going to lay violent Hands on himſelf; but Paul call'd out to him, and bid him do himſelf no Harm, for all the Priſoners were ſafe. At this the Jailor was converted, and received Baptiſm, with his whole Family, as has been already related in the Article of St Paul. The Day following, the Magistrates sent Orders to set Paul and Silas at Liberty; but Paul reply'd, that Roman Citizens were not to be us'd thus, and that the Magistrates themselves might come and fetch them out of Prison. These Words of St. Paul give Room to judge, that Silas also might have the Freedom of the City of Rome.

From Philippi they went to Thessalonica and Berea, where they preached Jesus Christ; and St. Paul proceeding from Berea to Athens, he sent Silas thither, who however did not join him again 'till they (In the Year of Christ 52.) met at Corinth; 'twas there they wrote together the two Epistles to the Thessalonians. Silas was very useful to him in (a 2 Cor. i. 19.) preaching the Gospel. The Roman Martyrology places the Feast of St. Silas upon the 13th of July. Ado says, he died in Macedonia, and seems to hint, that it was by Martyrdom. The Greeks improperly distinguish between Silas and Sylvanus, and put both their Feasts upon the 30th of July. There are some that refer to Silas, what St. Paul says to the Corinthians; (2 Cor. viii. 18, 19.) And we have sent with him the Brother, whose Praise is in the Gospel, throughout all the Churches: And not that only, but who was also chosen of the Churches to travel with us, with this Grace which is administred by us, to the Glory of the same Lord, and Declaration of your ready Mind.

Silas and Carpus. 'Tis pretended, that these were the two Disciples sent by John (Matth. xi. 2, 3, &c.) the Baptist to Jesus Christ, to enquire whether he were the Christ or no. Not that he had any Doubt about it, but to give these two Disciples an Opportunity of knowing our Saviour, of being instructed by him, and of being satisfy'd who he was. See Gerhard. Comment. ad Matth. xi. & Baron. Not. in Martyrol. Rom. xiii. Jul. & xiii. Octob.

Concerning the Motive of this Deputation of John the Baptist to Jesus Christ, there are many Sentiments both in ancient and modern Commentators; some thinking, that John had entertain'd some Suspicion about Jesus Christ; others, that it was only his Disciples that doubted of his Mission; others, that John desired Instructions from him, concerning the other Life. To this Purpose, the Reader may consult our Commentary upon the Eleventh Chapter of St. Matthew.

SILENCE. This Word does not only signify the ordinary Silence, or refraining from Speaking; but also, in the Stile of the Hebrews, it is taken for to be quiet, to (Exod. xv. 16. ידמו כאבן) remain immoveable. As for Example; As still as a Stone. The Vulgate has it, Fiant immobiles quasi lapis. (Lam. ii. 18.) Give thy self no Rest; Let not the Apple of thine Eyes cease, i. e. to shed Tears. Sun, stand thou still (Josh. x. 12, 13.) upon Gibeon: Heb. be silent. And the Sun stood still, and the Moon stayed, or were silent, at the Commandment of Joshua.

2dly, Silence is taken for an entire Ruin and Destruction, for a total Subjection. Ar of Moab is laid Waste, and brought to (Isai. xv. 1. ער נדמה) Silence, or, is utterly destroy'd. The Lord our God hath put us to Silence, or, has (Jer. viii. 14.) brought great Calamities upon us.

3dly, Silence is taken for Death and the (Psal. xciv. 17.) Grave: Unless the Lord had been my Help, my Soul had almost dwelt in Silence.

SILK, Sericum. No mention is made of Silk, in the Latin Text of Scripture, but in three Places. Esth. viii. 15. Mordecai being raised up into Haman's Place, went cloathed in a Mantle of Silk *. Ezekiel xxvii. 16. places Silk among the Merchandises that were brought to Tyre. Lastly, St. John, in his Revelation, chap. xviii. 12. speaking of the Downfall of Rome, says, that no longer any Silk shall be seen there, nor the other rich Merchandizes that were formerly brought thither. But the Hebrew Word Buz, which (Esth. viii. 15. תכריך בוץ) in Esther is translated by Sericum, signifies rather the true Byssus, which is a kind of Silk that comes next to the Shell-fish call'd Pinna, of which we have spoke already in the Article Byssus. The Word Ramoth, which in the Vulgate is render'd by Sericum, according to the Chaldee, signifies Precious-stones; according to Aquila, Works of Silk; (Ezekiel xxvii. 16. ראמות) according to modern Interpreters, Coral.

But it is generally thought, [a] that the Hebrew Word Meshi, which in Ezek. xvi. 10. St. Jerom has translated by Subtilia, fine Linen, signifies Silk. The Septuagint have render'd it by Trichapton [b], which some understand of a Web wove with Hair, which Women put upon their Heads, as a kind of Peruke; others, of a Web of Silk, which Women wore upon their Hair. Symmachus translated Meshi by an Head-dress; and Aquila, by flourish'd Work [c]; the Syriac, by a Woman's Dress. All which shew, that the Antients were not well convinced that Meshi signify'd Silk; and that it is very doubtful whether Ezekiel intended to speak of it or no, or that the Scripture has at all made mention of it; unless perhaps in Isaiah, [d] where we find the Hebrew word Shericoth, which St. Jerom has translated by Subtilia; and which others translate by Silk, or fine Flax, or crude Flax, of a yellow or whitish Colour; the Seventy, by divided

Flax;

Flax; Symmachus, by carded Flax. One might imagine that the Word Sericum, Silk, comes from ſorek, which ſignifies yellow, Iſai. v. 7. for ſuch is generally the natural Colour of raw Silk. But in that Paſſage of Iſai. xix. 9. What is meant by they that work in fine Flax? Sherikoth here probably ſignifies the Colour of the Flax.

The ancient Greeks and Romans had but little Knowledge of the Nature of Silk: They imagin'd it to come from the Country of the Seres, a People of Scythia; that a kind of Spider ſpun it out of its own Bowels, wound it with its Feet about little Rods or Branches of Trees, and that theſe Threads of Silk were unravell'd again by ſprinkling it with Water. (Plin. l. 6. c. 17.) Seres lanificio ſylvarum nobiles, perfuſam aquâ depertentes ſylvarum canitiem, ſays Pliny. The Seres communicated their Silk to the Perſians, from whom it paſs'd to the Greeks, and from them to the Romans. But the Perſians and Orientals for a long Time kept the Secret of manufacturing it among themſelves, and would not communicate it to any. 'Tis ſtill unknown by what Means it came, and how it was work'd up in Pliny's Time. Its firſt Appearance in Europe was after the Conqueſts of Alexander the Great; and even then it continu'd to be ſo little known, that it was uſually ſold for its Weight in Gold. About the Beginning of the Reign of Tiberius, a Law was made, which prohibited the Uſe of Silk Garments to Men: (Tacit. l. 2. Annal. c. 33.) Ne veſtis ſeriaca viros fœdaret: None might wear it but Women of prime Quality. Vopiſcus aſſures us, that the Emperor Aurelian refuſed his Empreſs a Silk Gown, which ſhe very earneſtly deſired of him.

The Emperor Juſtinian, being curious to know the true Method of Making Silk, and deſiring to ſave himſelf the Expence of buying it of Strangers, about the Year 555, as we are told, ſent two Monks into the Indies, to inform themſelves in the Silken Manufacture. Theſe Monks, at their Return, made their Report to the Emperor, That it was almoſt impoſſible to tranſport the Silkworms ſo far alive, but that their Eggs might be brought with more Safety. The Emperor ſent them a ſecond time, with a Command to bring ſome along with them. This they did; and the Managing of them ſucceeded ſo well at Conſtantinople, that it was ſoon ſpread over all Europe. They ſet up Manufactures for them at Athens, at Thebes, and at Corinth. For a further Account, the Reader is referr'd to Salmaſius, in his Notes upon Solinus, Tertullian, and the Hiſtoriæ Auguſtæ Scriptores.

SILLA, or Sella. Joaſh King of Judah was aſſaſſinated in Jeruſalem, or near this City, in Beth-millo, or in the Houſe of Millo, which goeth down to Silla, 2 Kings xii. 20. It is not exactly known where this Place of Millo was.

SILLEUS, the Spouſe, or rather Suitor, of Salome, the Siſter of Herod the Great. See SYLLÆUS.

SILOAM, Shiloah, Siloe, or Siloa, a Fountain under the Walls of Jeruſalem, towards the Eaſt, between the City and the Brook Kidron. Epiphanius writes, [a] that God gave this Fountain, at the Interceſſion of the Prophet Iſaiah. But it was in Being a long Time before this Prophet; and there is great Likelihood, that it is the ſame as the Fountain En-rogel, or the Fullers Fountain, which is known in Joſhua, and in the Books of Samuel and the Kings. (Joſh. xv. 7. & xviii. 16. 2 Sam. xvii. 17. 1 Kings i. 9.) The Situation of the Fountain of Rogel to the Eaſt, and below the Walls of Jeruſalem, juſt the ſame as the Fountain of Siloam, convinces us, that it muſt be the ſame Fountain; for there was but one on this Side. Joſephus often ſpeaks of the Waters of Siloe, or Siloam: (Joſeph. de Bello, l. 5. c. 26.) He ſays, that when Nebuchadnezzar beſieged Jeruſalem, this Fountain increaſed its Waters; and that the ſame thing happen'd when Titus laid Siege to the City. So that, whereas before Water could hardly be bought for Money, during the Siege it abundantly ſupply'd the Roman Army, and furniſh'd enough beſide for watering the Gardens.

Iſaiah inſinuates, that its Waters flow'd gently, and without Noiſe: (Iſai. viii. 6.) Forſomuch as this People refuſeth the Waters of Shiloah that go ſoftly, &c. St. Jerom ſays, that Jeruſalem has none, but the Fountain of Siloam, from whence to draw its Water: (Hieron. in Jer. xiv.) And beſides, this Spring did not run always; Uno fonte Siloe, & hoc non perpetuo, utitur civitas. But anciently it was not ſo, at leaſt the Scripture does not give us this Notion of it. St. Jerom himſelf affirms, [b] that the Waters of Siloam made the Valley through which they ran to be very delicious and agreeable, becauſe it water'd the Gardens and Plantations there. Monconis ſays, [c] that the Water of this Fountain is a little brackiſh, and has not a good Taſte. The Rabbins relate, [d] that the Prieſts drank of the Water of Siloam, when they had eat too much Fleſh, to aſſiſt their Digeſtion. The Saltneſs that Monconis mentions might contribute to this.

St. John ſpeaks of the Pool of Siloam, call'd, in Latin, Natatoria Siloe; in Greek, Kolymbethra Siloe, otherwiſe, the Pool of Betheſda. 'Twas a Pool juſt below the Walls of Jeruſalem, towards the Eaſt: Its Waters were ſupply'd by the Fountain of Siloam. Our Saviour ſent the Man that was SILVER. This Metal does not appear to have been in Use before the Deluge; at least, Moses says nothing of it; he speaks (Gen. iv. 22.) only of the Metals of Brass and Iron: But in Abraham's Time it was become common, and Traffick was carry'd on with (Gen. xiii. 2.) this Metal. The Scripture observes, that this Patriarch was rich in Gold and Silver, and that he bought a Sepulchre for his (Gen. xxiii. 15.) Wife Sarah for four hundred Shekels of Silver. This Silver was not coined, according to all Appearance, but was only in Bars or Ingots; and in Commerce it was always weighed. See the Article MONEY.

Gen. xxx. 33. I. SIMEON, Son of Jacob and Leah: He was born in the Year of the World 2247, before Christ 1753, before the Vulgar Era 1757. He was Brother to Dinah by the same Mother; and after Shechem the Son of Hamor had defiled her, in the manner we have said under the Articles DINAH and SHECHEM, Simeon and Levi [a] took Arms, to revenge the Affront, enter'd into Shechem, kill'd all the Men they found there, and brought back their Sister to their Father's House. 'Tis thought that Simeon was one of those who shew'd most Inhumanity to his Brother Joseph, and advised his Brethren to kill him [b]. This Conjecture is founded upon Joseph's keeping him Prisoner in Egypt, [c] and treating him with more Rigour than the rest of his Brethren. Jacob, on his Death-bed, [d] shew'd his Indignation against Simeon and Levi, and cursed the Resentment they shew'd against the Shechemites.: Simeon and Levi are Brethren; Instruments of Cruelty are in their Habitations. O my Soul, come not thou into their Secret; unto their Assembly, mine Honour, be not thou united: for in their Anger they slew a Man, and in their Self-will they digged down a Wall. Cursed be their Anger, for it was fierce; and their Wrath, for it was cruel: I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel.

And in Effect, the Tribes of Simeon and Levi were scattered and dispersed in Israel. As to Levi, he never had any fix'd Lot or Portion; and Simeon received for (Josh. xix. 1, 2, &c.) his Portion only a Canton that was dismembred from the Tribe of Judah, and some other Lands they went to conquer in the Mountains of Seir, and in the Desart of (1 Chron. iv. 27, 39, 42.) Gedor. The Targum of Jerusalem, and the Rabbins follow'd by some ancient Fathers, believe, [e] that the greatest Part of the Scribes and learned Men in the Law were of the Tribe of Simeon: And as these Persons were dispersed throughout all Israel, we see by that the Accomplishment of Jacob's Prophecy, which foretold, that Simeon and Levi should be scatter'd among their Brethren. Judith seems to vindicate this (Judith ix. 2.) Action of Simeon; but she approved only of his Zeal, and not of the other Circumstances of the Action.

The Testament of the twelve Patriarchs intimates, that Simeon died at the Age of One hundred and twenty Years [f]; that he was a Man of an intrepid, implacable, and severe Temper; that he had conceiv'd a strong Aversion against his Brother Joseph, because his Father Jacob loved him better than the rest of his Brethren; that Judah pressing rather to sell Joseph, than to put him to death, Simeon was so far provoked at him, that he would have kill'd him, had not God prevented it, by suffering his Hand to become wither'd; that Simeon, however, humbled himself before God, and had the Use of his Hand restor'd to him again after seven Days. This Author adds, that Simeon was buried at Hebron, and that his Children carry'd him thither secretly, while they had War with the Egyptians. But 'tis well known how little Credit we ought to give to the Testimony of such a Book.

The Sons of Simeon were Jemuel, Jamin, (Exod. vi. 15.) Ohad, Jachin, Zohar, and Shaul. Their Descendants were to the Number of fifty-nine thousand and three hundred fighting (Numbers i. 22.) Men, at the coming out of Egypt; but only twenty-two thousand and two hundred of these enter'd into the Land of Promise, the rest dying in the Desart, because (Numbers xxvi. 14, 15.) of their Murmurings and Impiety. The Portion of Simeon was to the West and (Josh. xix.) South of the Lot of Judah, having the Tribe of Dan and the Philistines to the North, the Mediterranean to the West, and Arabia Petræa to the South.

IV. SIMEON, an holy old Man that was at Jerusalem, full of the Holy Ghost, and expecting the Redemption of Israel:

Luke ii. 25, 26, &c. The Holy Ghost had assur'd him, that he should not die, before he had seen the Christ of the Lord: He therefore came into the Temple, moved by a supernatural Inspiration, just at the time that Joseph and Mary presented Jesus Christ there, in Obedience to the Law. Then Simeon took the Child into his Arms, gave Thanks to God, and said, Lord, now lettest thou thy Servant depart in Peace, according to thy Word; for mine Eyes have seen thy Salvation, which thou hast prepared before the Face of all People, a Light to lighten the Gentiles, and the Glory of thy People Israel. After which, Simeon blessed Joseph and Mary, and said to Mary, as he deliver'd the Child Jesus into her Arms, Behold, this Child is set for the Fall and Rising again of many in Israel, and for a Sign which shall be spoken against: Yea, a Sword shall pierce through thy own Soul also, that the Thoughts of many Hearts may be revealed. And this is all that the Gospel informs us of this holy Man. 'Tis believed, and with good Reason, that he died soon after he had given this Testimony to Jesus Christ.

An ancient Author call'd Celsus [a], who has made a Preface concerning the Dispute between John and Papiscus, which is lost, says, that Simeon was blind; and upon taking Jesus Christ into his Arms, he immediately recover'd his Sight, and gave Testimony to our Saviour, in the Presence of all the People. (Vid. Baron. anno J. C. 1. §. 40.) Others think, that Simeon was the officiating Priest, and that, as such, he took our Saviour into his Arms, as a First-born that belong'd to the Lord; and that afterwards he return'd him to his Parents, after they had redeem'd him according to the Law. And indeed, several of the Antients maintain he was a Priest [b]; but others again deny it, with a great deal of Reason [c]. The Silence of Scripture alone upon this Occasion, is a sufficient Proof of it, since it would hardly have omitted mentioning such a Circumstance.

Leo Allatius, in his Dissertation upon the Writings of the Simeons, relates several Particulars that happen'd, as they say, when Simeon came into the Temple to see the Messiah. Among the other Mothers that brought their Children into the Temple, he observ'd the holy Virgin all-shining with Rays of Light. Then putting aside the Multitude, he went directly to her, gave her his Blessing, took the Child Jesus into his Arms, and with a divine Enthusiasm pronounced the Canticle, Nunc dimittis, &c. Nicephorus relates, that Simeon died as soon as he had return'd the Child Jesus to his Mother. And Epiphanius adds, that the Hebrew Priests refused to give him Burial, because he had spoke of our Saviour with too much Advantage. (Epiphan. de Vita & Morte Prophetarum.) 'Tis easily understood, that this kind of Traditions are not much to be rely'd on.

It has been pretended, [d] that Simeon who receiv'd Jesus Christ into his Arms, was the same as Simeon the Just, the Son of Hillel, and Master of Gamaliel, who had the Honour of having St. Paul among his Disciples. 'Tis also said, that as Simeon one Day was explaining that Passage of Isaiah, A Virgin shall conceive, and bring forth a Son, &c. and not being able to penetrate into the Depth of this Mystery, it was reveal'd to him, that he should not die before he had seen the Accomplishment of it [e]. Others have advanced a thing still more incredible [f], that this Simeon was one of the Seventy-two Interpreters who translated the Hebrew Law into Greek, under the Reign of Ptolemy Philadelphus; and that being come to this Passage of Isaiah now mention'd, he had some Sentiments of Incredulity; but that the Holy Ghost promis'd him, that he should see the Completion of it before his Death. All these Circumstances being added to the true History of Simeon, are an Instance to shew us, what is the Spirit of the modern Grecians, and what Credit we ought to give to their Relations.

The most ancient Latin Martyrologists place the Feast of St. Simeon on the Fifth Day of January. Others put it on the Second or Fourth of February. Usuard and Ado place it on the Eighth of October, which has been follow'd by the Roman Martyrology. The Menologia publish'd by Canisius unite his Feast with that of the Purification of the Virgin. Those of Venice and Hughellus fix it on the Day following. His Tomb was heretofore to be seen in the Valley of Jehoshaphat, near Jerusalem. His Relicks, as they say, were transported from Constantinople to Venice, about the Year 1220. See M. de Tillemont, Not. 6. on Jesus Christ.

VI. SIMEON, or Simon, Cousin-german to Jesus Christ, Bishop of Jerusalem, Son of Cleophas and of Mary Sister of the holy Virgin; probably the same that St. Mark speaks of, by the Name of Simon. (Mark vi. 3.) It is very likely that Simeon was one of the first Disciples of Jesus Christ [g], and that he began early to follow him. Epiphanius

Epiphan. Hæref. 78. c. 14. says, that when the Jews massacred Saint James minor, his Brother St. Simeon reproach'd them with this Piece of Cruelty. After the Death of St. James, in the Year 62, of the common Era, the Apostles, the Disciples, and the Kindred of Jesus Christ assembled together, to appoint him a Successor in the See of Jerusalem, and with unanimous Consent they elected St. Simeon to supply his Place. (Euseb. hist. Eccl. l. 3. c. 32.) Probably he withdrew with the rest of the Faithful to Pella beyond Jordan, during the three Years of the War of the Jews against the Romans. After the Destruction of Jerusalem, they return'd into this City, [a] and the Church of Christ appear'd there with new Splendor, by the great Number of Miracles that God work'd by their Means. When the Emperor Trajan made strict Enquiry for all those that were of the Race of David, St. Simeon was accused before Atticus the Governor of Palestine. (Euseb. hist. Eccl. l. 3. c. 32.) He endured several Tortures for many Days together, to the great Astonishment of every Body, and particularly of Atticus himself; for he was then one hundred and twenty Years of Age. At last he was crucify'd, about the 107th Year of the vulgar Era. (Euseb. Chronic.) He had govern'd the Church of Jerusalem about three and forty Years. The Latins place his Feast on the 18th of February, and the Greeks on the 27th of April. He had St. Justus for his Successor to the Bishoprick of Jerusalem. See M. Tillemont, Hist. Eccl. t. 2. p. 202, &c.

I. SIMON, surnamed the Just, High-priest of the Jews, promoted to this Dignity in the Year of the World 3702, or 3703, and died in 3711, before Christ 289, before the vulgar Era 293. He was Son and Successor of Onias I. (Joseph. Antiq. l. 12. c. 2.) He left a Son behind him, call'd Onias II. who being but a Child at the Death of his Father, and not in a Capacity of exercising the sovereign Priesthood, it was committed to Eleazar, his Uncle by the Father's Side, who dying, left it to his great Uncle Manasseh, the Brother of Jaddus, to whom Onias II. Son of Simon the Just succeeded, in the Year of the World 3771. Several refer to Simon the Just the Character that Jesus the Son of Sirach makes of Simon Son of Onias: (Ecclus. l. 1, 2, &c.) But we rather think it should be referr'd to Simon II. Son of Onias II. of whom we shall speak in the next Article. We do not reject the Opinion of those who think, that Simon the Just is the same as old Simeon, who receiv'd Jesus Christ in the Temple.

The Jews tell us very extraordinary Things of this High-preist. It is said in the Talmud of Jerusalem, [b] that during the whole Time of his Pontificate, the Goat Azazel, or the Scape-goat, was already all fall'n to Pieces, before he could fall half way the Height of the Precipice, down which he was thrown. But after the Death of this great Man, the Goat made his escape into the Desart, where he was caught, and eaten by the Saracens; which was look'd upon as a great Misfortune. And moreover, during his whole Life, when upon the Day of solemn Expiation the High-priest drew Lots for the two Goats, one of which was to be sacrificed to God, and the other set at Liberty, or thrown down a Precipice in the Desart, (Levit. xvi. 7, 8, 9, &c.) the Lot which he drew with his Right-hand, had always upon it the Inscription, Pray to God; and those which he drew with his Left-hand were always for the Azazel, or Scape-goat; whereas after his Death this was varied, and the High-priest sometimes drew the Lot for the Azazel with his Right-hand: And this was look'd upon as an evil Omen.

Besides, the Scarlet Ribbon [c] which was ty'd to the Head of the Goat Azazel, appointed to be precipitated, always appear'd White the whole Time of the Pontificate of Simon the Just; which was look'd upon as a certain Proof of the Remission of the Sins of the People, which was obtained by the Prayers of the High-priest according to those Words of Isaiah; (Isai. i. 18.) Though your Sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as Snow. But after the Death of Simon, this was also varied, and the scarlet Ribbon appear'd sometimes red, and sometimes white. While he lived, the western Lamp of the golden Candlestick was always burning; but after his Death it sometimes went out. While he continued alive, the Fire of the Altar burn'd clear; and after a Billet or two were put on it in the Morning, there was no Occasion of putting on any more Wood the whole Day; but when he was dead, the Fire languish'd, and required a continual Supply to keep it in.

While he lived, the Blessing of God multiply'd the two Loaves of First-fruits, which were offer'd on the Day of Pentecost, and the twelve Loaves of Shewbread (Lev. xxiii. 15, 21.) which were set upon the golden Altar in the Sanctum, and which was left there for the whole Week till the Sabbath following, when others were put there in their stead. These Loaves, I say, were multiply'd in such a manner under the (Lev. xxiv. 5, 9.) Pontificate of Simon the Just, that when they were distributed to all the Priests that waited in the Temple, as a kind of Blessing, every one had, at least, one as big as an Olive, which was enough for their Refreshment, and some had to spare. But when he was dead, this Blessing ceased, and the Shares that were distributed to the Priests were so small, that the more modest return'd their Thanks, and the others still held out their Hands. This is what the Hebrews inform us concerning Simon the Just.

II. SIMON, High-priest of the Jews, Son of Onias II. He was advanced to the High-priesthood in the Year of the World 3785, and died in the Year 3805, before Christ 195, before the vulgar Era 199. 'Twas in his Time, and in the Year of the World 3787, that Ptolemy Philopator came to Jerusalem, and attempted to penetrate into the inward Parts of the Temple, where none but the High-priest alone should enter. But Simon, with the other Priests, oppos'd him, and God struck the King of Egypt, and would not suffer him to execute his Design. See the third Book of the Maccabees. We think it to be of this Simon the High-priest, that the Author of the Book of Ecclesiasticus gives the Ecclus. l. 1, 2, 3. following Encomium. Simon the High-priest the Son of Onias, who in his Life repaired the House again, and in his Days fortified the Temple. And by him was built from the Foundation the double Height, the high Fortress of the Wall about the Temple. In his Days the Cistern to receive Water, being in Compass as the Sea, was covered with Plates of Brass. He took Care of the Temple that it should not fall, and fortified the City against besieging. How was he honoured in the midst of the People, in his coming out of the Sanctuary! He was as the Morning Star in the midst of a Cloud, and as the Moon at the Full. As the Sun shining upon the Temple of the most High, and as the Rain-bow giving Light in the bright Clouds, &c.

The Author goes on with his Character, representing the High-priest Simon in all the Splendor of his Dignity, adorn'd in his priestly Habit, surrounded by his Priests, and offering a solemn Sacrifice of Thanksgiving. 'Tis thought that Jesus the Son of Sirach intended to describe the Sacrifice that the High-priest Simon II. offer'd in the Presence of Ptolemy Philopator, as a Thanksgiving for the Victory he had then obtain'd over Antiochus the Great, near Raphia. Simon II. had for Successor Onias III.

III. SIMON MACCABEUS, surnamed Thassi, Son of Mattathias, and Brother of Judas and Jonathan. He was Chief, Prince, and Pontiff of the Jews, from the Year of the World 3860 to 3869, before Christ 131, before the vulgar Era 135. He had for Successor John Hircanus his Son. Mattathias the Father of the Maccabees, just before his Death, spoke thus to his other Sons, of their Brother Simon; [a] I know that your Brother Simon is a Man of Counsel; give ear unto him alway, he shall be a Father unto you. He gave Proofs of his Valour in the Battle fought between his Brother Judas Maccabeus and Nicanor, in the Year of the World 3838; and also 2 Macc. viii. 22, 23. in another Battle between the same in 3843. Upon another Occasion [b] Simon 2 Macc. xiv. 17. was sent into Galilee, to succour the Jews of that Province, who were threatened with an intire Destruction, by the Inhabitants of Tyre, Sidon, and Ptolemais. Simon having an Army of but three thousand effective Men, yet fought several Battles, dispersed the Enemy, kill'd above three thousand of them, obtain'd a great Booty, brought into Judea the Israelites that were in Galilee, and return'd triumphant to his Brethren. He again signalized his Valour in the Battle between his Brother Jonathan and Apollonius, [c] the Governor of Celosyria, whom they defeated, and kill'd above eight thousand of his Men. Simon was made Governor of the whole Coast of the Mediterranean Sea, from Tyre, as far as the Frontiers of Egypt, by the young King Antiochus Theos [d]. He also took Bethsura, 1 Macc. x. 82.
and Joppa, and built Adida in the Plain 1 Macc. xii. 33.
call'd Sephela. All these things he did 1 Macc. xii. 48, &c.
while his Brother Jonathan was Chief and High-priest of the Jews.

But Jonathan being surprized by Tryphon, [e] and a Report being spread that he was put to Death, Simon came to Jerusalem, and having assembled all the People, he thus address'd himself to 'em; "You "very well know how many Battles we "have fought, I and my Brethren, and "the whole House of my Father, in Defence of our Laws, and for the Temple "of the Lord. All my Brothers are slain "for the Welfare of Israel, and I am left "alone. But God forbid that I should be "sparing of my Life in the same Cause; I "am no better than my Brethren, and I "shall be always ready for the Defence of "my People, against all Nations that shall "attempt to oppress them." At these Words the People were inspired with a new Courage, and said to him; "Be our "Chief in the room of Jonathan and of "Judas, your Brethren; go before us in "our Battles, and we will be obedient to "you in every thing." Then Simon had the Walls of Jerusalem repair'd; and knowing that Tryphon was coming into Judea with a great Army, he march'd out to meet him, resolving to give him Battle.

But Tryphon sent Ambassadors to him, to tell him; that he had only detained his Brother Jonathan, because he was a Sum of Money in the King's Debt, occasion'd by some Affairs of which he had had the Management; but if he would send him one hundred Talents of Silver, and his two Sons for Hostages, he should be set at Liberty. Tho' Simon well knew this Message was only to trick him, yet he order'd the Money and his Brother's Sons to be sent, that he might not draw any Odium upon himself from the People of Israel. Tryphon forfeited his Word and Honour, would not send back Jonathan, but fell to spoiling and ravaging the Country. Simon, on his Part, endeavour'd to prevent it what he could, by wheeling about, and continually coasting him. When Tryphon came to Bascama, he there slew Jonathan and his two Sons, and afterwards return'd into Syria. Simon sent to fetch away the Bones of his Brother, and buried them honourably at Modin in the Sepulchre of his Fathers, which he adorn'd very much with Pillars, Pyramids, and Trophies in Sculpture.

Tryphon being come into Syria, there put to Death the young King Antiochus, [a] and usurped his Kingdom. But Simon Maccabeus would not acknowledge him, but his Competitor Demetrius Nicator as King of Syria; to whom he apply'd for confirming Judea in its antient Franchises, and for Freedom from Tribute. Demetrius granted Simon more than he asked, and gave him a general Amnesty for all that had passed, restor'd Judea to Freedom and Liberty, and left Simon the free Possession of all the Places he had fortify'd in the Country: So that this Year, which was the hundred and seventieth of the Greeks, he began to write upon the Tables and publick Registers; The first Year, under Simon sovereign Pontiff, great Chief, and Prince of the Jews. After this he took Gaza, and made a Composition with the Syrians that were in the Citadel of Jerusalem, and appointed an annual Festival in Commemoration of the Reduction of this Fortress, which for so long a Time had been in the Hands of Foreigners. 1 Macc. xiii. 43.

Simon made his Son, John Hircanus, General of his Troops, [b] and appointed him his Station at Gazara, or Gadara, which was an important Post, for the Defence of the Country. During this Time Simon apply'd himself to Civil Affairs, and to give his Countrymen the Enjoyment of that Peace he had procured them. [c] All Israel beheld with Pleasure the prudent Administration of this great Man. His whole Study was to advance the Happiness of his Nation, and to make them dwell in Prosperity and Security. He took Joppa, and made a Harbour of it, to improve the Trade of the Jews; and every way extended the Limits of his Country. Then did every one cultivate his Lands in Peace, the Fields produced all sorts of Fruits, the Elders sat in the publick Places, and discoursed of what was for the general Advantage, the young Men dress'd themselves splendidly in warlike Habits; in short, every one sat under his Vine, and under his Fig-tree, and no one had Power to disturb the Tranquillity they enjoy'd. And thus the Name of Simon became famous to the utmost Parts of the Earth.

He renew'd their Alliance with the Romans, [d] and with the Lacedemonians, [e] and had a favourable Reception from 'em both. The whole Jewish Nation [f] concurr'd in registring a publick Act, by which they acknowledged their Obligations to Simon and all his Family, and recognized him and his Children as perpetual Prince and Pontiff of their Nation, till some faithful Prophet should arise from among them. They order'd, that he should be obey'd in all things, that all publick Acts should pass in his Name, that he should be cloathed in Purple, and adorned with Gold. This Declaration was written upon a Table of Copper, and set up in the Galleries of the Temple. A Copy of it was also deposited in the Treasury of the Temple, for the Use of Simon and his Children.

Antiochus Sidetes, King of Syria, Son of Demetrius Soter, and Brother to Demetrius Nicator, being inform'd that Demetrius Nicator was taken by the Parthians, wrote to Simon from the Isle of Rhodes, to endeavour to engage him on his Side against Tryphon. He confirm'd to him whatever had been granted by Demetrius Nicator, and allow'd him the Privilege of stamping Money; [g] remitted to him all the Debts which he might owe to the Kings of Syria, and declared Jerusalem to be a free and an holy City. Simon consented to the Proposals of Antiochus, and sent him Men and Money to assist him in the Reduction of Dora, a City to the South of Mount Carmel, in which Tryphon had shut himself up. But Antiochus would not receive 1 Macc. xv. 1, 2, 3, &c.

The Latin Text insinuates, The Roman People; but the Greek and Syriac say only, The People; and the whole Tenor of the Discourse shews, that it must be understood of the Jewish People. This happen'd in the Year of the World 3863, before Christ 137, before the vulgar Era 141. [g] There are yet to be seen some of the Coins of Simon Maccabeus; they are of Silver of the Value of a Shekel, or half a Shekel, with this Inscription; Such a Year of the Deliverance of Sion, or of Israel, or of Jerusalem, &c. See the Dissertation upon Jewish Coins and Medals.

them, nor would ſtand by the Articles of the Treaty that he had made with Simon. He even ſent Athenobius to him, to demand of him the Surrender of ſeveral Places in his Poſſeſſion, or the Sum of a thouſand Talents of Silver; threatning, in caſe of Refuſal, to enter Judea with a Body of Troops, and to treat him as an Enemy. But Simon was not at all diſcouraged with his Threats, and ſent him Word, he had uſurped nothing from him, but had only took Poſſeſſion of the Inheritance of his Fathers. He offer'd to give him an hundred Talents for the Cities of Joppa and Gazara, of which he had made himſelf Maſter, becauſe they were the Occaſion of great Calamities to the Country.

Antiochus was but ill ſatisfy'd with this Anſwer, and therefore ſent Cendebeus [a] with an Army into the Country that lies upon the Coaſts of the Mediterranean, and order'd him to make what Spoil and Havock he could in Judea. John Hircanus, the Son of Simon, who had his Quarters at Gazara or Gadara, came to inform his Father of this; who ſent him back, with his other Son Judas, at the Head of twenty thouſand Men of good Troops, and bid them give Battle to Cendebeus. They did ſo, and defeated this General. See the Article of JOHN HIRCANUS. Three Years afterwards, [b] when Simon went to make a Viſit to the Cities of Judea; he came to the Caſtle of Docus or Dagon, where his Son-in-law Ptolemy, Son of Ambubus, reſided. Ptolemy received him, and made him a great Entertainment; but in the midſt of the Feaſt he caus'd him to be maſſacred, with his two Sons Mattathias and Judas, hoping by this to make himſelf Maſter of Jeruſalem, and the whole Country. But John Hircanus having Notice of this Treachery, was before-hand with him, and came firſt to Jeruſalem. He was acknowledg'd Sovereign Pontiff and Prince of the Jews, in the place of his Father. The Reader may ſee the Conſequences of this Murder of Simon, under the Article of PTOLEMY, Son of Ambubus.

IV. SIMON, of the Tribe of Benjamin, who had the Superintendence of the Temple [c]. He attempted to perform ſome unjuſt Enterprize in the City; and not being able to ſucceed in it, becauſe of the Oppoſition of the High-prieſt Onias III; he apply'd himſelf to Apollonius, Son of Thraſeas, at that Time Governour of Celoſyria, and told him there were great Riches in the Temple of Jeruſalem, which might eaſily be put into the Hands of Seleucus the King of Syria. He prevail'd ſo far, as that the King ſent Heliodorus to Jeruſalem, to fetch away their Treaſures. But God did not ſuffer him to ſucceed. See HELIODORUS. Simon ſeeing his wicked Deſign baffled, [d] publiſh'd every-where, that it was Onias himſelf who had diſcover'd to the King the Treaſures of the Temple; and the Friends of the High-prieſt oppoſing theſe Calumnies, the Diſpute grew up to ſuch a Height between the two Parties, that even Murders were committed by the Partiſans of Simon, who were ſupported by Apollonius Governor of Phenicia. This obliged Onias the High-prieſt to take a Journey to Antioch, to vindicate himſelf to King Seleucus: For he found, that nothing but the Royal Authority itſelf was ſufficient to prevail with Simon, to deſiſt from his fooliſh and unjuſt Enterprizes.

While this Matter was in Agitation, King Seleucus dies, [e] and Antiochus Epiphanes ſucceeding him, Jaſon the Brother of Onias III. bought the High-prieſthood of this Prince; and ſome Years after he ſent Menelaus, Brother to Simon now mention'd, to carry to Antioch ſome of the Money to the King. But Menelaus took this Opportunity to buy the High-prieſthood for himſelf, and to cheat Jaſon of his Money and Bargain [f]. This Circumſtance gives Reaſon to ſuſpect, that neither Simon nor his Brother Menelaus could be of the Tribe of Benjamin, ſince 'tis known this Tribe could have nothing to do with the Prieſthood; and conſequently Simon could not regularly be Governor or Captain of the Temple, and much leſs could Menelaus be High-prieſt. But they might however pretend to be of the ſacerdotal Line, tho' in effect they were not. Or elſe perhaps the Word Benjamin is a Corruption of the Text. The Scripture does not acquaint us what became of Simon.

V. SIMON, Son of Boethus, High-prieſt of the Jews. He was rais'd to the High-prieſthood in the Year of the World 3981, and depoſed in 3999, one Year before the Birth of Jeſus Chriſt, and four Years before the vulgar Era. Simon was originally of Alexandria, and Herod the Great promoted him to the Dignity of High-prieſt, [g] that he might with the better Grace marry his Siſter Mariamne. But this Pontiff being ſuſpected of being concern'd in the Conſpiracy of Pherorus and Antipater againſt Herod, he deprived him of the Prieſthood, and put up in his Place Matthias the Son of Theophilus [h].

VI. SIMON, Son of Camithus, High-prieſt of the Jews. He ſucceeded Eleazar, Son

Son of Ananus, in this Dignity, in the Year of the World 4028. He held this Office but one Year, being removed from it by Gratus, Governor of Judea, in Joseph. Antiq. l. 18. c. 3. 4029. His Successor was Joseph surnamed Caiphas.

VII. SIMON, surnamed Canthara, Son of Simon Boethus, High-priest of the Jews; he succeeded Theophilus, Son of Jonathan, [a] in 4044, and had for Successor Matthias, Son of Ananus, in 4045, which is the 42d Year of the vulgar Era. He was again advanced to this Dignity in 4048, by Herod King of Calchis [b]. This second time he succeeded Elioneus, and had for Successor Joseph the Son of Caneus.

VIII. SIMON, the Galilean. He maintain'd, that the Jews ought not to pay Tribute to the Romans, or acknowledge them Joseph. de Bello, l. 2. c. 12. for Masters. The Latin Text calls him Simon, but the Greek reads Judas, which was his true Name. Compare Antiq. l. 18. c. 2. But Judas had a Son call'd Simon, Joseph. Antiq. l. 20. c. 3. who was crucify'd in the Time of Claudius.

IX. SIMON, the Cyrenean. When Jesus Christ went to Calvary, and was not able Mat. xxvii. 32. Mark xv. 21. to bear the Weight of the Cross, the Soldiers found a Man who was a Native of Cyrene in Lybia, whose Name was Simon, and was Father of Alexander and Rufus, whom they compell'd to carry the Cross after Jesus; that is, to carry it whole and intire according to some; or only to carry one End of it along with Jesus. 'Tis asked whether Simon was a Jew or a Pagan? Several Fathers have thought that he was a Gentile, [c] and that he was a Type of that idolatrous People, that afterwards was to be call'd to the Profession of the Gospel, and to carry the Cross after Christ. Others [d] hold that he was a Jew. The Latin Text of St. Mark intimates, that he was coming from a Farm near Jerusalem; and there were many Jews that dwelt at Cyrene in Lybia, of which Place he was. Some [e] will have him to be the same as Simon surnamed Niger, mention'd in the Acts. If it were so, then we must readily acknowledge him to have been a Jew. There are those that believe he was Bishop of Bostres in Arabia, and that he ended his Life by Martyrdom, having been burnt alive by the Pagans. As to his Sons Alexander and Rufus, they have been spoken of under their proper Articles.

X. SIMON, the Canaanite, or Simon Zelotes, an Apostle of Jesus Christ. 'Tis doubtful whether the Name of Canaanite was derived to him from the City Cana in Galilee; or whether it might not be written Chananean; [f] or lastly, whether it should not be taken according to its Signification in the Hebrew, by deriving it from the Root Kana, [g] to be zealous. St. Luke gives him the Surname of Zelotes, the Zealous or Zelot, which seems to be the Luke vi. 15. Acts i. 13. Translation of the Surname Canaanite, which is given him by the other Evangelists. Matt. x. 4. Mar. iii. 18. Some Fathers say, [h] he was of Cana, of the Tribe of Zebulun or Naphtali. The Learned are still divided about the Signification of the Term Zelotes, what it may stand for. Some take it only for the Zeal he shew'd in embracing the Gospel of Jesus Christ; while others think [i] he was of a certain Sect call'd Zealots, of which mention is made in Josephus [k].

The Particulars of his Life are unknown, nor does it appear where he preach'd, or where he died. Nicephorus and the modern Greeks say, that he travell'd through Egypt, Cyrenaica, and Africa; that he preached in Mauritania, and through all Lybia; that he carry'd the Gospel even into the Isles of Britain, and that after an infinite Number of Miracles and Sufferings, he was crown'd with Martyrdom by the Death of the Cross, which he endured with incredible Courage. Others [l] will have it, that he suffer'd Martyrdom in the City of Suanir in Persia; and the antient Martyrology given by Florentinius, sets it down so on the 28th of October, upon which the Latin Church celebrates his Festival. It puts his Martyrdom on the First of July, on which Abdias says he was massacred, in a Tumult rais'd by the Idol-priests against him and St. Jude, whose Feast is kept on the same Day. The Greeks honour him on the Tenth of June, Menæa. Jun. p. 93. and will have him to be Nathanael, the Bridegroom at the Marriage of Cana.

XI. SIMON, Brother of our Lord, that Matt. xiii. 55. Mark vi. 3. is to say, his Cousin-german, and Son of Mary the Sister of the Holy Virgin. We believe him to be the same as St. Simeon Bishop of Jerusalem, and Son of Cleophas, of whom we have spoke under the Name of SIMEON.

XII. SIMON the Pharisee, with whom Jesus dined, after he had raised the Child of the Widow of Nain [m]. While he was at Table with Simon, a Woman of the Town, who was noted for her ill Life, enter'd into the Room, and pour'd out a Box of Perfume on the Feet of Jesus, wiped them with her Hair, washed them with her Tears, and did not cease to kiss them all the Time he was at Table. Simon feeing this, faid within himfelf; This Man, if he were a Prophet, would have known who, and what manner of Woman this is that toucheth him, for fhe is a Sinner. Jefus knowing his Thoughts, faid to him; There was a certain Creditor which had two Debtors, the one owed five hundred Pence, and the other fifty. And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me therefore which of them will love him moft? Simon made anfwer; I fuppofe that he to whom he forgave moft. Jefus replied; Thou haft rightly judged. Then turning towards the Woman, he made it appear, that fhe had done much more for him than Simon, and thus concludes; Wherefore I fay unto thee, her Sins, which are many, are forgiven, for fhe loved much; but to whom little is forgiven, the fame loveth little. Jefus had a mind to point out Simon, and thofe that are like him, under the Character of thofe to whom little is forgiven, and who love but little.

XIII. SIMON the Leper; he dwelt at Bethany, near Jerufalem [a]. Jefus coming thither a few Days before his Paffion, was invited by Simon the Leper to eat with him. Lazarus, whom our Saviour had raifed from the Dead fome time before, was at Table with them. Martha, his Sifter, was very bufy in attending upon them; and Mary, his other Sifter, to fhew her Love and Refpect for our Saviour, brought a Box of Perfumes, which fhe pour'd out upon his Feet. This Entertainment is very different from that which our Saviour had about two Years before, at the Houfe of Simon the Pharifee; as likewife Mary the Sifter of Lazarus was a different Perfon from the Sinner of Nain.

XIV. SIMON, Son of John, or of Jona, furnamed Cephas or Peter. See St. PETER.

John vi. 72. XV. SIMON, Father of Judas Ifcariot. He is known only by the Misfortune of being Father to fuch a Son.

XVI. SIMON NIGER, or the Black, of whom mention is made in the Acts of the Apoftles [b]. He was of the Number of the Prophets and Teachers, that were of the Chriftian Church at Antioch. He was one of thofe that laid their Hands on St. Paul and St. Barnabas, for the Office to which the Holy Ghoft had appointed them. Some think he was the fame as Simon the Cyrenean mention'd before; but there is no other Proof of this Opinion, but the Similitude of Names; nor is this a very good one, fince St. Luke always calls Simon the Cyrenean by the Name of Simon; but Simon Niger, by the Name of Simeon. Epiphan. hæref. 20. c. 4. Epiphanius reckons up one Niger among the feventy Difciples. The Church makes no mention of Simon Niger in its Offices, nor in its Martyrology.

XVII. SIMON the Tanner. St. Peter lodg'd feveral Days at Joppa, with Simon the Tanner, [c] and was in his Houfe when the Meffengers from Cornelius the Centurion came to him, to defire him to come to their Mafter at Cefarea. The Hiftory tells us of nothing particular concerning this Simon. Acts x. 6, &c.

XVIII. SIMON Magus, or the Sorcerer; he was, as they fay, [d] of the Village of Gitton, in the Country of Samaria. St. Philip the Deacon coming to preach at Samaria, [e] converted feveral Perfons there, and among others this Simon, who believed and was baptized. He feeing the Miracles perform'd by St. Philip, was in the utmoft Amazement. The Apoftes St. Peter and St. John then coming to Samaria, to lay on their Hands, and communicate the Holy Ghoft to fuch as had been baptized by St. Philip; Simon was full of Admiration, upon feeing the wonderful Effect of this Impofition of Hands, and offer'd Money to the Apoftles, faying; Give me alfo this Power, that on whomfoever I lay Hands, he may receive the Holy Ghoft. But Peter faid to him in great Indignation; Thy Money perifh with thee, becaufe thou haft thought that the Gift of God may be purchafed with Money. Thou haft neither Part nor Lot in this Matter, for thy Heart is not right in the Sight of God. Repent therefore of this thy Wickednefs, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thine Heart may be forgiven thee. For I perceive thou art in the Gall of Bitternefs, and in the Bond of Iniquity. Simon made anfwer; Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of thefe things which ye have fpoken come upon me.

St. Luke adds, that Simon had addicted himfelf to the Ufe of Magick Arts before St. Philip came to Samaria, and that by his Impoftures and Enchantments he had feduced the People of this City, and would fain pafs for fome extraordinary Perfon, fo that they all follow'd him from the Higheft to the Loweft, faying among themfelves; This Man is the great Power of God. But after St. Peter had reproved him, and had rejected with Horrour the Propofal he made to him, of felling the Power of imparting the Holy Ghoft; Simon fell into much greater Errors and Abominations, applying himfelf to Magick more than ever, taking Pride in withftanding the Apoftles, and infecting a great Number of Perfons with his impious Errors. For this Purpofe he left Samaria, [f] and travell'd thro' Acts viii. 9, 10, 11. Irenæ. l. 1. c. 20.

ſeveral Provinces, ſeeking out ſuch Places where the Goſpel had not been yet preached, that he might prejudice the Minds of Men againſt it.

When he was at Tyre in Phenicia, [a] he there bought a publick Proſtitute call'd Selene or Helene, and carry'd her every-where along with him, committing all ſorts of Crimes in ſecret with her. He pretended this was the Hellen who had been the Occaſion of the Trojan War. Having run through ſeveral Provinces, and made himſelf admired by a vaſt Number of Perſons, for his falſe Miracles and Impoſtures; he quitted the Eaſtern Parts of the World, and came to Rome in the Time of the Emperor Claudius, about the Year of Chriſt 41. 'Tis ſaid [b] he was honour'd as a Deity by the Romans, and by the Senate itſelf, who decreed a Statue to be erected for him in the Iſle of the Tyber, with this Inſcription; To Simon the holy God. [c] This Fact however is diſputed by ſeveral able Criticks, who think Juſtin miſtook a Statue dedicated to Semo Sanctus, a Pagan Deity, for one erected to Simon Magus. And indeed within this hundred and twenty-five Years there has been found a Statue in the Iſle of Tyber, with this Inſcription, nearly approaching to that mention'd by Juſtin. Semoni Sanco Deo Fideo Sacrum Sext. Pompeius Sp. F. Mutianus —— donum dedit. We ſhall not here enter upon a Scrutiny into this Difficulty. The Reader may peruſe thoſe that have expreſly treated on it; as Baronius, ann. 44. §. 55. Salmaſius, Notes upon Spartian, p. 39. F. Halloix in his Life of Juſtin, M. du Pin, Mr. de Tillemont, Not. 1. upon Simon Magus, t. 2. p. 521, 522, &c.

When St. Peter came to Rome, [d] ſome time after the Arrival of Simon Magus, he ſoon reverſed all that this Impoſtor had been doing there. Yet Simon however did not quit this great City, where there was ſo much Room for ſpreading his Errors; and under the Reign of Nero, he again acquired a great Reputation by his Inchantments. He pretended to prove, that he was the Chriſt, [e] and, as the Son of God, that he could aſcend into Heaven: And in Reality, he caus'd himſelf to be rais'd into the Air in a fiery Chariot, by the Aſſiſtance of two Demons, having recourſe to the Power of magical Inchantments. But St. Peter and St. Paul at the ſame time betaking themſelves to Prayer, the Impoſtor was deſerted by his Demons, fell down upon the Ground, and broke his Legs. And being carry'd to Brindes, for very Grief and Shame, he threw himſelf headlong from the Top of the Houſe where he lodg'd. 'Tis reported, he had this Fall in the Preſence of Nero; and hither is referr'd what is ſaid by Dio Chryſoſtomus, that Nero kept a long while at his Court a Man that pretended to fly in the Air: (Dio Chryſoſt. orat. 21.) And alſo what is ſaid by Suetonius, that in the Publick Games, a Man undertook to fly in the Air, in the Preſence of Nero; (Suetonius, l. 6. c. 12.) but at his firſt Flight he fell down upon the Ground with ſuch Violence, that his Blood ſpurted up to the Gallery where the Emperor was ſitting. He died, probably, in the 65th Year of the Common Era.

As to the Hereſies of Simon, beſides thoſe which are imputed to him in the Acts, wherein he aſſerts himſelf to be the great Power of God, (Acts viii. 10.) and where he thought the Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt were venal, and to be purchaſed with Money; the Fathers accuſe him of pretending to be the great Power of God, and that he came down as (Irenæ. l. 1. c. 20.) the Father in reſpect of the Samaritans, as the Son in reſpect of the Jews, and as the Holy Ghoſt in reſpect of all other Nations: but that it was indifferent which of theſe Names he went by. St. Jerom quotes theſe blaſphemous Expreſſions out (Hieron. in Mat. xxiv.) of one of his Books; I am the Word of God, I am the Beauty of God, I am the Comforter, I am the Almighty, I am the whole Eſſence of God. H was the Inventer of the Eons [f], which were as ſo many Perſons, of whom they compoſed their fantaſtical Deity. His Hellen [g] he call'd the firſt Intelligence, the Mother of all Things; he ſometimes gave her the Name of the Holy Ghoſt, or of Prunica, or Minerva: He ſaid, that by this firſt Intelligence he had at firſt a Deſign of creating the Angels; but that ſhe knowing this Will of her Father, ſhe had deſcended lower, and had produced the Angels, and the other ſpiritual Powers, to whom ſhe had given no Knowledge of her Father: That theſe Angels and Powers had afterwards made Angels and Men: That Hellen had paſſed ſucceſſively into the Bodies of Women, and among others, into that of Hellen the Wife of Menelaus, who was the Occaſion of the War of Troy; and that at laſt ſhe had deſcended into the Body of this Hellen of Tyre, whom he had with him.

He did not acknowledge Jeſus Chriſt as Son of God, but look'd upon him as a Rival, and pretended himſelf to be the Chriſt. He believed neither Salvation, nor the Reſurrection of the Body, but barely a Reſurrection of the Soul. He taught, that Men need not trouble themſelves about good Works, for all Actions were indifferent of themſelves; and that the Diſtinction of Actions into good and evil, was only introduced by the Angels, to bring Men into Subjection to them. He rejected the Law of Moſes, and ſaid, he was come to aboliſh it. He aſcribed all the Old Teſtament to the Angels; and tho' he every-where declared himſelf an Enemy to the Angels, he paid them an idolatrous Worſhip, pretending, Men could not be ſaved, without offering to the Supreme Father abominable Sacrifices, by the Means of the Principalities that he placed in each Heaven. He offer'd them his Sacrifices, not to obtain any Aſſiſtance from them, but to prevail with them that they might not oppoſe Men. Simon form'd a Sect of Hereticks, which were call'd Simonians, of whom we ſhall ſpeak preſently. Concerning Simon, ſuch Authors may be read as have treated about Hereticks, particularly M. de Tillemont, Hiſt. Eccl. t. 2. §. 5. p. 37, &c.

Joſ. Antiq. l. 17. c. 12. p. 607, 608.

XIX. SIMON, a Slave of Herod the Great, who, after the Death of this Prince, had the Aſſurance of aſpiring to the Diadem, having no other Merit to found his Pretenſions upon, but a graceful Perſon, and an advantageous Stature. He burnt the Palace of Jericho, and ſome other Edifices, giving the Plunder to thoſe that follow'd him. But Gratus the Governor of the Province ſet upon him, overcame him, and having come up with him as he fled away through narrow Paſſes, he kill'd him: This happen'd three Years before the Common Era.

XX. SIMON, Son of Gioras: [a] He put himſelf at the Head of a Number of ſeditious People, began to make Depredations, and even to commit Murders in that Part of Idumea call'd Acrabatane. Ananus ſent out Troops againſt him, which obliged him to retire into the Caſtle of Maſſada, from whence he made Excurſions into Idumea: From thence he advanced towards Jeruſalem, which he put into a Conſternation, by the many Cruelties he exerciſed againſt thoſe that fell into his Power. The Zealots fearing the Progreſs of his Arms, fought with him, but could not ſubdue him; and ſome time after [b], the People of Jeruſalem being drove to Extremities by the Zealots, and ſeeking Means of ſkreening themſelves from their Violence, call'd in Simon the Son of Gioras to their Aſſiſtance. Simon was received into the City with the Acclamations of the People, and began by attacking John of Giſcala and the Zealots in the Temple: But they did him more Harm than he could do them. He treated very tyrannically the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem who had call'd him to their Aſſiſtance, and exerciſed all ſorts of Cruelties againſt them. He caus'd the High-prieſt Mattathias to be kill'd, who had inſiſted the moſt ſtrenuouſly upon his being call'd in to Jeruſalem. Joſeph. de Bello, l. 5. c. 33. p. 938.

I ſhall not attempt to give an Account of all the wicked Actions that this Profligate committed at Jeruſalem, 'till the Taking of the City by the Romans. As his Name is not found in holy Writ, I think my ſelf not obliged to give his whole Hiſtory, but only of ſuch as are recorded in Scripture. When therefore the Romans had taken the City and the Temple, [c] Simon conceal'd himſelf under-ground, in ſome of the Common Sewers, and had taken Proviſions with him. He remain'd there hid for ſome Months; but at laſt his Proviſions being all gone, he was forc'd to creep out and appear above-ground, in the Place where the Temple had been, cloath'd in White, with a Robe of Purple; probably thinking, by this Means, to frighten the Romans, and ſo to make his Eſcape. They were indeed ſurprized at the Sight of him, and asked him, who he was? He would not tell his Name, and deſired to ſpeak with the commanding Officer. This was Terentius Rufus, for Titus was then gone from Jeruſalem. He came to him, and knowing who he was, had him chain'd, ſent Word to Titus of his Priſoner, and ſent him after him to Ceſarea. Titus carry'd him to Rome, where he ſerv'd to adorn his Triumph, and afterwards was publickly executed.

SIMONIANS, or Simonites, a ſort of Hereticks, and Diſciples of Simon Magus. They embraced all the Principles of their Maſter, which we have given an Account of above; and as to their Practices, they indulged themſelves in all ſorts of Extravagances as much as they could; which exceeded, as Euſebius ſays, all that can be ſaid of them. And they acknowledg'd in their Books, that when firſt their more ſecret Myſteries were revealed to any one, they were fill'd with Horror and Amazement at them. Beſide their ſhameleſs Filthineſs, they gave themſelves up to all ſorts of Sorcery and Witchcraft; and tho' outwardly they made Profeſſion of a ſort of Chriſtianity, yet they did not refrain from worſhipping Simon and Hellen, repreſented under the Shapes of Jupiter and Mars, and offered Victims and Libations of Wine to them. They alſo look'd upon the ordinary Worſhip of Idols as an indifferent thing; ſo that they were not expos'd to the Danger of Perſecution and Tortures, as the Chriſtians were, for not offering Incenſe to Idols: And the Heathen let them Iren. l. 1. c. 20. continue continue in Quiet, whilst they openly persecuted the Christians.

There is great Probability, that when St. John, St. Peter, and St. Paul, give Warning, in their Epistles against Hereticks, false Apostles, and false Teachers, that corrupted the sound Doctrine by profane Novelties, and vainly boasted of new Light and particular Revelations in divine Matters; those Enemies of the Cross of Christ, those Men that made their Belly their God, and gloried in what ought to have cover'd them with Confusion; it is likely, I say, that the Apostles intended to speak of the Disciples of Simon, of Cerinthus, and of some other Hereticks of the first Age. The Description St. Paul gives us of them in several Places of his Epistles, [a] shews, that the Corruption of their Manners was grown to a great Extremity, and that their Doctrine was not purer than their Practices.

The Sect of the Simonians continu'd down to the fourth Century. Justin says, that in his Time, that is, about the Year 150, almost all the Samaritans, and some few others in other Countries, acknowledg'd Simon as the greatest of the Gods. Clemens Alexandrinus says, [b] that his Followers worshipp'd him, and endeavoured to make themselves as like him as they could. Ireneus says, [c] they were call'd Simonians; and Origen assures us, [d] they went also by the Name of Hellenians, from Hellen. The same Author says in one Place, [e] that the Sect of the Simonians was reduced to about thirty Persons: Elsewhere [f] he tells us, they were quite extinct. But 'tis known from other Testimonies, that there were some even at the Beginning of the fifth Century. An Author that wrote upon Baptism against St. Cyprian, about the Year 256, says, that some Hereticks descended from Simon, made Fire appear above the Water, when they gave Baptism. Eusebius [g] still speaks of Simonians that mingled themselves among the Catholick, and receiv'd the Baptism of the Church; afterwards spreading in secret the Venom of their Doctrine among the Faithful. Several of them were discover'd, and expell'd out of the Church, about the Beginning of the fourth Century.

SIMONY. This is giving some Temporal Consideration for a Spiritual Thing, or for something that is annex'd to a Spiritual Thing. We do not read, that Simon or his Disciples professedly taught, that this kind of Trading was lawful; but the Example of Simon, who offered Money to the Apostles, to have the Power of communicating the Holy Ghost, as well as themselves, has caus'd the Name of Simoniacks to be given to them, who, in Imitation of Simon, would purchase for Money, or by their good Offices, or by any other way, some Spiritual Concern, or any thing relating thereto.

Acts viii. 18, 19, 20.

SIMONIAS. Josephus speak of a Village, upon the Frontier of Galilee, call'd Simonias [h]. 'Tis probably the same as Shimron, or Semeron, of the Tribe of Zebulun, Josh. xix. 15. The LXX. in some Copies, read Symoon; and the Talmudists expresly say, [i] that these two Names stand for the same Place. But it appears by Josephus, that Simonias was between Tiberias and Ptolemais, about sixty Furlongs from Gaba, a City lying at the Foot of Carmel.

I. SIMPLE, Simplex, is sometimes taken in an ill Sense. St. Paul, for Example, would have the Romans be wise unto that which is good, and simple concerning evil; that is, discerning in the Choice of good, to distinguish the good from the bad Doctine; but they must avoid whatever has the Appearance of Evil, as Children, that, without much Reasoning, fly from every thing that does but seem hurtful to them. This is what he says elsewhere, Be not Children in Understanding; howbeit, in Malice be ye Children: Suffer yourselves not to be led away by Appearances, as Children are. Rom. xvi. 19.

II. SIMPLE, is opos'd to a Deceiver, an unjust or a wicked Person. It stands for Sincerity, Fidelity, Innocence, and Candour. 'Tis in this Sense that Jacob is call'd a plain or a simple Man. Job is call'd a perfect and upright Man, or, according to the Vulgate, a simple Man. Wisdom is given to the Simple. Gen. xxv. 27. Job i. 1, 8. Prov. iii. 32.

III. SIMPLE, Simplex, or Simplicity, is sometimes taken for Liberality. The single or simple Eye, oppos'd to an evil Eye, represent a liberal Disposition, in contradistinction to a covetous one. St. Paul says, He that giveth, let him do it with Simplicity; that is, liberally, and with a chearful Heart. Matth. vi. 22. Luke xi. 34. Rom. xii. 8.

The Scripture distinguishes two Cities and two Desarts of Sin, one is wrote purely Sin, with Samech, Jod, Nun. The other is writ Zin, or Tzin, with Tzade, Jod, Nun. The first SIN, Peccatum, is any Thought, Word, Action, Omission, or Desire, contrary to the Law of God. The Hebrews have several Words for expressing Sin. They think, for Example, that Chataath, [a] Peccatum, signifies a Sin committed against some positive Precept ; and that Ashamath, [b] Delictum, expresses a Sin committed against any Negative Precept : And that Shegaga [c] stands for Sins of Ignorance, Forgetfulness, Omission, or Inadvertency. But certain it is, that these Terms are often used one for another, and that the Scripture seldom observes these Distinctions : It often calls very great Sins, by the Name of Ignorance or Folly ; and at other times it gives the Name of Sin to Faults of Inadvertency. Also the Name of Sin is often given to the Sacrifice of Expiation, [d] or to the Sacrifice for Sin. Saint Paul says, for Example, that God was pleas'd that Jesus Christ, who knew no Sin, should be our Victim of Expiation :

2 Cor. v. 21. For he hath made him to be Sin for us, who knew no Sin ; that we might be made the Righteousness of God in him.

Wisd. i. 13, 14. Wisd. ii. 24. God was not the Author of Sin, or of Death ; but Sin and Death enter'd into the World by the Malice of the Devil. Adam, by his Disobedience, has made us

'Tis by our Baptism that we are admitted to the Participation of these Privileges, and by Repentance that we may recover them again, when we have had the Misfortune to lose them.

The Sin against the Holy Ghost,[*] is differently explain'd by the Fathers and the Interpreters. St. Athanasius [e], who wrote expresly upon this Matter, relates the Opinions of Origen, and of Theognostes, who made the Sin against the Holy Ghost, to consist in Crimes committed after Baptism. But Athanasius very well observes, that the Pharisees, whom our Saviour upbraided with this Crime, had not received Baptism, and consequently could not become capable of it. As for himself, he thinks it consists in this, that the Pharisees maliciously imputed the Works of Jesus Christ to the Power of the Devil ; though they could not but be convinced in their own Minds that he acted by a good Spirit : And also in this, that they deny'd the Divinity of the Son, which was so clearly proved to them by his Works. St. Hilary [f] and St. Theophilus of Antioch [g] follow the Opinion of Athanasius, and make the Sin against the Holy Ghost to consist, as he does, in denying the Divinity of the Son ; under the Name of the Holy Ghost, meaning the Divinity.

St. Austin says in one Place, [h] that the Sin against the Holy Ghost, consists in subverting brotherly Charity, by Motives of Envy and Malice ; and in his Retractations, he adds, [i] that to render this Crime really irremissible, the Sinner must persevere in it to the End. He says elsewhere, [k] that tho' there are several Sins that may be committed against the Holy Ghost, yet however, there are none really irremissible, except final Impenitence, Despair, the Perseverance of a hardened Sinner, who does not return to God during his whole Life. St. Chrysostom [l], the Author of the imperfect Work upon St. Matthew [m], St. Isidore of Damietta [n], and several others, think, that the Sin we are speaking of, consists, in ascribing the miraculous Works of Jesus Christ to a diabolical Power ; and that its Irremissibleness is not real and absolute, but only relative, because it is very difficult to obtain the Pardon of it.

St. Ambrose is not altogether consistent with himself, in what he says concerning this Crime : In one Place, [o] he makes it consist in denying the Deity of the Son ; which is the Opinion of Origen and Hilary. In the Book of the Holy Ghost, [p] he says, it consists in denying the Divinity of the Holy Ghost, and in imputing his Works to the Power of the Devil. Lastly, In his Book of Repentance, [a] he extends it to Heresy and Schism. The Author of the Apostolical Constitutions [b], and Philastrius [c] also, accuse Hereticks of the Sin against the Holy Ghost. But were the Pharisees guilty of Heresy, those to whom our Saviour imputes this Sin? Hermas says, [d] that the Sin against the Holy Ghost, is the Blaspheming of God: And the Author of the Questions upon the Old and New Testament says, [e] that it is a Renouncing of God. Pacian Bishop of Barcelona says, [f] it is ascribing to the Devil the Works of the Holy Ghost: He believes this Sin to be morally unpardonable. The Author of the Recognitions, imputed to Pope Clement, [g] thinks the Sin against the Holy Ghost, the irremissible Sin, to be that of an harden'd and insolent Sinner. Grotius [h] espouses this Opinion, and gives for Examples of this Crime, the Sin of Korah, Pharaoh, Simon Magus, Ananias and Sapphira.

The Catholick Commentators are divided into two Opinions. One Side follow Saint Austin, and place the Sin against the Holy Ghost, and its Unpardonableness, in final Impenitence. The other Side place it in the wilful Malice of those that withstand the Evidence of Truth, and will not acknowledge the Miracles of Jesus Christ to be the Finger of God, but maliciously and against the Conviction of their own Consciences, impute them to the Prince of Darkness. This was certainly the Crime of the Pharisees, to whom Jesus Christ apply'd his Discourse; and those also become guilty of the same Crime, who oppose a known Truth, and who impute either to Vanity, or Hypocrisy, or, what is still more heinous, to Magick and diabolical Confederacy, such good Actions as they see perform'd by good Men. This is the Opinion of St. Chrysostom and St. Jerom [i], and that which to us seems to be most probable. The Reader may see the Dissertation upon this Subject, which we have prefix'd to our Commentary on St. Mark.

Original Sin. The Catholick Christian Church believes, that the Sin of Adam was communicated to all his Posterity, and that it has infected and corrupted it: And that all Men are born Children of Wrath;
Ephes. ii. 3. Naturâ filii iræ. That by the Fault of one alone Sin came into the World,
Rom. v. 12. and Death by Sin: By one Man Sin entered into the World, and Death by Sin, and so Death passed upon all Men. And this is what we call Original Sin, so well Job xiv. 1, 4. described by Job, saying; Man that is born of a Woman, &c. Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? Not one.
Psal. li. 5. And David says; Behold, I was shapen in Iniquity, and in Sin did my Mother conceive me.

But notwithstanding the Clearness of these Texts, and of several others that might be cited, both in the Old and New Testament, some learned Men have made a Doubt, whether the ancient and modern Hebrews had any distinct Notion of Original Sin, and of the Remedy that God had provided, to deliver his People from it.

Josephus and Philo, and such among the ancient Christians as admitted the Preexistence of Souls, and that Souls are born either good or bad, according to the Good or Evil they had done in another Life; these, I say, could not hold Original Sin as we now hold it, neither did they speak of it as we do, nor in any manner that approaches to it. Those among the ancient Jews who believed a kind of Metempsychosis, had still a less Degree of Faith in it, because of the Opposition of these two Opinions. And if they did not believe that Mankind was born criminal, in the Sight of God, they had no need of having recourse to any Remedy for Original Sin. They never speak of this: In the Institution of Circumcision, they only mention Reasons of Decency, Propriety, or of the Distinction of the Jews from other Nations.

The greatest Part of the modern Jews, [k] as well as of the ancient, maintain the Pre-existence of Souls, and a kind of Transmigration, and consequently they cannot be much inclined to admit of Original Sin: They suppose their Children, who die before they receive Circumcision, to pass into a State of Happiness; therefore they do not think that Circumcision remits any Sin contracted at the Birth. They acknowledge in Man a natural Propensity to Evil, which they call Jetzirah raah; but they cannot bear with what we say, of a corrupted Mass appointed to eternal Misery, as a Punishment for the Sin of Adam and Eve. Maimonides, a famous Rabbi, maintains, that it is not easier to conceive how a Man should be born with Sin, or with Virtue, than to comprehend how he should be born a skilful Master in any Art or Science. He looks upon Original Sin as a thing impossible. Other Rabbins as formally deny Original Sin, and confine the Effects of Adam's Sin to the introducing of Death on all his Posterity: And they also believe, that if Adam could have attain'd to eat of the Tree of Life, even after his Sin, he would not have died at all.

ginal Sin. Some say, that the Devil which tempted Eve, cast upon her such a stinking Smell, that she communicated it to all her Posterity; but that the Israelites alone were freed from it. Others acknowledge, that the bad Inclinations which we find in ourselves, are an Evil: They say, with Moses, that it is the Fore-skin of the Flesh which must be cut off: They call it, after David, a Defilement; with Solomon, an Enemy; with Isaiah, an Offence; with Ezekiel, a Stone, which God must take away, to give us a Heart of Flesh; having asserted, with Joel, that it is a secret Thing. They add, that as the Fruit is better when the Seed that produces it has any Bitterness, so likewise Children that are born from a corrupted Father must partake of his Corruption. 'Tis asked, in the Gemara, If Concupiscence insinuates itself at the Moment of Conception, or at the Time of the Birth? To which it is answer'd, At the Birth; for the Scripture says, Sin lies at the Door. But the Number of Rabbins that thus speak of Original Sin is very small: Others either deny it, or know nothing of it.

The Mahometans admit of Original Sin, as a Consequence of the Sin of Adam: They call this Original Sin, or the Concupiscence that attends it, the Grain of the Heart, or, the black Seed of the Heart, from which Mahomet boasted to be purify'd by Gabriel the Arch-angel, who pull'd it out of his Heart: They affirm also, that our Lord Jesus Christ, and his Mother Mary, were the only Persons that were preserved from it.

SINAI, or Sina, a famous Mountain of Arabia Petræa, upon which God gave the Law to Moses [a]: It stands in a kind of Peninsula, form'd by the two Arms of the Red-sea, one of which stretches out towards the North, and is call'd the Gulph of Kolsum; the other extends towards the East, and is call'd the Gulph of Elan, or the Elanitick-sea. At this Day the Arabians call Mount Sinai by the Name of Tor, that is, the Mountain, by way of Excellence; or Gibel Mousa, the Mountain of Moses: It is two hundred and sixty Miles from Cairo, and generally it requires a Journey of ten Days to travel thither. The Wilderness of Sinai, where the Israelites continued incamped for almost a Year, and where Moses erected the Tabernacle of the Covenant, is considerably elevated above the rest of the Country; and the Ascent to it is by a very craggy Way, the greatest Part of which is cut out of the Rock; then one comes to a large Space of Ground, which is a Plain surrounded on all Sides by Rocks and Eminencies, whose Length is nearly twelve Miles.

Coppin's Voyage to Egypt, c. 10.

Towards the Extremity of this Plain, on the North Side, two high Mountains shew themselves, the highest of which is call'd Sinai, and the other Horeb. The Tops of Horeb and Sinai have a very steep Ascent, and do not stand upon much Ground, in comparison to their extraordinary Heighth: That of Sinai is at least one third part higher than the other, and its Ascent is more upright and difficult. After one is come to the Top of the Mountain, it terminates in an uneven and rugged Place, which might contain about sixty Persons. Upon this Eminence is built a little Chapel of St. Catherine's, where 'tis thought the Body of this Saint rested for three hundred and sixty Years; but afterwards it was removed into a Church which is at the Foot of the Mountain. Near this Chapel issues a Fountain of very good fresh Water; 'tis look'd upon as miraculous, it not being conceivable how Water can flow from the Brow of so high and barren a Mountain.

Horeb is to the West of Sinai; so that at Sun-rising the Shadow of Sinai intirely covers Horeb. Besides the little Fountain which is at the Top of Sinai, as we have mention'd, there is another at the Foot of this Mountain, or of Horeb, which supplies Water to the Monastery of St. Catherine. Five or six Paces from thence they shew a Stone, whose Heighth is four or five Feet and Breadth about three, which, they say, is the very Stone from whence Moses caus'd the Water to gush out: Its Colour is of a spotted grey, and it is, as it were, set in a kind of Earth, where no other Rock appears. This Stone has twelve Holes or Chanels, which are about a Foot wide, from whence it is thought the Water came forth for the Israelites to drink. We shall not here enter into the the Particulars of what was done during the Encampment of the Israelites at the Foot of Sinai, but refer the Reader to the Article MOSES.

The Arabians reckon among the Children of Israel, one call'd Thor or Thour, who gave his Name to the Mountain of Sinai, which they call Thour-Sinai. They also give the Name of Thour to the City which is at the Foot of the same Mountain, upon the Shore of the Red-sea. Mahomet begins the Chapter in his Alcoran, call'd the Fig, by this Oath: I swear by the Fig, by the Olive, by Mount Sinai, and by the sure and faithful City. The Fig stands for a Mountain of Palestine call'd Thor-lina, the Mountain of the Fig. The Olive stands for the Mount of Olives near Jerusalem. Mount Sinai is known. The faithful City is Mecca. Sinai is in great Veneration among the Mussulmen, because of the Law which God gave to Men upon this Mountain. Also they call it sometimes the Mountain of Moses.

Upon this Mountain there is a Monastery of Greek Monks, who had heretofore only a Tower built near the burning Bush of Moses. But these Monks finding themselves much expos'd to the Insults of the Arabs, who devoured all their Provisions, even so much as the consecrated Bread of the Eucharist; they petition'd the Emperor Justinian to build them a strong Monastery, to secure them from the Depredations of the Arabs. The Emperor comply'd with their Request; but it is said, that he put the Architect to Death, for pitching upon this Place for the Monastery; this he did because of its Nearness to the burning Bush, and for the Conveniency of the Water.

The Name of St. Catherine was given to this Monastery, and to the Mountain itself, because of a Tradition generally received in the Country, that the Body of this Saint was transported hither by the Angels.

SINCERITY. [a] This Word properly signifies Truth and Uprightness, when the Heart and Tongue agree together. Sincerity is oppos'd to Double-mindedness, Deceit, when the Sentiments of the Heart are contrary to the Language of the Mouth. The Latin Word Sincerus is derived from sine and cera, without Wax, Honey separated from the Wax, or pure Honey. In the Scripture sincere signifies
Sap. vii. 25. pure, or without mixture. Sapientia est emanatio quædam claritatis omnipotentis Dei
Philip. i. 10. sincera. St. Paul would have the Philippians be pure, that their Behaviour may be innocent, and give no Offence to any Body. That ye may be sincere, and without Offence till the Day of Christ. And St. Peter exhorts the pure and sincere Mind
2 Pet. iii. 1. of the Faithful: Vestram excito in commonitione sinceram mentem. St. Paul speaks
1 Cor. v. 8. of Sincerity and Truth, or of Purity and Truth, which he sets in Opposition to the leaven'd Bread of Impurity and Filthiness. He reproaches the false Apostles with not preaching Jesus Christ sincerely, purely, with upright and disinterested Sentiments of the Heart.

SINDON. This Word properly signi-
Mat. xxvii. 59. Mark xv. 46. Luke xxiii. 53. fies a Shroud, and the Evangelists make use of it, to denote the Linen Cloth, in which Joseph of Arimathea wrapp'd up the Body of Jesus Christ, after he had embalmed it, had winded Bandages about it, and had put the Napkin upon his Head.
Joh. xx. 7. For St. John supplies those Circumstances that St. Matthew had omitted. The holy Napkins, or Sudaria, which are shewn in several Places, cannot be all the true Sindon in which Christ's Body was involved, but are made in Imitation of it.

Sindon is also mention'd in the History of Samson. [b] He promises the young Men that were at his Wedding; Triginta Sindones & totidem tunicas, if they could explain the Riddle that he proposed to them. The Hebrew says thirty Sedinim, and thirty Changes of Raiment. By Sedinim or Sindonem, some understand the Tunica which was put next the Skin; and by Changes of Raiment, compleat Suits of Cloaths, a Tunique and a Coat, for that was a compleat Suit; or only thirty Coats, which, with the thirty Tuniques, made up thirty Changes of Raiment.

The virtuous Woman mention'd by So- Pro. xxxi. 24.
lomon, made Sindons and Girdles, which she sold to the Phenicians. The young Women of Jerusalem wore their Sindons, as appears from Isaiah. This was a Fashion Isa. iii. 23. peculiar to the Sidonians and the Phenicians, and perhaps the Name was derived from the City of Sidon. Martial says, that Mart. l. 4. Ep. 19.
the Sindon of Tyre or Phenicia, covers a Man all over, and puts him in a Condition to despise the Rain and the Wind.

Ridebis ventos, hoc munere tectus, & imbres,
Nec sic in Syriâ Sindone tectus eris.

The young Man that follow'd Jesus Christ the Night of his Passion, Amictus sindone super nudo, was probably by this defended against the Cold, as with a Night-Gown. Mark xiv. 51.

SINEW. The Hebrews do not eat the Sinew of the Thigh of Animals, in Memory of the Sinew of Jacob's Thigh, which the Angel touch'd, and which contracted such a Numbness, that according to some Interpreters, he went lame of it all his Life after. This Abstinence from the Vide Interp. ad Gen. xxxii. 25, 32.
Sinew of the Thigh of Animals, is not commanded to the Israelites by any Law; for they must have abstained from it even before the Law, if the Observation that we find in Genesis xxxii. 32. was inserted by Moses. There are some Interpreters that think, this Forbearance of theirs is only Matter of voluntary Devotion. In some Places they abstain'd from the Hind-quarter of Animals, and sold it to others. In other Places they contented themselves with taking away the Sinew, and then they eat the Flesh. See what we have observed concerning this in the Article of JACOB.

SINITE, Sinæus. Gen. x. 17. By this Name is denoted the eighth Son of Canaan. The Sinites dwelt near Arce, in Mount Libanus. [c] Strabo mentions the Fortress in Sinna in the Mountains. By Sinæi the Arabick means the Inhabitants of Tripolis in Phenicia.

SION.[a] This is one of the Names of Mount Hermon. 'Tis probably of this Mountain that the Psalmist speaks, As the Dew of Hermon, and as the Dew that descended upon the Mountains of Zion.[b] The Union and the good Understanding of the Priests and Levites, is as agreeable as the Dew which falls upon Hermon and Sion, two contiguous Mountains, and which make only one Chain of Mountains. Jesus the Son of Sirach speaks also of Mount Hermon under the Name of Sion. Quasi Cupressus in monte Sion. In the Greek it is, in monte Hermon.

SIRACIDES, Jesus the Son of Sirach.

SIRBON. The Lake Sirbon, known by the antient Geographers, was between Palestine and Egypt, upon the Coast of the Mediterranean Sea, not far from Mount Casius. It had a Communication with the Mediterranean Sea, by a small Arm. Sometimes it is adjudged to belong to Egypt, and sometimes to Judea, because it lay between both Countries. There are some that think, that this Lake is now dry'd up, or fill'd with Sand. The Scripture no where mentions it, that we know of.

SIRENS, Sea-monsters, famous in the Writings of the Poets. They tells us, the Sirens were the Daughters of the River Achelous, and of one of the nine Muses. Some say Melpomene; others Calliope or Terpsichore, or Sterope; in a word, they are not agreed, either in their Mother's Name, or in their own. They were three in Number. Some call'd them Aglaepe, Pisinoe, Thelxiopia; others Thelxiope, Molpe, Aglaophonos; others again, Leucosie, Ligea, Parthenope. Their Dwelling was upon the Coast of the Sicilian Sea, and they sung so harmoniously, that the Mariners that pass'd that Way were in Danger of being shipwreck'd, by approaching too near the Shore, in stopping to hear them.

Ovid. de arte, l. 3. v. 311.

Monstra maris Sirenes erant, quæ voce canorâ

Apollon. Argonaut. l. 4.

They were partly like fine Women, and partly like Birds. They had the Wings and Feet of Birds, and as to the rest, they were Women. When the Argonautes pass'd that Way, the Sirens did what they could to charm them; but Orpheus taking his Harp, made their Songs and other Attempts useless. So that the Sirens, in Despair at being overcome, threw themselves into the Sea, and became Rocks. Others say, they precipitated themselves into the Sea, and were changed into Sea-monsters, having half the Body of a Woman, and the other half of a Fish; and that this happen'd to 'em after Ulysses had disappointed their Expectation, by stopping his Companions Ears with Wax, and making himself to be lash'd fast with Ropes to the Mast of his Ship; forbidding that any one should untie him, whatever Instances he should make.

But we shall not enter upon an Examination of these Fables. What gives us Occasion to speak of Sirens here, is because we find their Name in Isaiah xiii. 22. Respondebunt ululæ in ædibus ejus, & Sirenes in ædibus voluptatis.* The Prophet speaks of the Destruction of Babylon; he says, that this famous City shall be reduced to a dismal Wilderness, that the Waters shall cover its Ruins, that Sea-monsters shall be seen there, Birds of ill Omen, Owls, Bitterns, &c. The Latin Text to these adds Sirens; the Septuagint calls them Hedge-hogs or Urchins; the Hebrew Text reads Thannim. But if we compare together all the Passages in which the Word Thannim occurs, we may observe that it signifies a great Fish, a Sea-monster, a Fish that puts forth loud Cries, that feeds its Young by the Nipple, whose Abode is in the Sea, and in watry Places: Qualities which agree with a Whale, or a Sea-calf, which probably Isaiah intended to represent here.

תנים Thannim. LXX. Ἐχῖνοι.

Vide Job xxx. 29. Mic. i. 8. Lament. iv. 3. Psal. lviii. 7. Isaiah xxvii. 2. Ez. xxxii. 2.

Perhaps St. Jerome, in translating it by Sirens, intended to express certain Sea-monsters which, they say, have a near Resemblance to a Man. 'Tis said in 1672 they caught a Siren at Malta. Cornelius à Lapide speaks of a Siren taken in Frizeland, which, they say, lived long enough to learn to spin. Between the Island Ceilon and the Point of Indus, they took nine Sirens and seven Tritons. Upon the Coasts of Martinico, near a Promontory call'd the Diamond, was seen a Sea-monster, who upwards from his Middle had the Shape of a Man, and the rest was like a Fish. In the Philippine Islands they catch a certain sort of Fishes like Sirens. There are many of them also to be seen in the Province of Angola. They are found to be Male and Female, being eight Foot long, and four in breadth: Their Arms are very short, but their Fingers are long; their Head and Eyes are oval, their Fore-head high, Nose flat, with a large Mouth; but they have hardly any Chin or Ears. When they are kill'd, they cry out as a Man would do, that was going to be murder'd. It is not impossible but that Isaiah and St. Jerome might have a Knowledge of these Sea-monsters, and may intend to describe them in this Place. The Word Siren may be derived from the Hebrew Shir, or Sir, which signifies a Song.

SISAI, a Giant of the Race of Anak. Numb. xiii. 23.

SISERA, or Sisara, General of the Army of Jabin, King of Hazer. [a] He was sent by his Master against Barak and Deborah, who had got an Army together of ten thousand Men upon Mount Tabor. Sisera marched against them with nine hundred Chariots armed with Scythes, and a great Number of Infantry. Barak with his small Army fell upon Sisera's with that Impetuosity, that he intirely routed them, kill'd a great Number of them, and put the rest to Flight. Sisera himself fled among the rest, and, as if his Horses did not make Speed enough, he quitted his Chariot, and fled away on Foot towards Harosheth of the Gentiles. He came near the Tent of Heber the Kenite, and Jael, the Wife of Heber, desir'd him to come in and hide himself. She cover'd him with a Mantle; and because he thirsted, she gave him Milk to drink. Then Sisera said to her; " Do you stay at the Door of the " Tent, and if any one asks you who is " here, you shall say No-body. " Jael went out to the Door of the Tent, and afterwards returning, and finding him fast asleep, she drove a great Nail through his Temples with a Hammer, and fastned him down to the Ground. At the same Time Barak arrived, and she shew'd him Sisera weltering in his Blood, and without Life.

We shall hear make some Remarks upon this Defeat of Sisera.

Observations upon the Defeat of the Army of Sisera, at the Brook Kishon, near Mount Tabor, Judg. iv. 3, &c.

☞ Panick Fears oftener happen in large Armies, than in small ones; for these are less susceptible of them. What happen'd to Sisera has happen'd to a thousand other Generals; and it would not be easy to apprehend the Reason of certain Panick Terrors. An Imagination, a Phantom, a Whim may produce them, and yet this Whim is unknown, as if it proceeded from a superior Impulse. For it seizes at once upon a whole Army, as if it had but one Head. A Prepossession, a foolish Fear, the Cause of which is imperceptible, gets Possession in an Instant, and seizes Armies of one or two hundred thousand Men. All fly, all are for securing themselves in a Hurry, and often a Distance of many Leagues is not able to stop their Course. Every one asks his Neighbour, and would inform himself of the Cause of so strange an Accident; but no one can tell the Reason. Those in the Rear quicken the Flight of those in the Front; they are more afraid, because they think themselves in most Danger. And tho' they neither see nor hear any thing behind them, yet they still imagine there must be Some-body, because the Confusion is general, and none would fly without Occasion. We find in History a Multitude of Examples of this kind of Events; so that there is nothing supernatural in them; tho' I would not infer, for all that, that the Terror of Sisera and his Army, was not the immediate Effect of the divine Power. But let us proceed to the Story.

The Prophetess Deborah had a great deal of Difficulty to persuade Barak to set himself at the Head of the Israelites, in order to deliver them from the Yoke of the King of Hazor. He seem'd to doubt of her Inspiration, for Prophetesses were not frequent in Israel. However, the Commands of the Lord, which she declared to him, would not allow him to hesitate any longer. Then Barak answer'd her; If thou wilt go with me, then I will go; but if thou wilt not go with me, then I will not go. Judg. iv. 8. He was afraid, with good Reason, that the People would not be obedient to him, nor follow him to an Enterprize which seem'd to be so rash and dangerous. To this End, as the People had great Confidence in what she said, he would constrain her to accompany him. To this she consented, and when Barak had got together an Army of ten thousand Men of the Tribes of Zebulun and Naphtali, they took the Field. And they shew'd Sisera, that Barak the Son of Abinoam was gone up to Mount Tabor. And Sisera gathered together all his Chariots, even nine hundred Chariots of Iron, and all the People that were with him, from Harosheth of the Gentiles, unto the River of Kishon. The Scripture does not inform us of the Number of the Troops that compos'd Sisera's Army; but it is easy to perceive it must be very numerous, and vastly superior to that of the Israelites, by what the Prophetess says to Barak from the Lord: I will draw unto thee, to the River Kishon, Ibid. 7. Sisera the Captain of Jabin's Army, with his Chariots, and his Multitude; and I will deliver him into thine Hand. Josephus allows him three hundred thousand Foot, ten thousand Horse, and three thousand Chariots. Joseph. Antiq. l. 5. c. 6.

Sisera therefore came down into the Plain, at the Bottom of Mount Tabor, on the Banks of the Kishon, where he marshal'd his Troops, and set forth his Chariots in great Pomp. Then the Prophetess inspired Barak with new Courage, saying to him; Up; for this is the Day in which the Lord has delivered Sisera into thine Hand: Is not the Lord gone out before thee? This was but a short Speech, but a very powerful one, as it proceeded from the Mouth of a Woman inspired from Heaven, who gives him Assurance of a Victory. To this is to be added, the ardent Desire of being deliver'd from the Vassalage of an insolent Conqueror, the natural Hatred they had to the Enemies of their Religion, and the Necessity they were under either to conquer or to die. All these Motives have a mighty Influence, rouse the Spirits exceedingly, and excite the Courage and Hope both of the General and the Soldiers.

There is great Reason to believe, that the mighty Confidence Sisera had in his superior Strength, made him believe, that the Israelites, who were encamped upon the Height of Tabor, would not have done this if they had not been in Fear of an Engagement in the Plain, or in a Place of less advantageous Situation. For this intimates, as he thought, that the Hebrews were much afraid; and far from having any Desire of provoking the Battle, they thought themselves very happy if they could only defend themselves by a vigorous Resistance. Having such Notions as these, Sisera disposed his Army in Battle-array along the Side of the River with a very large Front, as well to shew his Strength, and terrify the Enemy, as afterwards to gain the Ascent of the Mountain, where the Jews were posted, and to attack them in several Places. This Disposition would at first appear well contrived, and very prudent; and indeed it would have been so against any other People but the Israelites, who were wearied out with Oppression, and resolved upon gaining their Liberty whatever it should cost them; and what was more, they were full of Assurance that Heaven would fight for them.

When such Troops as these are concern'd, if very much Prudence and Precaution are not used, there is no relying upon the superior Numbers of the opposite Party. If Barak had continued in his Post upon the Defensive Side only, Sisera would have attack'd him on all Sides, and could not but have forc'd him from his Retreat. He imagin'd it could not be otherwise, and that his Enemy would never have the Boldness to come down with so small a Body of Troops. He was deceived; and this very Disposition of his Army was the Occasion of its being put to Confusion.

So Barak went down from Mount Tabor, and ten thousand Men after him, over the Rocks and Precipices, and fell upon the Army of Sisera, which was ranged in Order of Battle along the Banks of the River. Sisera at first took this Motion to be only a Feint, and without doubt could not think that Barak would quit the Advantage of the higher Ground, to come down into the Plain; which made him not draw his Wings together, to re-inforce his Center.

When the Israelites were come to the Foot of the Mountain, they form'd themselves into several Bodies, upon the Side of the River, before Sisera's Face, who doubtless must admire the Boldness and Resolution of Barak. From admiring so uncommon a Piece of Intrepidity, he passes to Astonishment, and thence to a kind of Discomposure, which generally terminates in Fear. At last the ten thousand Men prepared for all Events, and ranged according to the Manner of the Jews in a great Depth, pass over the River or Brook, and fall so impetuously upon the Center of this formidable Army, that they separate it from its Wings, and make their Way over the Bodies of all that dare to oppose them. 'Tis the greatest Misfortune that can happen to an Army, to be open'd and penetrated at its Center. This is nothing in Appearance to so prodigious an Army as Sisera had; but this nothing soon becomes something, and at last proves very fatal in a Battle. When the Wings are cut off from the Body, they make but a feeble Resistance, and are soon put to flight.

And the Lord discomfited Sisera, and all his Chariots, and all his Host with the Edge of the Sword, before Barak; so that Sisera lighted down off his Chariot, and fled away on his Feet. The sacred Author explains himself here in such a Manner, that one would imagine the whole Army of Sisera made no Resistance, but fled away at the very Sight of the Israelites. Yet notwithstanding the Tempest that Josephus raises upon this Occasion, it is easy to perceive that the Enemies did defend themselves, but that they were penetrated. There are Generals who have been surprized by Fear, upon much more slender Occasions. Several Instances of this might be produced, if this were a proper Place for it.

Joseph. Antiq. l. 5. c. 6.

What creates some Astonishment, is, to see Sisera jump from his Chariot, to run away on Foot, as if he had had the Nimbleness of a Hind, and as if his Horses were not as swift as himself, in order to make his Escape. The learned Commentator observes, that "this General must "have been much discomposed in his Un"derstanding, to think of leaping out of "his Chariot, that he might fly away the "better. 'Tis thus, says he, in Homer, "where a Trojan Warrior being in a Con"sternation, throws himself out of his "Chariot, that he might escape from Dio"medes;

Hom. Iliad. v. Ibid. Iliad. xx. "medes; and another does the same thing "before Achilles. Their Horses were not "so swift as their Fears." So truly it may be affirm'd, that nothing hurries us into Danger so much, as the inconsiderate Eagerness we generally have, of delivering our selves from it.

It is observ'd, that to be discreetly Afraid, requires a good Degree of Courage. This Maxim is true; When our Fears do not intercept our Judgment, when they do not disturb the Understanding, and when of two Dangers we know how to chuse the least, without any Blemish to our Honour. In our own Days we have seen a Horseman take to a River, very deep and wide, after the losing of a Battle. It was hardly possible he should swim over without a kind of Miracle. His Fears had so discomposed him, that he took the River for a small Brook, and thus miserably drowning himself, he lost both his Life and Reputation at once. For he might have escaped the Peril he was in, if he had not quitted his Post. He might have made an honourable Retreat, or surrender'd himself a Prisoner of War. But he had lost his Presence of Mind, and it was not in his Power to chuse the wisest and the safest Measures.

SISOE. This Term is found in the Text of the Septuagint, in Leviticus xix. 27. where we read in the Vulgate; Neque in rotundum attondebitir comam; You shall not cut your Hair round, or in a Circle. The Septuagint says; [a] You shall make no Sisoe of the Hairs of your Head. The Hebrew Text; You shall not cut round the Corner of your Head. 'Tis inquired, what is this Sisoe? The antient Scholiast upon Leviticus says, [b] it was a Lock of Hair that was consecrated to Saturn. Bochart affirms it to be a Tress of Hair permitted to grow behind the Head; when all the rest was shaved round. The Arabians still wear a Tuft of Hair upon their Heads, and this Custom is very antient in that Country, and in Syria. Lucian mentions it in his Treatise of the Pestilence of Syria. Moses therefore would forbid the Hebrews to imitate the Fashions of these People in cutting the Hair; which was doubtless to avoid some Superstition common among the People of Arabia, in the midst of whom the Israelites then were. See HAIR.

SISTER, Soror. This Name, in the Stile of the Hebrews, has much the same Latitude as that of Brother. It is used, not only for Sister by Father and Mother; but also for her who is a Sister only by Father or Mother, or is only a near Relation. Thus Sarah is call'd Sister to Abraham, tho' she was only his Niece, according to some, or his Sister by the Father's (Gen. xii. 13. xx. 12.) Side only, according to others. Thus, in Leviticus, [c] it is forbidden to take to Wife the Sister of a Wife; that is to say, to marry two Sisters. Or, according to some Interpreters, to marry a second Wife when one has one before. Thus it is literally, Thou shalt not take a Wife over her Sister to afflict her; as if this Passage was to forbid Polygamy. In the Gospel, the Brothers and Sisters of Jesus Christ, are no other than his Cousins, the Sons and Daughters of the Sisters of the Holy Virgin. Matt. xiii. 55. Mark vi. 3.

In the Song of Songs, the Name of Sister is a Name of Tenderness between the two Spouses. Cant. iv. 9, 10, 12. v. 1, 2. Sometimes the Word Sister shews a Resemblance of Conditions and Inclinations. The Prophets call Jerusalem the Sister of Sodom and Samaria, because it delighted in the Imitation of their Idolatry and Iniquity. Jerem. iii. 8, 10. Ez. xvi. 46.

Jesus Christ says, that those who keep his Commandments, are his Brothers and his Sisters. Matth. xii. 50. Job, in his Misfortunes, exclaims; I have said to Corruption, Thou art my Father; to the Worm, Thou art my Mother and my Sister. Job xvii. 14. The Wise-man advises his Pupil to say to Wisdom; Thou art my Sister; that is, to love her, and become familiar with her. Pro. vii. 4. St. Paul asks, whether it were not as lawful for him as the other Apostles, to carry along with him in his Journies some pious Christian Woman; Mulierem sororem circumducere. 1 Cor. ix. 5. As Christians were used to salute one another by the Name of Brothers or Brethren, so they call'd Christian Women their Sisters. St. James says, If a Brother or Sister be naked, and destitute of daily Food; and one of you say unto them, Depart in Peace, be you warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the Body; what doth it profit? James ii. 15, 16.

SISTRUM, an Instrument of Musick, heretofore very common among the Egyptians.

Isiacos agitant mareotica Sistra tumultus. Auson. Ep. 25.

They say Isis invented this Instrument, and her Priests generally us'd it in her Ceremonies.

Jactantem Pharià tinnula Sistra manu. Ovid. de Ponte.

The Sistrum was of an oval Figure, or a dilated Semicircle, in the Shape of a Shoulder-belt, with brass Wires a-cross, which play'd in Holes wherein they were stopp'd by their flat Heads. They play'd on it by shaking the Sistrum in Cadence, and thereby the brass Wires, which made a shrill and loud Noise. This is the Description

The Word Sistrum is found in two Passages of Scripture, 1 Sam. xviii. 6. The Women of Israel came to meet Saul, in tympanis lætitiæ, & in Sistris. [a] And 2 Sam. vi. 5. They brought the Ark of the Lord with the Sound of all Sorts of musical Instruments: Tympanis & Sistris, [b] & Cymbalis. I do not observe that the Septuagint have made use of this Term. The modern Interpreters think, that Zalzelim signifies a Sistrum; but the Seventy generally translate it by Cymbalon, a Cymbal. Isaiah has evidently described the Sistrum, Chap. xviii. 1. Væ terræ Cymbalo alarum, quæ est trans flumina Æthiopiæ. * The Hebrew reads, [c] Zalzel cenapei, or the winged Zalzel; which agrees very well with our Description of the Sistrum, in which the Rods or Wires are as Wings. The first Instrument that St. Jerome has translated by Sistrum is call'd in Hebrew, Salisim, or Shalishim, which may signify an Instrument with three Strings, or a triangular Instrument. The second is Manänim, or Minnim, which many understand of a string'd Instrument.

SISUTHRUS, or Xisuthrus. 'Tis believed that the Babylonians had a Knowledge of the Deluge of Noah, and that this Patriarch was known to them by the Name of Sisuthrus. [d] They say, that Saturn appear'd in a Dream to Sisuthrus, and inform'd him, that all Mankind was to perish by a Flood. He commanded him to write down the Originals, the Progress, and the Completion of all Things, and to bury them in the Ground in the City of Sipharis, probably Kariath Sepher, or Dabir: And to build a Vessel, to go therein with his Relations and Friends, and to put out into the deep Sea. Sisuthrus follow'd his Orders, loaded his Vessel with all sorts of Provisions, and made all sorts of Animals to go in along with him. His Vessel was, as they say, five Stadia, or 625 Paces long, and two Stadia, or 250 Paces wide.

When the Deluge came, all those were drowned that were not with Sisuthrus. When he perceived the Waters to abate, he let go a Bird, which finding no Food nor Resting-place, return'd to him again. Some time after, he sent out others, which return'd with their Legs dawb'd with Mud. Lastly, a good while after, he let others go, which did not return any more. Then he understood that the Earth was quite dry; he broke up his Vessel, and went out with his Wife, his Daughter, and the Pilot. He went up into a Mountain, where he worshipp'd the Earth, erected an Altar, and sacrificed to the Gods. After this he appear'd no longer upon the Earth, neither himself, nor those which went out of the Ark with him. The others that continued in the Vessel, going out likewise, sought every-where for Sisuthrus to no Purpose; and having call'd him several times, they heard his Voice, recommending Piety to them, and the Worship of the Gods. He also told them, that for the future he was to have no more Conversation with Men, but was to live with the Gods. This is what they relate of Sisuthrus, which will easily be observed to have a very great Conformity with the History of Noah.

SIVAN, the Name of an Hebrew Month. Baruch i. 8. It answers to the Moon of May, and is the third Month of the Holy Year, and the ninth of the Civil Year.

SKINS. Our first Parents had no sooner committed Sin, but they perceived their own Nakedness, and made themselves Aprons with Fig-leaves sew'd together. Gen. iii. 7, 21. But soon afterwards God gave them Coats of Skins to cloath themselves withal: Fecit eis tunicas pelliceas & induit eos. By these Coats of Skins, some Antients [e] understood the Barks of Trees. Others translate the Hebrew thus: He made them Coats to cover their Skins. The Chaldee says, He made them Robes of Honour, to cover their Flesh.

Moses leaves to the Priests the Skins of the Victims, and this was one of their Lev. vii. 8. chief Perquisites. But when the Sacrifice was offer'd for the Sins of the Priest, the Skin was burn'd out of the Camp, or Lev. iv. 11. viii. 17. ix. 11. without the City.

Tents were antiently made of Skins. Pelles terræ Madien: The Tents of the Hab. iii. 7. Midianites. Pelles Salomonis: The Tents Cant. i. 4. of King Solomon. The Ark of the Lord was lodg'd under a Covering of Skins: 2 Sam. vii. 2. Cùm arca Dei posita sit in medio pellium. The Psalmist compares the Heavens to a Ps. ciii. 2. vast Tent of Skins. Extendens Cœlum sicut pellem. And Jeremiah; Suddenly are my Jer. iv. 20. Tents spoiled, and my Curtains in a Moment. Repentè vastata sunt Tabernacula mea, subito pelles meæ.

Country People were often cloathed with Levit. xi. 32. xiii. 48. xv. 17. Skins; and Skins are found enumerated among the Cloathing of the People. The Prophets, and such as profess'd a more than ordinary Austerity, wore Girdles of Leather. Elijah and John the Baptist 2 Kings i. 8. Matth. iii. 4. wore Girdles of this Kind; Zona pellicea circa lumbos ejus.

When the Philistines were smitten with Emerods, for having taken away the Ark of the Lord, they made themselves Cushions or Seats of Skins. Fecerunt sibi sedes pelliceas; probably that they might sit down with the greater Ease. But this Passage is neither in the Hebrew, nor in the Chaldee, nor in a good many Editions of the Septuagint. But some others read it as well as the Vulgate.

1 Sam. v. 9. Vulg.

SLAVES. All Men were created free and equal, and Slavery enter'd the World only by Sin. Noah, to punish the Affront that his Son Ham put upon him, by exposing his Nakedness, gave his Curse to Canaan, the Son of Ham, and made him subject to Slavery; Maledictus Chanaan, servus servorum erit fratribus suis. When Abraham was chosen of God, to become the Father of the Race of the Faithful, he received the Badge of Circumcision, as a Character that made him known to be the Servant of the Lord. His Descendants always valued themselves upon their Liberty. Nemini servivimus unquam, said the Jews to Jesus Christ. And St. Paul magnifies the Liberty of the true Children of Abraham, as being really free, born of a free Mother, in Opposition to the Race of Ishmael, born of a Mother that was a Slave; Non sumus ancillæ filii, sed liberæ, quâ libertate Christus nos liberavit. This has regard to moral Liberty and Servitude. But the Rabbins maintain, that they have never been in Subjection to any one by a Servitude which they call Intrinsick, and which changes the Condition of the Person. If they have been reduced to Slavery, that does not destory that State of Liberty to which they were born.

Gen. ix. 25. Gen. xvii. 10. John viii. 33. Gal iv. 31.

But this does not hinder, but that the Hebrews have often been subjected by several Princes. For Example, the Egyptians, the Philistines, the Chaldeans, the Grecians, and the Romans. Many, compell'd by Necessity, have been forced to sell their Liberty; and others, being taken in War, remain'd Slaves to the Conquerors. Moses himself takes Notice of two or three Sorts of Slaves among the Hebrews. They had foreign Slaves, obtain'd by the way of War, or by their Money, or born in their Houses. The Masters had an intire Sovereign Authority over these; they might sell them, change them, punish them, judge them, and even put them to Death, without any form of Process. If a Man smite his Servant, or his Maid with a Rod, and he die under his Hand, he shall be surely punished; notwithstanding, if he continue a Day or two, he shall not be punished, for he is his Money.

Exod. xxi. 20, 21.

This must be understood, as the Rabbins say, [a] of Hebrew Slaves, but not of Foreign Slaves, which a Master might have, and might use what Severity towards them they pleas'd with Impunity; for in this Case the Law of Moses had enjoined nothing. They follow'd the Rules common to other Nations, among whom all Masters had an absolute Power over their Slaves. [b] Apud omnes peræquè nationes animadvertere possumus, dominis in servos vitæ necisque potestatem fuisse. Yet wise Men have always much disapproved that Liberty which certain Masters have assumed to themselves, of thus putting their Slaves to Death. Cato the Censor would never put any of his Slaves to Death, before they had been condemned and found worthy of Death by his other Slaves. Job testifies, that he had never declined to enter into Judgment with his Slaves, when any Difficulty arose between them. The Athenians punish'd with Death him that had kill'd a Slave, as much as if he had been a Free-man.

Plutarch. in Catone. Job xxxi. 13, 14, 15.

The Samaritan Text, in this Passage now cited, is very different from the Hebrew. It is read thus: He that shall strike his Man-servant, or his Maid-servant with a Rod, if they die under his Hand, he shall not be molested, he shall not die; and if the Servant survives for two or three Days, he shall not be punished, because it is the Price of his Money. As if all this only related to a Slave, Canaanitish or Gentile, which the Civil Laws allow'd to put to Death with Impunity.

The Chaldee Paraphrast, some Rabbins, and some Commentators, are of the same Opinion, that this has no regard to Hebrew Slaves; for, say they, it cannot be said of an Israelitish Slave, that he was the Price of the Money of his Master; Pecunia illius est. He was in Servitude but for a few Years, and the Damage that his Master would suffer by putting him to Death, and so depriving himself of the Service he might have expected from him, would not have punish'd him enough for it. Whereas the Loss of a Foreign Slave brought a considerable Prejudice to an interested Master, and he was in some measure justly punish'd for his Cruelty, by the Death of a Man that was his own for ever, and who might have left him Children of the same Condition as himself.

Here are the Rules that Moses appoints should be observed, in respect to Hebrew Slaves: If thy Brother, that dwelleth by thee, be waxen poor, and be sold unto thee; thou shalt not compel him to serve as a Bond-servant. But as an hired Servant, and as a Sojourner, he shall be with thee, and shall serve thee unto the Year of Jubilee. And then shall he depart from thee, both he and his Children with him, and shall return unto his own Family, and unto the Possession of his Fathers shall he return. For they are my Servants, which I brought forth out of the Land of Egypt; they shall not be sold as Bond-men. Thou shalt not rule over them with Rigour, but shalt fear thy God. Both thy Bond-men and thy Bond-maids, which thou shalt have, shall be of the Heathen that are round about you; of them shall ye buy Bond-men and Bond-maids. It was not therefore the Design of the Lord, that the Israelites should be reduced to perpetual Slavery by their Brethren, or that they should be sold to Strangers, to remain Slaves for their whole Lives. But if an Hebrew should have sold himself to a Stranger living in the Country; this Hebrew might redeem his Freedom by his Parsimony, if he had Means for it. If not, one of his nearest Relations might redeem him, by paying to his Master the Sum that he had given for him, Deduction being made for the Service he had done him, and reckoning what Time he had still to serve to the Year of Jubilee, for then he had a Right to go out of Servitude without any Ransom.

Lev. xxv. 39, 40.

Exod. xxi. 1, 2, &c. In another Place Moses makes these Regulations concerning Hebrew Slaves: If thou buy an Hebrew Servant, six Years he shall serve, and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing. The Rabbins will have it, that a Slave was obliged to serve for seven Years compleat; but the Generality of Commentators think, that he went out free in the Sabbatical Year, even tho' he should not have served two or three Years. Moses adds; He shall have at going out the same Cloaths he had at coming in, and his Wife shall go out with him. The Hebrew has it; If he came in by himself [with his Body] he shall go out by himself; if he were marry'd, then his Wife shall go out with him. The Rabbins say, that the Master was obliged to maintain the Wife and Children of the Slave, although none but the Husband was a Slave.

If his Master have given him a Wife, and she hath born him Sons or Daughters; the Wife and her Children shall be her Master's, and he shall go out by himself; [or with his Body.] Several Meanings may be affix'd to this Law. A Master might make a Hebrew Slave marry a Woman Slave of a another Nation; and as this Woman is no Israelite, she could not enjoy the Privilege of the Sabbatical Year; but her Husband might quit her, and enter upon his Liberty this Year. 'Tis ask'd, Whether the Marriage was dissolved upon this Separation? The Opinions of Interpreters are divided upon this Question[a]. What to us appears to have the greatest Certainty, is, that as there could properly be no Marriage among Slaves, who had took one another without Choice and without Liberty, so there could be no Dissolution of Marriage in their Separation. See the Commentators upon this Passage.

If the Servant shall plainly say, I love my Master, my Wife, and my Children, I will not go out free: Then his Master shall bring him unto the Judges; [Heb. Gods] he shall also bring him to the Door, or unto the Door-post, [of his Master's House] and his Master shall bore his Ear through with an Aul, and he shall serve him for ever. That is to say, according to the Commentators, [b] till the Year of Jubilee; for then all Slaves, without Exception, recover'd their Liberty. The Rabbins add, that they were thus set free also at the Death of their Masters, and did not descend to their Heirs. Exod. xxi. 5, 6. Deut. xv. 17.

If a Man sell his Daughter to be a Maid-servant, [or a Slave] she shall not go out as the Men-servants do. That is to say, the Laws we have now mention'd do not concern her. There is another kind of Jurisprudence for Girls, than for Hebrew Men or Boys. A Father could not sell his Daughter for a Slave, according to the Rabbins, [c] till she was at the Age of Puberty, and unless he was reduced to the utmost Indigence. Besides, when a Master bought an Israelitish Girl, it was always with this Presumption, that he would take her for Wife, or that he would permit his Son to marry her. Hence it is that Moses adds, If she please not her Master, and he does not think fit to marry her, he shall set her at Liberty; or, according to the Hebrew, he shall let her be redeemed: To sell her unto a strange Nation he shall have no Power, seeing he hath dealt deceitfully with her, as to the Promise, implicitely at least, that he had made her, of taking her to be his Wife. Exod. xxi. 7.

If he have betrothed her unto his Son, he shall deal with her after the manner of Daughters. He shall take care that his Son uses her as his Wife, that he does not despise her, or use her ill. "If he makes "his Son marry another Wife, he shall "give her her Dowry, her Cloaths, and "what is due to her, for her Virginity;" or, according to the Hebrew, "If he make "his Son marry another Wife, he shall "not diminish the Cloaths, the Main-"tenance, and the Habitation of the for-"mer." That is, according to several Commentators, [d] If the Master that bought this Maid, and who made his Son marry her, makes his Son marry a second Wife, he shall take care that his Son treat this first Woman as his Wife, that he allow her Exod. xxi. 9, 10.

Food

Food and Raiment, and perform the Duties of Marriage to her as to his true Wife; if he does not, then ſhall ſhe go out free without Money.

Otherwiſe, if the Father of the Family who has bought an Iſraelitiſh Maid, does not marry her, nor makes his Son to marry her; or if he would diſmiſs her after he had kept her for ſome time, he ſhall be obliged to marry her to another, or to ſell her to another Hebrew Maſter, on the ſame Conditions that he had taken her himſelf, giving her a Portion, her Cloaths, and the Price of her Virginity, agreeable to Cuſtom, or according as it ſhould be regulated by the Judges.

An Hebrew might fall into Slavery ſeveral ways. First, If reduced to extream Lev. xxv. 29. Poverty, he might ſell himſelf. Secondly, A Father might ſell his Children for Slaves. Lev. xxi. 7. Thirdly, Inſolvent Debtors might be deliver'd up to their Creditors for Slaves. 2 Kings iv. 1. Thieves that were not able to make Reſtitution for their Thefts, or the Value of them, were ſold for the Benefit of the Exod. xxii. 3. Sufferers. Fifthly, They might be taken in War, or by Thieves. Sixthly, They might be ſtole away, by the Crime call'd Plagium, and afterwards ſold for Slaves, as Joſeph was ſold by his Brethren. Laſtly, An Hebrew Slave redeem'd from a Gentile by one of his Brethren, might be ſold by him to another Iſraelite.

By the Word Slavery, Servitude, or Bondage, the Scripture often expreſſes the Subjection of one People to another. For Gen. xxvii. 37. Example, Iſaac ſays to Eſau; Behold, I have made him thy Lord, and all his Brethren have I given to him for Servants. And elſewhere the Egyptians ſay to Joſeph; Buy us and our Land for Bread, and we and our Land will be Servants unto Pharaoh. And when Samuel declares to the Hebrews what are the Rights and Prerogatives of a 1 Sam. viii. 16, 17. King, he ſays; " He ſhall take your " Slaves, and your Maids, and you your- " ſelves ſhall be ſubject to him as Slaves: " Voſque eritis ei ſervi. And Goliah ſays to 1 Sam. xvii. 8, 9. the Iſraelites; Am not I a Philiſtine, and you Servants to Saul? Chooſe you a Man for you, and let him come down to me. And if he be able to fight with me, and to kill me, then will we be your Servants. But if I prevail againſt him, and kill him, then ſhall ye be our Servants, and ſerve us.

SLEEP, Sleeping, Slumbering, is taken either for the Sleep or Repoſe of the Body, or for the Sleep of the Soul which is Supineneſs, Indolence, Stupidity, or for the Sleep of Death.

You ſhall ſleep with your Fathers, you ſhall die as they are dead. And Jeremiah li. 39. Dormiam ſomnum ſempiternum. And Dan. xii. 2. Daniel ſays; Qui dormiunt in terræ pulvere: Thoſe that ſleep in the Duſt of the John xi. 11. Grave. Lazarus our Friend ſleepeth; let us go and awake him: He is dead, let us go and raiſe him up. Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and ariſe from the Dead, and Chriſt ſhall give thee Light. He ſpeaks to thoſe Ephes. v. 14. that were dead in Sin and Infidelity. Saint Peter ſays of the Wicked, their Damnation ſlumbereth not. 2 Pet. ii. 3. God is not aſleep, he will not forget to puniſh them in his own due Time. And Solomon ſays, Prov. xxiii. 21. Veſtietur pannis dormitatio. The Slumberer ſhall be cloathed with Rags, the Slothful ſhall live in Poverty.

Iſaiah ſpeaks of a ſuperſtitious Practice among the Pagans, who went to ſleep in the Temples of their Idols, to obtain Prophetick Dreams: Qui habitant in Sepulchris, & in delubro idolorum dormiunt. Iſa. lxv. 4. בנצורים ילינו He ſpeaks of the ſuperſtitious and idolatrous Jews, who, in Contempt of the Prophets and of the Temple of the Lord, went into the Tombs and Temples of Idols, to ſleep there, and to have Dreams that might diſcover future Events to them. The Pagans for this Purpoſe us'd to lie upon the Skins of the ſacrificed Victims.

SMERDIS King of Persia, the same who is call'd Artaxerxes, or Artachsarta, in the Book of Ezra, chap. iv. 7. This is is his History: Cyrus the Great left two Xenoph. Cyropæd. Sons, Cambyses, and Tanaoxares, otherwise call'd Smerdis, or Mergis, according to Justin. Cambyses took his Brother along with him in his Expedition against Egypt. But when it was found that Smerdis was the only one of his Army who could draw the Bow that the Ethiopians had sent him, Cambyses conceived such a Jealousy against him, that he would not suffer him to stay in his Army, but sent him back into Persia. But, some time after this, having had a Dream, that Smerdis had taken Possession of the Crown of Persia, he sent one of his Confidents, named Prexaspes, with Orders to put him to Death; which was perform'd accordingly.

After a Stay of about three Years in Egypt, Cambyses set out to return into Vid. Herodot. l. 3. Persia. When he was come as far as Syria, he there found a Courier dispatched from Persia, with an Account, that Smerdis the Son of Cyrus had ascended the Throne. And indeed, one of the chief of the Magi, or Magians, call'd Pathisites, to whom Cambyses had left the Government of his Kingdom in his Absence, had placed his own Brother call'd Smerdis upon the Throne of Persia. He had a great Resemblance to Smerdis the Prince of that Name, who had been kill'd by Prexaspes, and whose Death was not known to every Body. Cambyses caus'd this Messenger to be stopp'd; and making an exact Enquiry concerning what had been done to his Brother Smerdis, he found that he had been really put to Death, and that it was another Smerdis who had usurp'd the Crown.

Upon this, he gave Orders for the marching of his Troops with all Expedition, to punish this Usurper: But as he was mounting his Horse with too great Precipitation, his Sword happen'd to fall out of the Scabbard, which gave him a Wound in his Thigh, of which he died soon after: But before his Death, he sent for all the Grandees of Persia, acquainted them with the Death of his Brother Smerdis, and with the Usurpation of the Magian, conjuring them all not to submit to the surreptitious Authority of this Impostor. Herodotus Herodor. l. 3. calls him Smerdis; OEschilus, Mardus; Ctesias, Spendates; and Justin, Oropastes.

No sooner was he confirm'd in his Government by the Death of Cambyses, but the Samaritans, who always were at Enmity with the Jews, wrote a Letter to Ezra iv. 7. him against them, telling him, that the Jews, who were always a factious and turbulent Nation, were now rebuilding the City and Temple of Jerusalem; and that when they had compleated this Undertaking, it was much to be apprehended, that they intended to revolt and shake off the Persian Yoke; which Example might encourage the neighbouring Nations of Syria and Palestine to do the same: That he had need only of consulting the Records of Persia, to be convinced of this Truth, and of the dangerous Temper of the Jews. This Letter having been received at Court, the Archives of the Kingdom were inspected, where indeed it was easy to observe, that the Hebrews had for a long Time maintain'd a War against the Kings of Assyria and Babylon, and that at last they had been subdued by the Arms of King Nebuchadnezzar.

Upon this, an Order was dispatch'd to the Jews, that they shou'd not go on with their Works, nor proceed in Repairing Jerusalem, or the Temple [a]; and Commission was given to the Samaritans, to see that this Order was comply'd with. This they had no sooner receiv'd, but they came in all Haste to Jerusalem, where notifying to the Jews the Resolution of the Court of Persia, they obliged them, by Force and Authority, to suspend the Execution of their Designs. Thus a Stop was put to this Work 'till the second Year of Darius Son of Hystaspes, [b] who gave Leave to the Jews to go on with their Work for Ezra vi. 1, &c. the Repairing of the Temple: But the Prohibition of Repairing or Rebuilding their Walls was not taken off 'till the Year 3550, by Artaxerxes Longimanus.

But to return to Smerdis: He omitted nothing to secure himself in the Possession of the Throne of Persia. He marry'd Atossa Daughter of Cyrus, and granted his Subjects an Exemption from Taxes, and all military Services, for three Years: And as he had great Reason to be afraid of every thing, if it should be once known that he was not the real Smerdis, he took great Care to avoid appearing in Publick; which was no unusual thing in Persia, where their Kings, to preserve the Respect due to Majesty, shew'd themselves but very seldom in Publick. Yet this exceeding Caution of his made him the more suspected. Ozanes, one of the noblest of the Persians, and whose Daughter Phedyma was of the Number of the King's Wives, privately enquired of his Daughter, If the King was the true Smerdis or no? She gave him to understand, that having never seen Smerdis the Son of Cyrus, she could be no Judge of this Matter. He gave her Orders to enquire into the Truth of this, by the means of Atossa the Daughter of Cyrus, and Sister to Smerdis. But Phedyma let her Father know, that the Wives of the King had no Correspondence with one another, nor were allow'd to see one another. At last, Ozanes gave his Daughter Orders to observe, whether or no the King had his Ears; for Cyrus had cau'd the Ears of the counterfeit Smerdis to be cut off, having been convicted of some Crime. Phedyma very artificially discharged this Commission, and while the King was sleeping very soundly by her, she satisfy'd herself, that his Ears were not to be found, of which she gave Intelligence to her Father.

Ozanes open'd the Matter to six of the chief of the Nobility, who forming a Party against him, enter'd the Palace, fell upon the Usurper, and upon his Brother Pasisthes the Contriver of this Intrigue: They kill'd them both, [c] and exposing their Heads to the People, the whole Imposture was fully discover'd. Darius the Son of Histaspes succeeded Smerdis, in the manner as is related under his Article.

SMIRIS, a Burnish-stone; a certain very hard Stone. See SAMIR.

SMITE. To Smite, is often used for to put to Death. David smote the Philistine: he put Goliah to Death. The Lord smote Nabal; he smote Uzzah; that is, he put them to Death. To Smite, is also put for to Afflict, to strike with Fear, with the Pestilence, with Poverty, with Ulcers, with Distempers, with Wounds. To smite an Army, is, to beat it, to rout it intirely. To smite the Camp of the Philistines, is, to disperse it, to obtain a Victory over them. Percutere fœdus, is literally, to strike or smite a Covenant, to contract an Alliance; because generally they kill'd Animals, and offered Sacrifices, for ratifying Covenants or Alliances. God smote the Philistines, Psal. lxxviii. 66.
in posteriora; he sent them the Piles, or Hemorrhoides, or other Diseases of the Fundament. To smite the Tongue, Jer. xviii. 18. Venite & percutiamus eum linguâ; Let us overwhelm him with Injuries and Reproaches; Let us load him with all sorts of scandalous Reflections. To smite or strike the Hands, is sometimes an Action of Applause and Approbation; and at other times is a Token of Grief, Trouble, and Astonishment.

SMYRNA, a City of Asia Minor, upon the Archipelago, having a fine Harbour. St. John the Evangelist, in his Revelation, or rather Jesus Christ by the Mouth of St. John, thus speaks to the Angel or Bishop of Smyrna: These things Rev. ii. 8, 9, 10.
saith the first and the last, which was dead, and is alive. I know thy Works, and Tribulation, and Poverty, (but thou art rich), and I know the Blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but are the Synagogue of Satan. Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer: behold, the Devil shall cast some of you into Prison, that ye may be tried, and ye shall have Tribulation ten Days. Be thou faithful unto Death, and I will give thee a Crown of Life.

Tis asked, Who was this Angel, or this Bishop of Smyrna? The Generality think [a] it was St. Polycarp, who was made Bishop of Smyrna by the Apostle St. John the Evangelist [b]. The Commendations which the Holy Ghost here gives to the Angel of Smyrna, perfectly well agree with St. Polycarp; and it is observable, that here is not one Word of Reproach. There is some Probability, that 'tis the Martyrdom of St. Germanicus, and of the other Martyrs of Smyrna, who suffer'd Martyrdom under Marcus Aurelius, that St. John has here in View, when he says, that the Devil shall cause some of them to be put in Prison.

Exod. xxv. 38. & xxxvii. 23. מלקחים SNUFFERS, Emunctoria. The Snuffers mention'd in Scripture, were to snuff the Lamps of the great golden Candlestick with seven Branches, that was in the Sanctuary. Their Matter was Gold, and their Form was probably like our Snuffers or Pinchers, which we use to snuff our Lamps or Candles. The original Word comes from a Root that signifies, to lay hold of, to pinch, to shut up, to receive.

SO, or Sua, a King of Egypt: He made an Alliance with Hoshea King of Israel, [c] and having promis'd him all sorts of Assistance, yet gave him none at all, nor prevented Shalmaneser King of Assyria from taking Samaria, and subverting the Kingdom of Israel, in the Year of the World 3283, before Christ 717, before the Vulgar Era 721. Usher and Marsham think that So, otherwise Soos or Sous, is the same as Sabachon King of Ethiopia, [d] who is taken for the first King of the Dynasty of the Egyptians in Egypt. Usher says, he began to reign in Egypt in the Year of the World 3277, having taken and burnt alive Bocchoris King of this Country. He reign'd eight Years, from 3277 to 3285, before Christ 723, before the Vulgar Era 727. He had for his Successor Sevechus, whom Usher thinks to be the same as Sethon, mention'd by Herodotus, l. 2. c. 141.

SOBA; Syria of Soba, or Aram of Soba. We think Soba to be a City which gave its Name to a Part of Syria. But this City having been destroy'd, or else having chang'd its Name, we cannot certainly say how far Syria of Soba extended. It appears to us, that it must have been at the Northern Extremity of Celo-Syria, from Libanus and Antilibanus as far as towards Antioch; for it is different from Syria of Damascus, of Emath, of Rohob, of Maachah, and of Geshur. Soba is call'd Sobol, or Sobal, in Judith iii. 1, 14. I suppose Soba or Sobal might be Hoba or Hobal, or Abyla, lying between Libanus and Antilibanus.

II. SOBAL, Syria of Sobal. See SOBA.

SOBER, Sobriety: This is commonly taken for the Vertue opposite to Intemperance. Sometimes also it is put for Moderation, Modesty, and that Vertue that knows how to chuse the Mean or Mediocrity in every thing. For I say, through Rom. xii. 3.
the Grace given unto me, to every Man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every Man the Measure of Faith. St. Paul would have Women dress themselves in 1 Tim. ii. 9.
modest Apparel, with Shame-facedness and Sobriety, as Decency requires. Also the Word Sobriety is taken for Vigilance: [e] A Bishop must be vigilant, sober. Elsewhere it is taken for Prudent, Moderate: [f] For God has not given us the Spirit of Fear; but of Power, and of Love, and of a sound Mind, or Sobriety. When Antiochus Epiphanes was told of the Murther of the High-priest Onias, he was so moved at it, that he shed Tears; remembring the Wisdom and the Moderation of that Great Man: Because of the sober and modest Be- 2 Macc. iv. 37.

SOCOH, Soco, or Socho, a City of Judah, Josh. xv. 35. 1 Sam. xvii. 1. Heber, of whom mention is made in the Chronicles, repair'd Socoh, 1 Chron. iv. 18. and his Family dwelt there. Rehoboam fortify'd it afterwards: See 2 Chron. xi. 7. Eusebius says, there were two Cities of Socoh, one the Higher, and the other the Lower Socoh, nine Miles from Eleutheropolis towards Jerusalem.

SODOM, the capital City of Pentapolis, which for some time was the Dwelling-place of Lot the Nephew of Abraham. Gen. xiii. 12, 13.
The Crimes of this City were come to such an Height, that God destroy'd it by Fire from Heaven, with three other neighbouring Cities, Gomorrah, Zeboim, and Admah, which were as wicked as it self [g]. The Plain wherein they stood, which before was pleasant and fruitful like an earthly Paradise, was first inflamed by Lightning, which put Fire to the Bitumen, with which it was replete, and was afterwards overflow'd by the Waters of the Jordan, which diffused themselves there, and form'd the Dead-sea, or Lake of Sodom, call'd also

'Tis believed Sodom was one of the more Southermost of the five Cities that were destroy'd by the Fire from Heaven, because it was near Zoar, which was known to be beyond the Southermost Point of the Dead-sea.

'Tis doubted whether it was within the Space of Land that now is possess'd by this Sea, or whether it was only upon its
Jer. xlix. 18. & l. 38. Border. The Prophets speak often enough of the Destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, or make Allusions to it, and every-where insinuate, that these Places shall be desert, dry'd up, and uninhabited; that they shall be Places cover'd with Briars and Brambles, a Land of Salt and Sulphur, where there can be neither Planting nor Sowing: Sic-

In a Word: Through all the Scripture the Ruin of Sodom and Gomorrah is represented as one of the most
Joseph. de Bello, l. 5. c. 5. p. 892. f. signal Effects of God's Anger. Josephus says, that round about the Lake of Sodom, and about the Cities that were heretofore destroy'd by Fire from Heaven, the Land is all burnt up, and there are still to be seen the dismal Effects of this terrible Burning, and the Remains of those unfortunate Cities [a]. The Fruits which grow there have a fine outward Appearance, and seem to the Sight to be good to eat; but they are full of Ashes, and, when open'd, they fly away in Dust.

It should seem then, that in Josephus's Time, the Ruins of these five Cities were Strab. Geograph. l. 15. still in Being. Strabo also speaks of the Ruins of Sodom, which were sixty Furlongs in Compass, and were to be seen on the Shore of the Dead-sea. The Notitia makes express mention of Sodom as an Episcopal City. There is found one Severus a Bishop of Sodom, among the Bishops of Arabia, who subscribed to the first Council of Nice. M. Reland cannot persuade himself that Sodom was ever rebuilt; he believes the Word Sodom, which is read among the Subscriptions to the Council of Nice, must be a Fault of the Copiers; but I cannot be of his Opinion. The Record is very circumstantial; it puts the Episcopal City of Sodom between Thamar and En-geddi. Stephen the Geographer [b] also puts En-geddi near Sodom. So that I cannot see it can be made a Question of, that the City of Sodom was rebuilt, either in the same Place it was before, or over-against this Place; for tho' it appears to me very probable, that it was not cover'd by the Waters of the Dead-sea, and that it stood upon the Shore of this Sea, yet I would not too strenuously oppose the common Opinion, that holds the contrary.

Lake of Sodom, or Sea of Sodom. See ASPHALTITES.

SODOMY; a Crime against Nature, which consists in the abominable Use of a Man, as if he were a Woman. This Crime drew down the most terrible Effects of God's Anger against the Inhabitants of Gen. xix. 5, 6, 23, 24, &c.
Sodom, Gomorrah, Admah, and Zeboim. 'Twas this same Enormity, with several others, which was the Reason that God destroy'd the Canaanites by the Arms of the Hebrews, under the Conduct of Joshua. The Inhabitants of Gibeah were Judg. xix. xx.
also given to this abominable Sin; which brought a War against the whole Tribe of Benjamin, which had like to have utterly exterminated them. Moses con- Lev. xviii. 22. & xx. 13.

SOGANE, a Village of Gaulanitis, beyond Jordan. Josephus [c] being Governor of Galilee, caus'd it to be fortify'd. It appears to be twenty Miles from Gabara. De Vitâ suâ, p. 1019. It should be read of Gadara, instead of of the Arabians, which the Text insinuates.

SOHEM, or Shohem, a sort of precious Stone, which is often spoke of in the Scripture. St. Jerom and the Septuagint generally render this Word by the Onyx-stone; Gen. ii. 12. שהם, Shohem.
but we think it rather signifies an Emerald. See Gen. ii. 12. and the Article of PRECIOUS STONES. In the History of the East, we find several Princes by the Name of Soheme, so call'd from the Hebrew Word Sohem, an Emerald or Onyx.

SOLARIUM, a Roof. By the Word עג, Gag. Tectum, Solarium.
Solarium, St. Jerom commonly translates the Terrass or Plat-form which serv'd for the Roof or Covering of the House. Rahab lodg'd Joshua's Spies upon the Plat-form of her House: In solarium domûs suæ. Josh. ii. 6.
Samuel also put Saul to lodge there. These 1 Sam. ix. 25.

Luke v. 19. out the Houſe. Thus, in the Goſpel, thoſe that brought the Paralytick to our Saviour, not being able to bring him through the Door of the Houſe, becauſe of the Croud that was there, carry'd him upon the Solar or Roof, and having taken up ſome of the Covering, they let him down, with his Bed, and all, before Jeſus Chriſt. In the ſame Senſe we are to underſtand what our Mat. xxiv. 17. Luke xvii. 31. Saviour ſays, that thoſe who are upon the Houſe-top, ſhould not come down to take any thing out of the Houſe, but ſhould make haſte to ſave themſelves. To ſave themſelves, they muſt indeed come down; but he would have them come down by the Stairs that were without the Houſe, and not enter into the Houſe at all, to amuſe themſelves with taking Leave, or providing Cloaths or Proviſions. See our Diſſertation upon the Dwellings of the ancient Hebrews, before the Commentary upon Judges.

SOLIMA, or Solyma. This Name is ſometimes given to Jeruſalem. See its Article.

SOLITUDE, Deſart, or Wilderneſs [a]. The Hebrews give the Name of Wilderneſs to all Places that are not cultivated, but which are chiefly deſtin'd to the feeding of Cattle, and on which Trees grow wild. So when a Deſart or Wilderneſs is mention'd in Scripture, we muſt not imagine it to be a Place forſaken, abandon'd, void of Cities or Inhabitants; this Word only repreſents the Soil near a City or Village which was appointed for Paſture, and where the Plough never came. Thus, in Scripture, there are few Cities which had not their Wilderneſs, Deſart, or Solitude. Thus we read of the Deſarts of Zin, of Kadeſh, of Tekoa, of Auran, of Damaſcus, of Ziph, of Jeruel, of Jericho, of Jeruſalem, of Maon, of Gibeon, of Bethel, of En-geddi, of Bethſaida, and ſo of others. See DESART.

SOLOMON, or Salomon, Son of David and Bath-ſheba, was born in the Year of the World 2971, before Chriſt 1029, before the Vulgar Era 1033. His Name Solomon ſignifies Pacifick, or Peaceable. 2 Sam. xii. 24, 25. The Lord loved him, and ſent the Prophet Nathan to David, to aſſure him of his Affection towards the Child, and to give Solomon the Name of Jedidiah, or, The Beloved of the Lord. This was, probably, when Nathan aſſured David, that this Son ſhould ſucceed him, and that it ſhould be he that ſhould inherit the Promiſes that the Lord had made him ſome Years before, [b] when he had conceiv'd the Deſign of building a Temple to the Lord: For then God told him, by the Prophet Nathan, [c] "You ſhall not build "me an Houſe; but when your "Days are compleated, and you are gather'd to your Fathers, I will ſet one "of your Children upon the Throne after "you, and will ſtrengthen his Reign; "'tis he that ſhall build a Houſe to my "Name, and I will eſtabliſh his Throne "for ever: I will be a Father to him, "and he ſhall be my Son, and I will not "take away my Mercy from him, as I "did from your Predeceſſor: I will fix him "in my Kingdom and in my Houſe for "ever, and his Throne ſhall not be "ſhaken: I will be his Father, and he "ſhall be my Son; and if he does any "thing amiſs, I will chaſtiſe him with "the Rod with which Men are chaſtiſed, "and will puniſh him with the Stripes "with which the Children of Men are "puniſhed, but will not take away my "Mercy from him."

From this time David thought only of preparing what was neceſſary for the building of the Temple, and of giving Solomon ſuch an Education as might bear ſome Proportion to the great Deſigns that God had ordained him to. But towards the End of David's Reign, [d] Adonijah, David's eldeſt Son, began to make himſelf popular, to ſet up a Court, and to act as if he were to ſucceed to the Crown of his Father. David did not reſtrain him; Joab, Abiathar, and ſeveral of the principal Men 1 Kings i. 5, 6, 7. of the Court, were in his Intereſt: But he had neither Zadok the High-prieſt, nor Benaiah, nor the Prophet Nathan, on his Side. One Day, when Adonijah had invited ſeveral of his Friends to a great Feaſt, which he prepared for them near the Fountain of Rogel, he invited neither Zadok, nor Nathan, nor Benaiah. Upon which, Nathan went to Bath-ſheba the Mother of Solomon, and ſaid to her; "Do you know that Adonijah is going to "declare himſelf King, without David's "Knowledge or Conſent? Go therefore, "and preſent yourſelf before the King, "and ſay to him; My Lord the King, "did not you promiſe me with an Oath, "that Solomon my Son ſhould reign after "you? Why then does Adonijah reign? "While you are ſpeaking thus to the "King, I will come in, and ſupport what "you ſhall ſay."

Bath-ſheba follow'd Nathan's Counſel; and David being inform'd of Adonijah's 1 Kings i. 32, 33, 34. Intrigues, ſent for Zadok the High-prieſt, the Prophet Nathan, and Benaiah the Son of Jehoiada, and gave them theſe Orders; "Go and ſet my Son Solomon upon "my own Mule, and conduct him to "Gihon, where let Zadok and Nathan "give him the Royal Unction, and ſound "the

This Prince bleſſed the Lord on his Account, ſaying; " Bleſſed be the " Lord, who has this Day permitted me " to ſee with my own Eyes my Son " Solomon ſitting upon my Throne."

Thoſe that were with Adonijah, hearing [1 Kings i. 49.] what had paſſed, roſe from Table in a great Conſternation, and every one retired to his own Home. Adonijah himſelf, being in fear of King Solomon's Reſentment, took Refuge at the Horns of the Altar, and made his humble Supplication to this Prince, That he would promiſe him, upon Oath, not to put him to Death. Solomon made anſwer, That if he behaved himſelf for the future like a good Man, and a faithful Subject, one Hair of his Head ſhould not fall to the Ground; but if he ſhould ever find him guilty of any evil Practices, he ſhould ſurely die. Adonijah upon this quitted his Azylum, and came to pay his Duty to King Solomon.

And now the Day of David's Death being near at Hand, [a] he ſent for his Son [1 Kings ii. 1, 2, 3.] Solomon to him, and earneſtly recommended to him a ſtrict Fidelity and Piety towards God. He bid him not let Joab or Shimei go unpuniſh'd; but to ſhew all poſſible Friendſhip and Acknowledgment to the Sons of Barzillai, who had ſuccour'd him in his Diſtreſs. He told him [1 Chron. xxii. 2, 3, 4, 5. & xxviii.] alſo, that ſince God had reſerved for him the Honour of building him a Temple, he ought to diſcharge this Truſt with all poſſible Zeal and Diligence. He put into his Hands the Schemes that he had made for the Execution of this Undertaking, and the Accounts of the Treaſures he left him for the perfecting this Edifice. He gave him alſo the Liſts of the Prieſts and Levites, and the Courſes in which they were [1 Chron. xxiii, xxiv, xxv, xxvi.] to wait in the Temple. He gave him likewiſe the Schemes and Regulations of the Officers of his own Court, of the Civil Officers, of the Treaſurers, and of the Superintendants of the Revenues belonging [1 Chron. xxvii.] to the Crown. Laſtly, in a general Aſſembly of the People, and of all the great Men of the Kingdom, David deliver'd over all the Gold, Silver, and valuable Materials, that he had collected for the building of the Temple, and exhorted all [1 Chron. xxix. 1, 2, 3, &c.] that were preſent to make every one their Offering to the Lord, each according to his Abilities and Inclination. They all contributed with a chearful Heart, and the Quantity of Gold and Silver was very extraordinary. After which David died in the ſeventieth Year of his Age, having reign'd forty Years [b].

Solomon now enter'd into the full Poſſeſſion of the Kingdom of his Father, and was acknowledg'd by all Iſrael. Soon after this his Brother Adonijah made Interceſſion with Bath-ſheba, that ſhe would intreat for him with Solomon, that he might [1 Kings ii. 13, 14.] have Abiſhag the Shunammite to Wife. Bath-ſheba recommended this Requeſt of his to her Son Solomon; but he perceiving Adonijah's evil Intentions, that he asked for Abiſhag who had been Wife to David, only to ſtrengthen his Intereſt, and to favour the Pretenſions that he might one Day make to the Crown; Solomon order'd Adonijah to be put to Death. He alſo baniſh'd from his Preſence the High-prieſt Abiathar, and confin'd him to his Country-Houſe, becauſe he had been of Adonijah's Party. [1 Kings ii. 26, 27.] Laſtly, when Joab heard what had happen'd to Adonijah and Abiathar, he began to be afraid for himſelf, and retired into the Tabernacle as a Place of Refuge. Solomon commanded him to [1 Kings ii. 28, 29, &c.] be brought from thence, and to be put to Death. But Joab refuſing to forſake his Azylum, he order'd him to be ſlain in that very Place; deſiring that the Blood that had been unjuſtly ſpilt by that Man, might not be imputed to the Houſe of David, or be a Blemiſh to his Reign. Laſtly, Solomon order'd Shimei to build him a Houſe [1 Kings ii. 36, 37.] in Jeruſalem, and not to ſtir from thence. Shimei obey'd this Order for a Time, but then ſome Servants of his running away from him, and entering themſelves into the Service of Achiſh King of Gath, Shimei goes thither to reclaim them. When Solomon was inform'd of this, he ſent Benaiah the Son of Jehoiada to fall upon him and kill him.

Solomon being thus confirm'd in his Kingdom, [c] he contracted an Alliance with Pharaoh King of Egypt, and marry'd his Daughter. He brought her to Jeruſalem, and had Apartments for her in the City of David, till he ſhould build a Palace for her, as he did ſome Years after, when he had finiſh'd the Building of the Temple. [1 Kings iii. 1, 2, 3.] 'Tis thought it was on the Occaſion of this Marriage, that Solomon compoſed the Canticles, or Song of Songs, which is a Kind of Epithalamium. To the ſame Time and Occaſion is alſo referr'd Pſalm xlv. My Heart is enditing a good Matter, &c. This Marriage has not been generally approved. The Scripture ſpeaks of the Daughter of Pharaoh, as one that contributed to pervert Solomon; [1 Kings xi. 1, 2. Neh. xiii. 26.] and it is very likely, that at firſt this Princeſs might ſeem to be converted to the Lord, but afterwards might

After this [a] Solomon, accompany'd by all his Troops, and all Israel, went up to Gibeon, [b] which was then one of the most famous High-places in the whole Country. He there offer'd a thousand Burnt-offerings upon the brazen Altar that was in that Place. And the Night following God appear'd to him in a Dream, and said to him; "Ask of me what you have a "mind that I shall give you." After Solomon had returned Thanks for all the Favours that God had conferred upon his Father David, and for the Honour he had done him also, in placing him upon his Father's Throne; he begg'd of God to give him a wise and understanding Heart, and such Qualities as were necessary for the Government of the People committed to him. This Request was agreeable to the Lord, who said to him; "Since you "have asked neither Glory, nor Riches, "nor Victory over your Enemies, and "have desired only Wisdom to govern "your People; I grant it you, and shall "add all those other Things that you "might have asked me; so that no King "of all the Ages past shall have been "equal to you in this respect." At his awaking in the Morning he consider'd this Dream, and perceived it was not an ordinary Dream. He return'd to Jerusalem, where he offer'd a great Number of Sacrifices upon the Altar, which was before the Ark of the Lord, and made a great Feast for his Servants.

Then two Women of ill Reputation came before the King, [c] and said to him; "That one of them had stifled her Child "in her Sleep, and having privately con- "vey'd it to her Companion, she stole "away her live Child, and pretended it "to be her own." As each of these Women eagerly maintain'd the live Child to belong to her, and the dead one to the other, and no one could convince them, the thing being transacted without any Witnesses; the King bid the Attendants to cut the live Child into two equal Parts, that each of the Women might have half the Child they contended for. Then the real Mother of the Child, finding herself moved by natural Affection, said to the King; "Let not the Child be divided, "but rather let her take the whole Child." The other, on the contrary, approved of the Sentence of the King, and said; "Let "the Child be neither hers nor mine, but "let it be divided between us." Upon which Solomon, without any further Hesitation, determin'd, that the Child should not be kill'd, but given to her that was for preserving its Life, for she was the real Mother of it. All Israel hearing of this Decision, were fill'd with Reverence and Respect for the King, perceiving the great Wisdom that was in him.

Now Solomon enjoy'd a profound Peace through all his Dominions; all Judah and Israel lived in the greatest Security; and his Neighbours either pay'd him Tribute, or were his Friends and Allies. He ruled over all the Countries and Kingdoms, quite from the Euphrates to the Nile, and his Dominion extended even beyond the Euphrates. He had a very great Number of Horses and Chariots of War. Instances of his Wisdom were as numerous as the Sand of the Sea, and he exceeded all the Orientals, and all the Egyptians, in Wisdom and Prudence. In a Word, he was the wisest of Mankind, and his Reputation was spread through all Nations. He compos'd or collected three thousand Proverbs, and a thousand and five Canticles. (The Septuagint and several Interpreters read five thousand instead of a thousand and five, as it is in the Hebrew.) He knew the Nature of all Plants and Trees, from the Cedar upon Libanus, to the Hyssop that grows upon the Wall. He treated also of Beasts, of Birds, of Reptiles, of Fishes. There was a Concourse of Strangers from all Countries to hear his Wisdom, and Ambassadors from the most remote Princes that had heard of his Fame. He made Gold and Silver as common in Jerusalem as Stones in the Street; [d] and Cedars as plentiful as the Sycamores that grow in the Field. 1 Kings iv. 1, 2, 3, &c. 1 Kings iv. 24. 2 Chron. ix. 26.

As soon as Hiram King of Tyre knew that Solomon was made King of Israel, he sent Ambassadors to him, to congratulate his Accession to the Crown; and some time after, [e] Solomon sent Ambassadors to him, to desire him to supply him with Wood and Workmen, and to assist him in building a Temple to the Lord. [f] Hiram gladly undertook what Solomon desired of him: He sent him word, He would order Cedar-trees and Fir-trees to be cut down in Mount Libanus; that his People should put them on Floats, and bring them by Sea to the Harbour of Joppa, from whence Solomon might send to fetch them to Jerusalem. Solomon, on his Part, obliged himself to give Hiram for the Maintenance of his Family and Workmen, twenty thousand Measures of Wheat, and twenty thousand Measures of Oil.[a] Josephus adds,[b] that he furnish'd him with Wine also; (2 Chron. ii. 10.) and indeed in the Chronicles it is said, that Solomon gave to Hiram's Workmen, that work'd for him in Libanus, Wheat, Barley, Wine, and Oil.

Josephus says besides,[c] that even in his Time were preserved in the Archives of Tyre, the Letters that Solomon and Hiram wrote to each other. He cites Dion and Menander, who said that these two Princes us'd to send Ænigma's to one another, in order to be solved; that Solomon having once sent a Riddle to Hiram which he could not explain, Hiram was obliged to pay him a great Sum of Money. But after this a Tyrian, call'd Abdemon, gave a Solution of them, and proposed others to King Solomon, which he could not explain, and therefore was forc'd to give the King of Tyre a good Sum. Thus it is related by Josephus.

Solomon began to work upon the building of the Temple in the fourth Year of his Reign, and the second after the Death (1 Kings vi. 37.) of David;[d] four hundred and fourscore Years after the Coming out of Egypt[e]. We shall not here give a Description of this Temple, but refer the Reader to the Article of the Temple of Solomon. He employ'd in this great Work seventy thousand Proselytes, who were the Remains of the antient Canaanites, in carrying Burthens upon their Shoulders; fourscore thousand in cutting Stones out of the Quarries in the Mountains; and three thousand six hundred[f] to oversee the Works. Besides which, he employ'd thirty thousand Israelites to work in the Quarries of Libanus. These thirty thousand Men were commanded by Adoniram, and only ten thousand of them work'd at a Time, and that for a Month only, so that they had always two Months of Rest between. Hiram also (1 Kings v. 14.) sent to Jerusalem a very skilful Workman, whose Name also was Hiram,[g] whose Mother was of the Tribe of Dan,[h] and his Father was by Nation a Tyrian; he could work in Gold, Silver, Brass, Iron, Marble, Wood, and in all Sorts of Work of Linen, Embroidery, and Tapestry. He had the Direction of all the Works of the Temple. 'Twas he that had the Management of the Foundery, and cast most of the principal Things himself. See HIRAM.

The Temple of the Lord having been begun in the fourth Year of the Reign of Solomon, was compleated in his eleventh Year; so that he was but seven Years in performing this vast Piece of Work.[i] The Dedication was made in the Year following,[k] which was the 3001 Year of the World. To make this Ceremony the more august, Solomon chose for it the eighth Day of the seventh Month of the Holy Year,[l] which was the first of the Civil Year, and answer'd to our Month of October. The Ceremony of the Dedication lasted for seven Days, at the end of which began the Feast of Tabernacles, which continued still seven Days longer; so that all the People continued at Jerusalem fourteen or fifteen Days, from the eighth to the twenty-second of the seventh Month. Solomon caus'd to be present at this Solemnity all the Elders of Israel, and all the People. The Priests and Levites carry'd into the Temple, first, all the Presents that David had made to it, and which were laid up in the Treasuries of the Sanctuary; then they set up in their several Places, the Ornaments and Vessels appointed to the Service of the Altar and of the Sanctuary; lastly, they brought thither the Ark of the Covenant with great Solemnity, the King and all the People walking before, while the Priests offer'd an infinite Number of Sacrifices in all the Places through which the Ark passed.

When the Ark was placed in the Sanctuary, while the Priests and Levites, in their turns, were celebrating the Praises of the Lord, the Temple was fill'd with a miraculous Cloud; so that the Priests, out of Veneration, could no longer continue there, nor go on with performing the Functions of their Ministry. Then Solomon, being upon his Throne,[m] prostrated himself with his Face to the Ground; then raising himself up, and turning towards the Sanctuary, he address'd his Prayer to God, and beseech'd him, that the House he had built might be acceptable to him, that he would bless and sanctify it, and hear the Prayers of those that should address themselves to him from this holy Place. He beseech'd him also to fulfil the Promises he had made to David his Servant, in favour of his Family, and of the Kings his Successors. As soon as he had finish'd his Devotions to God, he turn'd himself to the People, and blessed them; when (1 Kings viii. 55, 56. 2 Chron. vii. 1, 2, 3.) Fire coming down from Heaven, consumed the Victims and Burnt-sacrifices that were upon the Altar, and the Glory of the Lord fill'd the whole Temple; so that even the Priests could not go into the Temple, to perform their respective Offices.

Then

Then the Children of Israel, who were all Witnesses of this Miracle, fell down upon their Faces, worshipping and adoring the Lord.

On this Day the King caused to be sacrificed twenty-two thousand Oxen, and six-score thousand Sheep for Peace-Offerings. And because the Altar of Burnt-offerings was not sufficient for all these Victims, [a] the King consecrated the Court of the People, and there offer'd Sacrifices in great Numbers. But the Lord appear'd a second time to Solomon in a Dream; probably in the Night that follow'd the first Day of the Dedication; and said to him: "I have heard your Prayer, and have "chosen this Temple to be my House of "Sacrifice. My Eyes shall be open, and "my Ears attentive to the Prayers of those "that shall call upon me in this Place. "And as for you, if you walk before me "as David your Father walked before me, "and if you keep my Statutes and Ordinances, I will preserve your Throne, "and you shall always have Successors of "your Race, to sit upon your Throne. "But if you or your Children shall turn "away from me, I will destroy you out "of this Land that I have given you, and "will make my People the Reproach of "the World, and this Temple shall become an Occasion of Wonder to all Nations, because of the Destruction I shall "bring upon it."

After the seven Days of the Dedication were over, and the other seven Days of the Feast of Tabernacles, Solomon dismiss'd the Assembly of the Israelites, and all the People return'd to their own Habitations, praying that all sorts of Blessings might shower down upon the King. Solomon afterwards [b] thought of building himself a Palace, and another for his Queen the King of Egypt's Daughter. [c] He was thirteen Years in finishing these Buildings, and us'd therein whatever the most exquisite Art or the profusest Riches could furnish him with, to make them magnificent, and fit for the greatest Prince that was then in the East. The Palace in which he generally chose to reside, was call'd The House of the Forest of Libanon, probably because of the great Quantity of Cedar that was us'd therein, or because of the great Number of Columns on which it was built. To shew his Gratitude to Hiram King of Tyre, who had been very useful to him in his Buildings, [d] he gave him twenty Cities in the Province of Galilee. Hiram went to see them, but it seems he did not like them, for he said; What Cities are these which thou hast given me, my Brother? And he called them the Land of Cabul unto this Day. See the Article CABUL. Hiram also sent Solomon six-score Talents of Gold; probably he lent them Solomon to go on 1 Kings ix. 14.
with his Buildings.

Besides these vast Undertakings now mention'd, Solomon also built the Walls of Jerusalem, [e] the Place call'd Millo in the same City; he repair'd and fortify'd Hazor, Megiddo, Gezer, the two Beth-horons Upper and Lower, Baalath, and Palmyra in the Desart of Syria. He also fortify'd all the Cities where he made his Magazines of Corn, Wine, and Oil, and those where his Chariots and Horses were kept. He brought under his Government all the Hittites, the Hivites, the Amorites, and the Perizites, which any where remain'd in the Land of Israel. He made them Tributaries, and compell'd them to work at the publick Works he had undertaken. As to the Israelites, he would not employ them in this Labour, but made use of them in his Armies, and set them over his Chariots and Horses.

He fitted out a Fleet at Ezion-geber, and at Elath or Elan, upon the Red-sea, to go to Ophir. [f] Hiram King of Tyre furnish'd him with Mariners, and such as understood Navigation, who instructed the Subjects of Solomon. They perform'd this Voyage in three Years, and brought back with them Gold, Ivory, Ebony, precious Wood, Peacocks, Apes, and other Curiosities. [g] In one Voyage they brought Solomon four hundred and fifty Talents of Gold, or, as it is in the First Book of Kings, only four hundred and twenty. 1 Kings ix. 28.
About the same Time the Queen of Sheba, [h] a Country of Arabia-Felix, or, according to others, of the Isle of Meroe, formerly call'd Sheba, came to Jerusalem, attracted by the great Fame of King Solomon. She brought with her rich Presents of Gold, Spices, and Precious-stones; and with a Design to try if Solomon's Wisdom was as great as had been represented, she propos'd several Ænigma's and hard Questions to him, to hear his Solutions. But Solomon gave her such satisfactory Answers, that she own'd, what had been told her of his Wisdom and Magnificence, was far short of what she had found. The King, for his Part, conferr'd great Honours on her, and made her rich Presents, so that she return'd into her own Kingdom very well pleas'd. The Reader may see what has been said of the Queen of Sheba, under the Article NICAULE.

Solomon was one of the richest, if not the very richest of all Princes that have ever lived; and the Scripture expresly tells us, [a] he exceeded in Riches and Wisdom all the Kings of the Earth. We have already observed, that in his Time Silver was not regarded, because it was as plenty as the Stones in the Street. His annual Revenues were six hundred and sixty-six Talents of Gold, [b] without reckoning the Tributes which he received from tributary Kings and Nations, or the Subsidies paid by the Israelites, or the Sums that he received from the Merchants for his Customs. The Bucklers of his Guards, and the Throne that he sat upon, were overlaid with pure Gold. All the Vessels of his Table, and the Utensils of his Palaces, were of the same Metal. From all Parts they sent him Presents in Vessels of Gold and Silver, in precious Stuffs, in Spices, in Arms, in Horses and Mules; and the whole Earth had a Desire to see the Face of Solomon, and to hear the Wisdom that God had put into his Heart.

Hitherto we have seen nothing in Solomon, but what was truly great and admirable; but the later Actions of his Life sadly disgrace his Character. He deliver'd himself up to the Love of strange Women; [c] and besides Pharaoh's Daughter mention'd before, he marry'd Wives from among the Moabites, Ammonites, Idumeans, Sidonians, Hittites. He had to the Number of seven hundred Wives, who were as so many Queens, besides which he had three hundred Concubines. These Women perverted his Heart in his old Age, so that he worshipp'd Ashtoreth the Goddess of the Sidonians, Moloch the Idol of the Ammonites, and Chemosh the God of the Moabites. To these he built Temples upon the Mount of Olives, over-against, and to the East of Jerusalem. He did the same by all his strange Women, and had the Complaisance to build Temples for their Gods, to whom they offer'd Incense. Wherefore the Lord said to him in a Dream; "Since you have "not kept my Covenant, nor obey'd my "Commandments, I will rent and divide "your Kingdom, and will give it to one "of your Servants. However, I will not "do it in your Time, for the sake of my "Servant David, but I will divide it in "the Hands of your Son, to whom I will "leave but one Tribe, because of my Servant David." The Accomplishment of this Menace may be seen in the Article REHOBOAM; and Solomon, even before his Death, saw the Beginnings of this Revolt, and a Tendency towards it, in the Troubles raised by Jeroboam, and by Hadad the Idumean.

Solomon died after he had reign'd forty Years, in the Year of the World 3029, before Christ 1071, before the vulgar Era 1075. We think he might be about fifty-eight Years of Age; for he was about eighteen when he began to reign. Josephus allows him fourscore Years of Reign, and fourscore and fourteen Years of Life; but this is a manifest Error. (Joseph. Antiq. l. 8. c. 3. init.) The History of this Prince was written by the Prophets Nathan, Abijah, and Iddo. He was buried in the City of David, and Rehoboam his Son reigned in his stead, but not over all Israel. (2 Chron. ix. 29, 30.)

This is the Character that the Author of the Book of Ecclesiasticus gives of Solomon: (Ecclus. xlvii. 12, 13, 14, &c.) After David rose up a wise Son, and for his sake he dwelt at large: Solomon reigned in a peaceable Time, and was honoured; for God made all quiet round about him, that he might build an House in his Name, and prepare his Sanctuary for ever. How wise wast thou in thy Youth, and as a Flood filled with Understanding! Thy Soul covered the whole Earth, and thou filledst it with dark Parables. Thy Name went far unto the Islands, and for thy Peace thou wast beloved. The Countries marvelled at thee for thy Songs, and Proverbs, and Parables, and Interpretations. By the Name of the Lord God, which is called the Lord God of Israel, thou didst gather Gold as Tin, and didst multiply Silver as Lead. Thou didst bow thy Loins unto Women, and by thy Body thou wast brought into Subjection. Thou didst stain thy Honour, and pollute thy Seed, so that thou broughtest Wrath upon thy Children, and wast grieved for thy Folly. So the Kingdom was divided, and out of Ephraim ruled a rebellious Kingdom.

A famous Question is started here, concerning the Salvation of Solomon. Some decide it in his Favour, while others speak of him in a Manner much to his Disadvantage: But, in my Opinion, they are wisest that remain in Silence, and leave the Matter doubtful, as it really is. This is what they say, who are most favourable to the Salvation of this Prince: God says to David, speaking of Solomon; I will be his Father, and he shall be my Son; if he commit Iniquity, I will chasten him with the Rod of Men, and with the Stripes of the Children of Men. But my Mercy shall not depart away from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee. (2 Sam. vii. 14. 1 Chr. xvii. 11.) The Scripture says in another Place; For three Years they walked in the way of David and Solomon. (2 Chron. xi. 17.) Several Interpreters are of Opinion, that the Book of Ecclesiastes is a Monument of the Repentance of Solomon, and that this Prince compos'd it after his Fall. Bacchiarius, [d] an Author of the fifth Age, has writ expresly to prove the Salvation of Solomon. St. Irenæus [e], St. Hilary [f], St. Cyril of Jerusalem [g], St. Ambrose, broſe [a], St. Jerome [b], and ſeveral Moderns [c], maintain expreſsly, that Solomon repented and was ſaved.

Others doubt of his Repentance, and conſequently of his Salvation. The Scripture ſpeaks plainly of his Fall, and of his Idolatry, but it ſays nothing that can give any Aſſurance of his Repentance. That which ſome advance, that the Book of Eccleſiaſtes is the Fruits of his Converſion, can by no Means be proved; and the Paſſage of the Proverbs which is quoted for this Purpoſe, is not to be found, either in the Vulgate, or in the Hebrew Original. This is what that Paſſage intimates; At laſt I repented, and applied myſelf to chuſe a more regular way of Life. But the Hebrew ſays; I went by the Field of the Slothful, and by the Vineyard of the Man void of Underſtanding; And lo, it was all grown over with Thorns, and Nettles had covered the Face thereof, and the Stone-wall thereof was broken down. Then I ſaw, and conſidered it well; I looked upon it, and received Inſtruction. If it were true, that he ſeriouſly repented of his Fault, would he have left ſtanding upon the Mount of Olives, the Temples that he had built in Honour of Idols, and which were to be ſeen a long Time afterwards, even in the Time of Joſiah? The Author of Eccleſiaſticus, who has given us the Character of Solomon, has he made any mention of his Repentance? Do we ſee any Effect of it, in the revoking of that Sentence that God had pronounced againſt him? Or rather, do not we ſee the quite contrary? Finally, Several of the Fathers, as Tertullian [d], St. Cyprian [e], St. Auſtin [f], St. Gregory the Great [g], rank Solomon among the Reprobates. Several of the more modern Authors [h] are not more favourable to him; ſo that we may conclude, that the Salvation of this Prince, at leaſt his Repentance, is a thing very hazardous and doubtful. Thoſe Authors may be conſulted, who have expreſsly treated of this Queſtion, and the Diſſertation we have compoſed on this Subject, in our new Collection.

Pro. xxiv. 30, 31

2 Kings xxiii. 13.

Of all the ingenious Works that Solomon compoſed, we have nothing now remaining but his Proverbs, Eccleſiaſtes, and the Canticles, of which we have already ſpoken at length under their reſpective Articles. Some have alſo aſcribed to him the Book of Wiſdom, and even Eccleſiaſticus. But we have ſhewn under their ſeveral Titles, that theſe Opinions are very improbable. The Jews think he was the Author of Pſalm lxxii. Give the King thy Judgments, O God, and thy Righteouſneſs unto the King's Son, &c. And Pſalm cxxvii. Except the Lord build the Houſe, &c. There has alſo been publiſh'd under his Name, The Pſalter of Solomon, containing eighteen Pſalms, which were found in Greek in the Library of Ausburg by Andrew Schott; and which have been tranſlated into Latin, and given to the Publick, by Father John Lewis de la Cerda, with Explications after his manner. The Learned are agreed, [i] that they are none of Solomon's, but of ſome Helleniſtical Jew, much converſant in the reading of the ſacred Authors, who has compoſed them in Imitation of the Pſalms of David, of which he has pretty cloſely imitated the Stile; and has inſerted in them ſeveral Fragments of the Prophets Iſaiah and Ezekiel, which he has well enough accommodated to his Deſign.

Theſe eighteen Pſalms, pretended to be Solomon's, were not unknown to the Antients. They were formerly in the famous Alexandrian Manuſcript which is preſerved in England, as may be ſeen by the Index which is ſtill to be found at the End of the New Teſtament; tho' the Pſalms themſelves have either been torn out of the Book, or loſt by ſome Accident. [k] Lambecius makes mention of a Manuſcript in the Emperor's Library, wherein theſe Pſalms are found placed between the Books of Wiſdom and Eccleſiaſticus. The Author of the Synopſis under the Name of Athanaſius, Zonarus, and Balſamon upon the 59th Canon of Laodicea, and Nicephorus in his Stichometria, (or Enumeration of the Verſes contain'd in every Book of the Scripture,) make expreſs mention of the Pſalms of Solomon. [l] The Book at Ausburg copied by Andrew Schott, was ſent from Conſtantinople to Hæſchelius. [m] But the Hebrews had never any Knowledge of this Work, nor the Latins neither; and the antient Greeks, who might have been acquainted with it, have never quoted it as divine Scripture.

Some of the Orientals impute to Solomon the Invention of the Syriack and Arabick Letters; [n] and the Tradition of the Syrians is, that this Prince communicated the Syrian Characters to Hiram King of Tyre; and that, at the Requeſt of this Prince, he tranſlated not only his own Books, but all the other Scriptures too, into the Syrian Language. But theſe Traditions deſerve little Credit. The Origin of the Arabick Characters, or the Verſions of the Scripture into Syriack, are not so antient as Solomon; and besides, of what use could these Translations of the Scriptures into Syriack be to a Tyrian Prince, who spoke Phenician, that is, the same Language as Solomon?

Eupolemus, quoted in Eusebius, alledges [a] a pretended Letter of Solomon to Vapres King of Egypt, and Vapres's Answer to Solomon. Solomon notifies to him his Accession to the Crown, and asks him for Workmen to assist him in building a Temple to the Lord; and Vapres answers him, that he will send him fourscore thousand Workmen for this Undertaking. In the same Place is read a Letter of Solomon to Suran King of Tyre, Sidon, and Phenicia, by which Solomon gives him Notice of his Succession to the Kingdom, and desires him to send him Workmen. Together with Suram's Answer (probably he means Iram or Hiram,) in which he tells him he has sent him fourscore thousand Workmen, and among the rest a very skilful Architect, a Tyrian by Birth, but whose Mother was a Jewess. But these Letters are look'd upon as merely fictitious, as well as those which are to be seen in Josephus, which are pretty nearly of the same Taste, and writ with the same Design, but in a different Stile, and more conformable to what we find in the Scriptures.

Joseph. Antiq. l. 8. c. 2.

Josephus assures us, [b] that Solomon composed Books of Inchantments, and several Manners of Exorcisms, or of driving away Devils, so that they shall return no more. He adds, that he had seen Experiments of it by one Eleazar a Jew, who cured several that were possessed in the Presence of Vespasian, of his Sons, and of the Officers of his Army. The Exorcist put a Ring under the Nose of the possessed, in which was inclosed a certain Root prescribed by Solomon; at the meer Smell of this Root the Demon came forth, over-set the Patient, and left him as if he were dead; and for a farther Proof of the Truth of this Cure, they set at some Distance from the Patient a Glass of Water, which was overturn'd by the Demon as he pass'd away. Origen [c] speaks further of the Conjurations us'd by the Jews in his Time, to drive out Devils, by making use of some Writings that they pretended to have received from Solomon. The Orientals think, [d] he had the Secret of tying or chaining up Demons, and of commanding them. The Rabbins say, [e] that the Demon Asmodeus drove Solomon from his Throne, and reigned in his Place, while this Prince travell'd over the several Kingdoms and Provinces of the World; but at his Return to Jerusalem, he put Asmodeus to flight, and chain'd him up, so that he could not hurt any Body. He compell'd the same Demon to teach him the Art of cutting Stones for the Temple, without making any Noise.

The Greeks tell us, [f] that this Prince composed several Pieces in Physick, and wrote upon the Nature and Vertues of Stones, of Vegetables, and Simples. But King Hezekiah seeing the Abuse that was made of these Works, suppress'd them all. Yet this has not hindred, but that since his Time there have appear'd several Books of Secrets in Magick, Medicine, and Inchantments, under the Name of this Prince. They also quote several other Works under his Name; as, The Instruction of Solomon to his Son Rehoboam; Solomon's Hygromancy to the same; The Testament of Solomon; The Book of the Throne of Solomon; The Books of Magick compos'd by the Demons under the Name of Solomon; The Clavicula or Key of Solomon; The Ring of Solomon; The Contradiction of Solomon; and several others of this Nature. See M. Fabricius in his Apocryphal Writings of the Old Testament, p. 1040, 1041, &c. We have elsewhere observed, that some impute to Solomon the Book of Job [g].

Alcoran. c. 2.

The Orientials have entertain'd such a grand Idea of the Merit and great Qualifications of this Prince, that they give the Name of Solomon or Soliman to all the Kings, whom they thought had possessed the universal Empire of the whole Earth. They reckon up as far as forty, or even seventy-two, who they say have reigned successively for a great Number of Ages, before the Creation of Adam. All these Monarchs commanded each a Set of Creatures of their Kind, which was different from that of Adam, although they were reasonable Creatures as well as Men. They still expect another Lineage descended from Adam, after that now in being, which shall exceed them all in Majesty and Power, after which no more shall appear upon the Earth.

D'Herbelot. Bibl. Orient. p. 819.

They say that each of these Solimans had the Hereditary Possession of a Buckler, which they continually made Use of in the Wars they had with the Demons their Enemies; and which they transmit as a Pledge of the Empire to him that is to succeed them. They had also the Thundering Sword and the Buckler, which made them invincible in Fight. They say moreover, that like Solomon they had a familiar Spirit or Genius, which in the Shape

Shape of a Bird delivered all their Meſſages, and perform'd all their Orders. But leaving theſe Dreams, let us return to Solomon the Son of David.

They pretend he was not only King of the Jews, and of the neighbouring Nations ſubdued by David, but that he poſſeſſed alſo the univerſal Monarchy of the whole Earth. His Viſier, or prime Miniſter of State, was Aſaph, of whom the Scripture makes mention, and to whom David addreſſes ſeveral of his Pſalms. And not only all the Men of the World, but alſo the good and evil Spirits, the Birds, and even the Winds, were under his Direction. He had, as they ſay, a wonderful Ring, which diſcover'd to him not only Things preſent, but alſo the paſt and the future. The Form and Matter of his Throne was ſo magnificent as to exceed all Deſcription of it. Inſtead of a Canopy and Pavillion, he was ſhaded by Birds that continually flew about him. Twelve thouſand golden Thrones were at his Right-hand, and twelve thouſand of Silver at his Left-hand. The golden Thrones were the Seats of the Patriarchs and Prophets, and the Silver ones for the Doctors and wiſe Men that aſſiſted at his Councils.

The Demons being jealous of the Glory of Solomon, publiſh'd ſeveral Books of Magick and Superſtition in the Name of this Prince, in order to perſuade the Ignorant and Simple, that it was from theſe Books that Solomon derived his Knowledge in the Art of governing his Kingdom, which made him ſo famous in the World. But Solomon gather'd in all theſe pernicious Books, ſhut them up in a Cheſt under Lock and Key, and buried the Key under his Throne, that no one might get at it. But it happen'd that after the Death of this Prince, the Demons or Magicians took away theſe Books from this Place, and diſpers'd them over the World as the Works of Solomon. This perhaps is more than enough to ſhew the Genius of the Eaſtern People, and the great Veneration they have for Solomon even to this Day.

SOLYME, a Town beyond Jordan, in the Canton of Gaulon. Joſeph. Lib. de vitâ ſuâ, p. 1013.

SOLYMI. Homer, and the Poet Chœrilus, [a] have mention'd the Solymi, an antient and venerable People, who ſpoke Phenician, who wore their Hair cut round, and who dwelt in the Solymean Mountains, near a great Lake. Theſe are Marks which Joſephus and Tacitus thought to agree with the Jews, here call'd Solymi, becauſe of their capital City Jeruſalem; a Nation remarkable for the Singularity of their Laws, and of their Actions, ſpeaking Phenician or Hebrew, dwelling in a mountainous Country at Jeruſalem, ſituate in the Mountains, and near the Lake Aſphaltites, one of the greateſt Lakes known.

Yet notwithſtanding all theſe Tokens, many learned Men maintain, that the Solymi, ſpoke of by Homer and Chœrilus, are not the Jews. A Circumſtance which very much favours their Opinion is this, that according to Chœrilus the Solymi wore their Hair cut round, which was expreſly forbid to the Jews by Moſes. See Leviticus xix. 7. and SISOE. And beſides the Lake Aſphaltites was ſeven or eight Leagues from Jeruſalem. The Arms which the Poet aſſigns to them can hardly agree with the Jews. He ſays they wore Helmets made of the Leather of a Horſe's Head dry'd in the Smoke. The Jews had never much to do with Horſes in their Country, being much incommoded with Mountains.

But who then are theſe Solymi? Some think them to be the Moabites, or the Midianites, bordering upon the Lake Aſphaltites, and reckon'd among the Arabians, who, as Hiſtorians inform us, us'd to cut their Hair round in a Circle. 'Tis true, we do not any where find them call'd Solymi; but Joſephus [b] ſpeaks of a Town or Village of this Name, lying beyond the Jordan in the Gaulonitis. Others think, [c] that the Solymean Mountains were in Piſidia, near to Lycia; and that it is there that we muſt ſeek for the Solymi mention'd by Homer and Chœrilus.

SOPHA. Epiphanius ſays, that the Prophet Malachi was born in the City of Sopha, belonging to the Tribe of Zebulun.

SOPHACH. See SHOPHACH.

SOPHER, or Shopher, one of the Commanders of the Army of Zedekiah King of Judah, 2 Kings xxv. 19. But Sopher may rather be taken for a Scribe, Secretary, or Commiſſioner, who had the Superintendance of the King's Army. Shopher ſignifies a Secretary.

SOREK, or Sorec, a Brook that paſs'd through the Tribe of Dan. 'Twas alſo the Place where dwelt the famous Delilah, Samſon's Miſtreſs. [d] Euſebius ſays, it was not far from Zorah and Eſhtaol, which was the Place of Samſon's uſual Aboad [e].

Caphar-Sorek, or the Camp of Sorek, was a Town near Zorah, or Saraa, according to the ſame Euſebius.

The Wine of Sorek, was that which was made in the Vale of this Name. Some have thought it to be the same as the Wine of Askalon, which is famous among the Antients. The Brook of Sorek did not run far from this City. The Rabbins think Sorek to be a particular Kind of Plant or Vine, which bears a great Quantity of excellent Fruit, and at all Seasons. It is certain, that Sorek does not only signify the Grape or the Wine of the Valley of Sorek, but a Kind of Wine in general; and probably of the white or yellowish Grape, of which they made the White-wines in this

Isa. xix. 9. to yellow. Isaiah speaks of the Flax of

But this Opinion is without any Foundation.

SORROW, Tristitia; this is a Passion that contracts the Heart, sinks the Spirits, and spoils the Health of the Body. The Scripture advises us, not to suffer ourselves to be overcome with Sorrow. [a] St. Paul distinguishes two sorts of Sorrow; one a godly, and the other a worldly Sorrow.
2 Cor. vii. 10. Godly Sorrow worketh Repentance to Salvation not to be repented of; but the Sorrow of the World worketh Death. For behold, this self-same thing that ye sorrowed after a godly sort, what Carefulness it wrought in you, yea, what clearing of yourselves, yea, what Indignation, yea, what Fear, yea, what vehement Desire, yea, what Zeal, yea, what Revenge! He elsewhere reproves the Thes-

The Heart of the Wise is in the House of Mourning, but the Heart of Fools is in the House of Mirth.* He intends to tell us, that the grave and serious Air of a Master that reproves us, is more profitable than the Laughter and Caresses of those that flatter us. Jesus Christ upbraids the Pharisees with that counterfeit Air of Sorrow and Mortification, that they affected to put on when they fasted. But he would have his Disciples avoid all such Affectation, which are the Effects of Self-love, and to gain the Approbation of Men. Isaiah, describ- Matth. vi. 16.

I. SOSIPATER, or Sopater. Sosipater and Dositheus, two Captains of Judas Maccabeus's Army, [b] defeated ten thousand Men of the Army of Timotheus, who had shut themselves up in a strong Hold.

II. SOSIPATER, of whom St. Paul speaks in his Epistle to the Romans, was his Kinsman, as some think. Lucius, and Rom. xvi. 21.
Jason, and Sosipater, my Kinsmen, salute you. However, there is some Difficulty in this, since Jason was of Thessalonica, and Sosipater of Berea in Macedonia, and therefore very distant from Tarsus the Country of St. Paul. Origen believes they were ori- Origen in Rom. xvi.
ginally Gentiles, which is another Reason to think they were not the Apostle's Kinsmen. But in what Sense then does he call them his Kinsmen? Is it because they were of the same Nation, of the same Tribe, of the same City, of the same Religion, or that they were only ally'd to him? This is what can only be determin'd at Random. I even think that it may be confidently asserted, that this Sosipater, who was at Rome in the 58th Year of Jesus Christ, when St. Paul wrote his Epistle to the Romans, cannot be the Sosipater of Berea; since he accompanied St. Paul in the same Year 58, in his Journey to Jerusalem, and who probably went with him from Corinth, from whence the Epistle to the Romans was written, to go by way of Macedonia to Jerusalem. See Acts xx. 4, 5, 6, &c.

This is what we know of Sosipater. He was of Berea, as has been said; and it is very likely St. Paul converted him in the 52d Year of the vulgar Era, when he visited that City. The Latin Text of the Acts, and some Greek Manuscripts, call Acts xx. 4.
him Pyrrhus. When St. Paul departed from Corinth, in order to go to Jerusalem, Acts xx. 4, 5, 6. in the 58th Year of the vulgar Era, he was accompany'd by Sosipater, by Aristarchus, and some other Disciples, they came with him as far as Philippi, from whence Saint Paul sent them before him to Troas, where they staid for him, so that he could not be at the same Time at Rome, as has been observed. We know not what became of Sosipater after this Time: But the Latins make his Feast on the 25th of June, and

* In the Passages here quoted, our Translation takes Sorek as an Appellative, and not as a proper Name of a Place.

call him a Disciple of St. Paul's. The Greeks honour him upon the 28th or 29th of April. They join him with Jason, and call him a Kinsman of St. Paul's. Thus they confound Sosipater of Berea with him of Rome. We have made the same Mistake in our Commentary upon the Acts, and upon the Epistle to the Romans; and I know of no Commentator that has not done the same.

SOSIUS, a General of the Roman Army, who assisted Herod to make himself Master of Jerusalem, [a] when it was defended by Antigonus, Son of Aristobulus. See the Articles HEROD and ANTIGONUS.

SOSTHENES, Chief of the Synagogue of Corinth. The Jews of Corinth laying hold of St. Paul, carry'd him before the Tribunal of Gallio, and accused him of attempting to introduce a new Way of worshipping God among them. But the Proconsul sent them back again, and told them, That he would not enter into any Controversy, that had relation only to their own Laws and Ceremonies. Then they seized Sosthenes, the Chief of the Synagogue, [b] and began to beat him before the Tribunal; but Gallio would take no Cognizance of the Matter. This is the Account we have of it in the Acts. 'Tis disputed whether they were Jews or Gentiles, that thus laid hold on Sosthenes and beat him. The Greek printed Copy of the Acts intimates, they were the Gentiles. St. Austin [c] and Bede read in the same manner. They imagin'd, that the Pagans seeing Gallio's ill Reception of the Jews, the more to insult them, had a mind to abuse the Chief of their Synagogue, who was at their Head; whether it was meerly out of Hatred to the Jews, or out of Friendship to St. Paul. This Opinion is follow'd by Cajetan, Lyran, Grotius, and some others.

Others [d] think, that Sosthenes, however Head of the Synagogue, yet might be a Friend and secret Disciple of St. Paul's; and that the other Jews, seeing themselves neglected by Gallio, might vent their Malice upon Sosthenes the Head of their Synagogue. These will also have it, that this is the same Sosthenes whose Name is read, with that of St. Paul, at the Beginning of the first Epistle to the Corinthians, written from Ephesus in the 56th Year of the vulgar Era, three Years after this Scuffle happen'd at Corinth. However, it must be own'd, that this Opinion has not always been universal in the Church; since, in the Time of Eusebius, [e] it was thought, that Sosthenes was one of the seventy-two Disciples, and consequently he could not be Chief of the Synagogue of Corinth twenty Years after the Death of Jesus Christ. The Greeks keep his Feast upon the 8th of December, and give him the Title of an Apostle, as being one of the Seventy. They also make him the first Bishop of Colophon. The Latins, ever since the ninth Century, honour him as a Disciple of St. Paul's, upon the 11th of June, and the 28th of November. See M. de Tillemont, t. 1. Hist. Eccl. Not. 45. upon St. Paul p. 592.

SOSTRATUS. He commanded the Fortress that the Greeks had built in the upper City of Jerusalem, for Antiochus Epiphanes. [f] He having earnestly press'd, but to little Purpose, the Highpriest Menelaus to go with the Money that he ow'd King Antiochus; was sent for to Antioch with the same Menelaus, and had the Government of the Isle of Cyprus bestow'd on him. Thus it is in the Latin Text; but the Greek reads it, [g] Sostratus left in his Place, (in the Citadel of Jerusalem) Crates, who had been (or then was) Governor of Cyprus, or Commander of the Troops that the King of Syria had then in that Island.

SOUL. The Word Soul is very equivocal, in the Stile of the Hebrews. It is taken for the Soul that animates Mankind, for that which animates Beasts, for a living Person: Give me the Souls, says the King Gen. xiv. 21.
of Sodom to Abraham, and take the Goods Gen. xii. 5.
to thy self. And elsewhere; Abraham took Sarai his Wife, and Lot his Brother's Son, and their Substance that they had gathered, and the Souls that they had gotten in Haran; that is to say, the Slaves they had purchased, or the Children that had been born to them.

The Soul is also taken for the Life: Gen. xxxii. 30.
My Life [Heb. Soul] is preserved. And, Genesis xxxvii. 22.
Kill not his Soul; or, Put him not to Death. My Soul shall live; or, Thou shalt preserve me alive. Those that sought my Soul, or, had a Design upon my Life. Not to take his Soul in vain; or, Not to swear falsely by his Life.

Deut. xii. 23. Gen. ix. 9, 10. Prov. xii. 10.

There is in this Dictionary a particular Article about BEASTS, wherein we enquire into the Sentiments that the ancient Hebrews and Orientals profess'd concerning their Souls.

A great Number of Questions may be proposed, concerning the Soul of Man, its Nature or Essence, and concerning its Creation. Whether all Souls were created at the Beginning of the World, or whether God still creates them every Day? Whether the Soul be immortal? Whether it passes from Body to Body by a Transmigration? Whether all Souls are equally enlightned and perfect? We shall add a Word or two concerning each of these Questions. We have already treated of this Matter at its full Length in a particular Dissertation, which may be found in the new Collection of our Dissertations, printed in three Volumes, t. 1. p. 460, &c.

When God had form'd the Body of Man out of the Dust, or out of the Mud of the Earth, he breathed into his Nostrils the Breath of Life, and Man became a living Soul, or, a living Man. This Breath of Life, has been consider'd by some, as the Principle of the Animal Life of Man, which, in this respect, according to them, is in nothing different from that of a Beast. God gives to Men and to Brutes a Breath of Life, or a vivifying Spirit: Omnem carnem in quâ est spiritus vitæ; that is to say, All the Animals that were to be consumed and put to Death by the Waters of the Deluge. 'Tis this Spirit of Life that God withdraws when he pleases, and brings all Flesh to Corruption: Si spiritum illius & flatum ad se trahat, deficiet omnis caro simul, says Job. And the Psalmist, speaking of the Animals, to which God gives their Subsistence, says, Thou takest away their Breath, they die, and return to their Dust. And Solomon; Then shall the Dust return to the Earth as it was, and the Spirit shall return unto God who gave it. And St. Paul, speaking to the Philosophers of Athens, says, That God requires not a bodily Worship, as having need of any thing, seeing he giveth to all Life, and Breath, and all things.

Gen. ii. 7. Grot. in Genes. Gen. vi. 17. Job xxxiv. 14. Psal. civ. 29. Eccl. xii. 7. Acts xvii. 25.

But besides this Spirit, this Breath, which is in us the Principle of animal Life, which is common to Men and to Brutes, and which is scattered and dispersed after Death, we must acknowledge, that there is in Man a spiritual Substance, a reasonable and immortal Soul, the Origin of our Thoughts, of our Desires, of our Reasonings; which distinguishes us from the Brute Creation, and in which chiefly consists our Resemblance to God: Faciamus hominem ad imaginem & similitudinem nostram. This Substance must be spiritual, because it thinks; it must be immortal, because it is spiritual. Some Philosophers have been of Opinion, that it was a Portion of the Deity: Divinæ particulam auræ. But how can the Deity be conceived to be obnoxious to the Evils and Weaknesses of our Souls; to Sin, to Desire, to Pain?

Gen. i. 26. Plato, p. 78, 80, 81, 95. &c. Horat. l. 2. sat. 2.

'Tis true, the Scripture ascribes both to Man and Beast, a Soul, a Spirit, Life, and Respiration; but it allows to Man alone the Privilege of Understanding, the Knowledge of God, Wisdom, Immortality, the Hope of future Happiness, and of eternal Life. It only threatens Men with the Punishments of another Life, and the Pains of Hell.

But are Souls meerly spiritual, without any Mixture of Matter, even the most fine and subtile? This is the Opinion of Christian Philosophers and Divines. The Antients were not convinced of this Principle. The ancient Compiler of the Book of Enoch thought the Angels to be corporeal, and consequently the Souls of Men; since he supposes Souls to be of the same Nature as the Angels. The ancient Greek and Latin Fathers, who read in the Book of Genesis, [a] that the Angels of God saw that the Daughters of Men were handsome, and took to themselves such as they thought fit to be their Wives, and from them produced Giants; those Fathers, I say, made no doubt of their having Bodies, and that they were susceptible of all those Passions, which are the natural Consequences of those Bodies, and that Matter, which they imputed to them.

But as it was very difficult to reconcile this Opinion, of the Materiality of the Soul with its other Properties, which can only agree to a pure Spirit; they persuaded themselves, that the Soul was composed of two Parts; one purely spiritual, which has the Faculty of Thinking, and which approaches to the Nature of God; and the other subtile, penetrating, and approaching to the Nature of very fine Air. The Author of the Book of Enoch, of which we have ſpoken, ſays, that the Spirits of the Souls of Men put up their Sighs even to Heaven. The Spirit, or the Underſtanding is incloſed in the Soul, as in its Caſe. The Soul, when ſeparated from the Body has ſtill a Reſemblance of the Body which it animated, and is, as it were, the Image of it. But the Spirit, the Intellectual Part, has nothing that is ſenſible or corporeal. When Souls appear to Men after Death, 'tis the Soul, and not the Spirit, that returns. The Soul of Patroclus appear'd to Achilles; it reſembled the Hero it had animated; it had his Stature, his Eyes, his Voice, and even his very Cloaths. When Ulyſſes deſcended into Hell, he there ſaw the divine Hector; that is to ſay, his Image, his Soul; for as to himſelf, or his Spirit, it was with the immortal Gods, partaking of their Joys and Feſtivals.

Homer. Iliad. xxiii.

Id. Odyſſ. Λ. v. 600.

The Rabbins alſo aſcribe to Souls, after their Separation from the Body, another ſubtile Body, which they call the Veſſel or Scabbard of the Soul. They hold, that immediately after Death, the Souls of the Wicked are inveſted with a kind of Cloaths, in which they are condemned to ſuffer: That the Souls of the Saints, on the contrary, are clad in a magnificent Habit, and with a ſplendid Body, by the Help of which they are inured to the Brightneſs and Felicity of their happy State. The Apoſtles made no Doubt of the Apparition of Spirits, and thought theſe Spirits to have the Form and Appearance, the Voice, and all the outward Marks of the Perſons to which they belonged. The Giants of old, who groan'd under the Waters, and the Kings of the Nations that are under the Earth, are repreſented to us, as having the ſame Enſigns of Honour, the ſame outward Form, as they had upon Earth. When Jeſus Chriſt appear'd to his Apoſtles after his Reſurrection, St. Thomas, fearing it was only a meer Phantom, or a Spirit, ſuch as ſometimes appear'd, according to the Opinion of the People, and that no Concluſion could be drawn from thence, that the Bodies were riſen; our Saviour, to confirm him, and to remove his Scruples, bid him touch him, and lay his Hand upon his Wounds, to convince him that he was really riſen: And when all on a ſudden he preſented himſelf in the midſt of his Diſciples, he ſays to them, Why are ye troubled, and why do Thoughts ariſe in your Hearts? Behold my Hands and my Feet, that it is I my ſelf: Handle me, and ſee; for a Spirit has not Fleſh and Bones, as ye ſee me have.

Perhaps it will be ſaid, that theſe Sentiments of the Apoſtles are only ſome Remains of thoſe Prejudices that they had imbibed from Judaiſm, and from which they were afterwards deliver'd, after the Deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt. It may be pretended, that the Opinions of the Rabbins, are Errors extracted from the Philoſophy of the Pagans, who not being illuminated by the Light of Faith and Revelation, have form'd to themſelves plauſible Syſtems, to explain what was advanced concerning Souls. I ſhall not ſtay here, only to explain what the ancient Jews believed about this Article, without giving my ſelf the Trouble to refute it.

We commonly believe, that God creates Souls at the time that Bodies are produced, which they are to inform. The Jews, [a] on the contrary, think that God created them all at the Beginning, and that they come to join themſelves to Bodies, drawn by a certain Attraction which it was not eaſy to reſiſt. The Angels, the Demons, and Souls, are Subſtances of the ſame Nature, ſays Philo [b]; they differ only in Name. As there are good and bad Angels, ſo there are alſo good and bad Souls. The Angels and Souls make their Abode in the pureſt and higheſt Region of the Air, from whence they deſcend into the Bodies which they animate, and bring thither either their good or bad Qualities. The Eſſenians, ſays Joſephus [c] hold Souls to be immortal, and that drawn by a certain natural Attraction, they come to ſhut themſelves up in human Bodies, as in Priſons; that after Death, thoſe who have lived well, withdraw into delicious Places beyond the Ocean; and that thoſe who have lived ill, are baniſh'd to dark Places, there to ſuffer the Puniſhment due to their Crimes. And ſpeaking of the Phariſees, he ſays, [d] that they of this Sect are perſuaded, that Souls that have lived well, return, after Death, to the Place from whence they came, with a Power of ſtill returning into other Bodies, but that the Souls of the Wicked are condemned to eternal Puniſhment.

When the Apoſtles ſaw a Man that was born blind, they ask'd Jeſus Chriſt, If it was the Man's own Fault, or that of his Parents, that he was born blind? They thought therefore, that this Man, before his Birth, might have deſerved this Puniſhment for ſome Sin, and for the bad Uſe that he had made of his Liberty. Our Saviour tells them, That it was neither as a Puniſhment for his own Sins, or for thoſe of his Parents; but that God had thus permitted it, that his Works might be made manifeſt in the Perſon of this poor blind Man: Thus reproving their vain Curioſity; and inſinuating to them, That John ix. 2.

he restor'd his Sight to him, for the Glory of his heavenly Father.

The Rabbins teach, [a] that the Souls of such Dead as have not been buried, cannot enter into the Place where the Souls of the Departed are, but that they wander about 'till their Bodies are laid in their Tomb. This Opinion may be observed among the old Greeks and Latins. Homer [Iliad. Ψ. v. 70, &c.] relates, that Patroclus appear'd to Achilles, and said to him; "Bury me quickly, that "I may enter within the Gates of the "Kingdom of Pluto; because that the "Souls, those Phantoms of the Dead, drive "me from thence, and will not suffer me "to pass over the River; but I wander "about the Gates of the vast Palace of "the God of Hell." And Virgil says,

[Virgil. Æneid. vi.]
Nec ripas datur horrendas, nec rauca fluenta
Transportare prius, quàm sedibus ossa quierunt.

They were also of Opinion, that the Souls of the greatest Part of the Jews remain'd a Year in a kind of Purgatory, and in a State that was undetermin'd: That during this Time they frequently visit the Bodies they have animated: That they appear, and may receive Assistance from the Prayers and the Alms that are made for them: That the Apparition of Samuel to Saul was during that Year that immediately follow'd his Decease; but that after this Year is pass'd, the Spirits or Demons have no longer any Power over the Souls of the Dead [b]. Justin Martyr [c] and Origen [d] have thought, that the Souls, even of good Men, were, after Death, under the Power of the Devil, who made them sometimes appear, at the Charms and [Anast. Antioch. in Adeg. qu. 12.] Evocations of Magicians. Anastasius of Antioch strongly supports the Sentiments of Origen, and maintains, that the Souls of the Just were in the Power of the Devil in Hell, before Jesus Christ descended thither, and deliver'd them from thence by his Power.

[Vid. Buxtorf. Synag. Jud. c. 35.] The Thalmudists think, that Souls separate from the Body, know all that passes upon Earth, because they are commonly a whole Year before they enter into Heaven: During all this time they go to and fro through the World, and there learn whatever is said or done there. They do not enter into Heaven, 'till after the Body is reduced to Dust, according to those [Ecclef. xii. 7.] Words of Solomon; Then shall the Dust return to the Earth as it was, and the Spirit shall return unto God who gave it. In a Conference that was held in the Presence of the Pope, in the Year 1412, [e] the Jews were accused of lighting up Wax-candles at the Feet or the Head of the Dead, that the Soul might have Light when it came to seek for its Body. It is certain, that even at this Day they light up a Lamp at the Pillow of a dead Man's Bed, after the Body is carried away to be bury'd, and that this Lamp burns there for seven Days [f]: But they are not agreed that this is done to light the Soul at its Return thither.

The Immortality of the Soul, is a fundamental Doctrine of both Jewish and Christian Religion. The ancient Patriarchs liv'd and dy'd in the Persuasion of this Truth. Moses has acknowledg'd it, [Gen. ii. 7.] when he says, that God breathed into Adam's Nostrils the Breath of Life, and Man became a living Soul. And that God said, Let us make Man in our Image, after [Gen. i. 26.] our Likeness. And when God had resolved to drown all Mankind by the Waters of the Deluge; "My Spirit shall no longer abide [Gen. vi. 3.] "in Man, because he is Flesh" *. 'Twas in the Hope of Immortality and of another Life, that the Patriarchs received the Promises of the Lord. For what Recompence did Abraham receive in this Life, for so many virtuous Actions perform'd by him; he that liv'd all his Life like a Stranger, without possessing one Foot of Land in the Country that had been promis'd him? When this Patriarch died, and was gathered to his Fathers, according to the Language of the Scriptures; this was not to tell us, that his Body was laid in the same Tomb with his Fathers. We know that he was originally of Chaldea, that his Fathers were bury'd there; that as to himself, he was bury'd in the Land of Canaan, in a Sepulchre that he had purchased. It must therefore be meant, that he went to join himself to his Fathers in another Life. The same must be said of Aaron, and of Moses, who at their Deaths were gathered to their Fathers; that is, they enter'd into the Place where their Ancestors were waiting for the Redemption and the Coming of the Messiah.

When Balaam the Sorcerer asked of God, that his Death might be like to that of the Just, or of the Israelites, what did [Numbers xxiii. 10.] he understand by that, but that he might die, like them, in the Hope and Expectation of a happy Resurrection? For as to other Circumstances, the Death of the Hebrews was not different from that of other Nations. Death is a Tribute that all Men alike must pay to Nature.

Another decisive Proof, which shew'd that the Israelites believed the Immortality of the Soul, was the Persuasion they had, that the Souls of the Dead sometimes appear'd again after their Decease. Samuel

1 Sam. xxviii. 13, 14, 15. appear'd to the Witch of Endor, Jeremiah appear'd to Judas Maccabeus. 2 Macc. xv. 14. When the Apostles saw Jesus Christ walking towards them upon the Sea, they thought him to Mat. xiv. 26. be an Apparition; and when he appear'd to them after his Resurrection, he said to Luk. xxiv. 39. them; Handle me, and see, for a Spirit has not Flesh, and Bones, as ye see me have. They believed also a Resurrection to come, the Punishment of the Wicked in another Life, an Abraham's Bosom for the Reception of the Just; they had in their Histories Examples of dead Men raised to Life again, as those that were raised by Elijah and Elisha. Moses had forbid them to con- Deuter. xxviii. 18. sult or inquire of the Dead. All this proves, beyond Contradiction, that the Jews believed the Immortality of the Soul.

If the Saducees have deny'd this Immortality, as also the Resurrection; if the Rabbins Maimonides and Kimchi, who taught the Annihilation of the Soul, were look'd upon by their Nation as a Kind of Hereticks and Innovators; those of whom Solomon has express'd the Sentiments in Eccles. iii. 19, 20. these Terms: That which befalleth the Sons of Men, befalleth Beasts, even one thing befalleth them; as the one dieth, so dieth the other, yea, they have all one Breath, so that a Man hath no Pre-eminence above a Beast; for all is Vanity. All go unto one Place, all are of the Dust, and all turn to Dust again. These were the Sentiments of impious and wicked People, disapproved and condemned by all good Israelites, and confuted by Solomon himself, Eccles. xii. 7. who says; Then shall the Dust return to the Earth as it was, and the Spirit shall return unto God who gave it.

We have spoke of the Metempsychosis, or Transmigration of Souls, in its particular Place, as also of Purgatory, of the Rewards and Punishments of another Life, in the Article of A Life to come. As for the Souls of Brutes; see Brutes. The Reader may consult the Dissertation of Ludovicus Capellus, concerning the State of Souls after their Departure; and our Dissertation concerning the Nature of the Soul, and concerning its State after Death, according to the Opinion of the antient Hebrews. SPAIN. All the World knows this Part of Europe, which is surrounded by the Sea; by the Ocean towards the West and North, by the Mediterranean towards the South and East, and by France towards the East and North. The Hebrews call Obad. 20. Bochart. Phaleg. l. 3. c. 7. Spain by the Name of Sepharad. Eusebius, and after him Bochart, think that Tharsis is the Father of the Spaniards. St. Paul tells the Romans, that he hopes to see them Rom. xv. 24, 28. as he goes to Spain: But it is doubted whether he was ever there or no. See the Commentators upon Rom. xv. 24. Several Fathers [a] have positively affirm'd it; but others speak of it with more Diffidence. Baronius and Pererius are for the Affirmative, Scotus and Thomas for the Negative. See Mr. de Tillemont, Note 73 upon Saint Paul.

SPARROW, Passer, in Hebrew, Tzipphor. צפור Στρεθίον, Passer. This Hebrew Word is us'd not only for a Sparrow, but also for all Sorts of clean Birds, or such whose Use was not forbid by the Law. The Rabbins Kimchi, Pomarius, and Aquinas, even pretend, that it signifies all Kind of Birds in general; which is very well confirm'd by Bochart [b]. But he shews also, that it signifies particularly a Sparrow. In most of the Passages where Passer or Sparrow is read, there is to be understood a Bird in general. As for Example, Transmigra in montem sicut Pas- Psal. xi. 1. ser; Flee as a Bird to your Mountain: For it is known, that Sparrows do not frequent Mountains. And elsewhere, I watch, and Psal. cii. 7. am as a Sparrow alone upon the House-top. It ought to be understood of the Owl, that hides itself under the Roofs of Houses. And again, Cedri Libani, illic passeres ni- Psal. civ. 16, 17. dificabunt; The Sparrows do not build in the Cedars of Libanus. In these Passages therefore Passer or Sparrow signifies a Bird in general.

There is a famous Passage in Leviticus [c], where Moses appoints him, that is declared clean from his Leprosy, to bring to the Priest at the Entry of the Tabernacle, two young Sparrows alive, and which it is allow'd to eat; or rather, two Birds alive, and clean. For if they must needs be Sparrows, what need it be added, that they must be such as may be eaten; as if there were two Sorts of 'em? Thus the Seventy read only Birds, and the Interpreter of Origen reads two Hens. The Leprous Person therefore was to bring two clean Birds to the Door of the Tabernacle, with a Bundle of Cedar-branches and Hyssop, tied up with a scarlet String. They fill'd an earthen Vessel with Water; then the Priest took one of the little Birds, and tied it with the scarlet String to the Bundle of Cedar and Hyssop, the Head towards the Handle, and the Tail and Wings towards that Part of the Bundle that was to be dipp'd in the Water. The Leprous Person took the other Bird, sacrificed it, and made its Blood run into the Water provided in the Vessel. Then the Priest dipp'd the Bundle of Cedar and Hyssop, with the living Bird, into the Water mingled with Blood, and with it sprinkled the Leper that was healed. After which he set the Bird at Liberty that had been dipp'd in the Blood of its Companion. The same Ceremony was us'd when the Priest purify'd a House, where any Spot had appear'd of what they call'd the Leprosy of Houses. There were also other Sacrifices of Birds, which were appointed by the Law, chiefly in favour of the poorer Sort; but the Kind of the Birds was ascertain'd. Moses expressly required Doves. See the Article DOVE. (Lev. i. 15. v. 8.)

SPEAR, that pierced the Side of our Saviour. Tavernier says, in his Persian Travels, l. 1. p. 44. that in a Monastery near to Erivan, they shew the Iron of a Spear, or Lance, which, according to the Tradition of the Armenians, is that with which the Side of Jesus Christ was pierced upon the Cross. They hold this Spear in great Veneration, and say it was brought into their Country by St. Matthew himself; Here is the Figure of it, which is very particular.

SPECULA. This Word signifies an Eminence, where a Centinel was placed to watch afar off. It is put for the Name of a Place, 2 Chron. xx. 24. Cum venisset ad Speculam, quæ respicit solitudinem. The Hebrew reads Misphah, or Mizpah of the Desart, and may stand for Mizpeh, a City of Benjamin, Josh. xviii. 26.

SPIKENARD, or Nard. A Plant that grows in the Indies, whose Root is very small and slender. It puts forth a long, small Stalk, and has several Ears or Spikes even with the Ground, which has given it the Name of Spikenard. The Nard of the Mountain is more odoriferous than that which grows near the Waters. All the Species of Spikenard are hot and drying; they provoke Urine, and are binding, when taken to drink. The Indian Nard, commonly call'd Spica Nardi, if it be genuine, must be of a yellowish Colour, inclining towards purple, and should have its Spikes long, so that the Bristles of the Spike should be large and odoriferous. The Taste should be something sharp and bitter, and dry upon the Tongue, and afterwards leave the Mouth full of a very agreeable Savour. 'Tis thought that Rosemary and Lavender are Kinds of Spikenard. They made a Perfume of great Esteem with the Blade or Spike of the Nard, and of which the Scripture speaks pretty often. The Spouse in the Canticles says; [a] While the King sitteth at his Table, my Spikenard sendeth forth the Smell thereof. And in the Gospel, St. Mark [b] speaks of the Perfume of Spikenard; and St. John [c] mentions Nardus pisticus, by which several understand the pure and unsophisticated Nard. But there is great Probability, that the Copiers of St. John have put Nardi pistici instead of Nardi spicati, or Spikenard. The Spikenard, as we call it, or the Blade of the Nard, is the most esteem'd for making of Perfumes: And the Perfume taken from the Leaves is much less valuable. Cacumina Nardi in aristas se spargunt, says Pliny, ideo geminâ dote Nardi spicas & folia celebrant. (Plin. l. xii. c. 12.)

SPIRIT. In Hebrew, Ruach; in Greek, Pneuma; in Latin, Spiritus. In Scripture the Word Spirit is taken sometimes for the Holy Ghost, the third Person of the Holy Trinity, who inspires the Prophets, animates good Men, pours his Unction into our Hearts, imparts to us Light and Comfort, in whose Name we are baptized, as well as in those of the Father and Son; lastly, that enlivening Spirit who proceeds from the Father and the Son. (רוח Ruach. Πνεῦμα. Spiritus.)

At other times it is taken for the Breath, the Respiration, the animal Life, which belongs as well to Men as other Animals: This Breath that God has given us, and which he takes away again, when he takes away our Lives. (Gen. vii. 15. Num. xvi. 22. Job xii. 10.)

It signifies also the reasonable Soul which animates us, and which preserves its Being, even after the Death of the Body. That spiritual, reasoning, and chusing Substance, capable of eternal Happiness.

The Word Spiritus is sometimes put also for the Wind: Thus, Spiritus procellarum. Spiritus grandis & fortis. In spiritu vehementi conteres naves Tharsis, &c. In all which Places Spiritus signifies only a strong Wind. (Psal. x. 7. 1 Kings xix. 11. Psal. xlvii. 8.)

Spiritus is also taken to signify an Angel, a Demon, a Ghost, a Soul separated from the Body. It is said in the Acts, that the Saducees deny'd the Existence of Angels and Spirits. Jesus Christ appearing to his Disciples, said to 'em; Handle me, and see; for a Spirit hath not Flesh and Bones, as ye see me have. In St. Paul the good Angels are call'd Ministring Spirits. 'Tis said in the Book of Samuel, that the evil Spirit from God came upon Saul. And in the Gospel the Devils are often call'd unclean Spirits, evil Spirits, Spirits of Darkness. (Acts xxiii. 8. Luk. xxiv. 39. Heb. i. 14. 1 Sam. xviii. 10. xvi. 14. xix. 9.)

Lastly, Spirit is sometimes taken for the Disposition of the Heart, or of the Body; because it was presumed, that the good or evil Inclinations of each of these proceeded from good or bad Spirits. Thus is to be understood, a Spirit of Jealousy, a Spirit of Fornication, a Spirit of Prayer, a Spirit of Infirmity, a Spirit of Wisdom and Understanding, a Spirit of Fear of the Lord, and such like. (Numb. v. 14. Hos. iv. 2. Zech. xii. 10. Luke xiii. 10. Eccl. xv. 5. Isai. xi. 2.)

Concerning

Concerning the Spirit that inſpired the Prophets, and which cauſ'd the Motions and Agitations; ſee the Article Enthusiasm.

Diſtinguiſhing or Diſcerning of Spirits. This was a Gift of God, which conſiſted in diſcerning, whether a Man was really inſpired of the Spirit of God, or whether he was a falſe Prophet and Impoſtor, who only follows the Impulſe of his own Spirit, 1 Cor. xii. 10. or of the Spirit of Satan. St. Paul ſpeaks of the diſcerning of Spirits, among the miraculous Gifts that God granted to the Faithful, and the firſt Settlement of Chriſtianity. And St. John in his Epiſtle; 1 John iv. 1. Beloved, believe not every Spirit, but try the Spirits, whether they are of God: Becauſe many falſe Prophets are gone out into the World.

To quench the Spirit. St. Paul ſays to 1 Theſ. v. 19. the Theſſalonians, that they ought not to quench the Spirit. Spiritum nolite extinguere. The Spirit may be quenched in theſe two ways; firſt, by forcing, in ſome manner, the Holy Ghoſt to withdraw himſelf from us, by Sin, by Irregularity of Manners, by Vanity, by Avarice, by Negligence, and by other Crimes that are contrary to Charity, to Truth, to Peace, and to the other Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt. Secondly, the Spirit is quenched when we do ſuch Actions as make God to take from us his ſupernatural Gifts and Favours, ſuch as Prophecy, the Gift of Tongues, the Gift of healing Diſeaſes. For tho' theſe Gifts were of mere Grace, and that God may communicate them ſometimes to wicked People, yet he has often granted them to the Prayers of the Faithful, and took them away again, to puniſh their Abuſe or Contempt of them.

Epheſ. iv. 30. To grieve the Spirit, may be alſo taken in two ways; either in the Senſe of an internal Grace, habitual or actual. Or in the Senſe of miraculous Gifts, with which God favour'd the primitive Chriſtians. We grieve the Spirit of God, by withſtanding his holy Inſpirations, the Motions of his Grace, or by living in a luke-warm and negligent Manner. We grieve him alſo by deſpiſing his Gifts, or neglecting them, by abuſing his Favours, either out of Vanity, Curioſity, or Negligence. And in a 2 Tim. i. 6. contrary Senſe, we ſtir up the Spirit of God which is in us, by the Practice of Vertue, by our Exactneſs in complying with his Inſpirations, by Fervour in his Service, by renewing our Gratitude, &c.

The Spirit, as it is oppos'd to the Fleſh, is put for the Soul by which we are ani- Gen. vi. 3. mated. "My Spirit ſhall no longer abide "in Man, becauſe he is but Fleſh." I will deſtroy all Mankind, I will take from them my Breath that I gave them, and the Soul that I infuſed into them, becauſe they are all carnal, debaſed by carnal Inclinations, by brutiſh Paſſion: Becauſe, in a Word, all Fleſh have corrupted their Way Gen. vi. 12. upon the Earth; they have in a great meaſure forgot that they are reaſonable Creatures, and have plunged themſelves into the State and Condition of Beaſts.

Spirit, in the moral Senſe, is oppos'd to the Fleſh. With the Mind, or Spirit, I Rom. vii. 25. myſelf ſerve the Law of God; but with the Fleſh the Law of Sin. And again; If ye Rom. viii. 13. live after the Fleſh, ye ſhall die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the Deeds of the Body, ye ſhall live. And elſewhere; Gal. v. 19, 22. Now the Works of the Fleſh are manifeſt, which are theſe; Adultery, Fornication, Uncleanneſs, Laſciviouſneſs, &c. But the Fruit of the Spirit is Love, Joy, Peace, Long-ſuffering, Gentleneſs, Goodneſs, Faith, Meekneſs, Temperance.

The Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt, which animates true Chriſtians, and the Children of God, and which diſtinguiſhes them from the Children of Darkneſs, who are animated by the Spirit of the World; is the Gift of Grace, and of Adoption, the holy Spirit that is poured into our Hearts, and which gives us Confidence to ſay to God, My Father, My Father. Thoſe that are Rom. viii. 5. animated by this Spirit have crucified the Fleſh, with the Affections and Luſts thereof. If we live in the Spirit, let us alſo walk in Gal. v. 24. the Spirit. And elſewhere; Ye are not Rom. viii. 9. in the Fleſh, but in the Spirit, if ſo be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any Man have not the Spirit of Chriſt, he is none of his. The Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt animated the Prophets, and inclined them 1 Pet. i. 11. induſtriouſly to inquire at what Time that ſhould happen, which they had foretold concerning his Paſſion and Glory.

Chriſt was put to Death in the Fleſh, 1 Pet. iii. 18, 19, 20. but quickned by the Spirit, by which alſo he went and preached unto the Spirits in Priſon; which ſometime were diſobedient, when once the long-ſuffering of God waited in the Days of Noah. This Paſſage has very much perplex'd the Commentators; and indeed there are Difficulties in it that can hardly be ſurmounted. The Commentators may be conſulted, who have treated expreſsly on this Subject. This is the Senſe that to us appears the moſt ſimple and reaſonable. Jeſus Chriſt, after his Reſurrection, by the Power of the ſame holy Spirit who had rais'd him up, deſcended into Hell, or into the Priſon, into the Place where the Souls of the holy Patriarchs were detain'd, and where they waited for his Coming. He proclaim'd Deliverance to them, and took them out of this Confinement. And as to ſuch Spirits as had been heretofore incredulous in the Times of Noah, to the Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt, who had cauſ'd the Truth to be declared to them, and who had exhorted them to Repentance in the Time of

Noah; but who would not hearken to this Invitation, and therefore were dead in Hardneſs and Incredulity; theſe alſo were inform'd of the Coming of Jeſus Chriſt, and acquainted with his Deſcent into Hell; but this News ſerved only to increaſe their Remorſe, their Puniſhment, and Deſpair.

Spirits. Apparitions of Spirits. The Notion, that Spirits, Angels, Demons, the Souls of the Dead, ſometimes appear to Men, is univerſally ſpread among all Nations. It is founded upon an infinite Number of Hiſtories, and Experiments, but chiefly upon the Authority of the ſacred Books. The Books of the Old and New Teſtament are full of the Apparitions of Angels and Demons; and there we may alſo obſerve the Opinion, that ſuppoſes the Return and Appearing of the Spirits and Souls of dead Perſons, in the Story of the raiſing the Ghoſt of Samuel by the Witch of Endor, in what is ſaid by Jeſus Chriſt (1 Sam. xxviii. 11, 12.) to his Apoſtles; Handle me, and ſee, for a Spirit has not Fleſh and Bones, as ye ſee me have: (Luk. xxiv. 39.) In what was imagin'd by the Apoſtles, when they ſaw Jeſus Chriſt in the Night walking upon the Water. Dicentes quia phantaſma eſt. (Matt. xiv. 26.) And in the Acts of the Apoſtles, (Acts xii. 13, 15.) when St. Peter ſtood knocking at the Door, they thought it was his Angel, becauſe they knew he had been put into Priſon but a little before. And in the Books of the Maccabees, the Highprieſt (2 Macc. xv. 12, 15, 16.) Onias, and the Prophet Jeremiah, appear'd in a Dream to Judas Maccabeus.

SPITHAMA, a ſort of Meaſure, of the Length of about a Foot. This Word is not found in the Vulgate, but it is in the Greek, Judg. iii. 16. where it anſwers to the Hebrew Word Gomed, [a] which is a Meaſure whoſe Length is unknown. Spithama is alſo read in the Greek, Exodus xxviii. 16. xxxix. vii. & 1 Sam. xvii. 4. Iſai. xl. 12. Ezek. xliii. 14. where it anſwers the Hebrew Word Zereth, [b] which ſignifies half a Cubit, or ten Inches and ſomething more.

SPITTLE, Saliva. The Spittle of him who was troubled with a Gonorrhœa made that Perſon unclean upon whom it (Lev. xv. 8.) accidentally fell. He continu'd unclean till Evening, and was not purify'd till after he had waſh'd himſelf and his Cloaths. To ſpit in any one's Face was look'd upon as the greateſt Outrage that could be done him. See Numb. xii. 14. (Job xxx. 10. Iſai. l. 6.) If her Father had but ſpit in her Face, ſhould ſhe not be aſhamed ſeven Days? The Widow of a Man that died without Children, might ſpit in the Face of his Brother, or of his neareſt Kinſman, that refuſed to take her (Deut. xxv. 9.) to Wife. The Soldiers ſpit in the Face of our Saviour at his Paſſion [c].

SPY. The Patriarch Joſeph pretended (Gen. xlii. 16.) to arreſt his Bretheren, and did in Effect ſecure his Brother Simeon in Priſon, feigning that he took them for Spies. According to the Rules of War, a Spy taken in a Camp deſerves to be hanged. Moſes ſent twelve Spies to explore the Land of Canaan, (Num. xiii. 2, 3, &c.) and to find out the Nature of the Country, what was its Strength, its Cities, its Inhabitants. They departed from the Camp at Paran, were forty Days in making the Tour of the Country, and return'd to the Camp of the Iſraelites loaded with a Vine-branch and its Grapes, which they carry'd on a Staff between two, as well becauſe of the Largeneſs of the Fruit, as for fear of bruiſing it. When they return'd, they made their Report to the People, ſaying; "The Country where we have been is indeed a Country flowing with Milk and Honey, as may be underſtood from the Fruits we have brought with us; but the Inhabitants are robuſt and warlike, and the Cities are very ſtrong and well fortify'd. We have ſeen there Giants of the Race of Anak. Amalek dwells to the South, the Hittites, the Jebuſites, and the Ammorites, in the Mountains, and the Canaanites along the Sea-coaſt."

Then the People began to murmur, ſaying; "We ſhall never be able to be- (Num. xiv. 1, 2, 3, &c.) come Maſters of this Country, becauſe the People that inhabit it are ſtronger than we are." But Caleb, one of the Meſſengers, endeavour'd to encourage them, ſaying; "Let us go and take Poſſeſſion of this Country, which we ſhall eaſily be able to accompliſh." The others, on the contrary, diſparaged the Land, inſiſted upon the great Difficulty there would be to conquer it, and ſaid; "This Country devours its Inhabitants, and the People we have ſeen are of an extraordinary Size: We ſaw there Monſters of Men, Giants of the Race of Anak, in Compariſon of whom we are but Graſs-hoppers." At theſe Words all the People began to cry, and bewail'd themſelves all that Night, loudly exclaiming againſt Moſes and Aaron, and ſaying one to another; "Let us ſet a Captain over us, that may lead us back to Egypt." Joſhua and Caleb uſed all their Endeavours in vain to pacify them; they took up Stones to ſtone them.

But of a ſudden the Glory of the Lord appear'd over the Tabernacle of the Covenant, directing his Voice to Moſes, and threatned to ſmite the whole Congregation, and utterly to deſtroy them. But Moſes interceded for them, and obtain'd, that they might not all die at once. But the Lord ſwore, that none of thoſe, who had thus murmur'd against him, should see the Land which he had promis'd to their Fathers, except Caleb and Joshua, who had continued faithful to him.

Josh. ii. 1, 2, 3, &c. Mention is again made of Spies in the Book of Joshua. This Captain of the People of the Lord being ready to pass over Jordan at the Head of the Israelites, to put them in Possession of the Land of Promise, sent two Men to Jericho, to learn the Condition of that Place. They went thither, and entered into the House of a Woman named Rahab. She entertain'd them; and when the King of Jericho had Intelligence of their Arrival, he sent to demand them of Rahab. But she concealed them upon the Platform of her House, and told the Messengers, that they went out again a little before Night, and before the Gates of the City were shut. As soon as the Messengers were gone away, she went to the Spies, and told them, that she knew the Lord had delivered up the Land of Canaan to the Hebrews, and that Fear and Consternation had seized all the Inhabitants; that the Fame of the Miracles that the Lord had wrought in their Favour, was spread far and near, and struck the whole Land with a Panick. She desired them, as an Acknowledgement of what she had done to save their Lives, that they would promise her with an Oath, to preserve her and her Family, when they should become Masters of Jericho. The Spies made her this Promise, and she let them down by a Rope, over the Wall of the City, which was just behind her House, and they returned back to Joshua safe and sound. St. Paul commends the Faith of Rahab, who received and entertained the Spies. Heb. xi. 31.

STACTE. This Greek Word signifies the Gum that distils from the Tree which produces Myrrh. Salmasius distinguishes Stacte from Plaste, in that Stacte is the liquid Part of the Myrrh, which is brought from the Myrrh by Contusion, and which was the purest and most valuable Part of it. (Salmas. ad Solin. p. 521.) It was also called simply, The Perfume, or Myrrh. Plaste was the harder Part, which remain'd after the Myrrh call'd Stacte had been squeezed from it, and which was reduced into Lumps or Cakes; so that it was rather a Kind of Incense than a Perfume. Stacte is found in several Places in Scripture; [in the Latin Vulgate.] For Example, Gen. xxxvii. 25. where it is said, that Ishmaelitish Merchants were carrying into Egypt, aromata, & resinam, & stacten. And Gen. xliii. 11. where Jacob bids his Sons carry with them some Stacte, to the Governour of Egypt, who was Joseph. The Hebrew says, Zeri and Lath. (צרי Zeri לט Lat.) 'Tis agreed, the first signifies Resina, Balm; But the Signification of Lat or Lath is unknown. Some explain it by Myrrh, others by Turpentine, or Chesnuts, or Ladanum, or Ledum, which is a certain resinous Liquor distilling from a Kind of Cistus.

Moses also speaks of Stacte [a] in the Enumeration of the Drugs that were to enter into the Composition of the Perfume which was to be offer'd in the holy Place upon the golden Altar. But in this Place the Hebrew reads Neteph, which certainly signifies liquid Myrrh, or in Form of a perfum'd Oil.

Lastly, Ezekiel also speaks of Stacte; [b] but the Hebrew has Kidda, which the Septuagint translate by Iris; and St. Jerome in Exod. xxx. 24. by Cassia odorifera. It is very likely that it signifies the Essence of Iris.

STACHYS, a Disciple of St. Paul's, of whom he makes honourable mention in his Epistle to the Romans. Rom. xvi. 9. We know of none of the Particulars of his Life that can be rely'd on. Nicephorus Calistus assures us, that St. Andrew came and preached for some Time at Byzantium, afterwards call'd Constantinople; Niceph. Calist. l. 2. c. 39. but being obliged to leave it, he ordain'd St. Stachys for Bishop there. The Menæa of the Greeks set down the Feast of St. Stachys on the 31st of October; in which they are follow'd by the Roman Martyrology, which also makes him Bishop of Byzantium, and which assures us, 'tis to him that St. Paul makes his Recommendations in the Epistle to the Romans, and whome he calls his well-beloved. The Greeks give him the Title of an Apostle, and put him among the seventy-two Disciples. But we find nothing of all this in any Authors of greater Antiquity than Nicephorus.

STADIUM, a Furlong, a Measure of Length, which consisted of one hundred and twenty-five geometrical Paces. Eight Furlongs make a Mile, and three Miles make a common League. See the Table of Measures.

Stadium is also taken for the Place where they perform'd their publick Exercises of Running. St. Paul alludes to these Spectacles and these Exercises, when he says, They which run in a Race (in Stadio) run all, but one receiveth the Prize. 1 Cor. ix. 24. These Places were call'd Stadia, because they were distinguish'd into Courses or Distances by certain resting Places; so that some of the Racers run but one Distance, some two or more, each according to his Strength.

STAFF. Anna says of her Son Tobias, Is he not the Staff of our Hand? Tob. v. 17. God threatens Moab to break the Staff of his Glory, his Strength, in which he placed his Confidence: How is the strong Staff Jer. xlviii. 17.

broken, and the beautiful Rod! When the Prophets threaten with a Famine, they say, Ezek. iv. 16. that God will break the Staff of Bread, or reduce them to the utmost Necessity. Do 2 Kings xviii. 21. you hope to find Assistance in that Staff of Ezek. xxix. a Reed, in the King of Egypt? He is a Isai. xxxvi. 6. brittle Reed, which will break under every one that would lean upon it, and its Splinters will enter into his Hand, and wound him. The Wicked shall be as a Staff in the Hand of God; he shall make Isai. x. 5. use of it to prove the Good: Assur virga Zechar. viii. 4. furoris mei, & baculus, &c. In Jerusalem shall still be seen old Men leaning upon Genesis xxxii. 10. their Staffs. Jacob says, that he passed over Jordan, having only a Staff in his Hand, and that he passed back again with two great Troops of Persons and Flocks of Cattle. God commanded the Israelites, when they ate the Passover, to have a Exod. x. Staff in their Hands, like Travellers. David makes a kind of Imprecation against 2 Sam. iii. 29. מחזיק בפלך Joab, saying, that there should always be some of his Family that should walk with a Staff; that is to say, there should always be lame Persons. St. Jerom has translated it by Persons handling the Spindle: Tenentes fusum.

כוכב Chochab. Stella, Sidus. STAR, Stella; in Hebrew, Chochab. Under the Name of Stars, the ancient Hebrews comprehended all the heavenly Bodies, Constellations, and Planets; in a word, all the Luminaries, except the Sun and the Moon. The Scripture often expresses it self in such a manner, as should seem to attribute Sense and Understanding to the Stars. The Sun and Moon were call'd, by the idolatrous Israelites, the King and Queen of Heaven; and the Deut. xvii. 3. Stars were (as it were) their Army and Militia. Both one and the other have often received those Honours, which were only due to the Creator.

The Number of the Stars was look'd upon as infinite: And the Psalmist, to exalt the Power and Magnificence of God, says, that he numbers the Stars, and calls them by their Names. He is described as a King taking a Review of his Army, and gives every one of his Soldiers such a Name as he thinks fit. When the Scripture would express a very extraordinary Increase and Multiplication, it uses the Similitude of the Stars of Heaven, or of the Gen. xv. 5. xxii. 17. xxvi. 4. Exodus xxxii. 13, &c. Sands of the Sea: I will multiply thy Seed as the Stars of the Heaven, and as the Sand which is upon the Sea-shore. Job says, that in the Eyes of God, the Stars themselves Job xxv. 5. Job xxxviii. are impure; that they form'd a kind of Concert of Musick to his Honour, at the Job ix. 7. Beginning of the Creation; and that God locks them up as with a Key, and hinders them from appearing, but when he pleases.

Ezekiel xxxii. 7. Joel ii. 1. & iii. 20. In Times of Disgrace and Publick Calamity, 'tis said, the Stars with-hold their Light, and are cover'd with Darkness; that they fall from Heaven, and disappear. Mat. xxiv. 29. Mark xiii. 25. These are figurative and emphatick Expressions, which are only weaken'd and enervated by being explain'd. Amos says, Amos v. 26. כוכב אלהיכם that the Israelites in the Wilderness carried with them a Star, to which they paid divine Honours: Ye have born - - - - the Star of your God, which ye made to your selves. The Hebrew says, Stellam Deorum vestrorum. Job speaks in two Places, of Job ix. 9. & xxxviii. 31. four of the principal Constellations that were known to the Antients; the Bear, Orion, the Hyades, and the Star of the South.

As to the Star that Balaam foretold Numbers xxiv. 17. should come out of Jacob, and which primarily is understood of Jesus Christ, who is the true Star which fills the World with its Brightness; and secondarily, of that material Star that appear'd to the Wise Men, and guided them from the East to Bethlehem; we have spoken of it under the Article MAGI, and in our Dissertation upon the same Subject, which we have prefix'd to our Commentary upon St. Matthew.

STARS. To give the Hebrews a Caution against the Idolatry that prevail'd through almost all the East, of worshipping the Sun, Moon, and Stars; Moses informs us, in the Beginning of Genesis, that God Gen. i. 14, 15, 16. gave them their Being, and that he separated them from that Mass of Matter which he had produced out of Nothing. Job Job xxxviii. 7. describes the Stars to us, as praising the Creator at the Beginning of the World. And Isaiah makes Lucifer say at his Rebel- Isai. xiv. 13. lion; I will ascend into Heaven, I will exalt my Throne above the Stars of God.

The Beauty and Splendor that Men have observed in the Stars, and the great Advantages that they derive from thence; the wonderful Order that they have discover'd in their Courses; the Influence that has been ascribed to them, in the Production and Preservation of Animals, of Fruits, Plants, and Minerals, have prevail'd with almost all People of the World to impute to them Life, Knowledge, Power, and to pay them a sovereign Worship and Adoration. Moses says; Lest thou lift up Deut. iv. 19. thine Eyes unto Heaven, and when thou seest the Sun, and the Moon, and the Stars, even all the Host of Heaven, shouldst be driven to worship them, and serve them, which the Lord thy God hath divided unto all Nations under the whole Heaven. And Job says; If I beheld the Sun when Job xxxi. 26, 27, 28. it shined, or the Moon walking in Brightness; and my Heart hath been secretly enticed, or my Mouth hath kissed my Hand, (by way of Adoration): This also were an Iniquity to be punished by the Judge; for I should have denied the God that is above. The Worship of Baal, of Astarte, of the Queen of Heaven, of the Host of Heaven, Heaven, &c. with which the Jews were often reproach'd, was no other than the Worship (Acts vii. 42.) of the Stars, especially of the Sun and Moon. St. Stephen, in the Acts, after having spoke of the Worship of the Golden Calf by the Israelites in the Wilderness, says, that God gave them up to their Blindness, and that they paid their Adoration to the Host of Heaven, and that they carry'd in the Desart the Tent of Moloch, and the Ark of their God Remphan. We examine elsewhere into the Meaning of these Words of St. Stephen.

The Jews, both ancient and modern, ascribe great Influence to the Stars. Philo [a] imputes to them a great Part of whatever happens upon the Earth. He says elsewhere, [b] that the Stars are not only Animals, but even most pure Spirits; that the Air is replete with Animals, or Spirits, which are continually descending, to animate Bodies. He had borrow'd these Notions from his Master Plato. Origen was guilty of the same Mistake [c]. The Rabbins also ascribe Intelligence to the Heaven and the Stars [d]: They maintain, that they have a Knowledge of God; that they know themselves; that God is the Object of their Desires; that their Knowledge and Actions are more perfect than those of Men.

Maimonides says, that among wise Men there is no Controversy about the Stars: They all agree, that they have a great Influence upon the Generation and Corruption of sublunary Bodies. [e] Some impute the Direction of Affairs rather to the Angels, than the Stars; but others maintain, that it is the Stars which pour out their Influences upon the Earth: Every Herb, according to them, has its particular Star, from whence it receives its Virtue; which Virtue is even extended to the Body of Man, and to the principal Actions of his Life. However, this does not take away the Liberty of Man; the Planets lay them under no Necessity: Their Effects are chiefly confined to the Body; as Health, Complexion, and whatever depends thereon.

The sacred Books sometimes seems to (Job xxxviii. 7.) ascribe Knowledge to the Stars: We are told, that the Stars praised the Lord at the Beginning of the World. The Sun, the Moon, and the Stars are excited to praise the Lord. The Moon is said to withdraw her Light, to obey the Voice (Psalm xviii. 6.) of Joshua: That the Sun stopt its Course, at the Command of this General of God's People: That the Sun rises as a Bridegroom, that comes out of his nuptial Chamber. Moses seems to favour their Opinion, who impute Influences to the Sun and Moon, when he promises to Joseph (Deuter. xxxiii. 14.) the precious Fruits brought forth by the Sun, and the precious things put forth by the Moon. (Job ix. 7.) Job says, that the Lord commanded the Sun, and it riseth not; and sealeth up the Stars. And the Psalmist says, that the Sun knows the Time and (Psal. ciii. 19.) Place of his Setting. And Solomon says, The Sun also ariseth, and the Sun goeth (Eccl. i. 5.) down, and hasteth to his Place where he arose. This is not unlike that Expression of Ecclesiasticus; Sol illuminans per omnia (Ecclus. xlii. 16.) respicit, & gloriâ Domini plenum est opus ejus. And again; Sol in aspectu annun- (Ecclus. xliii. 2.) cians, in exitu vas admirabile, opus excelsi. Baruch says, that the Sun and the Moon, (Baruch v. 59.) those shining Luminaries, are obedient to the Lord.

But all these Expressions, which are meerly popular, are not to be understood literally; for then we must say, that the Earth, the Trees, the Waters, are animated, since we find in Scriptures some Expressions that would insinuate as much. All the Creatures glorify God, bless the Lord, and obey him, each in its Way. If we allow any thing more to the Sun, the Moon, or the Stars, 'tis because they are Creatures of greater Perfection, and by which the Glory and Magnificence of God shine forth in a more eminent and conspicuous manner.

Amos, speaking of the Idolatry of the Israelites in the Wilderness, informs us, [f] that they carry'd along with them the Star of their Gods. 'Tis demanded, what this Star was, or this Constellation? For under the Name of Star, the Jews comprehended the Planets, and all the heavenly Bodies, exclusive of the Sun and Moon. Some [g] imagine it was a Representation of the Planet Saturn, and this Opinion is very common. Others think it was the Moon; but I know not whether she was ever comprehended under the Name of Star. The Septuagint have read, the Star of Remphan your God. For this, see the Article REMPHAN, that we may not repeat what is said elsewhere.

The Star foretold by Balaam in this Passage, There shall come a Star out of (Numbers xxiv. 17.) Jacob, and a Sceptre shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the Corners of Moab, and destroy all the Children of Sheth. According to the modern Jews, this Star signifies King David, who conquer'd the Moabites, and reduced them under his Obedience. But the ancient Jews, as the Paraphrasts Onkelos and Jonathan, explain it of the Messiah, which is certainly the literal and natural Sense of this Passage. Some have thought, [a] that in this Place Balaam foretold the Appearance of that real Star, which arose at the Time of our Saviour's Birth, and which guided the Magi into Judea, to see the Person whose Birth was declared by that Star. But this Star did not come out of Jacob; and that cannot be apply'd to this Star, which is said there, which plainly points at a Ruler, a Conqueror, a great Prince, and, in a word, a Messiah. The Jews were so well convinced of this, at the Time of Jesus Christ, and some Time afterwards, that the famous Impostor Bar-caliba caus'd himself to be call'd Bar-cocheba, the Son of the Star, pretending to be the Messiah, and involved the Jews of Palestine in a Revolt, which compleated the Ruin of that unfortunate Nation.

The Star that appeared to the Magi, and conducted them to Bethlehem, where our Saviour was just born, has furnish'd Matter for many Conjectures. Some of the Antients thought, [b] that this was a new Star, purposely created to proclaim to Mankind the Coming of the Messiah. Others were of Opinion, [c] that it was a kind of Comet, which appear'd in the Air after an extraordinary manner. Others have pretended, [d] that it was an Angel cloathed with a luminous Body, in Form of a Star, which, by his Motion, directed towards Judea, excited in the Magi an Inclination to follow it, and to search out what it portended. Several of the Fathers have vindicated this Opinion, founded upon this; That this Star appear'd to be Rational and Intelligent, appearing and disappearing, stopping and going forward, in such manner as was necessary for the Conduct of the Magi to the proper Place. Lightfoot conjectures, [e] that it was the same Light as had appear'd to the Shepherds, who were feeding their Flocks near to Bethlehem; and which having been observed by the Magi, made them imagine, that in this Place the Messiah was born, who had been so long expected.

The Author of the Imperfect Commentary upon St. Matthew says, that this Star descended upon the Mountain where the Magi had expected it for several Ages; that it appear'd to them, having a little Child in the middle of it, and a Cross at top; that this Child spoke to them, and order'd them to take a Journey into Judea. Epiphanius [f] has follow'd the same Tradition, which is taken out of the Apocryphal Book of Seth. Some have advanced, [g] that this Star was the Holy Ghost, which appear'd to the Magi under the Form of a Star, as it afterwards appear'd in the Likeness of a Dove, at the Baptism of Jesus Christ. St. Ignatius the Martyr says, [h] that this Star cast a Brightness which exceeded that of all the Stars in the Heaven; that the Sun, Moon, and the other Stars, waited on it, and follow'd it, by way of Respect; that the whole World was in Admiration at the Sight of its Splendour. St. Austin [i] calls it, with Reason, the magnificent Tongue of Heaven, which spoke to the Magi, and instructed them, in some manner, concerning the Word being made Flesh, and reduced to Silence: Quid erat nisi magnifica lingua cœli?

It is not agreed, at what Time the Star appear'd to the Magi. Several think it appear'd to them two Years before the Birth of Christ, and that the Magi setting out from Home as soon as it appear'd, were two Years upon their Journey. [k] Others will have it, that it did not arise 'till the Moment of our Saviour's Birth: And these are yet divided; for some think that the Magi did not arrive at Bethlehem 'till two Years after the Birth of our Saviour. [l] Others make them arrive there thirteen Days after this Birth; and that they might make the greater Haste, they assign them Dromedaries to ride upon. There are those that think, that the Star appear'd from the Moment of Christ's Incarnation, or even from that of John the Baptist.

There are still some Difficulties started, whether this Star was seen by every Body, or only by the Magi. Some think that every Body saw it, [m] that all People were Witnesses of this Phenomenon; that some, not knowing the Mystery of it, contented themselves to wonder at it; and that it was to the Magi only that God revealed the Signification of it, and gave them an Inclination to follow it. Others, on the contrary, [n] believe that few People saw it; that the Magi themselves only saw it by fits, and from time to time, when it was necessary to them as a Guide, and to encourage them to persevere in their Resolution. Lastly: The Generality will have it, [o] that the Magi saw it for the greatest Part of their Journey, and that it disappear'd to them only when they arriv'd at Jerusalem; then they found themselves under a Necessity of Enquiry, where they might find the new-born King of the Jews.

STATER, a Piece of Money of the Value of one Shekel. Our Saviour sent St. Peter to fish in the Lake of Tiberias: This Apostle caught there a Fish with his Angle-rod, which had a Stater in its Mouth. This served to pay for Christ and himself, what they ow'd to the Temple, which was half a Shekel apiece. In the First Book of Samuel, a quarter of a Shekel, is translated by quarta pars Stateris; and in Jeremy, St. Jerom translates Shekel by Stater. See also Ezek. iv. 10. & v. 1.

STATUE of Salt. The Scripture tells us, that Lot's Wife was changed into a Statue of Salt. See LOT. Many Questions have been started about this Metamorphosis of Lot's Wife into a Statue or Pillar of Salt; and many Hypotheses have been made, to explain the Words of Moses in a plain and literal manner. His Text only tells us, that Lot's Wife look'd behind her, and became a Pillar of Salt. Some [a] explain it thus: She became without Motion, like a Statue of Salt. Others; She dy'd with Grief in the same Place, and there remain'd upright like a Statue. Salt is a Symbol of Hardness and Incorruptibility: Otherwise; She continued as a Statue in that Country of Salt, in the Land of Sodom, which was a Country of Nitre and Salt. But these Explications seem to be a little too violent.

Gen. xix. 26. ותהי נצב מלח

The Antients were of Opinion, that Lot's Wife thinking to walk very softly, was suddenly changed into a Statue of Metalline and solid Salt, such as are to be seen in some Mountains of Hungary, Poland, and Moscovy; that she still preserved the Shape of a Woman; and tho' Travellers often carry'd away Pieces of her, to satisfy their Curiosity, yet the Statue did not diminish, nor did it lose any thing of its Bigness [b]. Irenæus [c] and Tertullian [d] add, that she was still subject to such Infirmities as were incident to her Age.

Dicitur & vivens alio sub corpore sexûs,
Munificos solito dispungere sanguine menses.

Josephus assures us, [e] that he had seen this Statue; and the Chaldee Paraphrasts of Jerusalem, and Jonathan the Son of Uziel, say, that she will continue there to the End of the World. Several Travellers tell us, that they have seen it; and it is a common and popular Opinion, that she still continues there near the Dead-sea.

Others pretend, [f] that the Text of Moses may be explain'd, by saying, that the Fire that fell upon Sodom, and which inflamed the whole Country round about, having, by its Activity, prepared Passages for the Particles of Salt, or Nitre, in the Parts of the Body of this Woman, consolidated it, and in some measure imparted their Essence to it, and render'd her like a Pillar of Salt. Such Changes are not without Example. Aventine [g], in the Annals of the Bavarians relates, that above fifty Peasants that were employ'd in milking their Cows, were infected by a poisonous Air at the Time of an Earthquake, and were changed into Statues which were like Salt. There are many Instances of such Changes [h].

In our Commentary upon Genesis we have proposed some Conjectures about the Manner in which this might be effected. We have observed, that the Places about the Dead-sea and Arabia Petræa, had a particular Quality of Petrification; that solid Bodies, that continued there for any Time, might easily be petrify'd; that the Egyptians had Bodies that were embalmed and made stiff as any Statues, which might have been call'd Statues of Salt, or salted Statues. Herodotus and Diodorus Siculus make use of the Word Salting or Pickling, when they speak of the Embalment of those Bodies we call Mummies. Thus Moses might say, that Lot's Wife having fall'n down upon the Ground, she there soon became like a salted or embalmed Statue. See the Commentary upon Genesis xix. 26.

Statue of Nebuchadnezzar; or rather, the Statue that Nebuchadnezzar saw in his Dream, [i] which was very large and terrible to look at: Its Head was of Gold, its Breast and its Arms of Silver, the Belly and Thighs of Brass, the Legs of Iron, and the Feet partly of Iron and partly of Clay. Daniel's Explication was, that the Empire of Nebuchadnezzar, that is, of the Chaldeans, was represetned by the Head of Gold; the Empire of the Persians, founded by Cyrus, was represented by the Breast and Arms of Silver; the Empire of the Grecians, founded by Alexander the Great, was insinuated by the Belly and Thighs of Brass: The Empire of the Romans was denoted by the Legs of Iron; or rather, this Empire being divided into two, is that of the Seleucidæ in Syria, and of the Lagidæ in Egypt. The Attempts that the Kings of Egypt and Syria made, to unite their Interests by Intermarriages, not succeeding, are represented by the Feet, being partly of Iron, and partly of Clay. The little Stone that comes from the Mountain, and which overturns the Statue, is the Empire of the Romans, under which appear'd that of the Messiah, which

ſaw the Fall of the Coloſſus, erected by the Arms of the Romans.

The ſame Nebuchadnezzar caus'd a Golden Statue to be ſet up, of ſixty Cubits high, and ſix Cubits thick: He erected this in the Province of Dura in Babylon, [a] and publiſh'd a Decree to all his Subjects, that they ſhould fall down before this Statue, when they ſhould hear the Sound of the muſical Inſtruments, under the Penalty of being thrown alive into a burning Furnace. Daniel and his Companions not obeying this Decree, were caſt into the Furnace; but God deliver'd them from it by a Miracle. See DANIEL.

'Tis enquired, what this Statue was, and what it repreſented? Some think it to be a Statue of Nebuchadnezzar himſelf; others, that of his Father, whom he had a mind to deify: But to us it ſeems moſt probable, that it was the Statue of the God Bel, to whom he would have a particular Worſhip paid, at the time of the playing of the Inſtruments: And, in effect, he did not complain of Daniel, for refuſing to worſhip him, nor his Father, but his Gods: Verè ne Sidrach, Miſael, & Abednago, Deos meos non colitis, & ſtatuam auream non adoratis?

Some Difficulties are form'd about the Proportions of this Statue: Some think it to be a Pillar upon which a Statue was placed, and that Daniel ſets down the Height of the Pillar and Statue together, making it to be ſixty Cubits high, and ſix in Thickneſs. 'Tis imagin'd the Statue might be forty Cubits high, and ſix thick; and that the Baſe might be twenty Cubits high, and thick in Proportion. They even go ſo far as to ſay, this Statue is the ſame as that deſcribed by Diodorus Siculus, which was forty Foot high, and ſtood in the Temple of Belus: It was of Gold, like that deſcribed by Daniel; it repreſented the chief Deity of the Babylonians; it was worſhipp'd in the moſt auguſt of all their Temples. The Proportion of a Statue of forty Cubits high, is ſix Cubits wide, or thick; for the general Stature of a Man, is four times and an half the Breadth from Shoulder to Shoulder. But four times and an half ſix Cubits make twenty-ſeven Cubits, or forty Feet and an half: And this falls in very near with the Meaſure of Diodorus Siculus.

STEPHANAS, the Name of one of the principal Chriſtians of Corinth, whom St. Paul baptized, with all his Family, probably about the 52d Year of Chriſt, or of the Vulgar Era. St. Stephanas devoted himſelf to the Service of the Church; and in the Year of our Saviour 56 he came to St. Paul at Epheſus, and, according to Saint Chryſoſtom, brought him Letters which the Church of Corinth wrote to him, to conſult him concerning Marriage, Continence, and perhaps other Subjects, which St. Paul treats of in his Firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians. The Apoſtle wrote it from Epheſus in the 56th Year, and it was ſent by Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus. We know of no other Particulars of the Life of St. Stephanas.

STEPHEN; in Greek, Stephanos, which ſignifies a Crown. St. Stephen the firſt Martyr, was probably of the Number of thoſe Helleniſtical Jews that believed in Jeſus Chriſt. Epiphanius thinks he was of the Number of the ſeventy-two Diſciples of Jeſus Chriſt; but this is not very certain. Jeſus Chriſt appointed his ſeventy-two Diſciples to teach and preach; but it ſeems that St. Stephen, and the ſix other firſt Deacons, had as yet no particular Deſignation, when they were choſen for the Service of the Tables. 'Twas in the Year 53 of Jeſus Chriſt that the ſeven Deacons were choſen. St. Stephen is always put at their Head, as the chief and moſt worthy. 'Tis believed he had ſtudy'd at the Feet of Gamaliel. As he was full of the Holy Ghoſt and of Zeal, [b] he perform'd many wonderful Works and Miracles before the People; and ſome of the Synagogue of the Freed-men, of the Cyrenians, of the Alexandrians, and ſome others, entring into Diſpute with him, could not withſtand the Wiſdom and the Spirit that ſpoke from his Mouth.

Epiphan. de Chriſto, c. 4. p. 50.

Then they ſuborned falſe Witneſs to teſtify, that they heard him blaſpheme againſt Moſes, and againſt God; and they ſtirr'd up the People by their Calumnies, ſo that they drew him before the Council of the Nation, or the Sanhedrim; and they produced falſe Witneſſes againſt him, who depoſed, that they had heard him ſpeak againſt the Temple, and againſt the Law, and affirm'd, that Jeſus of Nazareth would deſtroy the holy Place, and aboliſh the Obſervance of the Law of Moſes. Stephen appear'd in the midſt of the Aſſembly, having his Countenance ſhining like that of an Angel; and the High-prieſt asking him what he had to anſwer to theſe Accuſations? he made his Defence, in which he ſhew'd he had not ſaid any thing, either againſt Moſes, or againſt the Temple, but that the Jews themſelves had always oppoſed themſelves to God and the Prophets: He upbraided them with the Hardneſs of their Hearts, and their Infidelity, with their putting the Prophets to Death, and, laſtly, Jeſus Chriſt himſelf.

At these Words they were in a Rage, and gnash'd their Teeth against him. But Stephen lifting up his Eyes to Heaven, saw the Glory of God, and Jesus Christ standing at the Right-hand of God. Upon which he said; I see the Heavens open, and the Son of Man standing at the Right-hand of God. Then the Jews cry'd out against him with one Voice, and stop'd their Ears, as if they had heard some dreadful Blasphemy; and falling upon him, they drew him out of the City, and stoned him. The Witnesses laid down their Cloaths at the Feet of a young Man call'd Saul, who was then one of the most eager Persecutors of the Christians, and who was afterwards one of the most zealous Preachers of the Gospel. Stephen all the while call'd upon the Lord, and said; Lord, impute not this Sin to them. After which Words he fell asleep in the Lord, and some pious Persons took care to bury him, and to accompany his Funeral with Acts viii. 2. great Mourning.

This is what the Scripture informs us of St. Stephen and his Martyrdom. We are told of many Particulars of his Burial, and afterwards of the Discovery of his Body, in a Work printed at the End of the seventh Tome of the new Edition of Saint Austin, under the Name of Lucian the Priest. The Devotion pay'd to him is very antient and famous in the Church; and God has perform'd a great Number of Miracles by Means of his Reliques, the greatest Part of which are very well attested *.

1 Chron. xxix. 2. Vulg. אבני פוך STIBINUS LAPIS. This Word is found in the Chronicles, and signifies literally Stones of Antimony: But 'tis thought the Text intends Stones of Alabaster. The Hebrew says, Stones of Phuc; but Phuc, in Hebrew, signifies the Colour with which
2 Kings ix. 40. Jerem. iv. 30. Isa. liv. 11. Women painted their Eye-brows, which was of a black Colour. We may see by Isaiah, that they also made Use of Stones of Phuc for Pavements. This should make one conclude, that it signifies Stones of Alabaster.

STIGMATA. Certain Marks and Incisions that the Heathen made upon their Flesh, in honour of some false Deity. These Marks were imprinted, either by a hot Iron, or with a Needle, with which they made several Punctures, which they afterwards fill'd with a fine Powder, either black, blue, or some other Colour, which incorporated with the Flesh, and remain'd printed in it for all their Lives after. The greatest Part of the Arabian Women have their Arms and Cheeks marked with these Stigmata. Lucian, in his Book of the Syrian Goddess, says, that all the Assyrians wore these printed Characters, some on their Hands, others on their Necks. Moses [a] warns the Israelites from making any Figure, or any Mark upon their Bodies: Ye shall not make any Cuttings in your Flesh for the Dead, nor print any Marks upon you.

Ptolemy Philopater gave Orders, [b] that the Jews who had forsaken their Religion, and had embraced that of the Pagans, should be stigmatized with the Mark of an Ivy-leaf, which Tree is dedicated to Bacchus. St. John in his Revelation alludes to this Custom, when he says, That the Beast printed her Character upon her own, on their Right-hand, and on their Fore-head; and that she allows none to buy or to sell, but those that bore the Mark of the Beast, or her Name, or the Number of the Letters of her Name. Lastly, St. Paul declares, that he bore in his Body the Marks of the Lord Jesus; that is to say, that he bore the Scars of the Stripes that he had received for his Sake, and for his Service, and that he look'd upon them as so many Stigmata, or honourable Marks of his Consecration to his Service. Rev. xiii. 16, 17. Gal. vi. 17.

Philo the Jew says, that there were Men, who printed Characters upon their Flesh with hot Irons, to devote themselves more solemnly and avowedly to the worship of their Idols, and to prove with greater Evidence this Engagement and Servitude. Procopius takes notice of an antient Custom among Christians, who made Marks upon their Arms and Wrists, representing the Cross, or the Monogramm of Jesus Christ: A Custom which still continues among the Oriental Christians, and those that make a Pilgrimage to Jerusalem. Prudentius thus describes the manner in which the Pagans made their Stigmata, in honour to their Gods: Philo, de Monarch. l. 14. STOICKS, a sort of Heathen Philosophers, who took their Name from the Greek Word Stoa, signifying a Porch or Entry, because Zeno, the Head of the Stoicks, kept his School in a Porch of the City of Athens. Diogenes Laertius may be consulted, in his Life of Zeno, and others that have treated of the Sects of the Philosophers. Josephus says, [c] that the Pharisees approach very near to the Sentiments of the Stoicks. They affected the [illegible]

Stiffness,

Stiffness, Patience, Apathy, Austerity, and Insensibility. The Sect of the Stoicks was still considerable at Athens when St. Paul
Acts xviii. 18. came thither, since he had Conferences with them. The Stoicks placed the supream Happiness of Man in living agreeably to Nature and Reason. They seem'd to look upon God as the Soul of the World.

STONES. We have already spoke, as often as Occasion has offer'd, of the several precious Stones, or Gems, of which mention is made in Scripture. All that can be found concerning this Matter in the Commentators, is very little to be rely'd on, since neither the Jews, nor even the antient Greek Interpreters, seem to have had a sufficient Knowledge of the proper Signification of the Original Terms. Louis de Dieu has very carefully treated of it, in his Commentary upon Exod. xxviii. 17, &c. and Braunius, De Vestitu Sacerdotum Hebræorum, l. 2. c. 8, 9, &c. See also Francis de la Rue, de Gemmis. These are the Names of the precious Stones that are spoke of in Exod. xxviii. 17, &c. and which were in the Highpriest's Breastplate. The Reader may see each of them under their particular Articles.

אדם Odem. 1. The Sardius or Sardonyx, in Hebrew, Odem. It was inscribed with the Name of Reuben.

פטדה Pithera. 2. The Topaz, in Hebrew, Pithera. The Name of Simeon was engraved upon it.

ברקת Barecheth. 3. The Emerald, in Hebrew, Barecheth. The Tribe of Levi.

נפך Nophech. 4. The Carbuncle, in Hebrew, Nophech. The Tribe of Judah.

ספיר Sapphir. 5. The Sapphire, in Hebrew, Sapphir. The Tribe of Dan.

שהם Shohem. 11. The Onyx, in Hebrew, Shohem. The Tribe of Joseph.

ישפה Jashpe. 12. The Beryl, in Hebrew, Jashpe. The Tribe of Benjamin.

Upon the two Shoulders of the Highpriest were two Stones, call'd, in Hebrew, Shohem, in the Vulgate Onyx, in the Septuagint Emeralds. We think this to be the Exodus xxviii. 9. true Signification of the Hebrew Word Shohem.

Rev. xxi. 19, 20, 21, &c. St. John in his Revelation speaks of the New Jerusalem, the Spouse of the Lamb, the Foundations of which were precious Stones. The first Foundation was Jasper, the second Sapphire, the third a Chalcedony, the fourth an Emerald, the fifth Sardonyx, the sixth Sardius, the seventh Chrysolite, the eighth Beryl, the ninth a Topaz, the tenth a Chrysoprasus, the eleventh a Jacinth, the twelfth an Amethyst.

To these precious Stones may be added the Stone of Shish, Sis, Ses, or Sais, mention'd 1 Chron. xxix. 2. and Esth. i. 6. which is commonly translated by fine white Marble. See Parius Lapis. שש or שיש Shish.

The Stone Gazith. But I take this to be a common Marble, sawed and polished. 1 Chron. xxii. 2. אבן גזית

The Stone of Phuc. Phuc, in Hebrew, signifies Antimony, or Paint. We may see by Isaiah, that the Stone of Phuc was used for Pavements. The Stone of Stibium, or Antimony, is a Mineral of a black Colour, full of shining Veins, like polish'd Iron, and which has an intermediate Nature, between Metal and Stone. 1 Chron. xxix. 2. Isa. liv. 11. אבני פוך

Also in Scripture mention is made of several remarkable Rocks or Stones, that were noted for some memorable Events. Such were,

The Rock or Stone of the Desart. This was the City Petra: See its Article.

The Stone or Rock of Division. This is the Rock wherein David and his People were besieged by Saul, when it was told him, that the Philistines had made an Incursion into his Kingdom. This obliged him to quit his Undertaking, to go after the Enemy. 1 Sam. xxiii. 28, &c.

The Rock Etam. A Rock wherein Samson lay hid, while he made War against the Philistines. Judg. xv. 8.

The Stone or Rock Oreb, where Gideon put to Death Oreb the Prince of Midian. Judg. vii. 25.

The Rock of Adullam, wherein was a Cave where David conceal'd himself. 1 Chron. xi. 15.

The Stone of Ezel, or the Rock near which David was to expect the Answer of his Friend Jonathan. 1 Sam. xx. 19.

The Stone of Succour. This is the Place where the Philistines took the Ark of the Lord. 1 Sam. v. 1

The Corner-Stone, or the Head Stone of the Corner. This is that which is put at the Angle of a Building, whether at the Foundation, or at the Top of the Wall. Jesus Christ was that Corner-Stone which was rejected by the Jews, but is become the Corner-Stone of the Church, [a] and the Stone that binds and unites the Synagogue and the Gentiles in the Union of the same Faith, of the same Baptism, of the same Church. Psal. cxv 21.

The Stone of Zoheleth, as the Rabbins say, was a Stone that served for Exercise to the younger People, who try'd their Strength, either in lifting it, casting it, or 1 Kings i. 9.

The antient Phenicians call'd by the Name of Bethulæa, such Stones as were Euseb. præpar. l. 1. c. 10. consecrated to divine Worship. Sanchoniathon ascribes the Invention of them to the God Cœlus; he says, they are living and animated Stones. They were seen for a long Time about Mount Libanus. As- Apud Photium, cod. 242. clepiades takes notice of 'em near Heliopolis in Syria; and Damascius says, he has seen of 'em in the Air, and in Motion. They ascribed Oracles to them, and the Presence of some Deity, or of some Genius that animated them. Some of these Bethulæa were consecrated to Saturn, others to the Sun, and others to other Deities. Hesychius says, that the Poets call the Stone, which Saturn devoured instead of his Son Jupiter, by the Name of Bethula. I doubt not but that the Word Bethula or Bethulæa, is derived from Bethel, where Jacob anointed a Stone in honour of the true God.

The Mahometans think, [a] that Jacob's Stone was convey'd to the Temple of Jerusalem, and is still preserv'd in a Mosque there, in the Place where they think the Temple formerly stood. They call this Stone Alsakra, or the Stone of Unction. The Cadi Gemaleddin, Son of Vallel, writes, that passing through Jerusalem, in his Way to Egypt, he saw Christian Priests carrying glass Phials full of Wine over the Sakra, near which the Mussulmen had built their Temple, which, for this Reason, they call the Temple of the Stone. This Wine that the Christian Priests set upon the Stone, was, without doubt, design'd for the Celebration of Mass there.

Thunder-Stone. We think the Stone Job xxviii. 18. אבני גביש
Gabish or Algabish, mention'd by Job and Ezekiel, to be the Thunder-Stone. * The Ez. xiii. 11.
Antients had a Knowledge of the Stones call'd Ceraunia, or Thunder-Stones, and had them in much Esteem. Job reckons the Gabish among precious Stones; and Ezekiel says, that the Lord will overwhelm the Wicked by a violent Shower, and will break them to Pieces by the Stone Gabish. As Pliny describes it, they were Plin. lib. xxvii. c. 9.
black or red Stones, having the Shape of a Wedge. Anselm de Boot [b] says, they are shewn in Collections of Rarities; have the Form of a Hatchet, of a Ploughshare, of a Hammer, of a Mallet, or of a Wedge. That their Substance is like that of Flint-Stones; their Colour not uniform; that they are generally perforated, and seem to have served for several Uses, either of War, or for Country Business.

These Observations would make one think, that these pretended Thunder-Stones are nothing else but some of those Stones which the Antients made use of instead of Iron, or Steel, to work with, for Arms to attack or to defend themselves with. We find Hatchets, Knives, and Ploughshares of this kind of Stone. The antient Hebrews made use of Stone-Knives for Circumcision. The Galli, or Priests of Isis, also us'd them for cutting. Herodotus says, Herodot. l. 7. c. 69.
that the Ethiopians tipt the Ends of their Arrows with very hard Stones. The Hatchets that have been found under the Heads of some Barbarians that were dug up some Years ago, [c] in a Village near Eureux, were of Stone; and some of 'em were of a very beautiful and precious green Stone. It is not therefore to be wonder'd at, that they set such a Value on them, and placed them in the Rank of precious Stones.

Even at this Day they ascribe extraordinary Effects to these Thunder-Stones.
Pliny says, that the Persian Magians sought Plin. l. 37. c. 9. with great Care for a sort of Thunder-Stone that

that was very rare, and which they made use of in their Operations; that is, says he, the Stone that falls with the Thunder. Lotacus speaks of two other Kinds of them, to one of which they imputed the Power of taking Cities, to the other the Power of defeating Fleets. These Stones are to be found very common at this Day in Picardy, Germany, and in the Country of the Morians.

But the true Thunder-Stones are different from all these. 'Tis pretended they are form'd in the Clouds of a nitrous and sulphureous Matter, which acquires a certain Degree of Consistence by the Agitation of the Clouds, and then takes Fire, and darts forth with Impetuosity. Plutarch speaks at large of a Thunder-Stone that had fall'n formerly in Thrace. The Philosopher Anaxagoras foretold the Fall of this Stone, and pretended, that it was emitted from the Body of the Sun. It was seen for seventy-five Days in the Air, toss'd up and down at Random, and from Time to Time it sent forth Pieces of its Substance all on fire, appearing like those Stars that seem to fall from the Sky. At last the Stone itself fell down, and was quite extinguish'd, being much diminish'd in the Bigness that it seem'd to have in the Air. Pliny says, that it was preserved even to his Time, was in Bulk as big as a Chariot, and of a dark adust Colour. Qui lapis etiam nunc ostenditur, magnitudine vehis, colore adusto.

Plin. l. 2. c. 68.

That which is to be seen in the Parish Church of Eurishem in Alsatia, fell down from Heaven in the Year 1492. It is blackish, almost round, uneven, and weighs, as they say, about three hundred Pound Weight. That mention'd by M. Gassendi, [a] which fell November 29, 1637. was of the Bigness of a Man's Head, weigh'd fifty-four Pounds, was of a blackish Colour, and extreamly hard; it is kept at Aix in Provence. Count Marcellin, in his Chronicle for the Year 452, speaks of three great Stones that fell from Heaven in Thrace. Cardan relates, that in 1510 there fell in the Country near Abdua, to the Number of twelve hundred Stones, of the Colour of Iron, of a sulphureous Smell, and of an extraordinary Hardness.

Cardan. de varietate. l. 14. c. 72.

Some pretend these Stones are not generated in the Air, but that they are broken off from some very high Rocks; that the Sulphur and Nitre in which they are inclosed, are the Cause that they are soon inflamed, and the Flame contributes to their being supported for some Time in the Air: That when the combustible Matter is consumed, with which they are surrounded, they fall down, and are taken for Thunder-Stones. Diodorus Siculus relates, that the Persians attempting to plunder the Temple of Delphos, were repell'd and intirely routed by Thunder, Tempest, and great Fragments of Rocks, that were torn up by the Violence of the Storm. Travellers assure us, that the same thing often happens in America, in certain Places where Hurricanes are frequent. It is very probable, that what they call Thunder-Stones, and what Job and Ezekiel mention by the Name of Gabish, are nothing else but Stones loosen'd from the Mountains, which then obtain'd the Name of Thunder-Stones.

Diodor. Sicul. Bibl. l. 11.

Shower of Stones. Joshua speaks of its raining Stones upon the Canaanites. Thus he expresses himself; And it came to pass as they fled from before Israel, and were in the going down to Beth-horon, that the Lord cast down great Stones from Heaven upon them unto Azekah, and they died. They were more that died with Hailstones, than they whom the Children of Israel slew with the Sword. Opinions are divided about these Hailstones. Some pretend, that this was no more than ordinary Hail, but more violent than the Storms we are us'd to see. Others maintain, that Joshua is to be understood literally, of a Shower of Stones. The Text seems to be express for this Sentiment, and the thing is not at all impossible. We have several Instances of Showers of Stones; and tho' we had no Example of Things of this Nature, yet it is enough that the Scripture speaks of it as of a supernatural and miraculous Event, to remove all our Scruples about it. We ought not to have recourse to the figurative and metaphorical Sense, but only when the things related in Scripture include some Contradiction in the literal Sense, something contrary to the Idea of God, or inconsistent with the Laws of Nature. In a word, when there is no real Necessity of having recourse to a Figure, we must not depart from the literal Sense.

Josh. x. 11.

As often as the Scripture speaks of these Events, it speaks of 'em as of a Prodigy. But surely a common Shower of Hail has nothing of a Miracle in it. The best Commentators upon Joshua, as Masius, Bonfrere, Grotius, explain it literally of a Shower of Stones. Moses, in Deuteronomy, speaks of a Shower of Dust and Sand, with which he threatens his People: The Lord shall make the Rain of thy Land Powder and Dust; from Heaven shall it come down upon thee, until thou be destroyed. The Romans, who look'd upon Showers of Stones as something very disastrous, in their Annals have taken notice of a great many Instances of them. Under the Reign of Tullus Hostilius, when it was made known to the People of Rome, that a Shower of Stones had fall'n upon the Mountain of Alba, at first it seem'd incredible. They sent out proper Persons to inquire strictly into this Prodigy, and it was found that Stones had fall'n after the same Manner as a Storm of Hail driven by the Wind [a]. Afterwards the same Prodigy happen'd frequently [b]. Some Time after the Battle of Cannæ, there was seen upon the same Mountain of Alba, a Shower of Stones, which continued for two Days together. In 1538, near a Village in Italy call'd Tripergola, after some Shocks of an Earthquake, there was seen a Shower of Stones and Dust, which darkned the Air for two Days, after which they observed that a Mountain had rose up in the midst of the Lucrine Lake [c].

If therefore Showers of Stones have nothing contrary to the Laws of Nature, there can be no good Reason assign'd why we should depart from the literal Sense in this Place, to seek Refuge in Allegory. This is not to affirm that there was no Miracle here, as there was none in those Showers of Stones mention'd by Livy; but the Miracle consists much less in the Thing itself, than in the Circumstances of Time, and that the Shower should fall only upon the Canaanites, without doing the Israelites any Harm. Our Dissertation may be consulted upon this Subject, printed before our Comment upon Joshua, and other Commentators upon the same Book.

'Tis to this that the Scripture alludes in this Place.
Job xxix. 6. Job says, in the same Sense, that in the Time of his Prosperity, the Rock poured me out Rivers of Oil, because the Olive-trees generally grew upon the Mountains.

Many People bordering upon Palestine, had their Abode in the Rocks and hollow Stones in the Mountains. The People inhabiting upon the Persian Gulph, lived in this Manner. 'Tis for this Reason that they were call'd Troglodytes, which in Greek is as much as to say, People that dwell in the Caves and hollow Places of the Mountains. Those that inhabited in the Desart about Tikoah, lodged in Caverns dug in the Earth, says St. Jerome. The Idumeans had their ordinary Abodes in the Clefts of the Rocks. O ye that dwell in Jer. xlviii. 28.
Moab, leave the Cities and dwell in the Rock, and be like the Dove that maketh her Nest in the Sides of the Hole's Mouth. Hither the Moabites us'd to retreat in Times of Calamity. In Isaiah God says to the Jews; Look Isa. li. 1.

sees; Think not to say within your selves, We have Abraham to our Father; for I say unto you, that God is able of these Stones to raise up Children unto Abraham. He can convert the most hardned Hearts, and call to him those that are at the greatest Distance. 'Tis believed, that when he spoke this, the Baptist pointed to the Stones in the Desart, and by that Name understood the People that were yet Infidels and Gentiles.

The Knives of Stones that were made use of by the Jews in Circumcision, were not enjoin'd by the Law; but the Use of 'em was founded, either upon Custom, or upon Experience of this kind of Instruments, they being found to be less dangerous than those made of Metal. Zipporah made use of a Stone to circumcise her Sons. Ex. iv. 25.
Joshua did the same, when he caus'd such Josh. v. 2. of the Israelites to be circumcised at Gilgal, as had not received Circumcision during their Journey in the Wilderness: Fac tibi cultros Lapideos, & circumcide secundo filios Israel. This Expression of Scripture shews, that Knives were not then in common Use. formerly instead of Pen-Knives, to cut the Canes for writing withal. Scaliger says, that he had seen at Lyons two of these Stone Knives. We have already spoken of Hatchets, and other cutting Instruments of Stone. The Africans of Morocco, and some Americans, still, at this Day, have them in common Use, of which they make Knives, Lancets, and Razors [a]. The Oriental Jews commonly us'd them for the Circumcision of their Children, being not unlike Flints for Guns: But the Western Jews use a Razor. D. Joh. de Palafox, c. 12.

Moses forbids the Hebrews to set up in their Country any Stone that is exalted or remarkable. Nec insignem lapidem ponetis in terra vestra. The Hebrew [b] may be translated by a Stone for Sight, a Land-mark, that stands on an Eminence, or in some great Road, that it may be seen at a Distance. Strabo mentions these Stones, which were to be seen on the High-ways in Egypt. They are raised on high, polish'd, round, and almost of a spherical Figure, made of a kind of a black and hard Stone, of which Mortars are made in that Country. These Stones or Columns are placed upon a larger Stone, or Base, and sometimes have still another lesser Stone over them, serving as a Capital. Some stand alone and separate; the greatest are almost twelve Feet in diameter, and generally they are about half as thick; thus says Strabo. There are also several remarkable and eminent Stones upon Libanus, as the same Author testifies. The Syrians and Egyptians had such a Respect for these Stones, that they almost adored them. They anointed them with Oil, as may be seen from Apuleius, they kiss'd them and saluted them. It is likely that this is what Moses forbid the Hebrews to do. Strab. l. 17.

Solomon says in his Proverbs; As he that bindeth a Stone in a Sling, so is he that giveth Honour to a Fool. Or, as the Vulgate hath it, He that heaps Honours upon a Fool, does like one that throws a Stone upon those Heaps, that us'd to be raised to the Honour of Mercury. Statues of Mercury were generally set up in Crossways, and Heaps of Stones were cast at the Feet of these Statues, out of superstitious Views; pretty much like what is done in this Country, where Persons throw Stones at the Feet of certain Crosses set up in the High-ways. They pretend, that so many Stones cast there, are as a Testimony of the Salutation that is paid to it. It is certain that the Pagans were us'd to make Heaps of Stones at the Feet of the Statue of Mercury, and to his Honour; [c] and it can hardly be doubted, but that the Author of the Vulgate had this Custom in View, when he translated that Passage of the Proverbs. Prov. xxvi. 8.

But the Hebrew Text imports; [d] Just as a little Stone, (literally, a Fragment of a Stone) thrown upon an Heap of Stones; so is Honour conferr'd upon a Fool. This little Stone does not augment the Heap, nor is so much as seen upon it; so Honour heap'd upon a Fool, does not render him more worthy of Consideration. Others translate it, To tie a Stone in a Piece of Purple, is to give Honour to a Fool. As nothing can be so ill placed as a Stone in a Piece of fine Cloth; so are Honours ill placed upon a Fool. Lastly, the Hebrew may be render'd thus; To give Honours to a Fool, is the same thing as to put a Piece of try'd Silver in a Sling. The Septuagint translate it; [e] He that gives Glory to a Fool, is like him that ties a Stone in a Sling; for this is to lose Labour, when the Stone is fastned to the Sling.

Great Heaps of Stones, raised up for a Witness of any memorable Event, and to preserve the Remembrance of some Matter of great Importance, are the most antient Monuments among the Hebrews. In those elder Ages, before the Use of Writing, these Monuments were instead of Inscriptions, Pyramids, Medals, or Histories. Jacob and Laban raised such a Monument upon Mount Gilead in Memory of their Covenant. Joshua erected one at Gilgal, made of Stones taken out of the Jordan, to preserve the Memorial of his miraculous Passage over this River. The Israelites that dwelt beyond Jordan, also rais'd one upon the Banks of the River, as a Testimony that they constituted but one Nation with their Brethren on the other Side. Gen. xxxi. 46. Josh. iv. 5, 6, 7. Josh. xxii. 10.

Sometimes they heap'd up such a Collection of Stones upon the Burying-place of some odious Persons, as was done in the Case of Achan and Absalom. Josh. vii. 26. 2 Kings xviii. 17.

Mention is often made of the Stones wherewith they overwhelm'd such as were stoned to Death. See the Article STONING.

Rough and unform'd Stones were look'd upon as purer, and fitter for sacred Uses, than those that were hewn. Moses directed an Altar to be raised to the Lord of rough Stones; If thou wilt make me an Altar of Stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn Stone; for if thou lift up thy Tool upon it, thou hast polluted it. God order'd that an Altar of rude Stones should be built to him upon Exod. xx. 25.

Deuter. xxvii. 5. Mount Ebal; that it should be cover'd with Mortar, and that the Words of the Covenant should be written upon it. This Josh. viii. 31, 32. was perform'd by Joshua. The Altar of the Temple at Jerusalem, which was built after the Return from the Captivity, was Ezr. v. 8. also of rude Stones; as likewise was that 1 Macc. iv. 46, 47. repair'd by Judas Maccabeus, after the Profanation of it by Antiochus Epiphanes.

In Deuteronomy, Chap. viii. 9. Moses, speaking of Palestine, says, that the Stones of that Country are Iron-Stones; Cujus lapides ferrum sunt. Which signifies, that the Stones of this Country may serve to make Knives, Hatchets, and other Instruments, which are commonly made of Iron; or that the Stones there have the Hardness and Solidity of Iron; or lastly, that the Mountains of this Country will abundantly supply them with Mines of Iron, or Iron-stone.

A Heart of Stone, may be understood several ways. Job, speaking of the Be- Job xli. 15. hemoth, or the Elephant, says, that his Heart is as hard as Stone, as impenetrable as an Anvil: Which is as much as to say, that he is of a very extraordinary Strength, Boldness, and Courage. It is said else- 1 Sam. xxv. 37. where, that the Heart of Nabal became as a Stone, when he was told of the Danger he had incurr'd by his Imprudence. His Heart became immoveable like a Stone, it was contracted or convulsed, and this Convulsion was the Occasion of his Death. Ezek. xi. 19. xxxvi. 26. Ezekiel says, that the Lord will take away from his People their Heart of Stone, and give them a Heart of Flesh; that he will convert them, and inspire them with milder and more humane Sentiments. 'Tis pretty nearly in the same Sense, that John Mat. iii. 9. the Baptist said, that God was able to raise up to Abraham Children from the Stones of the Desart.

Fire produced from Stones by means of a Steel, or even when they are otherwise set on fire, is reckon'd purer and fitter for religious Offices, than any other Fire. At the Consecration of the Altar of the Tabernacle, and at the Dedication of the Temple of Jerusalem, God sent Fire from Heaven, which set fire to the Wood of the Altar. But when Judas Maccabeus [a] purified the Temple, he lighted the Fire de ignitis lapidibus igne concepto. He caused Flints to be heated, and extracted Fire from them, to light the Fuel upon the Altar.

A Stone is sometimes put for an Idol of Hab. ii. 19. Stone; Wo unto him that saith to the Wood, Awake, and to the dumb Stone, Arise, it shall teach. The Assyrians threw into the Isai. xxxvii. 19. Fire the Gods of the Nations; for they were no Gods, they were only Wood and Stone. And Jeremiah says, Saying to a Stock, Thou art my Father, and to a Stone, Thou hast brought me forth. Jer. ii. 27.

To be reduced to an Heap of Stones, is said of a City or House which is entirely ruin'd and demolish'd; I will make Samaria as an Heap of the Field, and as Plantings of a Vineyard. Mic. i. 6. Jeremiah says, that Damascus shall cease to be a City, and shall be reduced to an Heap of Stones. Jer. xvii. 1. Thus also our Saviour, speaking of the Destruction of Jerusalem, says, that one Stone shall not remain upon another. Mat. xxiv 2.

Daniel, speaking of the Kingdom of the Messiah, compares it to a small Stone loosned from the Mountain, that falls upon the Feet of the Colossus which Nebuchadnezzar saw in his Dream, and which afterwards fill'd the whole Earth. Dan. ii. 34

The Author of Ecclesiasticus says, that the slothful Man shall be stoned with Stones of Dirt, and Stones of Filth or Dung *. Ecclus. xxii. 1, 2. That is, besides the Punishment of being stoned, he shall suffer the Shame of Contempt. He shall be defiled with Dirt, and be look'd upon as defiled with Dung.

Ezekiel compares the King of Tyre to the Cherubim in the Temple, in the midst of the Stones of Fire, or of burning Stones, in medio lapidum ignitorum. Ez. xxviii. 14, 16. The Cherubims were of Gold, the Pavement of the Sanctuary was of Stones and Marble, precious and shining. Thus the King of Tyre was cloathed with magnificent Garments, Gold and precious Stones surrounded him on all Sides, his Apartments were paved with precious Marble, &c.

STONING. To stone, to put to Death by casting Stones. Lapidation was a Punishment very much in Use among the Hebrews, and the Rabbins reckon up a great many Crimes that were subject to this Penalty. These are, in general, all those Criminals that the Law condemns to Death, without expressing the particular kind of Death. For Example, the Incest of a Son with his Mother, or of the Son with his Mother-in-law, or of a Father with his Daughter, or of a Father with his Daughter-in-law; or of a Man that debauches a Woman that is contracted, or of her that is contracted and consents to another; those that are guilty of the Crimes of Sodomy or Bestiality; Idolaters, Blasphemers, Magicians, Conjurers, Breakers of the Sabbath, those that offer their Children to Moloch, those that intice others to Idolatry, a Son rebellious to his Father and condemned by the Judges.

The Rabbins tell us, that when a Man was condemned to Death, he was led out of the City, having an Officer before him with a Pike in his Hand, at the Top of which was a Piece of linen Cloth, to make it distinguish'd afar off, and that those that might have any thing to offer in Vindication of the Criminal, might now propose it before they proceeded any farther. If any such presented themselves, they all stood still, and brought back the Offender to Prison, to hear what could be alledg'd in his Favour. If no one offer'd himself, he was conducted to the Place of Execution, and was exhorted to acknowledge and confess his Fault; because those that confess their Sins, have a Part in the Life to come. After this he was stoned. But Lapidation, as the Rabbins say, was perform'd after two Manners [a]. The first was when the guilty Person was pelted with Stones till he dy'd, the Witnesses throwing the first Stones at him. The second Manner was, when the Criminal was brought to a steep Place, whose Heighth was at least that of two Men, from whence one of the two Witnesses threw him headlong, and the other roll'd a large Stone upon his Body. If he did not die by the Fall, they dispatch'd him by throwing Stones upon him. We see more than one Instance in Scripture of the first Manner of Stoning; but we have no Example of the second; for that 2 Kings ix. 33. of Jezabel, who was thrown out of a Window, proves nothing at all.

What we have said, that they generally ston'd Criminals out of the City, must only be apply'd to regular Executions. For in other Cases the Jews stoned those they thought deserved it where-ever they found them. For Example, when hurry'd away by a Transport of Zeal, they stoned to Death a Blasphemer, an Adulterer, or an Idolater. Thus, when they brought to
Joh. viii. 7. Jesus a Woman surprised in Adultery, he said to her Accusers in the Temple, where he then was, Let him that is without Fault cast the first Stone at her. And another Time, the Jews pretending he blasphemed, gather'd up Stones to stone him, even in John viii. 59. the Temple. They did the same at another Time, when he said to them, I and my
Joh. x. 31. Father are one. Upon such Occasions they did not stay for the usual Formalities; they follow'd the Instigation of their own Tempers, and the first Transports of their Passion. And this was what they call'd, The Judgment of Zeal.

We are told, that after a Man had been stoned, they fasten'd his Body to a Stake, by tying his Hands together, and left him in this Condition 'till Sun-set; then they unty'd him, and bury'd him in the Vale of Carcasses, with the Stake to which he had been fasten'd. This was not always done; and they say, it was done only to Blasphemers and Idolaters; and besides, it would be very difficult to prove this Practice by Scripture.

STORAX. Jacob sent a Present of Storax to the Governor of Egypt, whom he did not yet know to be his Son Joseph. [b] The Hebrew reads Nechoth, which the Septuagint render by Perfume. St. Jerom has follow'd Aquila, who translates it by Storax. Storax is a Plant, which in Magnitude and Form is somewhat like a Quince-tree. It yields a Liquor also call'd Storax. Its Blossom is white, and its Fruit hangs by long Stalks, cover'd with a thin Skin, round and sharp at the Bottom, of the Bigness of a large Nut, wherein there are little Kernels, from whence the Grain is taken. The Storax is a fat thick Liquor, like Balm, and which has a disagreeable Smell. Some do not distinguish Storax from Stacte, which has been spoke of already. It is not at all certain, that the Hebrew word Nechoth signifies Storax. Saint Jerom in Gen. xxxvii. 24. 2 Kings xx. 13. and Isai. xxix. 2. renders it by Aromata; and in Gen. xliii. 11. by Storax. The Seventy have always us'd Aromata. Others think it to be Wax, Rosin, Stacte, Balm, or something in general that is very valuable.

STORK, Ciconia, a kind of Bird well known. The Hebrews call it Chaseda, or Chasida, [c] which signifies Pity or Mercy; probably, because of the Tenderness it shews to its Parents, which it never forsakes, but feeds and defends even to Death. The Stork is a Bird of Passage, which in Winter goes into the hot Countries. Jeremiah says, The Stork in the Heaven know- Jer. viii. 7.
eth her appointed Times, and the Turtle, and the Crane, and the Swallow observe the Time of their coming. St. Jerom and the Septuagint sometimes render the Hebrew word Chasidah by Herodius the Heron, and sometimes by Pelican, or Kite; but Interpreters are pretty well agreed, that it signifies a Stork. Moses places it among unclean Birds. The Psalmist says, As for the Stork, Lev. xi. 19.

upon some high Tower, or the Top of an House; but in Palestine, where the Coverings of their Houses were flat, she built in the highest Trees. Profane Authors speak much of the Piety of the Stork, and its Gratitude towards its Parents. St. Ambrose says, [d] that for this Reason the Romans call'd it Avis pia; and one of their Poets [e] calls it Pietatis cultrix:

Ciconia etiam grata, peregrina, hospita,

and Insects: Its Plumage would be quite white, if it was not that the Extremity of its Wings are black, and also some small part of its Head and Thighs: It sits for the Space of thirty Days, and lays but four Eggs. Formerly they would not eat the Stork, but at present it is much esteem'd, for the Deliciousness of its Flesh. They go away in the Middle of August, and return at Spring. Bellonius says, that when they go away, that Stork that comes last to the Place of Rendezvous is kill'd upon the Spot. They go away in the Night to the Southern Countries.

Besides the common Stork which we have now described, there is a black one, which the Egyptians call Ibis; which is not a Bird of Passage, but continues always in the Country. We have spoke of it under the Name Ibis.

STRANGE Worship. The Hebrews thus call'd all kinds of Idolatry, Superstition, all Imitation of the Worship of strange Nations and Idolaters, all Sacrilege, all religious Worship that was perform'd, even to the True God, in a Place, and at a Time, or even in a Manner, different from what he had appointed: All this is call'd Strange Worship, because it was not conformable to that of the Patriarchs and the Fathers of their Nation.

I. STRATO; The Tower of Strato. See Cesarea of Palestine This famous City was built by Herod the Great, in the same Place where formerly had been (Præfatione Novella 103.) the Tower of Strato. 'Tis said, that Strato was a Grecian, who gave his Name to this Place, where he built a Tower.

II. STRATO; The Tower of Strato; A dark and obscure Place in the Royal Palace of Jerusalem, where Aristobulus, Son of John Hyrcanus King of the Jews, caus'd his Brother Antigonus to be kill'd, at his Return from an Expedition, wherein Antigonus had behaved himself with great Bravery. See the Articles of Antigonus and Aristobulus. One Judas of the Sect of the Essenians, [a] who had foretold, that on that Day Antigonus should be put to Death in the Tower of Strato, seeing this young Prince return from the Expedition before mention'd, and knowing the Tower of Strato to be six hundred Furlongs from Jerusalem, resolved to live no longer, that he might not pass for a visionary Person and a false Prophet. But he was not aware that there was a Tower of Strato in the Palace, in which it was known soon after that Antigonus had been assassinated by the Order of his Brother, who thought he was coming to take away his Life.

STRUTHIO, an Ostrich; a certain Bird declared unclean by Moses, Lev. xi. 16. See Ostrich.

STUDIES of the Hebrews. The chief Study of the Hebrews, was always the Law of the Lord. We see the Practice of this recommended throughout the whole Old Testament. Moses commanded, that the (Exod. xiii. 9.) Law of the Lord should always be in their Mouths Day and Night; that it should be as a Memento before their Eyes, and a Signal in their Hands: He would have them engrave it on their Hearts; (Deut. vi. 7.) that they should teach it their Children; that they should always meditate upon it, whether sitting in their Houses, walking in the Fields, in the Night-time, while they slept, and when they awoke in the Morning; that they should wear it as a Bracelet to their Arm, and as a Pendant between their Eyes, and write it upon their Door-posts. This was the Study of the Prophets, the Patriarchs, and all good Israelites.

But their Study was not confined only to their Laws and Ceremonies prescribed by Moses: They studied their Histories, and even their Genealogies; so that the Children of the Jews, according to the Report of St. Jerom, knew at their Fingers- (Hieron.) ends all the Genealogies that are found in the Chronicles. From their tenderest Infancy, as Josephus tells us, they were ac- (Joseph. l. 1. cont. App.) custom'd to study the Laws of God, to learn them by Heart, to practise them; and they were so addicted to them, that they were ready to lay down their Lives for their Observation.

After they had the Writings of the Prophets, they apply'd themselves very earnestly to know the Sense of the Prophecies, and to study the hidden Meaning of them. We see it by Daniel, who apply'd himself with so much Care to unfold the Meaning of his own Revelations, and of those of the Prophet Jeremiah, who fix'd the Time for (Dan. vii. 28., ix. 2, 3, 22, 23, 24.) the compleating the Captivity of the People of God. Jesus the Son of Sirach is described to us as a Man of true Learning, who, after he had with great Diligence (Ecclesiastici prolugus.) study'd the Law, the Prophets, and the other Books that had been written in his Nation, apply'd himself to write something that might be of Use to Posterity. And here is the Description that the Son of Sirach himself gives us of a truly learned Man, according to the Hebrews. "The (Ecclus. xxxix. 1, 2, 3.) "wise Man who addicts himself to Study, "and who meditates on the Law of the "Lord, will search out the Wisdom of "all the Antients, and will make the "Prophets his Study. He will lay up in "his Heart the Discourses of famous Men, "and at the same Time he will penetrate "into the Mystery of Parables. He will "endeavour to dive into the Sense of Proverbs, and obscure Sentences, and will " feed himself with what is most abstruse " in Parables. He will enter into the Service of great Men, and will appear before the Governors of Provinces. He " will travel into the Territory of foreign " Nations, to prove Good and Evil among " Men. —— And if it shall please the sovereign Lord, he will be fill'd with the " Spirit of Understanding: And then he " will dispense the Words of Wisdom like " Rain, &c." The Apostle St. Peter 1 Pet.i.11. informs us, what was the Study of the Prophets. They searched what Times and what other Circumstances the Spirit of Jesus Christ, who spoke in them, had mark'd out, when they predicted the Sufferings of our Saviour, and the Glory that was to follow them.

After the Conquests of Alexander the Great, the Jews, who were mingled with the Grecians in the greatest Part of the Provinces of the East, began to have a Taste for their Language and their Studies. In Imitation of the Grecian Philosophers, they divided themselves into different Sects. Some of them, as the Pharisees, espoused some of the Opinions of the Stoicks and Platonicians; others, as the Sadducees, embraced some of the Notions of the Epicureans; others, as the Essenians, says Philo, had a Contempt for Logick, Physicks, and Metaphysicks; that is to say, whatever is useless, and Matter of meer Curiosity, in the Sciences. They only apply'd themselves to Morality and the Laws of God, which they explain'd after a sublime and allegorical Manner.

Philo. l. quod omnis probus liber.

In our Saviour's Time it appears, that the main Study of the Jewish Doctors was chiefly the Traditions of their Fathers. Jesus Christ upbraids them frequently with having forsaken the Law of God, and its true Meaning, to ascribe Meanings and Explications to it, contrary to the Sense of the Law, and the Intention of the Law-giver. St. Paul, who had been bred up in these Principles, shews also the Absurdity of them in his Epistles, always calling back the Laws to their Original, and to their true Sense. But all this was not able to cure the Spirit of the Jews upon this Article; at this Day they are more bigotted to their Traditions than ever, and they make them the greatest Part of their Study. The Reader may see what we have said upon the Articles SCHOOLS, SYNAGOGUES, and TRADITIONS.

STYLE, to write with. It is universally known, that the Antients often made use of Styles or Bodkins to write with upon Tables done over with Wax. These Styles were of Iron, Brass, or Bone, with a sharp Point at one End, and flat at the other, or pointed at one End, and the other form'd like a little round Spoon or Spatula. The sharp End was us'd for writing and making of Letters, and the other expung'd them. This was a great Convenience to the Writer; for he could put out again what he pleased, and yet no Erasure should appear. The flat Part of the Style left no Footsteps of what had been written, and they could write anew as they pleas'd upon the same Place. And this they could do as often as they found Occasion. Upon this was founded that Advice of Horace, of turning the Style, and blotting out often, if you would write what might deserve to be read:

The Scripture alludes to the same Custom in these Words; Delebo Jerusalem sicut deleri solent tabulæ, & delens vertam, & ducam crebrius stylum super faciem ejus: I will blot out Jerusalem as Men blot out Writing from their Writing-tables. I will turn and often rub the Style upon the Wax, till nothing shall appear. I will not leave the least Footsteps of that devoted City. 2 Kings xxi. 13.

Isaiah received Orders from the Lord to write in a great Roll of Parchment, with the Style of a Man, Stylo hominis, what should be dictated to him. 'Tis asked, What is meant by that Style of a Man? Sure it is, it could not be one of those Styles of Metal that we are speaking of. They were not us'd for writing upon Parchment or Vellum, but upon Wood, Ivory, or Wax. It is therefore probable, that the Style of a Man, in this Place, signifies a Manner of Writing, which is easy, simple, natural, and intelligible, without Figures or any enigmatical Expressions. For generally the Prophets express'd themselves in a parabolical, enigmatical, and obscure Style. Here God intended that Isaiah should not speak or write after the Manner of the Prophets, but as other Men us'd to do. Isai. viii. 1.

Job wishes that his Discourses were written or engraved in a Book, with a Style of Iron; or upon a Plate of Lead, or on a Stone, with a Chisel or Engraver: Quis mihi det ut exarentur in libro stylo ferreo & plumbi lamina, vel celte sculpantur in silice? The antient Latin Manuscripts vary about the Word celte. The best and oldest generally read certè, the others celte. Now celte signifies an Engraver, which is not mention'd in the Hebrew Text, which is thus; Oh that my Words were now written, O that they were printed in a Book! That they were graven with an Iron Pen and Lead, in the Rock for ever! The Iron Pen or Style served also to write upon Lead, as well as upon Wax and Ivory. Job xix. 24. See our Commentary upon Job viii. 24.

Jeremiah says, that the Style of the Doctors of the Law, is truly a Style of Error, Jer. viii. 8.

Error, and which writes nothing but Lyes. The Hebrew has it literally; The Pen of the Scribes is in vain. They have promis'd you Peace, but behold War. Elsewhere he says; [a] The Sin of Judah is written with a Pen of Iron, and with the Point of a Diamond. It is graven upon the Table of their Heart; or it is engraven upon their Heart, as upon Writing-tables. Instead of the Point of a Diamond, the Hebrew says, a Graver of Shamir. The Shamir is a Stone call'd Smyris, which was made use of to polish precious Stones, and to cut Glass [b]. See SHAMIR. All these Passages clearly shew the Use that was made of Styles and Writing-tables.

I. SUCCOTH, or Sochoth, the first Encampment of the Israelites, when they came out of Egypt, Exod. xii. 37. Succoth signifies Tents; perhaps the same as Mischenoth, or the Cities of Tents, mention'd Exod. i. 11. *

II. SUCCOTH, a City beyond Jordan, between the Brook Jabok and this River. Jacob at his Return from Mesopotamia, passing over the Brook Jabok, set up his Tents at Succoth, [c] where afterwards they

1 Kings vii. 46. and Zarthan. St. Jerome says, [d] that Succoth was within the Canton of Scythopolis. The Jews tell us the Name of Darala [e] was afterwards given to Succoth. Gideon tore the Flesh of the principal Men of Succoth with Thorns and Briars, because they return'd him an haughty Answer, when he asked some Refreshments of them for his People, who were then pursuing the Midianites, Judg. viii. 5, 6, &c. SUCCOTH-BENOTH. The Scrip-
2 Kings xvii. 30. ture relates, that the Babylonians who were brought into the Country of Samaria by Shalmaneser, or by Esar-haddon King of Assyria, still continu'd the Worship of their false Gods, and made there Succoth-benoth, that is, the Tents of the young Women, or Places of Prostitution, where all young Women once in their lives prostituted themselves, in honour of the God-Herodot. l. 1. c. 199. dess Milytta [f]. Herodotus says, this was thus practis'd at Babylon. All the young Women of the Country are obliged, once in their lives, to prostitute themselves to a Stranger, in honour of Milytta, who is the same as Venus. Those that are rich present themselves before the Temple in cover'd Chariots, attended by a great Number of Domesticks. They go only out of Ceremony, and do not abandon themselves to Strangers, as the others do. But those of the common Sort stand before the Temple, having Crowns upon their Heads, and are separated from one another by small Cords, which, however, do not hinder Strangers from going in where they are, and choosing which they like best. They throw Money in their Laps, saying; I invoke the Goddess Milytta for you. And these Women must not refuse this Money, be it ever so little, because it is appointed to Uses which they call sacred; nor must they reject such as offer themselves. These lead them away out of Sight of the Temple, and after they have defiled them, they may return to their own Houses. 'Tis probably this abominable Custom, that the Babylonians brought with them into the Country of Samaria. The Rabbins will have it, that Succoth-benoth signifies a Hen and Chickens. Eusebius and St. Jerome seem to think, Euseb. & Hieron. in locis.
that it is a City which these People built in Samaria: Others think it to be a particular Deity that they adored.

SUD, or Sodi, a River of Babylonia, mention'd by Baruch, I. 4. We know no River by this Name in this Country: It might be some Arm of the Euphrates. Sodi, in Hebrew, signifies Pride; this Name might intimate the Euphrates.

SUDARIUM. This is a Latin Word, which, according to several good Interpreters, [g] signifies a Bandage of Cloth, which was wrapp'd about the Head. Sudarium comes from Sudor, because this Linen was chiefly of use to receive and dry up the Sweat. We generally translate Sudarium by Handkerchief or Napkin; but it is certain its proper Signification and proper Use was to wipe off the Sweat of the Head and Face. Hence it is, that they have given the Name of Sudarium to the Linen Coverings of the Heads of dead Bodies in their Graves.

The wicked Servant in the Gospel Luke xix. 20. brought back his Master's Money which he had hid in a Napkin; Quam habui repositam in sudario; instead of putting it out to Use. And in the Acts of the Apostles, we read, that they brought their Acts xix. 12.
Sudaria of Linen, which St. Paul had made use of in wiping himself, and which, being apply'd to sick People, restored them to their Health.

The Word Sudarium is chiefly us'd in Ecclesiastical Phrase, to signify the Shrouds in which the Body of our Saviour was wrapp'd in his Sepulchre. They she[w] it

Besancon,

Besancon, at Turin, at Tholouse, at Sarlat, and at Compeigne, the holy Sudarium or Shroud, in which is imprinted the Image of Jesus Christ. That which is at Tholouse was preserved for near the Space of three Centuries in the Abby of Cadoin, and was removed to Tholouse at the Time of the English Wars. 'Tis pretended it was recover'd out of the Hands of a Jew of Antioch in the Year 1098.

But these Sudaria are rather mortuary Cloths or Shrouds, than Sudaria properly so call'd. For in the Gospel of St. John, there is express mention made of the Sudarium that was upon the Head of Lazarus, Brother to Mary and Martha, [a] and upon the Head of Jesus Christ, [b] as they lay in their Tombs. And besides that, they were wrapp'd in Bandages, after the manner of that Country, where they thus wound up the Bodies of such as had been embalmed. Yet I do not pretend to deny, that besides these Bandages, and this Sudarium, there might be still some other Cloths to wrap the Body in. I can see nothing of them in the original Text of the Gospel of St. John; but, however, St. Luke and St. Mark sufficiently take Notice of them, under the Word SINDON. See Luke xxiii. 53. and Mark xv. 46.

SULPHUR. A fat Mineral, inflammable and vitriolick. They distinguish two Sorts of Sulphur; the yellow Sulphur, or common Sort, which is hard, shining, friable, easy to melt and be inflamed. 'Tis got from Mount Vesuvius, is melted on the Fire, and cast into Moulds to form it into Rouls. The Mines of Sulphur which are at the Foot of Mount Vesuvius, and of other Mountains of the same Nature, I mean burning Mountains or Volcano's, are the Cause of the Inflammation of the Earth in the Bowels of these Mountains. The other Kind of Sulphur is what they call, Sulphur vivum, which is a grey, fat, bituminous, inflammable Matter, to be found in many Places, and which serves to make the yellow Sulphur.

The Scripture speaks of Sulphur in more Places than one. The Hebrews call it Gofrith, a Name which has much relation to the Hebrew Word Gopher, which signifies the Wood which Noah made use of to build his Ark. (Gophrith גפרית Gopher גפר*)* Moses says, that the Lord caus'd it to rain Fire and Brimstone upon Sodom and Gomorrah: (Gen. xix. 24.) That is to say, he destroy'd those Cities by sulphureous and fiery Exhalations. And in Deuteronomy xxix. 23. he says, that God consumed them by Sulphur and the burning of Salt. The Hebrews gave the Name of Salt to Nitre, Bitumen, and Sulphur, which are inflammable Substances. It is certain that Fire from Heaven fell down upon those wicked Cities. 'Tis also known, that the Soil wherein they were situate abounded with Nitre and Bitumen. And even to this Day the Bottom of the Dead-sea, and the Places round about, are plentifully stock'd with them. Therefore it is very probable, that the Fire from Heaven taking hold of this Bitumen, Nitre, or Sulphur, did not only burn to Ashes the five Cities of Pentapolis, but also consumed the whole Soil which at this Day is possess'd by the Lake Asphaltites, or the Dead-sea.

Job, or rather Bildad one of his Friends, (Job xviii. 15.) says, by way of Imprecation upon the Wicked, that Brimstone shall be scattered upon his Habitation. That Lightning or Thunder shall fall upon his House, and there leave the Scent of Sulphur. Or otherwise, that the Wicked shall be drove out of his House, and those that take Possession of it, should purify it by the Smell of Sulphur. This was a common Fumigation for driving away any bad Air, and for purifying infected Habitations. The Psalmist allots to the Wicked their (Psal. x. 7.) Portion of Fire, Sulphur, and tempestuous Winds; in a Word, Thunders and Storms: For that is the Meaning of Ignis & sulphur, & spiritus procellarum. Isaiah, describing (Isai. xxx. 33.) the Burning of the Valley of Tophet, which was defiled by Idolatry, says, that a great Pile is provided for it, to purify it by Fire, and that the Breath of the Lord should inflame it as a Torrent of Sulphur. Flatus Domini sicut torrens sulphuris succendens eam.

The same Prophet, that he might give a (Isa. xxxiv. 9.) lively Idea of that Vengeance which God should take of the wicked Nations, says, that in his Presence Rivers should be turned into Pitch, the Earth into Sulphur, and burning Pitch; that they should burn Night and Day, and No-body be able to extinguish them; and that their Smoke should ascend to Heaven without ceasing. What Strength is there in these Images! Ezekiel threatens the Army of Gog with (Ezekiel xxxviii. 22.) the severest Effects of God's Wrath, the Plague, Blood, violent Rains, Thunder-stones, Fire, Sulphur, should fall upon them. We have already seen a Shower of Sulphur upon Sodom, and we often find it afterwards in the Revelations. Thunder, Lightning, and Fire from Heaven, generally leave after them a sulphureous Smell.

SUN, Sol. This is the great Luminary that God created at the Beginning, to preside over the Day, [c] as also he created the Moon to preside over the Night. The Sun has always been the Object of Worſhip and Adoration to the greateſt Part of the People of the Eaſt. We think it to be the Sun that the Phenicians worſhipp'd under the Name of Baal, and the Moabites under the Name of Chemoſh, and the Ammonites by that of Moloch, and the Iſraelites by the Name of Baal, and of the King of the Hoſt of Heaven. They did not ſeparate his Worſhip from that of the Moon, whom they call'd Aſtarta, and the Queen of Heaven. They pay'd this Worſhip upon High-places, in Groves, and upon the Roofs of their Houſes. Moſes gave (Deut. iv. 19.) the Iſraelites Caution againſt this Worſhip: Take ye therefore good heed unto yourſelves, —— leſt thou liſt up thine Eyes unto Heaven, and when thou ſeeſt the Sun, and the Moon, and the Stars, even all the Hoſt of Heaven, ſhouldſt be driven to worſhip them, and ſerve them, which the Lord thy God hath divided unto all Nations under the whole Heaven. (Deut. xvii. 3, 4, 5.) Elſewhere he condemns to Death thoſe that ſhall be perverted to the Worſhip of ſtrange Gods, of the Sun, or of the Moon. (2 Kings xxiii. 11.) Joſiah King of Judah took away out of the Temple of the Lord, the Horſes, and burn'd the Chariots, that the Kings his Predeceſſors had conſecrated to the Sun. (Job xxxi. 26, 27, 28.) Job ſays, that he look'd upon it as a very great Crime, and as renouncing the God that is Above, to kiſs his Hand as a Token of Adoration, when he ſaw the Sun in all (Ezek. viii. 16.) its Beauty and Splendour. Ezekiel ſaw in the Spirit, in the Temple of the Lord, five and twenty Men of Judah, who turn'd their Backs upon the Sanctuary, and had their Faces towards the Eaſt, worſhipping the Sun at his riſing.

Sun

The Sun furniſhes Matter to the greateſt Part of the noble Similitudes, that the ſacred Authors make uſe of. To repreſent a very great Calamity, an extraordinary Misfortune, they ſay the Sun was obſcured, and the Moon withdrew her Light [a]. They did not believe that the Sun went round about the Earth, or that the Earth turn'd about its own Axis to the Sun; but they imagin'd when the Sun came to its ſetting, it return'd to the Place of its riſing by ſome (Eccleſ. i. 5, 6.) unknown Way. See our Diſſertation upon the Syſtem of the World, according to the antient Hebrews, printed before the Commentary upon Eccleſiaſticus. The Scripture acquaints us with three very extraordinary and miraculous Accidents that happen'd to the Sun. The firſt was, when (Joſh. x. 12, 13.) it ſtood ſtill at the Command of Joſhua. (2 Kings xx. 11.) The ſecond, when it return'd back in the Time of King Hezekiah. And the third was, when it was involved in Darkneſs, (Matth. xxvii. 45.) tho' the Moon was then in the Full, at the Time of our Saviour's Crucifixion.

To expreſs a long Continuance of any thing that is glorious and illuſtrious, in Scripture Stile it is ſaid, it ſhall continue as long as the Sun endures. For Example, it is ſaid of the Reign of the Meſſiah, Permanebit cum ſole, & ante lunam. (Pſal. lxxi. 5.) And elſewhere, that his Throne is as durable as the Sun; Thronus ejus ſicut ſol. (Pſalm lxxxviii. 38.) That under his happy Dominion, the Light of the Moon ſhall be equal to that of the Sun, and that of the Sun ſhall be ſeven times more than ordinary. (Iſai. xxx. 26.) Jeſus Chriſt is call'd the Sun of Righteouſneſs; Orietur vobis ſol juſtitiæ. (Mal. iv. 2.)

The Compaſs of the whole Earth is mark'd out by thoſe Words: From the riſing of the Sun, to the going down of the ſame: (Pſal. xlix. 1. cvi. 3. cxii. 3, &c.) Or rather, from Eaſt to Weſt. To be hung upon a Gibbet in the Eyes of the Sun; (Numbers xxv. 4.) to be expoſed in the Fields to the Birds of the Air, to the Heat of the Sun, (Jer. viii. 2. Bar. ii. 25.) expreſſes a particular Degree of Ignominy. I have beheld all that is done under the Sun, or in the World: (Eccleſ. i. 14, &c.) A Woman cloathed with the Sun, and the Moon under her Feet, (Rev. xii. 1.) is the Church perſonated.

SUNDAY, Dies Dominicus, the Lord's Day. It is mention'd in the Revelations; (Rev. i. 10.) I was in the Spirit on the Lord's Day. From the very Beginning the Day of the Reſurrection of our Saviour, which happen'd to be the Day after the Sabbath, was honour'd by the Chriſtians in a very particular Manner. And to preſerve the Remembrance of this Day, ſo glorious to Jeſus Chriſt, and beneficial to his Church, the Apoſtles thought fit to transfer to the Lord's Day, that Reſt that was obſerved by the Jews upon their Sabbath. St. Barnabas in his Epiſtle ſays, (Barnab. Ep. p. 56.) that we celebrate the eighth Day with Joy, in Memory of the Reſurrection of our Saviour, becauſe it was on this Day that he aroſe again and aſcended into Heaven. St. Ignatius the Martyr, in his Letter to the Magneſians, would have us honour this Day of the Lord, this Day of the Reſurrection, as the firſt and moſt excellent of Days. St. Juſtin Martyr [b] ſays, that the Chriſtians aſſembled together on this Day, becauſe it was the Day of the Creation of the World, and of the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt. The ſame thing may be ſeen in Irenæus [c], Tertullian [d], Origen [e], and in the Conſtitutions aſcribed to the Apoſtles.

SUPERHUMERALE. This is the ſame thing as EPHOD, PECTORAL, and RATIONAL, of which we have already ſpoke under thoſe Titles.

SUPERSTITION, and Superſtitious. Theſe Words are found only in the New Teſtament. Feſtus Governor of Judea, ſpeaking to King Agrippa, told him, that

Paul had some Dispute with the other Jews, concerning Matters of their own Acts xxv. 19. Superstition. He spoke like a true Pagan, that was equally ignorant, both of the Christian Religion, and that of the Jews. Colos. ii. 23. St. Paul, writing to the Colossians, recommended to them, not to regard those false Teachers, who would persuade them to a Compliance with human Maxims, which have indeed some Appearance of Wisdom, in an affected Humility and Superstition. Lastly, the same Apostle, speaking to the Acts xvii. 22. Athenians, says to them; I perceive that in all Things ye are too superstitious.

The Latin Word Superstitio, may insinuate, either that a superstitious Person adds something to the ordinary Worship, quod superstat & superfluit, which is redundant and unnecessary; so that superstitio may stand for a superfluous Worship: Or it may intimate, that a superstitious Man looks upon God and Religion as an insupportable Yoke; Horribili super aspectu Lucret. l. 1. mortalibus instans, as Lucretius says. The Greeks call it Deisidaimonia, [a] the Terror of the Gods. For the superstitious Man looks upon God as a severe and rigid Master, and observes with Fear and Trembling what he thinks to be agreeable to him, for fear of provoking his Anger, and drawing his Resentment upon him. Varro said, that the pious Man honour'd and fear'd God, but the superstitious Man dreaded him, and was seized with Terror before him. And Maximus Tyrius tells us, that a Man truly pious looks upon God as a Friend full of Goodness, and the superstitious Man serves him with Sentiments of a base and mean Flattery.

In the Old Testament we find a great many sorts of Superstition prohibited; as all sorts of Divinations, and superstitious Observations of Dreams, and of the Flight of Birds; the several sorts of Idolatry and superstitious Worship of Angels; the sacrificing human Victims; the Pharisaical Traditions concerning Tythes; concerning the Observation of the Sabbath; concerning Purifications; and a vast many others with which Jesus Christ reproaches the Pharisees in the Gospel. St. Paul always vigorously oppos'd those Jewish Teachers, who would introduce their superstitious and vain Practices into Christianity. See Rom. xiv. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c. 1 Cor. viii. 3, 4, 5, &c. Colos. ii. 18, 19, 20, &c.

SUPH. The Sea of Suph, or the Sea of Rushes. This is the Red-sea, which, in the Hebrew, is always call'd the Sea of Suph [b].

SUR. The Gate of Sur was in the Temple of the Lord [c]. It is call'd the Gate of the Foundation in the Chronicles [d]. Its Situation is not known.

SURENA, or Surenim, or Seranim [e]. This is the Name that the Philistines gave to those that govern'd them, whom the Scripture generally translates by Satrapa. See the Article SATRAPA. Surena was also very probably a Name of Dignity among the Parthians. The General of the Army of the Parthians, who kill'd Crassus, was Plutarch. in Crasso. call'd Surena.

SUSANCHITES, Susanchæi. A People that came from beyond the Euphrates to inhabit the Country of Samaria. It is Neh. iv. 9. very probable their former Dwelling was in Susiana, or the City and Country of Suses, or Shushan.

I. SUSANNA, Daughter of Chelcias, and Wife of Joacim, of the Tribe of Judah. [f] She dwelt at Babylon, being carry'd thither in Captivity with her Husband, probably at the same Time as Daniel; that is, in the Year of the World 3398, before Christ 602, before the vulgar Era 606. Susanna was a Woman of an extraordinary Beauty, and of as much Piety and Fear of God. The captive Jews that were then at Babylon, us'd to assemble at Joacim's House, for the Determination of their Affairs; and every Year they appointed two Judges, for the Decision of such Difficulties as might arise. Every Day about Noon Susanna had a Custom to take a Walk in her Husband's Garden. The Judges whom we mention'd, who were at Joacim's House, seeing her go into the Garden, conceived a violent Passion for her. They continued for some time without imparting their Desires to each other; but, at last, having both met in the same Place, to watch for an Opportunity of seeing Susanna, they discover'd their Inclinations to each other, and agreed upon Methods of surprizing her alone in the Garden. They went therefore and hid themselves; and Susanna coming in, and intending to bath herself, she sent her Maids into the House, to fetch Perfumes and such other Things.

Then the two Judges ran to Susanna, own'd their Passion, and threaten'd, if she would not consent to gratify them, that they would accuse her of meeting a young Man in the Garden, and of entertaining herself with him. Susanna fetch'd a deep Sigh, and told them; I see nothing but Danger on both Sides; for if I should do what you desire me, I am a dead Woman; and if I do it not, I cannot escape out of your Hands. But it is better to fall into your Hands, and be innocent, than to sin against the Lord. She then began to cry out as loud as she could, and the old Men at the same time cry'd out against her; and one of them ran to the Door of the Garden, and open'd it. The People flock'd thither, and the two Judges telling them, that they had surprized Susanna with her Gallant; all the Servants of Joacim's House were much amazed at it, as having never before observed any such thing of Susanna.

The Day following, the People being assembled at Joacim's as usual, the two Judges sent to fetch Susanna, that she might appear before them. She came, accompany'd by her Father, Mother, Children, and all her Family. Then the two Judges stood up, and putting their Hands upon her Head, they testify'd, that they had seen her in the Garden with a young Man, and that they had surprized them in the very Act; that endeavouring to apprehend the Man, he made his Escape from them, but they secur'd Susanna; and confirm'd this Accusation by an Oath. All the Assembly gave Credit to them, as being Elders and Judges of the People, and Susanna was condemned to Death. She address'd herself to God, call'd him to witness her Innocence, and intreated him to make it appear.

The Lord heard her Prayers; and as they were going with her to Execution, a young Man, named Daniel, call'd out with a loud Voice, saying; I am innocent of the Blood of this Woman. Upon this they all stop'd, and Daniel upbraided them with their Credulity, and with making so slight an Enquiry into so weighty an Affair. Return, says he, and try her over again, for they have born false witness against her. When the People were come back to Joacim's House, Daniel said; Separate the Elders from each other, and let me examine them. After this was done, when the first came to be examin'd, Daniel ask'd him; Under what Tree did you see 'em confer together? He answer'd, [a] Under a Mastick-tree. Daniel said to him; Your Lye is ready to fall upon your own Head, for the Angel of the Lord will quickly saw you in two. Then the other Elder came, to whom he put the same Question. He answer'd, I saw them under an Holm-tree. Daniel told him, he should quickly receive the Reward of his Calumny, for the Angel of the Lord was ready to cut him in two in the Middle. Then all the People shouted for Joy, and made the two Elders suffer the same Penalty as they were going to inflict upon Susanna; that is, they took them forth and stoned them.

The History we have now related is not read in the Hebrew of Daniel, but only in the Greek. Many heretofore have disputed its Canonicalness, pretending it was only a pious Fable, invented as a Sample of a chaste and loyal Spouse. Julius Africanus wrote against the Truth of this History; but Origen [b] wrote a good Defence of it. And even St. Jerom, who in some Places is not very favourable to it; [c] and proceeds so far as to censure it as a meer Fable, in other Places says, that he only gave the Opinions of others; and that not only the Greeks and Latins, but also the Syrians and Egyptians, received it and admitted it as Scripture [d]. See our Preface to Daniel, and the Article DANIEL. And as to the Objection which is drawn from the Allusions between the Words SCHINON and SCHISEI, PRINON and PRISAI, see these Words under their several Articles, and the marginal Note a little before.

Several Interpreters have thought, that Lyran. Salian, Delr. alii.
these two Judges or Elders, who were thus convicted of Forgery by Daniel, were Ahab and Zedekiah, false Prophets of Babylon, whom King Nebuchadnezzar caus'd to be roasted in the Fire for their Debaucheries: Whom the King of Babylon Jer. xxix. 21, 22.
roasted in the Fire, because they have committed Villany in Israel, and have committed Adultery with their Neighbours Wives. But the History we have now read shews, that Susanna's Accusers were condemned and put to Death by the People, and very probably stoned, as Susanna was to have been, if Daniel had not defeated their Malice: And the King of Babylon did not intermeddle in this Matter.

II. SUSANNA, was an holy Woman, who attended upon Jesus Christ with some other Women, as Mary Magdalen, and Joanna the Wife of Chuza, who administer'd to him of their Substance, and supply'd Necessaries not only to Jesus Christ, but to his Disciples also. This Luke viii. 2, 3. was commonly practised by pious Women among the Jews, [e] and no one took Offence at it. We know nothing more of this Susanna; for all that has been said of her Arrival at Marseilles, with Lazarus, Martha, and Mary, is wholly Apocryphal, to say no more.

SWALLOW. Mention is made of the Is. xxxviii. 14.
Swallow in Isaiah; Like a Crane or a Swal-

These Allusions, which can only have place in the Greek Tongue, have made it suspected, that this History was never written in Hebrew. But it is not impossible, but that the antient Greek Translator, finding these Allusions in the Hebrew, may have imitated them in Greek, by substituting one Tree for another. [b] Vide Origen. Epist. ad Jul. Afric. & Tract. 31. in Matth. [c] Hieronym. in Jerem. xxxix. 22. & in Jovinian. l. 2. & Præfat. in Daniel. [d] Hieronym. Apolog. Rufin. l. 2. & Præfat. in Daniel. low, Jer. viii. 7. low, so did I chatter. And in Jeremiah; The Stork in the Heaven knoweth her appointed Times, and the Turtle, and the Crane, and the Swallow observe the Time of Tob. ii. 11. their Coming. It is observed in Tobit, that the Dung falling from a Swallow's Nest into the Eyes of this holy Man, was the Occasion of the Loss of his Sight. The Hebrew Word Sis, which is translated by סים Sis. עגור Hagur. a Swallow, according to some Interpreters, signifies a Crane; [a] and that which is join'd along with it in Isaiah and Jeremiah, that is, hagur, according to the same Interpreters, stands for a Swallow. The Chaldee and Symmachus translate this Passage of Isaiah thus; I cried as the Swallow which is taken. And Aquila; as the Horse Agur.

The Septuagint, the Vulgate, and Bochart, think that Sis signifies a Swallow. But as for Hagur, the Septuagint, the Vulgate, and Symmachus have took it for a Verb. Bochart thinks it signifies a Crane. It is plain from Jeremiah, that these two Words signify two different Birds. Here are the Reasons that may convince us, that Sis signifies a Swallow. First, The antient Greek Interpreters took it in this Sense. Secondly, The Name Sis answers to the Cry of the Swallow; and the Goddess Isis, as they say, was changed into this Bird. Thirdly, The Swallow is a plaintive Bird, and a Bird of Passage, which perfectly agrees with the Meaning of Isaiah and Jeremiah. As to that Place in Tobit, it is universally agreed to signify a Swallow.

This Bird is black, with some Spots of a dirty Black under her Belly; its Flight is very unequal, and its Sight is very quick. It appears in Spring and Summer, and is gone in Autumn. 'Tis thought that it passes the Sea, and withdraws into hotter Climates, where it either hides itself in Holes in the Earth, or even in Marshes, and under the Water, where sometimes great Lumps of Swallows have been fish'd up, fix'd one to another by the Claws and Beak; and when they are laid in a warm Place, they move and recover, tho' before they seem'd to be dead. 'Tis call'd Chelidon in Greek, whence comes the Name of the Herb Chelidome, in English, Celandine, or Swallow-wort, because it is pretended, that with this Herb the Swallow opens the Eyes of her young ones, tho' they should even be made blind on purpose. We see by the History of Tobit, how dangerous the Fumes or Dung of the Swallow is to the Eyes. We are assured, that the Flesh of these Birds burnt to Ashes, is excellent for Distempers of the Eyes.

We are told by the Fable, that Philomela or Progne, the Wife of Tereus, was transformed into a Swallow, and that by her Note, which is a very mournful one, she bewails the Loss of Atys, whom she loved. The Swallow is good for nothing; she cannot be kept either in a Cage or an Aviary. She is said to breed twice a Year; once in the Climate to which she transports herself while the Winter governs here, and again in those six Months that she continues in this Country. Their chief Food are the Flies that they catch as they fly. They commonly make their Nests in Chimneys, and every Year return to the same Place. Their Nests are made of Clay or Dirt, with little Bits of Straw or Chaff mingled with it.

The Martins that build their Nests in the Windows of Houses and Churches, are a Species of Swallows; but their Flesh is better, and they are whiter under the Belly than Swallows are.

The River-Swallow makes its Nest in Holes that it finds in the Banks of Rivers.

The great Swallow, or Martin, or the Eaglet, lies in great Holes, or in lofty Buildings, where it lays its Eggs. It feeds upon Flies, Butterflies, May-buggs, which it gobbles up as it flies. Bellon says, that its Eye-sight is so quick, that it perceives a Fly at the Distance of a thousand Paces. There are also Sea-Swallows. I do not find that Moses declares himself concerning the Swallow, whether it is to be reputed clean or unclean.

SWINE, an Animal well known, the Use of which was expresly forbid the Hebrews. They had the Flesh of this Lev. xi. 7. Deut. xiv. 8.
Animal in such Detestation, that they would not so much as pronounce its Name, but instead of it said, That Beast, That Thing. When old Eleazar was taken by 2 Macc. vi. 18.
the People of Antiochus Epiphanes, he was vehemently urged to taste Swine's Flesh, or, at least, to pretend to taste it. They open'd his Mouth by force, to compel him to eat of it; but he chose rather to suffer Death, than to break the Law of God, and to give Offence to the weaker People of his Nation. Porphyry affirms, that the Hebrews and Porphyr. de abstin. animal.
Phenicians abstain'd from Pork, because there was none in their Country. It had been much more congruous to have said, there was none, or but very little, because they bred no Hogs, by reason of that Abhorrence they had conceived for 'em: For it is certain they might have had them if they pleas'd, and we know from the Gospel, [b] that there were Herds of Swine in our Saviour's Time. Some antient Authors have thought, [c] that the Jews forbore eating the Flesh of this Animal, only because they paid divine Honours to it;

Petron. Satiric. Fragment. Vulgo legitur; Et Cœli, &c.

Judæus licet & porcinum numen adoret,
Et Cilli summas advocet auriculas.

But this is a Calumny so notorious, as not to deserve any Confutation. Profane Authors rallied them upon this Abstinence, saying, that the Jews would as soon chuse to kill a Man as a Hog;

Juvenal. Satir. 15.

Nec distare putant humanâ carne suillam.

Apud Macrob. Augustus was us'd to say, that it were better to be one of Herod's Hogs than his Son, because this Prince had put to Death two or three of his Sons. This Abhorrence of Swine's Flesh was not peculiar to the Jews; for the Egyptians had such an Horror for this Animal, that if any one had touch'd it, tho' but by chance, he went and plung'd himself in the River, Cloaths and all. They did not allow Swinherds to come into their Temples, nor would have any Correspondence with them. Herodot. l. 2. c. 47. Solin. Polyhist. The Arabian Scenites eat no Pork; and Solinus even assures us, that if Hogs were but carry'd into their Country, they would presently die. 'Tis observed, that when Adrian rebuilt Jerusalem, he set up the Image of a Hog in bas relief upon the Gates of the City, to drive the Jews away from it, and to express the greater Contempt for that miserable People.

Mat. vii. 6. Our Saviour in the Gospel forbids his Disciples to cast their Pearls before Swine, for fear, says he, they should tread them under Foot, and turn against you and tear you. Which is as much as to say, that we must not rashly fall to discourse on divine Matters, and preach up certain Truths before an Audience ill prepared to receive them. This will serve only to provoke them more, and to expose those Truths to be insulted and despised. The same is injoin'd in Ecclesiasticus: Do not speak, but when you find a Hearer disposed to receive your Doctrine; Ubi auditus non est, ne effundas sermonem. Ecclus. xxxii. 6. Upon this Maxim is founded the Practice of the antient Fathers of the Church, not to speak of the Mysteries of Christianity before the Pagans, not to speak of 'em but with great Circumspection, and in the Presence of such as are well disposed to revere and entertain them. The Prodigal Son, Luke xv. 15. mention'd by St. Luke, when he had wasted his Patrimony, was reduced to such Distress, as to be glad to feed Swine; and happy was he that he could feed himself with the same Food.

Prov. xi. 22. 'Tis said in the Proverbs; As a Jewel of Gold in a Swine's Snout, so is a fair Woman which is without Discretion. The Jewish and Arabian Women were sometimes used to wear Rings in their Nostrils to adorn themselves. But nothing can be more ridiculous than to put a gold Ring or a Jewel in a Swine's Snout.

St. Peter compares those Sinners that frequently relapse into their Sins, to a Swine that as soon as he is wash'd, goes again to wallow in the Mire. 'Tis a kind of Proverb, that a Hog loves Dirt, and is pleas'd with wallowing in the Mud and Filth.

SWORD. In the Stile of the Hebrews, the Sword is often us'd for War. The Lord shall send the Sword into the Land; he shall cause War to come. The Mouth of the Sword, is the Edge of the Sword. A Man that draws the Sword; educens gladium, is a Soldier by Profession. The Sword of the Mouth; Gladius oris, is pernicious Discourse, Accusations, Slander, Job v. 15. Calumny. Manus gladii, the Hand of an armed Soldier. Their Tongue is a two-edged Psal. lvi. 5. Sword; the Tongue of the Wicked is more dangerous than the Sword. If he Ps. vii. 12. turn not, he will whet his Sword: he will send War, or will strike him with his Wounds. Gladius anceps, a two-edged Ps. cxlix. 6. Sword. To lift the Sword upon the Stones, is to cut them with a Chisel or other Instrument. Ex. xx. 25. By thy Sword shalt thou live, thou Gen. xxvii. 40. shalt support thyself by War and Rapine. Nation shall not lift up Sword against Nation, Isa. ii. 4. shall not make War, smite, wound, or kill. They that take the Sword shall perish with the Sword; they that take up the Mat. xxvi. 52. Sword by their own Authority, and would do Justice to themselves, deserve to be put to Death by the Sword of Authority. Or this is a kind of Proverb: Those that take the Sword to smite another, generally suffer by it themselves. The Word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged Sword: It penetrates even to Heb. iv. 12. the Bottom of the Soul, and insinuates it self into the Heart and Mind. St. Paul exhorts the Ephesians, to arm themselves Eph. vi. 17. with the Word of God, as with a spiritual Sword, to defend themselves against all the Enemies of their Souls.

SYCOMORE, a Tree call'd the Egyptian Fig-tree; its Name is compos'd of Sycos, a Fig-tree, and Moros, a Mulberry-tree. It partakes of the Nature of each of these Trees; of the Mulberry-tree in its Leaves, and of the Fig-tree in its Fruit, which is pretty like a Fig in its Shape and Bigness. This Fruit grows neither in Clusters, nor at the Ends of the Branches, but sticking to the Trunk of the Tree. Its taste is pretty much like a wild Fig. It does not grow ripe till it is rubb'd with Iron Combs, [a] after which Rubbing it ripens in four Days. Amos shews the same Thing when he says, [a] I was no Prophet, neither was I a Prophet's Son; but I was an Herdman, and a Gatherer of Sycomore-Fruit, or wild Figs. Pliny and other Naturalists observe, that these Figs don't ripen except they are rubb'd; Scalpendo tantum ferreis unguibus, aliter non maturescit. And Saint Jerome upon Amos says, that without this Management the Figs cannot be eaten, because of their intolerable Bitterness; Sycomori agrestes afferunt ficus, quæ si non vellicentur amarissimas cariculas faciunt.

To make this Tree fruitful, they made Chinks and Clefts in the Bark, through which a kind of milky Liquor continually distils. This causes a little Bough to be form'd, sometimes having six or seven Figs upon it. They are hollow, without Grains, and there is found a little yellow Matter, which is generally a Nest of Grubs. These Figs are sweet, but not good for the Stomach; they weaken it, and create a Nausea, but at the same Time moisten and refresh.

A great many of these Sycomores grow in Egypt, especially about Cairo; and some of 'em are of such Substance, that three Men can hardly grasp them. There were some also in Judea, since we find Zaccheus climb'd up into a Sycomore to see Luke xix. 4. Jesus Christ pass by; being, it seems, of so low a Stature, that he could not otherwise see him because of the Multitude.

SYENE, a City to the southern Frontiers of Egypt or Ethiopia, between Thebes and the great Cataracts of the Nile. Ezekiel places it at the Extremity of Egypt, Eze. xxix. 10. xxx. 6. opposite to the Land of Cush; A turre Syenes, usque ad terminos Chus. But the Land of Cush is in Arabia petrea, towards the Bay of the Red-sea. But the Hebrew might also be translated in this Manner [b]; From Migdol to Syene, and to the Frontiers of Cush. The Land of Cush was also Ethiopia properly so call'd, which is above, and to the South of Syene, which is the utmost City of Egypt. Migdol signifies a Ex. xiv. 2. Tower, and we find in Moses a City by Ezek. xxx. 6. this Name. Ezekiel also puts Migdol and Syene as the two Extremities of Egypt; A turre Sienes, gladio cadetis in ea. Or, according to the Hebrew, from Migdol to ממגדול סונה Syene. Josephus assigns the Length of Joseph. de Bello, l. 5. c. 11. Egypt to be two thousand Stadia or Furlongs, from Pelusium to Syene.

As to the City of Syene it self, it was very well known to the Antients, [c] who speak of it as the farthest City of Egypt, towards Ethiopia. Pliny says, it is in a Peninsula, upon the Eastern Shore of the Nile; that it is a Mile round, and that it had a Roman Garison. Strabo says, that Strab. l. 17. there were three Roman Cohorts, to hinder the Irruptions of the Ethiopians. He adds, that in this City there was a Well, wherein the Sun shone directly to the Bottom; and that here the Sun made no Shadow at Noon, when he is in the Beginning of the Sign Cancer. Pliny also speaks of it; Plin. l. 2. c. 73. Solstitii die medio nullam umbram jaci. And Lucan; —— Umbras nusquam flectente Syene. Lucan. l. 2. v. 587.

SYLLÆUS, an Arabian Prince. He came to Jerusalem with a Commission from Obodas King of Arabia, to treat of some Affairs, and fell in love with Salome the Sister of Herod, who was then Widow to Costobarus. He propos'd the Match to Joseph. Antiq. l. 16. c. 11. p. 566. her, and Salome shew'd no Repugnance to it; and it was soon perceiv'd at Herod's Court, that Salome and Syllæus had no Aversion to each other. Some Time after Syllæus return'd back to Obodas, but was obliged to make a second Journey into Judea, upon the same Account that had brought him thither before. Then he asked of King Herod, that he might have leave to marry his Sister Salome. Herod spoke to her of it, who easily consented to it. But when it was propos'd to Syllæus to make Profession of Judaism, which was to be one of the Conditions of the Marriage, he absolutely refus'd, saying, He should be stoned at his Return into his own Country, if he changed his Religion. And thus he return'd again to Obodas.

This is the same Syllæus, [d] who, having engaged to provide Ælius Gallus with Guides and Ammunition for an Expedition he was to make into Arabia, betray'd him, and forfeited his Word. He exercised the same Treachery towards his King Obodas, whom he deprived of his Kingdom, and left him only the Name of King. And when Herod demanded of him sixty Talents, which he had lent him for the Use of Obodas his Master; [e] instead of restoring this Sum, as he had promis'd upon Oath in presence of the Governors of Syria, Syllæus went to Rome, where he began to slander Herod to the Emperor Augustus. He, too credulously believing the Insinuations of this Sharper, was in great Wrath against Herod; but Herod afterwards undeceiving him, Augustus remanded Syllæus into the Province, that he might satisfy his Creditors, and be punish'd according to his Merits. He return'd indeed into Judea and Arabia, but perform'd nothing of what the Emperor had order'd him. He afterwards return'd to Rome, where Antipater the Son of Herod renew'd the same Complaints against him as had been made before [a]. Besides, he was convicted of attempting to poison Herod, by the Assistance of one Corinthus, who was one of his Guards; so that at last he there received the just Rewards of all his wicked Actions.

SYMBOL. This Word comes from the Greek Symbolon, [b] which signifies a Mark or Pledge, which is agreed upon to distinguish one another; for Example, among such Persons who were join'd together by the Bands of Friendship or Hospitality. When they went to one another, they carry'd their Symbols or Pledges, to shew they were of such a Family, such a Society, of such a Place, or such a Religion. Symbolum also signifies what each contributed to a Feast or Entertainment, that was made at a common Charge, whether each gave a Piece of Money, or brought Wine, or Provisions. We find the Word Symbolum in this Sense in the Proverbs; [c] Noli esse in comessationibus eorum qui carnes ad vescendum conferunt; quia vacantes potibus, & dantes Symbola consumentur. Be not found at the Entertainments of those that bring Provisions to eat together; for passing their Time away in drinking, and in making those Feasts wherein every one supplies his Share of the Charge, and pays his Club, they come to ruin. But the Hebrew says only; Be not amongst Wine-bibbers, amongst riotous Eaters of Flesh: For the Drunkard and the Glutton shall come to Poverty.

In the Language of the Church, that is call'd Symbol which makes the Matter of the Sacraments; which is sensible, and expos'd to the View of the Eyes. Thus in Baptism, Water is the Symbol of this Sacrament, and of that inward Purification, which is represented by this Sacrament. Also in the Eucharist, Bread and Wine are the Symbols of the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ, which are really present in this Sacrament *. The Reader may see Suicer in his Thesaurus Ecclesiasticus ex Patribus Græcis, under the Word Symbolum, where he learnedly treats of this Question; tho' we cannot approve of his Sentiments concerning the Eucharist.

Symbol is also said particularly of the Apostles Creed, which is, as it were, an Epitome of the Doctrine of Jesus Christ and of the Christian Church. It was, as it were, the Badge and Signal by which Christians could distinguish one another. Rufinus says, that he had been inform'd by Tradition, that when the Apostles were about to separate from each other, they assembled together, and each communicating his Thoughts concerning the principal Articles of Faith, they compos'd this Symbol, which is, as it were, the Abridgement and Compendium of the Christian Faith. St. Jerome also imputes to the Apostles the Symbol or Creed that we have under their Name. Leo says, that it contains twelve Articles of the twelve Apostles. Some even pretend, [d] that each Apostle contributed his Article, and shew which Article belongs to which Apostle. But there is no sufficient Authority for this Opinion, nor any Agreement among those that have advanced it.

(Rufin. de Symbol. p. 539. — Hieron. Ep. 61. c. 9. — Leo Ep. 27. p. 491, 492.)

They usually rehearsed the Symbol before Baptism, [e] and in some Places they pronounced it publickly from the Gallery of the Church, in Presence of all the People. 'Twas received from the Apostles without writing, and it was even forbidden to write it down, as several Fathers testify [f]. It appears from what they relate of it, that it was shorter than that we now have; which makes it probable, that it was not every where the same. Saint Ambrose thinks, that the Church of Rome has for a long time preserved it such as it was at first received, without making any Addition to it. But that we now make use of is longer than that of the Romish Church, as may be seen by what Rufinus says of it, and by the Copies which have been handed down to us. Those Authors may be seen which have expresly treated of this Matter, as Vossius, and Usher de Symbolo, Father Alexander's Dissertation upon Ecclesiastical History, t. 1. M. du Pin, and the Remarks of the Benedictin Fathers of St. Vann upon his Work. 'Tis thought it was about the Year 36 of the vulgar Era, that the Apostles, before their Separation, compos'd the Symbol of which we are now speaking.

He was a Samaritan by Birth, and lived at the End of the second Century, under the Emperor Severus. Epiphanius says, that he was in good Reputation in his own Country, and held a considerable Rank among the learned Men of Samaria. left Samaria, and settled among the Jews. He even submitted to the receiving of a second Circumcision from them; for the Animosity between the Jews and Samaritans was carry'd so far, that they obliged all Proselytes from one Religion to the other to be re-circumcised.

After this Symmachus embraced Christianity, [a] and herded with the Sect of the Ebionites. It was in Defence of these Hereticks against the Catholicks, that he undertook a new Translation of the Books of the Old Testament into Greek. To which end he gives the most favourable Turn he can to the Text, conformable to the Notions of that Sect, who acknowledged Jesus Christ to be the Messiah, but thought him not to be God, or the Son of God. They likewise deny'd a future Judgment, and maintained several other erroneous Doctrines.

The Method that Symmachus takes in his Translation, is very different from that of Aquila or Theodotion. Aquila endeavours, in a close and servile Manner, to give the literal Sense and Signification of every Word of the Text, without much regarding the Coherence of the Discourse, or the Meaning of the Text; so that his Translation was rather a Dictionary for teaching the literal Signification of the Terms, than a Translation for shewing the Sense of the Text. But Symmachus, [b] on the contrary, endeavour'd much more to express what he thought to be the Meaning of the Text, than the Power of every Word. Theodotion keeps the middle Way between Aquila and Symmachus; his Version does not appear to be a Paraphrase, like that of Symmachus; nor a Dictionary, like that of Aquila. He strives to give the Sense of the Hebrew Text in Greek Words answering to the Hebrew, as far as the different Genus's of the two Languages would allow. We have now only some Fragments of the Versions of these antient Translators, which have been gather'd together by the great Pains of the Reverend Father D. Bernard de Montfaucon, in two Volumes in Folio, intitled, The Hexapla of Origen. The antient Fathers have spoke of certain Hereticks call'd Symmachians, whom some think to have been the Disciples and Followers of Symmachus the Translator, of whom we are now speaking.

SYMPHONY. This Word is taken for the Agreement of several Voices, and a Concert of several Instruments, or for a particular sort of Instrument. St. Luke [Luke xv. 25. Vulg.] takes it in the first Sense, when he says, that the Brother of the prodigal Son, returning out of the Field, heard in his Father's House a Concert of Instruments, and the Rejoycing of those that danced; or the Voices of those that sung; Audivit symphoniam & chorum. Daniel takes it in the [Dan. iii. 5, 7, 10, 15.] second Sense, for an Instrument of Musick, which was a Viol, or some Instrument approaching thereto. See our Dissertation upon the Instruments of Musick of the antient Hebrews, printed before the second Tome upon the Psalms.

SYNAGOGUE. [c] This Greek Word signifies either an Assembly, or the Place where the Assembly meets. In the first Sense is commonly understood the Church of the Jews, compared or opposed to that of the Christians. Thus we say, that the Synagogue is a Slave, that it is reprobated, that it is the Rival of the Christian Church. St. John in his Revelations, speaking of [Rev. ii. 9. iii. 9.] Hereticks that corrupted the sound Doctrine of Jesus Christ, calls them the Synagogue of Satan.

St. Jerome, in the Latin Text of the Vulgate, gives the Name of Princes of the Synagogue, or of the Assembly, Principes Synagogæ, to those principal Jews who [Ex. xxxiv. 31. Num. iv. 34. xvi. 2, &c.] had the Precedence among the People in their Assemblies in the Desart. We find also, Synagoga Deorum, Synagoga potentium, Synagoga peccatorum, Synagoga populi, Synagoga superborum, for the Assembly of the Judges, of great Men, of Sinners, of the People. Mention is made in the Maccabees of the Synagogue of the Assideans, [1 Macc. ii. 42.] who probably were a kind of Sect, or Order of the Jews, which made a Profession of stricter Piety.

Synagogue most commonly signifies the Place where the Jews assembled to pray, to read, and to hear the reading of the holy Books, and other Instructions. It is often mention'd in the Gospels and the Acts, because Jesus Christ and his Apostles generally went to preach in the Synagogues. The Origin of these Synagogues is not very well known, and many learned Men have thought them a late Institution. Yet we see some Footsteps of them even in the Time of Elisha. Devout Persons in the Time of this Prophet assembled themselves to him on the Sabbath-Day, to hear [2 Kings iv. 23] the Law read to them. Judith pass'd the [Judith vi. 21.] Night in Prayer, in a Place of Prayer at Bethulia. Her History is commonly placed under Manasseh. The Author of Psalm lxxiv, describing the Havock that the Army of Nebuchadnezzar had made in Jerusalem, says, They have burnt up all the Synagogues of God in the Land. [Ps. lxxiv. 8. מועדי אל] The Captive Jews beyond the Euphrates assembled themselves to Ezekiel, to hear the Word [Ezekiel xxxiii. 31] of the Lord. Mordecai made all the Jews of Shushan to come into the Place of Prayer, Act. xv. 21. James ſays in the Acts, that Moſes of old Time hath in every City them that preach him, being read in the Synagogues every Sabbath-day.

After the Time of the Maccabees, Synagogues became ſo frequent in Iſrael, that there were ſome in almoſt every Place in the Country. Maimonides ſays, [a] that where-ever any Iſraelites were found, there they us'd to build a Synagogue. 'Tis affirm'd, that in the City of Jeruſalem alone, [b] were no leſs than four hundred and ſixty, or even four hundred and eighty. Every trading Fraternity had one of their own, and even Strangers built ſome for thoſe of their own Nation. Hence it is,
Acts vi. 9. that in the Acts of the Apoſtles we find the Synagogues of the Alexandrians, of the Aſiaticks, of the Cilicians, of the Freed-men, of thoſe of Cyrene, appointed for ſuch of the Inhabitants of theſe Cities, or of theſe Nations, as ſhould at any Time be at Jeruſalem. We ſhall ſpeak afterwards of the Synagogue of the Freed-men, or Synagoga Libertinorum.

The Synagogue was a publick Edifice, ſituate either within or without the City, and generally in an elevated Place. The Jews would have them more eminent than the other Buildings, or private Houſes, and always inſiſted upon this, unleſs they were hindred by a ſuperior Power. Generally they were cover'd, and thereby diſtinguiſh'd from the Proſeuches, which were commonly in the Fields, and open to the Heavens. In the midſt of the Synagogue was a Deſk or Pulpit, upon which the Book or Roll of the Law was read very ſolemnly. There likewiſe he ſtood who intended to harangue the People. At the higheſt Part of the Synagogue, or towards the Eaſt, [c] and over-againſt the Door, which is always to the Weſt, as far as can well be, is the Cheſt or Preſs, wherein the Book or Roll of the Law is kept, wrap'd up in ſome fine embroider'd Cloth. The Women are there diſtinct from the Men, and ſeated in a Gallery incloſed with Lattices, ſo that they may ſee and hear, but not be ſeen.

Every Synagogue has its Chief, or perhaps ſeveral Chiefs and Officers, more or fewer, according to the Circumſtances of Places. There is one call'd Chazan, [d] who appoints and chants the Prayers. There is another who keeps the Keys, and is a kind of Church-warden, whom they call Sciamas, or Servant. The Prince of the Synagogue, in the Goſpel, call'd Archi-

The ſame Preſidents invite thoſe to ſpeak in the Synagogue, whom they think capable of it, and offer that Honour to Strangers, if there are any that ſeem to have the Gift of Speaking. Thus our Saviour often

The Word Synagoga, as ſignifying a Place of Aſſembly, is us'd alſo to expreſs Chriſtian Churches. For Example, Saint ving been led away captive by Pompey and by Soſius, [e] had afterwards recover'd their Liberty, and were retired to Jeruſalem, when Tiberius drove away the Jews out of Italy. [f] Others will have it, that St. Luke wrote Lybiſtinorum, and not Libertinorum; and that the Lybiſtini were People of Libya, joining to Egypt. Libertini is not a Greek Word, and Lybiſtini would better ſuit with the Tenor of Saint Luke's Diſcourſe; but the Manuſcripts are not favourable to this Conjecture. See the Commentators upon Acts vi. 9.

The Jewiſh Authors [g] give this general Rule for the Conſtruction of Synagogues: Where-ever there are ten Batelnim, a Synagogue ought to be built. The Signification of the Word Batelnim has been much controverted. Buxtorf [h] thinks them to be Perſons receiving a Stipend for duly aſſiſting at divine Service, that there may be always ten Perſons, at leaſt, to aſſemble together. Lightfoot imagines them to have been Miniſters and Officers of the Synagogue. But the moſt probable Opinion is, is, that they were Persons of a mature Age, free, and in a Condition to assist constantly at the Service, on all Days of assembling, which are, at least, two Days a Week, besides the Sabbath. So that always upon these Days there were present that Number of Assistants, without which the Service could not be perform'd. The three Days of assembling were Monday, Friday, and Saturday, without including the Days of Fasting or solemn Festivals. On these Days they repaired three times to the Synagogue, in the Morning, Afternoon, and in the Evening, where they said their Prayers. As for other Days, they also pray'd three times in private. See PRAYERS.

The great Synagogue. The Hebrews [a] give this Name to a Company of six-score Persons, at the Head of whom was Ezra or Esdras, at their Return from the Babylonish Captivity. This Company was chiefly establish'd for two Reasons. The first was to take Care of restoring the Observation of the Law, according to the antient and approved Practice, that obtained before the Captivity. The second was, to collect all the sacred Books into a Body, and to compose thereof what is call'd the Canon of the Holy Scriptures, and to give an exact and correct Edition of them. They pretend, that after Esdras, Daniel and his three Companions Shadrach, Meshech, and Abednego, held the first Places; that Simon the Just was at the lower End of the Assembly, and that all these Members were cotemporary.

But this Disposition cannot be supported by Chronology; for Simon the Just lived a long Time after Daniel and Esdras. But the Hebrew Chronologers do not look so narrowly into Matters. What appears to be most certain in this Affair, is, that Esdras began the Reformation now mention'd; that it was continued by some of the wiser and more enlightned Jews, and was at last compleated, especially as to the Canon of the Scriptures, under Simon the Just, who was made Highpriest of the Jews in the Year of the World 3702, before Jesus Christ 298, before the vulgar Era 302; and who died in the Year of the World 3711, before Christ 289, before the vulgar Era 293.

SYNTYCHE, mention'd by St. Paul to
Phil. iv. 2. the Philippians, was a Woman illustrious for her Vertue and good Works, and who was, as it were, at the Head of the Church at Philippi, [b] with another Woman call'd Euodias. 'Tis thought St. Paul speaks of 'em when he says, Help those Women which laboured with me in the Gospel. But some Difficulties or Disturbances had happen'd between them, and therefore the Apostle exhorts them, that they be of the same Mind in the Lord. We know none of the Particulars of their Lives. Syntyche is set down in the Number of the Saints on July 22, and the Martyrologies insinuate, that her Body rests at Philippi in Macedonia.

SYRACUSE, a famous City [a] in Sicily, standing upon the Eastern Coast of this Island. St. Paul went ashore there in his Way to Rome, and continued there three Days. Thence he went to Rhegium, in the 61st Year of the vulgar Era. Act. xxviii. 12.

SYRIA, call'd, in Hebrew, Aram, from the Name of the Patriarch who peopled the chief Provinces of it. We have already spoke of him under the Article ARAM. The Arameans, or Syrians, possess'd Mesopotamia, Chaldea, a Part of Armenia; Syria, properly so call'd, comprehended between Euphrates towards the East, the Mediterranean towards the West, Cilicia to the North, Phenicia, Judea, and Arabia deserta towards the South. The Hebrews were originally Arameans, since they came out of Mesopotamia, and therefore it is said, that Jacob was a poor Aramean. [c] It is certain, however, that he was not descended from Aram, but from Arphaxad, another Son of Shem. Amos seems to say, that the Lord brought up the Assyrians or Aram from Kir, as he had brought up the Philistines from Caphtor. That is to say, that Aram, or his Posterity, came to dwell in Syria, when they quitted the Neighbourhood of the River Cyrus, which is in Armenia. Gen. x. 22. ארם Aram. Amos ix. 7.

Syria of Zobah, or Soba, or Sobal, as it is call'd by the Septuagint, was probably Cele-syria, or Syria the hollow or flat. Syria, without any other Appellation, ſtands for the Kingdom of Syria, of which Antioch became the Capital after the Reign of the Seleucidæ. Before this Time it was very rare to find the Name Syria us'd by itſelf. The Provinces of Syria were generally expreſs'd by the Addition of the City that was the Capital of the Province.

Celo-ſyria, or Cele-ſyria, or the Lower Syria, is known in more Places than one of the Maccabees [a]. The Word Cœle-ſyria, according to the Force of the Greek, ſignifies Syria cava, or Syria the hollow or deep. It may be conſider'd either in a proper and reſtrain'd Senſe, and then it will comprehend only the Tract of Land that lies between Libanus and Antilibanus; or in a larger Signification, and then it will comprehend all the Country in the Obedience of the Kings of Syria, from Seleucia to Arabia and Egypt. This is what Strabo informs us of. We have already obſerved, that Syria of Zobah was nearly the ſame as Celo-ſyria.

Syria of Paleſtine, Syria Paleſtina, is read in ſome Authors, [b] and Joſephus [c] himſelf ſometimes comprehends Paleſtine under Syria. 'Twas becauſe this Province was long under the Government of the Kings of Syria, who appointed Governors there, that were call'd Governors of Syria.

We have already ſpoke at large of Benhadad, Hazael, Hadadezer, Hadad, Rezin, and the other Kings of Syria, as may be ſeen under their reſpective Articles. As the Succeſſion of theſe Princes is unknown, and the Duration of their Reigns, we cannot give a Liſt of them. But we ſhall preſently make a Catalogue of thoſe Kings of Syria, who were known by the Name of the Seleucidæ. Syria at firſt was govern'd by its own Kings, each of which reign'd in their own Cities, and in their own Cantons. David ſubdued them about the Year of the World 2960, before Chriſt 1040, before the vulgar Era 1044. And again, in 2969, before Chriſt 1031, before the vulgar Era 1035, upon the Occaſion of the War he had with the Ammonites, to whom the Syrians thought fit to give Aſſiſtance. They continued in Subjection till after the Reign of Solomon, [d] when they ſhook off the Yoke, and could not be reduced again to their former Obedience, till the Time of Jeroboam II. King of Iſrael, who began to reign in 3179, before Chriſt 821, before the vulgar Era 825. Rezin King of Syria, and Pekah King of Iſrael, having declared War againſt Ahab King of Judah; this Prince found himſelf under a Neceſſity of calling to his Aſſiſtance Tiglath-pileſer King of Aſſyria, [e] who put Rezin to Death, took Damaſcus, and tranſported the Syrians out of the Country to Places beyond the Euphrates. From that Time Syria continued in Subjection to the Kings of Aſſyria. Afterwards it came under the Dominion of the Chaldeans; then under that of the Perſians; and laſtly, it was reduced by Alexander the Great, and was ſubject to all the Revolutions that happen'd to the great Empires of the Eaſt.

2 Sam. viii. 5. 2 Sam. x. 6, 8, 13, 18, 19. 2 Kings xiv. 28.

After the Death of Alexander, which happen'd in the Year of the World 3681, before Chriſt 319, before the vulgar Era 323; his Empire was divided among his principal Officers, who at firſt aſſumed the Title of Governors, and then that of Kings. Seleucus I. named Nicator or Nicanor, Head of the Family of the Kings call'd Seleucidæ, took the Diadem, and the Name of King of Syria in 3682, and reign'd forty-two Years. He died in 3724, before Chriſt 276, before the vulgar Era 280.

Antiochus I. ſurnamed Soter, reigned nineteen Years, from the Year of the World 3724 to 3743.

Antiochus II. ſurnamed Theus, reigned fifteen Years, from the Year of the World 3743 to 3759.

Seleucus II. ſurnamed Callinicus or Pogon, that is, the Bearded, reigned twenty Years, from the Year of the World 3758 to 3778.

Seleucus III. ſurnamed Keraunus, or Thunder, reign'd three Years, from the Year of the World 3778 to 3781.

Antiochus

Antiochus III. furnamed Magnus, reign'd thirty-fix Years, from the Year of the World 3781 to 3816.

Seleucus IV. furnamed Philopater, reign'd twelve Years, from the Year of the World 3817 to 3828.

Antiochus IV. furnamed Epiphanes, Son of Antiochus the Great, and Brother of Seleucus IV. reign'd eleven Years, from the Year of the World 3828 to 3840.

Antiochus V. furnamed Eupator, reign'd two Years, from the Year of the World 3840 to 3842.

Demetrius I. furnamed Soter, Son of Seleucus IV. reign'd twelve Years, from the Year of the World 3842 to 3854.

Demetrius II. furnamed Nicator, reign'd ten Years with much Perplexity. He had for Competitors Alexander Balas or Balles, and Antiochus Theos, Son of Balas. Demetrius Nicator died in 3864, and Alexander Balas in 3859, and Antiochus Theos his Son, having begun to reign under the Regency of Tryphon in 3860, was put to Death in 3861, and the Kingdom was ufurped by Tryphon, who was alfo put to Death in 3866.

Antiochus VI. furnamed Pius, or Soter, or Sidetes, that is, the Fifher or Hunter, Brother to Demetrius Nicanor, reigned about ten Years, from 3864 to 3873, when he was put to Death by the Parthians.

Demetrius III. furnamed Nicanor, afcending the Throne, had for Competitor Alexander Zebina. Demetrius was overcome, and put to Death in 3878, as was Zebina in 3882.

Seleucus V. Son of Demetrius Nicanor, reign'd one Year in great Uneafinefs, from the Year of the World 3878 to 3880.

Antiochus VII. furnamed Gryphus, or Philometor, difpoffefs'd Zebina in 3882, and reign'd eight Years in Peace, to the Year 3890. Then Antiochus, furnamed Cyzicenus, his Brother, rofe up againft him, and overcame him in 3892. They divided the Kingdom. Antiochus Gryphus died in 3910, having reigned in all about nine and twenty Years; and Antiochus Cyzicenus, his Brother, was overcome and put to Death the fame Year, by Seleucus, the Son of Gryphus.

Seleucus VI. Son of Gryphus reign'd but one Year. He was conquer'd and depriv'd of his Kingdom in 3911, by Antiochus Eufebes, Son of his Uncle Antiochus Cyzicenus, and was put to Death the fame Year 3911, at Mopfuefta in Cilicia.

Antiochus VIII. furnamed Eufebes, reign'd in Trouble two Years. His Competitors were Antiochus and Philippus, Brothers to his Uncle Seleucus, and Demetrius Eucærus, Son of Antiochus Gryphus, who overcame him, and forced him to take Refuge among the Parthians, in the Year of the World 3912.

Thus was Syria divided between Philip and Demetrius Eucærus, of which the latter reign'd at Damafcus. But the Syrians finding the Kingdom to be almoft ruin'd by the civil Wars, that had been carry'd on between the feveral Competitors for the Kingdom for many Years, had recourfe to a foreign Power for the Support of their Monarchy. Some would have Mithridates call'd in, and others Ptolemy Lathurus, King of Egypt. Laftly, they all agreed upon Tigranes, King of Armenia, who govern'd Syria for eighteen Years, from the Year of the World 3921 to 3939.

Antiochus XI. furnamed Afiaticus, and his Brother, Sons of Antiochus Eufebes, who had ftill Poffeffion of that Part of Syria that Tigranes had not feized, went to Rome in 3932, to ask the Kingdom of Egypt of the Senate, which they pretended to belong to them in Right of their Mother Cleopatra, furnamed Selene. But Tigranes having put Selene to Death in 3934, Antiochus Afiaticus loft the Hopes of obtaining the Kingdom of Egypt, and return'd into Syria in 3935, where he reign'd for four Years, till Pompey having reduced Syria into a Roman Province, in the Year of the World 3939, this Monarchy was intirely extinct, having fubfifted for two hundred and fifty-feven Years.

SYRO-PHENICIA. This is Phenicia properly fo call'd, of which Sidon or Zidon was the Capital; which having by Right of Conqueft been united to the Kingdom of Syria, join'd its old Name of Phenicia to that of Syria; Juft as Paleftine was call'd Paleftine of Syria, becaufe it was confider'd as making a Part of Syria. In the Gofpel the Canaanitifh Woman is call'd a Syro-phenician by St. Mark, becaufe fhe Mark vii. 26. was of Phenicia, which was then look'd upon as making a Part of Syria, and was in the Jurifdiction of the Governor of this Province. St. Matthew, who wrote in Matt. xv. 22, 24. Hebrew or Syriac, calls her a Canaanitifh Woman, becaufe this Country was really peopled by the Canaanites, Sidon being the Gen. x. 15 eldeft Son of Canaan.
